President of Massey Energy, UMW president discuss election, union mine jobs

Associated Press

CHARLESTON — The presidents of Massey Energy Co. and the United Mine Workers of America started off a televised debate by agreeing that they don't have much in common. And they were unable to find much common ground through the rest of a program to be aired Sunday.

UMW President Cecil Roberts said he would pray that that wasn't true" that he had any similarities with Massey's Don L. Blankenship, and the head of West Virginia's largest coal producer didn't protest.

"I would agree with Cecil," Blankenship said. "And I hope his prayers are answered."

Blankenship and Roberts had their strongest disagreement over Blankenship's role in November's election. Blankenship contributed $2.46 million to a nonparty political group called And For the Sake of the Kids which helped Republican challenger Brent Benjamin oust incumbent state Supreme Court justice Warren McGraw.

"There was a total misrepresentation during the campaign of what was going on there, Roberts said on an advance copy of the West Virginia Media program obtained by The Associated Press. "There was the creation of this organization that they called For the Sake of the Kids.

"Many people in the state actually thought this was an organization to help kids. But it should have been called For the Sake of Don Blankenship, and that would have been more proper title."

 ${\it BAGHDAD, Iraq-Iraqi\, judges}$ interrogated the notorious general known as "Chemical Ali" and Saddam's former defense minister Saturday, opening the first phase in trials for the ousted dictator's top deputies. Insurgents, meanwhile, wounded four Americans with a roadside bomb.

Sultan Hashim Ahmad, Saddam's last defense chief, and Ali Hassan al-Majid — who earned his nickname for his alleged use of chemical weapons against Kurds and others — were the first of the 11 jailed figures who are facing trial for crimes during the regime's three decades in power.

The two were questioned by a panel of investigative judges in a hearing attended by their lawyers, said Raad al-Juhyi, the head of the panel. The hearing was closed to the press.

Interim Iraqi Prime Minister Ayad Allawi said Tuesday that detained leaders of Saddam's toppled regime would start appearing before court in the coming week.

Pump war at Va. gas stations draws customers

Associated Press NARROWS, Va. — A gas war is being waged along U.S. 460 in far southwest Virginia, where unleaded regular is being pumped at $1.449 a gallon. "They're cutting each other's throat as quick as they can get to the pump to cut it," Chris Farrell said of his neighboring combatants. "They're putting a killing on the rest of us." At Farrell's Narrows Exxon, regular unleaded gas is $1.759. The price war is between the Super Val-U convenience store next to Farrell's station and the new Liberty store.

Both stores are selling unleaded for less than $1.50 a gallon. Motorists are coming from across the West Virginia line 15 miles away and elsewhere, sometimes lining up three and four cars deep, for the cheap gas. "The bottom line is we're losing on it," said Jerry Mancuso.

Deaner doesn't know how the original Bunker, another of the long-gone but once-thriving mining communities, got its name. She suspects it was named after the Bunker Hill Coal Co., which had a mine across the road.

The Bunker mine, opened in 1922, was sold several times, ending up in possession of Christopher Coal in 1959. Christopher was later bought out by Consolidation Coal Co.

(now CONSOL Energy.) Her stacks of scrapbooks include newspaper clippings about the 1951 Bunker mine explosion, in which 10 people died. The clipping notes that 250 miners worked there.

Two pay stubs fill one page, indicating what life was like back in those days.

A 1949 slip shows the miner earned $14.05. Of that, $9.41 went to pay the company store bill; $2 for union dues, $1 for the doctor, 14 cents for Social Security and $1.50 for coal for heating. Total take home pay — $0.

The 1954 stub from Trotter Coal Co. Bunker mine showed some improvement. For one-half month, in June, the miner was paid $200.75, plus $100 in vacation pay.

She has photographs of the Carnegie Medal presented to Anna Rebecca Quinn by Eleanor Roosevelt. Quinn's husband, Edward Guy Quinn, died trying to rescue 12 men from suffocating in a 1943 explosion at Pursglove No. 15 mine. A shift foreman, he was unable to reach the trapped miners.

The unofficial historian for Scotts Run said her collection grew and grew through the

"I like pictures," Deaner said, turning the pages of one album to display old portraits of her ancestors. The collections turned into scrapbooks when she became involved with the University High School and Cassville School reunions.

"We had to have something to show our schoolmates to keep them interested," she said, "so I just started all this."

Noted author Ray Bradbury calls collections such as hers "time machines."

Deaner has a simpler term — "I do this to make a memory."

Blankenship said there was nothing improper about his contribu-

"As far as being involved in the Benjamin campaign, business wasn't involved. It was my money personally. There's plenty of people around in the trial attorney sector that have a lot more money than I have, and they have every individual right under the Constitution to exercise their freedom of speech," he said. "And if they chose to do that. they could spend $10 million. There's plenty of them around that have plenty to spend.

"All we did was let people know what the facts were and they made their decision on that basis," he said. "And I think we got the correct result for West Virginia."

Roberts suggested that a public auction might be a more fair way to decide Supreme Court seats.

"That makes more sense than what he did in this election," he said. "I think it's obscene, I think it's ridiculous and I think it was totally unfair what he did."

The joint appearance came days after a community impact board report said Massey has a "moral obligation" to rehire union workers laid off after the owner of the Cannelton mine in Kanawha County went bankrupt.

Massey bought the idled mine from bankrupt Horizon Natural Resources Co. in October, and has resumed production at the renamed Mammoth Coal Co. mine.

In August, a U.S. bankruptcy judge in Kentucky agreed with Horizon's claim that selling its mines with union contracts in place would hurt their marketability and ruled that $800 million in health insurance and pension obligations could be dropped.

Roberts challenged Blankenship to hire the laid-off workers, but Blankenship said union workers offered jobs have been the subject of threats.

"The problem is that we've had five or six people that we've offered jobs to from the union panel at Cannelton that have had threats and actually been threatened with death and chosen not to come to work because of that," Blankenship said.

'That's the normal way the union approaches things. People are afraid of the union. The union no longer tries to entice membership with benefits and positiveness, they threaten people into trying to make them join the union and to discourage them from coming to work."

Roberts replied that "there's not a word of that that's true."

Robert pointed out that Blankenship has publicly spoken about the dearth of experienced miners in the industry, and mocked Massey's campaign to get more miners by flying banner-towing planes over Myrtle Beach, S.C.

"I don't know who in the world laying on the beach in South Carolina is going to get off the beach come to work in a coal mine in West Virginia," he said.

Roberts alleged that Massey is unwilling to hire the workers because of their union roots.

"We would suggest that these people are not being given the opportunity to go to work at what his now calling Mammoth Coal Co.," Roberts said. "There's two reasons for that: One is their union background and the other is their age.'

