Lessons from a Potter's Wheel

by Rosemary (Vincentin) Benson '63, Alumni Council Vice President

It is truly refreshing and revitalizing to become an active part of the Wheeling Jesuit College Alumni Council.

I enjoy art and being a potter. I shall draw an analogy.

I'll refer to the alumni council as a cluster pot...established to assist the college and to provide a source of networking and enrichment for the alumni themselves.

The council consists of alumni drawn from the centers of graduate population. We plan not only to provide a feeder source for students, but also to offer each other opportunities for sharing our experiences and continuing the traditions we started here.

As a potter, I take a clump of damp clay, wedge it into a uniform consistency and throw it on the center of my potter's wheel. As the wheel spins, I control and guide the clay into a form expressing my thought, feeling or idea. I further alter it with handbuilt additions, subtractions or divisions of clay, each brick representing a life.

Many new structures of clay are rising here...and the students, faculty, administration and board of trustees are breathing life into them. We are invited to be part of this growth. It's changed a lot since our days here. Donahue has been renovated into a beautiful, functional learning center.

The National Technology Transfer Center and the Classroom of the Future are under construction. The adult learner is no longer a neglected species and here we are in this marvelous new structure soon to be streaming with activity. Kudos, praise and thanks to the leadership. We are definitely UPWARD BOUND and we are painting a pretty picture.

While so much is changing and growing, one mission remains the same...promotion of the Jesuit tradition...seeking excellence...excellence in thought, philosophy and morals. Excellence is the goal of the college, but it's only the start of life. Excellence is not optional in life. It's the required starting point. The meaning of the word itself..."ex" meaning out of and "cellere" meaning to rise.

As the pots rise out of the clay, so too are we BECOMING. The college provides the clay, as it were. The wheel of progress spins as we, all of us, administration, faculty, staff, board, and now the alumni, put our hands on the cool damp mass to form it into the beautiful vessel we want it to be...a vessel bringing both new technology and traditional values to this beautiful valley, our students and ourselves.

God is the master potter here. We are His clay. He forms us into vessels for Christ. We are decorated in the principles of morality and we are fixed in the kiln of doctrine. We are sent into the world to pour out our talent for others, to let our lights shine-luceat lux vestra and non nobis solum...not for us alone.

Please join us in our efforts. Thank you.

The Alumni Council Summer Retreat was held June 19. Among the topics discussed were the Alumni and Career Advising Network, the use of the new Alumni Center, and the alumni role in maintaining the Jesuit education tradition at Wheeling Jesuit College. Father Thomas Acker, S.J., and WJC Board of Directors Chairman Dr. Hofreuter addressed the Alumni Council and expressed their support of its commitment and direction. Alumni Director Steve Merrick and moderator James O'Brien, S.J., presided over the change of command ceremony as Tom Pié '77 took over the reigns of presidency from Dan Haller '61.

Campus Store Bigger and Better Than Ever

WJC's new Campus Store was officially dedicated during Parents' Weekend on Saturday, September 25. The new facility was designed to offer greater selection and service to students, faculty, staff, returning alumni and friends of the college.

Located on the ground floor of the new Swint Hall addition, the Campus Store is now easily accessible to the college population and has instituted new services that are proving popular with the college community as well as Wheeling area residents.

The new building, in addition to the campus store, provided the college with a central security station, a new post office and new headquarters for the main college switchboard.

The second level of the new addition expanded the college cafeteria and provided new private dining rooms for special events. The addition also features an outdoor balcony offering a view of the entire campus.

The city's only "CreatoCard" - a computerized mini greeting card factory allowing customers to create and illustrate their own greeting cards for any occasion - has been a popular attraction of the new facility.

An expanded array of gift store items and campus necessities are also available in the new store. During ribbon cutting ceremonies, President Acker was joined by members of the college executive committee, parents, alumni, friends and students in welcoming the new addition to the campus.

Development Personnel Join College

Tom Pié '77 and Bryan Minor are the two newest employees of the Development Office at Wheeling Jesuit College.

Pié, who serves as president of the college's alumni association, has been hired as Director of Corporate and Foundation Relations. He began his duties in October.

Pié will administer the Development Office programs which seek financial and other support from businesses, corporations, foundations and organizations. He will also participate in other fund-raising events as determined in consultation with the Vice President for Development, Stuart Strait.

For the past 10 years, Pié has been a merchandising representative and area supervisor for the 13 Kroger grocery stores in the Ohio Valley area. He has been active as a corporate campaign organizer for the United Way of the Upper Ohio Valley, and as a board chairman for the Special Wish Foundation of the Upper Ohio Valley.

He received a B.S. Degree in Business Administration from Wheeling Jesuit College, and is pursuing an M.B.A. Degree at the college to be completed in the fall of this year.

