On October 7, 2012, Inspector Robert Lopez intercepted 12 outdoor plants from a self-mover originating from Charlotte, North Carolina. One ant was intercepted on the plants and identified by the laboratory as Q-rated Pachycondyla chinensis (Asian needle ant). The plants were destroyed at the station.

About Asian Needle Ant:

Biology: This invasive species prefers to nest in dark, damp areas like leaf litter, beneath logs or rocks, in soil, under doormats, and other manmade objects. Native ant species are not normally found in areas colonized by this ant.

Distribution: Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, and possibly other states.

Human Health: The sting from these ants may be severe. To view human health risks caused by Asian needle ant sting, click on the link below:
