DESIGN IS KEY FOR CANYON

The more trends we track and the more skilled we are at putting these trends into context, the more guidance we will have when introducing new products.

Canyon is always on the lookout for inspiring and out-of-the-box ideas. Several times a year, the corporate marketing team organizes field research and brainstorm sessions to exchange thoughts, discover new trends and generate ideas to bring Canyon to the next level. Student research and focus groups enables us to mingle with our target audience and get to learn more about its life style, behaviors, attitudes, interests and much more.

In 2010 Canyon proudly revealed its first ever limited edition. The products featured computer accessories with bold, colorful graffiti patterns - A unique assortment never seen before in the IT industry. It is targeted to young, urban and modern people who seek unique products as an extension of their personality and lifestyle. Inspired by the Urban Art contest held last spring by Canyon, five colorful graffiti patterns were selected to be applied to headphones, webcams, notebook stickers, notebook bags, etc.

The graffiti limited edition has proven to be an ideal tool to get attention from consumers, potential clients and partners, as well as from various media especially outside the IT industry. Introducing this unique lineup was a first step toward a new strategy; we are determined to make design THE ultimate added value of Canyon for our target groups.

In 2012, again we will be increasingly involved with schools and universities to perfect our ideas and concepts, and to get the best results possible out of new projects. We will also organize more focus groups, as it is a very affordable way to gain valuable insights into our target groups. It will be expected that our local teams also collect market information directly at the source, in order to get a complete overview of the trends in the countries where we are active. It will enable us to provide the right products at the right time, as well as to fine-tune our brand positioning to better appeal to young people. This is crucial for Canyon, moreover because the corporate marketing team expects to introduce more editions in the near future.

When focusing on design as a guiding principle for the brand, Canyon has a fantastic opportunity to stand out from the crowd, to make a statement in the market, and to build up its reputation as a lifestyle and design brand.

Green Series

The Green Series offers basic and easy-to-use computer accessories such as headphones, desktop speakers, mice, headset, and notebook bags. These 'no-frills' products were kept simple in terms of design and technology to primarily cut down on our carbon emissions, but also to be able to offer this green assortment at a highly competitive price.

The packaging was kept to a minimum. It is made from recycled carton and no UV coating or colored ink was applied to the material, making it easy to reuse and reprocess.

X-Ray by Hugh Turvey

from Canyon

Autumn 2011 we introduced the X-Ray edition into our portfolio. We partnered with Hugh Turvey from England, an internationally recognized artist for his X-ray work. He agreed to collaborate with, and created unique X-ray images of high quality exclusively for Canyon. He also allowed us to use his name to promote our new edition. Turvey's signature is applied to all products to enhance the exclusivity of this lineup from Canyon, as well as the artistic dimension of x-rays. Moreover, the artwork provided by Turvey has a lot of sharp details and a very high resolution, which will provide a remarkable printing quality of the images on our products.

ABOUT HUGH TURVEY

Hugh Turvey trained as a designer / art director but on discovering photography he retrained under iconic photographer Gered Mankowitz. During 1996/1997 he started experimenting with x-ray/shadow photography after being asked to create an alternative 'revealing' image for an album cover. With the encouragement of the Science Photo Library he went on to produce an extensive series of colored x-rays of everyday objects, which were first published on the 4 April 1999 in The Observer Magazine, LIFE, UK. In the same year Credit Suisse discovered Hugh's x-ray vision and commissioned 6 ground breaking 'motion x-ray' European TV commercials.

Canyon in stores

One of Canyon's primary goals is to focus on visual merchandising. Considering that 80% of people's impressions are created by sight, we have to make sure that our appearance makes the customer feel comfortable and yet eager to buy a Canyon product. A picture is worth a thousand words, and that is why a shelf with our products should always look attractive to end-users. Proper interior presentation is the key to achieve this simple objective: Attract end-users to a Canyon point of sale in order to sell products.

Purposes of visual merchandising:

- Making it easier for the shopper to locate the desired category and merchandise.
- Making it easier for the shopper to self-select.
- Making it possible for the shopper to find complementary accessories.
- Informing about the latest trends by highlighting them at a strategic location.

Visual merchandising is everything that the consumer sees, both inside and outside a store, which creates a positive image of a business and results in attention, interest, desire and action.

Canyon provides its local teams and customers additional support to bring the brand to the next level in terms of sales. We created shelf space concepts with planograms, return of investment (ROI) calculation sheets and in-store merchandising material, showing the many possibilities and level of support for our retail sales team.

Contact your local sales team to find out more about our merchandising solutions.

Our Packaging in 2012

In 2012, Canyon will continue changing its current packaging. The design process was motivated by the need to differentiate from our competitors while remaining highly attractive and eye-catching for consumers. We also kept in mind the increasing demand for more ecological and environmentally friendly product packaging. An appealing combination of complimentary colors has been defined per product groups: Audio, Connectivity, Desktop, etc. We also reduced the size of our packaging as much as possible, in order to reduce freight costs and to offer cost effective shelf space solutions to retailers.

It was proven times and times again that at least 70% of buying decisions are made in-stores, and that packaging is the capstone of brand expression. Packaging has been a pillar of Canyon's success over the years. We believe our packaging helps consumers find our brand on the shelf, while communicating our values. When executed with creativity and precision, packaging can help a brand to connect emotionally with consumers and establish deep, loyal relationships.

Creativity and innovation will also lead the way in 2012, and Canyon will strengthen its reputation as a provider of unique and attractive retail packaging in the IT industry.
