

Henry Wallace Talks About Corn Former Vice-President Visits Here

On a Mason front porch Monday afternoon a former vice-president of the United States and an old friend visited. Henry A. Wallace was the vice-president. Perry Greeley Holden was the old friend. He's 90. The front porch was that of the E. R. Lilly nursing home, State and Park.

The man who served in the first 2 Franklin D. Roosevelt cabinets as secretary of agriculture and in the third as vice-president made no mention of politics. He said nothing about plowing under cotton or liquidating little pigs. He said nothing of placing a quart of milk daily on every Hotentot's front stoop. He made no mention of the ever-normal granary, or even the soil bank. He talked about corn and a new book of which he is co-author, telling the dramatic history of corn.

Wallace came with no fanfare or escort. He doesn't look and he doesn't act like what has become accepted as a politician type. He's friendly, approachable, easy to meet.

Would he spare a few minutes for a country newspaperman? Sure. Would he consent to have his picture taken by the country newspaperman? Certainly. Would he stand for another shot? Why that's the way Washington photographers act; just one more.

Did he remember during the third term campaign the Wallace caravan by-passing Mason en route from Jackson to Lansing? He didn't. Did he run across any better farming country or see better crops than in Ingham county? Hardly.

From there on the talk was about corn the crop and Corn the book.

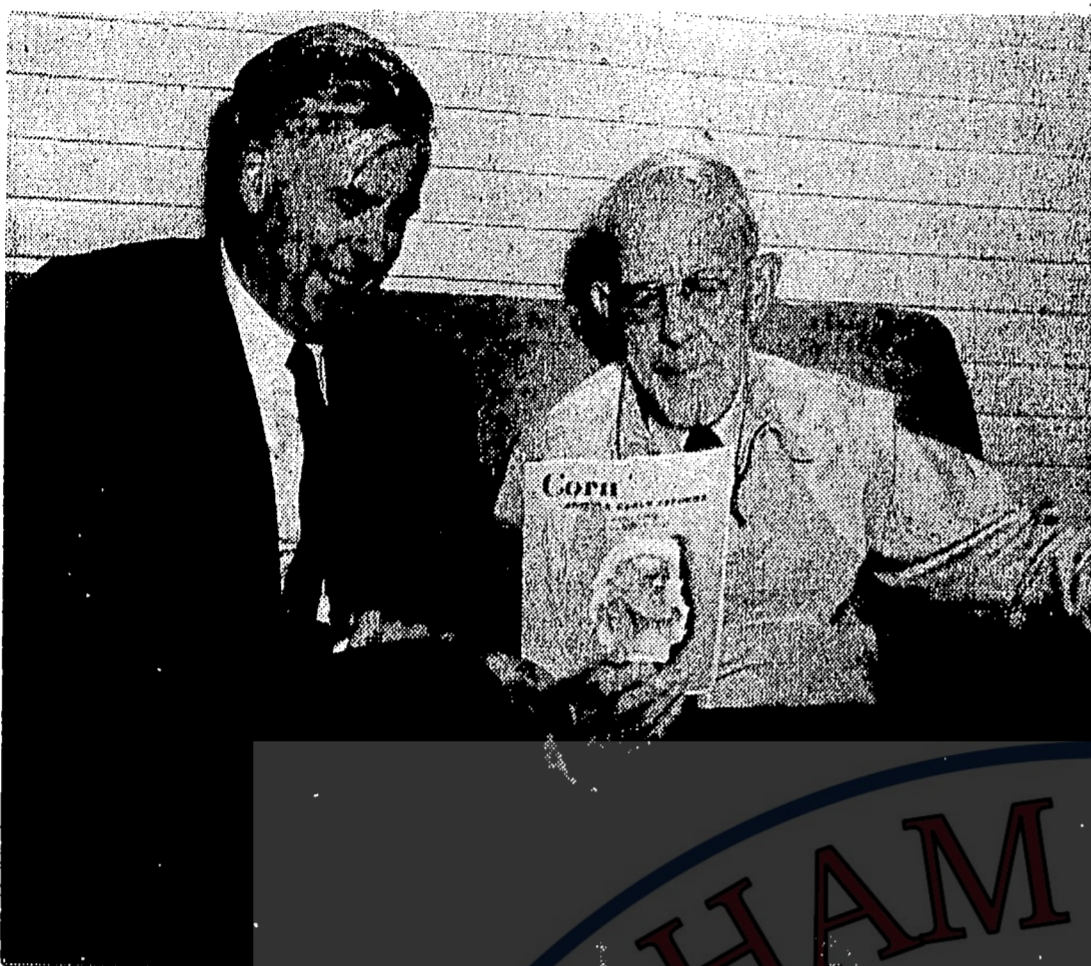

After history of the depression and FDR and farm problems are written and rewritten, after the depression and the recession have been forgotten, Henry Wallace will be remembered and honored for his part in developing hybrid corn, for his pioneer work in making 2 ears of corn grow where one grew before, for making it possible to raise corn where it never grew before.

On August 17 the Michigan State University Press is bringing out the book Corn. Written by Wallace and Dr. William L. Brown, cytogeneticist with the Pioneer Corn Co. of Johnston, Iowa, it tells the story of corn and its early fathers.

Contrary to popular conception, the history of corn is fascinating, varied and even dramatic," the book jacket reads. "As we know it, the history of corn can be traced from a wild grass on the shores of a Mexican lake 60 millennia ago to the year 1955, when modern hybrid corn added $60 million dollars to the net income of Western Europe let alone a billion dollars to that of the United States."

Wallace and Holden are 2 of the scientists in the long line stretching back to Charles Darwin and the monk Gregor Mendel who have developed corn to nourish in one way or another millions and millions of people. They are proud of their part in the dramatic development of hybrid corn. They have a right to be. And Michigan State University is credited with major help in the drama.

"Great developments don't come all at once, and are not usually brought forth by one man," explained Wallace. "That has been true with hybrid corn. Study and experiments by Darwin and Mendel stirred interest in cross and self fertilization. During the mid-1870's as a member of the Michigan State Botany staff William J. Beal read Darwin's new book about crossing 2 samples of one variety to produce an offspring with greater vigor than that of either parent. Beal wrote Darwin that he would try the experiment with corn. Darwin wrote back to encourage Beal. In 1887 Beal began his experiments with corn. Hybridiza-

MASON WAS THE MEETING PLACE for 2 famous men Monday. Henry A. Wallace, former vice-president of the United States and secretary of agriculture, came far out of his way to visit Perry Greeley Holden, 90, now a Mason resident. Both men are known throughout the world for their contributions to agricultural science. (Ingham County News photo.)

tion by Beal resulted in increased yields of 53% the second year, an increase not resulting from a new variety but by increasing the vigor of the plant."

And then Holden and Wallace came in. Holden graduated from Michigan State in 1889. He studied under Professor Beal and learned how to cross inbred lines of corn to add vigor. He developed no corn more vigorous than himself. At 90 he's active mentally and physically. He's interested in agriculture, other sciences and just about everything else, including good music and even the fights on TV. He has been at the Lilly home since April.

Born in Dodge county, Minn., Holden lived in Cattaraugus county in New York for a while before the family came to Benzie county, Michigan. He was reared on a Benzie farm. He taught country school before and while attending Michigan State. He remarked Monday that he had bought his marriage license in Mason in 1892. After graduation from college he remained as a farm crops instructor until the year he married. His enthusiasm over agricultural science was infectious with his students.

In 1892 Holden left the faculty to farm for himself. He taught at Benzie college and became a school superintendent and county school commissioner. In 1896 he went to the University of Illinois to found the first agronomy department in the United States. He organized farmers in the growing of better corn. He founded the first corn judging school and helped form the first farmers institute in Illinois.

At Illinois "by accident" he discovered a new twist to the Darwin theory. He crossed inbred lines of corn to increase yields. His discovery was regarded as heresy by his superiors and he left the university, to help sugar beet growers. Then he organized Punk Bros. Seed Co. to continue the scientific breeding of corn. In 1902 he went to Iowa State college to organize the agronomy and farm machinery departments and to set up short courses in corn. There he helped draft the bill to establish the nation's first agricultural extension department. Just 50 years ago, in 1906, he became head of the nation's first agricultural extension department. From 1912 to 1932 Holden was International Harvester's agricultural extension director. He helped revolutionize farming in the south by preaching diversification. He helped swing southern farmers away from the single crop of cotton.

Wallace and his father operated a seed firm in Iowa. The son accepted Holden's theories on inbreeding corn. He went ahead with development of hybrids, jeopardizing the firm's standing and its assets in experiments. But they worked and the gamble paid off.

Corn brought the paths of Wallace and Holden together. Wallace's path led to Washington as secretary of agriculture and as vice-president. Holden followed a path which introduced corn to Russia and to China and other far places in the world.

Those paths crossed again at Mason Monday. The men paused to discuss old times and mutual friends they had met along the way.

With Wallace on his trip to Mason was Douglas Neff of Leamington, Ontario. He's president of the North American Commercial Gladiolus Industry and owner of Noveta Gardens at Leamington. He and Wallace were on their way to Leamington from a plane trip to St. Charles, Minn. Neff has secured Wallace's interest in hybridizing gladiolus. Wallace now lives on his farm in New York, up near the Connecticut line.

On Monday and Tuesday a lot of wheat was cut. The moisture content was down. One Mason elevator took in 6 carloads of wheat from Tuesday's cutting. Then came overcast skies and some showers. Even when the rain ceased the humidity climbed.

Yields were running high and the wheat delivered to Mason elevators Tuesday and Wednesday was of top quality.

Prospects for resuming combining were far from bright Thursday morning. The weather report indicated continued overcast skies and showers Thursday night and through Friday.

What's needed is a week of dry weather.

Also scheduled for Monday night at the council chamber is a hearing on the special assessment roll covering the cost of the sanitary sewer in Ann street.

The trial was before Judge Louis E. Coash without a jury. Weldon claimed he was driving south on the trunkline and stopped for the light. Also driving south was Johnson. The Johnson car rammed the rear of Weldon's car. Weldon testified that he paid out about $1,000 in hospital and medical bills and for special braces and was unable to work for several weeks. He also testified that he may continue to suffer pain and incapacity because of the accident.

Sigler, Anderson & Carr represented Weldon in the suit. Reagh & Denfield represented Johnson.

At the MSU salvage yard on Farm Lane next Tuesday afternoon there will be an auction sale of bicycles. The 25 bicycles to be offered may be inspected from 8 to 5 Friday, Monday and Tuesday.

Official announcement of the sale is in the classified columns. In those columns are other bargain offers, too.

At a meeting Monday night the Aurelius town board appointed Mrs. Cecile DeCamp as township clerk. She will serve the remainder of the term to which her husband, Ray DeCamp, was elected.

Ray DeCamp had served the township as clerk for 28 years, and for 2 years before that was township treasurer. He lost his life on Wednesday of last week when he was crushed beneath a tractor.

Both open class and 4-H exhibits are expected to set new records, according to a report from the county extension office.

The Ingham fair opens Monday, August 13, and continues all the week. There will be a thrill show for the opener on Monday night and again for the finale Saturday night. Canadian Hell Drivers have been booked for both nights.

On Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights and Thursday afternoon there will be harness racing. There's a 4-H talent show scheduled for Friday night.

Supervisors Put OK on Grandstand Improvement

At Mason Wednesday afternoon members of 2 committees of the board of supervisors inspected the grandstand. They said they liked what they found, and they approved the $5,142 to cover the cost. Members of the county fair committee and the ways and means committee inspected the job.

For that sum the entire box section of the grandstand was rebuilt. A concrete block wall protects the boxes from the track. New flooring has been placed and the entire south section shored up. There were no footings under the old boxes. Gates Adams of Onondaga had the contract for the grandstand repairs.

Another new building will be ready for the fair this year. It is a pole barn erected for housing 4-H sheep.

Harry Spenny, secretary of the fair board, told members of the 2 committees that demand for space in exhibit tents and buildings is good. There will be a complete showing of farm implements, he said.

Builders Rush New Grade for State Highway

Two shifts are at work on the north end of the $2 million stretch of US-127 between Mason and Leslie.

The 2 shifts have been on the job for several weeks but it didn't attract much notice in town until this week when the base of operations was shifted to the north end of the big job. Bulldozers and Euclid wagons roar and rumble under portable lights until far into the night.

Big fills are being completed north of Columbia road. Muck taken out of an ancient swamp has been replaced with sand. There's another big fill across what was once part of the Frederick farm.

The bridge across Willow creek is partially decked. S. J. Groves & Sons Co., Inc. is the contractor for the grading, paving and small culverts and bridges. The contract price is $1,975,289.68.

