Swift decision: portrait will remain in Ireland

A portrait of Anglo-Irish satirist Jonathan Swift that has hung at Howth Castle since 1735 sold for €234,000 (£200,000) this month. It topped a contents sale conducted at the County Dublin estate by Castlecomer auctioneers Fonsie Mealy on September 8.

In his History of Howth and its Owners, published by the Royal Society of Antiquaries in Ireland in 1917, Francis Ball writes: "On the walls there hung a whole-length portrait of Swift by Bindon, unique amongst portraits of him, in that its history is determined with absolute certainty."

The 7ft 4in x 5ft (2.22 x 1.53m) Howth portrait, offered in its original oak-leaf carved frame, is considered the primary version of several painted by the County Clare artist and architect Francis Bindon (c.1690-1765) in the 1730s. Others are in the National Portrait Gallery in London, the Deanery of St Patrick's Cathedral and the Crawford Art Gallery, Cork (a picture bequeathed by Swift to his housekeeper).

Painted in wig and full clerical robes, Swift is depicted holding a scroll on which is written The Drapier's Fourth Letter to the Whole People of Ireland. Alongside him, grovelling on the ground, is a caricature of William Wood who clutches a 'patent'.

The imagery relates to the famous Swift satire that attacked the granting of a licence in 1722 to the Duchess of Kendal (a mistress of George I) to issue copper coinage for Ireland. She had quickly sold the patent to Wood for £10,000 sending alarm through Dublin that the existing currency would soon be devalued.

Using the pseudonym 'Drapier', Swift had penned letters pouring scorn on the proposal. In the fourth of Drapier's letters, he wrote: "One great merit I am sure we have, which those of English birth can have no pretence to, that our ancestors reduced this kingdom to the obedience of England, for which we have

Anglo-Saxon brooch recovered but rest of hoard still at large

by Laura Chesters

A renewed plea for the art and antiques trade to be aware of eight Anglo-Saxon brooches still missing following a theft in 1995 has been issued after the recovery of one of the group.

A bronze-gilt square-headed brooch was mysteriously sent to the Metropolitan Police anonymously by post and has now been returned to Rutland County Museum.

The museum was burgled 26 years ago when the brooch, along with eight others (and a Roman gold ring recovered soon after the theft) were taken.

The Art Loss Register (ALR) and Rutland County Council are appealing for people to be on the lookout for the eight brooches.

James Ratcliffe, director of recoveries and general counsel at ALR, said: "The detailed

Winter Olympia is back

Celebrating its 30th anniversary, the Winter Arts & Antiques Fair at Olympia in west London is returning. It will host 70 dealers from November 2-7, with the preview on November 1.

It will be held upstairs in the gallery of the National Hall at Olympia London and, as before, runs alongside the larger Spirit of Christmas Fair at the venue.

Previous Olympia antiques fairs had been cancelled due to the coronavirus pandemic and fair director Mary Claire Boyd said: "The health and safety of our exhibitors and loyal visitors is of the utmost importance to us and so we will be following guidelines, in accordance with government requirements to ensure the fair is a welcoming and enjoyable experience for all."

White gloves for Oppenheimer sale

On September 14 Sotheby's New York conducted a white glove auction of early Meissen porcelain from the collection formed by Dr Franz Oppenheimer, a Silesian lawyer and coal mining magnate, and his wife Margarethe in the early 20th century.

The 117 lots were restituted earlier this year to their heirs more than 80 years after the Oppenheimers were forced to part with them as they fled Nazi persecution.

Since the war, elements of the collection have been on display in three Dutch institutions including the Rijksmuseum.

The Amsterdam museum was the biggest buyer at the $15m sale claiming more than half the lots that will now return to their display cabinets.

The auction, and the Rijksmuseum's shopping list, was topped by the spectacular 17½in (44cm) high clock case, right. Modelled by George Fritzsche and decorated with chinoiserie vignettes in the manner of JG Höroldt, it is surmounted by a figure group attributed to Johann Gottlieb Kirchner fashioned as Minerva with Arachne.

Signed and dated

It is a documentary piece, inscribed Meissen over a crossed swords mark and dated 1727 to the reverse. The movement signed Barrey à Paris dates to c.1700 while the bronze mount is a mid-18th century addition.

At least five different clock case models were produced at Meissen in the late 1720s and early 1730s that together rank among the most ambitious models produced at the factory at this early date. Most were intended for Augustus the Strong and the rooms of the Japanese Palace, Dresden.

Prior to its acquisition by the Oppenheimers, the clock case had a 19th century provenance to two notable English collections.

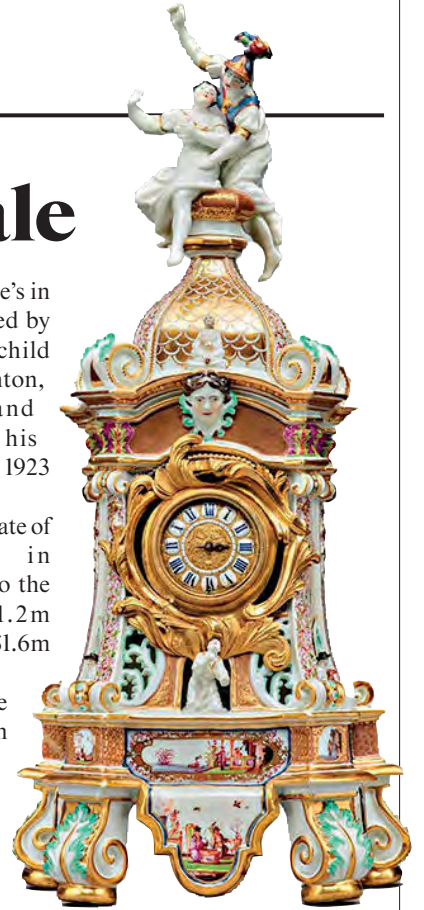

It was owned by politician and art collector Ralph Bernal (1783-1854) and was included in the 32-day auction of his collection held by Christie's in 1855 when it was acquired by Sir Anthony de Rothschild (1810-76) of Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire, and subsequently sold by his daughters at Christie's in 1923 when it made £294.

The clock had an estimate of $200,000-400,000 in Sotheby's sale but sold to the Rijksmuseum at $1.2m (£923,000) or close to $1.6m including premium.

Only a handful of the large-scale Meissen models of animals and birds made for the porcelain menagerie at the Japanese Palace have made more at auction.

Anglo-Saxon brooch returned to museum long-term records held on our database are an invaluable resource. There are still more of these brooches out there that should also be returned because they will still be spotted if they hit the market."

The brooch was returned to the Rutland County Museum this summer. Originally discovered in Market Overton, it is part of a collection belonging to Oakham School and on loan at Rutland County Museum.

A spokesperson for Zurich Insurance

UK, the insurer of the collection, said: "It's not often we are able to return a stolen item to a customer, particularly some 15-plus years after the event, so to be able to return this piece to the customer was very satisfying and a great outcome for all involved."

Swift portrait tops Howth Castle contents sale

been rewarded with a worse climate, the privilege of being governed by laws to which we do not consent, a ruined trade, a House of Peers without jurisdiction, almost an incapacity for all employments; and the dread of Wood's halfpence."

Although a reward was offered for the exposure of the author of the letters, Swift was not betrayed and the proposal to issue the coinage was quietly withdrawn.

The campaign had won Swift the admiration of many Irish families and during the early 1730s he became a frequent guest at Howth Castle. Lord Howth had commissioned Bindon to paint Swift's portrait in 1735. In a letter to his friend Sheridan dated June 16, 1735 Swift said: "I have been fool enough to sit for my picture at full-length by Mr. Bindon, for my Lord Howth."

In view of the importance of this picture, it was essentially off-limits to international bidders when offered as part of the contents of Howth on September 8. As with other culturally sensitive lots in the catalogue, the Irish State will be given the chance to buy it at the hammer price – an option that now remains open for three months. For that reason the estimate of €300,000-400,000 proved a little ambitious but it sold at €234,000 (£200,000) plus premium to a buyer who, it is understood, is intending to keep it in Ireland.

In October 2018, the Gaisford-St Lawrence family agreed to sell the Howth estate to an investment group that intends to redevelop it as a luxury resort.

LAPADA conference to return on October 12

Dealer association LAPADA has announced a return of its annual conference and this time it is being held in the autumn, as opposed to its usual February date.

The event, themed as Reset & Refresh, will be held at 10-11 Carlton House Terrace on October 12.

It expects 130 delegates and tickets cost from £130 for LAPADA members, £145 for members of affiliated associations and £160 for non-members.

Headlining the event is Saif Al-Saraf, head of digital at Mediareach marketing agency, who will examine the digital buying behaviour of millennials and ultra high net worth (UHNW) buyers. Panel discussions will focus on how to enhance visitor experiences in shops and galleries, improving digital aspects for the trade and a panel on new regulations such as Brexit import and export rules and the latest Anti Money Laundering laws.

Freya Simms, CEO of LAPADA, said: "The annual LAPADA conference is an invaluable opportunity for our members to step outside their trading environment and invest in themselves. It provides a constructive programme of industry experts covering directly relevant issues. And even better, this year it is a much-needed chance for us to reconnect in person once again."

The event is sponsored by fine art shipping company Convelio and insurer Besso Limited.

More firearms licences required after law changes

The government has reminded owners of certain old firearms that they will need to obtain a licence following a change in the law, which comes fully into effect on September 22.

Earlier this year, the government changed the law to introduce, for the first time, a legal definition of an antique firearm. Some collectable old guns now fall outside of the definition.

The government took the steps due to concerns over the misuse of antique firearms by criminals. According to the National Ballistics Intelligence Service, there had been a sharp rise in the number of antique guns being seized from crime scenes in recent years.

The new measures update the Policing and Crime Act 2017 and the latest change follows a public consultation that ended in December 2018.

The law effectively changed on March 22 but owners were given six months to decide whether to apply for a firearms certificate, or to otherwise dispose of the weapon.

The seven cartridges which previously appeared in the Home Office guidance as 'antiques' but which have been omitted from the equivalent list in the 2021 regulations (and will therefore require a licence to be legally held from September 22) are:

.320 British (also known as .320 Revolver CF, short or long)

.41 Colt (short or long)

.44 Smith and Wesson Russian

.442 Revolver (also known as .44 Webley)

9.4mm Dutch Revolver

10.6mm German Ordnance Revolver

Striking a blow for the motor car

This rare Victorian silver vesta case with an enamelled scene of an early tiller-driven automobile is hallmarked for Sampson Mordan & Co, London 1896. The date is significant as that was the year the Locomotive Act of 1865 also known as the Red Flag Act was repealed. Previously self-propelled vehicles or 'horseless carriages' were required to follow a pedestrian walking 60 yards ahead of the vehicle waving a red flag or carrying a lantern to warn bystanders of the vehicle's approach.

When finally scrapped on November 14, 1896, Harry Lawson of Daimler and his friends organised the London to Brighton Emancipation run in which a red flag was symbolically destroyed by Lord Winchelsea. The run of 33 cars started at the Metropole Hotel in London and finished at the Metropole Hotel in Brighton and became a regular annual event on the first Sunday of November from 1927, (except from the onset of the Second World War up to 1947, owing to petrol rationing).

This vesta case is the example illustrated in Exceptional Match Safes edited by Shapiro & Koenig and only a handful are known. It was offered for sale at Dix Noonan Webb in London on September 14 when, estimated at £800-1000, it was competed by two phones to £4400 (plus 24% buyer's premium). It was one of a number of Sampson Mordan silver and enamelled vesta cases offered in the sale, the others better known types. There were three of the coveted 'sentry box' models patented in 1885 (they carry the registered design number 38283). Originally thought to be limited to a series of 10 or 12 regiments, around 30 regiments have now been recorded.

Made around the time of Queen Victoria's Golden Jubilee, most of these cases depict soldiers from the royal regiments. The Grenadier Guard is a popular example and one here took £1600 while another wearing the uniform of the 5th Irish Lancers sold online at £2400.

However, the rarest of the group, hallmarked for 1886 and overstruck with two import marks, was enamelled with an Austrian Tirol Kaiserjäger infantryman. These foreign regiments may have been one-off special commissions.

The Kaiserjäger was formed in 1895 as four infantry regiments within the Common Army of Austria-Hungary and disbanded in 1918. This soldier, in parade dress, wears a felt hat, with green cord, a plume of black rooster feathers and the Jäger emblem (it translates as huntsman). Estimated at £2000-3000, it drew a number of bidders and was hammered down to a commission bid at £5500.

Richard Feigen sale at Sotheby's

Sotheby's is staging a dedicated sale of 55 works from the collection of the late New York art dealer Richard L Feigen (1930-2021) who died in January at the age of 90.

Amassed over the dealer's 60-plus years in the art world, the paintings and works on paper range in date from the 14th to the 20th century and have a combined estimate of $11.5m-17m (though a few estimates are subject to change).

