Karl Loewenstein
Papers, 1822-1977 (bulk 1908-1973)

Summary: The Karl Loewenstein Papers contain materials produced and collected by Karl Loewenstein (1891-1973) over the course of his long career as a political scientist, professor, lawyer, and government advisor. The papers include professional and personal correspondence, manuscripts, lecture notes, reports, memoranda, legal documents, diaries, lecture and interview transcripts, photographs, recordings, and printed material. The bulk of the collection documents Loewenstein's long academic career, which began in Munich and continued at Yale and Amherst (1936-1961) after his emigration to the United States in 1933. His work as an advisor for the Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense of the American Republics (1942-1944) and for the U.S. Office of Military Government for Germany (1945-1946) is also well documented. Notable correspondents included Thomas Mann, Max Weber, Lyonel Feininger, Otto Kollreuter, Theodor Maunz, Otto Crusius, Julien Reinach, Lavinia Mazzucchetti, and Mina Tobler. Pre-1933 materials include correspondence, manuscripts, and family papers. The collection also includes small amounts of material belonging to Loewenstein's wife, Piroska (Rona) Loewenstein, and other family members.

INTRODUCTION

Biographical and Historical Note

Karl Loewenstein was born in Munich, Germany, on November 9, 1891, son of a metalware manufacturer and grandson of a Stuttgart jurist. First guided by his parents toward a career in business, Loewenstein turned to the study of law at age nineteen. He attended the universities of Munich, Heidelberg, Paris, and Berlin and received his law degree from Munich in 1914. During World War I, he served with the German infantry (1915). He later completed preparation for a legal career and was admitted to the Bar in 1918. He went on to obtain his doctorate in civil and ecclesiastical law (1919). Loewenstein practiced law in Munich during the 1920s and, in 1931, became a lecturer (Privatdozent) at the University of Munich School of Law. During 1933, Nazi laws forbidding “non-Aryans” to teach German law led him to resign his position. Nazi-sponsored anti-Semitism also made Loewenstein’s legal practice difficult to sustain, and he looked for opportunities to emigrate. Aided by the Emergency Committee in Aid of Displaced German Scholars, he obtained an offer of a two-year teaching position at Yale University. Loewenstein arrived in the United States in late 1933, after marrying his Hungarian fiancée (Piroska Rona). A few months before his position at Yale was due to expire, Loewenstein was offered and accepted a position in the political science department at Amherst College (1936-1939). In 1940, Amherst awarded Loewenstein an honorary M.A. and appointed him Professor of Jurisprudence and Political Science. He held this position until reaching emeritus status in 1961, teaching political theory, the history of government, and international and comparative law.

In 1941, a Guggenheim Fellowship took him to South America for several months of research on contemporary Latin American politics. His subsequent public lectures and writings on trends in Latin American and European political culture caught the attention of officials at the U.S. Departments of State and Justice seeking to curtail the spread of fascism. In 1942, Loewenstein took partial leave from Amherst College to become a Special Assistant to the U.S. Attorney General in Washington, D.C. Part of his responsibility was to oversee production of a series of reports and memoranda for the Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense of the American Republics on fascist political organization and activity in Latin America. While at the Department of Justice, Loewenstein was asked by the State Department to act as temporary legal advisor to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA) (1943). He also spent several weeks teaching at the Harvard School for Overseas Administration in Cambridge, Massachusetts (1943-1944). Concurrent with these obligations, Loewenstein served on a committee of the American Law Institute organized to draft a “Statement on Essential Human Rights.” After the war, Loewenstein was asked by the Justice Department in to serve in the Legal Division of the United States Office of Military Government for Germany. From 1945-1946, he lent his expertise in German law and his familiarity with the German legal community to the effort to “de-Nazify” the administration of German justice. As of September, 1946, his primary activities were once again teaching and writing, but he continued work as an advisor on matters of constitutional and international law. From 1952-1954, he advised the leader of the German Social Democratic Party, Adolf Arndt, as the latter mounted a constitutional challenge to the signing of European Defense treaties by the Federal Republic of Germany. In 1961-1962, while teaching at Kyoto University on a Fulbright Fellowship, Loewenstein became an advisor to the Japanese Constitutional Reform Commission.

Loewenstein was a prolific writer and a tireless promoter of his works and ideas. During his first decade in the U.S., he gave numerous public talks to civic groups, both locally and nationally. Later in his career, he held more than fourteen guest professorships, including one at the University of Munich (where he was later reinstated as a full professor). Loewenstein authored fourteen books and numerous articles, pamphlets, book reviews, essays, and letters to the editor. He wrote and lectured on a wide range of topics, including comparative constitutional law, the history of government, political symbolism, and international affairs. Some of his work incorporated a sociological perspective on political power that manifested the influence of Max Weber, whose circle in Heidelberg Loewenstein had frequented in his student years. Frequent travel gained him contacts around the world, some of whom became regular correspondents. In addition to his professional memberships, he was a member of the Cosmos Club (Washington, D.C.). Opinionated and verbally adept in both German and English, Loewenstein often generated controversy and criticism through his publications and public lectures. He appears to have relished intellectual debate. Toward the end of his life, he found it increasingly difficult to interest American publishers in his work. He was held in particularly high esteem in German academic circles, however, throughout his lifetime and beyond. In 1972, he was awarded the German Order of Merit by the Federal Republic of Germany. He died on July 10, 1973, on a visit to Heidelberg.