Walter Toebe & Co., Lansing, has the contract for the new bridges across the Sycamore south of Tomlinson road. One bridge will carry the 4-lane divided highway with another the service road which will parallel the divided highway on the west.

Louis Garavaglia of Centerline has the contract for a bridge over Hunton creek near the Ingham-Jackson line. His bid was $768,177.19. That bridge is on the section of US-127 scheduled for letting this fall.

The present highway contract is only for the 7 miles between Mason and Hull road, north of Leslie. To be let this fall will be the final link between Hull road and the terminus north of Jackson. The new road will by-pass Leslie.

New 127 from Jackson north to Leslie and north 7 miles to Tomlinson road will be limited access.

Sycamore Fill Causes Dispute

Differences of opinion over beautification of the banks of the Sycamore resulted Wednesday when fill dirt was dumped next to the Maple street bridge.

Residents of the neighborhood protested. They claimed the dumping made the area unsightly and that a fill would cause additional damage in time of flood. The creek bottom between Maple and Ash now serves as a flood basin, residents said, and if water finds no reservoir there it is apt to reach their cellars.

Councilman Richard Morris said he first learned of the fill Wednesday night. He is chairman of the street committee. On Thursday morning he conferred with other city officials. He said he was told that the Junior Chamber of Commerce had asked for the fill so the river bottom could be leveled up and trees and grass planted.

The fill dirt came from excavation for curb and gutter on Lansing street. Along with the dirt were slabs of broken curb and gutter.

Morris said he ordered a halt on the fill until all parties in interest can be consulted. But the orders were not heeded. Dumping continued.

Lansing street, from Ash to South, is having curb and gutter built. The contract was awarded to E. E. Lockwood & Son, East Lansing.

BACK TO WORK Monday came Probate Judge John McClellan. He was stricken with a heart attack May 19 and has been in a Lansing hospital and at his home on College road making recovery. He is following a part-time schedule.

Crowds Flock To Opening of Auto Racing

Automobile races at the Lansing Speedway met with an enthusiastic reception.

Even though showers interfered, upwards of 3,000 attended the open house last Thursday night. More than 5,500 turned out for the first races Friday night although not all of them could get inside. On Sunday night, despite threats of rain, the paid admission went above 2,500, the management reported.

Friday night's modified stock car races brought a crowd which taxed the capacity of the grandstand and the parking lot. There were 4,100 paid adult admissions and between 600 and 800 children admissions with another 500 estimated to have wormed their way inside somehow, said R. G. Atwood, the proprietor and manager. Parking space was not adequate and parked cars lined College road and US-127.

The Sunday night crowd for the midjet racing was about 2,500. There was plenty of parking space for automobiles and there were seats enough in the stand to go around, Atwood said. He indicated that the grandstand and parking lot will handle most crowds.

Racing programs have been scheduled again for this Friday and Sunday nights. On Friday night the drivers will pilot modified stock cars. On Sunday night the drivers will pilot big racers, similar to those at Indianapolis.

The quarter-mile oval is surfaced with asphalt and is banked high for speed. A 48-inch concrete abutment protects drivers and spectators. Atwood pointed out a wire mesh fence in front of the grandstand gives added protection to spectators.

Candidates Make Final Effort for Party Nomination

Candidates at the August 7 primary elections are making their final bids for votes. They have just one full week before the big day.

Most of the political activity so far has been in the Republican and non-partisan camps. Democrats have little competition among themselves, although they will have a complete ticket for the November election.

Only for congress do Democrats offer a choice. Congressman Don Hayworth has 2 opponents, William G. Cronin and Rene J. Ortleb.

Donald S. Leonard has made one swing through Ingham county and both he and his opponent for Republican nomination for governor, Mayor Albert E. Cobo of Detroit, are due in Mason Thursday night, at the Republican Town club picnic.

There's a 4-cornered race for Republican nomination for 6th district congressman. Ingham, Genesee and Livingston counties make up the district. Kit Clardy, former congressman, and Charles E. Chamberlain of Ingham and James H. Gardner and David S. Magee, both of Genesee, are the candidates.

In the first legislative district the 4-man contest for 2 positions has been enlivened by Robert H. Klock's statements about gambling. John J. Rose and the incumbents, Willard I. Bowerman, Jr. and Harold W. Hungerford, are others in the race.

The second district has a contest for representative. Howard A. McCowan, Mason's city attorney; Ralph A. Young, former athletic director at Michigan State; and Paul Luck of Okemos are the candidates.

There's a 4-man race for prosecutor. They are Robert S. Brooks, Leo A. Farhat, Jack W. Warren and Francis J. Wery, all of Lansing.

Sheriff Willard P. Barnes has 2 opponents for nomination. They are Marion W. Bayles of Lansing and Charles J. Becker, East Lansing.

C. Ross Hilliard, county clerk; Laurence D. Parker, treasurer; Mia Bell Humphrey, register of deeds; Gerald L. Graham, drain commissioner; and William E. Berryman, county surveyor; are without opposition.

The 2 incumbent coroners, Dorwin E. Hoffmeyer and Harry E. Leadley, have Lloyd H. Bush as an opponent.

Local Democratic candidates are Stuart Dunning, Jr., state senator; Tom Walsh and Robert Dingwell, first district representatives; Raymond H. Totte, second district representative; Michael E. Miatech, prosecutor; Andrew B. Harton, sheriff; Mable Culpepper, county clerk; Margaret L. Wade, treasurer; John F. Barnes, register of deeds; Arthur F. Avis, drain commissioner; Joseph B. Gutstein, coroner; and John L. Osbourn, surveyor.

Four men and a woman are seeking nominations for judge of probate. The 2 who draw the greatest number of votes August 7 will be on the fall ballot.

Growers Back Allotment of Wheat Acres

Ingham farmers went along with wheat growers in Michigan and throughout the United States to approve acreage allotments. The vote was taken Friday. Ingham voted 115 to 52 in favor of allotments.

Under the marketing quota plan all growers of more than 15 acres of wheat must stay within acreage allotments in order to avoid marketing penalties. The acreage allotments are based on farm histories over a 4-year period. The allotments are generally around 60% of the acreage of wheat averaged over the 4 years.

Farmers who harvest less than 15 acres of wheat are not restricted in their wheat plantings. Only in one Ingham polling place was the allotment plan voted down. That was in Stockbridge and White Oak where it lost 17 to 11.

At the 5 Ingham polling places the balloting was reported as follows: Alcedon, Delhi, Lansing, Meridian, 18 yes, 11 no; Williams town, Wheatfield, Leroy, Locke, 41 yes, 11 no; Vevay, Aurelius, Ingham, 26 yes, 10 no; Stockbridge, White Oak, 11 yes, 17 no; Leslie, Onondaga, Bunker Hill, 19 yes, 3 no.

Soil Bank Signup
The vote on marketing quotas had no connection with the soil bank program. Ingham farmers have until Friday of this week to sign up for the soil bank. Under it they will agree to keep land out of production. The total who had signed soil bank agreements stood at 170 Wednesday.

Originally the soil bank deadline was July 20. It was extended a week to July 27.

Pickers Begin On Cucumbers

Mexicans swarmed into cucumber fields Tuesday for the first picking. The first cucumbers delivered to the H. W. Madison & Co. plant at Mason were from a small patch on the A. Balzer farm near Holt. The big picking Tuesday was on the 20 acres at the Lawrence Every farm, northeast of Mason.

Plenty of moisture has brightened prospects for a good cucumber crop, reported Orville Woodard, manager of the Mason plant, Tuesday. A week of hot weather is now needed, he added, to get top production.

Hall ruined 70 acres of cucumber plantings in the Tompkins and Eaton Rapids areas last week. There were 500 acres under contract to the Mason plant but hall reduced the acreage to 430.

30 Bluegills Cost $53.40

Three men paid $53.40 for bluegills and then were not permitted to keep them.

Walter Mutchler, Ingham conservation officer, arrested C. E. Daugh, 50, and Vittle Daugh, 46, both of Jackson, and William Hawes, 51, of Lancaster, Ky., as they came off McConeky lake in Livingston county Saturday. They had 75 bluegills. The law limited them to 45.

The 3 men pleaded guilty before Justice of the Peace Alva Beeman at Stockbridge. Each paid $17.80.

Three other men ran afoul of game and fish laws during the week. All 3 were arrested for fishing without licenses. They were Charles N. DePue, 57, Stanton; Sylvester Curtis, 25, East Lansing; and Lewis F. Forquer, 27, East Lansing. DePue was arrested in Locke township Sunday. He pleaded guilty Monday before Justice W. R. Wood, Williamston, and paid $12.80. Curtis and Forquer were arrested Monday on the Red Cedar in Williamston. They pleaded guilty before Judge Wood, each paying $17.80.

MASON METHODISTS turned sod for their $100,000 church addition Sunday noon. Arthur F. Zickgraf of the church building committee turned the first shovelful. He received the shovel from Glen Coon, chairman of the board of trustees. Others who continued the digging were Mrs. Louis Stid of the Women's Society of Christian Service; Rex Stribley, representing the Sunday school; and Leo Perkins, representing the Methodist Youth Fellowship. Rev. Raymond L. Norton of the Mason church and Rev. David Evans of Okemos Community church participated in the ceremonies. The addition is being built to the north of the present structure.

The West side lost to the East side by a 4 to 1 score.

Money cleared from the game will go toward Lions projects, said President Don Morgan. The main project is the Leslie Lions Scouting, Inc. building now in the process of construction.

Obituary

Ray DeCamp was the first child of Daniel and Nettie Rouse DeCamp. He was born in Bunker Hill township, Ingham county, on March 11, 1882. As a child he attended the Bunker Hill and Folt Plains schools. When he was 14 his parents moved to Yankee Springs, in Barry county. After less than a year there, the family returned. They settled on the Aurelius farm where the mother still lives. He then attended the Wilcox school, in the same township where later his son, and now his grandchildren, are receiving their early education.

At the age of 19 Mr. DeCamp went to Chicago and attended barber school. After completing the course he purchased a barber shop in Eaton Rapids, which he owned for over 4 years. He then took up farming, in which he was engaged until the time of his death.

On May 24, 1910, Ray DeCamp and Cecile Slaughter were married. In the spring of 1911 they moved to the farm on Barnes road, which has since been their home. Here their only son, Cleo, was born.

Mr. DeCamp was an active participant in community and political affairs. He had been a member of the school board for many years. He had been township clerk continuously since 1928. Previous to that he served as township treasurer for 2 years. He was a faithful member of the Aurelius Baptist church, which he joined in 1908.

Ray DeCamp was always interested in making his community a better place in which to live. As a member of the township board he took an active part in promoting good recreational opportunities for the youth of the community. The development of the town hall community center, the township park facilities, the 4-H program, good schools and better educational opportunities all received his active support and the weight of his influence. All testify to his interest in building good citizens of the youth of today. His love for and his interest in his own 3 grandchildren know no bounds.

Mr. DeCamp possessed a faculty for friendship, a warmth of personality that everyone felt. All who knew him respected him for his honesty, integrity and unbiased judgment. He was always honorable and just in his dealings, and practiced the golden rule in all things. He was a kind and loving husband and father, always considerate of the wishes of others.

Life was pleasant and worthwhile to Ray DeCamp when it was suddenly terminated by a tragic accident on July 18. The thread of life was broken, and we can only feel that the Master was ready to say to him, "Well done, good and faithful servant: Enter thou into the joy of Thy Lord."

Left to mourn are his widow, Cecile; his son, Cleo; 3 grandchildren, Anne, Vance and Alice; a brother, Ford; and the aged mother, Nettie DeCamp, all of Aurelius.

Funeral services were conducted from Ball-Dunn funeral home Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Robert Worgul of Aurelius Baptist church officiated. Burial was in Greenwood cemetery at Aurelius.

Legion's Fair At Stockbridge Drew Crowds

Profits of the American Legion and Legionettes of Stockbridge from the fair have not been determined, but attendance was good.

Such statistics as the sale of 233 homemade pies, by the piece, during the 5 fair days, the serving of 220 ham dinners at $1.25 per plate on Saturday night, and 47 pounds of coffee made into cup by cup sales to say nothing of the hot dogs, baked beans, groundburgers, hamburgers, barbecues and other foods sold by the Legionettes in addition to concessions run by the carnival company are indications of the attendance.

The parade of old cars contrasted with the newest version of the same makes attracted interest. The cars went back to the 20's and 27's and were just as gleaming as their 1956 counterparts. The 40 ft 8 locomotive from Lansing Volture was part of the parade and later piled back and forth from the downtown area to the fairgrounds filled with children.