The auction will take place in New York on October 18.

Works include Italian gold-ground paintings by Domenico Beccafumi and Lorenzo Monaco; British landscapes and portraits by Thomas Gainsborough, Sir Thomas Lawrence, George Romney and Sir David Wilkie; and two German Expressionist works by Max Beckmann, of whom Feigen was an ardent supporter.

Sotheby's also announced an other major consignment being offered in New York – the Modern & Contemporary Art collection from divorcees Harry and Linda Macklowe.

The 65 lots, including works by Alberto Giacometti, Mark Rothko and Cy Twombly are estimated to raise in excess of $600m – the highest estimate ever placed on any collection at auction.

The collection will appear in two tranches at Sotheby's New York, on November 15 this year, and in May 2022.

Turkey 'overslept' over Guennol idol

A US judge ruled that Turkey cannot recover a $12.5m Anatolian marble idol known as the Guennol Stargazer (above) from Christie's and the hedge fund billionaire Michael Steinhardt. US district judge Alison Nathan in Manhattan said Turkey "inexcusably slept" on its rights by not suing until April 2017, shortly before Christie's put the idol up for auction. She said the Turkish state should have known of the idol's whereabouts decades earlier and said there was no proof that the 9in (23cm) figurine, dating from 3000-2200BC, was excavated from Turkey after 1906 (which would have given Turkey ownership rights under that year's Ottoman Decree).

Steinhardt and his wife paid $1.5m for the idol in 1993. The buyer at $12.5m (£9.7m) in New York in April 2017 (ATG No 2303) subsequently did not proceed with the purchase due to the legal case. Christie's still possesses the idol.

Reaching the heights of Lawrence of Arabia

As 1980s rocker Shakin' Stevens once sang: 'Green Door, what's that secret you're keeping?'

Look closely and this painted Victorian pine door from a house in Oxford includes the heights of children written in pencil. Among the names is 'Ned'.

He is today better known as the archaeologist, military strategist and author TE Lawrence (1888-1935).

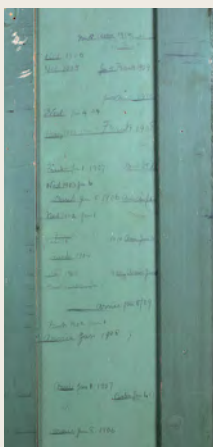

The door is believed to have been in the family home at 2 Polstead Road, North Oxford c.1900-06. The Lawrence family moved to Oxford in 1896 (and lived in the house until 1921). Thomas Edward Lawrence, the second eldest of five boys, attended the local high school before studying history at Jesus College, Oxford between 1907-1910.

He is, of course, best known for his legendary activities in the Middle East during the First World War and for his account of those activities in The Seven Pillars of Wisdom leading to his Lawrence of Arabia moniker.

He worked as an archaeologist for the British Museum in Syria between 1910-14 before joining the British Army, becoming an intelligence officer and fighting alongside Arab guerrilla forces in the hope of securing Arab independence. He died in a motorbike accident in Dorset in 1935.

The door is estimated at £800-1200 at Mallams on September 22.

Family jewels

Koopman Rare Art increases its presence in the jewellery market with the arrival of two ex-Sotheby's specialists.
 Reports by Laura Chesters and Roland Arkell

The new Koopman Rare Art showroom in Dover Street. Kimberley Smith and Sam Hug have joined Koopman Rare Art's dedicated jewellery department (right).

After settling in to its new showroom in the West End, Koopman Rare Art has expanded its jewellery department.

The dealership spent more than 50 years atop the London Silver Vaults on Chancery Lane, before moving this summer to a 3200 sq ft showroom over two floors of a Georgian building at 11-12 Dover Street. Now in Mayfair, the firm has decided to grow its presence in jewellery, to complement its silver specialism.

A part of the expansion is the arrival of Kimberley Smith, daughter of director Lewis Smith, and Sam Hug. Both previously worked in Sotheby's jewellery department. A designated space in the new gallery has been dedicated to jewels.

Lewis Smith explains: "London remains one of the world's main centres for unparalleled works of art and our new location in Mayfair, puts us at the heart of London's luxury market. Hence we feel we are now better positioned to give fine jewellery a heightened level of prominence.

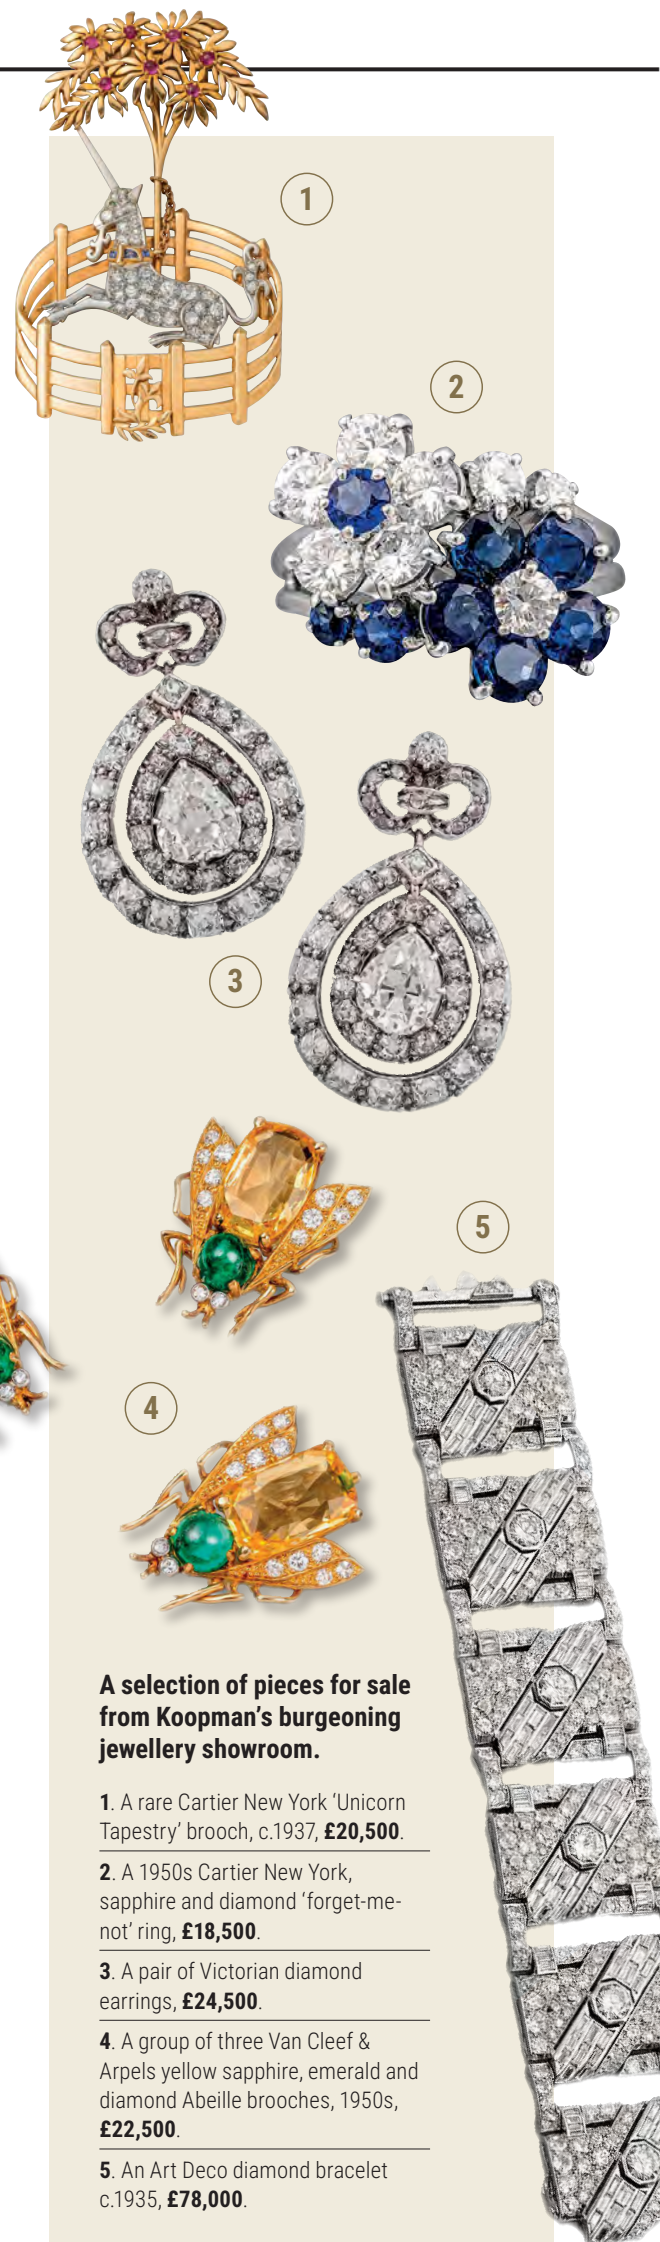

"Jewellery hasn't always been something we've placed at the forefront of our business, but the connection has always been there. One of our founders Eddy Koopman was a trained diamond cutter from Amsterdam and was deeply involved in the jewellery trade before he became known as an expert dealer in antique silver."

Kimberley Smith says the firm will offer an eclectic array of period and vintage pieces: "Our jewellery encompasses quite a wide net from the 18th century to the modern day, but each piece must demonstrate a combination of instant appeal, wearability, together with evidence of the maker's thought, care and attention to detail in its design and manufacture."

As part of the changes at the business Koopman Rare Art has upgraded its website and now has a separate members area and a blogging section. ■

2. A 1950s Cartier New York, sapphire and diamond 'forget-me-not' ring, £18,500.

3. A pair of Victorian diamond earrings, £24,500.

4. A group of three Van Cleef & Arpels yellow sapphire, emerald and diamond Abeille brooches, 1950s, £22,500.

5. An Art Deco diamond bracelet c.1935, £78,000.

Snake that speaks the language of jewellery

This Victorian snake necklace is one of the best of its kind to appear on the regional market in recent memory. The fully articulated gold and silver serpent set with amethysts with emerald and diamond accents was sold in its original case at a timed online auction held by 1818 Auctions (20% buyer's premium) in Cumbria on July 4. It came from the house in the Windermere area, the family only knew of its existence when clearing the property. A receipt for £1700 suggested it had been acquired by the late owner from Byworth Antiques, London in 1974. Offered with an estimate of £5000-8000, it sold to a trade bid of £22,500.

Far more fluent than us in the language of jewellery and stones, the Georgians and the Victorians would immediately have made the link between snakes and eternal love. The ouroboros – a serpent swallowing its own tail – was commonly understood as a symbol of eternity and the form took a popular leap forward when Prince Albert gave Queen Victoria a snake engagement ring with an emerald, her birthstone, set to its head.

Necklaces such as this are more often seen fashioned in turquoise or garnets.

‘Subtle and charming’ Dawson enamel

The career course of Edith Robinson (1862-1929), a London art teacher and painter of chocolate box watercolours was changed in 1893 when she and her new husband (pictured above left), the Stamford artist Nelson Dawson (1859-1941) attended a series of lectures given by the enameller Alexander Fisher.

She ditched her previous medium in favour of the Arts and Crafts revival and a metalworking studio and an enamelling furnace in an upper floor of the family home in Chelsea.

The Architectural Review of 1896 reported: “They have almost re-secured that magnificent and lasting vermilion which has been the despair of craftsmen. Their blue, too, is rich-toned, opulent, and velvety; their green transparent and subdued; and they have obtained a peculiarly fine, granulated medium, which holds the colour at the full with a sense of bloom and brimmingness that reminds one of a gem... It is this effect of opalescence, above all else, above even the singleness and purity of colour, that makes the Dawson enamels so subtle and charming.”

During the busiest years they employed up to 20 craftsmen (in 1900 they exhibited 125 pieces of jewellery at The Fine Art Society in Bond Street) although ill health forced Edith to give up enamelling during the First World War.

Dawson jewellery is not commonplace on the market but a good example (above right) was offered by Morton-on-the-Marsh firm Kinghams (23% buyer's premium) on June 18. Worked in silver with a figaro link chain suspending a pendant of a cicada, it took £1100.

Many happy returns for Margaret’s birthday gift

It is difficult to replicate the occasion of a royal themed auction. Ergo not everything that resurfaces on the market from the fabled ‘Princess Margaret’ sale at Christie’s in June 2006 shows a great appreciation in value. However, proving that the saleroom lightning can strike twice, a cultured pearl and diamond bracelet sold 15 years ago for £60,000 (£72,000 including 20% premium) sold for a mighty £320,000 at Dix Noonan & Webb (24% buyer's premium) on September 14.

