1 ABNEY, WILLIAM DE WIVELSLIE. Thebes and Its Five Greater Temples. Illustrated with forty large permanent photographs. viii, 88pp., 40 fine Woodburytype photographs, mounted within printed captioned frames. 6 plans hors texte. Lrg. 4to. Contemporary black calf gilt (rubbed at spine and extremities). A.e.g. "Abney, inventor of gelatino-chloride (printing-out) paper, is also to be recognized for his esthetic, which anticipated the pictorialist sensibility that flourished in the late 1880s and 1890s in England and America" (Truthful Lens). Richly printed sepia-toned photographs, dramatically composed and with sharp definition. Unobtrusive library shelfmark and stamps; a very nice copy.

4 ALBUM OF PHOTOGRAPHS OF EGYPT. Late nineteenth-century. 90 albumen and silver print photographs, mounted on heavy card leaves in a contemporary album. Image size: ca. 210 x 275 mm. (ca. 8 1/4 x 10 3/4 inches). Massive oblong folio. Full heavy polished black leather gilt (expertly rebacked). T.e.g. The album focuses both on the well-known monuments of ancient Egypt—the architecture and bas-reliefs of Karnak, Luxor, the Great Sphinx, Dashur, Sakharah, Abydos, Dendera, Kom, Edfu, Phylae, and others—and also on contemporary scenes: the harbor at Danabieh, cataracts at Aswan, dervishes and belly dancers and others (some in studio portraits), the camel market at Bedrechem, dhows on the Nile, as well as on Cairene mosques and other edifices. Most of the photographs are credited and captioned in the image, to Edit. Schroeder & Cie., Zürich (42 prints), to Art. G. Lekegian & Cie. (34 prints) or Zangaki (10); 4 are not credited. Fine condition.

- 44 [BROSSES, CHARLES DE.] Du culte des dieux fétiches. Ou parallèle de l'ancienne religion de l'Égypte avec la religion actuelle de Nigritie. 285, (1)pp. Early nineteenth-century boards, 1/4 calf (backstrip a bit worn). Published anonymously, with statement neither of the author's name nor place of publication. Charles de Brosses (1709-1777), the author of the well-known "Lettres familières," based on his artistic and archaeological tour of Italy in 1739-1740, was a member of the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, and an antiquarian who wrote on Herculaneum (1750) and other subjects of classical interest. "De Brosses was a pioneer of the science of comparative religion. In his memoir 'Du culte des dieux fétiches,' reprinted in the Encyclopédie, he combatted the then prevailing tendency to interpret ancient mythologies and religious systems, notably that of Egypt, as profound symbolism and upheld the thesis that ancient Egyptian religion did not differ substantially from the primitive cults of native Africa. The work, which the French Academy refused to print in its transactions and which gave rise to violent attacks, anticipates the modern anthropological method of approach to the history of religions" (Encyclopaedia of the Social Sciences, V.31). Fine contemporary mottled calf, handsomely gilt at spine.

A later French edition of the work first published in Rome in 1650-1653, written in the form of 54 letters from the author to the Neapolitan physician Schipano; the first French translation appeared in 1661-1664. "The prince of all such travellers is Pietro de la Valle, the most insatiate in curiosity, the most intelligent in apprehension, the fullest and most accurate in description" (H. Yule, after Cox). Della Valle's journey, undertaken over twelve years, took him through the Near East, Persia, and India, and, on his return, through Arabia, Cyprus, Malta and Sicily. "Della Valle left Venice in 1614 on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. From there he travelled through Syria to Persia, where he married the Circassian Setti Manni and spent some time at the Court of Shah Abbas. He carried on his travels to the west coast of India, finally returning to Italy in 1626. The greatest number of letters are dated from Persia.... Ten letters are dated from Constantinople" (Blackmer). A very handsome and fresh copy, with the rococo ex-libris throughout of M. Huvier du Mée.