The trapeze performers, the side shows, and the merchants' tent with its FFA, FFA, and FFA exhibits, drew crowds. The Mackinder-Gleim post is already making plans for the 1957 fair.

Man Hides Under Mattress in Car

Mr. and Mrs. George Shihady of Lansing abandoned their car early Thursday morning when they found a stowaway. He had been hiding under a mattress in the back of their station wagon.

"How did you happen to bring the kids along?" Shihady asked. "I didn't," the wife replied.

Then both looked back into the rear of the car, and as they looked, a man sat up. Shihady jammed on the brakes and as the car rolled to a stop he and his wife leaped out and ran. So did the stowaway. The Shihadys described their passenger as a burly Negro man, about 6 feet.

Lansing police and sheriff's officers combed the neighborhood but they found no one who answered the description.

JANET

Janet: This has certainly been a summer for weddings, hasn't it Jim?

Jim: Yes, brides all over the place!

Janet: It's amazing how helpful our file is in serving our customers from year to year. It was a life saver on that last order for the young lady who couldn't remember the name of her china pattern.

Jim: Well, with so many sets of this and that I don't wonder a person's memory fails him!

Janet: It was really very simple. All I had to do was go to the file, look up her name and there was the china pattern listed with her crystal and all the other important information she might need.

Jim: I expect you have date of birth and names of all the offspring too.

Janet: Not quite, but it might not be a bad idea, what with birthday cards and anniversary presents.

Jim: How about putting mine in there. You might just happen to remember it this year!

Janet and Jim together: Our file is at your service folks. Let us remember for you.

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. (Matthew 16:24.)

One of the most beautiful words in any language is sacrifice. We associate it with the rich, sweet, and beautiful self-giving experiences of life.

I recall such an experience during the depression days. My mother, a devoted Christian, had a very limited income. It was her wish to subscribe for a splendid religious periodical for my brothers and me. Out of her limited income she expected to pay for those subscriptions. When I discovered it, I chided her and refused to allow her to pay for them. I shall never forget the pained expression on her face. Tears flowed down her cheeks as she said, "But I want to; it gives me great joy."

The true Christian does not look upon such sacrifice as self-denial but as a privilege, an opportunity, a joy. This is the kind of sacrifice that God blesses. It enables His church to grow and to prosper. For those who would be true followers of Christ, the thread of sacrifice must run through all of life.

PRAYER

O God, forgive us wherein we have thought more of ourselves than of Thee and of others. Forgive us for accepting the lesser values. Grant us strength of mind and soul to find meaning in every sacrifice we make as Christians. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY
God will help me to do more than is required.

Stockbridge Area Mourns Passing of Hugh Milner

Friends, and he had hundreds of them, are mourning the passing of Hugh M. Milner, 52, at Stockbridge Monday night. Social events and even public meetings have been called off because of the unexpected death of a man who had long been a community leader. He was director of the Milner funeral home. He was a member and a leader in the Stockbridge Methodist church. He was a member of the Michigan Funeral Directors association.

Mr. Milner was born in Stockbridge, the son of Louis and Margaret Milner. They, too, were lifelong residents of the community. The father established the funeral home and a furniture store in Stockbridge in 1898. The son continued the business. He was a graduate of Stockbridge high school, Ferris Institute and Washburn Mortuary college in Chicago.

Besides the widow, Lenora, there are 2 daughters, Mrs. Harold Haywood of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. Louis Bartlett of Henrietta, 2 grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. Harvey Sackett of Lansing. Mrs. Bartlett is now in Germany where her husband is in military service.

Ingham Dairymen Speak

Sponsored by Ingham County M. M. P. A. Committee
M. M. P. A. SERVICES PROTECT MEMBERS
As a co-operative association, bargaining for more effective marketing of milk has been the primary purpose of the organization through the years of its growth.

However, various programs have been formulated to protect the individual member against many common hazards facing the dairyman.

GARANTEE OF MARKET
All members are guaranteed a market for all the milk they produce every day of the year, provided it meets board of health requirements.

Many times in many places milk producers have had uncertainty of a market for their milk. Farmers have lost their market because of arbitrary decisions of the buyer. It may have been too much milk, a more desirable source elsewhere, closing of a plant and often the financial failure of a dairy. These occurrences have left the unorganized producer with no market and perhaps no pay for milk already delivered.

In the Detroit market area the Detroit operating department of the association implements the sure marketing of all members' milk supply through operation of nine receiving stations, the dispatching service, the milk transportation truck fleet and the association's manufacturing facilities. No distress milk need be returned to members or held back on the farms.

GARANTEE OF PAYMENT
All members are guaranteed payment for all milk delivered. Credit investigations of buyers and the guarantee fund prevent the possibility of a member farmer holding a bad check for milk already sold.

QUARANTINE PAYMENT
Like other unforeseen and uncontrollable catastrophes, health quarantine because of human or animal disease is serious to the dairyman faced with it.
If a member's milk is excluded by quarantine, he is reimbursed for one-half the value of milk he would have sold. Some portion of milk's value is usually salvaged at the farm.

CHECK TESTING
At least one check butterfat test per month on each member's milk is made by the association. That test is used by the buyer in computing the average payment test for the month. Upon request, an individual butterfat test will be run on the member's herd.

QUALITY
A quality program to assist members in production of good quality milk is carried on. Assistance is given with quality problems such as high bacteria counts to help avoid health department exclusions. A member may request that a mastitis test of his herd be made by the association without charge.

FIELD SERVICE
A staff of field men are available to assist members with individual marketing problems. Action was recently taken to approximately double this field staff.

LEGISLATIVE
A legislative committee is active in supporting a beneficial position for the member dairyman.

Jewett Relatives Gather For Reunion in Mason

Members of the Jewett Family of America are gathering from many parts of the United States for the 101st annual reunion to be conducted at Mason this week end. Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Jewett Skinner of Boulder, Colorado, arrived in Mason last Sunday. They are combining their yearly vacation with the reunion and Skinner, who is a genealogist by hobby, is checking on Jewetts at the state library this week.

On Friday Edward Douglas Jewett, tribe genealogist who lives on the original farm settled by Joseph and Maximilian Jewett at Rowley, Massachusetts, in 1638, is expected to arrive by plane. Others are coming from Iowa, Minnesota, California, Florida, New Jersey, New York, New Hampshire and Ohio. Charles Wood Jewett, lieutenant governor of Connecticut, has sent regrets that he will be unable to attend, because of campaign plans.

Events for the reunion will begin with an open house at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herschel C. Jewett Friday evening, from 7 to 11. Mr. Jewett is president of the Jewett Family of America, Inc. Local members of the Jewett family, as well as those from away, will attend the open house. The reception committee consists of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn A. Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred L. Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Emery H. Jewett and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carven, in addition to the hosts.

The family business meeting is scheduled for the I-H club house on the fairgrounds Saturday morning. In the afternoon the guests will tour the state capitol and Michigan State university campus. In the evening the group will go by motor cavalcade to the cascaes at Jackson.

After attending the churches of their choice Sunday morning, the Jewett Family of America and the local Jewett reunion will have a potluck dinner at Rayner park, Mason, at 1:30. E. Tilson Peabody of Rochester will emcee the afternoon of entertainment, which features J. G. Hays, retired professor of Michigan State university.

George W. Jewett of Grand Ledge is president of the local Jewett reunion, and at 90 is probably the oldest Jewett in Michigan. He was one of the founders of Lindell Drop Forge Co., Lansing. Alton L. Jewett is vice-president, and Mrs. Madelon Jewett Lindsay of Detroit is secretary-treasurer.

The Jewett Family of America dates back to 1638 when Joseph and Maximilian Jewett came from Bradford, England, to settle at Rowley, Mass. A hundred and 20 years ago Eleazer and Olive Kingsbury Clark Jewett migrated from Langdon, New Hampshire, to settle as pioneers in the wilderness of Washtenaw county. The family is organized into a corporation, with enrollment fees, annual dues and life memberships. Quarterly a magazine is published with new members, deaths, birth and other news. Two volumes of the genealogy of the Jewett family have been published and the current president is undertaking a supplement to it.

Wayne Showers Praise On Gillespie Family

In the Wayne Dispatch of last week the Richard Gillespie family came in for high praise. They received community praise for the service they render to others, for leadership in school and civic and church affairs, for setting a good example in the rearing of a family and for being good citizens generally.

Richard Gillespie was a Mason youth. After military service and graduation in engineering from Michigan State, he became assistant city engineer at Niles. Three years ago he went to Wayne as village engineer. His wife came from St. Petersburg, Florida. She is a graduate nurse, doing her studying and training in Chicago. After going to Wayne she joined the staff of the Wayne county general hospital. She now devotes full time to her family duties although she gives leadership to the Wayne Cancer Education society, makes costumes for dancing classes and school entertainments and is an ardent gardener.

Dick is a member of the Wayne Kiwanis club, Wayne Jay-Cees and a member of the Knights of Columbus. He designed the family residence and he did much of the building. Last year he built a swimming pool in the back yard.

There are 5 Gillespie children. They are Camille, Katherine, Jimmy, Richard and Robert. Dick Gillespie is a son of Mrs. Ellen Gillespie Leach of Mason. His brother is Capt. George Gillespie, now with the air force at Wright-Patterson field in Dayton.

Mrs. Mia Bell Humphrey

Laurence Parker, Ingham county treasurer, and Mrs. Mia Bell Humphrey, register of deeds, were elected to state offices in their respective associations which convened in the Upper Peninsula last week.

Parker was re-elected secretary-treasurer for the second term and Mrs. Humphrey will serve as first vice-president for the coming year. Previously she was third, then second vice-president.

The state association of county treasurers met Tuesday through Thursday at Hancock while the Michigan Association of Registers of Deeds met at nearby Houghton. Delegates and their guests at both conventions were entertained at joint banquets at the Douglas House, Houghton, with a smorgasbord Tuesday evening and a banquet Wednesday evening.

Other officers elected by the registers of deeds were Charles Converse of Midland, president; Bernard Youngblood, Wayne county, and Mrs. Clara Turek, Saginaw county, second and third vice-presidents. James Thompson, Jackson, is president of the treasurers association, Margaret Woodward, St. Clair county, first vice-president; and Howard Lange, Otsego county, second vice-president.

State Prison Population Reflects General Growth

By ELMER WHITE
Michigan Press Association

A record inmate population is rapidly filling Michigan prison facilities beyond normal operating capacities.

Latest prisoner counts show a new high of 10,129 men held by the state, said Gus Harrison, director of the state corrections department.

Increased Michigan population is the primary cause of the rise in prisoners, according to corrections department figures. There are now 140 inmates for every 100,000 persons living in the state.

Each time the state's population increases by 100,000, past experience has shown that approximately 140 more inmates boost the prison totals.

During the past 5 years Michigan population increased by 150,000 each year. Should this trend continue, department spokesmen assert that a potential yearly increase of 210 prisoners could arise.

Present prisons were constructed to hold 9,375 men. Special purpose facilities—hospitals, quarantine and segregation—can accommodate another 800 men, but are not part of the usable general cells.

An additional 600-man medium security prison at Ionia, currently in the construction stage, is being delayed by men who walked off the job July 6 in protest to the proposed use of inmate labor on the project.

Requests to the legislature for more facilities are being considered by the department. According to Harrison, there is a need for another medium security prison for youthful offenders and "medical" facilities for epileptics, homosexuals and handicapped cases.

Think you have financial headaches? Consider the job held by James W. Miller, controller of the state of Michigan. As executive head of the administrative department, it is his duty to see that the "business" of government functions smoothly.

The controller's position is somewhat comparable to the job of city manager. Only as "state manager" the problems are more complex.

Michigan citizens rarely come into direct contact with the operation headed by Dr. Miller. But much of the department's work assures that tax dollars are spent wisely and well.

Biggest tasks assigned the controller include preparation of the yearly state budget, supervision and operation of a uniform accounting system and administration of a centralized purchasing system.

In addition, all building construction undertaken by the state, management of state buildings and vehicles, and a multitude of services to other state agencies are charged to the controller's care.

How is a state budget prepared? Each of the state agencies submits its proposed budget to the controller. Viewing the total needs of government with considerations of how much money will be available for the coming year, he makes adjustments—usually downward.

The state budget as recommended by the controller then goes to the governor. Particular portions of the governor's program usually are emphasized in the budget through larger proposed appropriations.

These proposals are then submitted to the legislature, which can pass the budget as requested, or make considerable change.

any of the 117 state agencies in Michigan, you can be certain that they function better and more economically because of Dr. Miller's department.

Until 1948, when the Department of Administration was authorized by the legislature, a patchwork assortment of state boards and agencies handled the services which are now completely centralized.