Minor is the college's new director of annual giving, a position he began in September. He comes to Wheeling Jesuit from Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he worked in the University Relations and Advancement Division.

He will be responsible for overall management of the annual giving programs, including the annual fund, parent relations, direct mail, phonathons, and donor societies.

His duties at Xavier involved internal communications, writing daily radio segments, managing production of four periodicals, serving as public relations liaison to the athletic department, and writing features for Xavier's alumni magazine. He also volunteered for duties in the school's business and annual fund campaigns.

Minor is a 1991 cum laude graduate of Xavier, where he was a three-year letterman on the swimming team and was twice elected team co-captain. He will complete a Master's in Education at Xavier in May 1994.

Missing Persons

No one has seen their faces on milk cartons.

Through its connections with NASA, the College knows they were not aboard the missing Mars Probe.

Through the leading edge communication services of its National Technology Transfer Center, the College knows that they are not hidden away in one of more than 700 federal research labs.

The question remains: Where are these members of the Wheeling Jesuit College Class of 1969? Before we contact Robert Stack and the folks of "Unsolved Mysteries," we thought we would give Chronicle readers a crack at the mystery.

If any reader knows where these people are, we hope they will contact the alumni association at 1-800-888-ALUM. We need to let these members of the Class of 1969 know about their upcoming 25th reunion.

Waiting in Hope For the New Jerusalem

Professor Finds Suffering and Beauty in Divided Land

By Carl Hill

It's the land where Jesus walked and the land where miracles happened. Jerusalem is much the same now as it was in New Testament days, said Dr. Bonnie B. Thurston, Associate Professor of Theology at Wheeling Jesuit College, a land wrought with danger but blessed with faith. Thurston spent four and a half months as a visiting scholar at St. George's College and Ecole Biblique in East Jerusalem, and was a fellow at the Albright Institute, a division of the American Schools for Oriental Research. She was able to witness the Holy Land's contrast of immense beauty and unspeakable anguish.

"If you want to know the historical Jesus, go to Galilee," she said. "If you want to know the cosmic Christ, go to Jerusalem. You can envision the historical Jesus in the beautiful rural setting of Gallilee, but the risen Christ lives with his suffering people in Jerusalem."

September's signing of a peace accord between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization is seen by many as a modern-day miracle, something which offers peace to a land poisoned by hostility.

The agreement gives Palestinians control of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho, with Israeli troops to begin withdrawing from those areas in six months. Israel has occupied those two lands since the 1967 Middle East war. Thurston views the treaty with an equal mixture of optimism and caution.

"It's very hard to say what will lead to peace in that part of the world," she said. "Even the prophets have not been very good at predicting that. I would like to be hopeful about it, but there's a long way to go."

In the treaty, Israel and the PLO formally recognize each other's right to exist, bringing at least a symbolic end to years of extreme bitterness.

"One Saturday, I went to buy tea, and in a block and a half, I saw three cars blown up and somebody beaten up by soldiers on the street."

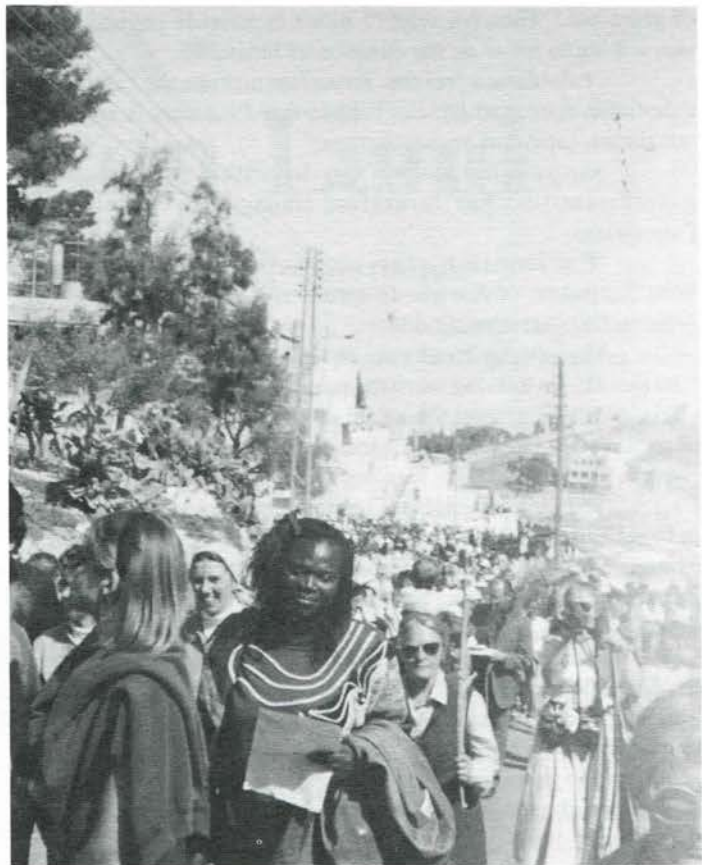

- Bonnie Thurston

Modern-day Israel has become a divided country, a significant portion of which is under constant military occupation. St. George's lies in the center of East Jerusalem, the Palestinian part of the city, and Thurston faced daily reminders that she was staying in one of the most violent spots on the face of the Earth.