History of the Papers and Their Organization

The bulk of the materials in the collection were donated to Amherst College by the estate of Piroska Loewenstein (1900-1979) in 1984. Smaller amounts of material were donated (also by her estate) in 1979, 1986, and 1990. Upon his retirement in 1961, Karl Loewenstein also deposited a number of pamphlets and books with the Archives.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PAPERS

Scope and Content Note

The Karl Loewenstein Papers contain a wide variety of materials collected and created by Karl Loewenstein over the course of his lifetime. The collection also includes items produced or collected by members of Loewenstein's family. The bulk of material produced or collected by Loewenstein spans the years 1908-1970; the relatively small quantity of family papers and photographs stretch back to 1822.

The collection documents Loewenstein's scholarly career in depth. It includes versions of many of his major and minor works, from manuscript drafts of some of his earliest publications (circa 1919) to an unpublished essay in English on the Watergate scandal (circa 1973). Voluminous correspondence documents his negotiations with publishers, substantive discussions with colleagues in his field, applications for fellowships, and arrangements for guest professorships and public speaking engagements. The collection also includes evidence of Loewenstein's research (notes, clippings, printed material) on a variety of topics. Materials related to Loewenstein's participation in professional associations and committees beyond Amherst are also present in the collection, as are notes for courses and lectures given at Amherst and numerous other institutions. He also retained the texts or transcripts of several of his public lectures, radio addresses, and a German television panel session. Loewenstein's work for government agencies and commissions is also well documented through reports, memoranda, correspondence, and, in one case, a detailed, typed office diary (recorded while working for the U.S. Office of Military Government for Germany, 1945-1946).

Although the collection contains Loewenstein's personal diaries from 1905 and 1973 (with gaps), the unique shorthand that he employed make these difficult to read. Most of Loewenstein's extensive personal and professional correspondence, in contrast, was typed or written in a legible hand. Loewenstein retained a small number of legal case and correspondence files, several of which (including one of his own) concern claims for restitution of property lost after World War I or under the Nazi regime.

In his youth, Loewenstein received training in voice and held a life-long passion for music. The collection includes more than one thousand programs from musical or theatrical performances he (presumably) attended. The bulk of these are for European performances between 1902 and 1933. Loewenstein also tried his hand at fiction and poetry; several examples exist in the collection. Printed materials in the collection include many of Loewenstein's articles, often in the form of offprints, and similar items sent to him by colleagues and acquaintances. Loewenstein also collected World War II-era pamphlets and constitutions in pamphlet form. Loewenstein's completed memoir, a scrapbook with clippings and photographs, additional ephemera, financial and legal records, and a small number of recorded radio programs complete his collection.

Loewenstein's father, Otto Loewenstein, appears to have gathered the family papers and memorabilia that are included in the collection. These include correspondence, photographs, an autograph album from 1822, and legal documents. Otto Loewenstein's own memoir and six-volume World War I diary (1914-1918) are part of the collection. In addition, very small amounts of material belonging to Piroska Loewenstein and Mathilda Loewenstein (Karl Loewenstein's wife and mother, respectively) are part of the collection. Their materials include correspondence, books, brochures, lace patterns, and financial and school records.

The materials are largely in German and English. Karl Loewenstein's papers also contain manuscript and printed materials in Spanish, French, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, and Hungarian. The collection includes translations of Loewenstein's published works into additional languages. Piroska Loewenstein's papers contain significant amounts of material in Hungarian. Mathilda and Otto Loewenstein's papers are largely in German, while some of the ancestral documents collected by Otto Loewenstein contain very small amounts of material in Hebrew and unidentified scripts.

Subseries Descriptions

Subseries A: Biographical Materials and Life in Germany to 1933

Description

Subseries A contains biographical and autobiographical materials documenting Loewenstein's life from 1892 to 1973. Documentation of Loewenstein's life includes identification cards, certificates, school records, diplomas, legal records, and records of military service from 1892 to 1933, as well as immigration related correspondence and transactions from 1933-1935. Correspondence and records related to the loss of Loewenstein's teaching position at the University of Munich in 1933 are located in Subseries D and E. This subseries also contains curriculum vitae, autobiographical statements, and lists of Loewenstein's publications. The scrapbook filed here documenting Loewenstein's career from 1933 through 1968 appears to have been largely the work of his wife, Piroska Loewenstein. Additional files of clippings by or about Loewenstein are located here as well. Original photographs contained in the scrapbook have been relocated to Subseries L: Photographs. Toward the end of his life, Loewenstein composed a memoir ("Des Lebens Überfluss," 427 pages). This subseries contains drafts and a final, typed version. An electronic scan of the memoir also exists: Loewenstein-Ueberfluss.pdf. Although Loewenstein's earliest travel diaries are legible (Box 4, Folder 1; Box 5), his remaining diaries (1905-1971) are written in a unique, partly illegible shorthand. Karl Loewenstein's biographical file at Amherst College also contains significant biographical material not duplicated in this collection.