- 186 HAMILTON, WILLIAM. Remarks on Several Parts of Turkey. Part I [all published]: Aegyptiaca, or some account of the antient and modern state of Egypt, as obtained in the years 1801, 1802. Atlas of plates only, without the text. 1 engraved map, and 24 hinged plates by J. Powell, in soft-ground etching (1 with aquatint; 13 double-page, several folding). Lrg. folio. Modern cloth, 3/4 polished calf gilt, preserving early marbled endpapers; raised bands. First edition.
"Hamilton went out to Constantinople as Elgin's secretary in 1799. In 1801 Elgin sent him to Egypt, as a member of the British Mission attached to the Turkish Army, but his main job was to seize the collections of Egyptian antiquities made by the French, and to prevent their removal. In this effort he was joined by Edward Clarke. 'Aegyptiaca' is Hamilton's most important work, and it is concerned principally with upper Egypt. He intended it as a supplement to Pococke and Norden. The plates, etchings by J. Powell, are after drawings by Charles Hayes, who had been in Egypt since 1800 with Sir Ralph Abercrombie's force. In October 1801, he was nominated to join Hamilton and Leake in their journey to Upper Egypt; earlier that same year he had assisted in a survey of the country around Alexandria. He died of fever in Egypt in 1803" (Blackmer). Intermittent light foxing, not affecting most plates; an unusually fresh and clean copy, with no browning, rare thus.

Fine engraved archaeological and decorative culs-de-lampe (by Tuscher, Preisler, and Cramer) and lettrines throughout. Folio. Contemporary mottled calf gilt. "Norden was a captain in the Danish navy and had studied drawing and engraving as part of his duties. He had spent nearly three years in Italy studying art when Christian VI of Denmark ordered him to go to Egypt in 1737 on an exploratory mission where he made drawings on the spot. He spent about a year in Egypt and was the first European to penetrate as far as Derr in Nubia and to publish descriptions of any Nubian temples. This important work was the earliest attempt at an elaborate description of Egypt, and its plates are the most significant previous to those of Denon" (Blackmer, describing the first English edition of 1757). copperplate-engraved illus. and vignettes, all by Rode. 4to. Contemporary boards, 1/4 calf gilt, with gilt-embossed rococo ownership supralibros on front cover. Vorzugsausgabe, on Swiss laid paper, of the only edition.

Riem, a controversial Enlightenment theologian, collaborated on this study of painting in the ancient world with the history painter and etcher Christian Bernhard Rode (1725-1797); both held positions at the time at the Berliner Akademie der Künste. The work drew furthermore on remarks by the late artist Benjamin Calau (1724-1785), while the quite attractive etchings are based, for the most part, on drawings by the painter and etcher Frederic Reclam (1734-1774). A feature of considerable interest is the mention of Aztec art (with one plate), in addition to Egyptian and classical art. Binding lightly rubbed; a fine copy, from the Vorzugsausgabe, printed on Schweizerpapier.

Life and Work at the Great Pyramid During the Months of January, February, March and April, A.D. 1865; with a discussion of the facts ascertained. 3 vols. xviii, 563pp., 10 plates; xi, 470pp., 15 plates; xii, 620pp., 13 plates. Tissue guards. 4to. Publisher's dec. cloth. "First and apparently only edition. Smyth left for Egypt in November, 1864 to measure the Great Pyramid. This work involved general cleaning of the interior of the pyramid and the uncovering of all four sides of its base. The plans and diagrams of the Pyramid illustrated in the plates are based on measurements taken by Smyth; his observations and the scientific facts he elicited are contained in the first two volumes. Vol. 3 contains Smyth's fantastic deductions drawn from his observations which concern the basic unit of measure and the mystical relationship between the sacred cubit of the Jews, the British inch, etc." (Blackmer). Notwithstanding Smyth's theories, a very important work in Egyptian archaeology. Ex-library.