Blankenship called Roberts' claims "hogwash," saying he had

Roberts denied anybody had been threatened at the mine, pointing out that a close friend of his works there and has not been threatened. Roberts wondered how that could happen if union members were threatened.

"I haven't said that you do equal threatening," Blankenship said. "I haven't said your threats are on an equal basis.

"Why would we threaten some people and not other?" Roberts asked. "It just doesn't make any sense.'

"You all do a lot of things that don't make a lot of sense to me,' Blankenship said.

The debate, moderated by West Virginia Media Holdings President and Chief Executive Officer Bray Cary, is to be on the network's "Decision Makers" program, airs at 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. on WOWK-TV in Charleston-Huntington, WTRF-TV in Wheeling, WVNS-TV in Ghent and WBOY-TV in Clarksburg. Osama bin Laden claims to have bled the Soviet Union into bankruptcy as an Islamic guerrilla fighter in Afghanistan in the 1980s. Could he do the same to another hated superpower — the United States?

The al-Qaida leader's latest purported communication drove home the point by calling on militants to stop the flow of oil to the West and praising a Dec. 6 attack on the U.S. Consulate in Saudi Arabia, the world's top oil producer.

In an audiotape posted on an Islamic Web site Thursday, a man who U.S. officials believe was bin Laden accused Westerners of subjugating the Middle East to plunder its oil.

"Go on and try to prevent them from getting oil," the speaker said. "Concentrate your operations on that, especially in Iraq and the Gulf."

It was believed to be the first time a purported bin Laden tape in effect called for attacks on the oil industry. But he has flaunted the

Three more arrested in costly Md. arson

Fires caused $10 million in damage

LA PLATA, Md. (AP) — Three more people were arrested Saturday in connection with the largest residential arson in Maryland history, a collection of blazes that caused $10 million in damage to new houses in an upscale development near a nature preserve.

The three men were arrested early Saturday, federal and local officials said. They would not immediately discuss a possible

The U.S. attorney's office in Baltimore identified the men as Patrick Stephen Walsh, 20, of Fort Washington; Jeremy Daniel Parady, 20, of Accokeek; and Michael McIntosh Everhart, 20, of Waldorf. In a recorded message, a spokeswoman for the office said the men had been charged with

"We're 100 percent sure that he is innocent," said a man who answered the phone at Walsh's home and identified himself only as Walsh's father.

Charges earlier were filed against a security guard who told police he was upset by the way he had been treated by his employer.

Strong Shiite polling raises concern about Iraq's future

Theocracy similar to Iran could emerge

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A resounding Shiite victory in next month's elections will bring Iraq closer to Tehran, forming a "Super Iran" that could change the face of the Middle East, critics say. But others discount such claims as exaggerations and say Iraq, a diverse country of Shiites, Sunnis, Kurds and Christians, will never let any outside player, particularly Iran's hard-line religious theocracy, dictate its future. Views vary dramatically over what shape Iraq's political future will take following nationwide elections scheduled for Jan. 30, but few dispute that this Shiite-majority country's relations with its eastern neighbor — which is ruled by Shiite ayatollahs — will grow closer. "Welcome to the new Iraq, this is the reality of Iraq where the majority are Shiite," said National Secua candidate on the 228-member United Iraqi Alliance coalition embraced by Iraq's top Shiite cleric and featuring a wide range of Iraqi ethnic and religious groups, including some pro-Iranian Shiites.

While much attention centers on U.S. interference in Iraq through invading the country and occupying it with thousands of troops, a different struggle is going on between ordinary Iraqis — one that looks set to re-map the national and regional political landscapes.

With Shiites accounting for 60 percent of Iraq's 26 million people, the Islamic sect that was long suppressed under Saddam Hussein and crushed in a 1991 uprising is expected to dominate next month's polls.

This may embolden Shiites here and throughout the Middle East, some regional analysts say. But Iraq's likely political shift is also stirring fears of the spread of an rity adviser Mouwaffaq al-Rubaie, Iranian-brand of Shiite power throughout the Sunni Muslimdominated region.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is not considered to be of suspicious origin, Ayersman said. He said the boyfriend may be able to help investigators determine how the fire began.

Witnesses said Angela Shahan may have entered the home in an effort to rescue her father, but Ayersman could not confirm this was the case. He said crews found the two bodies about eight feet away from each other.

"She didn't give up," Everly said recalling the incident. She said that was Angela's approach to everything in life.

Everly said she watched Angela grow from "a gangly 8year old" practicing her 4-H pledge to a young woman who would teach the pledge to oth-

Demand for coal during World War I turned the Scotts Run area into one of the state's greatest industrial districts.

State geologist Dr. I.C. White wrote that the Scotts Run area boasted the great Pittsburgh bed of coal, with seams 8 to 10 feet thick; the Redstone seam, 4 1/2 to 5 1/2 feet thick; the Sewickley seam, 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 feet, and the Waynesburg seam, 7 to 8 feet thick.

An industrial community

'A picturesque village situated at the forks of Scotts Run'

BY JOHN SAMSELL

For The Dominion Post

In 1897, in its earliest days, Cass District of Monongalia County was part of an area known as the First Constabular District.

A polling place at Jacksonville in 1840 was changed to Cassville in 1850 when the community's first post office was established. Peter A. Layton was the postmaster.

Cass District and Cassville were named about the same time, for Lewis Cass, an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for president who ran against Zachary Taylor in 1848.

In the 1880s, before the mining industry took over the Scotts Run area, Cassville was the district's largest town. Its first school and dwelling were erected by Caleb

The county's poor house was built half a mile from Cassville in 1883 and was described as "a fine, two-story brick building, 30 by 40 feet." It was later known as the County Infirmary.

In 1886, the Weekly Post said Cassville has three stores, two blacksmith shops, two saddlers, a tannery, a carriage factory, a hotel, a shoe shop, a post office and a church.

The district was considered one of the county's richest in minerals, "more easily mined than in many parts of the county."

The Dunkard Valley Turnpike (later W.Va. 7) through Cass and Clay districts got more attention after 1852 when the B&O Railroad main line reached Burton in nearby Wetzel County.

A newspaper account in 1887 said the turnpike's toll gates had been eliminated and the road was "free for all." At Cassville, the road "to and from town has the equal of that of a city thoroughfare." Population was estimated at 100 persons.

Dr. Tom M. Hood arrived in Cassville in 1861 and served at the County Infirmary until 1877, when he was named assistant physician at Weston State Hospital. He was succeeded at the infirmary by Dr.

D. H. Courtney. An 1888 account described Cassville as "a very picturesque village situated at the forks of Scotts Run.

One prominent Cassville resident, Barton Core, passed away in 1905. He was a son of early settlers Christopher and Hannah Snider Core. He and Nancy Fleming Core had 11 children.