Arrangement: Records, passports, and certificates are located first in the subseries, before descriptive and autobiographical materials. The diaries are located at the end of this subseries.

Karl Loewenstein – Non-Alumni Biographical Files

Subseries B: Publications and Research

Description: This subseries contains manuscripts and typescripts of Loewenstein's published and unpublished work as a political scientist, including book and article manuscripts, essays for the popular press, book reviews, and letters to the editor. Also included in this subseries are research files, correspondence related to publications, reviews of Loewenstein's published works, texts and transcripts of speeches and radio addresses, grant application materials, and materials gathered on or for research trips and conferences. Journals in which Loewenstein's work appeared, or offprints from those journals, are also in this subseries. Not included in this subseries are research files and correspondence directly related to Loewenstein's work as a policy advisor (Subseries C) or to his non-scholarly work (Subseries A and H). Additional correspondence relating to his publications is found in Subseries D: Correspondence. Additional materials documenting Loewenstein's tenure as a Fulbright Fellow in Japan are in Subseries E. Since Loewenstein accepted public speaking engagements almost whenever he spent significant periods abroad, transcripts of public lectures given in Germany, Japan, Belgium, and elsewhere are located in Subseries C (Policy Advising and Research) and Subseries E (Teaching). Recordings of a small number of Loewenstein's lectures and interviews are in Subseries G.

Of particular interest in this subseries are the clippings and pages from the Vöössische Zeitung and other German newspapers that Loewenstein gathered in 1932-1933 for his unpublished essay on the German constitutional crisis of 1933. Germany's leading liberal newspaper, the Vöössische Zeitung was shut down in 1934. While the collection contains only few dozen news articles from this period, they provide a penetrating view of liberal intellectuals' understanding of the unfolding political situation shortly before the Nazi seizure of power.

The correspondence in this subseries has been processed only at the folder level, maintaining Loewenstein's organization by year span and language. The contents of the correspondence files consist primarily of negotiations with publishers and thank-you notes from the many individuals to whom Loewenstein sent offprints of his works. Letters with more substantive content, if found, have been foldered by topic (e.g. reactions to Brazil under Vargas). Loewenstein generally retained carbon copies of his typed correspondence and filed incoming and outgoing correspondence together. A portion of Loewenstein's grant application and conference materials have also not been processed below the folder level.

Arrangement:

- Published works and related material (drafts, notes, research materials, correspondence and reviews) filed by published title and arranged by date of publication
- Unpublished works, arranged by approximate date of creation, if known
- Minor publications (short essays, book reviews, and letters to the editor), arranged by date of publication
- Research files not clearly connected to any one publication
- Correspondence regarding publications, arranged by year

- Publishing contracts
- Reviews of published works, if not located with the draft of that publication
- Public lectures and speeches
- Grant application materials
- Materials gathered for and during research trips and scholarly conferences
- Offprints and journal issues containing Loewenstein's published scholarly works, arranged chronologically.

Note that this finding aid lists manuscripts and related material by the published title of the work in question. In cases where the working title and the final, published title of a work differed, the contents of a folder may not appear to match the title given on the folder. Useful (although not comprehensive) bibliographies of Loewenstein's published works can be found in Markus Lang, Karl Loewenstein: Transatlantischer Denker der Politik (Stuttgart, 2007), pp. 323-328; and in the Festschrift für Karl Loewenstein (Tübingen, 1971), pp. 508-516.

Subseries C: Policy Advising and Research

Description:

Loewenstein spent much of the period from 1942 through 1946, and a considerable portion of the period 1947-1954, as a consultant and advisor to governmental and intergovernmental bodies. In 1961-1962, he was asked by members of the Japanese Constitutional Reform Commission to offer his insights and opinions as they considered fundamental reforms of Japan's 1946 constitution. The reports, memoranda, correspondence, and other material accumulated by Loewenstein in the course of these activities are gathered here. Material that is related in substance to his work as an advisor, or that document activities that he carried out simultaneously with his advising work, are also gathered here.

Arrangement: The subseries arrangement reflects the organizational roles Loewenstein assumed during this period, in approximate chronological order.

Justice Department; Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense; UNRRA; Guggenheim Research Trip; School for Overseas Administration; American Law Institute (1941-1944):

Description: Loewenstein appears to have first come to the attention of State Department and Department of Justice policy-makers through his writings and public lectures. In particular, his “Legislative control of political extremism in European democracies” (Columbia Law Review, 1938) and his talk on the same subject for the American Bar Association in September, 1940, attracted the attention of officials concerned about the spread of fascist movements and ideas (Box 32, folders 16-25). He began work as a consultant for the Justice Department in June 1942. At the newly-created War Division of the Department of Justice, where he was one of a number of Special Assistants to the Attorney General, Loewenstein oversaw research on Latin America and provided policy recommendations for the Special War Policies Unit and the Alien Enemy Control Unit. Loewenstein’s multilingualism and familiarity with Latin American politics (he had traveled to South America as a Guggenheim Fellow from February to August, 1941) were put to use as he helped produce a series of reports on fascist political organization and activity in Latin America. These were submitted to the Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense of the American Republics. Formed in 1942 of representatives from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Uruguay, Venezuela, and the U.S., the purpose of the committee was to coordinate anti-fascist measures in the Americas. (The organization was also known as the Inter-American Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense; internal documents refer to the committee simply as the CPD). Loewenstein was also asked to provide expert testimony in support of the Justice Department’s attempt to strip several Puerto Rican naturalized citizens of their U.S. citizenship for their alleged ties to fascist organizations. Although Justice officials decided to eliminate Loewenstein’s testimony before the trial date, the correspondence, case documents, and memoranda on “denaturalization” that he retained provide a glimpse into some of the Justice Department’s wartime activities and concerns (Box 43, Folders 13, 19, 20, 21).