The old system was less efficient than the new. Many necessary functions were duplicated. Others were neglected.

Men of professional stature mark Governor Williams' choices for controller. Avoiding candidates with close political or party ties, he turned to Michigan's universities to make selections 3 times.

Dr. Miller, state controller for the past 18 months, is presently on leave from Michigan State university. His 2 predecessors are Robert F. Steadman of Wayne university and John W. Lederle from the University of Michigan.

The first controller, John A. Perkins also from the U-M, was appointed by former Governor Sigler and served 3 months before Governor Williams took office.

Proof that a professor can handle the complex administrative tasks demanded of a state controller is demonstrated by everyone.

Dr. Miller says, "I'm not an expert on any particular division assigned to our department. I have capable men handling each division. But, I believe a liberal arts training provides the best background for service in the executive capacity controlling the overall actions of the department."

No career politician, Dr. Miller does not intend to continue as a political or governmental employee when his present work is concluded.

"My training and background are welded to an academic career," he comments.

At Michigan State he was a full professor in the political science department until 1954 when he assumed the administrative role as head of the department of teacher education.

As an expert on state government, he is co-author of a book "State Administrative Reorganization," and has contributed articles to the American Political Science Review, Agricultural History and many other publications.

Thrill Drivers Are Booked for Opener at Fair

Danny Fleenor, Hollywood stunt man, who has appeared with thrill shows for the past 12 years, is captain of the group of 6 heading the personnel of "The Greatest Show on Wheels" scheduled for Monday night, August 13, as the opening attraction of the Ingham county fair.

The show is considered to be the most spectacular full-evening production of its kind in the world, embracing 28 breath-taking acts of skill, timing and daring.

When the show opens August 13, "Dapper Dan" and his thrill drivers will put a fleet of new 1956 convertible and sedans, also motorcycles, through spectacular stunts.

Included in the show is Danny Fleenor's performance on the high-ski wingover, with the car running on sidewalls for 100 yards.

In another act, also involving split-second timing and speed, a motorcycle leaps over an automobile. In the broad-jump the car flies off the ramp and lands solidly on 4 wheels. In a reverse spin, a car backs up at 50 miles per hour, spins around until it is going forward, without slowing down, on to the grand finale in which a convertible booms out of a cannon and flies through the air for 80 feet.

Out of 144 students at Michigan State university to achieve all-A academic grades during the spring term, 26 are from Ingham.

Among the 26 are Margaret Clara Brubaker of Lansing, once of Mason; William Joseph Carew, Carl McAlvey Ferrar, and Nancy Joyce Voelker, all of Okemos; and Ronald Lee Marceau of Holt.

Attorneys Urge Bad Book Ban

At a meeting of the board of control of the Michigan Federation of Young Republicans in Port Huron Saturday, 2 Ingham attorneys urged a ban on sale of obscene and immoral publications. The 2 Ingham lawyers were Leo Farhat and Jack Warren. Both are candidates for the Republican nomination for prosecuting attorney.

The 2 Lansing lawyers moved adoption of a resolution which would instruct and direct the Michigan Young Republican delegates to the Republican national convention in San Francisco to call for an open and aggressive stand against permitting the presence on newsstands of obscene publications, and to commend the various religious leaders for the work they have done in correcting the present situation.

No Reason to Wait Any Longer!

There's not much question about what this man and his young son have on their minds. They're thinking about Cadillac—and about how wonderful it would be to have one in their own driveway! And because dreams of a Cadillac are hard to put aside, we suspect that it won't be too long now before we'll have an opportunity to give them the facts about Cadillac ownership. And when that happy time arrives, they will find that we have some wonderful news waiting for them about how practical Cadillac ownership has recently become.

We will explain, for instance, that it is now possible to become the proud owner of a 1956 Cadillac for little more than the cost of far lesser cars—and certainly for a great deal less than they would expect to pay for the "car of cars". We will tell them how economical a Cadillac is to operate—and how extraordinarily free it is from the needs of service and maintenance. And we will show them how, at resale time, the Cadillac car returns a greater share of its owner's original investment than any other motor car built in the land.

But the best news will be yet to come. For then we will talk about the generous allowance we can give them on their present car—and how short the waiting period is on the Cadillac of their choice. They will find, we feel certain, that they have lost their last logical reason for waiting any longer to enjoy a new Cadillac. Incidentally, have you considered how wonderful a Cadillac would look in your driveway? If you have, then we sincerely urge you to come in soon and get the facts. We'll be waiting with the car and the keys—and a story too wonderful to resist!

Builders Find Giant Stones In Sewer Line

Stones weighing 6 to 8 tons encountered in the jetting process in building the interceptor sewer necessitated a detour of a few blocks of US-127 in Leslie beginning Monday, said Herbert Mead of Mead Brothers, contractors on the job.

The jetting process is driving 2-inch drills with 6-inch headers down to 14 feet or more to drain the soil so that the 15-inch tile will be laid in a dry bed 2 feet below the level of Hutton creek.

"We planned to tunnel under US-127 and not interrupt traffic or disturb the road bed," said Mead. "But finding these big stones with an estimated 150 feet more of the same formation to go through, will make it necessary for us to go down through the top."

Friday, Michigan Bell Telephone company raised the wires to permit the 3 cranes to operate. Being used are a 17-ton TD-18 Bulldozer, a tandem grader, 4 dump trucks and other equipment on the $310,000 interceptor sewer-sewage disposal plant project for Leslie.

Ellis Ward, director of public works for Leslie said, "In spite of a few unforeseen obstacles the work on the project is progressing satisfactorily. The first load of the delayed tile has come through and we are told the rest is on schedule. About 2500 feet of the 15-inch tile of the needed 10,000 have been laid; the entire 750 feet of 4-inch cast iron pipe is in to hook up the water main to the plant when it is built, and 2,100 feet of service road has been built to the point of being ready for the fill and gravel.

"The Dale Latham office and workshop has been built and much of the construction equipment needed in the building of the sewage plant is here."

Farmer Peck's Wife

Woodpecker becomes friendly. The girls find a hideaway. A sanctuary for the pigeons, too.

Now who couldn't get a thrill out of a magnificent red-headed woodpecker sitting in his window? One sits now outside our dining room window-feeder only a few inches from me. He is so big . . . so handsome . . . so friendly.

To see one that close and alive is mighty interesting. It surely is a beautiful combination of colors and one of our prettiest birds. He comes several times a day and makes this tiny spot of earth a little happier each time.

Even Pete thinks that it is fun to watch him and get that hushed tone to his voice when he landed the first time. Now we talk in normal voices and Mr. Red-Head does not seem to mind at all.

Many birds still come for the bird cakes and cracked hickory nuts we put out each morning. We never know who will visit us so it makes each day sort of a surprise . . . and fun.

One morning this week I was awakened by an urgent, chirpy kind of bird noises which seemed to be coming from the window feeder. I stumbled out of bed half awake, it being only 4:30, to see what all the excitement was. For a bird or animal has a special high pitch for distress signals.

This then was dire distress! There perched a young downy woodpecker croaking to beat the band. His father was feeding him as fast as he could. (It was the father because males have little red caps on the back of their heads while females do not.)

This poor parent was raggy and thin and looked like he led a hard life, real hen-pecked. And no wonder! The youngster was

Disaster Alert Proves Success

Leslie's disaster warning system proved itself in last Friday's civil defense alert.

The code warning from the county CD office in Holt came at 10:12 a. m. to Mrs. Paul Jupp, assistant chairman of the CD committee. The village president, fire marshal and police chief were in turn notified and the message was sent to surrounding communities. The simulated alert call came at 12:10 and the all-clear at 2:00.

Bellevue, Fitchburg and Kinseyville roads in the Leslie area are being resurfaced.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tension will give a belated birthday dinner for Miss Dorothy Waller and Ronnie Cosgrove, Sunday, July 29. Besides those honored, Dorothy's mother and sister, Mrs. Jessie Waller and Evelyn from Jackson, and Ronnie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Cosgrove will be present.

Mrs. Thelma Graper, executive secretary of the Future Homemakers of the State of Michigan, visited Leslie last week. Mrs. Inga Miller, homemaking teacher at Leslie and FHA sponsor, showed the school's home economics rooms and equipment to Mrs. Graper and received many suggestions toward classroom efficiency. Twelve of Leslie's 25 members of the FHA joined Mrs. Graper and Mrs. Miller in a picnic at Russell park.

Mrs. Edna Geer
Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hadley spent the week end at Joslin.

Guy Rollins was a Saturday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Geer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Calkins and Carol Anne spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Geer.

Nine members of Plainfield extension club No. 5 spent Thursday at East Lansing where they attended the homemakers conference.

Clover Blossom 4-H met with Pat Kunzelman Wednesday. Final arrangements were made for the fair exhibits.

Wayne Geer called on Stanley Marshall, who has been sick this past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hadley were at Gull Lake Monday. They called on Mr. and Mrs. Edward Swadling while there.

William Cartwright was a Sunday caller of Wayne Geer.

bigger, healthier and flew equally as well when he took off.

Several times during the day he was back teasing in persistent tones for someone to feed him. Soon Papa Downy would come giving him such thrusts of food so fast and hard that both were almost jarred backwards off the feeder. Can't you almost feel his headache?

Birds have made even hoeing garden more fun than usual. We have such varied entertainment while we work. When we were planting it a song sparrow sat on the wires overhead and sang continually . . . and he has scarcely stopped since.

Now there is a bird that is much maligned! Most folks think of sparrows as a class of pesky little birds and just plain nuisances. What a mistake that is. There are many different kinds of sparrows and very valuable, pretty, and good singers.

We count our song sparrow who arrived in a snowstorm early last spring as a very much loved bird. For sheer generosity of song in spite of rain, cold or snow he cannot be matched. And yet if some boy were to come by shooting sparrows how easily he could be taken for the common variety. And how sad we would be!

Pete continues to smile at our enthusiasm of the bird world. Says we have gone sort of goofy over them . . . but that he can think of a lot of subjects and pastimes that would be harder on us and the whole family.

LADIES IN WADING—Beat the heat with a cool pool. That's the formula applied by Martine Dowling and her silent bronze partner. The fountain is in the Place de la Concorde in Paris.

The girls have found a perfect hideaway where they can go by themselves in a world all their own. I was invited to enter this intersanctum and was able to capture some of the mystic spell too. We had to wait until Sammy took his nap . . . for obvious reasons.

Then to the barn and up the ladder to the very peak we went. The mow is full of baled hay to the peak so down on our knees and across to the north end we crawled. At the end is a place about 4 feet square where the elevator came in. This is a real cozy spot.

Out a window stretches the fields of oats, corn, beans and pasture like a patchwork quilt. From that height the cows look like a pretty postcard.

It is a pleasant spot . . . and made moooo by the company of 4 purring kittens curled up on the hay. Pigeons cooed nearby. This pigeon family has been the subject of much discussion.

There is a nest of 2 young ones, which the boys who helped in the hay insisted should be torn down. And Pete doesn't like birds (or banties) roosting on anything so they almost were expelled. But the girls said that when they grew up and were away from home that they wouldn't know then what happened to pigeons in our barn . . . but now when they had this wonderful sanctuary please leave them. That did it! For both Pete and I can see that time approaching faster and faster when long carefree days with the yard full of pets and laughter will be a thing of the past.

I may be writing this from the peak of our barn next week! There is nothing I'd like better than to go up to the girls retreat some rainy afternoon with the rain only inches away overhead. I'd snooze . . . and read away at a pile of unread magazines a foot high . . . and work on over 100 unanswered letters . . . smell the fragrant hay and just plain loaf far away from everything and everybody. For this is on the opposite end of the driveway and house and being down in an almost soundproof vault . . . well, I'd have a private world of my own.

Anyone else feel like getting away from it all now and then? Not all the time but now and then . . . just now and then.

HOW RESOURCEFUL ARE YOU?

Puppies are generally more resourceful than people! They never take fences seriously. They find a way to get over or under the obstacle.

People take fences seriously. They usually have more respect for their limitations than for their abilities. That's why so many of us live in a narrow, discouraging world without promise or hope.

And even as we speak thrilling words like freedom and opportunity and ideals, some of us wonder secretly just what these are and how they may be attained.

There are spiritual resources in life which can enable any man to achieve ideals. They are the simple, commonplace commodities of religion—things like prayer and faith—but they are the keys to all attainment.

God gave us these resources to use. And He gave us churches to teach us how to use them. Forget your fences—discover your resources in Church next Sunday.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Music, Drama and War Share Screen

"Anything Goes," Paramount's VistaVision and Technicolor musical is the first part of Friday and Saturday's double bill at the Fox Theatre.