The Morgantown & Dunkard Valley Railway Co. was incorporated in 1906 with plans to build tracks through Cassville to Mannington.

The next year, the M&DV line began carrying mail to Cassville and made nine trips daily from Morgantown, the last run being at 11 p.m.

A flood on Scotts Run and Cores Run, on July 24, 1912, damaged homes and stores in Cassville. The trolley line was closed for three days.

The railroad, however, was losing money and was sold in 1913. That year, 10 oil wells drilled near Cassville gave a boost to the rail business, with oil well casings being hauled on freight cars.

In 1914, a cut was made in the mountain between Cassville and Core to extend the railroad tracks to Wadestown. The cut was 200 feet wide at the top and 22 feet wide at the bottom. The first passenger train ran past Cassville on a new track to Price in 1916. Core School dismissed early so students could see the train.

The County Infirmary (originally the poor house) was moved from Cassville to a new building at the Flatts near Evansdale. It had been near Cassville since 1874.

Berry Coal Co. built a mine and tipple near Cassville in 1916. Cassville mine was developed in 1917, during a period when dozens of coal tipples were built along the first two miles of Scotts Run.

The coal country traffic was so heavy, Cass District in 1919 approved a $300,000 road-bond issue to build three concrete roads to handle it. One road would run from the Monongahela River at Randall to Cassville. In 1923 the state route through Cassville was designated as W.Va. 7.

With the new roads, White Star Lines began bus service to Cassville on April 1, 1924. The bus service proved the death knell for the trolley. The Dunkard Valley trolley ceased operations just a year later.

In 1925, a new road was built to a point near the old county poor home, although there were delays in Cassville while railroad tracks were relocated to make way for the wider highway. All road projects in the area were nearing completion by 1928.

In the mid-1920s Dallas Hall was a popular meeting place among coal miners and residents of the Cassville area. Union meetings and social gatherings were conducted there. Many Scotts Run miners were of Hungarian descent. They celebrated that heritage annually with a fall Hungarian Grape Harvest Dance at Dallas Hall.

On Oct. 12, 1930, long-time Cassville physician, Dr. Milton Rinehart, passed away at age 68. He also nad a large livery stable in the community.

Wolf's Barber Shop in Cassville was a popular place to get a haircut. extended water lines to Cassville by 1931. By 1963 the company had installed booster pumps to supply water to storage tanks, including those in Cassville and Pursglove.

When prohibition ended in 1933, the first beer to be sold in Monongalia County arrived at the Continental Coal Co. store in Cassville on April 15. The county had been "dry" since 1912.

In 1938, one of two coal-cleaning plants was established for the Cassville mine of Continental Coal. The other was at Pursglove No. 2. Brock Mine at Cassville closed in 1954.

Cassville Junior High School was built during 1938 to 39 through a county bond issue. Bus service to Cassville was supplied by Mountaineer Bus Lines in 1968, with service being reduced in 1971. The county took over the line to Cassville in 1972.

Pursglove

Michael Courtney, a coverlet weaver, built a house in Pursglove, and in 1854 the building became Hosea Wade's store.

The first house was built by Cornelius Van Zant. It was near a large tree stump, source of the community's name of Stumptown.

The name changed to Pursglove in 1920 when a new post office opened. It was named for Pursglove Coal Co., which was owned by Samuel Pursglove and others. John P. Campbell was the town's first postmaster.

The Pursglove mining camp eventually included a row of company-built duplexes on the hillside above the No. 2 Mine and cleaning plant. The Dunkard Valley Railroad tracks were nearby, and the town included a company store and other buildings, mostly related to the mines.

After a two-year fund-raising effort by the Rev. Richard Smith, the Miners Memorial Swimming Pool at The Shack was opened on May 6, 1946. Smith's work at The Shack was recognized in a Time magazine article on June 24, 1946. The current Miners Memorial Center building was dedicated on April 17, 1956. Pursglove experienced tragedy on July 9, 1947, when an explosion at Christopher Mine No. 2 killed 20 miners.

Consolidation Coal Co. bought the Christopher mines, including Nos. 8 and 15 at Pursglove, in 1949. Consol closed the last Pursglove mine in the 1980s.

Jere

Stretched along Scotts Run, this town just off the W.Va. 7-U.S. 19 intersection in Cass District was named for Jerre H. Wheelwright, coal company president in 1919. A post office opened at Jere in 1924.

Soper-Mitchell Co. had a mine at Jere. In 1926, the company's store was operated by John Koval.

On Nov. 7, 1925, the Jere mine was darkened when a power pole was dynamited during labor unrest. In 1926 a mass meeting of miners at Jere drew 2,500, and they planned a march on coal interests in the Scotts Run area.

In 1927, three cases of smallpox were found among one family in the Jere mining camp.

BY JANET L. METZNER

One-room shanty homes once dotted the Scotts Run landscape in Pursglove, Jere and Cassville. Those homes are long gone, but the memories of last century's coal boom are still vivid to some residents.

"Times were rough during that time," said Joe Kun, former Jere resident and coal miner for 50 years. He retired in 1994. Kun's father was a miner for 36 years.

"Sometimes the mines worked only two or three days a week. Of course, we raised a garden," as well as rabbits, chickens, ducks, geese, turkey and pigeons, Kun said, recalling his childhood growing up in the coal community of Jere — named for Jerre H. Wheelwright, president of Consolidation Coal Co. in 1919.

Scotts Run, along W.Va. 7 west of the Monongahela River, is historically known as the site of the most intensive coal development in the industry from World War I until the Great Depression. The peak period was during the 1920s, says author Phil Ross in the "West Virginia History" journal, Volume 53.

During the boom, there were 60 mines in what was known as the Scotts Run field.

The field is on the eastern outcrop of the Pittsburgh coal seam, which underlies a large area of western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and northern and central West Virginia.

There are fewer mines

Lifelong Cassville resident Joe Vasil retired from underground coal mining in 1977, and then worked 16 years for the U.S. Postal Service, ending as Cassville postmaster.

"It was a hard life, but a good, clean life for the families. Everyone got along good back then," he said.

Mary Vasil is married to Joe Vasil. Back then, she said, "they all skimped and saved." But the communities were close. "A lot of people worked together in those days. If your neighbor needed help, everybody pitched in.

Before the United Mine Workers union began representing Scotts Run miners, it was a tough way to earn a living, Joe Vasil said.

Small churches have big mission

The Dominion Post

Focusing on ministries and outreach programs, the churches in Pursglove, Jere and Cassville aim to serve a community broader than their congregations. The churches may be small, but they see themselves as having a larger mission of helping people in need.