Also for the CPD, Loewenstein produced memoranda analyzing fascist influence on Latin American educational institutions and on the dissemination of anti-Semitic propaganda in the region. Consistent with his interest in international law, Loewenstein also took a strong interest in the proposal of Dr. Luis Alberto Bouza of Uruguay to create a uniform penal code for the states of the Pan-American Union (Box 43, Folder 70).

Because Loewenstein resided in Washington, D.C., only part-time during his work for the Department of Justice, his relationships with his superiors and colleagues there are documented in a rich exchange of correspondence. A portion of the correspondence is organized by month (September 1942-July 1944), and the remainder filed by topic (U.S. Department of Justice– Criminal Division–Correspondence) or alphabetically by correspondent. His letters to Laurence A. Knapp (Chief of the Latin American Section and later with the State Department) and Carl B. Spaeth (Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense) document Loewenstein's advising role well. A small number of letters and memoranda belonging to Miguel A. Capriles, of the Special War Policies Unit of the Department of Justice, are also present in the collection.

Much of Loewenstein's work at the Department of Justice flowed both chronologically and intellectually out of his Guggenheim-sponsored research trip to Latin America in 1941 and he filed materials from both activities together. This subseries therefore includes the research files and correspondence generated in the course of his Guggenheim Fellowship.

In 1943, while working for the Department of Justice, Loewenstein was asked by the State Department to act as temporary legal advisor to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA). He also spent a portion of 1943 teaching at the Harvard School for Overseas Administration in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Concurrent with these obligations, Loewenstein served on a committee organized by the American Law Institute for the purpose of drafting a "Statement on Essential Human Rights." In the course of this work, Loewenstein carried on extensive correspondence with the committee chair, William Draper Lewis. Loewenstein later noted with pride in his memoir that some of his work on the document was incorporated into the United Nations 1948 Declaration of Universal Human Rights ("Des Lebens Überfluss," 232). In 1956, Loewenstein donated an "almost complete set" of the committee's papers to the Archives of the United Nations. Substantial documentation of his committee work for the American Law Institute and for the American Political Science Association remain in the collection. Copies of the United Nations Bulletin (1947-1952) collected and annotated by Loewenstein are also filed in this subseries. The full run of this publication is held at the Five College Depository.

In September, 1944, Loewenstein was recruited by Carl Spaeth of the Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense to assist at its headquarters in Montevideo, Uruguay, in compiling and editing a two-volume edition of the committee's research. ("Des Lebens Überfluss, 236). Very little material survives from this period.

Consultant–Office of Military Government for Germany-U.S. Zone (bulk, 1945-1946):

Description: In early summer 1945, Loewenstein was asked by the Justice Department to serve in the Legal Division of the Office of Military Government for Germany–U.S. (abbreviated as OMGUS in the original records and in this finding aid). He arrived in Berlin in July 1945 and remained until September, 1946. Loewenstein’s work for OMGUS is especially well documented. As a self-described “troubleshooter” in the Legal Division (“Des Lebens Überfluss,” 253), and as a liaison to the German legal and judicial community, Loewenstein produced dozens of reports and memoranda during his year in Germany, many in both English and German. Nominally, these memoranda cover a broad range of topics, from reform of the Civil Service Law, to the regulation of parties and elections, to reform of the German marriage law. The primary focus of all his work, however, and of that of the Legal Division more generally, was the denazification of German law and the reconstruction of the administration of justice in the three states (Länder) in the U.S. Zone: Bavaria, Greater Hesse, and Württemberg-Baden. One of Loewenstein’s first contributions to this effort was to travel throughout the U.S. Zone to interview justices and lawyers considered candidates for positions in the reconstructed judicial system. His typed notes from several of these interviews provide summaries of these individuals’ activities and affiliations during the years of Nazi rule. In most cases, Loewenstein has included his own frank assessment of each candidate (Box 46, folders 8-11).

Much of Loewenstein’s formal communications with OMGUS officials took place via reports and memoranda for which he maintained a partial index (Record of Written Work, Box 46, folders 15, 19, and 21). The bulk of his memos were directed to Judge J. Warren Madden, Charles Fahy, or Alvin Rockwell, each of whom led the Legal Division during Loewenstein’s tenure. These documents contain detailed legal analyses of the division’s initiatives along with Loewenstein’s blunt assessments of the potential and real effectiveness of a wide variety of the Military Government’s undertakings. Researchers interested in the formulation and implementation of denazification policies should consult the rich material in these folders (Reports and Memoranda, Box 46, folders 16-29) as well as the “Denazification” material (Box 46, folders 51-59, and Box 47, folders 1-4). Loewenstein was also involved in the reform of legal education, particularly at the law school of University of Munich.

