vation commission and the approvals have been forwarded to Washington for consummation of the deal. The state conservation department believes that the 832 acres for which purchase has been recommended is about one-fourth or one-fifth of the land ultimately to be included in the controlled hunting and game man-agement area. When other options are secured and exercised, it is expected that the area will embrace between 3000 and 4000 acres. Title to Seven Gables was held by George McArthur, L. B. McArthur, J. B. Dean, Harry J. Bond and the N. N. Rouse estate of Mason. The other five parcels approved for pur-chase are those offered by Charles Curtis, Spencer Galloway, Mrs. Dan Ohlinger, Fred and Arthur Kruse and Oscar Mull. All of the land is contiguous.

Federal Funds Used In making the land purchase the federal government pays 75 per cent of the cost while the state conservation department provides the balance from state funds. Federal funds are secured through special taxes on firearms and ammunition. Under the allotment schedule Michigan will receive approximately $128,000 from federal funds during the current fiscal year. Besides the Dansville project, Michigan has purchased and is managing the Rose Lake experiment station in Clinton county, a Tuscola project and others in Barry, Gratiot, Saginaw and Cass counties. As explained by R. D. Burroughs of the game division of the state conservation department, "Through the provisions of the Pittman-Robertson measure a nation-wide program of wildlife restoration will be made possible. It is generally recognized that some of our most important species of game animals have losing ground. Natural habitats have been destroyed through drainage, pollution, deforestation and grazing. "The law limits and defines the kind of projects which will be accepted. There are three types of projects, purchase of and for wildlife rehabilitation, the development of newly acquired lands or lands already in public ownership to make them more suitable for wildlife, and practical research in wildlife management. "Game farms, nurseries and public hunting grounds are not acceptable to federal officials."

To Control Hunting Hunting, under control of conservation authorities, will be permitted on the Dansville project, although the area will be primarily for rehabilitation and management of wildlife, and for experimentation. In no sense is it to be a public hunting area, state conservation officials point out. Prices paid for the land purchased near Dansville ranges from $10 to $15 per acre. None of it is improved. Only the poorest agricultural land in the area was approved for initial purchase. Under the terms of the federal law no valuable agricultural land is to be purchased or managed. No compulsion was exercised in the purchase or sale of lands in the Dansville project. As funds become available and as other lands in the area are offered purchasing will be

Court House Damaged By Sunday Windstorm

What at first appeared to be a case of Irish sabotage was found to be the natural result of Sunday's windstorm. When clerks reported at the court house Monday morning they found a brick and shattered glass in the rotunda under the skylights. Inasmuch as the skylight covers the third floor it was quite plain that no one had heaved a brick from the street, and sheriff's officers thought it far-fetched that anyone would toss a brick from a speeding plane. Investigation disclosed that the brick was jarred loose from the cupola which houses the clock. The high wind Sunday afternoon loosened the brick. Williamston was without electricity Saturday night when Detroit Edison transmission lines were damaged. Many buildings in Livingston county were damaged by the wind which reached hurricane proportions in some Buy your birthday and commencement places.

Vermontville Syrup

Production of Vermontville maple syrup has leaped from 500 waste time plastering on cosmetics; gallons five years ago to 8000 gallons this year. Phenomenal, isn't it? Clever promotion of market and trade facilities is nothing new, although it is comparatively new among Michigan's smaller towns. The Ferris Institute a capella choir did an excellent ambassadorial job on its recent tour. It was a fine and in spiring group which visited Mason and other towns. Ferris students, at least the selected ones who sing in the chorus, give the impression of being serious-minded young men and women without the sophistication of students at many bigger colleges. They look like boys and girls who know what life is all about and are willing to buckle down to get something out of it. They know how to use their time at Ferris; they don't fritter away their opportunities.

(Associated Newspapers,) WNU Service, ME summer after Charlie Reynolds graduated from college I in a loud voice, which I disliked gothim a job as reporter on the Star, I'd been with the Star almost four years, and done pretty well, if I do say so, hence when I | himself-always being willing to listold the boss Charlie was my friend and a good man, it got him the position.

