14

Non-finite and verbless clauses

Rodney Huddleston

1 Preliminaries 1173
1.1 Matters of form and function 1173
1.2 The catenative construction 1176
1.3 To-infinitivals with and without a subject 1178
1.4 The structure of infinitivals 1181
1.4.1 The clause subordinator for 1181
1.4.2 The infinitival subordinator to 1183
1.4.3 Bare infinitivals 1187
1.5 The structure of gerund-participials 1187
1.6 Case of the subject NP in gerund-participials 1191
1.7 Understood subjects 1193
2 The simple catenative construction 1194
2.1 To-infinitivals (I hoped to convince them vs I seemed to convince them) 1194
2.2 Gerund-participials (We enjoyed sailing vs We kept sailing) 1198
2.3 Concealed passives (The house needs painting) 1199
3 The complex catenative construction 1200
3.1 To-infinitivals 1201
3.1.1 The plain-complex construction (I persuaded Jill to go vs I intended Jill to go) 1201
3.1.2 The for-complex construction (I arranged for her to go by bus) 1203
3.1.3 The oblique-complex construction (I signalled to her to move off the road) 1204
3.2 Gerund-participials 1204
3.2.1 Catch vs resent (I caught him doing it vs I resented him doing it) 1204
3.2.2 See (I saw him doing it) 1205
3.2.3 Concealed passives with intervening NP (He needs his hair cutting) 1206
4 The catenative complement as a distinct type of complement 1206
4.1 Non-finites in relation to NP and AdjP complements 1206
4.2 The analysis of auxiliary verbs 1209
4.2.1 The dependent-auxiliary analysis 1210
4.2.2 The catenative-auxiliary analysis 1214
4.3 The traditional distinction between 'gerunds' and 'present participles' 1220
4.4 Catenative complements, adjuncts, and coordinates 1222
5 Classification of catenative verbs 1225
5.1 Framework of classification 1225
5.2 Class 1: catenative verbs appearing only in the simple construction 1227
5.3 Class 2: catenative verbs appearing in both simple and complex constructions 1229

5.4 Class 3: catenative verbs appearing only in the complex construction 1233
5.5 Index to the classification 1239
5.6 Further remarks on the form-types 1240
5.6.1 To-infinitival vs gerund-participial 1240
5.6.2 The minor form-types: bare infinitivals and past-participials 1244
6 Hollow non-finite clauses 1245
6.1 General properties 1245
6.2 Gerund-participials 1246
6.3 Hollow to-infinitivals 1246
7 Non-catenative complements in clause structure 1251
7.1 Subject and extraposed subject 1252
7.2 Object and extraposed object 1255
7.3 Predicative complement 1255
8 Further complement uses of non-finite clauses 1256
8.1 Non-finite complements of adjectives 1256
8.2 Non-finite complements of nouns 1259
8.3 Non-finite complements in the structure of PPs 1262
8.4 Indirect and matrix-licensed non-finite complements 1262
8.5 Interrogative infinitival clauses 1264
9 Non-finite clauses as modifiers and supplements 1264
10 Verbless clauses 1266
11 Further remarks on the interpretation of subjectless non-finites 1268