

Acknowledgements

So many people have supported me while I worked on this book that it is hardly possible to name them all without forgetting anyone. I therefore extend in advance a general thank you to everyone who has helped me with this project, to those who gave me information orally, or in letters and e-mails, and to those who made documents available to me, or helped with the writing and correcting of the text.

I would like to mention by name first of all my friends Erika Ifang and Gerhard Juckoff, who have helped me in all three of these ways, and who in addition accompanied me on three trips to the south of France. Without the cooperation of Y. and Grothendieck's family and relatives, in particular his son Serge and his daughter Johanna, this book would not have been possible. Leila Schneps and Matthias Künzer have supported me in many ways during every phase of the writing of this book. I extend my warmest thanks to all of them.

Concerning the documents on which I based my work I would like to thank above all the IHES and its director Jean-Pierre Bourguignon for the permission to access the records of the IHES, and Jean Malgoire, who made it possible for me to look through large parts of Grothendieck's correspondence. Furthermore, many people have generously made their correspondence with Grothendieck (and other documents) available to me. As a representative of many others I would like to name Alain Lascoux (who in particular documented the trial in Montpellier), and Paul Koosis, who sent me many documents from the Survivre period.

Concerning oral and written information, I have spoken to so many people about Grothendieck and repeatedly received so much new and surprising information, that it would be impossible to name everyone. Again, as a representative of many others I would like, apart from the people already mentioned, to particularly thank Paulo Ribenboim, Pierre Cartier, Luc Illusie, Pierre Damphousse, Diana Adamic, Ebba Poppendieck and Lorenz Geiger; this list contains at least one representative from each of Grothendieck's circles of friends, colleagues, co-workers, students and relatives.

I thank Matthias Künzer and my wife Dorothee, Elke Scharlau and Erika Ifang for their help in drafting the text and for the painstaking work of correcting it.
