ADVOCATE FOR YOURSELF.

You advocate for your patients – no question. Now it's time to advocate for the critical role you play as a key member of the surgical team and how important your role is to patient safety.

AST developed a toolkit specifically for surgical technologists to use when you're explaining just how crucial is it that certified surgical technologists earn education from an accredited program thus making them eligible to sit for the national certifying exam and earn the distinguished CST credential. Scan the QR code to access documents, AST position statements and other resources you need to keep advocating for the profession.

Perioperative Team-Based Morbidity and Mortality Conferences: A Systematic Review of the Literature

AUBREY SAMOST-WILLIAMS, MD, MS, et al

This systematic review aimed to identify key elements of perioperative team-based morbidity and mortality conferences (TBMMs) and their impact on patient safety, education, and quality improvement outcomes. Recommendations for key TBMM elements can be drawn from the reports of successful perioperative TBMMs. Possible benefits of structured TBMMs over single-discipline conferences were identified for further exploration, including opportunities for rich educational contributions for trainees, improved patient safety, and the potential for system-wide quality improvement. Design and implementation of TBMM should address meticulous preparation of cases, standardized presentation format, and effective facilitation to increase the likelihood of realizing the potential benefits.

AT A GLANCE

EVENTS

Educators! It's not too late to register for Educators Conference in Orlando

At AST's 2024 Educators Conference your surgical technology peers will highlight the topics that matter the most. From classroom to clinicals, to leadership and networking, you'll be among professionals who understand exactly what you deal with day in and day out as you work hard to advance the profession and set the stage for future surgical technologists.

When you join us in Orlando, you'll earn at least 14 CEs*, connect with like-minded professionals and have multiple opportunities to engage with industry partners, socialize with friends - new and old - and be inspired by new technology, new solutions and a camaraderie that only this group understands.

Just minutes from the Orlando International Airport, you'll be able to easily access the event site. Conveniently located just 15 minutes from Disney World and Universal Studios, you will also be able to take advantage of all the activities Orlando has to offer.

The Florida Hotel and Conference Center

1500 Sand Lake Road

Orlando, FL 32809

February 16-17, 2024, with AST's EC Leadership Symposium February 15 (limited space)

Single and Double Occupancy: $155

Attendees can also call the hotel Reservations Department at (800) 588 - 4656. Guests should identify themselves as an attendee of the Association of Surgical Technologists.

The room reservation cutoff date is January 23, 2024.

Reservation must be guaranteed with a credit card at the time of booking. A deposit of one night's room and tax will be charged to the credit card five days prior to arrival.

There is a service charge of $19 per day.

Register today by visiting our website.

Giddy Up into Denver! (logo)

AST's 54th Surgical Technology Conference

Denver

May 30-June 1, 2024

Sheraton Denver Downtown

We can't wait to host you in AST's home state of Colorado when we gather for our annual event in Denver in late May. From surgeon speakers, networking opportunities, vendors displaying the latest and greatest surgical advancements, you won't want to miss it.

Stay tuned and keep your calendars marked. More information and registration coming in February!

SCHOLARSHIPS

Students! Apply for a Foundation for Surgical Technology Student Scholarship

The Foundation for Surgical Technology is committed to helping surgical technology students pay for tuition or pay off their educational debt. If you have the desire and ability to pursue a career in the operating room and need financial assistance, you should apply for a scholarship.

Deadline

Scholarship applications are due by March 1 annually. Scholarship award amounts range from year to year.

Eligibility

To be eligible for the Foundation's academic scholarships, you must demonstrate superior academic ability, have a need for financial assistance and be enrolled in an accredited program, thus making you eligible to sit for the national certification exam through NBSTSA.

Application

The Foundation's online scholarship application form must be completed in one sitting. Please be prepared with the following information before you begin:

- Your contact information, including mailing address and email address.
- The name and mailing address of your surgical technology program.
- Be prepared to write compelling answers to the following questions: Why you have chosen to become a surgical technologist? What your plans are after school?
- Two letters of recommendation from the following categories:
  - One letter must come from a clinical coordinator, program director or clinical instructor.
  - One letter must come from a surgical services professional (CST, CSFA, nurse, surgeon, etc). If you are not yet in the clinical portion of your program, your second LOR may come from another role listed in the first category but not used in the first LOR.