This is a significant piece of royal jewellery. Housed in a later fitted case by Cartier, it was one of two Art Deco pearl jewels (the other a necklace) gifted to the princess by her grandmother Queen Mary for her 18th birthday. Princess Margaret was photographed wearing the bracelet on many occasions including for her official 19th birthday portrait taken by Cecil Beaton in July 1949.

He later recalled: “She was at Lord’s for the Eton and Harrow match, and got back a bit late but she is such a quick dresser that a few moments after her return she appeared changed into the new evening dress Hartnell had supplied her that morning – a dull dress of white tulle embroidered with sequin butterflies and a rainbow tulle scarf around the waist.

He finished by mentioning: “She had been up till 5.30 the night before (she likes the peace and anonymity of the 400 nightclub) and towards the end of the two-hour sitting, started to wilt and became very tired.”

The bracelet, shortened at some point, is engraved with the ownership mark M beneath a coronet. Many pieces were similarly posthumously engraved before Christie’s sale to enhance their commercial appeal.

It was estimated to fetch £30,000-40,000 and after bidding on the phones, and the internet, it was bought by a private buyer. Head of the department Frances Noble at Dix Noonan Webb, said: “We are absolutely delighted with the price. It not only reflects the strength of the current auction market but also the overriding importance of provenance.”

Sold at £20,000 against an estimate of £4000-6000 was an Art Deco aquamarine cocktail ring by Cartier. Made c.1940, it was accompanied by the original hand-drawn design options, and was sold by the family who had originally commissioned the ring.

Sapphire - 'a titan of the gemstone world'

After nearly a decade, jewellery specialist Joanna Hardy has completed her trilogy of gemstone books. The latest tome is *Sapphire: A Celebration of Colour which will be published at the end of the month. It follows volumes on emeralds (2013) and rubies (2017)

Hardy, who is also a regular on Antiques Roadshow, says: "What a journey it has been... It's incredible to think I have been to Mozambique, Madagascar, Zambia, Sri Lanka, Myanmar, Cambodia, Thailand, Colombia to research my books. Covid put a stop to Montana and Australia but at least I got to visit the other countries.

"I will never forget the journeys and stories. Each book takes about two-three years which includes the travel so together they had been nearly 10 years in the making."

She added: "Sapphire is an unassuming gem. It has been overshadowed by diamonds, rubies and emeralds for decades, but ignore it at your peril, for sapphire is a titan of the gemstone world."

It has long been a stone thought to possess supernatural properties.

In ancient Greece and Rome, kings and queens believed that the gem protected them from harm while during the Middle Ages, the clergy wore blue sapphires to symbolise heaven. More recently, they have been associated with royalty.

Graded using the traditional criteria of the four Cs (namely colour, cut, clarity and carat weight) sapphires are also evaluated on the basis of geographic origin. Good quality sapphires are found in Burma, Sri Lanka, and Madagascar but it is the vivid cornflower blue or royal blue stones with a velvety texture from the Kashmir mines that command the greatest premium in the market. Deposits of sapphires were first discovered and mined in the Kashmir region of India in the 1880s, following a landslide in a remote valley. The mine was worked only sporadically into the 1930s so the pool isn't getting bigger. Laboratory certification is typically essential to prove origin and rarity is part of their fabled attraction. It was a 27.68ct Kashmir stone that sold at Sotheby's Hong Kong in 2015 for $6,745,688, the record price per carat for a sapphire.

Hardy's gemstone trilogy was sponsored by Gemfields, owner of the Fabergé brand and the world's biggest coloured gems producer.

Sapphire: A Celebration of Colour* launches on September 30, alongside new editions of Ruby and Emerald, which are available to order from Thames Hudson.

This Kashmir sapphire ring, above, with a central stone of 11.9ct in a rose cut diamond surround, took £141,000 from an online buyer at Fellows (23/15% buyer's premium) in Birmingham on July 29.

It had an estimate of £100,000-150,000 and came with gemmological reports verifying its origin.

The August 26 Jewellery, Silver and Watches sale at Cheffins (24.5% buyer's premium) in Cambridge included this Art Deco sapphire and diamond ring set (above) with a central cushion shaped bright purplish blue sapphire of 2.70ct, surrounded by a border of 24 brilliant cut diamonds. It sold for £9500 against an estimate of £800-1200 to a UK trade buyer.

This late 19th century ring, right, set with an oval-shaped sapphire weighing approximately 6.20ct was sold by Dix Noonan Webb (24% buyer's premium) on September 14 accompanied by a report stating that the sapphire is of Burmese origin. Set in gold with a rose cut diamond to each claw, it was estimated at £5000-6000 and sold at £14,000.

Kashmir stone in original setting

Relatively few Kashmir sapphires retain their original settings. Most have been remounted as conventional rings. This rare survivor, with a gemmological report stating that the sapphire of 2.81ct is of Kashmir origin, with no indications of heat treatment, came for sale at Elmwood's (25% buyer's premium) in Notting Hill, London on August 5.

In a late Victorian sweetheart ring setting with three diamonds to a coronet and a red enamelled heart, it found admirers in the UK, Europe and the US before selling to a lady in Europe at £22,000.

‘America’s finest gemstones’

Sapphire mining at the Yogo Gulch in Montana began in 1895 after a cigar box of pale blue gems picked from a creek by a local rancher found its way to Tiffany’s in New York, where an appraiser pronounced them “the finest precious gemstones ever found in the United States”.

Stones found on American soil – tourmalines from the state of Maine, North Carolina moonstones, Mississippi freshwater pearls and sapphires from Montana – were all favourites of Louis Comfort Tiffany (1848-1933).

This moonstone, sapphire and enamel pendant necklace dates from c.1905. At the California Jewels sale at Bonhams Los Angeles (27.5/25% buyer’s premium) on September 13, it was estimated at $3000-5000, it took a much healthier $28,000 (£21,500).

Left: a fine Victorian sapphire and diamond brooch sold for £13,500 at Dawsons (23% buyer’s premium) in Maidenhead on July 22.

This Victorian sapphire and diamond brooch pendant is centred with a cushion-shaped natural sapphire weighing 12.33cts mined in Sri Lanka. Estimated at £10,000-15,000, it sold for £22,000 at Woolley & Wallis (25% buyer’s premium) on July 15.

Curzon and Campbell families etched in stone

The sale at Wotton Auction Rooms (21.6% buyer’s premium) in Wotton-Under-Edge on August 2 included this set of three yellow metal fobs set with carnelian intaglios. According to a slip cover to the morocco leather presentation case the subjects are Viscountess Curzon, Lord Frederick Campbell and Lady Frederick Campbell.

Scottish nobleman and politician Lord Frederick Campbell (1729-1816) was the second husband of Mary Shirley, Countess Ferrers (c.1730-1807), the youngest daughter of Amos Meredith and Joanna Cholmondeley. Her sister Anna-Margaretta became Viscountess Curzon when Tory politician Assheton Curzon, 1st Viscount Curzon took her as his third wife.

These fine examples of glyptic art from around the turn of the 19th century were perhaps made as a keepsake for one of the three subjects or a close family member. Each was initialised ‘WB’ for an unidentified gem cutter whose initials appear on a number of pieces from this period. Guided at £400-600, the trio sold at £7100.

Above: a set of three carnelian intaglios – £7100 at Wotton Auction Rooms.

Rare reward poster for never recovered ‘Irish Crown Jewels’

The so-called Irish Crown Jewels or State Jewels of Ireland, were created in 1831 for the Sovereign and Grand Master of the Order of St Patrick. The order was established as an Irish equivalent of the English order of the Garter and the Scottish Order of the Thistle.

Delivered to Dublin ‘on the command of His Majesty William IV’ by Rundell & Bridge the regalia contained 394 precious stones of the ‘first water’ taken from the jewels owned by Queen Charlotte and the Order of the Bath star of George III.

The jewels were last worn on March 15, 1907 at a function to mark St Patrick’s Day and last seen in the safe at Dublin Castle on June 11. However, along with the collars of five knights of the order, they were discovered missing on July 6, 1907 and have never been recovered.

All types of rumours and theories surround the disappearance. Reward posters such as this one, offered by Fonsie Mealy (20/25% buyer’s premium) as part of the Howth Castle contents sale on September 8, were printed at the time by the Dublin Metropolitan Police. The pictures of the missing jewels, valued in 1907 at £34,500, are the closest one is ever likely to get to the real thing. As a rare survivor, it took £4600 (£3900).

Sterlé's rare birds soar in Sussex and Dublin

Combining technical mastery with recurring motifs derived from nature, Pierre Sterlé's (1905-1978) style is instantly recognisable. This diamond and platinum brooch, offered by Bellmans (22% buyer's premium) in West Sussex on September 9 probably dates from the 1950s when, working from premises at 43 Avenue de L'Opéra, close to the Place Vendôme, he reached his apogee. Collaborating with fashion designer Jacques Fath, he positioned himself as a couturier of jewellery.

Brooches on avian themes of feathers or wings were a favourite. Conceived in the 40s and 50s in the wake of the Second World War, they symbolised the liberation of France from its oppression by German forces.

The best Sterlé pieces, unconventional in construction and daring in design, give the illusion of movement.

This rare brooch formed as a stylised bird of paradise with yellow coloured diamonds forming eyes and a gold beak is signed Sterlé Paris to the mounts, numbered A5596 and bears French incuse punch marks.

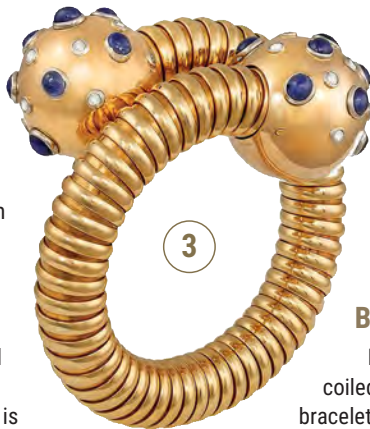

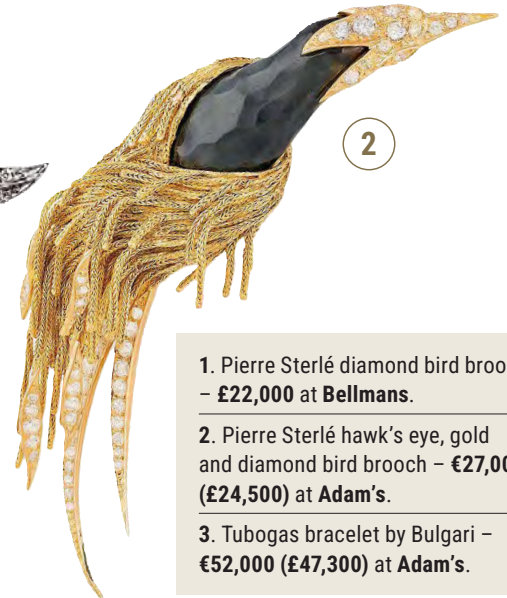

It found plenty of admirers at its £2000-4000 estimate and ultimately sold at £17,000.

Knitted gold

It was following a visit to the Egyptian Museum in Cairo in the early 1950s and his study of ancient Egyptian goldwork that Sterlé came up with the 'angel wire' or 'knitted gold' technique of twisting and braiding gold wire. The delicate results can be seen to full in the tail feathers of a bird brooch c.1955 offered by Adam's (25% buyer's premium) in Dublin on September 14. It was part of the private collection of 'a noble Italian lady' that included pieces from the 1940s and 50s by the great French and Italian ateliers that had been worn by the vendor's mother.

This brooch was modelled with a hawk's eye (blue tiger's eye) body with the articulated gold tassels highlighted with brilliant-cut diamonds, some of them of a yellow hue. It is signed Sterlé Paris and marked with the number 7.558. It went comfortably over its guide of €12,000-18,000 to bring €27,000 (£24,500).

It was in 1955 that Sterlé, a poor businessman for a man from a banking family, began to have his first financial difficulties. The launch of two perfumes was a financial disaster as was the later opening of a boutique. In 1976 he was required to liquidate the company, with all stock being purchased by Chaumet.

Bulgari bracelet

From the same collection was a retro coiled gold, sapphire and diamond Tubogas bracelet by Bulgari from the 1940s that had an estimate of €10,000-15,000 but was competed to €52,000. The Tubogas shape, formed by wrapping long bands of gold around a wood or copper core debuted in the 1940s, and has since become a signature of the

1. Pierre Sterlé diamond bird brooch – £22,000 at Bellmans.

2. Pierre Sterlé hawk's eye, gold and diamond bird brooch – €27,000 (£24,500) at Adam's.

3. Tubogas bracelet by Bulgari – €52,000 (£47,300) at Adam's.

brand. The origin of its name derives from a clever take on the Italian tubo gas, literally translating as 'gas tube'. This particular piece is an early variation of the Serpenti Tubogas bracelet which emerged in the 1950s. It is accompanied by a certificate of authenticity from Amanda Triossi, former curator of the Bulgari Heritage Collection, stating that this bracelet was manufactured for and retailed by Bulgari and dates from the 1940s.