Loewenstein’s OMGUS correspondence files (Box 47, folders 5-38) include letters from German citizens seeking assistance with the difficulties they faced in the immediate post-war period. These form a small but rich source of information on life in Germany—and on U.S. occupation policies—immediately after the war. These letters also contain information about relationships among the staff of the Legal Division. Because the letters Loewenstein received in the autumn of 1946, after he left Germany, are especially rich in news and gossip about OMGUS, they are filed here. Correspondence beginning January, 1947, regardless of topic, is with the general correspondence files (Subseries D).

Arrangement of OMGUS Correspondence:

Correspondence related to Loewenstein's work for OMGUS is divided between an alphabetically-arranged series of folders (Box 47, folders 5-18) followed by series arranged by month. Particularly substantive correspondence, and correspondence with particularly prominent individuals, has been located with the alphabetical correspondence files in Subseries D: Subseries D contains correspondence with the following individuals, even if it relates to Loewenstein's work for OMGUS:

Clay, Lucius D.
Dänzer-Vanotti, Hedda
Dickman, William
Hemken, Ruth
Hirschberg, Max
Kempner, Robert
Kollreuter, Otto
Mommsen, Konrad
Niebuhr, Reinhold
Stauffer, Tom
von Berchem, Friedrich, Freiherr
Walser, Karl
Weber, Marianne

Within the chronologically-arranged OMGUS correspondence files (Box 47, folders 19 - 47), Loewenstein also had multiple or substantive exchanges with the following correspondents: Professor F.E. Hermens, (December 1945-March 1946); Landesgerichtspräsident Dr. Lahusen (Bremen), (regarding conditions in Bremen and the deleterious effects of the denazification program, August, 1945); Dr. R. Wreschner (responses to questionnaire on the background and activities of Dr. George Ziegler, June, 1945); Dr. Herbert Ruscheweyh; Geheimer Justizrat Dr. Karl Eisenberger; Staatsrat Hans Erhard; Walter Bruns; and Max Rheinstein.

Additional OMGUS and HICOG Material

Loewenstein also kept an "Office Diary" (typescript, primarily in English) throughout his year with OMGUS. Although many entries are mundane, the 200-page diary also contains an incisive running critical commentary on the Office of Military Government, its personnel, and its shortcomings. An equally blunt assessment of the failures of the Legal Division to accomplish its goals is contained in the typescript of an "interview" with Loewenstein in July 1946, shortly before his departure (Reports and Memoranda, Box 46, folder 28). Loewenstein drew heavily on his experiences in 1945-1946 for his Harvard Law Review article, "The Reconstruction of the Administration of Justice in American-Occupied Germany," (1948).

Loewenstein returned to Germany for portions of 1948, 1949, and 1950, where he worked for the Civil Administration Division of OMGUS and for the Office of the U.S. High Commissioner for Germany. The little material that survives from his activities during this period is located after the OMGUS materials. Related correspondence may be found in the General Correspondence files for these years (Subseries D).

Constitutional Law Advisor (1952-1955; 1961-1962):

Description: Following his particular interest in constitutional law, Loewenstein became involved in two constitutional controversies during the 1950s and 1960s, one German and one Japanese. In the first (1952-1954), he advised the leader of the German Social Democratic Party, Adolf Arndt, as the latter mounted a constitutional challenge to the signing of European Defense treaties (the Brussels Treaty and the North Atlantic Treaty) by the Federal Republic of Germany. Loewenstein's own legal opinion in the matter was submitted to the Constitutional Court in March, 1954, and he wrote about his experience in the Yale Law Journal ("The Bonn Constitution and the European Defense Community Treaties," May, 1955: 805-839). Many of the major documents in the case are in the collection, along with substantive correspondence between Arndt and Loewenstein (1952-1955). These materials are primarily in German. Almost ten years later, while teaching at Kyoto University on a Fulbright Fellowship (1961-1962), Loewenstein became an advisor to the Japanese Constitutional Reform Commission. He provided written commentary on the work of the Commission and advised its members as they prepared to solicit input from foreign scholars on possible revision of the constitution. Loewenstein's primary points of contact on the Commission were its Chairman, Kenzo Takayanagi, and Councilor Ichiro Otomo. The latter materials (in English, German, and Japanese) comprise .75 linear feet, or 27 folders.

Subseries D: Correspondence

Description: For most of his life, Loewenstein carried on extensive correspondence with colleagues, friends, and associates. A significant proportion of the correspondence consists of letters to or from family, friends, and acquaintances from the period before 1933. The letters also document Loewenstein's personal experience of the critical year of 1933, when he and thousands of other Jews sought to emigrate from Germany. Loewenstein's post-1933 correspondence includes letters to fellow scholars, presidents, and congressional representatives that document many of his intellectual and political concerns. Loewenstein also wrote to private persons he had never met (e.g., Hannah Arendt), sometimes including a copy of one of his publications.