Additional Requirements

If you are awarded a scholarship, you must join your national professional organization, the Association of Surgical Technologists (AST), and submit your statement before being awarded your scholarship. Student member rates are $45. Scholarships are announced in May.

MEMBER BENEFITS

Being a member of AST really does have its benefits!

Not only are you part of the largest organization that is focusing on surgical technologists, but you also receive:

- Automatic transfer of CE credits to the National Board of Surgical Technology and Surgical Assisting (NBSTSA).
- Automatic recording of CE credits earned through AST online offerings and earned at AST events such as the national conference.
- Submittal of CE credits at any time during your membership so you don't lose the valuable certificates of completion/attendance.
- Maintenance of your CE credit certificates for 5 years.
- Annual CE credit letter – a tally of how many credits you earned throughout the year.
- Low membership fee. AST has kept the low fee a priority while other associations have raised its membership fees.
- Cost savings when registering for AST events, such as the national conference and Educators Event.

- State-specific legislative efforts driven by AST National to further along the profession.
- Legislative updates and support for your state.
- Access to the Map of State Laws.
- Discounted CE opportunities that are offered by AST, including CE Credit Packages.
- Having a say when it comes to your state's assembly board. Active members get to vote for their state assembly Board of Directors.
- Communications including The Surgical Technologist, monthly e-newsletters, AST social media sites, including special professional groups on LinkedIn, Facebook and more.
- Leadership opportunities to serve on state assembly and national boards as well as state and national committees.
- Scholarship opportunities for students, educators and CSTs.
- The AST Career Center, where you can post your resume and obtain information on job openings.

DISCOUNTS

Member-Get-A-Member

Earn two or more months of FREE membership with the Member-Get-A-Member program. Recruit colleagues and AST will extend your membership by the appropriate number of months. Here's how:

- Recruit a valid new member at the one-year membership rate of $80.
- Make sure that each person you recruit provides AST with your name and your AST member number when filling out their application.
- After AST receives the recruited member's application, we will extend your membership by two months for each person you recruit.
- Recruit two members at the $80-level, and we'll extend your membership by four months! The more people you recruit, the longer your membership gets extended. Bonus membership months are not applicable to members who recruit themselves, students or retired/disabled members. No substitutions will be permitted. Your membership must be current to receive the bonus months. Potential members MUST supply your name and your AST member number in order for you to receive bonus membership months. If a person's membership has lapsed for more than a year, they are considered a new member.

Reach out to our Member Services team at 1-800-637-7433 for more information.

MILESTONES

Happy Anniversary!

Congratulations to the following state assemblies as they celebrate anniversaries this month! AST appreciates your hard work, dedication and all your years of service for making our state assemblies the backbone of this organization.

In Memoriam

Beloved ST Educator Inspires Students for Over 32 years

Lita Fitch attended Tulsa Vo Tech in the fall of 1989 but found out she was pregnant just as ST classes were getting started. She dropped out in April after a C-section but returned the following year and graduated in June of 1991. She would go on to work at Hillcrest Hospital and a few other locations in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Over the years, she tried many different shifts, including nights – at this time she was a mom of two daughters. Due to this experience, Lita could scrub ANYTHING that came through the door.

Over the years, Lita taught many ST students as a preceptor in the operating room. She eventually moved on to an education role, teaching ST students at multiple schools in multiple different roles.

Lita's passion was surgery, and her goal was ensuring patient safety above all else! Lita was fierce, and never held back, inspiring her students to understand the importance of speaking up and doing the right thing for the patient, even when it wasn't easy. Lita encouraged confidence and told every student to “own it” when entering their OR.

Rest in peace, Lita. Your legacy will live on with our students now.

SPEAK UP!

Call for speakers!

AST is currently seeking speakers for our clinical webinar series, AST Educators Event and our national conferences. Have a good topic you'd like to see presented or know of a peer or surgeon who would make a good presenter?

