Executive Summary

Farsight's passive DNS database, DNSDB is based on data collected from sensors all around the world plus data from ICANN zone data files (now CZDS).

An industry first, this report, "A Decade of Passive DNS" provides an unprecedented snapshot of the use and popularity of top-level domains over a ten-year-period. The findings are based on what Farsight Security has seen in passive DNS from 2010-2019 based on a ten-year data rollup, excluding DNSSEC-related records. This "decadely" file allows us to report on four measures for that period for each of the 1,576 IANA-recognized TLDs:

- The total number of unique RRsets (unique combinations of RRname, RRtype, Rdata, Bailiwick, sensor or zone data): 130,780,406,614
- The total number of unique fully qualified domain names (FQDNs) seen: 51,326,781,632
- The total number of unique effective 2nd-level domains (or "delegation points") seen: 1,071,823,976, and
- The sum of counts, or total number of cache misses: 42,144,068,459,975.

We also provide RRtype distributions for each of the IANA-recognized TLDs, reporting the percent of

- "A" records (IPv4 address records): 64,544,665,611 (49.4%)
- "AAAA" records (IPv6 address records): 8,748,662,162 (6.7%)
- "CNAME" records (aliases from one name to another): 16,978,262,437 (13.0%)
- "MX" records (SMTP server for a domain): 871,051,493 (0.67%)
- "NS" records (name servers for a domain): 3,479,584,119 (2.66%)
- "SOA" records (start of authority records for the domain): 28,237,873,664 (21.6%)
- "TXT" records (text records with arbitrary content): 3,062,311,048 (2.3%)
- "PTR" records (pointer records, or "inverse address" records): 828,517,573 (0.63%)
- "NULL" records (see <https://www.farsightsecurity.com/blog/txt-record/recordtype-null-20170308/>): 3,555,968,747 (2.72%)
- Numeric TYPE code records (RRtype numeric codes not associated with a symbolic name): 410,341,291 (0.31%), and
- All other miscellaneous RRtypes: 63,168,469 (0.05%).

[note: percentages do not sum to 100.0% due to rounding]

We believe the information included in this report will be of great interest to those who may be curious about the relative size of various top-level domains, and the distribution of RRtypes as seen by our sensors. This data will also allow current and prospective customers to get a lower bound of just how large DNSDB's data actually is, based on what was received through 2019. The bulk of this report consists of the above tables, but we also include information about how this report was prepared, and graphics that bring home key points about the most-seen TLDs and other data of particular interest.

I. Introduction

Farsight has been collecting and indexing passive DNS data in DNSDB® since June 2010. In this report, we're sharing per-top level domain (TLD) summary statistics for our first decade of passive DNS data in DNSDB. Things to note about this data:

- This summary is based solely on data from 2010-2019, and does NOT include subsequent data, e.g., it does NOT include data from 2020 or 2021. Because our volume of raw traffic per year has been growing continuously over time, this means that these totals are a very conservative lower bound of what's currently in DNSDB.
- This summary is based solely on data in the Farsight DNS MTBL data; it does NOT consider the contents of the separate Farsight DNSSEC MTBL data (and for context, the DNSSEC files are consistently larger than the DNS MTBL files).
- We only report on top-level domains that IANA currently recognizes (or has previously recognized) (see the list at <https://www.iana.org/domains/root/db>).

Why create this report now? There are a variety of reasons, including:

- Farsight had experimentally created a "decadely" rollup and that was too good of an opportunity to let go by unmeasured and unreported.
- Many users are curious about the relative size of various TLDs. There's a general sense that dot com is the largest TLD, and that's certainly true, but what of the other TLDs? Have some become broadly popular while others have had more limited uptake?
- It is common for virtually all passive DNS providers to claim in their marketing that they are the "biggest." While it is not our role to contest those claims, we wanted to provide hard statistics about the first decade of our passive DNS data as a comparative touchstone.
- We also wanted to carefully define the various measures that we're reporting so you, the user, can understand precisely what it is we're tallying up, and thus hopefully compare "apples-to-apples" yourself
- We wanted to look at the distribution of RRtypes in each TLD since some domains may have an atypical distribution.
- As part of our continual curation process, some data currently in DNSDB may be elided in the future. This report serves as a checkpoint for our data as of 2019.