With Bing Crosby, Donald O'Connor, Jeannine, Mitzl Gaynor and Phil Harris providing an impressive starring cast, and 6 of Cole Porter's greatest songs plus 3 new ones by Oscar-winners Sammy Cahn and James Van Heusen, the film is one of the season's best.

The story is based on one of Broadway's warm and hilarious all-time hits. It revolves around the adventures of musical comedy stars Crosby and O'Connor as they comb London and Paris for a leading lady for their new show and get themselves involved in a mad mix-up by signing 2 girls for the one role.

Crosby sings up sparkling Mitzl Gaynor in London, while in Paris O'Connor gets French charmer Jeannine's signature on a contract, and the duplication isn't discovered until they're heading home aboard a plush luxury liner with 2 temperamental actresses on their hands.

Merle Oberon plays her first meanie role and Lex Barker his first modern-dress lead in "The Price of Fear," Universal-International suspense drama in which they co-star. It is the second hit for Friday and Saturday.

Heading a topflight supporting cast are Charles Drake, Gia Scala, Warren Stevens and Mary Field.

A wonderful love story is promised in "Good-bye, My Lady." It is about an old man, a boy who had to grow up all of a sudden and a strange dog that changed their lives. The film, starring Walter Brennan, Phil Harris and Brandon de Wilde, is booked for Sunday and Monday at the Fox Theatre.

Walter Brennan and Brandon de Wilde return home from the bayous after finding "Lady," an African Basenji hound, in a scene from Warner Bros. "Good-bye, My Lady." It will play at the Fox Sunday and Monday.

Harris and Brandon de Wilde, is booked for Sunday and Monday at the Fox Theatre.

"Good-bye, My Lady" is set in the wilderness of the bayou country and concerns the strength and weakness of a crusty old sharecropper, played by Brennan, the faith and devotion of a young boy just reaching early manhood, and the love of the boy for a lonely little dog, Field.

Brandon de Wilde is seen as the boy. The strange dog is a hunting dog that doesn't bark, but laughs and cries real tears. Described as one of the most amazing spy stories in the annals of naval intelligence, "The Man Who Never Was," starring Clifton Webb and Gloria Grahame, will play at the Fox Theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Based on Ewen Montagu's best-seller, "The Man Who Never Was," was filmed in England and Spain, at the very locations where its drama was played against the background of history. It tells the true story of the daring plot developed during World War II by British naval intelligence to divert German troops from Sicily so that Allied forces could invade the continent with as little resistance as possible.

Seen through the eyes of an American girl who is accidentally involved in the scheme, "The Man Who Never Was" is a story of men and women so dedicated to the success of their operation that they allow no personal feelings to interfere with doing the job.

Jim Young Takes Ann Arbor Lead

"The Wayward Saint," comic fantasy by Paul Vincent Carroll, starring Jim Young of Dansville, opened at Lydia Mendelsohn theatre, University of Michigan, Wednesday night. The play, third in the summer playbill of 5, runs through Saturday, July 28.

Directed by Professor Jack E. Bender, "The Wayward Saint" shows the author's skill in the study of Irish priests and their relationships with religion and daily life in Ireland. Costumes and scenery for the production are designed by Marjorie Smith and Edward Andreasen.

Young, a graduate student, plays Canon McCooey. In last year's bill he played the leading role of Captain Shotover in George Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House." He graduated from Asbury college, Wilmore, Kentucky, with a bachelor's degree, received a master of arts degree from Michigan State and is doing doctoral study during the summers at the University of Michigan. He is associate professor of speech at Asbury college.

Larry Dent and Miss Eunice Hunt were received into membership in the Mason Methodist church Sunday morning. Miss Hunt, long an invalid, was unable to be present for the ceremony. Rev. Raymond L. Norton explained.

Donald Lee Sager of Long Beach, California, and Roy Sakaki of Hawaii, participated in services Sunday. They told of some of their experiences as members of the 70 E team of young men sent out from seminars to work under the general board of evangelism.

Kitten Reads Ads

In last Thursday's Ingham County News was an ad stating that Georgana Post had lost her kitten 2 days before. Hardly had the paper come off the press before the kitten returned home. "The results you get from advertising in the Ingham County News are phenomenal," remarked George Post as he slapped down 50c for his daughter's ad. "I had only given the kitten 3 reading lessons."

Be Careful This Week

This week has been proclaimed as farm safety week throughout the state and nation. With mechanization, farming has become one of the most dangerous occupations.

Book Talk

Catchers in Briggs stadium have 66 feet behind the plate in which to maneuver for 4 balls, and have home plate and 440 feet between them and the bleachers. Diagrams of all the major league parks, with list of personnel, farm clubs, radio and TV data, can be found in the 1956 BASEBALL ALMANAC. This book is now in the Ingham county library.

Baseball's FAMOUS FIRST BASEMEN have been selected by Ira L. Smith covering the period from 1871 to 1956. Perhaps you've never heard of Cap Anson, Pat Tebeau, Dan Brubrouers or Jasper Daves. Smith puts you in the know with his fascinating accounts of them, and goes on to Jimmy Foxx, Lou Gehrig and Charlie Grimm, 36 in all. Walter Ruether was a pitcher back in 1921, we find.

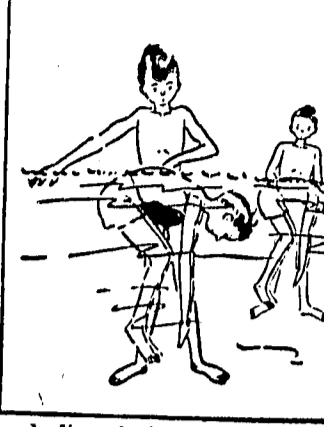

Many a first baseman has been robbed, but not by SAM BASS, THE BANDIT. Charles L. Martin's book narrates his various train robberies, his death, and accounts of the deaths of his gang and their history. Sam Bass was perhaps the most notorious Texas outlaw of the 1870's. His criminal career lasted but 4 years. During that time he and his gang robbed trains, stages, and stores from Dakota territory to the Mexican border. The Texas Rangers got him in 1878.

While some break the law and risk their lives to get money, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has striven all his life to give it away. He was weighed with the responsibility of wealth, and prepared himself to use it all in the public good. Raymond B. Fosdick, president of the Rockefeller Foundation until 1948, has written the biography of a man who rose above the adversity of wealth. John, Jr., pinched pennies and gave away millions in many causes, from prohibition to labor strikes and the Teapot Dome investigation. Not to mention the new Rockefeller diets.

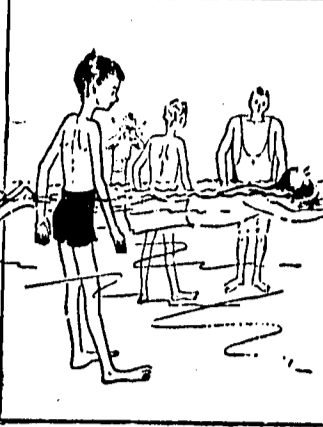

Wearing a wig in the summer time must be an ordeal. Especially on fishing trips, THE TRANSFORMATIONS OF MAN by Lewis Mumford affords us little comfort those days, however. It is not concerned with toupees. He writes of civilization and culture, claiming that mankind is to undergo a change as revolutionary as the one that brought us out of the Stone Age.

Some jokes seem to date back to the Stone Age. Sieve Allan doesn't admit it in his new book, THE FUNNY MAN. He says comedy is an art, not a science, and a very liberal one, at that. Besides discussing 16 comedians of TV and Hollywood, he has a good chapter on TV humor. The challenge and the fascina-

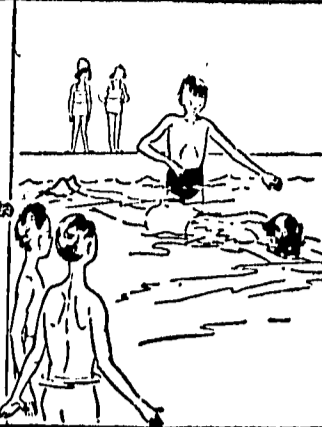

Learn to Swim--- 2

1. Your body with the lungs filled with air is light enough to be suspended in water. Fill the lungs with air and slide the hands down the legs to the ankles. Before you reach your ankles the feet will come off the bottom and you will be floating like a jellyfish.

2. The "jelly-fish" position is not a good one in which to swim. To learn how to float in a swimming position, do another jelly-fish float, only this time extend your legs backward and your arms forward and lie stretched out on the surface.

3. Now forget the "jelly-fish" and concentrate on the prone-glide. Crouch low, submerge the face, and push off from the bottom with the feet. With only a little practice you will be able to glide along the surface for some distance.

How to Float

4. To get more distance on your glide thrash the legs slowly and flexibly up and down after you have pushed off. This is the beginner version of the flutter kick which later on will be a good and useful part of the "crawl."

Textbook Rental Is Sound

Vassar, Marlette and now Caro, over in the Thumb of Michigan, have adopted a textbook rental plan for high school. Ingham schools ought to consider such a program.

A survey showed that under the regular purchase system, parents were forced to pay from $12 to $20 a year per pupil for textbooks. Under the rental system the cost will be reduced to $4.50 per year for pupils in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, and $5.00 per year for pupils in grades 10 through 12.

The rental rate has been established on a basis that will repay the original investment plus a handling charge.

It often seems to parents that there is needless change of textbooks; that for no good reason the books are changed frequently, thus forcing the discard of books bought for older children in a family and laid aside for use of the younger. In almost every attic are stacks of books so discarded. With the school board having to do the paying as well as the ordering there might possibly be fewer changes in texts. And if changes were frequent the cost to parents would not take such a toll as it now does.

Most school officials say their districts can not afford to furnish textbooks without charge. And maybe it wouldn't be all to the good for youngsters to think that their books were furnished free. But the rental plan seems reasonable and appears warranted. It merits a try.

Successful Living Exemplified

Ray DeCamp didn't farm the most land in Aurelius. He didn't drive the finest car. He didn't have the biggest bank balance. Yet he lived rich — and died rich — rich in friendships.

Ray DeCamp was a quiet, unassuming man. He was no backslapper. All through life he made friends and he never lost any.

After funeral services Saturday people stood in groups in the Aurelius graveyard and many of them discussed the friend and neighbor just buried.

"He and his wife came to our house when the boy was sick," said one man. "He and Cecile drove over after our fire," said another. "He and his wife never lost an opportunity to help someone in sickness or sorrow," said a third. "They always seemed to know where and when they were needed. They went to sympathize with people who needed sympathy, to encourage those who required it, and to rejoice if the occasion warranted it."

Ray DeCamp became a member of the Aurelius Baptist church as a young man. He heard and answered a call. The call he heard was not to preach but to plow. His kindness, his friendliness, the love and consideration he showed to members of his family, his neighborliness, his service to his community exemplified Christian living. He preached no sermons. He lived one.

A Double Opportunity

Southern people often say the north treats the Negro no better than the south, and offers him no better opportunity.

That scarcely holds, because Negroes have flocked into the north from the south. If they didn't find greater opportunity they would have stayed in the south or returned there. Yet it is probably true that we have preached about opportunity and lack of prejudice without really demonstrating it.

Here in Ingham county Negroes have paid county taxes for generations. Yet it was only 2 weeks ago that the first Negro was ever placed in a full-time responsible administrative position. Mrs. Menona Logan has been added to the probation staff in the juvenile court. She has been added not because of her race but because her qualifications measured up to those required.

The hiring of Mrs. Logan as a juvenile court worker is of far more worth than any pious preaching against prejudice. Her opportunity to prove her responsibility and good judgment in a difficult job is of more significance to other Negroes than boycotts and litigation.

Mrs. Logan has a big responsibility to go with her opportunity. The county has finally taken advantage of its responsibility to provide opportunity without regard to race. So it's a double opportunity.

Building for the Future

In ground-breaking ceremonies Sunday, Methodists pointed out that their new building is not primarily for present members but for the future. The message of the pastor at the ceremonies was addressed to the boys and girls who will soon become leaders in the church. The present church has room enough for the present membership. They could be crowded in.

Nazarenes faced the same problem and came up with the same answer. They were not content to minister to a limited number. St. James church was built not just to minister to a present and limited membership but to a growing membership.

Our grandfathers built the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches not just for themselves but for us. They built well. Otherwise the Methodists would have long before this have outgrown their church, and so would the Baptists and Presbyterians.

Churches are not built for today. They are built for tomorrow. They are built to serve growing needs for religious education and training, growing need for the nurture of faith, an abiding need of mankind to worship.

Crime Tips Pay Off

Because someone notified the sheriff's office that a wild party was in progress on Grand river west of town, a gang of hoodlums was rounded up. Five girls ranging in age from 14 to 24 were taken to their homes. Some of the men were taken to jail. Several confessed to participation in a series of crimes.