Assistance at stateassembly@ast.org or 303.325.2516

Active state assemblies are the future of the Association of Surgical Technologists' strength and success. The Association of Surgical Technologists gives special recognition to those state assemblies that demonstrate outstanding leadership within their states.

- ▶ To recognize excellence in leadership and member development, communication, education and community relations
- ▶ To encourage quality state management
- ▶ To recognize with distinction and visibility that efforts and results of meaningful activities that build a strong state
- ▶ To benchmark standards

Qualifications and Rules

- ▶ Held one annual business meeting per year
- ▶ Held at least two workshops per year
- ▶ Annual & midyear reports submitted by deadline
- ▶ Correct number of BOD and rotation
- ▶ Create marketing activity
- ▶ Media coverage
- ▶ Student involvement
- ▶ Instructor involvement
- ▶ Public education
- ▶ Up to five (5) awards will be awarded per year

Selection

All applications received in the AST national office by January 31, 2024, will be eligible for one of the five National AST Leadership Awards. Each entry is judged independently by the State Assembly Leadership Committee. Winners of the Leadership Award are determined by the cumulative total of points earned.

Your State's Reward

1. Every state assembly awarded the Leadership Award will receive recognition at the AST National Conference Open Ceremony.
2. Each state official on the state board will receive a pin representing "Winner of the State Assembly Leadership Achievement Award."
3. Each state winner receives recognition in a feature article about their state in The Surgical Technologist.
4. Each state who wins a Leadership Award will receive a pennant that announces the state as a winner of this prestigious award to display at state meetings.

Eligibility and Entry Preparation

- * Any AST approved state assembly may submit an entry.
- * Entry form must be completed by the state president for the period of January 1 – December 31, 2023.
- * Entry interactive form must be typed, handwritten reports not accepted.
- * Additional information to support qualification strongly recommended, submit with application.
- * A state may receive this award once every four years from the date the award was received.
- * All entries will become the property of AST and will not be returned.
- * Winners of the Leadership Award will be determined by the cumulative total of points earned.

Entry Deadline: entries must be received by January 31, 2024 to stateassembly@ast.org

Perioperative Team-Based Morbidity and Mortality Conferences: A Systematic Review of the Literature

Aubrey Samost-Williams, MD, MS,* Roni Rosen, MD,‡ Alexander Hannenberg, MD,†
Melis Lydston, MLS,§ Garrett M. Nash, MD, MPH,‡ and Mary Brindle, MD, MPH†||

Objective: This systematic review aimed to identify key elements of perioperative team-based morbidity and mortality conferences (TBMMs) and their impact on patient safety, education, and quality improvement outcomes.

Background: Patient safety in the perioperative period is influenced by system, team, and individual behaviors. However, despite this recognition, single-discipline morbidity and mortality conferences remain a mainstay of educational and quality improvement efforts.

Methods: A structured search was conducted in MEDLINE Complete, Embase, Web of Science, ClinicalTrials.gov, Cochrane CENTRAL, and ProQuest Dissertations and Theses Global in July 2022. Search results were screened, and the articles meeting inclusion criteria were abstracted.

Results: Seven studies were identified. Key TBMM elements were identified, including activities done before the conference—case selection and case investigation; during the conference—standardized presentation formats and formal moderators; and after the conference—follow-up emails and quality improvement projects. The impacts of TBMMs on educational, safety, and quality improvement outcomes were heterogeneous, and no meta-analysis could be conducted; however, improvement was typically shown in each of these domains where comparisons were made.

Conclusions: Recommendations for key TBMM elements can be drawn from the reports of successful perioperative TBMMs. Possible benefits of structured TBMMs over single-discipline conferences were identified for further exploration, including opportunities for rich educational contributions for trainees, improved patient safety, and the potential for system-wide quality improvement. Design and implementation of TBMM should address meticulous preparation of cases, standardized presentation format, and effective facilitation to increase the likelihood of realizing the potential benefits.