Jobs were scarce that year and Charlie was lucky, though he didn't seem to realize it. I felt a sort of | to get places-like Weatherbee is." responsibility for the kid because our parents were close friends, and I'd made his mother a half promise that I'd keep my eye on him when he came to the city.

Before a month had passed he had me worrying. It appeared that the mania for thinking up ideas and trying to put them into execution that had characterized him as a boy had become more pronounced with maturity. But he was smart and I thought maybe he'd get by if he kept his mouth shut.

"Just keep those grand ideas to yourself," I told him, "and you'll get along all right."

He looked at me sarcastically. "What good are ideas if you keep them to yourself?" he asked, "What if Edison and Fulton and Marconi and all the others had felt that way?'

"You're crazy!" I grinned. "That," said Charlie, "was what they told Fulton." He looked thoughtful and dreamy. I knew that look. It didn't help my worrying

"Listen," I said, "if you've gotta tell your ideas to any one, tell 'em to me.'

"You?" he said scornfully. are you? I'm going to tell 'em where they'll do some good." I blushed. "All right," I said, "if you want to make a fool of yourself, go ahead. But when they throw you out on your ear, don't come bellyaching to me."

He snorted and started away, and I ran after him. "Listen," I said,
"don't get sore. Ideas are all right, but they're no good unless you're smart. This isn't any time to go telling the boss you've got an idea that'll jack up his profits. You've only been on the Star a month, and there's a mile-long line waiting for your job.'

He looked at me a minute, then nodded. "All right," he said, "I'll wait awhile, but ideas aren't any good if you keep them to yourself.' The brooding look was still in his eyes and I knew my talk hadn't done much good. It made me feel bad, because Charlie and I had been friends since we were kids. When we were youngsters I was always getting him out of jams in which he had involved himself because of his ideas.

The Star was one of a chain of large papers owned by a man named Weatherbee. had started out with nothing and gone places in the journalistic world, and his success was due chiefly to ruthlessness and lack of feeling as far as his staffs were concerned. In Season's Opener

Bob Anderson poled out a triple but good right-hander. Vincent Owen was stranded when Lamb made a play on Mike Simone's hard also helped out in the hitting department. John Kobs had no trouble on Haviland reached first on Murray's the mound for East Lansing and tossed them in. The Sycamores moundsmen who relieved Kobs to make a total of eight hits.

In the first inning East Lansing took advantage of Mason's wildness in the field and Jean Anderson's wildness on the mound to score 10 runs on one hit. Anderson was relieved by Snow who retired the side. Mason again played the same brand of ball in the second and third innings but tightened the defense and started playing heads-up ball the rest of the game. Mason's runs came in the third and fifth innings, the Sycamores gathering one in the third and three in the fifth.

At the plate T. J. Lang led the way for Mason with a double and a it. Of course, he would probably triple. Holbrook led the 10-hit Trojan feel pretty distressed at first, but attack with two hits, one going for extra bases.

The totals for East Lansing were 21 runs, 10 hits and no errors. Mason had 4 runs, 8 hits and 8 errors. Anderson, Snow, Lang and Michitsch worked on the mound for Mason.

Coach Gilson Pearsall of the Mason nigh school track team is downcast because of a shortage of sprinters. He has distance men and vaulters good enough to win points in any kind of ordinary competition but his team lacks balance in that no mercuryfooted youths have yet appeared for the dashes.

Dewey Doane is fast despite his outh and will be out in front some of the time this year and a lot of the time next year, Pearsall believes.

Monster Tank Launched

Here is the first of the great new fleet of monster M-3 medlum (28 ton) tanks to be delivered by Chrysier Corporation to the United States Army as part of its contribution to the National Defense Program. Before the year ends hundreds more like this one will be coming off the assembly lines to strengthen America's mechanized forces. This tank, the most powerful weapon of its type in the world-literally a rolling fortress-was turned over to Major General Charles | 10,000 workers will be employed here.

JANET MAKES A DECISION

By JOYCE TEMPLE (McClure Syndicate-WNU Service,)

A T LAST Janet Conrad came to a decision. With a sigh of relief she jumped up and started afternoon. May I see you seven o'clock? Something important to tell you. Jack."