"One Saturday, I went to buy tea, and in a block and a half, I saw three cars blown up and somebody beaten up by soldiers on the street," she said. "What was shocking was not the events themselves, but the fact that it was so commonplace, that nobody came out of the shops to see what was going on."

The most agonizing part of Thurston's journey was a visit to the Gaza Strip refugee camps (See story Page 9).

She said the area has 750,000 people packed into 360 square kilometers, suffering through a 50 percent unemployment rate, little running water, and raw sewage pouring through the streets.

"People in the States need to know what it's like in Gaza," she said. "Without understanding the context of life in the refugee camps, you don't understand the Palestinians' anger. People see the Palestinians simply as terrorists and that's simply not the case."

Although the treaty is a welcome sign in this troubled land, it still leaves key questions unresolved.

The final status of Gaza and Jericho will not be determined for two to three years, nor will the issue at the heart of the peace process--who will control Jerusalem?

At stake is a city with tremendous historical and religious significance. Jerusalem, the current capital of Israel, is the center of both Judaism and Christianity. It is also the second-holiest city in Islam. The Palestinians are a mixture of Muslims and Christians.

"What is decided politically about Jerusalem has connections with emotional and religious associations that are thousands of years old," Thurston said. "I didn't experience anybody who was willing to move on the question of Jerusalem.

"It's very hard to say what will lead to peace in that part of the world."

"Palestinians feel that Jerusalem must be the capital of a Palestinian state, and Israelis believe that Jerusalem is and must remain the capital of an Israeli state."

She said the answer may lie with a dual municipal government that has Jerusalem managed by Israelis and Palestinians.

"East Jerusalem is very clearly Arab and Palestinian, and West Jerusalem is Jewish. In terms of day-to-day living, the division lines are already drawn."

Modern-day Israel may be a violent place, but it is also a land that enjoys thriving tourism because of its unmatched history. Christians from around the world are willing to brave the perils of modern-day Israel for the chance to see the land in which Jesus lived.

Thurston participated in Palm Sunday and Easter services in Israel and was able to tour the sites of many landmark Biblical events. She said her favorite spot was the Church of the Resurrection, traditionally the site of Christ's crucifixion and empty tomb.

"I found it very moving to be able to pray in a place that has been the focus of the Christian church since its beginnings," Thurston said, "and to be part of the stream of pilgrims to a church that began in the Fourth Century A.D."

She also was moved by the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem, the traditional Incarnation site, and the area around the Sea of Galilee.

"You could really envision Jesus and his disciples in Galilee," she said.

Bonnie Thurston stands in the beautiful setting of St. George's College and Anglican Cathedral in Jerusalem.

The trip provided valuable first-hand research for Thurston, who teaches Biblical studies--primarily New Testament--and world religions at Wheeling Jesuit, along with directing the Master's program in Theology.

She credits the Department of Antiquities of the State of Israel with doing a marvelous job in preserving and presenting the nation's archaeological sites, and said anyone considering a tour of the region should find it very inspiring.

But she also said a tour is not enough to see the whole picture. The horrors and terrors which make up modern life in Israel are kept out of the view of tour groups.

"I think it's just as important to learn about the conditions about which our brothers and sisters live today in the Holy Land as it is to see archaeological sites," she said. "If you only go with a tour group, you're unlikely to see the reality of life there for Israelis and Palestinians today.

"The living stones are more important than the historic ones." ■

GAZA: The Forsaken Land

By Dr. Bonnie B. Thurston

Associate Professor of Theology and Religious Studies

I was told the Gaza strip made Calcutta look like paradise. I didn't believe it. Then I visited Gaza.

You won't find the Gaza strip on Israeli maps. It is a small parcel of land (6-10 kilometers wide x 45 km. long or 360 square km.) seized during the 1967 war. With a population of about 750,000, it is one of the most densely populated places on Earth, 18,000 souls per sq. km. About 3,000 of these are Israeli settlers; the rest are refugees (some say only 70 percent are refugees). Fifty-five percent of the population lives in one of the eight camps set up as temporary shelters by UNRWA in 1948. One-third of the land is for these refugees; one-third belongs to the 3,000 settlers; one-third is "government land," land the Israeli government holds unused. One-third of the water goes to the settlers. The water table is falling.

Unemployment in Gaza is about 50 percent. Until the Gulf War, 80,000 people worked in Israel. After the war, 30,000 were allowed to continue working. Now, with the territories closed, nobody works. Gazans, it is estimated, pay twice the taxes of Israeli citizens and receive no social services in exchange. In recent years, UNRWA projects have been cut back. There are about 2,000 Christians in Gaza.