St. Stephen Baptist

Through the years, St. Stephen Baptist has served as a haven for people escaping floods, and a gathering place for miners' families, the Rev. Russell Medley said. After explosions or cave-ins at the mines, families would congregate there to find out if their loved ones had died.

The church has 200 members, with an active congregation of about 25 people, Medley said. The church is setting up five ministries, including a program to help convicts when they get out of prison, and a weekly hot-meal program.

Medley's wife, Sylvia, who serves as assistant pastor, also runs Morning Glory Ministries, which focuses its efforts on helping children pursue music or sports. To accomplish its mission, Morning Glory has purchased several instruments children can use in school music programs. The organization has also awarded small grants for children to pay for school sports equipment, and for the past two years, handed out two $500 college scholarships.

Since discovering the church has damage from mine subsidence, Medley said, church volunteers have begun building a new sanctuary. He said the church hopes to use the current building as a center to teach people about entrepreneurship, and possibly turn it into a museum identifying its place as part of a wide network of black churches in the state.

"The idea is to establish a historical trail of different black churches that have been in the area," Medley said. "We could use it as a museum and hopefully collect data to make that happen."

Cassville United Methodist Church

With an active membership of about 50 people, Cassville United Methodist Church recently became much more visible when several houses along the road in front of the church were removed. The congregation put in a new parking lot for members and is renovating the church to highlight its historical roots.

The Rev. Ron London, pastor of Cassville United Methodist Church, sits on his Golden Wing Honda.

The Rev. Ken London, the pastor, said the church is part of a four-church charge that includes congregations in Pleasant Valley, Buckeye and Fort Martin. London is an itinerant preacher, giving sermons at the church on a rotating schedule

On the weekends when London doesn't preach, the congregation holds services with the choir and a lay speaker. He said the Sunday school has also been a center for the church when the pastor is not available, and the church focuses its efforts on younger members.

"One of the things that they try to focus on is young people in the area," London said. "We'll try to teach them about the Christian faith and how to live a Christian life in the midst of our world."

According to longtime church member Kathryn Roussau, the church's heyday was during high times for mining operations. The church membership has declined since then, but has a steady congregation that comes to worship.

Roussau said church members are active in the community, supporting a food bank, collecting clothing, and helping people whose property has been damaged by fires.

St. Ursula Food Pantry and Outreach

When St. Ursula Catholic Church closed its doors to parishioners four years ago, the Pursglove community lost its sole house of worship.

Anne Horne, office assistant, and Suzanne Kenney, director of St. Ursula's Outreach and Food Pantry, receive food at the pantry.

The Rev. Russell Medley and his wife, Sylvia, stand in the St. Stephen Baptist Church in Shriver.

But the church's mission to support local residents didn't end, said Suzanne Kenney, director of St. Ursula's Food Pantry and Outreach. The church was transformed into the headquarters of a food pantry and outreach focusing on crisis pregnancies.

Sponsored by St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in Star City, the food bank was started in 1999 and supports families in much of western Monongalia County. Kenney said about 200 people have signed up for the once-a-month giveaways of groceries donated by organizations like the Boy Scouts, postal workers and members of the St. Mary's parish.

One innovative program, Kenney said, is a six-week course to teach community members how to cook meals. The food pantry brings in master cook Belinda Owen to instruct people how to cook nutritious meals. It also donates a bag of groceries with all the necessary ingredients to the students.

St. Ursula's runs the Gabriel project. Kenney said, an outreach program that helps pregnant mothers and young families support their children's needs. The project keeps a stock of clothing, cribs, furniture and developmental toys. It serves about 170 families.

Kenney said the project also provides volunteers who team up with the families to give advice on taking care of newborns.

"There's emotional support that we give," Kenney said. "Sometimes an ear is needed more than all the clothes we can give.'

St. Ursula's building was constructed sometime around 1920, according to George Nels, a longtime churchgoer. In 1938, the church burned down, taking the Nels family bakery next door along with it. Nels said members rebuilt the church through all-volunteer labor.

Eventually the church membership dropped to about 100 families, Nels said, and the church started having trouble getting priests. Nels said he enjoyed the church because it was easier to get to know people with a small parish.

"It was a more friendly atmosphere," Nels said. "I (now) go to Star City, and they have 1,000 families."

Jere residents have town pride

BY ERIC BOWEN

The Dominion Post

When Charlie Dulin came to live in Jere in 1938, it was a thriving mining town tied to the rhythms of extracting coal from the mountains above Pursglove.

Like many mining towns, it went into decline along with the coal industry, but the 79-year-old Dulin and other Jere residents still recall its storied past.

"It was a shaggy looking place, I'll tell you," Dulin said of Jere during the Depression years. "They had dirt roads when I moved here. The houses were shaggy too.'

Dulin's family arrived in Jere when he was 13, and his father went to work in the No. 2 mine in Pursglove. Dulin followed his father underground for the next nine years, shoveling tillage, placing timber, pumping water and finally running coal cars back and forth to the mine open-

It was dangerous work. One day while riding the coal cars and directing them throughout the mine, Dulin fell and got caught between two cars, though he came out without any permanent Initially Dulin had trouble adjusting to the deep darkness of the mine with only a lamp on his cap to guide him. But he said it wasn't bad once he had worked there for a while.

"I liked to work in a coal mine," he said. "After a couple weeks you got used to it."

Jere drew in Palmer Menear as well. He has lived in the town since 1927, when he was 5 years old. He remembers losing part of his hand in a childhood accident not far from where he lives now. A friend accidentally cut off his thumb and forefinger with an ax while chopping wood.

Despite his handicap, Menear spent much of his life working for railroad companies, then constructing state roads. He said he loves his longtime hometown.

"It can't be any better," Menear said. "I'd be lost if I had to leave here, and I'm not going to leave here."

Jere took a hit when the mines started closing.

Dulin was laid off and went to work in a bottle factory, moving from boxing bottles to checking them for faults before they were shipped. He then went to work laying tile and hanging cabinets for Paul Kapnicky's store.

Kapnicky's family owned the store from 1924, and Kapnicky took it over in 1953. The store closed in 1978, but Kapnicky maintained the tile business in Jere until 1989.

Kapnicky sold the building in 1998 after a fire burned much of the building. It was rebuilt, and now houses apartments.

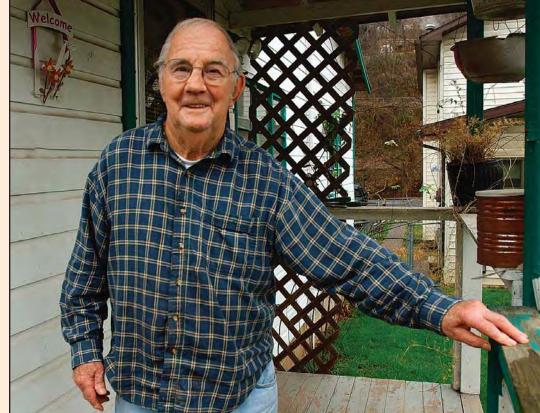

Kapnicky also owned Mountaineer Golf Course, which he now leases out. He still lives in his home near the golf course and is active as treasurer of the Scotts Run Public Service Dis-

Jere was a rough place, Dulin said, one where residents would get into fights on a regular basis. In one incident, a man killed his wife and then himself up the hill from Dulin's house.