She knew what the something important meant and at last she had reached her decision. She was glad too for Jack's frequent visits had caused her anxiety. She had always looked forward to them and at the same time she had dreaded them. He was so irresistibly boyish in his manner and so flatteringly infatuated that she had always felt the

If he had proposed to her without having given her the chance to reflect and think it over she would have probably fallen for him on the spot, but this way-thank goodness he had warned her. Now she had herself well in hand and it would be easy to resist his pleading.

She wondered how he would take that was natural. Nobody liked getting turned down. She would be as gentle and considerate as possible. Her thoughts ran along as she got into the little pink dress. When Jack saw her a few minutes later he gasped involuntarily, but much to her chagrin he did not propose. And you simply can't say "no" to a man who has not said "will you?" He merely remarked after greetings were over:

"Say, I know a road by the river. I've always wanted to explore it. Shall we take a little spin in the car?"

Janet was slightly irritated. However, there was nothing she could do but consent to the ride, so they got into the little waiting car and were soon hurrying along the highway. The river road was several miles out of town and by the time they reached it dusk had crept off into the woods and had given the world over to the moon. Janet had no idea how long they had been driving when Jack stopped the car.

"Now it's coming," she thought with a little shiver. "He's going to propose right here and now. What shall I say? Goodness, I wish it were

But he did nothing of the sort. He said nothing, not a word. He simply took her in his arms and she felt his gentle kisses. She was hypnotized. There was something electrical. magnetic about his touch and her mind whirled around in a chaos of thought. "If only he hadn't brought me here. Thank goodness, he brought me here."

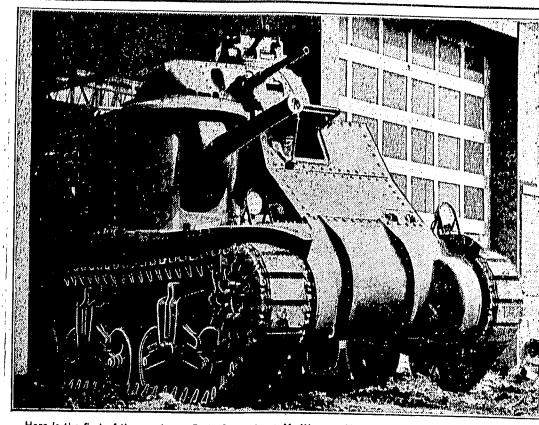

After awhile he spoke. "It'll be tough sledding at first, honey, but we'll get along."

"Who cares about tough sledding as long as we're together!" She heard herself saying the words, but still she could not believe her own ears. Then this new Janet said something else with a little lilting laugh: "Jack, I was beginning to be so afraid you wouldn't propose. You took so long to get to

As a matter of fact he never did actually get to it, but neither one realized it and just at that second the old dead Janet raised up her head for a last laugh as she chanted derisively: "Little trick nature

A LESSON IN LOVE

By MEREDITH SCHOLL Associated Newspapers, WNU Service.

THROUGH the screen door Tony saw Elinor leaning against the veranda post. Her back was to him and she was looking up at the moon. He glanced about furtively; the room was empty. Ruth and Ted had gone off somewhere. He turned, opened the door noiselessly and stepped out.

She didn't move, not even when he was directly behind her, not even when he leaned over and kissed her neck. She merely said, scarcely breathing the words: "Oh, Ted! Please.'

Tony's heart seemed to stand still. Ted! She had called him Ted! She had thought it was Ted who had kissed her. She had acted as if-as if she hadn't minded.

Ugly thoughts flooded Tony's mind and left him cold and trembling. He turned, went back through the door, paused once to glance over his shoulder and saw that Elinor was still standing as he had left her.

Alone in his room he sat down to think. The incident had opened his eyes, had explained many things. Had explained, for example, why Elinor had been acting strange of late.
No, not of late. Only since a few days after Ted and Ruth arrived. She had fallen in love with Ted! He had made love to her, and neither of them had the courage to tell him. That was underhanded for you all right. Engaged to a girl, and she lets another man make love to her right under your nose.

The irony of it made him bitter. He had been fool enough to believe that Elinor's uneasiness was caused by the fact that he had been displaying interest in Ruth. Could you beat it? He had been conceited enough to think that Elinor was actually jealous. Why, he'd actually been attentive to Ruth because it pleased his ego to feel that he had enough power over a woman to upset her emotions. And all the while she had been laughing at him, playing up to Ted.

