Atamisqui Honey

Coopsol is a cooperative of beekeepers specializing in producing unique honey varietals that showcase the diverse blooms of Argentina. For over 30 years, they have worked ethically and sustainability with their producers, creating local opportunities, protecting the environment, and producing the highest quality organic honey. Years of dedication and deep respect for nature have resulted in extraordinary honey of the highest quality.

- This rare, single flower honey, better known as “white flower honey”, is full of floral and citrus notes
- The Atamisqui is an autochthonous shrub that flowers in November. During this month, the delightful aroma of these flowers affects the entire mountain where it is found
- Featuring the most delicate mix of sweetness and smoothness
- Atamisqui is known for its significant anti-inflammatory and antioxidant properties
- Certified USDA Organic
- Pairs best with breakfast items, charcuterie, cocktails, dessert, and tea as a finishing compliment