It's a dog's life for Cartier collectors

By the mid-20th century several design houses were taking a more playful approach to zoomorphic jewellery. Cartier designs, ranging across the animal kingdom from insects to amphibians, were created specifically for daytime wearing, raising a smile with the use of vibrant colours and cartoon-like forms. There are as popular today as they were then.

This whimsical Cartier gold, enamel and ruby dachshund brooch, assuming a playful semi-abstract form, dates from around 1965. The legs are articulated so as to move left and right with the motion of the wearer. The perfect adornment for a sausage dog owner, it took a punchy £16,000 (estimate £2000-3000) at the Bonhams Knightsbridge Jewels sale on September 8.

Dates to remember for mourning jewellery

Fellows' Fine Jewellery sale in Birmingham's Jewellery Quarter on September 30 includes an extraordinary collection of 63 mourning rings (above). Assembled by one Elizabeth Snaith in the Victorian period, the rings relate to family, friends and business partners, many of them members of the Anglican-Orthodox community and the wider Oxford movement.

Individuals include the Hackney clergymen Henry Handley Norris (1771-1850) and John Watson (1767-1869) and the merchant Joshua Watson (1771-1855), who together were at the centre of the Hackney Phalanx in the early 19th century.

The Georgian and William IV gold and enamel mourning rings will be sold as a single lot with a guide of £15,000-20,000.

A single-owner collector of early rings that comes for sale at Lawrences of Crewkerne on October 14 includes many mourning and memento mori pieces. A selection of half a dozen rings appears below:

1. A gold memento mori ring depicting a skull, with inscription Behold Thy Ende c.1620, estimate £4000-6000.
2. A Continental silver gilt ring with rose foliate decoration c.1550, estimate £500-700.
3. A George III gold and enamel mourning ring depicting an urn under a tree, with inscription for Mary Appleford dated 1783, £300-400.
4. A George III gold and enamel mourning ring with plaited hair centre inscribed Eliz Seaman OB 22 July 1799 AE 68, estimate £250-300.
5. A George III amethyst and enamel mourning ring inscribed E: Ldy Arundell OB 1751, estimate £250-300.
6. A gold, enamel, diamond and emerald memento mori ring with a hinged mask c.1762, estimate £1500-2000.

This Victorian period 15ct gold, diamond and enamel bar brooch is included in Hogben Auction Galleries' timed online sale in Hythe ending on September 30.

The opening bid is £150.

Grima and Roux cook up a unique recipe

His daring organic sculptural designs re-energised the British jewellery scene in post-war Britain, now Andrew Grima's (1921-2007) creations are leading the revival of '60s and '70s designer jewellery on the secondary market.

Dawsons is to sell a collection of Grima jewellery as part of its Jewellery, Silver & Watches sale on September 23. The six pieces were the property of the Michelin starred chef Michel Roux (1941-2020) and have been consigned by his family. Michel Roux and Andrew Grima (1921-2007) enjoyed a long friendship dating back to the 1970s and had a mutual appreciation of each other's work.

One of the lots is a specially commissioned carved jade pendant set with a Mexican opal in an 18ct gold frame with diamonds accents (left). The piece is being sold with the original hand-drawn design that is signed and dated 1987 with a guide of £6000-8000.

Also pictured here is a tourmaline and diamond ring (left) of typical Modernist Grima design expected to bring £1000-2000. Michel Roux purchased the ring for his wife who wore it many times.

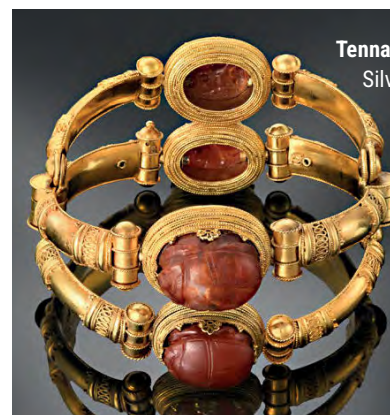

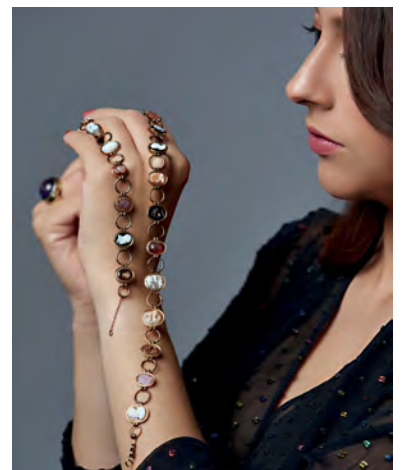

Wellington history

The sale at Woolley & Wallis in Salisbury on November 17 includes this Grand Tour era necklace containing 21 cameos and intaglios.

Originally from the collection of Arthur Wellesley, 2nd Duke of Wellington (1807-84), it has a guide of £10,000-15,000.

It is displayed here by jewellery department head Marielle Whiting, who, currently on maternity leave, popped into the saleroom for a photoshoot.

woolleyandwallis.com

Tennants' Fine Jewellery, Watches & Silver sale in Leyburn on November 13 includes this archaeological revival scarab bangle. Three curved yellow gold bands within a wire and beadwork frame are each decorated with a swivel mounted oval cornelian scarab. Estimate £4000-6000.

tennants.co.uk

A more modest example of the Victorian archaeological revival comes for sale at Sworders' Live Online sale of Jewellery on September 29. This Etruscan style shield form brooch, c.1870 testing as 9ct gold, is guided at £180-250.

GUNMAKER

Trigger pulled for first sale

A painted wooden shop sign that hung for many years from a store in Norwich sold at Norfolk's newest auction house.

Black and white photographs of the gunsmiths Darlow & Company, once located at number 8 Orford Hill in the Mancroft area of the city, show the 8ft 10in (2.7m) sign still in situ. It was positioned above a portico and below the imposing carved stone stag that still sits on top of the Grade II-listed Georgian building.

The early 20th century sign with 17½in (44cm) high capital letters reading simply Gunmaker came for sale as part of the inaugural auction held by The Rostrum (20% buyer's premium) over two days in Thorpe Market, Roughton, on August 19-20. As a small example of local history and a large decorative object it brought £850.

The sale included a series of pieces of oak occasional furniture by Jack Grimble of Cromer

Although not so well known, Grimble is often compared to Robert 'Mouseman' Thompson and his Yorkshire followers. He worked on the Sandringham estate and produced commissions for the royal family but also sold pieces of oak occasional furniture from his shop in Cromer.

Like Thompson, his Arts & Crafts style followed a careful study of medieval English furniture techniques, construction and materials. Unlike Thompson, his pieces are still very affordable.

Five pieces by Grimble included two oak blanket boxes carved with portrait roundels sold at £140 each (estimate £80-120) and a spinning chair at £45 (estimate £50-80).

Although new to the Norfolk auction scene, the firm brings together an experienced team and consultants familiar with the East Anglia market.

Also at the August sale was a Herend porcelain coffee set in the Cornucopia Tupini pattern, c.1890, sold for £1200 via thesaleroom.com.

This particular pattern with its glittering enamel colours and Perisan motifs was inspired by Arabian ceramics and appealed to customers in the Middle East. Famously the Shah of Persia himself ordered a set from the Hungarian factory.

Roland Arkell

Serving on land and air

Serving in the Glider Pilot Regiment was a tough task during the Second World War. Along with the hazardous landing itself they were then expected to fight alongside the infantry afterwards until they could be relieved.

British airborne operations included the ill-fated Market Garden at Arnhem in 1944, but earlier actions that year supporting the Normandy landings were far more effective.

Operation Mallard on D-Day involved gliders flying in infantry of the 6th Airlanding Brigade and divisional troops to reinforce the 6th Airborne Division on the left flank of the invasion beaches. It proved successful, with 246 of the 256 gliders landing safely.

A medal group awarded to one of the glider pilots who took part in Mallard, Sgt Allan Barr Lindsay, came up for auction at Gloucestershire saleroom Taylor & Fletcher (18% buyer's premium) on August 14.

Estimated at £100-200, it was offered as a father and son group also including his father's First World War medals (he was twice wounded in 1918 serving with the Royal Highlanders in France).

Lindsay Jr's War Medal 1939-45 featured an oak leaves clasp on the ribbon bar, denoting a Mentioned In Despatches - presumably awarded for his part as one of the 74 glider pilots of E Squadron (2nd Wing) during Mallard, said the saleroom.

Having survived the landing, his luck ran out by September when he was captured and kept in Stalag 4b, Muhlberg (Elbe) until the end of the war it seems.

Tom Derbyshire

Panel used as tomb cover

Estimated at £800-1200, this large Ottoman metal thread and silk hanging with a dedication to Sultan Ahmed III (1673-1736) sold to an online buyer for £13,000 at Dreweatts (25% buyer's premium) in Newbury on August 12.

Pieces such as this were made as tomb covers. Within an embroidered pointed archway and acanthus columns are two quranic inscriptions and a cartouche reading Oh Prophet of God! our Lord Sultan Ahmad seeks intercessions. This is the Prophet's mihrab.

It may be that this 7ft 9in x 6ft 8in (2.35 x 2.03m) panel had once decorated the interior of the shrine of the Prophet in Medina and would have been replaced when a new Ottoman sultan ascended to the throne.

Ahmed III succeeded to the throne in 1703 on the abdication of his brother and he himself was

Although the winning bid was well above printed expectations, this hanging had been bought by the owner at Bonhams in October 2007 when the price (including buyer's premium) was a much more substantial £60,000.

Two other textile panels with similar architectural details and inscriptions, which decorated the tomb of the prophet Ibrahim in Mecca, were sold at Sotheby's in 2006 and Christie's in 2005.

Belleek beckons bidders from all over the world

A collection of Belleek porcelain totalled £7600 at Cuttlestones (20% buyer's premium) on July 21, writes Roland Arkell.

Split across 20 lots in Penkridge, Staffordshire, more than 60 pieces consigned by a local vendor encouraged bidders to register from Ireland, Australia, New Zealand and Austria, with particular interest from collectors in the US.

A number of rarities were offered carrying the early black stamp – dating them to the first period of factory production in Co Fermanagh (1863-91).

These included a curious 8in (20cm) tobacco jar modelled as a jovial brewer who stands, hands on hips, on a rockwork base before two barrels surmounted by frothing mugs of ale.

This is one of a handful of similar figures produced in small numbers in the late 19th century that appears in the factory records as Tobacco Brewer. Only a handful have appeared for sale in the past 20 years; this one bringing £950.

The most eagerly contested lot was a mixed group of pieces from varying eras including a First Period part tea set (tray, teapot and cream jug) decorated with sprays of lily of the valley.

Although a popular and recurring Belleek motif, this particular pattern is seemingly not one of the many recorded by Marion Langham in the factory history Belleek Irish Porcelain An Illustrated Guide to over 2000 pieces (1993). This was the attraction of a lot sold for £2300.

A pair of 10in (25cm) twin-handled vases with hand-painted rose blooms, very similar to a pair pictured in that same book, sold for £950, while a curious photographic plaque in an ebonised frame brought £400.

Desirable davenport discovered

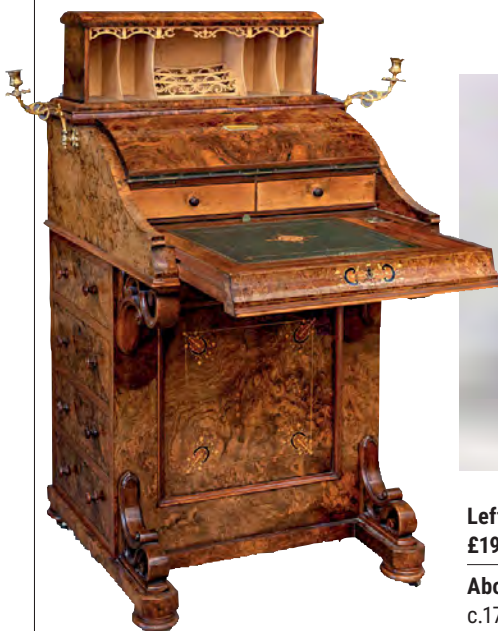

Few furniture forms suffered a bigger crash in prices than the davenport. From being virtually guaranteed four-figure sellers, today they need to be high quality and with decorative touches if they are to get away at more than a few hundred pounds.

Meeting those criteria at Hartleys' (17.5% buyer's premium) Ilkley sale on June 16 was a Victorian burr walnut and marquetry piano-top example. Standing 3ft (90cm) tall and featuring the desirable sprung mechanism revealing a fret cut and divided stationery compartment, it bore a presentation plaque to the hinged lid dated 1883.

The £900-1400 estimate was more than justified when the davenport went to a private bidder at £1900.