Tony set about packing his bags. Unadmittedly it was pride that provoked the decision to go away. He didn't have the courage to face the crowd again, to admit that he had been played for a sucker.

He found the lower floor of the Dixon's summer cottage vacant. He paused in the living room, considering writing a note to explain to Mrs. Dixon his sudden decision to leave: thought better of it, and went Unchallenged he rolled his roadster down the drive, let out the clutch when the machine reached the highway and went roaring away into the night.

Tony drove till nearly dawn. His thoughts were chaotic, confused, bordering on panic. With each passing mile the realization of the real depth of his love for Elinor, of the great emptiness caused by knowledge of her deception, became more Exhausted, at last he drew up before a tiny vine-covered inn, roused a sleepy clerk and engaged a room. But sleep would not come. He lay awake until long after the sun had risen, reviewing each hour of the days that had passed since Ted and Ruth had arrived at the camp. Thoughts of Elinor holding secret rendezvous with the handsome Ted Fisher tortured him. It was unbelievable, beyond comprehension that Elinor, in whom he had put his trust and faith and love, had betrayed him.

Suddenly he sat bolt upright in bed. A startling thought occurred to him. Perhaps it was his fault! Perhaps he was to blame! Perhaps his attentions to Ruth had driven Elinor to retaliate. For the first time in his life, Tony Colbert faced a situation that involved his own feelings, honestly. Was it any more right for him to practice deception than for Elinor, he asked himself? After a while he lay back and closed his eyes. Sleep came at last. And his last waking thought was an admission of wrongdoing and a feeling of guilt.

Toward mid-afternoon he awoke. Dressing, he went over carefully the plan that had half taken form in his mind the night before. It took courage and suppression of pride to reach his decision. But eventually the battle was won. When he descended the stairs there was nothing but grim resolve written in his Darkness had fallen when Tony once more drove along the drive of the Dixon summer cottage. Through the trees he could see lights, and the strains of radio music came to him on the still night air. He parked his roadster in the garage and made his way along the flagstone walk that led under the maple trees.

At the foot of the veranda steps he paused. A figure was outlined against the lights of the room beyond. Tony's heart began to pound. He set down his bag and came slowly up the steps. A board creaked beneath his foot and the figure whirled. It was Elinor.

"Tony!" A gasp escaped her lips She looked frightened. Tony came resolutely across the veranda. His hands gripped her

"Tony, I - I - thought - I was "Afraid of what?" he asked. She hesitated, looked deeply into his eyes. "I was afraid you wouldn't come back. Tony, do you love me?"

"Do you think I would have come back if I didn't-after last night?" He heard her draw in her breath with a peculiar hissing sound.

"Tony—I—I knew it was you."
"You knew?" She nodded dumbly, on the verge of tears. "I was jealous, Tony, dreadfully jealous. Of you and Ruth And when I heard you come up behind me last night I decided to-to try and pay you back a little. Oh, it was mean and horrible of me. But that's why I said what I did.

Brakes on runaway prices are to be applied at Washington through a special administration headed by Leon Henderson, the federal economist who accurately foresaw the "recession" of 1937. And at the same time a price ceiling is contemplated, a price floor has been ordered for some food products-pork, butter, eggs and chickens.

The net result should be more money in the farmer's pocket. Consumption of food is not static; it does not remain stationary.

The federal stamp plan for marketing of surplus food commodities this surplus system has been put into

Studies by the American Institute of Food Distribution reveal sharp variations in consumption by income groups. As income of the "submerg-Alva A. Opdyke, Battery A, 51st ed third" increases, total food con-spending is inflated.

Meats, for instance, register the highest percentage of price rise-from an index of 68.4 in February, 1940, to 83.6 in February, 1941. But this is an exception. Foods generally have gone up only 6 points from March, 1940 to March,

Surplus, Shortage While surplus corn, estimated at 700 million bushels, can be converted into profits by using it as feed for hogs under a better price for pork products, a possible shortage is in sight for dairy products, meats, poultry and eggs and some fruits and vegetables.