II. Understanding What's Being Reported

We've noticed that some passive DNS services may be vague about exactly what they're reporting when quoting statistics in marketing materials. We want to ensure that we're absolutely clear about what we're measuring and reporting. In Table I of this report, we report four summary measures for each IANA top-level domain (TLD):

1. Unique RRsets: DNSDB separately tracks each unique combination of (RRname, RRtype, Bailiwick, Rdata and Zone/Sensor Source). For example, two of many unique RRsets for `www.farsightsecurity.com` would be:

;; record times: 2020-08-12 00:04:22 .. 2021-01-18 20:04:15 (~159d 19h 59m)
;; count: 2182; bailiwick: farsightsecurity.com.
www.farsightsecurity.com. AAAA 2620:11c:f008::95
```

;; record times: 2020-08-11 21:45:46 .. 2021-01-18 23:55:47 (~160d 2h 10m)
;; count: 4934; bailiwick: farsightsecurity.com.
www.farsightsecurity.com. A 104.244.14.95

Those RRsets are tracked separately because the record types ("A" vs. "AAAA") and the associated Rdata ("2620:11c:f008::95" and "104.244.14.94") differ. Other RRsets may differ in other respects, such as having different RRnames, different bailiwicks, or having been collected from sensors vs having been seen in zone file data, etc.

ANY combination of RRname, RRtype, Bailiwick, Rdata and Zone/Sensor Source that differs in ANY way from previously seen combinations will be tracked as a new unique RRset with its own associated "time first seen", "time last seen", and "count".

2. Unique FQDNs (Fully Qualified Domain Names): These are the set of unique RRname values (sometimes simply called "hostnames"). Examples of a few unique RRnames (in this case from the `washington.edu` domain) include:

biochemistry.washington.edu.
chem.washington.edu.
cis.washington.edu.
climate.washington.edu.
depts.washington.edu.
econ.washington.edu.

Note that each of those domains has a "hostname" part tacked onto the `washington.edu` delegation point. In Table I below, we report the total number of unique FQDNs within each IANA-recognized top level domain for the decade's worth of data.

3. Unique Effective 2nd-Level Domains: These are unique delegation points. Some example of effective 2nd-level domains include:

farsightsecurity.com
fsi.io dnsdb.info

The three examples mentioned above all feature domains registered immediately above a single label top-level domain.

Some domains get registered above an effective top-level domain that is composed of two or more labels. For example:

-- bbc.co.uk is a domain name that was registered above "co.uk" (rather than just above "uk")

-- springfield.k12.or.us is a domain name that was registered above "k12.or.us" (rather than just above "us")

We look to the Public Suffix List (see <https://publicsuffix.org/>) for details about what constitutes an effective top-level domain.

4. Sum of Counts: Each RRset has an associated "count" representing the number of times we saw a cache-miss query/response pair for that unique RRset. For example:

;; record times: 2020-08-12 00:04:22 .. 2021-01-18 20:04:15 (~159d 19h 59m)
;; count: 2182; bailiwick: farsightsecurity.com.
www.farsightsecurity.com. AAAA 2620:11c:f008::95
```

;; record times: 2020-08-11 21:45:46 .. 2021-01-18 23:55:47 (~160d 2h 10m)
;; count: 4934; bailiwick: farsightsecurity.com.
www.farsightsecurity.com. A 104.244.14.95

Looking at just those couple of RRsets, the "sum of counts" would be 2,182+4,934=7,116.

Due to TTL effects and other considerations, you should avoid making fine-grained comparisons between pairs of sums-of-counts values. That is, if two sums-of-counts vary by perhaps ten or fifteen percent, don't get too excited about that difference.

For the reader's convenience, we've also included the domain type and the "entity" associated with each TLD either the domain's sponsoring organization (for generic domains and sponsored domains), or the name of the country (for ccTLDs)).

III. How We Extracted These Values

DNSDB data's flows through the Farsight Security Information Exchange, and is written in "minutely" files. Normally Farsight aggregates or "rolls up" those files according to the following scheme:

- Minutely MTBL files roll up into decaminutely files
- Decaminutely files roll up into hourly files
- Hourly files roll up into daily files
- Daily files roll up into monthly files
- Monthly files roll up into yearly files.

Relatively fine-grained files (particularly hourly or daily files) make it possible to allocate traffic to various time buckets, but result in substantial relative overhead since the RRname, RRtype, Bailiwick, and Rdata will be the same in each MTBL file where a given RRset appears (the only varying fields would be the first seen time, last seen time, and count).