A c.1921 pair of 7in (18.5cm) tall vases painted by Harry Stinton with his trademark cattle in misty mountain landscapes went to a collector comfortably above estimate at £850, while a 3½in (9cm) Worcester sparrow-beak jug painted in enamels with chinoiserie figures, c.1755, overcame some damage (a piece riveted to the rim) to sell to the trade at £420.

Quality woodworks

Prices for good-quality writing desks continue to recover – as was evident when this George II example, above, more than tripled top hopes at Roseberys (25% buyer's premium).

Pitched at £2000-3000 at the July 21 sale in West Norwood, the 4ft wide x 3ft deep (1.22m x 91cm) walnut partners' desk sold over the phone at £9500.

Also eclipsing the estimate was a 17in (44cm) tall oak carving of Salome bearing the head of John the Baptist. Carved in 16th century Netherlandish style, it was, in fact no earlier than the first half of the 20th century.

Nevertheless, it sold on quality to a Belgian bidder at £3200 against a £600-800 estimate.

Croft-Murray's eye for decoration among the 'Monuments Men'

by Alex Capon

Works from the collection of Edward Croft-Murray (1907-80), former keeper of prints and drawings at the British Museum, provided a fillip to the latest Woolley & Wallis (25% buyer's premium) picture sale.

The paintings, watercolours and drawings offered on August 11-12 followed other works from the collection sold in Salisbury this year including a Nicobar standing male figure, that made £34,000 in June (see ATG No 2499).

Keenly pitched, all but one of the 109 picture lots sold for a £181,960 total, exceeding the combined top estimate of £83,020.

'Teddy' Croft-Murray was a well-known curator, antiquarian and acknowledged expert of early European art and music. He had served among the 'Monuments Men' during the Second World War and published many articles and reference books during his long career, including the catalogue Venetian drawings at Windsor Castle which he compiled with Anthony Blunt.

He died unexpectedly while on the tube on route to a meeting at the British Museum. Survived by his second wife Jill for over 40 years, she kept the collection intact at the couple's home in Richmond, London, until her death last year precipitated the works appearing at auction.

The collection had been formed through purchases made at auction, including at Sotheby's and Christie's, purchases from London dealers and also through gifts that the Croft-Murrays had received.

The top price came for a painting Edward Croft-Murray had bought from Colnaghi in 1959. Dido and Aeneas, a 2ft x 17½in (61 x 45cm) oil on canvas by Sir James Thornhill (c.1675-1734), was thought to be a sketch for a painted staircase at Canons, Middlesex – the stately home of James Brydges, 1st Duke of Chandos which was designed by James Gibbs.

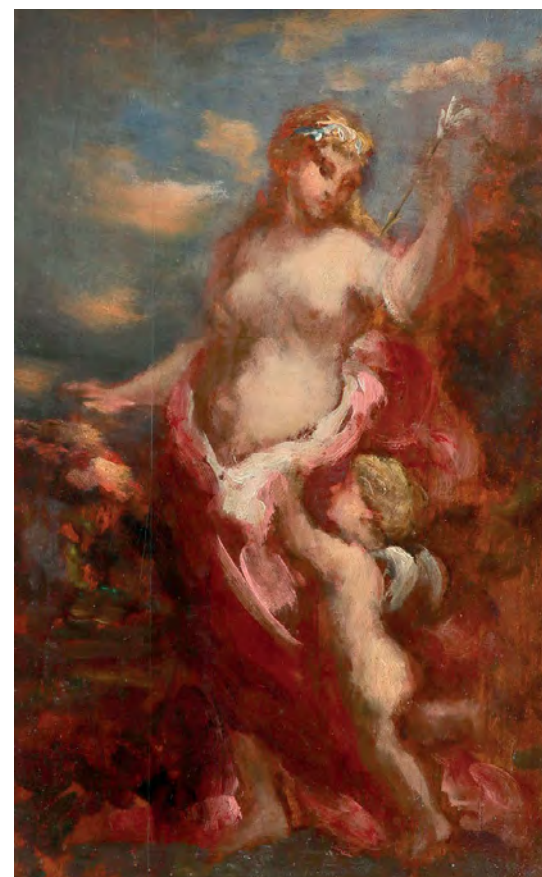

Croft-Murray was a leading authority on decorative Baroque painting. His book Decorative Painting in England 1537-1837 remains a key work on the subject. As well as featuring in the first volume of that tome, the Thornhill had also featured in a Country Life article he wrote in 1970 and was exhibited over the years at Marble Hill House in Twickenham, the National Portrait Gallery and Tate Britain. Its decent condition added to its favourable provenance.

Works by Thornhill do not appear very often at auction, especially those linked to a particular commission. However, a design for the saloon ceiling at Blenheim Palace featuring The Apotheosis of Hercules did emerge at Christie's in June 2005 selling at a record £38,000.

This example was thus an attractive proposition against an estimate of £4000-6000. After being pursued by a number of parties, it was knocked down at £21,000 – the third-highest price for the artist at auction (source: Artprice by Artmarket) and demonstrating how a market still exists for Old Masters with primarily academic appeal.

Grimsthorpe purchase

A work in a similar vein, a preliminary study for the ceiling decoration at Grimsthorpe Castle by Francesco Sleter (1685-1775), also attracted decent interest. The Triumph of Cybele was a smaller 13in x 2ft (33 x 60cm) oil on canvas which the Italian artist had created as a design for the east staircase at the Lincolnshire estate (Sleter also painted the dining room ceiling while Thornhill decorated the other staircase).

One of only two preparatory sketches known by the artist – the other is a sketch for Grimsthorpe dining room's ceiling now in the Tate Britain collection – it dated from the 1720s when famed architect Sir John Vanbrugh redesigned part of the castle at the request of Robert Bertie, 16th Baron Willoughby de Eresby.

Sleter was first recorded in England in 1719 and the Grimsthorpe paintings are believed to be among his earliest works executed in this country. Today his pictures rarely appear at auction and no entries can be found in online databases.

Estimated at £2000-3000, this example was knocked down at £5500 and was bought on behalf of Grimsthorpe Castle itself.

Very few preliminary sketches survive from this period and only two by Sleter are recorded, so it's a remarkable painting

Picture specialist at Woolley & Wallis Ed Beer said: "I'm delighted that the sketch is returning to its rightful place; it provides a wonderful opportunity for the artist's initial ideas to be compared to the finished artwork. Very few preliminary sketches survive from this period and only two by Sleter are recorded, so it's a remarkable painting."

A Ricci gift

Among the drawings from the Croft-Murray collection bringing demand was a capriccio with figures among Roman ruins by Marco Ricci (1676-1730). The 21 x 15in (53 x 37cm) pen and brown ink sketch with brown wash had an early provenance to the artist Paul Sandby (1731-1809) but more recently was owned by Iolo Williams, the museums correspondent of The Times from 1936. Williams and Croft-Murray were friends and one of his descendants had given the drawing to Croft-Murray as a gift.

Ricci drawings have a good following at auction and the £2500-3500 estimate was not deemed excessive, duly selling on the day at £8000 – seemingly the highest price for a drawing by the artist ever sold in the English regions (source: Artprice by Artmarket).

The Croft-Murray lots provided a decent chunk of Woolley & Wallis' overall £1.18m hammer total with 83% of the 861 lots sold.

The comparatively large sale was in part due to Covid delays that allowed time for extra consignments.

Right: The Triumph of Cybele by Francesco Sleter – £5500.

Beer said: "We were confident prior to the sale that holding it in August would make no difference to our results. In 2020, due to the first lockdown, we had a Modern British & 20th Century sale in August, which was hugely successful, selling over 96%. We were strongly of the opinion that the important thing was to hold the sale at a time when our clients could come and view in person. The three days of viewing were extremely busy and we believe the results justified delaying the sale."

Carpeaux in oils

A number of separately consigned Old Masters drew the highest bids of the day.

L'amour désarmé by French artist Jean-Baptiste Carpeaux (1827-1875) came to auction from a "very good" UK private collection.

Primarily a sculptor, paintings by the artist appear much less frequently and, when they do, tend to command much less money.

The 18¼ x 11¼in (46 x 29cm) oil on panel here relates to a well-known bronze showing Cupid being disarmed by Psyche. Eugénie Fiocre, the principal ballerina at the Paris Opéra from 1864-75 and friend of the sculptor was the model for Psyche. Although a plaster model was exhibited at the Paris Salon in 1870, Carpeaux never executed the intended life size marble version. Instead, a series of bronzes were cast after his death.

The existence of this oil, which may have been executed while Carpeaux was formulating ideas for the sculpture, was known although a 1999 exhibition catalogue which listed its whereabouts as untraced.

Again an academically interesting work, the picture was helped by its market freshness and attractive £4000-6000 estimate in particular.

At the sale, two phone bidders competed keenly before it was knocked down at £35,000. The buyer was a private collector and the price looked relatively strong compared to most other paintings by Carpeaux sold at auction in the last 10 years.

Making a slightly higher sum and the top price of the sale overall was The Laughing Girl, a work catalogued as a 'fine example of Sir Joshua Reynolds' 'fancy pictures' which has not been seen since 1937'. Pictured in ATG No 2498, it had been hanging for decades on the walls of a family home with the vendors always believing it to be a copy.

"The catalogue raisonné lists four versions by Reynolds," said Beer.

"Of those, one is listed as being at Petworth, two in private collections and ours is untraced. There are also numerous copies, testament to its popularity, but there was complete consensus that this was the missing autograph version."

Estimated at £15,000-20,000, it drew interest on the phone from "across the board" before it was sold at £37,000 to an American private buyer who bid online. ■

Lots hit the heights on sale day

Pioneering Caxton work leads the way for an impressive diverse selection

by Ian McKay

Three very different lots brought six-figure bids at Christie's (25/20/14.5% buyer's premium) on July 14 – and they were not the only ones to reach such impressive heights.

The day's most expensive lot, at £320,000, was a volume whose contents not only included the first works of classical antiquity to be printed in England, but did so in the English language.

Produced by William Caxton in 1481, the principal works it contained were Cicero's De senectute, or Of Old Age, as translated by Stephen Scrope and revised by William Worcester, and De amicitia, or Of Friendship, translated by John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester. The volume also included just seven leaves from a copy of one of Caxton's rarer imprints, his own translation of a work by Geoffroy de la Tour as The Knight of the Tower.

Also included in the volume was Tiptoft's translation of a 14th century work by Bonaccursius de Montemagno as Of Nobility. The latter was written as guide for the author's noble daughters in matters concerning their moral and social conduct.

Caxton had set up his printing press in the precincts of Westminster Abbey, c.1475, where his output was characterised by works in English, mostly literary, that were aimed at the upper echelons of society – wealthy merchants (like himself), gentry, nobility and royalty.

Also in this six-figure price category were an 1859 first of Darwin's On the Origin of Species that almost doubled expectations to sell at £260,000 and a second-issue copy of the 1664, third folio issue of Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories and Tragedies that reached £190,000.

Again, this was a much higher bid than predicted, and in 2000 this very copy of the plays had made just £24,000 in the same rooms.

A 15th century heraldic manuscript sold for £110,000, as did a 1637 first of Descartes' Discours de la méthode... in a contemporary Dutch binding of vellum over thin pasteboard with yapp edges, and featuring extensive marginalia in two different but contemporary hands.

The Descartes work came from the extensive literary collections of David Wheeler, whose wife,

1. A spread from the volume containing William Caxton's 1481, first English language editions of the works of Cicero and others which topped the Christie's sale at £320,000.

2. In a well-preserved contemporary English embroidered binding worked in silver wire over maroon velvet and studded with tiny sequins, and still retaining its original patterned ribbon marker, a little 1634, London edition of The Whole Book of Psalmes made a much higher than expected £22,000.

3. Anonymous, but thought to have been produced in northern France or Flanders in the late 15th century, a handbook guide to the rules of heraldry containing some 800 armorials sold at £110,000.

4. A spread from the 1637 first of Descartes' Discours de la méthode... that realised £110,000.

5. In the year that marks the 700th anniversary of Dante's death, Christie's offered a leaf from a mid-14th century vellum manuscript of La Divina Commedia. This recently rediscovered fragment was once part of a manuscript belonging to the Florentine 'Cento' group, renowned for their uniformity of format, layout, decoration and script. It sold for a considerably higher than expected £70,000.

Margita, had inherited (along with her brother) responsibility for Heveningham Hall in Suffolk, a great house that had been in the Vanneck family from the late 1770s.

In 1969 the Wheelers offered the house, complete with principal contents, to English Heritage, but this Descartes work was one of the items that they had held back at the time.

Sold at £85,000 apiece, and again well in excess of estimate, were works by Darwin once more and Einstein.

The former was a fine example, uncut in the original cloth, of the 1839 first edition of the four-volume Narrative of the Surveying Voyages of His Majesty's Ships, Adventure and Beagle edited by expedition leader Robert Fitzroy but including as volume III the Journal and Remarks that are Darwin's first published work.