INTRODUCTION

Perioperative morbidity and mortality conferences have become nearly ubiquitous in academic medical centers since the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education began requiring, in 1983, that all residency programs have a case review process in place,<sup>1</sup> and are widely used in nonacademic settings as well. However, there is little standardization and high variability in conference aims, participants, case selection, and case analysis.<sup>2</sup> Despite the understanding that healthcare is delivered by a team working in a system, relatively few institutions have established team-based morbidity and mortality conferences (TBMMs)<sup>3-7</sup> for the perioperative setting, where TBMMs are defined by the inclusion of multiple role groups, including physicians of different specialties, such as surgeons and anesthesiologists, and clinicians of different professions, such as nurses and physicians. The morbidity and mortality conferences should also be distinguished from adverse event reviews or sentinel event reviews, which involve a small, and frequently multidisciplinary, team that investigates the cause of an adverse event, whereas a morbidity and mortality conference is designed to reach a larger group of learners and discussants to understand an incident.

The perioperative space is characterized by high acuity, with the potential for the patient's condition to deteriorate in seconds. Multiple physicians work shoulder to shoulder around a patient, and the care they all provide can be highly interdependent, as in airway surgeries, for example, where the work of the surgeon and the management of ventilation by the anesthesiologist are tightly intertwined. Perioperative teams also include nurses and surgical technologists, who provide essential support to the surgeons and anesthesiologists. These teams often spend hours working together in close proximity in a high-stakes environment. This intensive teamwork makes perioperative TBMMs both vital and challenging, as the team dynamics from this high-stakes environment can spill into TBMMs, including the tensions between role groups and their traditional hierarchies.

To better understand how we might support the implementation of perioperative TBMMs, our systematic review was aimed at identifying factors associated with the successful implementation of perioperative TBMMs. We were also interested in assessing the strength of the evidence associating TBMMs with improvements in patient safety, quality of clinical care, and educational outcomes.

METHODS

This review was conducted in accordance with the Preferred Reporting Items for Systematic Reviews and Meta-Analyses guidelines,<sup>8</sup> and the review protocol was prospectively registered with PROSPERO, the International Prospective Register of Systematic Reviews (protocol CRD42022350149).

Electronic searches for published literature were conducted by a medical librarian using the following databases: MEDLINE Complete via EBSCO (1857 to present), Embase (1947 to present), Web of Science (1900 to present), Cochrane Central Register of Controlled Trials via Ovid (1991 to present), ProQuest Dissertations & Theses Global (1990 to present), and ClinicalTrials.gov (1999 to present). The searches were conducted in July 2022.

The search strategy incorporated controlled vocabulary and free-text synonyms for the concepts perioperative, morbidity, mortality, and conferences. The full search strategies are listed in Supplemental Material 1, <http://links.lww.com/AOSO/A244>. No restrictions on language or any other search filters were applied. All identified studies were combined and deduplicated in EndNote X9. The citations were then uploaded into the Covidence software.

Citations with abstracts were independently screened by two authors (A.S.W. and R.R.) for inclusion criteria. The full text was then screened in all abstracts that did not clearly fail to meet the inclusion criteria. Discrepancies in recommendations for inclusion or exclusion were resolved in consultation with a third author (M.B.).

The morbidity and mortality conference in each study included in the systematic review had to be perioperative and include personnel from more than one medical specialty (eg, anesthesia and surgery) or more than one profession (eg, physician and nurse), and in this respect, it differed from typical departmental or division case review conferences. Perioperative space was defined as any environment where a proceduralist physician might interact with a patient under the care of an anesthesia team, such as the operating room, the labor and delivery ward, the endoscopy suite, or the interventional radiology suite. Studies that were not available in English, were available only as an abstract or book chapter, or were not peer-reviewed were excluded. Review articles or perspective and opinion pieces were excluded. No study was excluded on the basis of study design.

Study quality and risk of bias were assessed using the Newcastle-Ottawa Quality Assessment Scale for Cohort Studies,<sup>9</sup> with scoring done by one author (A.S.W.), followed by a discussion with the research team to reach a consensus score. Data were extracted by two authors (A.S.W. and R.R.) and checked for accuracy by the research team using a template that is available on request from the authors. Specifically, data were extracted around the hospital characteristics (academic vs community hospital, geographic location), the patient population addressed by the TBMMs, the characteristics of the TBMMs (actions taken before, during, and after the conference), implementation process measures (number of conferences held and attendance at conferences), and outcome measures (educational outcomes, adverse event investigation findings, and quality improvement outcomes). It was anticipated that the availability of quantitative measures of patient safety and clinician education would be limited, and no meta-analysis was planned.