Rolling up fine grain files into more-fully-aggregated ones means that repeated information can be eliminated, resulting in a significant savings in disk space, I/O capacity, and CPU, albeit at a loss of ability to attribute traffic hits to specific (now-merged) time periods.

While yearly MTBL files are the highest level of aggregation Farsight normally produces, the company produced an experimental "decadely" MTBL files. That decadely file merged the first ten yearly MTBL files into a single relatively compact file covering the time period from 2010-2019. Conceptually, we could then extract the values we wanted from that decadely file for a given domain (such as the *.gov TLD) with simple Un*x shell commands:

$ export DNSTABLE_FNAME="filepath/dns.201X.DEC.mtbl"

unique RRsets
$ dnstable_lookup -j rrset *.gov | jq -r '.rrname' > gov-rrnames.txt
$ wc -l gov-rrnames.txt

unique RRnames
$ sort -u < gov-rrnames.txt > gov-rrnames-unique.txt $ wc -l gov-rrnames-unique.txt

unique effective 2nd-level domains
$ 2nd-level-dom-large < gov-rrnames-unique.txt | sort -u > gov-2ld-unique.txt
$ wc -l gov-2ld-unique.txt

sum of counts
$ dnstable_lookup -j rrset *.gov | jq -r '.count' > gov-counts.txt
$ sum-column < gov-counts.txt

To help decode the preceding command pipelines:

- Sort and wc are the familiar Un*x commands.

For the remaining commands:

- dnstable_lookup is part of <https://github.com/farsightsec/dnstable/>
- jq is at <https://stedolan.github.io/jq/>
- 2nd-level-dom-large is a small Perl script that looks like:

#!/usr/bin/perl
use IO::Socket::SSL::PublicSuffix; my $pslfile = 'public_suffix_list.dat';
my $ps = IO::Socket::SSL::PublicSuffix->from_file($pslfile);
while (my $line = <STDIN>) {
    chomp($line);
    my $root_domain = $ps->public_suffix($line,1);
    printf( "%s\n", $root_domain );
}
```

- sum-column is another small Perl script. It looks like:

#!/usr/bin/perl
my $total = 0;
while (my $line = <STDIN>) {
    chomp($line);
    $total=$total+int($line);
}
print( "$total\n" );

While that approach works, it is slow, FAR too slow if you're processing 1500+ TLDs (including some exceptionally large TLDs such as dot com!)

Fortunately, one of the report's co-authors was able to craft an alternative Golang program to do this processing far more efficiently than just using scripts. For example, to process *.gov:

$ time mtbl-lookup -dns joe:*.gov filepath/dns.201X.DEC.mtbl gov          63,960,398      28,597,123      7,716      120,833,464,340

real 0m49.796s user 1m18.532s
sys 0m1.684s

The four quoted values for the *.gov TLD represent the unique RRsets, the unique FQDNs, the unique effective 2nd-level domains, and the sum of counts from that code.

We ran that mtbl-lookup code for each of the yet-to-be-processed IANA-recognized TLDs.

IV. Limitations and Interpretative Considerations

A number of factors need to be recognized when viewing and interpreting the results in this report, including the following:

- Our Sensor Footprint Is Global, But Not Ubiquitous: While we see a tremendous volume of DNS traffic, and are continually working to improve our sensor coverage, we will never be able to see "all" global DNS traffic. No one sees all global DNS traffic. There is a possibility that our passive DNS sensors may NOT have visibility into a particularly exotic TLD that is largely used only in some remote corner of the world where we don't currently have sensor coverage. We have not seen any evidence of issues of this sort, but we acknowledge this potential limitation.
- We Collect Cache Miss Traffic Above Recursive Resolvers, And That Collection Is Impacted By Domain Owner TTL Choices: We intentionally collect passive DNS data in a privacy-respectful way, via sensors located above participating recursive resolvers. This means that we only see (and index) cache miss traffic, not each individual end-user's queries and responses. The cache miss traffic volume we see is obviously influenced by the popularity of each domain, but is also strongly influenced by the TTL (or "time to live") value set by the domain owner. While we have no reason to believe that there are TLD-wide TTL patterns (for example, we have NO REASON to believe that dot net domains tend to generally have long TTLs while dot org domains tend to generally have short TTLs, or vice versa) that might impact relative data volumes, TTLs are constantly changing and we've not formally studied and excluded this possibility.
- DNSDB Is Actively Curated: Farsight intentionally strives to maintain a good DNSDB signal-to-noise ratio -- no analyst is happy when their query returns numerous spurious records that are clearly irrelevant to their analysis. Part of that proprietary curation process involves managing domains that are low-value, privacy sensitive, or otherwise problematic. As an example, we've previously discussed sites running VPN-over-DNS services ("RECORD TYPE=NULL Records In DNSDB Mtbl Files," <https://www.farsightsecurity.com/blog/txt-record/recordtype-null-20170308/>). Those records are either (a) encrypted (and thus of limited use to typical Farsight customers), or (b) not-encrypted and potentially privacy sensitive, and either way, those records tend to be large and poorly compressible since each RRset is unique/non-recurring. We do our best to manage those records and similar problematic records when we detect them.
- The Summarized Traffic Spans A Decade, And A LOT Can Change Over That Time: MANY DNS-related changes have happened during the 2010 to 2019 period. Some of those things include:
 - May 2010: "First IDN ccTLDs Available," <https://www.icann.org/en/announcements/details/first-idn-cctlds-available-5-5-2010-en>
 - July 2010: Root Gets DNSSEC-Signed: "Internet security quietly reaches a milestone," <https://gcn.com/articles/2010/07/26/cybereye-dnssec-root-zone.aspx>
 - June 2011: "ICANN Approves Historic Change to Internet's Domain Name System | Board Votes to Launch New Generic Top-Level Domains," <https://www.icann.org/en/announcements/details/icann-approves-historic-change-to-internets-domain-name-system--board-votes-to-launch-new-generic-top-level-domains-20-6-2011-en>
 - June 2012: "Internet Society, Number Resource Organization, and Regional Internet Registries Reinforce Importance of IPv6 Deployment for the Future of the Internet," <https://web.archive.org/web/20120609063734/http://www.internetsociety.org/news/internet-society-number-resource-organization-and-regional-internet-registries-reinforce>

- April 2013: RFC6891, "Extension Mechanisms for DNS (EDNS(0))," <https://tools.ietf.org/html/rfc6891>
- April 2014: RFC7208, "Sender Policy Framework (SPF) for Authorizing Use of Domains in Email, Version 1," <https://tools.ietf.org/html/rfc7208>
- October 2016: "Stewardship of IANA Functions Transitions to Global Internet Community as Contract with U.S. Government Ends," <https://www.icann.org/en/announcements/details/stewardship-of-iana-functions-transitions-to-global-internet-community-as-contract-with-us-government-ends-1-10-2016-en>
- June 2018: "DNS Response Policy Zones (RPZ)," <https://tools.ietf.org/html/draft-vixie-dnsop-dns-rpz-00>

As you might expect, as each of the above changes happened, the passive DNS traffic we saw evolved. However, our report aggregates observed passive DNS traffic across that period, and is not showing how traffic changed within that period.

V. Decadely Stats: Summary Treemaps for RRsets by TLD, Unique FQDNS by TLD, Unique Effective 2nd-Level Domains by TLD, Sum of Counts by TLD

We appreciate the fact that looking at 1500+ rows-worth of statistical data can be quite the mind-numbing exercise. For that reason, we're providing summary treemaps (see https://www.rdocumentation.org/packages/treemapify/versions/2.5.5/topics/geom_treemap) for each of our four overall measures. In each treemap, the size of each box in the graph is proportional to the size of the domain for that measure, with the biggest box placed in the lower left-hand corner of the treemap.

Beyond a certain level, the boxes are not large enough to show the associated value in a readably-large font; when that point is reached, the boxes cease being labeled.

To maximize the number of boxes able to be successfully-labeled, we've rendered the value associated with each TLD in scientific notation. Thus, for example, 5.69E10 --> 56,900,000,000 (the actual value in this case was 56,856,574,612). Another example: 1.84E13 --> 18,400,000,000,000 (the actual value in this case was 18,444,484,104,736). While this allows more boxes to be labeled, the tradeoff is a loss of some precision. For full values, please consult the detailed table, or the abbreviated list of values for top TLDs included beside each treemap.

Sample tab-separated data looks like:

TLD	Type	Entity	RRsets	FQDNs	TwoLDs	Counts
aaa	Generic	American Automobile Association	6150.	5158.	4907.	33591373.
aarp	Generic	AARP	183200.	453.	435.	904597.
abarth	Generic	Fiat Chrysler Automobiles	2914.	1272.	1129.	1465056.
abb	Generic	ABB Ltd	297427.	1157.	741.	1619376.

[etc]

The "R" code to produce the tree graphs from that data file looks like:

library(ggplot2)
library(treemapify)
library(formattable)
library(stringr)
```