Demand for these products comes from both Britain and from rising domestic consumption due to higher industrial pay rolls. The government, through its surplus marketing administration, will bolster prices in the above group by going into the commodity market and buying up supplies in an orderly fashion. Supplies could be transferred to the British, Chinese or Greeks under price profiteering.

Will it work? Both the consumer and the farmer stand to benefit if prices can be stabilized and if disastrous inflation can be avoided.

some southern states is pathetically

While these figures may seen dull to the consumer, who thinks usually in terms of cost of living, they are important to the Michigan farmer.

Price-pegging of certain food commodities at profitable production levels, accumulation of food reserves to tabilize consumer prices (and prevent speculative profiteering by the middlemen), and continuation of federal acreage restriction payments and parity payments all spell one thing: Better times for 830,000 people in Michigan. The farmer, faced with prospect of good crops in 1941, is due to get a fairer share of the national income. Such is the picture in April.

which the sufferer may do for him. self, often with good effect. A physical examination is nevertheless advisable to determine the extent of the malady and to permit the institution of early measures for its control.

Nevertheless, many persons past 40 who are troubled with occasional stiffness and pain at the back of the neck and in the shoulder and arms obtain considerable relief through the application of heat in its several forms, through gentle massage and rest of the affected part. Exposure to the rays of an ordinary infra-red ray lamp for about 20 minutes, or to the heat of a water bottle or steaming towels, should be followed by a massage of the area.

If the trouble is due chiefly to nervous tension and muscle spasm, manipulation will produce relaxation and a subsiding of pain. In other cases, relief is obtained by a cloth halter beneath the chin which stretches the neck muscles to relieve spasm. Occasionally a "click' will signal the cessation of the pain and discomfort. Some sufferers are familiar with faint symptoms which signal to onset of an attack and are able to prevent it by lowering the head to the level of the knees, thus stretching the muscles and tissues in the neck and upper back. Persons who are accustomed to long hours of work at high tension seem particularly susceptible to this form of pain and have found that rest periods scattered through the day generally forestall an attack. To relax in a quiet room with some form of heat at the back of the neck brings instant relief to number of sufferers. As was stressed in yesterday's article, arthritis even in its mildest thorough physical examination, including X-ray photographs of the spine, are essential to disclose the extent of involvement and to indicate the most promising form of treatment.

THE NINTH ROUND

By RICHARD II, WILKINSON (Associated Newspapers.) WNU Service.

((ILKHAT" Fallon tapped Slugger Schultz's hairy chest with a perfectly manicured forefinger. "In the sixth," he said, "you go to Now, don't forget it. In the

From across the room, Dinkey Mosely said: "Make it the tenth, Silkhat. Them suckers will think Slugger's a sissy if he lays down in the sixth."

"Yeah," said Slugger, "make it the tenth. I nin't no sissy." Silkhat considered a moment. "All right. Make it the tenth." He thrust forward his jaw belligerently. "But don't get no fancy ideas about this. You take the full count and a couple to boot."

"O. K.," said Slugger. "For a hundred grand I'd sleep for a

"How about me?" said Slugger. "Yeah," said Dinkey, "you're smart, too. Yeah."

Slugger didn't like the sound of Dinkey's voice and he glowered. Silkhat stepped quickly into the "Cut it!" he snapped. "We're all smart, and that goes for the three of us, equal." He grinned. "Tomorrow night at this time, boys, we'll all be in the dough."

Which remark eased the tension and produced a trio of pleasant expressions. However, both Slugger and Dinkey knew that the idea was really Silkhat's. Silkhat was a promoter, a gambler, a man with brains. It was he who had found Slugger in a barroom on First street. At the moment, Slugger was standing above a giant of a man whom he had just sledge-hammered into unconsciousness for some minor of-Tense. Watching from the shadows near the door, Silkhat had observed Slugger's thick biceps, his bulletlike, almost neckless head. And in that instant the great idea was

The fight game wasn't what it used to be, but there were still plenty who would pay a buck or so to see a bull like Slugger sledge-hammer giants into unconsciousness. A year passed and Slugger, under Silkhat's guidance, and having acquired some slight knowledge in the art of pugilism, had battered his way into a dim sort of prominence. Another year, and only one man stood be- round. One more to go, and then it tween him and a crack at cham-pion Dynamite Dunn. Dynamite, ter of the ring the fighters were battoo, had come up from the ranks, tling furiously. Dynamite was makbut his career, begun earlier, hadn't ing a desperate effort to get in his He had slipped back twice in his climb; Slugger had come steadily upward, each rung of the ladder being represented by a knockout.