To which is subjoined a map of the country. Translated from the French. (2), xl, 730, 14pp., frontispiece, folding map and 28 engraved plates with numerous figs. Lrg. stout 4to. New library buckram. Second edition in English, following on the three-volume octavo edition published in 1799, and here with plates reduced from the first French edition, Paris 1799. "Sonnini embarked for Alexandria in 1777 with Tott's mission. There he received orders from Louis XVI to explore Egypt. He spent three years traveling through the country, as far as Aswan. He then went on to Greece and Turkey, returning to France in 1780.... His work on Egypt is full of important information: 'un réel intérêt par l'ampleur, la variété et la précision de ses informations,' 'son ouvrage est plus complet que celui de Volney et de Savary' (—Carré)" (Blackmer). Orig. printed yellow wraps. Entirely uncut; partly unopened. Plates: Atlante monumentale del basso e dell'alto Egitto illustrato dal prof. Domenico Valeriani e compilato dal fu Girolamo Segato. Coi disegni tratti dalle opere di Denon, della Commissione Francese, di Gau, di Cailaud e di Rosellini e con quelli dall stesso compilatore eseguiti sul luogo. 2 vols. 99 plates (7 folding; 44 hand-colored). Lrg. folio. Fine new boards, 1/4 calf gilt. Leonora Navari comments on the Blackmer copy (which was of the atlas only, and lacked the text): "First edition, published in parts, of the atlas.... This was accompanied by 2 vols. of 8vo text.... Segato went to Egypt in 1818 to work for a commercial enterprise. He explored and mapped a large area south of Wady Halfa in 1821-2. He was a friend of Champollion, although his collaborator Valeriani was hostile to Champollion's system of decipherment of the hieroglyphs. Most of the plates have been re-engraved from standard works by Denon, Gau, etc., but a number are after drawings by Segato himself." A very fine copy of a very rare book; only 8 complete copies listed in OCLC.

435 VALERIANO BOLZANI, GIOVANNI PIERO. Hieroglyphica, sive de sacris aegyptiorum, aliarumque gentium literis commentarii. A Celio Augustino Curione duobis libris auctii, & multis imaginibus illustrati. (10)ff., 12pp., 13-441ff., 25ff. Woodcut title-page vignette, splendid full-page portrait by Tobias Stimmer in elaborate ornamental frame, and 273 woodcut illus. Lettrines and schematic figs. in text. Stout folio. Contemporary calf, handsomely blind-stamped with fillets and oval device at the center of each cover; handsome seventeenth-century calligraphed paper labels on spine, lettered in red and black. A book of pivotal importance in late Renaissance iconography, first published in Basel, 1556; the present edition follows that of 1567, which was the first to contain the two additional books by Caelio Augustino Curio. Dedicated to Cosimo I de' Medici, Valeriano's "Hieroglyphica" is "a vast compilation of all the hieroglyphic knowledge of his time; it drew on Horapollo, the 'Physiologus,' the obelisks he saw in Rome, the Cabala and the Bible as sources. It was so popular that eleven editions were published in the first seventy years. At the time it was believed that hieroglyphs were a purely ideographical form of writing used by ancient Egyptian priests to foreshadow divine ideas, and that the Greek philosophers had tapped into 'hieroglyphic wisdom.' In the dedication of his 'Hieroglyphica,' Valeriano writes, '[To] speak hieroglyphically is nothing else but to disclose the true nature of things divine and human. He contributed no revolutionary ideas to the field, but his compilation was instrumental in changing the study of hieroglyphic symbols from a philosophical to a philological pursuit' (Funk). Valeriano (1477-1558) was Vasari's Latin teacher, and tutor to Giovanni de' Medici (the future Pope Leo X); in 1509, as the private secretary of Cardinal Giulio de' Medici, he travelled to Rome, where he studied the city's antiquities. The "Hieroglyphica" provided a fountain of emblematic imagery for leading artists, while the inscriptions in his historical material were utilized by humanist historians. It was questionably the most important source for Ripa's "Iconologia" (1593 and after). "Valeriano supplied Ripa not only with separate figures and with countless individual attributes, but also with many learned references and explanations for the images and attributes that he borrowed from other sources" (Elizabeth McGrath, in the Dictionary of Art). Contemporary ownership inscription effaced on title-page, with two small losses (affecting border of the portrait on verso); intermittent light browning; binding rubbed, with small losses at hinges and corners. - 462 WHITE, JOSEPH. Aegyptiaca: or, Observations on Certain Antiquities of Egypt. (4), xiii, (2), 127pp. [mispaginated '227'], 7 engraved plates (1 folding). Lrg. 4to. Full speckled calf. Raised bands (slightly rubbed; hairline crack in front hinge). First edition of White's detailed examination of Pompey's Pillar in Egypt. White consulted 18th century accounts of French and English travellers, displaying a marked anti-French sentiment. More importantly, White researched among ancient sources in Greek, Latin and Arabic, which he quotes selectively in the original languages. In 1777 Joseph White had been appointed Laudian Professor of Arabic, a position he held until his death in 1814. A few light pencilled annotations; an attractive copy, crisp and fresh.