mydata <- read.table(file="decadely-counts.txt", sep='\t', header=TRUE, fill=TRUE, fileEncoding="ISO-8859-1")

pdf("decadely-plot-1.pdf")
mydata$RRsetNumeric <- as.numeric(mydata$RRsets) ggplot(mydata, aes(area = RRsetNumeric, label=paste(TLD,str_remove(formatC(RRsetNumeric,format="E",digits=2), "\\+"),sep="\n"))) + ggtitle("Number of Unique RRsets (Decadely File)") + geom_treemap() +
  geom_treemap_text(color="black", place="center", grow=TRUE)
dev.off()

pdf("decadely-plot-2.pdf")
mydata$FQDNsNumeric <- as.numeric(mydata$FQDNs) ggplot(mydata, aes(area = FQDNsNumeric, label=paste(TLD,str_remove(formatC(FQDNsNumeric,format="E",digits=2), "\\+"),sep="\n"))) + ggtitle("Number of Unique FQDNs (Decadely File)") + geom_treemap() +
  geom_treemap_text(color="black", place="center", grow=TRUE)
dev.off()

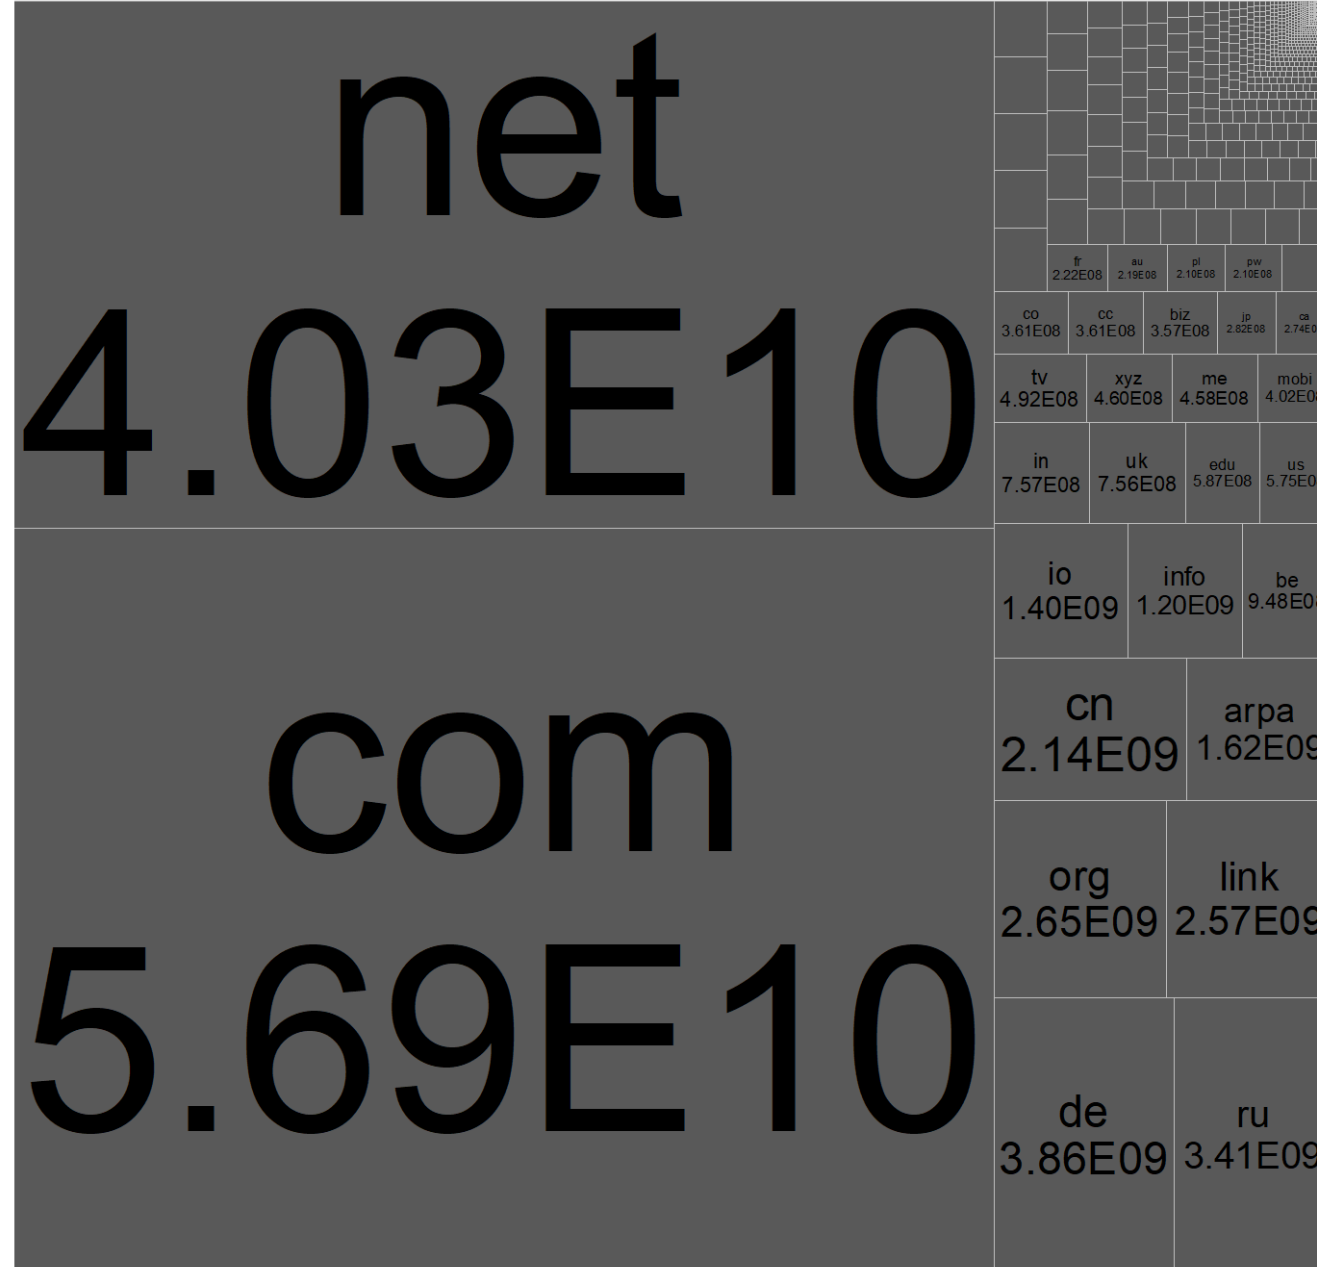

pdf("decadely-plot-3.pdf")
mydata$TwoLDsNumeric <- as.numeric(mydata$TwoLDs) ggplot(mydata, aes(area = TwoLDsNumeric, label=paste(TLD,str_remove(formatC(TwoLDsNumeric,format="E",digits=2), "\\+"),sep="\n"))) + ggtitle("Number of Unique Effective 2nd Level Domains (Decadely File)") + geom_treemap() +
  geom_treemap_text(color="black", place="center", grow=TRUE)
dev.off()

pdf("decadely-plot-4.pdf")