Arrangement: The correspondence files are arranged in three groups:

- Alphabetical correspondence files
- Chronological correspondence files
- Topical correspondence files

Alphabetical correspondence files

Description: These files include correspondence with family members, friends, associates, acquaintances, and others between 1906 and 1973. They include letters from scholars and artists with connections to Munich, Paris, or Heidelberg in the 1910s and 1920s, including Thomas Mann, Lyonel and Julia Feininger, Otto Crusius, Max and Marianne Weber, Thomas Mann translator Lavinia Mazzucchetti, and Julien Reinach. The collection also includes several letters from the Annales historian Lucien Febvre and from his assistant, Lucie Varga, as well as letters from the playwright Alfred Neumann. Correspondents from German academic and political circles included Otto Kollreuter, Theodor Maunz, Gerhard Leibholz, Konrad Mommsen, Theodor Heuss, Karl Walser, Reinhold Maier, and Adolf Arndt, among many others. Loewenstein's interest in British constitutional history and politics led to correspondence with Harold Laski and Sir Ivor Jennings. The collection also contains two lengthy letters (1959) from Loewenstein's former student (and British intelligence officer) George Kennedy Young. American correspondents included Felix Frankfurter, Louis Brandeis, Edward R. Murrow, William Draper Lewis, Howard Shapar, C.J. Friedrich, and E.M. Kirkpatrick.

Arrangement: Alphabetical correspondent files are arranged by the last name of the correspondent. Except as noted in the folder listing, all correspondence files contain incoming and outgoing correspondence. In those instances where an envelope has been retained, it has been placed immediately before the letter it contained. The arrangement of correspondence within each folder may not be chronological.

Chronological correspondence files

Description: These files contain general correspondence (1908-1973) touching on a wide variety of topics and concerns. Some of Loewenstein's earliest cards and letters document his months at the University of Paris in 1911 and his experience in the German infantry in 1915. The chronological correspondence files after 1933 contain a fairly full picture of Loewenstein's daily life, chronicling arrangements for public appearances, conference participation, and minor business dealings. While most of Loewenstein's correspondence with his publishers is contained in Subseries B—Publications and Research, the files in this subseries contain some records of those relationships.

Arrangement: Most of the chronological correspondence files are arranged by year quarter (i.e., Jan – Mar, 1950). In some cases, a folder contains an entire year of correspondence. Incoming and outgoing correspondence are filed together. In those instances where an envelope has been retained, it has been placed immediately before the letter it contained. The arrangement of correspondence within each folder may not be chronological.

Topical correspondence files

Description: Reflecting Loewenstein's own organization of his correspondence, a small number of topically-arranged correspondence files document his relationships with specific institutions (e.g., Amherst College, The Max Weber Archive), or his specific concerns. These files include correspondence from 1942-1972. Note that correspondence with specific institutions over a brief time span may be located with the chronologically-arranged correspondence files (e.g., Universität München, Employment and dismissal – 1931 – 1933, Box 53, Folder 23).

Arrangement: Topical correspondence files have been placed in approximate chronological order, with Amherst College-related material grouped together. As above, in those instances where an envelope has been retained, it has been placed immediately before the letter it contained. The arrangement of correspondence within each folder may not be chronological.

Subseries E: Teaching

Subseries J: Personal Legal and Financial Papers (correspondence regarding German restitution claim, property disputes)

Series 3 and 4 (correspondence from parents, Otto and Mathilda Loewenstein)

Subseries E: Teaching

Description: This subseries contains course outlines, lecture notes, exams, bibliographies, printed teaching materials, and teaching-related correspondence gathered over the course of Loewenstein's long teaching career (1931-1970). Student papers, rosters, and evaluations are also located here.

Notes for and transcripts of many of Loewenstein's public lectures are also in this subseries. While Loewenstein taught at Amherst for twenty-five years, he also taught or lectured at numerous other academic institutions in the U.S. and abroad. He taught broadly in the fields of political science, government, public law, constitutional law, and international and comparative law.

Arrangement: Folder titles in this subseries preserve Loewenstein's organization of his lecture notes. Thus some folders of lecture notes provide the course title (e.g., "Political Science 23"), while others indicate where the lectures were given ("Germany – Lecture Notes, 1948-1949"). An attempt has been made to place the folders in approximate chronological order, but some folders contain lecture notes that span several years.

Subseries F: Law Practice

Description: Loewenstein practiced law in Munich from 1919 until his immigration to the U.S. in 1933. According to his memoir, he left 2000 case files in Germany and these were destroyed. In 1939, shortly after acquiring U.S. citizenship, he was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar and began accepting cases from U.S. clients. His practice was never extensive, however, and he often acted as a consultant only. This subseries includes materials from seventeen cases that originated before his departure for the U.S. and thirteen that originated between 1940 and 1963. Loewenstein's multilingualism and understanding of both German and U.S. law made his services valuable to German citizens whose concerns required interaction with the U.S. legal system. Loewenstein assisted and consulted on a variety of cases, primarily restitution cases, property disputes, and divorce cases. These materials also document Loewenstein's involvement with legal professional organizations.

Arrangement: The legal case and correspondence files are arranged in approximate chronological order.