RESULTS

Studies

The database search identified 779 studies; 47 were selected for full-text review, and 7 qualified for inclusion (Figure 1 and Table 1).<sup>10-16</sup> One study was a national survey of pediatric surgeons. The other 6 studies typically used mixed methodologies combining surveys of conference participants, retrospective analysis of cases or interventions, and qualitative assessments of the participants' perspectives. The studies had a moderate risk of bias, with scores of 4 or 6 stars on the Newcastle-Ottawa Quality Assessment Scale, where a score of 9 stars corresponds to the highest study quality (Supplemental Material 2, <http://links.lww.com/AOSO/A244>). None of the studies included controls for comparing patient groups or quality improvement projects.

Survey of Pediatric Surgeons

The survey study conducted by Berman et al<sup>14</sup> examined the perspectives of 353 pediatric surgeons on the effectiveness of morbidity and mortality conferences. While not a report of a single institution's experience like the other literature included, it provides useful, aggregated insights from a specific surgical specialty. Conferences that included participants from other departments in addition to the department of surgery were more likely to be perceived as effective (55% vs 47%;  $P = 0.005$ ). On open-ended questions, respondents noted that the inclusion of specialists from multiple disciplines in the conference increases accountability, provides clear communication channels, and aids in the identification of complex system factors that contributed to an adverse event. The survey also identified several factors associated with conference effectiveness and engagement: feedback pathways, discussion of nontechnical components of care, standardization of case assessment and decision-making, and connection to quality improvement projects and higher-level hospital review processes. The study's limitations include the relatively low response rate of 38% (a total of 928 pediatric surgeons were invited to complete the survey).

TBMM Characteristics

Elements of the TBMM process addressed in these studies include preparation for the meeting, the meeting itself, and post-meeting follow-up (Fig. 2). The specific elements of the processes implemented by the TBMMs described in the studies are listed in Table 2.

Activities occurring before a TBMM meeting typically included in-depth case preparation<sup>15</sup> and structured case analysis, such as sentinel event review or root cause analysis.<sup>11,16</sup> The TBMM is thus different from such well-established fact-finding activities but builds on such processes and includes a larger group of potential learners. Ervin et al<sup>15</sup> found in their qualitative analysis that in-depth case preparation was important to TBMM success and that it facilitated productive discussion around system issues. Some TBMMs discussed all adverse events or deaths at their meetings,<sup>13,16</sup> whereas others carefully selected cases for educational value or potential to highlight system issues.<sup>11,15</sup>

All TBMMs had some standardization of presentations, with a clinical case summary typically followed by a discussion focused around a key framework, such as “fix the problem, rather than assign blame”<sup>13</sup> or the cognitive biases that impact healthcare delivery.<sup>15</sup> Risucci et al<sup>10</sup> noted that a structured format facilitated the contextualization of an adverse event within the patient’s clinical course, from preoperative decision-making to postoperative care. This broad perspective made it possible to identify a more comprehensive array of factors that may have contributed to an adverse event and to come up with more effective solutions. Lahnaoui et al<sup>16</sup> pointed out the importance of standardization in allowing participants to feel more comfortable because of clear expectations and the reduced likelihood of accusations. Five studies reported that cases were presented at TBMM meetings by clinicians, including trainees.

Four studies mentioned a formal TBMM moderator role, filled by someone with training or experience in patient safety, such as a senior surgical leader or a faculty member supported by a safety expert.<sup>11,13,15,16</sup> Ervin et al.<sup>15</sup> found that the presence of a moderator was perceived as important for guiding and shaping discussion. However, no formal assessment was reported to evaluate the effectiveness of moderators in facilitating open discussion free from fear, eliciting quality improvement recommendations from a broad range of participants, or enhancing educational value.