Dulin's father and the family lived in a small home on the end of a long block of row houses.

After Dulin got a job at the mine, he moved a few doors down into a two-room house with

Fayette student alleges he was attacked based on race

CHARLESTON (AP) — The mother of a Fayette County middle school student who says her son was threatened and attacked because of his race has filed a lawsuit against the state and local school boards.

The lawsuit was filed Thursday in Kanawha County Circuit Court by Tyrone B. Hodges, who is black, and his mother Phyllis Hodges-Walker. It alleges the boy has been struck in the head with a piece of wood, spat on, beat up on a school bus, threatened and called racial slurs including "slave." Also named in the lawsuit are Collins Middle School Principal David Perry, a Democrat who serves in the House of Delegates; Fayette County Superintendent Helen Whitehair; the assistant principal; two bus drivers; and four students and their parents.

The lawsuit alleges assault and battery, intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress and human rights violations and supervision failures.

The boy and his mother are seeking damages, declaratory judgment that the defendants violated Hodges' civil and constitutional rights and an injunction forcing the school system to adopt procedures to prevent incidents.

After an alleged attack on the school bus in February, county school board members watched a tape of the attacks and heard from Tyrone's mother and grandmoththat "no principal or any member of the staff at Collins Middle School condones any kind of racial harassment or violence.'

"Unfortunately, we cannot be with every student all the time and incidents sometimes happen in this and other schools," Perry said. "But we make every effort to deal with those incidents as quick-IV and effectively as possible.

Calls to Whitehair were not immediately returned Friday.

Rebecca Tinder, counsel for the West Virginia Board of Education, said Friday she could not comment because she has not seen the lawsuit and was not familiar with facts of the case.

Last year, the state board adopted a student code of conduct that prohibits bullying, harassment and intimidation in public schools and doles out strict penalties for violators.

Statewide, blacks comprise about 3 percent of the state population and form more than 5 percent of the population in only seven of 55 counties. Racial tensions have been an issue in several schools across the state in recent years. In Cabell County, school officials hope to bring in the U.S. Department of Justice next week to address race relations at

A permit for that billboard was issued on Oct. 14, after the commission amended the county's airport ordinance in September. The amendments included restrictions on the height of structures near the runways. Teufel, who is on the Planning Commission, said someone in the county's Planning Department erroneously signed the permit.

The airport's runways will be extended to accommodate the planned deployment of C-5 cargo planes at the West Virginia Air National Guard base. The 167th Airlift Wing is replacing its smaller C-130 cargo planes with 10 of the larger C-5s, which will be phased in beginning in 2007.

Drunk, wheelchair-driving man to be homeless soon

DEAR ABBY: When we married in 1998, my husband "Grant" and I agreed that we would never put our parents into a nursing home as long as we were physically able to care for them. After our home was built, my father-in-law, "Papa Jake," moved in with us. Papa Jake is now 73, wheelchair-bound from a stroke, and an alcoholic.

He gets into his motorized wheelchair every day and heads out to the local bar, which is a mile away. When he returns, he's completely intoxicated, and sometimes falls. Papa Jake is also belligerent toward me, and I don't want our 2-year-old son living in this environment.

Grant refuses to tell Papa Jake that if he can't live by the rules he needs to leave. I have reached my limit. I love Grant, but I can't live like this anymore. When is enough enough? — FED UP IN NEW YORK

DEAR FED UP: Papa Jake appears to be a danger to himself. If you haven't already done so, inform his doctor about what's going on. It's unfair of your husband to wimp out and allow his dad to treat you disrespectfully — let alone drive his wheelchair drunk on public roads.

The bargain you made with your spouse was that you would care for his father as long as you were physically able. Well, since you are not physically able to prevent Papa Jake's forays to the bar (which put his safety at risk), insist that the time has come for Jake to go.

DEAR ABBY: My friend asked if I ever had a flame-shooter. Then he went into the bathroom and got a can of hair spray and some matches. He told me to light the match and hold it. While I was holding the match, he sprayed the hair spray on it, and then my hand caught fire. I wasn't burned, but it scared me.

I'm not sure what to do. I want him to still be my friend, but I don't want him to get hurt. Should I let him keep doing it, or should I tell someone and have them tell him to stop? — WORRIED IN KANSAS

DEAR WORRIED: All you would need is for one of those "flame-shooters" to explode in your faces, and there would be lifelong consequences. The next time vour "friend" suggests playing that game, tell him you'd prefer to do something else. Your mother or your teacher should inform his mother about what her son is up to. The boy is a tragedy waiting to happen.

JEANNE PHILLIPS writes "Dear Abby" under the pseudonym Abigail Van Buren.

Man shot to death by juvenile in Uniontown

A 21-year-old man was shot to death early Saturday morning in Uniontown, Pa.

According to Pennsylvania State Police reports, the man, whose name is not being released pending notification of family members, was shot by an unnamed juvenile after an argument with a third party.

According to reports, the deceased arrived at 1B Washington St. around 3:30 a.m. There, an argument ensued between him and Jerome Zuzak, 39, who phoned 911.

Pennsylvania State Police were dispatched to the scene and the man left the residence prior to police arriving.

Shortly thereafter, the man returned to the scene, kicked the door down, and assaulted Zuzak in the residence, hitting him repeatedly in the head, face, and upper body, according to police.

The juvenile then retrieved a handgun and shot the man once, police said. He died prior to the arrival of police.

No further details were available Saturday, and the incident is still under investigation.

Warner: Debt attention is 'overkill'

The Dominion Post

The attention paid lately to Republican Monty Warner's campaign debt has been overkill to say the least, Warner told The Dominion Post last week.

"Throwing the big numbers around I'm sure gets people's attention," but because campaign debt occurs in almost every campaign, "There's very little that's newsworthy here."

Monty Warner

post general election finance report to the Secretary of State's office, the campaign reported an approximately $450,000 debt left from his failed general election campaign for governor.

But last week, former staffers claimed there is about $250,000 in unpaid bills Warner hasn't reported. Warner, of Charleston, said those are issues he would rather deal with in private.

"Disputes over debts are an ordinary fact of life," he said.

Three staffers are conducting one-on-one interviews with everyone who says they are owed something by the campaign, he said.