If a deputy sheriff stood at every highway intersection and a city policeman at every street corner, they'd still help.

When we see something going on which needs investigating we ought to notify officers. When we see cars parked late at night in school house yards or on roadides, we ought to take down the license numbers.

We all have a responsibility in maintaining law and order.

Down by the SYCAMORE

When every farm had its flock of chickens Barred Plymouth Rocks were by far the most popular breed here in Michigan, with White Leghorns next. Brown Leghorns were in the running, too; principally because Brown Leghorn roosters were so handsome.

Rhode Island Reds displaced some of the Barred Rocks but the greatest displacement was by cousins, White Rocks.

Barred Rocks are now far down the list. They lost out because of black pinfeathers. White Rocks are easier to dress—or more properly, to undress.

There has been no recent farm poultry census broken down into breeds. But at Michigan State there is a testing plan for disease on flocks producing eggs for hatcheries. Only purebred flocks and registered crosses are tested, yet the figures indicate who's who in hen coops. They show the ratio.

Those figures show White Leghorns leading the list with 290,000 and White Rocks second at 235,000—Leghorns primarily for egg production and White Rocks for both meat and eggs.

Crosses come next. Silver Broad, from Cornish type males and White Rock females, are popular for meat. Their total on disease tests reached 47,000. Black Minorca males crossed with White Leghorn hens is a popular mixture for egg production. They were around 30,000.

Rhode Island Reds and New Hampshire Reds tied at 19,000 and from there the totals slipped to 7,500 for Barred Rocks. Brown Leghorns were down to 1,700 and below them were Black Australorps and some buff of various breeds. There were no Orpingtons or Wyandottes tested.

Howard Sims of Vantown read a piece in a recent Reader's Digest about the high cost of funerals. He agreed with the statement that it costs too much to die, that too many extras have been added. Once upon a time Sims was a Unitarian and he remembered reading about a group of Unitarians in Toronto who had arranged for $250 funerals for just the kind of burials they wanted. He wrote the Reader's Digest about the Toronto situation. Reader's Digest mailed Sims a $20 check for the tip and a man is on his way to Toronto to get the story.

The biggest funeral the Ball-Dunn firm has had was the one for Ray DeCamp Saturday afternoon. All room in the funeral home was taken and some people occupied the upstairs living apartments and others stood on the porch.

Here in Michigan we use the word tripe as a slang term for some poor, worthless thing. Mexicans never use tripe that way. They prepare it and eat it and regard it as delicious.

Mason has now become one of the state's best outlets for tripe. Every Sunday morning at the H. W. Madison Co. barracks the 140 Mexican nationals consume 110 lb of tripe, along with 140 pig hocks. That's the breakfast they look forward to all the week. The hocks and the beef stomachs are stewed together along with corn meal.

When the buyers at the barracks first asked Dick Mills at IGA for tripe and lots of it, Dick had trouble finding that much. Now that it is stocked for Mexicans and the word has gone around, many other people buy it. They come from all over this section of the state, many from Lansing.

There are 2 kinds of tripe. Regular tripe is the paunch or rumen of a ruminant. More expensive is the reticulum (honey-comb) tripe. At Mason the Mexicans get whole beef stomachs, steamed and cleaned. That's the regular.

Speaking of tripe for breakfast, what became of Maple flakes? When flakes first began to displace potatoes and side pork at breakfast tables, Maple flakes was the top seller. They were made from wheat instead of corn or sawdust.

With the county and the city and many other municipalities concerned with sewerage and sewage these days, there is a chance of confusing the 2 words. In some dictionaries the words are synonymous. In others there is a distinction. Generally, sewerage means the system of sewers, and sewage is what goes through a sewer. Those are the meanings the Ingham County News copy desk intends to use, if we don't get confused.

He quickly abandoned his alien status by enlisting in the U. S. army. He never was an enemy—always a friend. Like most other men who are skillful with their hands, Joe has self-confidence and dignity. His cheerful nature and his infectious smile make him welcome anywhere and especially so as a son-in-law, or a brother-in-law or any other kind of relative.

It wouldn't have taken much coaxing to have put Mrs. D. P. Morrison of Fort Myers, Florida, to work setting type Saturday. She wanted to smuggle up against a metal pot to get warm. She took a vacation from the composing room of the Fort Myers News-Press and came north by plane. It was above 90 when she boarded the plane in Florida and almost zero, she thought, when she landed in Lansing Saturday morning. She laughed when she was told it was unusual weather.

Upturn in Farm Prices Quiet Midwest Unrest

By CARL COLLIN

Strengthening farm prices have quieted farmer unrest in the Midwest. That's the feeling of top GOP officials and congressmen. Some insist the political outcry magnified the farm rebellion far beyond its true proportions. However, there's still plenty of concern about the course of farm prices from now to election time. Dipping prices could prove to be something real for GOP congressmen to hurdle in the Midwest.

Some well qualified observers say the farm price outlook for the remainder of the year indicates the upward trend that began early in January is near an end. They feel that the average is more likely to be moderately downward for the next few months.

Normal seasonal factors will be a major influence on market prices through the peak of the harvest season. There's nothing in sight now that would alter the normal decline during the fall months. Price averages are still likely to remain somewhat above a year earlier, especially for hogs, feed grains and milk.

One-seventh of the 1955 corn crop was under government loan as of June 15. That means 420 million bushels had been stored under the price support program as compared with 257 million bushels stored from the 1954 crop on the same date.

County ASC offices report much more interest in the soil bank program than had been expected. Just how much land will be put in the acreage reserve this year is very uncertain. The deadline for applying at county ASC offices for participation in the program is July 27, an extension of a week from original announcements.

Even though considerable land is put under the acreage reserve part of the soil bank this year, that doesn't mean total crop production will be altered to any extent. Actually, even though a sizeable acreage in Michigan, for example, goes into reserve this year, not much of it will come from land where a crop will have been plowed-down.

The corn crop looks good. There's been plenty of rain to boost growth and the early run of hot weather helped. Some farmers are getting a bit apprehensive about the crop in the light of weather forecasts indicating above normal moisture and below normal temperatures for the next few weeks. Without warm weather how fast can the crop mature? And should there be an early frost, what about high moisture corn at harvest time? Farmers never know the answer to this situation, of course. That's part of the gamble in farming.

Half of the farmers' 1955 cash receipts for farm products came from the sale of 5 major commodities. They were: Cattle, 16.7%; wholesale milk, 12.2%; hogs, 9.9%; cotton, 9%; and wheat, 5.7%. Thirty years ago cotton receipts led all the rest, cattle were second, hogs third, wheat fourth, and wholesale milk fifth.

Broiler output this year may top last year's production by 20%. Prices which have been ranging 4 to 7 cents below a year ago are expected to remain about steady through the summer. Turkey prices currently running high because, stocks, of frozen heavy birds are low, will drop when the bulk of the 75.6 million

Country & Town

By Jim Brown

New York — the world's melting pot where murders average 2 a day, where office workers near Trinity church sit on tombstones to eat their lunches, where people seem busier than anywhere else on earth — yes, old New York is all of that. It is the big, big city. It has more cultural and educational facilities than most cities. It possibly also has more bridges, tunnels, narrow alley-streets and more wide freeways than other cities.

No one should claim to know America until he has visited New York City. There are conditions that could never compare with qualities of Mason, Holt or Danville. There isn't as much fresh air in New York and there isn't room for as much open greenness and individuality. Many who live in the congested parts of New York must get along without the feel of grass underfoot and trees overhead. They must tread along with a determination that they can do without pleasure taken for granted by those of us who live in Ingham.

New Yorkers speak many tongues, including French, Spanish, Yiddish, Italian, Polish, Scandinavian, German, Dutch and some of them speak English. They are blended into American citizenship.

It is easy to pick out the bad parts of a city, especially New York, but there obviously must be many good things about it, else millions would leave for other places. New York is doing a great job replacing slum areas with modern apartment skyscrapers. Highway facilities are being improved, including the construction of a third tube in the Lincoln tunnel. New York City is here to stay — at least metropolitan leaders are acting on that theory.

While a country boy might hesitate to live the life of a New Yorker, it possibly would work out. At any rate, a week in the Big City is enjoyable. It is my first trip to the Empire City in 10 years. There have been many changes, more than I can absorb in a brief visit, but there is one thing that has not changed — New Yorkers love New York. They like its ways as much as others admire their home towns.

Injured and Sick Dogs Will Bite Best Friends

By Robert G. Schirmer, M.S., D.V.M., Michigan State University College of Veterinary Medicine

Dogs usually live up to their reputation of being man's best friend.

But if your dog is badly injured and in pain, you should beware. A dog may bite his best friend if he has been seriously hurt.

If the dog is in severe pain and does not seem himself, you should exercise extreme caution in approaching him. In some instances it would be most advisable to muzzle the dog before attempting to move him.

Animal lovers should remember that badly hurt animals should be carried to a veterinarian immediately if they are to be saved. It is true that seriously injured humans should not ordinarily be moved until trained medical help arrives. But failure to get a dog or cat to an animal specialist quickly may result in death by internal hemorrhage. Usually nothing is gained by waiting for the veterinarian to come to the scene of the accident. It may be too late by the time he arrives.

Dogs or cats run over by a car or otherwise badly injured should not be carried in your arms. A rug, blanket, or sheet which can be carried stretcher-style will be far more comfortable for your pet.

Diseases may not strike as suddenly as automobile accidents, but dog and cat owners should know something of the basic symptoms of the major pet diseases so they can be on the look-out and get the animal to the veterinarian when necessary.

If, for instance, your dog or cat discharges at the eyes, coughs or wheezes, you should not rush for the bottle of anti-worm medicine. Be sure first that that is what is really wrong. Too many people today are following the foolish motto "worm cats and dogs when in doubt."

Not only do such persons waste many bottles of medicine and pills, but they sometimes harm the animal. Some of the same symptoms that persons think indicate worms may mean the animal has cat or dog distemper or some other infectious disease. If it is distemper, worming would not only be the wrong thing to do, but would be positively harmful.

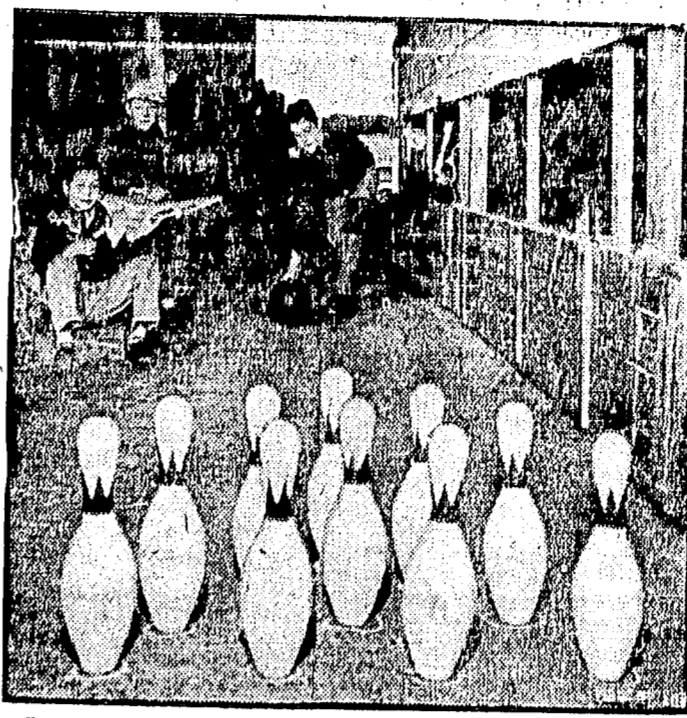

If you are not sure that worms are the difficulty, seek professional advice.

There is no known way to protect against worms. We can only cure the animal once he does get worms. But with other diseases it is possible to apply preventive techniques by having the animal vaccinated.

The earlier people have puppies vaccinated against infectious diseases the better. There are some vaccinations that can be given at 3 months of age, and some that can be given even earlier. There are some dog owners who think these injections cannot be given safely until the dog "comes of age" at 6 months.

They are mistaken. The 6 months date is only for licensing purposes. There is nothing which says a dog cannot be safely inoculated for rabies and other diseases before that time. The veterinarian will give you a certificate which can be used later when the dog's license is applied for.

The confusion apparently has arisen because in some Michigan counties dogs must receive rabies shots before they can be licensed. These include Wayne, Oakland, Cass, Eaton, Kalamazoo and Washtenaw counties at the present, I believe. Dogs must be licensed at 6 months of age, and usually yearly thereafter.