The Einstein lot was a single page featuring an autograph draft (in German) of notes for a scientific paper on Unified Field Theory.

A very different lot was a poem in Jane Austen's hand, one written in 1811 on the back of a now rather stained frontispiece leaf cut from an 1810 Minerva Press novel Love, Mystery and Misery.

Titled 'On the Marriage of Mr Gell of East Bourn to Miss Gill', it was probably inspired by a marriage notice she had found in the Hampshire Telegraph & Sussex Chronicle. It reads:

'Of Eastbourn, Mr. Gell
From being perfectly well
Became dreadfully ill
For the Love of a Miss Gill
So he said with some sighs
I'm the slave of your i.s
Ah! restore if you please
By accepting my e.s.'

At Sotheby's in 1979, this rare example of Austen's ventures into verse sold at £520. At Christie's this year it was bid to a low-estimate £60,000. ■

Above left: the Rivière binding of an 1894, Kelmscott edition of William Morris' The Story of the Glittering Plain... sold for £25,000 by Bonhams.

A present from Isaac Newton

Presentation copies and private press books were a key feature of a Bonhams (27.5/25/20/14.5% buyer's premium) sale of June 24, but it was topped at £38,000 by a 1713, second edition of his Principia Mathematica that Isaac Newton gave to John Wickins.

For some 18 years the two men shared chambers at Trinity College, Cambridge, where Wickins functioned as Newton's amanuensis, copying up his notes, turning their rooms into a laboratory and acting as his unpaid assistant until leaving to take up the living of Stoke Edith in Pembrokeshire.

Bid to £20,000 apiece were presentation copies of two very different works indeed: Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and James Joyce's Ulysses.

The former was a copy of the 1866, first published edition of Alice... that is inscribed on the title for Margaret Evelyn Hardy, the young daughter of Gathorne Gathorne-Hardy, who in the following year was made the home secretary.

Bound in 1981 in full black goatskin by Sally Lou Smith, the copy of Ulysses (a 9th printing of 1927) was one that Joyce had inscribed for HG Wells, an early admirer who had described it in a review as "a book to buy and read and lock up, but... not a book to miss".

A handsomely bound copy of the 1894, Kelmscott edition of William Morris' The Story of the Glittering Plain... was part of the Mary Smith collection of fine bindings, private press and illustrated books.

In an elaborately inlaid binding thought to have been produced for Rivière by Alfred de Sauty, the Kelmscott work sold at £25,000, but several private press lots made five-figure sums. Two from the Ashendene Press are noted here.

One of 20 copies printed on vellum of the 1906 Ashendene edition of Thomas More's... Utopia, bound in plain brown morocco by WH Smith, sold at £22,000, while one of 25 vellum copies of the 1904 edition of A Book of Songs and Poems from the Old Testament and the Apocrypha in plain, brown stained limp vellum, realised £19,000.

Another section of the sale was given over to works by Sylvia Plath and Ted Hughes that came from the collections of their daughter, Frieda Hughes, who was just three years old when her mother took her own life.

Among several copies of Sylvia Plath's The Bell Jar of 1963 were two bearing Ted's ownership signature that sold at £9000 and £9500, but the most expensive lot in this property, at £22,000, comprised 22 copies of Sylvia's first separately printed poem, A Winter Ship.

Stitched in stiff card and marbled paper wrappers, they were part of an issue of around 60 copies produced free of charge in 1960 by Alan Anderson of the Tragar Press in Edinburgh and many were sent out with Sylvia's Christmas cards for that year.

Dating from c.1565, a rare copy of William Copland's... Arte or Crafte of Graftynge and Plantynge of Trees, featured as part of a special books preview section of ATG No 2448, sold at a low-estimate £9000.

Left: a considerable amount of 'Pulp Fiction', in both American and English and American editions, was on offer at Bonhams and illustrated here are just a couple of covers from one lot of around 300 titles dating from the 1940s to the late '50s that sold for £7500.

Previews Our weekly selection from salerooms

The contents of Landwade Hall, near Newmarket, home of the late Simon Gibson go under the hammer at Cheffins in Cambridge on September 29-30.

Gibson's wealth was inherited from his great uncle, shipping magnate and philanthropist Sir William Tatem (1868-1942), known also as the 1st Baron Glanely, who purchased Landwade Hall in 1938 to complement his recent acquisition of nearby Exning House and Lagrange Stables. A number of lots follow an equestrian theme. Shown here is the original watercolour for the famous print Once upon a Time by Charles 'Snaffles' Johnson Payne, (British 1884-967), guided at £6000-9000.

On September 30 Dix Noonan Webb sells the collection of British tokens formed by specialist American dealer Bill McKivior (1940-2021).

Seattle born and bred, he retired from a career in newspapers in 2000 to focus on numismatics. He was well known in the token collecting community on both sides of the Atlantic as a dealer who bought and sold at all levels of the market. Estimated at £500-700 is this rare copper twopence token issued by William Upcott of Devon in 1801. It shows the Eddystone and Spurn Point lighthouses.

A small group of prints by The Rolling Stones' guitarist Ronnie Wood (b.1947) will be offered at Folkestone saleroom Grand Auctions on September 27.

Like other members of the Stones, Wood studied art as a young man – in his case at Ealing College of Art. He carried on painting throughout his music career, producing Expressionist-style portraits, including of fellow band members and close friends, as well as abstract landscapes.

One of the prints shows the late Charlie Watts alongside bass player Darryl Jones. Titled Tight Section, the signed 19½ x 16½in (50 x 41cm) screenprint comes from Wood's 2008 Paint it Black suite made in an edition of 295. This copy is estimated at £400-600.

Six books inscribed by Florence Nightingale (1820-1910) come to auction at Sworders as part of an online sale ending on September 26. They are being sold by descendants of WJP Burton, the principal of a school sited in the Nightingale family home in Derbyshire. Sold as a single lot, they have expectations of £3000-5000.

The textbooks on subjects such as geology, history and botany were given – seemingly second-hand – by Nightingale to the school in her later years. In an 1893 copy of Macmillan's Geology she wrote in pencil Mr Burton, with Florence Nightingale's congratulations on the good he is doing, Christmas, 1897 while in a two-volume printing of Alfred Mahan's The Influence of Sea Power on the French Revolution (1892) she had inscribed Mr. Burton, Lea Board School, with Florence Nightingale's grateful acknowledgements for the good he is doing. The presentation dates range from January 1884 to December 1888.

Burton was the principal of Lea Board School in Holloway, Derbyshire, that was sited in Lea Hurst, the former Nightingale family home built by William Edward Nightingale (1794-1874) on inherited lands in 1825. Florence (who was born in Italy and took the name of her city of birth) had grown up at Lea Hurst – the family invariably spent the summer there and the winter at Embley Park, Hampshire – and she retained a strong connection with the property school, later joining the school board.

Chippenham automobilia specialist Richard Edmunds sells a private collection of RAC and AA badges, mascots and literature on September 24.

The many badges includes this rare 'Stenson Cooke' or frying pan design, c.1910-11, with the highly unusual feature of a detachable brass flag, secured with a padlock and key.

A pennant on top of the badge's circle signified that the owner was a member of the Automobile Association Committee.

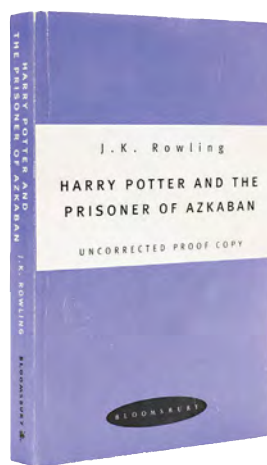

Since these AA badges officially belonged to the membership club, they were supposed to be returned when membership ended.

Estimate £400-600.

An overseas collection of Regency porcelain deemed the finest at auction in living memory is to be offered as The Twilight Collection at Bonhams on September 29.

The 103-lot sale represents the very best products of all the great factories of the late 18th and early 19th century including Copeland and Garrett, Swansea, Derby and the Worcester firms of Chamberlain and Flight, Barr and Barr.

Bonhams head of British ceramics and glass, Fergus Gambon, said: "I have never come across a collection of British porcelain from the Regency era of such quality and variety. This is a once in a generation sale."

This Flight, Barr and Barr Worcester cabinet cup and stand, c.1814-16, is painted by Thomas Baxter with a portrait of George III to one side and figure of Britannia standing at the bow of a ship to the reverse. In order to frame his fine miniature paintings, it is likely that Baxter also designed the 'jewelled' borders.

Estimate £6000-10,000.

A timed online Welsh themed sale held by Rogers Jones of Cardiff until September 26 includes this 9in (22cm) porcelain veilleuse (teapot and warming stand).

Although probably made in England c.1820, it is decorated with Welsh and Irish views including Oystermouth Castle and Mumbles Head and Glenmire Bridge, Cork. The painter may have been Philip Ballard, working at the London workshop of J Bradley & Co, c.1820, who produced similar scenes on Swansea porcelain.

Estimate £150-250.

The London fishing tackle maker Onesimus Ustonson (1736-83) is best known as the inventor of the multiplying reel. He supplied fishing tackle to the naturalist Joseph Banks for the second voyage of James Cook, 1772-75.

This Onesimus Ustonson winch from the pre-1820 period is one of the most well-documented early English brass reels. Owner Graham Turner covers it in extensive detail in his 2009 book Fishing Tackle.

It comes for sale at Angling Auctions of Romsey, Hampshire, on October 2 with a guide of £6000-9000.

'Harrogate' gathers pace in Leyburn

After enforced absence Northern Antiques Fair returns to the calendar at new venue

by Gabriel Berner

"The level of spending was really high which of course is the most important thing for exhibitors."

Fair organiser Ingrid Nilson is talking about The Petworth Park Antiques & Fine Art Fair she ran in June. One of the first vetted events to take place in 2021, it attracted multiple visitors happy to queue in the rain for a chance to peruse quality art and antiques in person once more.

Nilson is now gearing up for another event, The Northern Antiques Fair, which returns after a two-year enforced break from September 30-October 3. "Let's hope that pent up demand is still there," she says.

This year the fair takes place at The Garden Rooms at Tennants auction house in Leyburn, North Yorkshire – some 30 miles up the road from its traditional venue at the Harrogate Convention Centre, currently used as a Nightingale Hospital.

The vetted event, a regular in the fairs calendar since 1951, is the first of its type to be held at Tennants' multi-purpose venue, which underwent a major redevelopment in 2015.

"The move to Tennants seems to have stirred a lot of interest," Nilson says. "The response to advertising and request for tickets is at an all-time high."

Ideally suited for large events, the venue has ample free parking and a café, bar and bistro offering catering throughout the day. Plans are already in motion to make the arrangement permanent with the same dates pencilled for 2022.

'Closer to some customers'

Although a few "south centric" people have queried the move further north, Nilson is confident the relocation will be a success. "While it is further for people in the south, it is much closer for certain customers in the northeast and Cumbria. There are also a lot of fairs in the Harrogate area so being slightly further north gives us an edge," she says.

The fair maintains its modest size with around 35 dealers – mainly BADA and LAPADA members – making their way to Leyburn with an assortment of art, antiques Left: Iznik dish, 9in (23cm) wide, dating to the mid-17th century and decorated in five hand painted stylised tulip flowers – £1400 from Hispanic Antiques.

Right: a c.1870 large Japanese stag antler group of two toads sitting on a lily pad, Asakusa School, priced at £3385 from JA Yarwood Antiques.

Above: Castleton Style, depicting a famous dairy shorthorn bull and signed and dated WA Clark 1925, is priced at £3750 on Blackbrook Gallery's stand.

The response to advertising and request for tickets is at an all-time high and accessories for the home set at varying price points (£100 to over five figure sums).

A handful of debutants join the exhibitor list including JA Yarwood Antiques, The Antiques Bazaar (see this week's 5 Questions) and Julian Eade Antiques, the latter bringing an eclectic range of items for sale including a late 19th century Japanese large stag antler okimono of two toads on a lily pad, ticketed at £3385.

London-based Burlington, specialists in 19th and 20th century British and European oil paintings owned and run by Angela Hardy, also returns after a number of years away. Among the paintings picked out for the fair is The Homestead, a Dutch work by Adrianus Zwart (1903-81), one of the last painters of the Hague School. It is priced at £6750.

Returnees include the Blackbrook Gallery, which brings 19th century naïve animal paintings including one of a famous dairy shorthorn bull bred in Carlisle ticketed at £3750, and Roger de Ville Antiques, specialists in 18th and 19th century English pottery, offering several Yorkshire-made pieces including a Mexborough Pottery chapel money box, c.1820, priced at £875. As ceramic money boxes are usually broken to retrieve the contents, this is a rare survivor.