"Anybody in the world could come up at this point and say you owe us a bunch of money. Because it's in dispute, it's not a debt until it's agreed upon," Warner said.

An Associated Press report last week listed former campaign manager Dick Leggitt and deputy manager Sam Pimm, among those claiming to be owed money. They say $75,000 collectively is owed. And Kristina Grabosky, the campaign's communications director, said she is owed nearly twice the $3,330 listed as debt to her in the Dec. 6 report.

Warner said to his knowledge, no one in the Morgantown area has claimed he owes them.

About $400,000 of Warner's reported debt is outstanding loans from Warner to his campaign. Shortly after the election, Warner's father, George "Brud" Warner solicited donations on his son's behalf.

Warner said even after he lost, he continued to see donations. His

Local artists' ornaments hang on White House tree

BY JUDY BEAVAN
The Dominion Post

Two local artists were guests at the White House recently after their handpainted ornaments were chosen to hang on the main White House Christmas tree.

Claudia Kugler of Morgantown and Lynn Usary of Fairmont are both members of the National Society of Decorative Painters and their works are among 350 ornaments that adorn the tree displayed in the Blue Room at the White House. The tree contains 32,500 lights and 390 balls.

Since the theme was "Season of Merriment and Melody," each of the ornaments are musical instruments, including Kugler's drum and tambourine and Usary's festive jingle bell.

Kugler teaches decorative painting at Michael's crafts store at Glenmark Centre and has shown at the Stonewall Jackson Heritage Arts & Crafts Jubilee. She is a juried artist.

Usary has taught tole painting for 27 years in her home studio. She has had an ornament at the White House before, during Clinton's administration in 1994. In 1987 she had an ornament at the Trees of Christmas for the Smithsonian and also in 1990, both of which are published.

Both were "thrilled" to have been chosen from hundreds of submissions.

Kugler said that "the White House reception was unbelievable."

Preston will conserve to pay off deficit

School superintendent recommends guidelines for saving money

BY KATHY PLUM

The Dominion Post

KINGWOOD — The Preston Board of Education will close some portable buildings and consider how schools are used after hours as part of its plan to eliminate a half-million dollar deficit.

Preston Schools ended fiscal year 2003 with a $1.3 million deficit, its second straight year of deficit spending.

By the end of the 2004 fiscal year on June 30, Finance Director Ken Rodeheaver reported it had been whittled to $538,339 through economizing and an unexpected tax windfall.

"As we continue through the school year, we have to find ways to continue to reduce it," Preston Superintendent John Lofink said.

The mild winter to date has helped reduce utility consumption, but the cost of utilities is rising, he said.

And maintenance issues such as repairing a roof at Bruceton School and brick repairs at Central Preston and South Preston have used the bulk of maintenance money for the year.

While many of the suggestions are still under discussion, others will occur. Lofink said the West Preston Middle School band and shop building will close and those classes be moved into the main building. Lofink said a leaky roof in the 31-year-old steel-frame building makes its long-term use problematic.

"We're very definitely looking into the maintenance longterm," Lofink said. "We're not sure we're going to get the money to repair it. That roof is pretty far gone in places."

West Preston Principal Timothy Mullens said the band already has moved into the old gym.

Shop classes won't meet until next semester, the end of January, but they will become more technology-oriented because of the move, Mullens said.

"At this point, we're looking at making it soundproof because it's an old building," he said of the band's new quarters.

Luckily, he said, WPMS has an "incredible band, so if we do hear them, we don't mind."

Kingwood Elementary has nine portable units, and Tunnelton and Fellowsville elementaries two each. Lofink said Kingwood may be able to combine two, and Fellowsville may be able to close one or more.

Use of facilities by the public also will come under scrutiny. Existing school policy allows principals to charge basketball leagues and others $10 per hour to use schools, but none do, Lofink said.

"They may not think they're

ommendations for items that could reduce Preston County Schools' deficit:
■ Principals are to assess

The superintendent's rec-

portable buildings and see which could be closed for the winter.

■ Substitutes won't be called for school secretaries and principals if they will be off only one day.

■ All schools will turn off computers, lights, soda machines and all other electrical equipment when school closes.

■ Schools will lower thermostats as much as possible.

■ Administrators may be used as substitute teachers.

■ Plumbing issues are to be reported quickly.

■ Principals are to work with custodians to conserve janitorial supplies. For example, classrooms with three trash cans may only need one, so fewer bags are used.

Overtime will be kept to a minimum.

■ Fairmont State is being asked to move all the classes it offers at PHS into one building.

using much in the way of utilities, but there's the lights, the heat may be up a little, and then there's the cleanup of the bathrooms and soap, towels and consumables used there," Lofink explained.

He isn't planning anything mid-season. "It's one of the options on the table right now," he said. "The decision has to be made how much we can use the buildings without increasing our costs. You want activities to go on for children, but you have to provide them an education."

Lofink expects principals' reports on the use of portables in January. He also has asked principals to meet with their Local School Improvement Councils for ideas on placing another school levy before vot-

Voters narrowly defeated a levy by 260 votes.

"I know that citizens do not want to see their taxes go up for any reason, but I'm looking at trying to operate 12 campuses," Lofink said.

"If we don't get funding support, then I think anything has to be looked at in terms of how we spend our money. Every little thing has costs associated with it."

Republican Hiram Lewis, who was unsuccessful in his bid for state attorney general, acted as spokesman for the state Republican Party.

"It is a contractual relationship between himself and his staff and does not warrant a comment from the Republican Party," he said of Warner's campaign finances.

Warner leads the charge for a proposed $250 million project, The Square at Falling Run Development, a mixed-use retail and residential development on land next to the WVU main campus.

The city is still negotiating a $2.5 million deal to purchase land from McCoy 6, Boroff said. The land, located off of the Old Stadium Loop, is where the city will build a parking garage to serve the development.

City Manager Dan Boroff said

YOU ALWAYS PAY LESS

Warner's campaign finances have nothing to do with The Square at Falling Run deal.

"Those two are completely unrelated issues. Completely. The city looks to the merits of the project.'

The project, he said, will deepen and broaden the tax base in Morgantown.

The developer would have "air rights" — legal rights similar to those used in condominium developments — to develop atop the proposed city-owned and operated garage.

Morgantown is promoting the private development by creating a tax increment financing district for the area, and by developing a cityowned and operated parking garage.

In a TIF district, the city of Morgantown collects taxes only on the base value, which is the value before development and time increases the value. Any taxes above that amount will be diverted into an account that will pay off bonds used for improvement projects in the district.

McCoy 6, the developer that plans to develop the site, is run by Warner's brother, Mac Warner.

She expected a table of cookies and tea and coffee. But instead, "The buffet tables spread out for all of us was unreal. Seafood, meats, desserts, you name it. It was quite a thrill to be there," Kugler said.