The overwhelming image I have of Gaza is garbage, mounds of it, piles of it, heaps of it; it blows around in streets not repaired since 1967. The main street of Gaza has holes in it several feet deep. Only 20 percent of the shelters in the camps are connected to sewers, only 40 percent of private homes. Raw sewage runs in the streets. I saw a soccer field--what had been a soccer field--ankle deep in sewage. Children were coming to and from school along the sides of that field.

Our first stop was the Boys Vocational Training Center, primarily a carpentry and metal working school for 77 boys from 14-17 years old. We toured the facility and talked with the boys via an interpreter. Several had been arrested or shot by the Israeli army; most (including two elderly teachers) had been beaten. They showed us their scars. When asked what they hoped for, these young men asked for their freedom. They will graduate as master carpenters. Where will they work?

Gaza is under military, not civil, law. The military commander is the final authority. There is no appeal process. Most cases are "security cases." If you are arrested, on a "security charge" you can be kept for 18 days without any outside contact. This is the "interrogation period." From this period a statement of charges is drawn up in Hebrew (Gazans speak Arabic) and is presented to the military court. After the sentence is given, the house in which a convicted person lives can be sealed up or demolished.

Article 48 of the Geneva Convention outlaws collective punishments, but Gaza is under curfew every night from 9 p.m.- 4 a.m. and the camps are under curfew from 7 p.m.- 4 a.m. Not even an ambulance can move on the streets.

Since 1967 the military government has enacted some 2,000 regulations. In June of 1992 "firing" regulations were loosened and there have been more killings. In March of 1993, 18 people were shot and killed; 700 were injured. Most of the shooting is done by military snipers. Most of the killed are children.

UN Resolution 681 calls for monitoring of human rights in Gaza, the territories and East Jerusalem. Where are the monitors? Where is the U.S. government?

I left Gaza at 4 p.m. We walked from the Near East Council of Churches vans through a gap in the razor wire to our bus. It was hot. We drove through the lush gardens of the Shefela and back up to Jerusalem. I could shower. I was going to friends' for dinner. Gazans had to be in their homes; 80 percent of their water was being diverted.

And the question that echoed in my mind was, "where has the church been for the last 45 years?" Certainly not in this place where His people suffer.

"Truly, I say to you, as you did it not to one of these, you did it not to me." ■

The run-down shelters and filthy streets provide a depressing background for the residents of Gaza.

POPE GETS WHEELING JESUIT WELCOME

College's Presence Is Felt at World Youth Day Celebration in Denver

By Carl Hill

anny Lim and Michael Galligan-Stierle were hardly the most famous people who visited Denver, CO in August.

But these two representatives of Wheeling Jesuit College weren't just faces in the crowd of 186,000 who gathered for an appearance by Pope John Paul II at World Youth Day.

Lim, (pictured at right) a former graduate student in Campus Ministry at Wheeling Jesuit, was one of 16 people selected to greet the Pope at Mile High Stadium.

"I remember going back to my seat (after shaking hands with the Pope) and being literally dizzy," Lim said. "It was a much bigger thrill than I anticipated.

"I went in feeling, yes this is a big thrill but when it comes down to it, he's just another person. Just meeting him, and combined with 80,000 other people at Mile High Stadium, it was overwhelming."

Galligan-Stierle, director of Wheeling Jesuit's Campus Ministry, was hand-picked by the Roman Catholic Church to oversee meetings which led up to World Youth Day.

"It was a celebration of being Christian and Catholic," Galligan-Stierle said of the Pope's visit. "I would parallel it to the 200th anniversary of America in 1976 where people were proud just to be American citizens.

"This was very similar. People were proud and happy to be Catholic."

Lim, who now works in Campus Ministry at Rockhurst College in Kansas City, MO, was in Denver as a member of the National Catholic Student Coalition.

He was one of 16 students--eight from the United States and eight from foreign countries--selected to welcome John Paul II to World Youth Day.

Everyone had a real brief opportunity to talk to the Pope," Lim said, "but I'm not sure he heard any of it because it was so loud in the stadium.

"I welcomed him to the U.S. in Polish, and thanked him for coming. I told him to not forget the young people of the church."

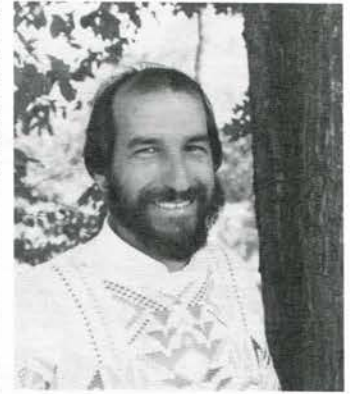

Lim said he was unable to hear the Pope's response because the stadium was so noisy.