Subseries G: Recordings

Description: The small collection of recordings in the collection include two aluminum disc recordings of a radio lecture by Loewenstein given on 20 March 1936 as part of W.E.V.D's "University of the Air." Loewenstein's lecture, "Functional Representation and a Parliament of Industry," was recorded off the air by Audio-Scriptions, Inc. and marketed to him by the company. Sleeves 4-6 contain three undated shellac discs. Discs labelled "Set #1" appear to be a recording of Loewenstein interviewing Howard Shapar (AC 45) and another individual about their experiences as part of the U.S. occupation forces in Germany after 1945. The last item is a cassette tape recording of a memorial tribute to Loewenstein that aired on the Radio of the University of Mexico (undated).

Subseries H: Fiction and Poetry

Description: While pursuing his professional career as an academic and legal consultant, and his passion for music, Loewenstein found time to record observations on life and to write fiction and poetry. With the exception of the poetry, which includes writings from 1912, these writings appear to be from the 1950s, 1960s, and 1970s. The correspondence in this subseries includes evidence of Loewenstein's efforts to publish his creative work.

Arrangement: With the exception of some of the poetry, which was found with mixed material elsewhere in the collection, the arrangement reflects Loewenstein's organization and labeling of these materials.

Subseries I: The Baron Gleichen-Russwurm Case

Description: In 1929, Loewenstein acted as defense attorney when charges of insurance fraud were brought against Karl Alexander, Baron von Gleichen-Russwurm (great grandson of Friedrich Schiller). Gleichen-Russwurm had inherited a valuable pearl necklace, which he insured and claimed to have sent to a Munich jeweler to be refurbished. The jeweler instead reported having received a dead mouse in the packet sent by the Baron. The case was made famous when Thomas Mann incorporated it into his novel, Doktor Faustus. In 1959, Loewenstein, apparently intending to write his own story about the case, began trying to gather materials about it and composed a story outline. His own records of the case had been destroyed. This subseries contains Loewenstein's summary of the case, along with information about it that he gathered from various sources. The latter includes a one hundred and forty-five page psychoanalytic and neurological evaluation of Baron von Gleichen-Russwurm that was conducted by Dr. Ernst Speer in 1928-1929 and submitted to the court as expert testimony (Gutachten) in support of Loewenstein's (unsuccessful) insanity defense.

The expert testimony, correspondence, and most of the clippings in this subseries are in German; Loewenstein's notes and summary are in English. Some clippings, a second story synopsis, and a poem filed here all appear to be unrelated to the case. Likewise, the relation to the case of the three photographs, in an envelope labeled "Warburg, July (?) 1958" is unclear. The original photographs have been filed in Subseries L (Photographs).

Subseries J: Personal Legal and Financial Records

Description: Throughout his life, Loewenstein devoted considerable energy to managing his financial affairs. His scrupulous attention to detail sharpened his petty financial disputes (recorded in the correspondence files), and his significant ones, including a bitter legal dispute with his brother Alfred after the death of their mother, and a claim for restitution against the postwar government of Munich. Loewenstein was also involved in a dispute with the U.S. Internal Revenue Service. Because of the significance of these events in Loewenstein's life, his financial records have been retained.

Arrangement: General materials have been placed first, followed by records of specific financial disputes and claims. Bank statements, correspondence regarding banking and stocks, and income tax records are at the end of the subseries. The materials in Boxes 69, 70, and 71 have been processed only at the box level and remain in their original folders or envelopes.

Subseries K: Collections

Description: Following his love of music, Karl Loewenstein appears to have retained programs for most of the musical performances he attended. More than half of the ephemera collection consists of programs for concerts given in Germany and other European venues between 1902 and 1933. The remaining programs are for concert and theater performances in the U.S. and abroad. The programs vary widely with regard to format, size, condition, and production quality. The hand-painted wooden model train in the collection appears to have been a memento of Loewenstein's youth in Munich, when Lyonel Feininger and his father spent hours building and decorating model trains at the Loewenstein's home. The remaining items in the subseries include a postcard collection and an assortment of drawings and prints.

Arrangement: The train and the postcards have been placed first, in a small flat box and a postcard box, respectively. The concert and theater programs (in approximate chronological order) follow in tall archives boxes. The remaining material is in separately numbered oversize boxes.

Subseries L: Photographs, ca. 1870-1969

Description: Although relatively small in number, the photographs provide an inclusive document of Loewenstein’s ancestry and life stages. The earliest photographs in the collection include portraits of Loewenstein’s parents and grandparents and pictures of family residences in Ellwangen. Only one photograph exists from the period 1916-1936. Photographs from 1937-1969 were contained in a scrapbook consisting of material pasted onto notebook paper. The scrapbook, which provides a thorough documentation of Loewenstein’s career, is located in Subseries A. It appears to have been created and maintained by Piroska Loewenstein. Photographs from the scrapbook have been removed and placed here, along with a photocopy of the original scrapbook page and any captioning it contained.