SDP members from the 50 states participated in the project. Ornaments were completed and shipped by Sept. 15, and artists were notified in Novem-

In addition to Usary and Kugler, Karen Chamblin of Pleasants County also was shown.

Claudia Kugler, a Morgantown resident, made this tambourine ornament for the White House Christmas tree.

For the ornaments, she covered 4 1/2-inch Styrofoam balls with fabric bearing each president's portrait, and she added red, white and blue beads. Every ornament includes a handmade clay flag and a cutout of the state. Americans symbols such as Uncle Sam, a bald eagle and the Statue of Liberty also are represented.

This is Stelling's third year designing the state tree. Her past themes included West Virginia women and symbols of peace in the state colors — blue and gold.

"It's been a real highlight for me, just to know that at least a quartermillion people from all over the world see my ornaments that are on our state tree," she said.

She spent four to five hours creating each ornament. Decorations for the Pathway of Peace trees are donated, so Stelling was responsible for purchasing all materials.

"I wanted our tree, the state tree, to be the best," said Stelling, who began work on the ornaments in March. "I didn't care how long I took making them or what I put into them. I just wanted us to real-

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., who is familiar with Stelling's work, said she has done just that.

"We've always been impressed with her craftsmanship, her dedication, and her energy," he said. "West Virginians should be proud of how well her ornaments at the

Fayette board votes to close Gauley Bridge High School

Residents fight decision

CHARLESTON (AP) — The Fayette County Board of Education has voted to close Gauley Bridge High and Montgomery Middle schools.

Gauley Bridge and Montgomery students will move to reconfigured Valley Elementary and Valley High schools in Smithers under the measures board members passed Thursday with a 3-1 vote.

Patricia Spangler, a Gauley Bridge graduate, cast the lone vote against the school closures, saying the board failed to give Gauley Bridge what it needed to succeed and that the school's ability to function eroded through neglect.

Fayette County Superintendent Helen Whitehair, another Gauley Bridge graduate, had proposed the closure.

Board president Steve Pilato, who voted against closing Gauley Bridge in 2001, said economic constraints caused him to cast a different vote Thursday.

Missy Smith, who was elected to the board after she also previously fought school closures, said, "It's not an easy decision, and I lost sleep over this.'

Also Thursday, McDowell County residents pleaded with state school officials during a closure hearing for Gary Elementary to save the county's oldest school. "Please consider our children's future, and know that leaving them here is best," said parent Chasity Pot-Teacher Vesta Larkin said, "a better building doesn't make a better school. McDowell County Superintendent Mark Manchin has said the county cannot afford to operate as many schools because of declining enrollment.

McDowell County schools came under state control in 2001 after an audit team found leadership lacking on all levels, low student test scores, poor attendance, decaying school buildings and uncertified teachers.

Since then, the county has lost 500 students and expects enrollment to drop further.

County Administrator/Grant Writer Jennifer Bonnett's reports back to the state on how Preston's spending of its Homeland Security Grant is being used as a reporting model statewide.

"Potentially, because we did out homework, we might get even more" of the Homeland Security money, Bonnett told county commissioners.

"That speaks well of what you do," Commission President Darwin Wolfe told her.

Beetles found in some Christmas decorations

CHARLESTON (AP) - Invasive beetles have been found in some Christmas decorations imported from China, the West Virginia Department of Agriculture has said.

Affected decorations may include artificial Christmas trees that have a natural wood trunk and wooden nativity sets with bark attached, the department said this week.

"For the second year in a row, we've been alerted to invasive species in decorative household items." said state Agriculture Commissioner Gus Douglass.

"The problems we've encountered with these types of products are a perfect example of the dangers our plants and animals face from international imports."

The Brown Fir Longhorned Beetle could pose a risk to U.S. forests and agriculture, the department said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently issued a recall notice for artificial Christmas trees marked by the Polytree Co. in China due to infestation

Consumers who find sawdustfilled holes or live beetles are asked to contact the state department's Plant Industries Division at (304) 558-2212 or the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service office in Ripley at

For happy, healthy holidays, pour yourself some milk

FOR HEALTHY EATING during the holiday season think "milk." Milk and milk products can enter our diet a variety of "wheys." We normally think of milk consumption in terms of glasses of milk or servings of cheese. Many food manufacturers use whey in the preparation of the foods they produce.

Not only is whey nutritionally valuable, thus enhancing the nutritive appeal of foodstuffs containing it, but it adds baking and consistency qualities that increases manufacturers' creative ability. Following is a summary of the benefits of whey recently published in Dairy Council Digest by the National Dairy Council.

Whey, a by-product of cheesemaking, is recognized as a valueadded ingredient in many food products including dairy, meats, bakery, confections, snack foods and beverages. Increasing knowledge of whey's potential health benefits is anticipated to further expand its use in functional foods for health-seeking individuals.

Whey contains high-quality protein, lactose, minerals (e.g., calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, zinc), vitamins and traces of milkfat. However, the nutrient content differs among specific whey products. Compared to whey protein concentrate, whey protein isolate is higher in protein and contains little, if any, lactose or fat.

Whey protein is of high biological value compared to most other proteins; has a high content of sulfur-containing amino acids important for the biosynthesis of glutathione, a tripeptide with antioxidant, anticarcinogenic and immune-stimulating properties; and is the highest natural source of branched chain amino acids which may stimulate muscle protein synthesis.

Whey protein consists of several different proteins, including beta-lactoglobulin, alpha-lactalbumin, immunoglobulins, bovine serum albumin, lactoferrin and lactoperoxidase, as well as glycomacropeptide, a casein-derived protein in cheese whey. As a result of new technologies, a variety of biologically active amino acids, peptides and fractions can be isolated from whey protein.

Research findings suggest beneficial bioactivities of whey/whey components. Several whey proteins, including lactoferrin and its peptide derivative lactoferricin, have been shown to inhibit the activity of a diverse range of microorganisms, including some harmful foodborne pathogens. Specific whey proteins also exhibit antiviral activity against human immunodeficiency virus, among other viruses, and stimulate the immune response to a variety of antigens.

An anti-cancer activity has been described for whey components such as protein (e.g., lactoferrin, lactoperoxidase, alphalactalbumin), sphingomyelin and conjugated linoleic acid in whey lipids, and calcium. The ability of whey protein to increase cellular levels of glutathione may contribute to this protein's anti-cancer activity. Whey contains bioactive components that may positively affect cardiovascular health by their ability to lower blood pressure, inhibit platelet aggregation and reduce blood cholesterol levels.