Galligan-Stierle served as a facilitator for one of the 20 into which the World Youth Day attendees were divided. These groups went through three days of spiritual instruction to prepare for the prayer vigil and mass which highlighted the event.

All groups included a site coordinator, two music groups, three or four youth witnesses who related the effects of Christ of their lives, a new bishop and archbishop each day and a facilitator, who Galligan-Stierle said was responsible for getting the team to work well together while presenting spirituality to the group.

"It was a celebration of being Christian and Catholic. I would parallel it to the 200th anniversary of America."

gatherings for the Roman Catholic Church.

Galligan-Stierle said he had no idea he was even nominated for the event, and learned of his selection when he received a letter from the World Youth Office.

"It's quite an accomplishment that two people from Wheeling Jesuit out of the whole world were selected to have such high roles," Galligan-Stierle said. "I think it says something about the quality of people at the College."

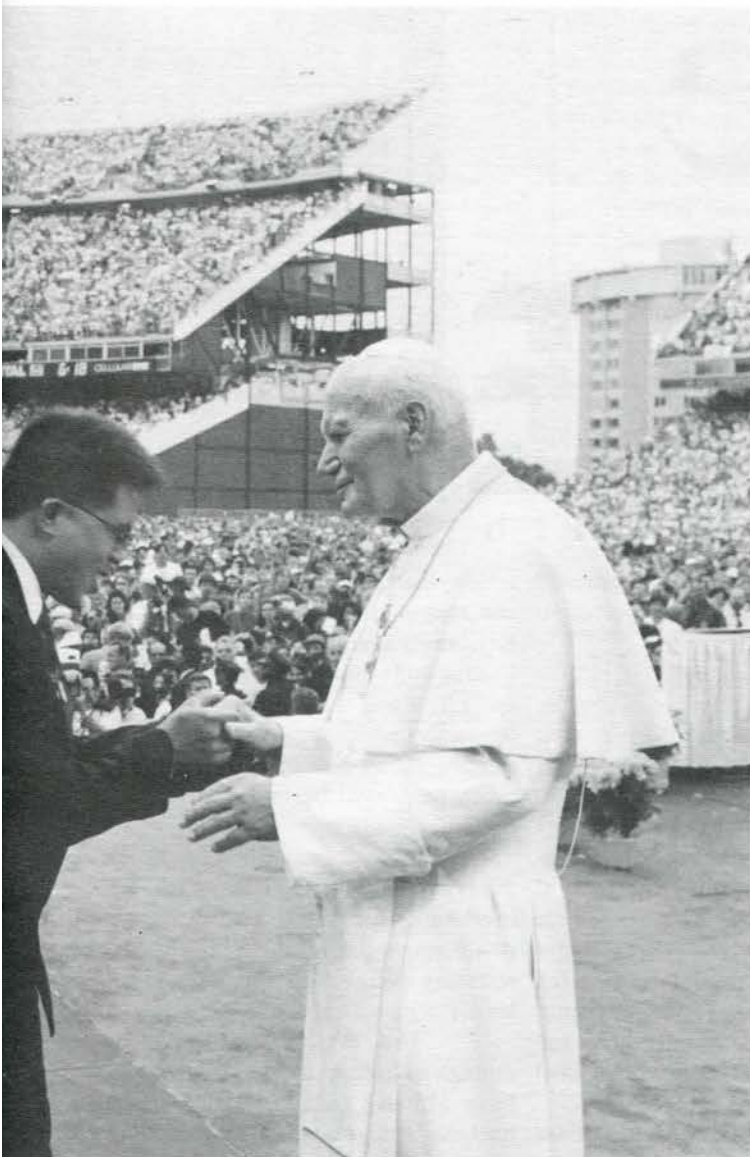

This was the second time that Galligan-Stierle has been present for a visit by the Pontiff.

Six years ago, he was one of eight people selected to represent campus ministry when the Pope visited New Orleans, and organized college and young adult groups at a vigil and mass for the Pope's appearance in Miami.

Galligan-Stierle said that many people who only saw the Pope through the national media were not made aware of the real spirit that surrounded World Youth Day.

He was disappointed that the network news chose to focus on conflicts in the Catholic Church rather than the celebration that was occurring.

"It's like stopping a person on the Fourth of July and asking their opinion on gun control," he said. "Then if they say they're unhappy with the current gun control laws, you assume that they don't like living in the United States. The national media was really on the wrong page. They missed the essence of the celebration.

"These were important questions they were asking--about divorce and church attendance--but you don't ask them in the middle of a party. People were there to celebrate, to get closer to Jesus and to see their spiritual leader." ■

Breaking Ground for the FUTURE

By Gerrill L. Griffith

An important milestone in the development of Wheeling Jesuit College's national outreach in economic development and education was achieved on September 3 when ground was broken for buildings that will house the National Technology Transfer Center (NTTC) and the NASA Classroom of the Future (COTF).