BARNHOUSE BOWLING—It takes a good bowler to get a strike on a hay-strewn concrete floor. Keith Carpenter, 14, attempts to master the obstacles as he delivers the ball in his dad's barn in Sheboygan Falls, Wis. The keepers, including spectators Lynn Carpenter, left, and Leroy Genske, Jr., bowl each evening between choruses.

Market Skill Pays Off For Stanton Man

Skilled management of a large-scale farming operation has paid off for Alvin Hansen of Montcalm county.

After buying the farm in 1946, he has combined recommended production practices with successful marketing to build his farming operation to its present size.

Hansen will tell the farm management practices he follows on his 600-acre cash crop farm near Stanton during the 1956 state farm management tour, August 15. The tour will stop at the Hansen farm at 2 p. m.

Starting point is the Walter B. Little farm near Greenville at 9 a. m., reported Everett Elwood, Michigan State university farm economist and state chairman of the tour.

Tour visitors will see Hansen's recently purchased irrigation system in operation. He makes full use of the equipment to provide ample moisture for potatoes, strawberries and cucumbers. Crops on the farm this year include 150 acres of potatoes, 25 acres of strawberries, 20 acres of cucumbers, 101 acres of wheat and 100 acres of clover for hay. A newly constructed spring-fed pool to provide irrigation water will be one of the farm's features to be discussed.

Also open for inspection will be a new 100,000-bushel potato storage and the Hansen's new ranch home. Mrs. Hansen will visit with women tour members and explain the features of the house.

Potato plots showing the use of chemical weed control measures may be inspected by visitors. A demonstration of portable irrigation equipment will conclude the tour.

Weeds Bring Rodents and Cause Fires

One of the best ways to help get rid of rodents and to reduce the fire hazard around grain storages is to eliminate weeds and other vegetation near the building, suggests M. H. Avery, county agricultural agent.

He advises knocking out the hiding place of rats and mice by removing vegetation from a strip about 6 feet wide around the building.

He then advises treating the area with a soil sterilizing chemical.

New Chemical Makes Plants Grow Faster and Sooner

Breeding new plant varieties, a long and tedious process, may be speeded up with the use of a new plant growth regulator now being tested at Michigan State university.

The regulator, called gibberellic acid, makes plants grow faster and mature sooner than usual with no harmful effects, according to Sylvan Wittwer, MSU horticulture researcher.

He has worked with H. M. Sell, agricultural chemist, and M. J. Bukovac, horticulture graduate student, to test the acid on peas, beans, celery, cabbage, broccoli, peppers, watermelon, sweetcorn, head and leaf lettuce, squash, cucumbers and carrots.

In all cases, growth was stepped up by making the plant cells increase in length. Some plant species flowered earlier, too.

On crops such as celery where the vegetative growth is important, Wittwer says the acid also appears quite promising for larger yields.

Still in the testing stage, the chemical is not available commercially. But Wittwer says it can be manufactured in quantities if further tests bear out its apparent value. Very small amounts are needed to bring increases in rate of growth.

The third annual Michigan plowing match will be at Constantine August 27 and 28 under sponsorship of the Constantine Rotary club, Michigan soil conservation district and Michigan State university.

Questions, Answers Given Concerning Subsoiling

August and early September is the time of year to plan on subsoiling. Because there is only limited research to serve as a basis for answering some of the questions, it is necessary to answer them on the basis of personal observation, experience and theory.

The following answers represent the combined opinion of the agricultural engineering and soil science departments of Michigan State University. As more research is completed, more definite answers can be given.

What is subsoiling?

Subsoiling is any tillage practice which affects the soil below plow depth. Subsoiling is known by several names such as chiseling, chisel plowing, subsoiling, plowsole breaking, etc.

Is "subsoiling" different from "deep tillage"?

Some people use the words subsoiling and deep tillage interchangeably. Others distinguish between the two. Subsoiling may require special tools. Deep tillage may be done with conventional implements adjusted to till deeper than average. Either interpretation is correct if the tillage increases the volume of soil used by plants.

What crops respond to subsoiling?

In Michigan, corn and sugar beet yields have been increased by subsoiling. Theoretically, any crop may yield more if the physical condition of the soil is improved. Deep rooted crops such as corn, sugar beets, alfalfa, sweet clover, etc., are more likely to respond than shallow-rooted crops.

Where will subsoiling increase crop yields?

Theoretically, all soils having hard, compact, dense, or impervious subsoils should respond to subsoiling, if no other condition limits plant growth.

How much does subsoiling cost?

Subsoilers cost $50 and up. The cost of operation varies considerably depending on soil conditions, depth of penetration and spacing of subsoilings. Subsoiling costs may approximate plowing costs.

How far apart should chiseling be done?

This depends upon the physical condition and the relative moisture level of the subsoil. More complete destruction of compacted layers occurs at low moisture content. Under very dry conditions, fracture lines 11 feet long on either side of a chisel have been measured. Experiments with sugar beets have shown no benefits from chiseling closer than 8 feet. Some believe that chiseling should be closer at higher moisture levels.

When should subsoiling be done?

Subsoiling should be done in the driest part of the year. In normal years, this would be in the latter part of August or the first part of September. At this time, the subsoil is likely to be dry. Any implement penetrating dry subsoil heaves, fractures and shatters it. Breakage of the brittle, compact zone is more complete in dry soil, but is also effective in moist soil. Subsoiling is ineffective in wet soil.

How often should a field be subsoiled?

This depends on the stability of the structure of the subsoil. The subsoil does not contain much organic matter. Therefore, the structure usually is unstable. Where subsoiling increases crop yields, it may be practical to subsoil previous to each deep rooted crop.

Is subsoiling ever harmful to soils?

Probably not if subsoiling is done when the soil is dry. Subsoiling at high moisture levels puddles the soil and then would be harmful.

What soil types might be expected to respond to subsoiling?

Any soil type may respond to subsoiling if a plow pan (a compact layer caused by working the soil at a high moisture level or by heavy power, tillage and harvesting equipment) or a plow sole (a compact layer caused by fine dust particles filtering downward through the large pore spaces at tillage time) has developed. Conover or heavy Miami would be the soil types most apt to need subsoiling in Ingham county.

How deep should the soil be worked?

Subsoiling should be deep enough to penetrate the compacted layers of subsoil. Some subsoilers penetrate 30 or 40 inches. However, tilling the soil to this depth is not necessary if the compacted zone is shallower. Many subsoilers are operated at a depth of 18 to 21 inches.

Will subsoiling substitute for field drainage?

Subsoiling increases the water holding capacity of the soil and, in many cases, improves the drainage characteristics of a soil, but it is not a substitute for tile or open ditch drains.

Do tiled fields ever need subsoiling?

Yes, if subsoiling fractures a compact layer in the subsoil, tile may be more effective. Care should be taken so that tiles are not broken or moved during subsoiling. Some people feel that subsoiling may aid in drainage if the field is worked across the tile lines rather than parallel.

Is mole draining the same as subsoiling?

No. Similar implements are used, but they are used under different conditions. The purpose of mole draining is to get rid of excess water, and the purpose of subsoiling is to alter the structure of the subsoil.

Is subsoiling practical only on level land?

Subsoilers are easily used on sloping land. They should be used on the contour so that water will not collect and cause excessive erosion in chisel marks. Some reports have been made indicating the surface runoff is significantly reduced by subsoiling. Under such conditions, water enters the soil instead of being discharged over the surface of the soil.

Does subsoiling influence other tillage operations?

The act of subsoiling causes small ridges to form on the soil surface. Plowing across the ridges may be rough. Little difficulty is experienced in plowing diagonally across or parallel to chisel marks.

Should a field be fall plowed after subsoiling?

Spring plowing is strongly recommended after subsoiling because there is less opportunity for surface soil to filter downward and fill the pore space created by subsoiling.

How much power does a subsoiler require?

Power requirements depend on soil conditions, vegetation and depth of penetration. Generally speaking, subsoilers are designed for specific kinds and sizes of tractors. Under Michigan conditions, it may require a 45 h. p. tractor to pull a subsoiler down to 20 inches. Ninety h. p. have been required to pull a chisel 35 inches deep.

Can subsoilers be used to place fertilizer and lime in the soil below plow depth?

Yes. Several companies make subsoilers with fertilizer attachments which distribute fertilizer or lime uniformly from plow depth to chisel depth. Some are designed for either liquid or solid forms of fertilizer.

Are fertilizer and lime placed in the subsoil effective in increasing crop yields?

Reports from other states suggest some benefit from subsoil fertilization. Limited research in Michigan has not shown any greater benefit from placing fertilizer in the subsoil than from using the same fertilizer in the surface soil. Subsoiling has increased the yield of marketable sugar beets 3 1/2 tons per acre.

Picnic Planned At Carson City

Circus thrills, showmanship and a band will feature the 1956 Dairyland picnic fair at Carson City park on Thursday, August 16.

The one-day event opens with livestock judging at 9:30 a. m. Exhibitors must have their animals on the grounds, officially entered and ready to show, by 9:00 a. m. The entire program is sponsored by Dairyland Cooperative Creamery Co. of Carson City and Greenville.

Open class livestock judging, excepting Guernseys, includes all breeds and classes of dairy animals; hogs and junior beef cattle. There will be a special show for Guernseys sponsored by the Montcalm County Guernsey Breeders' Association, with William Jorgensen, Edmore, in charge, and Ed Wright, Saginaw, judging.

Other features of the morning program include scoring of butter samples, to determine proper grade and possible flavor defects, open to persons of all ages. There will be a kiddies pet parade, for boys and girls under 15 years.

SYLVAN WITTMER, horticulture researcher at Michigan State University, inspects a bean plant treated 2 weeks previously with a growth regulator called gibberellic acid. Compare it to the untreated plant at left. The chemical has produced similar results on other crops. (MSU photo.)

Good Dairy Returns Are Plan Result

In order to make a reasonable return for his labor in the dairy business these days a farmer must have:

Cows that produce at least 10,000 lb of milk each.

High quality roughage that must be fed liberally.

A return of at least $350 in milk sales per cow per year.

At least $1,500 income per $1,

000 invested in equipment.

More than 200,000 lb of milk sales per farm worker per year.

These were the conclusions of a committee of specialists at Michigan State University who studied the present dairy situation.

The specialists found that when a farmer is not making a reasonable return for his labor in dairying, he may be weak in any one or all of the points they listed.

Eighty-eight people were killed and 7,200 seriously injured in farm work accidents last year in Michigan.

Credit Board Picks Farmer

Glenn C. Livermore, a farmer from Romeo, has been appointed a member of the Farm Credit Board of St. Paul for a term expiring December 31, 1958.

Livermore is one of the 2 appointive members on the 7-man board. The other 5 members are elected by the farmers using the credit services of national farm loan associations, production credit associations, and the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives.

The 7-man board, of which Livermore is a member, also serves as the board of directors of the Federal Land Bank, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, the Production Credit Corporation, and the Bank for Cooperatives, all of St. Paul.

Livermore has been active in agricultural credit work for many years. He is a director and president of Homestead National Farm Loan association at Richmond. He served 2 years on the NPLA advisory committee in the Farm Credit district of St. Paul. For the past 3 1/2 years, Livermore has been a member of the national NPLA advisory committee. He is also a member of Eastern Michigan Production Credit association, Lapeer, and a director of Macomb County Farm Bureau.

The diversified farming operations on Livermore's 103-acre Macomb county farm include dairying, poultry and fruit.

Holstein Herd Runs to Heifers

R. J. Sturman of Jackson has a Holstein herd that runs to the distaff side. The Sturmans had 24 heifer calves from their 29 Holstein cows during the past year, which must be some sort of a record.

Most of the calves were sired by a son of Pabst Roamer Dean Walker Lad, whose dam has a 2-year-old record of 19,000 lb of milk and 635 lb of butterfat.

Last fall the Sturmans bought a new sire. His first calves were twin heifers from the best cow in the herd. Making up the Sturman herd are 60 head. Only 2 are cows bought from outside. The others are all home-grown.

21 Top Ingham Dairy Herds Post 40-lb Butterfat Record

Twenty-one dairy herds representing Ingham No. 5 Dairy Herd Improvement association, Ingham-Williamston Dairy Herd Improvement association and part of Ingham-West Dairy Herd Improvement association averaged over 40 lb of butterfat for June. These herds are all on I. B. M. with Al Cook supervisor for Ingham No. 4, Marvin Bontrager supervisor for Ingham-Williamston and Wilbur Singer supervisor for Ingham-West.