And now he stood on the threshold with the championship fight less than 24 hours away, and victory practically assured. Odds were 10 to 1 in favor of the Slugger. Fight fans and sports writers had seen him in action, and few there were who doubted that Dynamite Dunn's championship days were doomed.

Which was exactly the situation as farsighted Silkhat Fallon had planned it. Aided by Dinkey and a small army of underlings, Silkhat began quietly to take up the Slugger money. Every cent he and Dinkey and Slugger could scrape together was bet on the supposedly doomed Dynamite. It would be a clean-up. There'd be at least three hundred grand to split three ways and another fifty for the small fry of underlings. Oh, it was a neat set-up, a sure-fire proposition. Silkhat issued his final instructions to Slugger, "Make this look like the real thing, Slugger. Hit Dynamite and hit him hard-but not quite hard enough. And in the tenth, when you take it on the button, make sure it's enough of a blow to give you a jolt. Don't lay there like a log. Try to get up a couple of times, but be sure and flop back again. If them suckers should suspect this was a set-up we'd be mobbed."

Slugger nodded. "I gotcha," he said. "I'll hit him all right. I know how much that jigger can take without going down. I'll look real enough."

Silkhat and Dinkey were in Slugger's corner. They looked out at the crowd of fight fans and exchanged pleased and satisfied glances. They gazed across at Dynamite Dunn, ugly to look at, glowering at them, champing at the bit, in a few minutes. full of confidence, resentful of the attitude of the fight fans and eager to show them they were wrong in their estimate of him. Which was excellent; exactly as Silkhat had planned it.

The referee called the combatants into the ring. A bell sounded. The pugilists stepped forward. A roar went up. Silkhat Fallon produced a cigar, bit off its end. His pig-like eyes were on Slugger. Slugger was following instructions. He was hitting hard, but not too hard. It looked genuine.

The round ended. It was a good round. The fans were satisfied. The second followed, the third, fourth, fifth and sixth. One was a repetition of that which preceded it. Both fighters were going strong. Dynamite Dunn was revengeful. It was plain he was out to re-establish himself, to reclaim the faith and recognition of the sports world. Which was fine. Splendid. Silkhat threw away his unlighted cigar and produced another, his fourth. A warm feeling of benignness toward Slugger permeated his being. Slugger was following instructions. Slugger was doing all right. It looked like the real thing. Now in the tenth if he could only go to sleep in a way that would dispel any possible trace of suspi-

The crowd was howling. Up to now it was Slugger's fight. He had the edge. Which was as it should be, because the odds were on him. Only a lucky punch on Dynamite's part could turn the tide of battle. And that wasn't at all likely. Silkhat produced his sixth cigar and bit off its end. It was the ninth lucky punch. Silkhat clamped down on his cigar-and then his jaw fell open. He stared, and a sickening feeling of horror surged through him. About his ears the air vibrated with the sudden roars and yells of

The worst had happened. Slugger Schultz had stepped in and driven a left hook to Dynamite's jaw. And Dynamite had gone down like a log. The blow was unexpected, but it looked genuine. The referee raised his hand and hegan to count. "One

The cigar fell from Silkhat's parted lips, ---ten!''

The referee lifted Slugger's arm high above his head. Glassy-eyed, Silkhat slumped back, his brain a chaotic whirlwind, but out of the chaos came a vision. The vision was that of Dynamite Dunn lying prone on the canvas. Dynamite Dunn rolling over so that he faced Silkhat, Dynamite Dunn opening one eye and closing it again in an unmistakable wink.