U.S. Senator Robert C. Byrd and U.S. Rep. Alan Mollohan were joined by NASA Administrator Daniel S. Goldin and Wheeling Jesuit College President Thomas S. Acker, S.J. in wielding golden shovels during the ceremony.

Acker said both initiatives at Wheeling Jesuit are national in scope and importance with job creation and improved math and science education expected to result.

Since its creation by Congress, the NTTC has received national accolades for providing U.S. business and industry with easy access to $24 billion worth of technologies developed in more than 700 federal laboratories. It has expanded its service to include presentation of technology transfer training programs for federal agencies and U.S. companies and economic development initiatives that create partnerships to market federally inspired research innovations. The economic development implications create jobs and improve U.S. competitiveness in the global marketplace.

Also created by Congressional action, the COTF will engage in creating and adapting new technologies for use in K-12 math and science teaching curricula. Cutting-edge teaching methods including a spacecraft and mission control simulator, interactive computer and video capacities, satellite uplink and downlink abilities and much more will be included in the new building.

In combination with the college, the NTTC and the COTF compose a triad of educational service to a national audience. Acker emphasized that the projects will be stressing outreach to educators and U.S. businesses on a national basis.

The NTTC and the college, through its traditional liberal arts initiatives, have already collaborated to create a bachelor's degree program in technology

The National Technology Transfer Center will soon have an 80,000-square-foot new home on the campus of Wheeling Jesuit College. The NTTC is currently providing American businesses with access to $24 billion worth of technologies in more than 700 federal laboratories. Construction on the new NTTC building is expected to be completed by the fall of 1994.

cker S.J., U.S. Rep. Alan Mollohan, U.S. Sen. Robert Byrd shovels of dirt on the new location for the NASA Classroom and a master's degree program in technology transfer. The specializations are expected to produce well-rounded individuals who will be prepared to serve the nation's growing economic development and technology needs. The two new buildings will serve as classroom facilities for the new programs.

The 45,000-square-foot COTF project technically began construction earlier this summer and workers are busy pouring concrete for the building.

The 80,000-square-foot NTTC building will be constructed on a site near the entrance to the main campus and will serve the needs of the growing technology transfer/economic development service.

Sen. Byrd, whose active support made both projects possible, quoted Cicero and Benjamin Franklin at the groundbreaking ceremony.

"Cicero wrote, 'What greater or better gift can we offer the republic than to teach and instruct our youth,'" Sen. Byrd said. "Benjamin Franklin offered a perhaps saltier explanation of our efforts here by saying, 'If a man empties his purse into his head, no one can take it away from him. An investment in knowledge always pays the best.'"

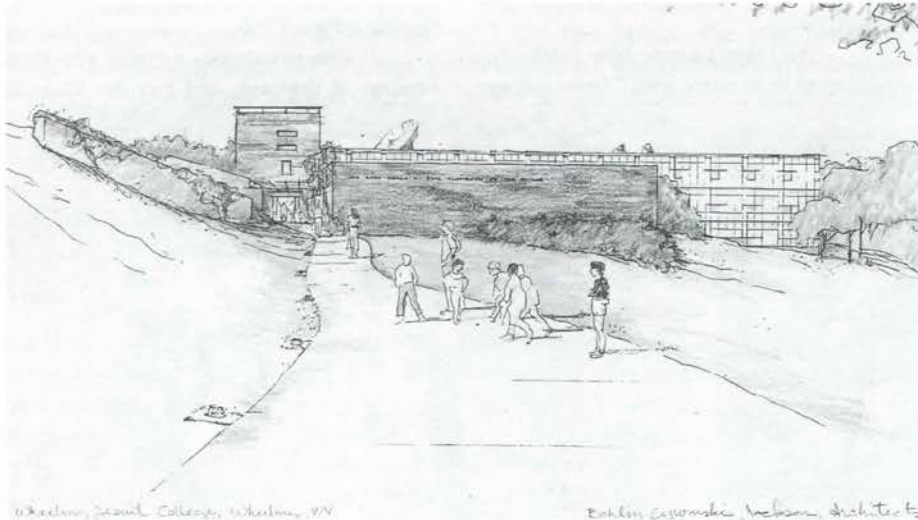

Rep. Mollohan, who represents Wheeling in Congress, noted the progress the projects have made since their creation.

"It has been a few short years since we in Congress first invested NASA funding here at Wheeling Jesuit College," Mollohan said. "Any critics of that decision would have considerable difficulty defending their position today."

Goldin, only the ninth man to head America's space program and who has supported the development of the two projects, also noted their national importance.

"We want our children to have a better life than we had and to not have to worry about finding a job when they get out of school," Goldin said. "These programs will be impacting people across the land."