ggplot(mydata, aes(area = Counts, label=paste(TLD,str_remove(formatC(Counts,format="E", digits=2), "\\+"),sep="\n"))) + ggtitle("Sum of All RRset Counts (Decadely File)") + geom_treemap() +
  geom_treemap_text(color="black", place="center", grow=TRUE)
dev.off()

We'll now look at those four treemaps, one for each of our four measures. The TLDs with the largest values will have the largest boxes in each graph.

VII. Percentage Of RRsets By RRtype: Summary Treemap Across All IANA TLDS

Many users are also interested in understanding what fraction of all RRsets are of each RRtype for each TLD. Looking at the RRtypes across all RRsets and all TLDS, the breakdown looks like the following (RRtypes < 0.0001 omitted in table). Regarding the NULLs, see <https://www.farsightsecurity.com/blog/txt-record/recordtype-null-20170308/> ("TYPE*" represents all non-named numeric RRtypes).

VIII. Percentage Of RRsets By RRtype For Each IANA TLDs For The Decadely File

Just as we broke out summary counts by IANA TLD, we also have broken out RRtypes by IANA TLD. In each row, we've highlighted the largest value for that row. "TYPE*" represents all non-named "numeric" RRtypes. "Other" represents all miscellaneous named RRtypes not otherwise called out. (DNSSEC record types are contained in separate MTBL files, and have not been studied or included as part of this analysis.)