An Iznik dish dating to the mid-17th century and decorated with five hand painted stylised tulip flowers – the holiest flower in Ottoman culture – is destined for the stand of Hispanic Antiques from Sheffield while a selection of French Impressionist paintings by Achille Laugé (1861-1944), Paul Signac (1863-1935), Albert Guillaume (1873-1942) and Marcel Dyf (1899-1985) are offered from long-time exhibitor Walker Galleries of Harrogate.

Other returnees include Ellis Fine Art, Graham Ruddock Antique Ceramics, Jack Shaw & Co and Solo Antiques. ■

1831 – when Bristol burned

This dramatic scene depicts the burning of a warehouse in Wapping Wharf during the Bristol Riots of 1831.

The three-day riots were triggered by the voting down of the second Reform Bill in the House of Lords and the arrival of the anti-reform judge Charles Wetherell in Bristol on October 29. Much of the city centre was burnt, causing around £300,000 of damage and up to 250 casualties.

Painted by James Baker Pyne (1800-70), the 5 x 3½in (13 x 9cm) oil on canvas forms part of an exhibition at London gallery Guy Peppiatt Fine Art in St James's dedicated to the early 19th century group of artists known as the Bristol School. It is priced at £4500.

Among the 38 works in the show, which runs until October 6, five are by Samuel Jackson (1794-1869) and over a dozen by WJ Müller (1812-45), two of the best-known artists in the group, together with pictures by Francis Danby, James Johnson and Even Rowbotham among others.

The Bristol School artists were drawn to the bustling trading port where the intellectual climate, urban life and striking natural settings inspired their distinct yet largely overlooked contribution to British art. Recognition is growing, however, with the group the focus of a current exhibition at the Musée des Beaux-Arts in Bordeaux.

5 Questions

Jane Sanderson of The Antiques Bazaar is a new exhibitor at The Northern Antiques Fair, which runs from September 30-October 3.

She specialises in Georgian glass, enamels, Ruskin pottery, English silver, Blue John and estate jewellery - especially if they are blue which she describes as a "personal obsession"
▶ theantiquesbazaar.com

1 How did you get your start?

Out of a personal tragedy: I lost my husband and walked away from a demanding job. Had I realised that trading in antiques could be a profession, I would have been in this trade all my working life.

2 Have you noticed any collecting trends in the last 6-12 months?

Collecting Blue John has markedly increased, especially for finer and early pieces.

3 What is one great discovery you've made?

My current great discovery is an Austrian pomander for a child's bedroom in enamel, silver-gilt, with a charming, pierced work grille. Dating to around 1900, this is a delightful piece.

4 One lesson you would pass on to a newcomer in the trade?

The one lesson I would pass on is never trade in damaged goods as they will come back to haunt you. Occasional sympathetic restoration is fine, but always buy items in as near original condition as possible.

5 Real ale or espresso martini?

Preferably both on a riotous day out!

Left: a c.1900 Austrian pomander for a child's bedroom in enamel, silver-gilt with a pierced work grille.

A harvest jug festival

The first dedicated published study on the harvest jug tradition of North Devon and the West Country goes on sale this September.

Written by John Edgeler, curator of the Wincombe Archive Collection Trust in Gloucestershire (home to one of the largest collections of early studio slipwares made by potter Michael Cardew), A Harvest of Jugs contains over 150 coloured illustrations charting 300 years of production, from one of the earliest surviving examples in the 1660s to their influence on 20th century studio pottery design.

Traditional harvest jugs – used to carry ale or cider at harvest time – were crafted from red earthenware and decorated with white slip and a honey-coloured glaze. The decorative designs were created by scratching (called sgraffito) through the layer of slip before the jug dried.

These designs, often to do with harvest time and sometimes featuring poems and drinking rhymes, reflected the rural communities they were crafted in and Edgeler's book examines some stand-out examples including the decoration on a jug in the Fitzwilliam Museum in Cambridge (illustrated on the book's front cover).

"These pots were not made in a vacuum, they reflected contemporary taste," Edgeler tells ATG. As well as valuable social records, he also sees harvest jugs as an important part of the folk art tradition: "What is so special about the untutored decoration of the country potters is that it has that folk art naïve freshness which is so special."

Edgeler plans to follow up the book with a harvest jug 'bible' in due course. A Harvest of Jugs has limited print run of 100 copies and is available to buy for £25.

The Decorative Antiques & Textiles

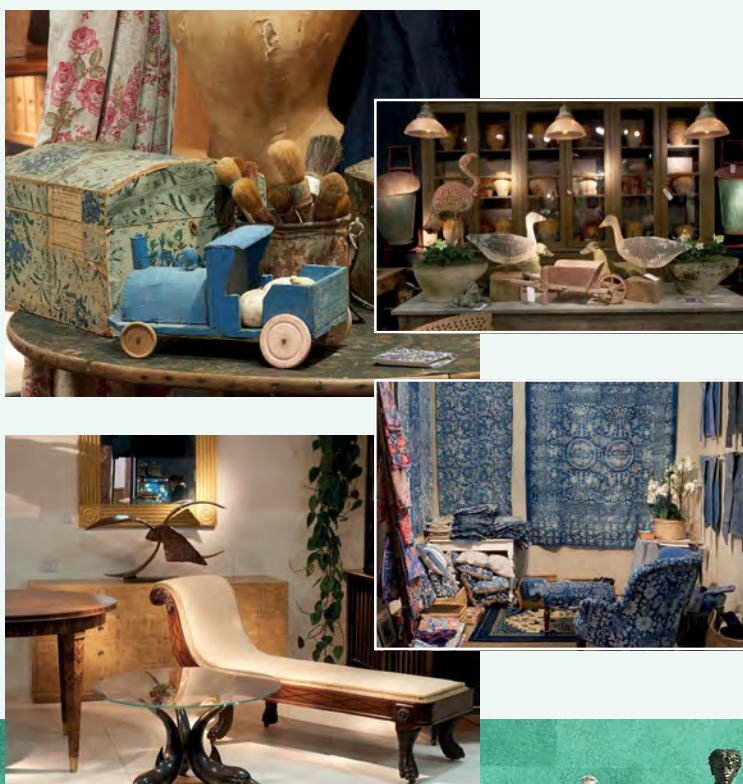

FAIR

28 September to 3 October, 2021
BATTERSEA PARK, LONDON

The Decorative Antiques & Textiles Fair – the leading interiors and arts event for design cognoscenti - returns to Battersea Park for a highly anticipated bumper edition with over 150 exhibitors across two floors, from Tuesday 28 September to Sunday 3 October 2021.

Renowned amongst top decorators the world over as the UK's most exciting and beautiful antiques fair, full of unexpected treasures, the event features specialist dealers offering a wide variety of objects, furniture, art and accessories dating from the 17th century to the 1970s. There is literally something for every taste and budget, and to suit all styles of decoration. Stands are presented with flair, providing ideas and inspiration. Decorators regularly seen shopping include Rita König, Flora Soames, Olga and Alex Polizzi, Robert Kime, Veere Grenney, Nicky Haslam and major international players such as Rose Tarlow and Michael Smith from the USA.

The organisers are planning a friendly and safe event with pre-booked tickets: £20 p/p on the opening day, Tuesday 28 September, and £10 p/p each day thereafter with a choice of two timed entries per day. You can stay as long as required, and your ticket also allows re-entry to the Fair, but numbers inside the venue will be monitored. Online booking is now open; follow link from www.decorativefair.com. Well-behaved dogs on leads are welcome.

The faces of Walter Sickert

Left: titled Mrs Barrett (1906), this 20 x 16in (51 x 40cm) oil on canvas is priced at £125,000 in Piano Nobile's new exhibition on the figurative works of Walter Sickert. The sitter appears in several portraits and may have been the artist's charwoman.

Nearly 80 years after Walter Sickert's (1860-1942) death and ahead of a major retrospective planned at Tate Britain in 2022, London gallery Piano Nobile is bringing together over 40 of the artist's figure paintings for an autumn show.

Covering the full range of Sickert's subject-matter across his career, from portraits and nudes to crowd scenes and images of found photography, Sickert: The Theatre of Life comprises both loans and works for sale, including a number not exhibited since his lifetime.

"Whether clothed or unclothed, drawn from life or painted from photographs, sometimes seedy, sometimes forbidding, Sickert's raw human sitters were the defining subject of his career," the gallery says in its show release.

Among the highlights are The Club Dance, a newly discovered work on display for the first time, and The Plaza Tiller Girls, a series of four paintings depicting the Jazz Age dance troupe who performed at the Plaza cinema in Piccadilly.

The exhibition opens at Piano Nobile's gallery in Portland Road on September 24 and runs until December 17 with a preview evening on September 23. A fully illustrated catalogue accompanies the exhibition with contributions from Sickert scholar Wendy Baron. Prices range from £12,000 to £500,000.

Returning to Lydiard Park

This recently discovered 18th century portrait was painted by John Vanderbank (1694-1739) and depicts Holles St John of Lydiard Park.

Art dealer Miles Barton discovered the 3ft x 2ft 4in (91 x 71cm) oil "dirty and unattributed" and has since sold it for "a high four-figure sum" to the Trustees of the Friends of Lydiard Park. The Grade I listed Palladian house in Swindon was home for 500 years to the St John family.

The sitter was the younger brother of John, 2nd Viscount St John, and stepbrother to the famous politician and political philosopher Henry St John, 1st Viscount Bolingbroke.

Not much is known about his life although it appears he was an enthusiast for the stage, possibly an actor, and had shares in Covent Garden Theatre when he died.

In a statement issued by the Friends of Lydiard Park, Sarah Finch-Crisp, who spotted the portrait for sale, said the discovery "will prompt fresh research into Holles' life and times and Lydiard's theatrical links".

Vanderbank studied under Godfrey Kneller and founded the St Martin's Lane Academy in 1720, which William Hogarth attended. "High living made him flee to France to escape debts with this portrait of Holles being painted sometime after his return c.1730," said Barton.

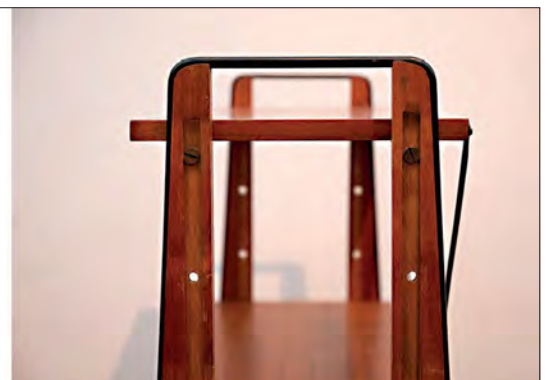

He died from tuberculosis in 1739.

Golden discovery brings coin hoard to market

Cache of 17th century coins found during restoration of medieval home in Brittany

by Anne Crane

A cache of 17th century French gold coins discovered during the renovation of a manor house in the Bigouden area of Brittany is to be offered for sale by Ivoire Angers/Delays in Angers on September 29.

The coins were uncovered when a couple decided to restore the house they had purchased in Plozevet in 2012. The three stonemasons they engaged to do the work first found a metal box filled with gold coins inside a wall and then a few days later found a purse with more gold coins above a beam. There were 239 coins in total minted during the reigns of Louis XIII and Louis XIV.

The Service Régional d'Archéologie Préventive was responsible for researching the coins following the discovery. It was established that the earliest part of the house dated back to the 13th century and would have belonged to a family of traders or farmers with the identity of the last known inhabitants traced back to the 18th century. The region where the manor is situated was particularly prosperous in the 17th century thanks to the transport of Bordeaux wines to England and cereals to Northern Europe.

All the coins have been authenticated, 23 of them issued under Louis XIII and 216 under Louis XIV.

The hoard, named the Plozevet treasure, is said to be the result of savings since the coins found come from 19 different cities (until the 1970s currency was minted in many different places throughout France). The entire treasure is expected to realise between €250,000-300,000 with the proceeds to be divided in two: one half for the three tradesmen who discovered them and the other half for the owners of the property.

The oldest coin dates from 1638 and the most recent from 1692. Among them are several rare coins including this Louis XIV double Louis d'or à la meche longue from 1646 issued by the atelier de Dijon, which is reckoned to be one of only 120 examples that are known. It has an estimate of €10,000-€15,000. ■

Aivazovsky provides Maine highlight

£1-$1.37

The top lot in the three-day auction held by Thomaston Place Auction Galleries (17% buyer's premium) in Maine from August 27-29 proved to be this dramatic marine subject by the sought-after Russian artist Ivan Aivazovsky (1817-1900).

The oil on canvas, which is signed lower right, depicts a stormy sea scene with a crew in a longboat escaping their foundering ship with the sun glinting through a break in the clouds. The painting is contained in a substantial gilt gesso frame and measures 2ft 5in x 3ft 4in (74cm x 1m) overall with a sight size of 13½in x 2ft (34 x 61cm).