Five studies described elements of postconference follow-up.<sup>11–13,15,16</sup> The most common element was the identification of key takeaway points and recommendations for practice changes. Stanford et al<sup>13</sup> described a TBMM process tightly tied to updating protocols and procedures, with a clinical nurse coordinator recording protocol changes agreed to in the meeting and distributing them to physicians and nurses for implementation. At some institutions, TBMM recommendations and changes were disseminated through postings on the intranet<sup>12,16</sup>; at others, they were distributed at subsequent TBMM meetings.<sup>11</sup>

The TBMMs were diverse and included surgeons, anesthesiologists, trainee physicians, nonsurgical proceduralists, medical specialists, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, and nurses from the operating room, intensive care unit, and inpatient surgical floors. Some TBMMs also included hospital leadership, quality, and safety experts, or research team members.

TBMM Outcomes

TBMM outcomes can be grouped into 3 categories: education, identification of adverse event causes and contributing factors, and quality improvement measures (Table 3).

Two studies looked at educational outcomes. Ervin et al<sup>15</sup> found that providing a defined framework for discussion can increase perceived educational value compared with a free-form format. TBMM members reported that participation in the TBMM increased their diagnostic and surgical skills. Kauffmann et al<sup>11</sup> reported that all TBMM cases in their study addressed 4 of the 6 core competencies established by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education<sup>1</sup>—Practice-Based Learning and Improvement, Interpersonal and Communication Skills, Professionalism, and Systems-Based Practice—and that most cases addressed the remaining 2 competencies, Patient Care and Procedural Skills and Medical Knowledge.

Four studies described TBMM investigations of adverse events aimed at identifying contributing factors, which ranged from clinical skills of the individual provider to organizational culture (Table 3).<sup>10–12,16</sup> Risucci et al<sup>10</sup> reported that a structured format helped TBMM participants recognize avoidable complications, with the majority of participants categorizing complications as avoidable in 54% of the cases, compared with 23% of the cases before the structured format was implemented.<sup>10</sup> The greater recognition of avoidable adverse events led to system improvements aimed at prevention.

Three studies described TBMM-associated quality improvement initiatives (Table 3).<sup>11,15,16</sup> Stanford et al<sup>13</sup> reported that the establishment of monthly TBMMs as part of a quality improvement project helped their community hospital raise its rating from 1 star to 3 stars by the Society of Thoracic Surgery, which they attributed to improved adherence to evidence-based best practices in cardiac surgery.

DISCUSSION

Despite the limited literature available, there are still potential best practices suggested by these studies that could aid the implementation of perioperative TBMMs. Before the conference, multiple studies discussed taking structured approaches to event analysis, which allowed for a more detailed and robust discussion at the conference. Which structured approach was utilized varied with the institution, but having a robust and structured investigation led to a perceived richer discussion. In the conference itself, standardization of TBMM presentations and procedures was reported to facilitate the identification of a more comprehensive array of factors that may have contributed to an adverse event, as well as ensure that conferences met their educational goals while creating a psychologically safe space for discussion. Conference organizers used several tactics to create this standardization of presentations, such as presentation slide templates, consistent speakers or moderators, presentation preparation assistance by quality and safety experts, and explicit statements that conferences are not for assigning individual blame. After the conference, presenting clear action items with documented follow-up allowed participants to feel that the discussion accomplished a goal and improved patient care and system functioning. The successful conferences tended to close the loop with participants on these follow-up items either at the beginning of the next conference or by email or health system intranet messages.

The data from the studies examined in this review provide evidence of the potential benefits of perioperative TBMMs and can be used to help guide institutions in implementing their own perioperative TBMMs. The reported benefits of TBMMs include recognition of avoidable adverse events, quality improvements associated with adherence to evidence-based best practices, and promotion of core competencies established by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education.

