

Overseas Territories of New Zealand

COOK ISLANDS

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, the Cook Islands made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government released its National Policy Framework for Children, which aims to protect the rights of children, and enacted the Family Protection and Support Bill, which includes protection for children from abuse and neglect. Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands. However, the government has not established adequate legal protection to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances, or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the minimum age for work in the Cook Islands is not in compliance with international standards.

NIUE

NO ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Niue made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Niue. However, the government has not established adequate legal protection to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances, or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, Niue has not established a minimum age for work and lacks a law that prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children.

TOKELAU

NO ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Tokelau made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Tokelau. However, the government has not established adequate legal protection to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit forced labor and child trafficking. In addition, Tokelau has not established a minimum age for work and does not prohibit hazardous occupations and activities for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands, Niue, and Tokelau.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

COOK ISLANDS

The Cook Islands is a self-governing territory in free association with New Zealand, and it follows a combination of its own laws and some of the laws of New Zealand and the United Kingdom that were enacted prior to self-government in 1965. (1; 2)

Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to the Cook Islands, unless New Zealand acted expressly on behalf of the Cook Islands. (1) The Cook Islands has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 1).

NIUE

Niue is a self-governing territory of New Zealand and is fully responsible for its internal affairs. (3)

Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to Niue, unless it was done expressly on behalf of Niue. (1) Niue has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 1).

Overseas Territories of New Zealand

TOKELAU

Tokelau is a non-self governing territory of New Zealand; however, New Zealand statutory law does not apply to Tokelau unless it is expressly extended to Tokelau. (4)

International treaties are applied only with the consent of the Government of Tokelau. New Zealand's ratification of conventions does not apply automatically to Tokelau. (1; 5; 4) Tokelau has not ratified any key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratifications
	Cook Islands	Niue	Tokelau

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓	✓

 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Governments of the Cook Islands, Niue, and Tokelau have established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in their legal frameworks to adequately protect children from child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

There are no armed forces in the Cook Islands, Niue, and Tokelau. (6) New Zealand is responsible for the defense of the territories at their request and consultation. (6)

The Employment Relations Act prohibits children younger than age 13 from being employed. (7; 13) The Act also prohibits a school-aged person, defined as ages 13 to 16, from working during normal school hours, working for more than 10 hours a week outside of school hours, or doing work that is not considered light work. (7; 13) However, legislation does not determine the activities in which light work is permitted. (7) The Cook Islands does not criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly the production and trafficking of drugs. The law does not criminally prohibit non-state armed groups from recruiting children under age 18. (11)

Although Niue's Public Service Regulations prohibit the permanent employment of any person under age 18 in public service, minimum age protections do not apply to children working in the private sector. (17; 18) Niue has not established a minimum age for hazardous work or determined by law or regulation the types of work which are hazardous for children. (17) Niue's trafficking provision does not clearly criminalize domestic trafficking or trafficking of children in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. (14) Niue does not criminalize the use, procurement, or offering of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances. Niue does not criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly the production and trafficking of drugs. (17) The law does not criminally prohibit non-state armed groups from recruiting children under 18. (11)

Tokelau has also not criminalized the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs, or their recruitment by non-state armed groups. (11; 17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor in the Cook Islands, Niue, and Tokelau. However, the Government of the Cook Islands has established policies related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

COOK ISLANDS
Policy	Description
Cook Islands National Youth Policy (2015–2020)	Identifies priority areas for youth, including education and work opportunities, health, and youth risk and resilience. (25)
National Policy Framework for Children (2017–2020)†	Provides a framework to protect the rights of children with outcomes focused on their health, education, safety, economic opportunities, and international connectivity. (26) Aims to protect the rights of children by strengthening data collection on children to improve the government’s understanding of their abuse and experience in the legal system and improving collaboration between the government, parents, and the community. (13; 26)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2015, the Cook Islands released a youth study that indicated that children and young adults ages 15 through 24 were employed in restaurants, accommodations, offices, and other areas in the Cook Islands; however, the report did not specifically address whether children under age 18 were involved in child labor. (23)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT CHILD LABOR