IX. Summary

You have now seen the per-TLD data for the Farsight passive DNS database from 2010-2019 (except for DNSSEC RRtypes). You've seen data for four measures for each of the 1,576 IANA TLDs (including classic gTLDs, ccTLDs, new gTLDs, and internationalized domain names (IDNs). Those four measures (and the overall totals for each) are:

- The total number of unique RRsets (unique combinations of RRname, RRtype, Rdata, Bailiwick, sensor or zone data): 130,780,406,614
- The total number of unique fully qualified domain names (FQDNs) seen: 51,326,781,632
- The total number of unique effective 2nd-level domains (or "delegation points") seen: 1,071,823,976, and
- The sum of counts, or total number of cache misses: 42,144,068,459,975.

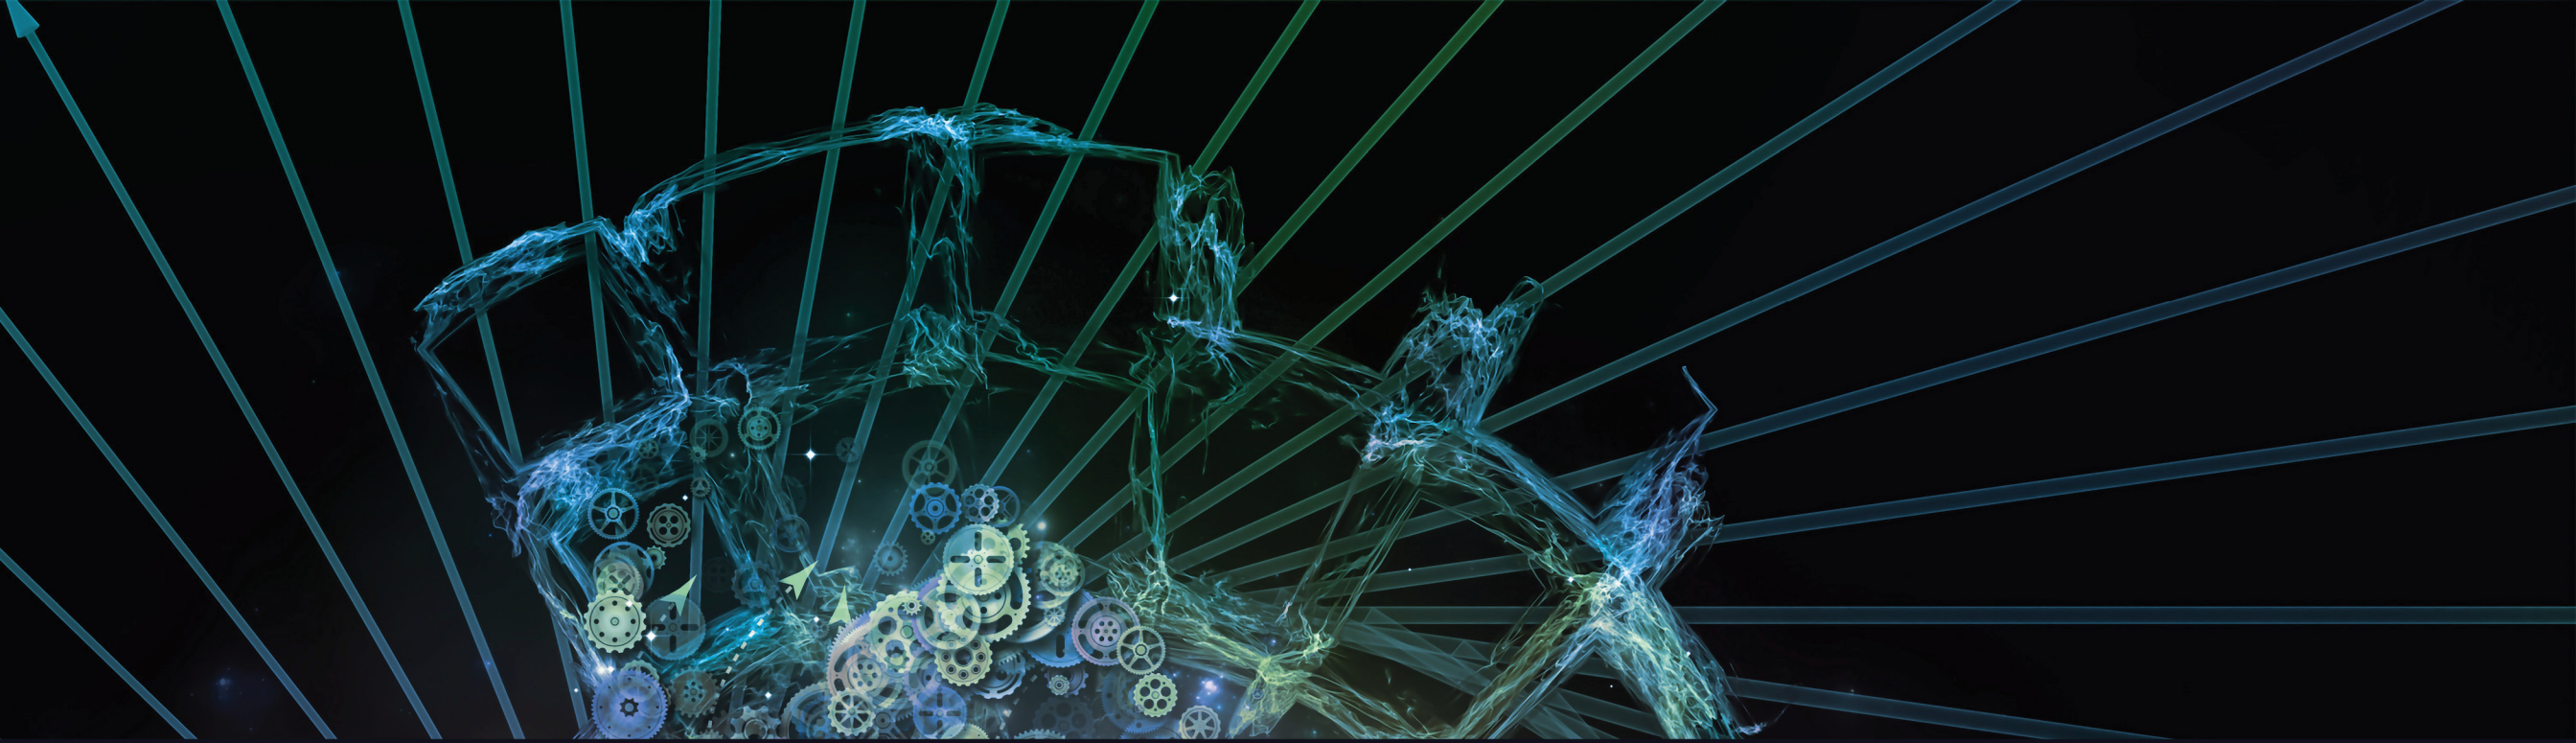

We also provided RRtype distributions for each of the IANA-recognized TLDs. We are reporting the percent of each major RRtype:

- "A" records (IPv4 address records): 64,544,665,611 (49.4%)
- "AAAA" records (IPv6 address records): 8,748,662,162 (6.7%)
- "CNAME" records (aliases from one name to another): 16,978,262,437 (13.0%)
- "MX" records (SMTP server for a domain): 871,051,493 (0.67%)
- "NS" records (name servers for a domain): 3,479,584,119 (2.66%)
- "SOA" records (start of authority records for the domain): 28,237,873,664 (21.6%)
- "TXT" records (text records with arbitrary content): 3,062,311,048 (2.3%)
- "PTR" records (pointer records, or "inverse address" records): 828,517,573 (0.63%)
- "NULL" records (see <https://www.farsightsecurity.com/blog/txt-record/recordtype-null-20170308/>): 3,555,968,747 (2.72%)
- Numeric TYPE code records (RRtype numeric codes not associated with a symbolic name): 410,341,291 (0.31%), and
- All other miscellaneous RRtypes: 63,168,469 (0.05%).

[note: percentages do not sum to 100.0% due to rounding]

We believe the information included in this report will be of great interest to those who may be curious about the relative size of various top-level domains, and the distribution of RRtypes as seen by our sensors. This data will also allow current and prospective customers to get a lower bound of just how large DNSDB's data actually is, based on what was received through 2019.

The bulk of this report consisted of the above tables, but we also included information about how this report was prepared, and treemaps that bring home key points about the most-seen TLDs and other data of particular interest.