TBMMs appear to have many theoretical advantages over nonmultidisciplinary morbidity and mortality conferences. Although no robust evidence of these advantages has been obtained yet (and keeping in mind the role of publication bias in making unsuccessful TBMMs less likely to be reported in the literature), the indirect evidence that is available suggests that the inclusion of multiple disciplines contributed to the success of the TBMMs by facilitating accountability, identification of solutions to complex problems, dissemination of feedback to all perioperative staff, and follow-up on action items. The conclusions in this review are limited by the fact that the 6 studies describing TBMM implementation were all single-center studies, either describing programs or using unadjusted preimplementation and postimplementation trial designs. There remains significant space for research into the outcomes that can be impacted by TBMMs, in terms of patient care outcomes and educational outcomes. Future work can be done to understand barriers and facilitators to broader implementation of perioperative TBMMs and testing implementation science strategies and tools to leverage the facilitators and overcome the barriers. There is additionally a large space for work in understanding the impact of TBMMs on clinician education, both as trainees and as fully qualified clinicians, and patient safety metrics, which are the ultimate goals of any morbidity and mortality conference.

Another limitation of this meta-analysis is that the studies were all identified in the traditional medical literature. While the most academic analyses of the implementation of TBMMs will be found in these databases of peer-reviewed medical literature, there are likely many hospitals that have experience with TBMMs that have not published their experiences in this literature base, despite having useful lessons to share. Future work could be done in querying the gray literature on this topic—searching for blog posts, videos, or program websites—or in surveys of perioperative clinicians to understand their experiences with TBMMs that are not captured in these 6 studies.

While this review focused on the perioperative space, which has unique features in healthcare, there is a body of literature around TBMMs in other areas of medicine, for example, those described in reports from internal medicine,<sup>3</sup> pediatric intensive care,<sup>6</sup> and emergency medicine,<sup>7</sup> among others. The studies in these diverse contexts implemented clear structures of activities before, during, and after the conference. While the exact details differ between studies and contexts, they generally identify similar characteristics of successful conferences, including formal guidelines for event identification and analysis, standardization of presentations with trained moderators, and clear follow-up items, including integration with other departmental and hospital quality improvement groups. These TBMMs were associated with increased numbers of successful quality improvement projects,<sup>6</sup> perceived improvement in clinical care,<sup>7</sup> and improved educational outcomes.<sup>3</sup> Institutions seeking to design and implement perioperative TBMMs should draw on the literature around TBMMs in other healthcare spaces in addition to the literature from the perioperative space reviewed above.

CONCLUSION

Clinical work in the perioperative space involves tight teamwork among surgeons, anesthesiologists, operating room nurses, and others. Discussion of adverse events in this space would benefit from the introduction of TBMMs, which have the potential to improve education for trainees and broaden the range of ideas identified that could improve the perioperative system and prevent future similar accidents. The successful TBMMs described here used structured formats for activities before, during, and after the conference to ensure that adverse events were fully investigated, discussions were team-based, action items were generated, and follow-up was ensured. The characteristics of TBMMs identified in this review and the promising findings of the studies suggest possible elements to be incorporated in TBMM design and areas for evaluation by health systems aiming to improve team communication and perioperative safety.

1. True or False: According to the study, TBMM members reported that participation in the TBMM increased their diagnostic and surgical skills.
  - a. True
  - b. False
2. What was the percentage of attributive preoperative strategy failures?
  - a. 24%
  - b. 46%
  - c. 58%
  - d. 72%
3. How many studies describe TBMM investigations of adverse events aimed at identifying contributing factors?
  - a. 3
  - b. 4
  - c. 5
  - d. 6
4. TBMM participants categorized complications as avoidable in how many cases after a structured format was implemented?
  - a. 37%
  - b. 45%
  - c. 54%
  - d. 63%
5. How many cases were deemed avoidable before a structured format was implemented?
  - a. 23%
  - b. 34%
  - c. 45%
  - d. 54%
6. The reported benefits of TBMMs include:
  - a. Recognition of avoidable adverse events
  - b. Quality improvements associated with adherence to evidence-based best practices
  - c. Promotion of core competencies
  - d. All of the above
7. According to the studies reviewed, TBMMs are associated with:
  - a. Increased numbers of successful quality improvement projects
  - b. Perceived improvement in clinical care
  - c. Improved educational outcomes
  - d. All of the above
8. In one of the studies referenced for this review, it was found that ___ of surgical technique attributed to failure.
  - a. 47%