Subseries M: Pamphlet, Offprint, and Manuscript Collection

Description and Arrangement:

This subseries is organized into three groups:

- Typescript documents sent or given to Loewenstein by colleagues and friends. Manuscripts from unknown authors are included here.
- Constitutions: Loewenstein’s interest in comparative constitutional law throughout his scholarly career led him to amass a diverse collection of printed constitutions. The constitutions are largely in pamphlet form, although a few are represented here in typescript translations, for example, a provisional constitution of Poland from 1947. Included in the collection are constitutions from Uruguay (several versions), Brazil (several versions), Guatemala, Romania, the U.S.S.R., Greece, Spain, Siam, the Free State of Fiume/Italian Regency of Quarnero, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Czechoslovak Republic, Iceland, Costa Rica, Hungary, Poland, France, Ireland, the United States of Mexico (1917), Argentina, Pakistan, Puerto Rico, Sweden, Germany, Finland, Venezuela, and the Republic of Italy.

Some of the constitutions were produced at least partly for propaganda purposes, as with the English translation of the constitution of Soviet Union from 1936, replete with captioned black and white photographs. Some additional constitutions are represented in English translation, but many are in the language the corresponding country. Most of these dated pamphlets were published in the 1940s and 1950s; the earliest text is a reprint of the Uruguayan constitution of 1830.

- Newspapers, Pamphlets and Offprints: A small number of Hungarian-language newspapers from 1939 were found in the collection. Due to their fragile condition, most could not be unfolded and they have been boxed and placed with these printed materials.

Loewenstein collected a large number of pamphlets and article offprints over the course of his career. Many were from colleagues in his field or in related fields and were inscribed to Loewenstein. Loewenstein maintained correspondence with many of these individuals. The section retains Loewenstein's topical organization of these materials and leaves in place a variety printed material that he interfiled (government documents, single periodical issues, etc.). In addition to offprints, Loewenstein collected political and propaganda pamphlets, filing these in his topical collections on "National Socialism in Germany," "World War II," "Foreign Governments and Politics," "Germany after 1945," "Peace and Reconstruction," and "Soviet Russia and Satellites."

Arrangement: Items that were not assigned a topic by Loewenstein have been filed by approximate date.

Series 2: Piroska (Rona) Loewenstein

Biographical Note and Description: Piroska Rona was born in Hungary on September 22, 1900. Little information about her life exists in the collection, although she appears to have been living in Munich in 1933. Her marriage to Loewenstein in November, 1933, was her second marriage. Shortly thereafter, they emigrated to the United States. From 1936 on, they made their home in Amherst and at a second home in Dover, Vermont. Because of KL's poor eyesight, Piri (as she was known to family and friends) became the driver in the family. She accompanied Loewenstein on most or all of his frequent trips abroad. She appears to have made a favorable impression, as Loewenstein's correspondents frequently asked after her warmly. She became a U.S. citizen in 1939. Piri cared for Loewenstein's mother, Mathilda, after she came to live with them in Amherst in 1935. The extensive scrapbook describing Loewenstein's career appears to have been her work. There is some evidence that her mother, Malvina, came to live with the Loewensteins in 1946. Piroska Loewenstein died on April 10, 1979.

Additional Hungarian newspapers are located in Boxes 82-83 and in oversize boxes. Two illustrated books (Öt év !, Athaeneum [1950] and Magyarország utikony, Budapest: 1955) have been transferred to the rare book collection.

Series 3: Otto Loewenstein Collection

Biographical Note and Description: Otto Loewenstein was born in Ellwangen, Germany on 12 March 1859, to Leopold and Elise (Lebrecht) Löwenstein. The second of twelve children—Leopold Lowenstein remarried in 1871, after the death of his first wife—Otto attended Gymnasium in Stuttgart and apprenticed at a manufacturing firm in Frankfurt. In 1879 he began work for the firm of Raff and Sons in Munich, whose proprietors were maternal relatives. In the 1880's, he began producing steins and decorative metalware in his own factory. In 1886 he married Mathilda Oppenheimer and they had three sons: Alfred (1887), Karl (1891), and Robert (1896). Robert died in 1926. Otto Loewenstein lived in Munich until shortly before his death in 1935. He wrote a short memoir and kept a World War I (homefront) diary, both of which are in the collection. He shared with Lyonel Feininger, a frequent visitor to the Loewensteins' home in Munich, a passion for model train building. See Series 1, Subseries K (Collections) for the single train in the collection. The family documents and photographs that were among Karl Loewenstein's papers appear to have been collected by Otto, and they are filed here.

Arrangement: Materials in this Series are arranged in approximate chronological order.

Series 4: Mathilda (Oppenheimer) Loewenstein

Biographical Note and Description: Karl Loewenstein's mother, Mathilda Oppenheimer, was born on 28 June, 1867, in Munich, daughter of Abraham and Charlotte Oppenheimer. She married Otto Loewenstein in 1886 and bore three sons, Alfred, Karl, and Robert. She came to live with Karl and Piroska Loewenstein in Amherst in 1935-36, after the death of her husband. She obtained U.S. citizenship in 1944. Mathilda Loewenstein died in September, 1946, shortly after Karl Loewenstein's return from Germany and his work for the U.S. Office of Military Government. The collection includes a selection of her school records, correspondence to Karl Loewenstein written between 1908 and 1941, a will and notes to her children expressing final wishes, and writings about her pet bulldog.