The girls' tennis team was organized last week and is being coached by Miss Dana Mae Bartan, a student teacher from Michigan State college under the supervision of Miss Helen Wilkie. Girls who are out for this sport are Corline Kauffman, Billie Mac Field, Yvonne Surateaux, Betty Eifert, Dorothy Lamphere, Margaret Munger, Andrey Slagh, Lenore Smith, Ada Green, Lillian Beebe, Leonie Hamlin and Roberta Bullen. A tennis match is scheduled with Stockbridge on May 8, but there is a possibility that the girls will have a match before that date.

A band concert will be given by the school band in the auditorium Friday at 8:00 under the direction of Joseph Wyman. The junior class is planning to have a party after the concert. Entertainment will consist of dancing and games. Refreshments will be served.

The boys' golf team held its first practice Monday afternoon. The team is being coached by Gordon Dawson The four boys who are on the golf team are Jack Shaffer, Jim Inghram, Howard Slagh and Bob Eggers.

The annual physical education demonstration was held at school on Tuesday evening. Miss Helen Wilkie and Mr. Gilson Pearsall were in charge of the occasion.

The state chorus festival is being of Pioneer, Ohio. held in Ann Arbor on Saturday and the Mason chorus is planning to participate. The members will leave Mason early Saturday morning so that they will be in Ann Arbor in time to sing at 8:00 o'clock. Contrary to the usual procedure, the groups will sing several mass numbers this year with a guest conductor. This is very beneficial and helps to improve the various organizations. The chorus is also planning to present a program for the student body on Monday morning at 8:45. The girls' octet will sing a number also.

The orchestra received a second division rating at the state festival last Saturday at East Lansing. A general assembly was Wednesday at 12:45 in which F.F.A. boys gave a program.

How much land is there available for farm crops in the United States? According to the federal Soil Conservation Service, there is about 415 million acres of cropland area in the country of which 342 million can be classed as good. Actually there are only about 62 million acres now in crops where the land is good and also safe from injurious erosion. Higher Water Levels

Inland lake levels in north central Michigan will be almost a foot higher this year than cottage owners saw them last season, it appears now from records maintained by the conservation departments records maintained by the conservation of the Maynard mature Holvices for Mr. Dalton were held at the Gorsline Bros chapel in Williamston on Sunday. Survivors are a wife grade Holstein in the herd of Lesse. Michigan will be almost a foot higher ground water fluctuations.

Low point of the ground water level reached in March was a foot above the level on the corresponding date in 1940 and two hundredths above the seven year average. The higher level, according to O. F. Poindexter who keeps the records, is due largely to the above-normal rainfall last

While inland lake levels vary with the water table, no definite correlation between stream levels and levels has not yet been established. Ground water levels are determined by averaging the periodic checks made by CCC workers of approximately 100 special wells in Roscommon, Crawford, Otsego, Kal-kaska, Missaukee, Cheboygan, Pres-que Isle and Montmorency counties.

Our New Equipment For Our Growing Cleaning Plant

Five years ago when we took over the management of the Band Box Cleaners in Mason our equipment was rather meager in comparison with that of our present plant. Foreseeing possibilities of growth resulting from the performance of efficient service and quality workmanship, we have constantly added to that equipment.

Now, from that small beginning, we have built up one of the most modern and efficient cleaning plants in the state. Pictured above is the new Meteor Band Box cleaning plant that went into service this week. With it we are able to clean more thoroughly and with a minimum of wear to the garments. We invite the people of Mason to come in and inspect our modern plant and to get acquainted with the routine through which garments follow in the process of being cleaned.

Our ambition of five years ago is realized. We are now equipped to give the best possible service.

Open-plf mine in Northern Michigan. Only one state produces more iron ore. It costs about $4.36 to mine and deliver a ton of ore to the mills.

THE Upper Peninsula of Michigan is ribbed with hills of iron. During the World War period, production of Michigan iron ore reached a peak of 19 million tons a year, and to meet present defense needs it is rapidly climbing again.

Down the Lakes moves an endless chain of boats, carrying iron ore to the blast furnaces and steel mills. And out of the mills, working now at utmost capacity, pours the monster tonnage of forgings, plates and castings required for warships, guns, tanks and planes. Swift, sure telephone service links mine to dock ship to shore - mill to market. It reduces delays and

Some of the great mills are located in Michigan, turning out high-quality steel for structural uses, automobile engines, parts and bodies, as well as for defense.