Congress provided $13.5 million for the NTTC and $10 million for the COTF to "build, equip and integrate" the new buildings. The COTF project is expected to be complete next summer and the NTTC will be finished in the fall of 1994. ■

The Classroom of the Future will be moving to this 45,000-square-foot building. The COTF will develop cutting-edge teaching methods using the latest technology.

Who's That Girl?

Wheeling Jesuit Graduate Selected As Star of Liberto Ad Campaign

By Carl Hill

Where in the world is Vivienne Sendaydiego? That is the question posed through a new ad campaign for Liberto jeanswear which features the Wheeling Jesuit College alumnus posing as a globetrotting photojournalist.

Sendaydiego, who lives in Boca Raton, FL, has been modeling since she was a teenager, but her big break came when she was chosen for the Liberto job at a casting call.

"The premise of the whole idea is that you never know where I'm going to turn up," she said.

Sendaydiego, Class of 1988, graduated with a business management degree, which she is finding extremely helpful as her modeling career flourishes.

"I never knew I would be in business for myself; my dream was to be the CEO of a huge company," she said. "With everything I'm doing, selling my name and my talents, I think I made a smart move."

Her current Liberto ad, which begins the company's first major U.S. campaign, can be seen in the August issues of Premiere, Details, GQ, Interview, South Beach and Sportswear International, as well as the September issue of Rolling Stone and the fall issue of Esquire Gentlemen in Fashion.

She recently completed the campaign's second ad, which focuses on international tennis star Jimmy Connors, a partner in the effort to bring the Liberto line to the United States. Vivienne flew to Palm Springs, Calif., to shoot the ad with Connors, and found him to be very friendly and easygoing.

"You don't know how celebrities are going to be to work with," Sendaydiego said. "You don't know if they're going to be snobby or prima donnas, but Jimmy was a lot of fun. He's really down to earth, just like you and me. You see the personality that he has; that's Jimmy all the way through. He's not fake at all."

Future Liberto ads will have Sendaydiego taking pictures which deal with social, political and environmental issues. She said she did research into the field of photojournalism to give the ad campaign a greater feeling of realism.