Following is the record for these herds: Robert Hunt, 16 registered Holsteins, 42 lb fat, 1,290 lb milk; C. Blossy, 28 grade Holsteins, 51 lb fat, 1,470 lb milk; H. Ingham Sheep Men Join Washtenaw-Lenawee Tour

Five carloads of Ingham farmers and 4-11 members attended the area sheep management tour July 12 in Washtenaw and Lenawee counties. The tour was planned by the extension agents, in cooperation with Michigan State.

Five stops were set up to visit sheep farms, with a noon luncheon of lamb sandwiches furnished by the Michigan Sheep Producers. Four hundred farmers attended the tour.

The first stop was made at the Guy Hoover farm near Clinton, where Guy has 350 fine wool ewes. He was using Suffolk lambs to cross on his ewes and bred to have his lambs dropped in early May.

This gave him a chance to shear the ewes before lambing and to get them on pasture, which he felt saved considerable time. Hoover follows the program of phenothiazine and salt before the sheep at all times. He drenches in August for the ewes and drenches the lambs when they come off pasture in the later fall.

Markets All Lambs

He puts the lambs on grain to finish them all in the fall, since they are crossbreeds which he does not want to keep. He then buys native ewes for replacements to his eye flock.

Hoover uses rotation pasture for his flock. For the hoof rot, which usually appears in the spring, he uses a treatment composed of 1/3 formaldehyde to 2/3 glycerin.

Graydon Blank of Michigan State emphasized that it is important along with the treatment to do a good job of trimming the animals' feet. After the material has been thoroughly mixed, it can be applied with an oil can. It is effective only if a good job of trimming has been done. Art Diehl of Ingham mentioned that he trims all of the sheep's and lambs' feet in spring or early summer.

Hoover mentioned that since he sheared before lambing, he has not dipped for 4 years and hasn't had external parasites.

Pasture Is Bluegrass

His pasture program is interesting in that he uses considerable bluegrass pasture, Canada and Kentucky bluegrass. He uses this pasture because he feels that it lasts longer, doesn't have to be plowed up and replaced, that it does not cause any bloating, and makes less work for one man, since he does not have to replace the pasture. He has fertilized his pasture regularly and takes the sheep off for a period when the pasture is eaten down then brings them back after it has had 3 or 4 weeks rest.

Professor Erdman of Michigan State University mentioned that Canada and Kentucky bluegrass pastures are good grasses for sheep, as they will even eat the dry grass. A question was asked whether or not Birdsfoot Trefoil wouldn't be a good pasture for sheep and Erdman mentioned that they had limited experience but 5 years of work shows that Birdsfoot is about equal to other legumes but does not cause bloat, which is in its favor.

Escotts Use Dry Feeding

The next stop was made then at the Paul Escott & Son farm. The Escotts started in 1933. They have a different type of program with entirely dry feeding of their sheep, keeping them in the lot all the time. They started with sheep because they wanted to replace steer feeding, which didn't look very profitable. They carry 100 Western ewes and use Suffolk and Corriedale bucks to get good market lambers. This year they had 87 ewes and 108 lambs. The reason for dry-lot feeding is that they have only 80 acres of land. It takes 30 acres to produce the hay and grain for the ewes and the lambs and the balance can be used for cash crops. He feeds 2 pounds of hay plus 6 pounds of silage daily, using grass silage in the summer and filling the silos again with corn silage in the fall. Escott has his lambs dropped March 20 to April 10. He shears 2 weeks before lambing. This year he was able to take advantage of the high lamb market by putting 13 of his early lambs on the early July market at 81 pounds, receiving 24 1/2¢ per pound. Prices usually drop in July so it was suggested that he might have his lambs dropped a little bit earlier and try to get on an earlier market. In fact, one of the Detroit market men mentioned that other farmers that were on the tour had marketed lambs earlier, receiving 20¢ for some and 27¢ for others.

Experts pointed out that some farmers are carrying their lambs too long. If they would have them dropped early, creep feed them on grain, and push them to market, they could save keeping the lambs a longer period and get a higher price for lambs on this earlier market, they said.

Parasites Are Discussed

The question was brought up regarding parasites on dry lot. Graydon Blank mentioned that they had checked this flock of sheep for worms and coccidiosis. The sheep showed almost no worm trouble but did have some coccidiosis. He felt that if they kept native lambs which would become somewhat immune to the coccidiosis, they wouldn't have a great deal of trouble. However, it would be dangerous to bring in feeder lambs from out of the state to put on land where the local native lambs had been running, as there naturally would be some coccidiosis eggs which might contaminate them.

Wiedman Is Retired

The third stop just before lunch was made at the farm of Herman Wiedman, north of Clinton. Wiedman carried 40 registered Corriedale ewes and mentioned that he was a retired man and had the sheep for more or less "busy work" and because he liked them. He mentioned that after he moved to this small farm, his wife said one day, "Herman, you don't look so good. You'd better buy some sheep." Herman bought the sheep and says he believes there is something in the fact that older men need something that they are interested in to work with and, of course, in addition it brings in revenue.

Wiedman has his lambs dropped in April and early May. He saves all lambs until winter and does not castrate rams since he has a registered herd. In the early winter he sorts the lambs carefully, pulling out the poor lambs to sell, keeping the good lambs for selling to other producers as yearling rams and ewe lambs to sell as breeders at one or 2 years of age.

Wiedman practices 3 drenches per year; a drench in the spring as soon as the ewes are through lambing, a second drench in August and a drench in the fall when coming off pasture. He follows another practice of marking all sheep and lambs as soon as the lambs are dropped so that he knows which lambs belong to which ewes. He uses wool branding paint for marking the sheep. This can be purchased from the Jackson Wool Co-op in Jackson. He mentioned that he had had very little trouble with stiff lamb disease but feeds the ewes 1/3 wheat and 2/3 oats as a grain ration before lambing.

Breeds Are Discussed

The noon program during lunch was a discussion on breeds of sheep. Several breeds of sheep were brought in by local farmers and the types discussed. Dr. Johnson of the state department of agriculture brought out the fact that they are having a campaign underway to eliminate scab. A hindane double strength for scab was suggested, as well as a check with the local veterinarian.

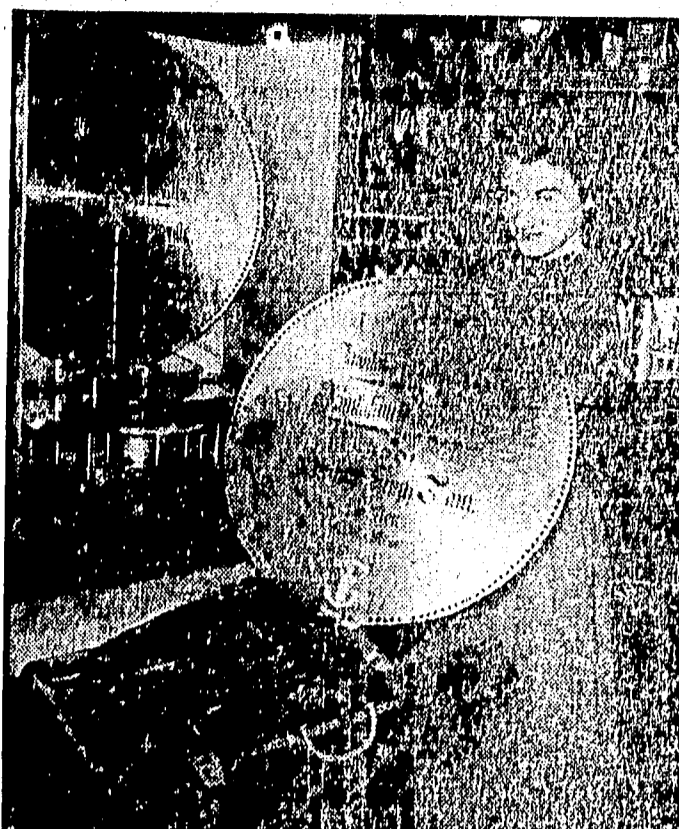

The first stop after dinner was made at the Vic Groosman farm north of Manchester. Groosman carried 170 Corriedale grade ewes and this year had 190 lambs. His lambs were dropped in early May. He drenched this year July 4 and dipped in the late spring. Groosman also alternates his pasture but uses alfalfa brome mostly.

He culls ewes to about 150 each fall, to remove those with poor udders or broken mouths. He does not grain his lambs but carries them through until February or March of the following year for market. This means that he has to use considerable grain to get the lambs ready for market. The last couple of years he has been using Cheviot rams on his Corriedale ewes.

The last stop was made at the George Hyst farms. George Hyst has had outstanding success with Blacktop sheep, receiving many honors in Chicago on his fleeces. He carries the Blacktop flock and now has added Corriedales.

Milking Time Changes

Research in New Zealand has shattered the theory that cows must be milked at regular intervals. Many farmers have adopted the 12-hour program, 5 in the morning and 5 at night, or 6 in the morning and 6 at night. Milking intervals of 8 and 16 hours in New Zealand have produced as much milk and as much butterfat as the 12 hour. The 8 and 16-hour intervals would permit one milking after breakfast at 8 a. m. and the other before supper at 4 p. m.

PUT ANOTHER TWOPENCE IN—It's the world's oldest jukebox with a built-in brass section. Ann Dum holds a king-sized record for the "polyphon," made in Leipzig, Germany, over 120 years ago. The polyphon still produces music for patrons in a London, England, restaurant. When a coin is deposited in the side of the machine, the brass disc rotates, striking keys in music-box fashion.

August Seeding Of Alfalfa Gets Top Results

Summer seeding of alfalfa is poor wheat pay. If seedlings in wheat didn't turn out as expected, a seeding now will help make sure there's plenty of livestock feed for next year.

County Agricultural Agent M. H. Avery says that good rains in Ingham county should be a big help in making summer seedings.

Alfalfa should be seeded between August 1 and 20—the sooner the better. Good, firm, seedbed in fields that have been summer fallowed or wheat and oat fields that were plowed after harvest are best he adds.

Soil should be tested before seeding the field. Soil with ph of 7 is sweet enough for alfalfa. If the test shows a need for lime it should be applied immediately and disked in, he cautions.

Milo B. Tesar of Michigan State university's farm crops department says these points must be kept in mind when making seeding.

First, the soil should be firmed with a cultipacker. New seedings do poorly on a loose seedbed.

If a short-term stand is the goal one of the hardy, northern-grown alfalfa varieties should be planted. If the seedling is to be left for 3 years or longer, Tesar recommends the Ranger variety. The soil test recommendations must be followed as far as fertilizer is concerned. If no soil test is used about 400 lb per acre of 0-20-20 or its equivalent will give good fertility.

Band seeding gives best results. Cultipacking after seeding should always be done in August.

Tesar recommends seeding alfalfa without a companion crop unless the soil is hilly or when bromegrass needs to be sown with the legume.

He points out that seeding will produce much better in 1957 if it isn't pastured this year.

Fame Is Late For Cowham Bull

Posthumous fame has come to Cowham Farm Alice's King, a registered Guernsey bull owned by Michigan Artificial Breeders Cooperative, Inc., East Lansing. Two years and 10 months after his death he has been named a summarized sire. To get that acclaim, a bull must have at least 10 daughters with official production records.

"Alice's King," has 18 tested daughters that have made 48 official records. Their average production is 8,514 lb of milk and 460 lb of fat.

The Guernsey bull was bred by C. F. Cowham and H. M. Dancer, Jackson. This Bull's sire was Riegeldale King's Philosopher and his dam was Rex's Alice of Cowham Farm. She posed an official production record of 17,791 lb of milk and 827 lb of fat.

"Alice's King," also has had 11 of his registered daughters classified with an average rating of desirable.

If You're Like Me

When it comes to matters of personal business and money matters, you usually "do it yourself"—but in this busy world of ours one often encounters someone with a power of attorney.

This legal sounding title doesn't make a lawyer out of you. It is simply a written document authorizing another person to act as one's agent or attorney. For example, you might give one to your wife during a prolonged absence or to an agent to buy or sell property or to your lawyer to handle certain important matters.

Any person legally competent to act for himself may give a power of attorney to another. A minor cannot. The person who delegates the power is called the principal and the person to whom the authority is given is the agent or attorney in fact.

Other people can deal with the agent who has a power of attorney knowing that the law will enforce the obligation against the principal.

Because the person giving the power is responsible for the acts of the agent, it is best to spell out the relationship definitely and clearly. There are 2 types of powers of attorney—general and special. The agent with a general power can act in all proper cases as if he were the person who gave him the power. This covers a lot of ground. On the other hand, a special power gives authority to do only certain things, like sell your summer cottage or collect a debt.

A power of attorney is often useful and necessary but you should know your agent, be sure of your purpose and the power you wish to grant.

The annual state plowing matches in Michigan will be held at Constantine, August 27-28.
