- It was during the World Cup in 1966 the notorious match between England and Argentina took place. The two teams met in the quarter final which England won due to the goal scored by Geoff Hurst in the 78th minute. Yet the match was particularly noted for German referee Kreitlein dismissing Argentinian captain Antonio Rattin in the 37th minute. By then, Rattin had already received his second booking. The Argentinians and especially Rattin of course considered the second booking unfair. Rattin refused to leave the pitch and had to be escorted from it by the police. After the match it was referee Kreitlein who needed the police escort. The Argentinians were suspecting the English team and German referee Kreitlein of collaborating against them in order to get the South American teams out of the tournament. When Kreitlein left the pitch, he took the ball with him which he afterwards had signed by all the English players. Kreitlein had made it a habit to collect the balls that were used in his most important matches and had them signed afterwards by both teams. However, he decided he would do without the Argentinian autographs. Kreitlein „improved“ the ball with the inscription „World Cup 1966 England. England 1 Argentinien 0. Viertelfinale 23.7.1966 Wembley. Rudolf Kreitlein Referee. LR. Zsolt Ungarn, Dienst Schweiz“ and a World Cup 1966 sticker. After having had a special place in Kreitlein's living room for nearly half a century, the signatures have faded as they naturally would have.
- The ball was stamped twice. One stamp reads Made in England“ the other „Guaranteed Hand Sewn Throughout“. The rubber balloon inside has faded, the ball looks its age. The ball comes with a certificate of authenticity written by Rudolf Kreitlein himself in 2010.
- There are several other items which will be auctioned in combination with the ball.
- 1) The original whistle called „Bailla“ Kreitlein used at the match. It was made by A.G. Baldi, Florence. Comes with the original chain and leather attachment.
  - 2) Rudolf Kreitlein's note card with his handwritten notes of the match plus the original pencil on a ribbon.
  - 3) A medal of honour that was given to Rudolf Kreitlein by the DFB (German FA). It is engraved „Zur Erinnerung an die Fussball-Weltmeisterschaft 1966 England - Argentinien am 23.VIII.1966 in London“, Rudolf Kreitlein SV Gablenberg“. The medal consists of bronze. It is silver plated. It measures 4,6x4,6 cm and comes with its original case.
  - 4) There are two original press photos of the match England - Argentina: A) 37th minute: Rattin is being send off. B) After the match Kreitlein is being escorted by the police when he leaves Wembley Stadium. You can see the ball and his whistle in his hands, Each photo measures 20 x 14 cm.
  - 5) There also is the FIFA envelope for the referee of the match England versus Argentina, Rudolf Kreitlein.
- Other original pieces of the Football World Cup 1966 that belonged to Rudolf Kreitlein and come with this lot are:
- 1) Kreitlein's original World Cup ID „REFERE“, numbered „13“ in its original plastic case. (10,5 x 8 cm)
  - 2) Kreitlein's participation badge for the World Cup of 1966 with silk ribbon which is inscribed „REFERE“ (in black).
  - 3) An original synthetic bag with the emblem of the World Cup in England. It is inscribed „Rudolf Kreitlein F.I.F.A. Referee 1966“ (42x31 cm). These bags were given to all referees to be used for documents. The bag is empty.
  - 4) Two suitcase tags „World Championship Baggage England“ each measuring 17,5 x 10 cm.
  - 5) Five different invitations for Kreitlein to attend official receptions during the World Cup 1966. Amongst others, there are an invitation of Prime Minister Harold Wilson for a reception on 9th July 1966 and the FIFA's invitation for a banquet on occasion of the final on 30th July 1966. (19 x 14 cm and 15 x 11 cm).
  - 6) Three postcards which Kreitlein sent to his wife during the World Cup 1966. Two of which he sent to his wife. He writes about his self-assessment of his achievements as a referee (in the England - Argentina match, too). The other postcard was written to a friend of Kreitlein's and signed by the referees of the „Sunderland Group“.
  - 7) There are also seven letters and postcards written by fans who refer to Kreitlein's achievements in the match England - Argentina. They come from Argentina (1), Austria (1), Germany (2), England (3). Plus there is a caricature from Argentina.
- The experience of the match England - Argentina made Rudolf Kreitlein think. When he had been sending off Rattin, both of them had been arguing furiously with each other though neither of them understood each other's language. Together with English referee Ken Aston, Kreitlein developed the idea of yellow and red cards in order to improve communication on field.
- These pieces form a unique omnibus volume. They belong into a museum. Cond.

811. Original German Football Championship Trophy. Official replica of the German Football Championship Trophy of season 1998/99. Bayern Munich gave this replica to a member of the team that won the German Championship. The player, a German international, was given the replica as a parting gift. The last inscription on the trophy is „FC Bayern München 1999“. Silver, partly gilt. Weight: 2.25 kg. Diameter: 52 cm. This premium and down to the last detail copy was manufactured by a goldsmith. The manufacturing costs for such an exclusive replica are well in the range of five digit Euro budget. DFB (German FA) approved of the reproduction of the 1999 trophy. From 1981 the trophy had been slightly changed. The names of the winning teams had been engraved to the edge until then. In 1981 there was no space for new champions left, thus the trophy had to be enlarged by a 4.5 cm ring. The original „Bow“ (the name for the German trophy) measured 54.5 cm in diameter, after the ring had been added it was 59 in diameter. Official replicas may only be produced by those clubs that one the championships. If DFB agrees, they may have smaller replicas of the trophy for their display of trophies. These replicas are approximately 18 percent smaller than the original thus the uniqueness of the original can be protected. The cash value of the original trophy is 50,000 Euros. This correlates to the material and the manufacturing costs. The current value of the trophy yet might well top a million Euros since football in Germany is very popular. With certificate of authenticity. Has never been on offer before. The buyer will get to know the name of the player who owned the trophy. Small traces of usage. Cond. A-