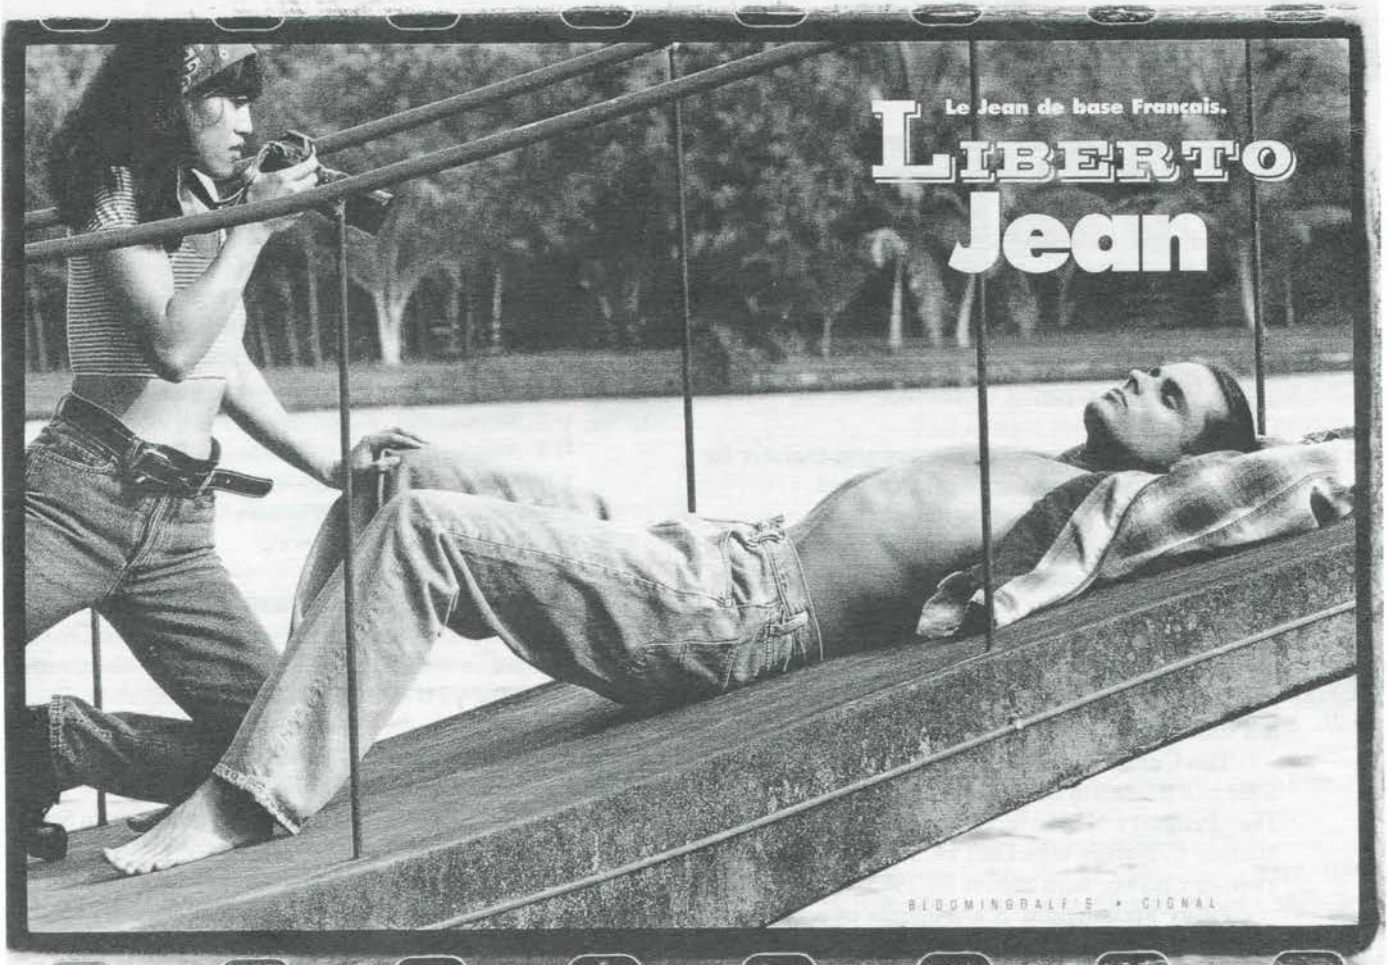

Vivienne finished her degree at Wheeling Jesuit in December of 1987 and immediately headed to Florida to pursue her career.

In her first job after graduation, she promoted Campbell's Soup in malls in Florida, Georgia and Alabama. After six months, she grew tired of the traveling and loneliness and began working as an assistant tennis and golf director at Florida's Polo Club.

She eventually became pro shop director at the club and ran the Virginia Slims women's tennis tournament in 1990-91. She left the Polo Club two and a half years ago when her modeling career began to take off.

"Liberto is the break I finally needed; everything else is falling into place," said Sendaydiego, who brings a fresh new look to the modeling industry.

"I'm 5-4 and Asian," she said. "I'm breaking all the rules. Everyone was saying you have to be taller and have a certain look. People now are taking risks. The world is made of many different types of people."

In addition to her magazine ads, Sendaydiego has done a television commercial for Passao, a light alcoholic drink produced in Belgium, and will soon be appearing in two motion pictures.

She plays a makeup artist in the murder mystery "Beyond Desire" and a businesswoman in the vampire suspense thriller "The Dark Rite."

Vivienne said both films are being produced by Florida-based companies and probably will not be released nationally.

Vivienne was born in the Philippines, and grew up in Wheeling, where she had a strong connection with Wheeling Jesuit College.

Her father, the late Henry B. Sendaydiego, was a professor of philosophy at the school, and her late mother Vivina was a nursing student.

She also has four brothers and sisters who are Wheeling Jesuit alumni--Eric '83, Lisa '85, Patrick '88, and Marie Shelly '91.

"I had great memories in Wheeling," said Vivienne. "We had a cheerleading squad in my first year of college, and I was active in many of the classes that I had."

Modeling may be second nature to Vivienne by now, but she said a lot of hard work still goes into getting just the right look for the camera.

She said modeling involves the art of taking something very difficult and making it look effortless.

"When you see something that's easy, it means everyone did a good job," she said. "It's supposed to look natural. You're supposed to relate to a camera and situation as if it's just happening. You might have to do it 20-25 times and still seem like it's something new."

"You have to concentrate on what you're trying to relate about the product and what the director says it's supposed to be. If you just stand there and smile, everyone's ads would look like high school pictures. You have to really stay focused. You have to be able to take direction and take it fast."

Two Liberto ads have already been shot, but the length of the campaign will depend on how well the product sells. There are tentative plans for Vivienne to be photographed in Europe and South America if the campaign is successful.

But wherever it is, with her combination of beauty, talent and business sense, it's certain that Vivienne Sendaydiego will be the center of attention.

Investing in the College's Mission

The Honor Roll gives special recognition to those who made significant gifts to the College during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1993.

A total of $1,218,950 from 2,181 donors was received last year to assist Wheeling Jesuit College in carrying out its mission of service to individuals, education and its community.

This financial support from alumni, parents, friends, coporations and foundations was vital to again balancing the College's $14.5 million budget and moving us closer to concluding the Summit 2000 Campaign.

On behalf of the students, faculty and staff, we offer our sincere thank you to the investors in the mission of Wheeling Jesuit College listed below.