It has been cleaned and revarnished, has a repaired puncture just above the longboat and a reinforced canvas edge on original stretcher. It was estimated at $70,000-90,000 but sold for $145,000 (£105,840) after a bidding battle.

The George I Britannia standard silver coffee pot by Thomas Parr I, 1717, which was previewed in ATG No 2505, sold for $7500 (£5475) against a guide of $2000-3000.

Mickey's magic trick

This 1950s battery operated Mickey Mouse magician toy is part of a selection of Disney-related items to be included in Potter & Potter's Steiff, Toys and Pop Culture auction to be held on September 25 in Chicago. Mickey, dressed in a magician's cape and tuxedo, raises and lowers his top hat to make a chicken on top of the table disappear. The lithographed tin and fabric toy was made in Japan by Linemar and retains the original box. The estimate is $400-700.

Signs at Baron Ribeyre

Baron Ribeyre & Associés is holding a two-day auction at Drouot in Paris on September 27- 28 devoted to a collection of enamelled advertising signs spanning over half a century from 1900 to 1960. The ensemble of approximately 600 items covers a large part of industrial and commercial production during the 20th century from cars and drinks to washing powder, biscuits and chocolate.

Pictured right is one of the entries, a Belgian enamelled sign from the mid-1930s for the drink Spa Citron. The 3ft 3in x 2ft 2in (1m x 65cm) panel, which is signed Géo for Jean Geoffroy and comes from the Emaillerie Koekelberg in Brussels, has an estimate of €2000-2500.

Bond saved from a skip

This first edition of Ian Fleming's Casino Royale will be offered for sale by Scammell Auctions in Adelaide on October 11.

This copy of the 1953 novel includes the first state dust jacket designed by the author of which less than 5000 copies were issued. It was purchased in Adelaide by a local collector some 30 years ago, initially just to read and was nearly thrown out during a routine tidying up but luckily kept and stored safely.

The estimate is Aus$20,000-30,000.

October in California

Andrew Jones Auctions in Los Angeles is selling two single-owner collections in online only auctions in October.

First, on October 10, will be the collection of Lady Victoria White of Beverly Hills, California. Then, on October 24, comes the first of a series of sales of the collection of John Nelson, the man behind the eponymous John Nelson Antiques of Los Angeles.

Lady White's collection will feature furniture and decorative arts including silver, oriental and European ceramics and an extensive library of books. Her life-long love of horses is reflected in several paintings by Sir Alfred Munnings (1878-1959) including this 20in x 2ft (51 x 61cm) work from 1922, Kilkenny Horse Fair, left, which is estimated at $200,000-300,000.

Among the pieces on offer in the sale from the John Nelson collection will be this early 19th century scagliola inset and gilt bronze mounted mahogany centre table, above, which has an estimate of $2000-4000.

Early Jawlensky discovery

An early work by Alexej von Jawlensky (1864-1914) will feature in the sale to be held by Côte Basque auctions in Saint-Jean-de-Luz on November 19

The 2ft 10in x 2ft 2in (87x 68cm) oil on canvas, with cyrillic inscriptions and the trace of a signature by Jawlensky on the reverse, depicts an elderly Jewish man at prayer. It shows the influence of Ilya Repin, who was Jawlensky's teacher when he was still based in Russia before he moved to Germany and took up the Expressionist style for which he is so well known today.

The painting's existence was unknown until it was rediscovered in a private collection in Bayonne. It has been identified via two published archival photos from c.1893 which clearly show the artist working on the canvas in the company of his friend and fellow artist Marianne Werefkin. Both the young painters visited a Jewish village in the summer of 1893 and Jawlensky produced a series of portraits of residents and rabbis of which this work is thought to be a part. The painting, which is unfinished and has been reduced from the original size visible in the photographs, is thought to have arrived in France around 1900 and was acquired by a Polish Jewish doctor who came to France in the 1920s and ended up settling in Bayonne. His grandchildren could attest to the painting being in the family at least before 1950.

The painting has been authenticated by the Jawlensky-Archiv SA foundation in Muralto, Switzerland and will feature in the catalogue raisonné of the artist's works. The estimate is €200,000-300,000.

The Chesterfield magpie

After dealing ‘under the radar’ showground fair regular opens shop

by Joan Porter

Dealer Suzie Kujawinski is thrilled about her new vintage and salvage shop, The Lucky Magpie, in Chesterfield. She opened earlier this month after spending six months renovating the premises, an old coach house. “It was so good to see so many local people at the launch and particularly young people. One ten-year-old was very taken with a large fibreglass shark’s head which his grandparents bought for him.”

The shop’s eclectic stock includes lots of advertising signage, vintage clothing, kitchenalia and a collection of Rowntree advertising items which date back to the 1900s which included a miniature baseball bat filled with tiny cake decorations (now sold). Upcycled lamps made from engine parts, copper pipes and cogs will also be for sale in the shop, where prices run from a few pounds to over £1000 for enamel signs and sculptures.

Kujawinski also unearthed in an old air raid shelter some fine organ pipes, pictured on Instagram, on which she is doing some research before offering them for sale.

Before opening her shop she traded at IACF in Newark and Arthur Swallow Fairs in Lincoln, has supplied props to Pinewood

Studios and the BBC and worked in urban art. “I’ve been dealing in antiques and salvage for many years but under the radar,” she said. ■

The fabric of collecting

Dealers, collectors, and textile enthusiasts including students looking for design inspiration will be gathering at the Textile Society’s London and Vintage Textile Fair at Chelsea Town Hall on Sunday October 10.

Collecting is an important element of the textiles trade and the work of the Textile Society helps to promote this. All profits from ticket sales support the society’s awards and bursaries scheme.

Piled high on the tables will be textiles from the 18th century to the 1970s, rugs, upholstery fabrics, French linens and fashion accessories. The 30 traders include Slow Loris Textiles with Oriental tribal pieces, The Running Stitches with vintage Kantha quilts and blankets, Peta Smyth Antique Textiles and Susie Petrou with antique folk clothes, plus Fuji Kimono and Meg Andrews with Arts & Crafts antique textiles and 18th and 19th century textiles.

Marketing in St Albans

Jennifer Titmuss, organiser of the St Albans Antiques and Vintage Market (pictured) and the Chiswick High Road Antiques and Vintage Market has a positive update on her events. She said: “The St Albans market will be three years old next month and is as popular as ever.

“It has survived Covid well and rallied immediately on reopening in terms of visitors and enthusiasm. We are almost back up to capacity at around 70 stallholders.

“Chiswick is doing really well – visitors are really enthusiastic and turning out in big numbers. There is a vibrant feel to the market so long may it continue.” The next St Albans Antiques and Vintage Market is on Sunday, October 17 and in Chiswick High Road on Sunday, October 10.

Arms move to Hendon

The London Antique Arms Fair, founded in 1967, will be running its 103rd fair at a new venue, the RAF Museum in Hendon on Sunday October 3 with up to 80 dealers and 140 tables. Exhibitors include Bonhams, Garth Vincent Arms and Armour, Peter Holder Antique American Firearms and West Street Antiques from Dorking.

Organiser John Wilson, an antique arms dealer, said: “The new venue has been selected as it is just outside the soon to be expanded Ultra Low Emission Zone and close to motorways and public transport. The car park has space for 300 cars and of course, visitors can spend time looking at the historic aircraft in the museum.”

Although lockdown rules have been eased and the fairs and markets sector has returned to business with encouraging levels of stands, visitors and sales, the dates listed here can still be subject to change.

Fair organisers are likely to have Covid-safe rules in place and will appreciate all visitors following them - Track and Trace may be mandatory for entry, for example, and you may be required or expected to wear a face mask indoors and use hand sanitiser.

Fair organisers are requested to inform us of any changes so that the accuracy of the calendar can be maintained.

Antiques Trade Gazette cannot accept responsibility for errors or omissions

Some fairs may be timed entry events where you must pre-book a ticket with an allocated time slot.

As ever, readers are advised to check with the fair or event concerned before travelling any distance to understand the conditions under which the event is taking place and to check for any alterations or last-minute cancellations.

Information accurate at the time of going to press (2pm Friday September 17).

The original and authoritative sales listing

This is a calendar of art, antiques and general auctions taking place in the UK and Ireland over the next two weeks.

Due to current market conditions caused by Covid-19, readers should expect that some of the live auctions listed here will be held as live online only sales. Such auctions take place behind closed doors and are not open to members of the public for bidding in the room. Bidding takes place online and is also usually available on the phone or on commission.

Readers should bear in mind that regulations and guidelines differ across each of the devolved nations of the UK and are also different in the Republic of Ireland. They are also subject to change at short notice.

Auctioneers are requested to contact us with details of their sales and inform us of any changes.

Contact us at: calendar@antiquetrade gazette.com

Some auction houses may admit people to their premises to bid in the room though they are not required to do so and a number of them may continue with live online only sales for some time.

In all cases you should check with the auction house directly to understand the conditions under which the auction is taking place, including storage arrangements or delivery and collection options that are currently available.

Our online calendar is updated throughout the week, check it regularly to ensure you have the latest information.

We are also listing timed auctions that are being held on thesaleroom.com

Information accurate at the time of going to press (2pm Friday September 17).

Artist's Resale Right

Advertisements in Antiques Trade Gazette may mention Artist's Resale Right (ARR). Please refer to the information below for details.

Living artists and the descendants of artists deceased within the last 70 years are entitled to receive a resale royalty each time their work is bought. The right applies only when the sale price reaches or exceeds the sterling equivalent of €1,000 and is calculated on a sliding scale.

Please note ARR is calculated in euros. Auctioneers will apply current exchange rates.

Royalty	Resale price up to €50,000
4%	between €50,000.01 and €200,000
3%	between €200,000.01 and €350,000
1%	between €350,000.01 and €500,000
0.5%	between €500,000.01 and €1,000,000
0.25%	in excess of €1,000,000

Royalties are also capped so that the total amount of the royalty paid for any single sale of a work cannot exceed €12,500. ARR is exempt of VAT.

Celebrity? That's Rich

Right: Dealer Alexander Rich celebrated his own special anniversary last week.

In the wake of ATG's 50th anniversary issue last week, Alexander 'Sandy' Rich of Tregeagle Fine Art, who not so long ago left behind the thrilling world of art insurance to become a dealer, posted on Instagram about his own anniversary:

"Hard for me to believe but this week it's exactly 10 years since I appeared in the Grand Final of the BBC 2 Antiques Master quiz show.

"Billed as 'The search to find the UK's leading Amateur Antiques Expert' I entered the competition, encouraged by my wife, having spent 15 years as an insurance broker and thinking that it would be a fascinating insight into the world of television, which I'd never appeared on before, would test my knowledge and might lead somewhere interesting.

"I made it through various rounds, hosted by Eric Knowles and Sandi Toksvig, and had to take three days holiday (difficult to explain to colleagues in conjunction with the BBC's NDA). I reached the final - and won! (The prize? A ghastly silver-plated pot!)

"A few weeks after the final was broadcast, I went to look around the Winter Antiques Fair at Olympia. While exploring a display cabinet on one of the stands I overheard a lady across the aisle exclaiming excitedly to her husband 'Oh look! It's him, it's him...!' Curious to see which luminary might be nearby I looked up as she continued 'It's the guy who won BBC Antiques Master!'

"Any inflated sense of pride I might have felt was immediately popped by her husband's retort: 'That really is the worst celebrity spot I've ever heard of!'

"I consequently spent another eight years in insurance!"

If you want to do your own bit of celebrity spotting, he's at the Henley Decor Fair this week, September 23-26.

Sotheby's at the helm in annual regatta

This photo, right, was taken on September 4 at the annual inter-auction house sailing regatta at Seaview, Isle of Wight. The teams represented were Sotheby's, Bonhams, Phillips, Roseberys and a dealers' team represented by the likes of Colnaghi and Agnews.

The event takes place on the first weekend of September every year and has been held since 1996. Mermaid charters were hired, and the event was generously hosted by the Seaview Yacht Club.

This year, the trophy was retained by Sotheby's whose team was helmed by George Gordon, assisted by colleagues Sara Alavi Kia, Sarah Eisen and Enahoro Ohioma-Belo.

In second place came the dealers' team which was helmed by Anna Cunningham from Agnews, assisted by Chloe Stead from Colnaghi and Toby Campbell from Rafael Valls.

Obituary - Philip Astley-Jones

Well known in the antiques trade and art world, Philip Astley-Jones died after a short illness in mid-August. He started his life in the trade with Roger Warner in Burford in the 1960s and was then hired by Peter Wilson to go to help set up Sotheby's in Los Angeles in 1970. After a number of years with Sotheby's, he worked as managing director at Hatfields, the furniture and works of art restorers in London. Latterly he had helped on various vetting committees at the Masterpiece fairs in London.

An avid collector of the quirky as well as the serious, his advice and his taste were constantly asked for. He was a dealer to his fingertips.