Research findings suggest that whey/whey components may be advantageous for individuals with physically active lifestyles, as well as for those concerned about infectious and chronic diseases. However, additional research, particularly clinical studies in humans, is necessary to substantiate whey's positive role in health and prevention of

Garden tips

Be sure to remove leaves, sticks and other debris from the lawn. Leaves will block sunlight from reaching the grass blades, and they will be harder to remove in the spring when they are wet.

Remember to prepare your mower for winter storage. Remove the spark plug and drain the oil and gas. Clean off all the grass clippings and get the blade sharpened now to avoid the spring rush.

Special prosecutor to investigate Gilmer complaint

 ${\it CHARLESTON\,(AP)} - {\it The\,state}$ Ethics Commission has asked a special prosecutor to investigate criminal allegations against a former Gilmer County official.

Elizabeth Maze, prosecuting attorney for Wirt County, has been assigned the case against Randy Maxwell, former director of Gilmer County's Parks and Recreation Commission.

"Once the prosecutor concludes her investigation and/or prosecution, then the Ethics Commission will determine what action to take at that time," Lew Brewer, the commission's executive director, said Friday in a statement.

Five-day-old baby freezes to death

STANAFORD (AP) — A 5-day-old baby boy whose home had little heat has died of hypothermia, police said.

Temperatures in the Stanafordarea house were in the lower 40s Wednesday when 28-year-old Sherry Coffman discovered that her newborn was unresponsive, Raleigh County Sheriff's Lt. Steve Tanner said.

Coffman immediately called her mother, who notified Coffman's neighbor, who then contacted 911 and performed CPR on the baby, reviving him, Tanner said, according to the Register-Herald of Beckley.

The infant was taken to Beckley Appalachian Regional Hospital and then flown to Charleston Area Medical Center, where he died later Wednesday of complications from hypothermia, Tanner said.

No criminal charges will be filed against Coffman, who is severely mentally challenged and under the supervision of the Department of Health and Human Resources, Child Protective Services and several other state welfare agencies, Tanner said Friday.

"The mother did not have the mental faculties to appreciate the seriousness of the situation," Tanner said. "She's a very dear and loving mother who was well beyond her mental capacity to provide care." Coffman is also the mother of a 2year-old girl, Tanner said.

Tanner said no single agency or individual was to blame, but that it appeared each agency believed that another was responsible for ensuring that Coffman's family had heat.

"It's ... a case of the left hand not knowing what the right hand is doing," he said.

DHHR spokesman John Law called the baby's death "extremely unfortunate" and said the agency would investigate.

Coffman said she had no heat during her pregnancy and that repeated efforts were made to get assistance from welfare agencies.

She said the baby slept with her and the toddler the first two nights, but that she moved the newborn to a crib in her bedroom Tuesday night because she was afraid one of them would accidentally roll on him. Coffman said she was using three electric heaters when her baby died.

"I love that little girl, and I loved my son, too," she said. "I did everything I could to protect them. I did my

"I wish they would've turned the heat on a long time ago, when they said they were going to, before I had my baby," Coffman said.

Tanner urged people needing heat to contact churches, charities and the welfare office.

W.Va. family welcomes home soldier on leave

BECKLEY (AP) — The mouthwatering aroma of fried chicken, mashed potatoes and green beans permeated every warm crevice of the Murray home in Shady Spring one recent evening.

U.S. Army Staff Sgt. Scott Murray was ready, after nine months in Iraq, to sit down and devour his favorite home-cooked meal.

But only after some homecooked embarrassment from his

"We picked him up at Yeager Airport (in Charleston) Tuesday evening, and I yelled out, 'Scotty's home, and nobody's shooting at him," Kay Murray exclaimed. "I couldn't hold back the tears, and I still can't believe that he's here.

The soft-spoken, 32-year-old soldier sat and smiled with homespun modesty as his family gushed with pride and gratitude over what their son has helped achieve the past nine months in a world far away.

Richard Murray, Scott's father and a Vietnam veteran, could not be happier. "It's a relief to have him home. We can sleep for a couple of weeks now.'

When travelers saw Richard's son in his Army fatigues at the airport, they walked up and thanked him.

"What we saw at the airport just punctuated everything," the elder Murray said.

"I don't think it's sunk in yet that I'm home," Scott said. "I just got into a rhythm and a routine over in Iraq. It was good to arrive home and see signs written in English."

Murray, who is on two-week leave, said the war has made him thankful for the prosperity that many in America take for granted. He said that, while Iraq has money, the average Iraqi does not. Too much of that wealth went to enrich Saddam Hussein.

"The country has great potential, but you can just see the oppression that's left over. People live in landfills over there and are happy to live there.'

Murray told the story of how local residents loved his Army unit for sending their trash to a local landfill. "They said that they had never eaten so well. No sane American would want to live there."

Murray has been forced to say goodbye to friends in Iraq who perished in battle. Staying busy helps him cope, and it's easy to find things to do.

"I lost five friends in a mortar attack. My buddy died while we were both in Baghdad, and I don't know if I've dealt with the fact that he's gone. We just stay busy, try to not think about it, and do a better mission next time. Danger can come from any direction at any time."

He shared the tale of his close encounter with an improvised explosive device, from which he emerged unscathed. He attributes his survival to adequate resources, great equipment and excellent training.

"We were in a Bradley armored vehicle, and this explosion was pretty big. I popped my head out of the vehicle afterward and saw debris 200 feet up in the air."

While Iraq has a long way to go, Murray does not doubt the morality and the success of his mission of freedom.

"If the American media would report on the positive, it would help greatly," he said. "I guess people want to see the bad. I'm convinced that our efforts are not a waste.

Murray said a day does not pass that he does not see something great happening in Hussein's former tyrannical playground.

"Schools are being rebuilt, and American organizations are sending supplies to help. I once had a different view of this war. Once I got over there and saw how we're helping these people, I've turned my views around.'

His unit recently went to a city in the midst of the dangerous Sunni Triangle to provide medical treatment for civilians. Instead of dodging bullets and rocket-propelled grenades, they received smiles and handshakes from the local populace.

'We give candy to the kids while rendering medical help. It's about winning the hearts and minds of the children. That was a really great experience.'

Murray's unit led the November assault on Fallujah. Some had predicted a 30 percent casu-

"I think we lost two soldiers in retaking the city. We have 150,000 soldiers in Iraq, and I don't know why the media only focus on the 1.000 who have died." Everyone is eager to spend the finite moments with Scott Murray, especially as his Dec. 23 return to Iraq — and his birthday — nears.

His sister, Stephanie, wants to take him shopping.

"I left school to meet him at the airport," she said of her older brother.

Though pulled in different directions, his heart is with his family. They will not be able to have their son home for his birthday, nor for Christmas. For Scott, it makes no difference as long as he is surrounded by his family and the trees of Shady Spring.

"It's a holiday if my family is with me. A holiday is just a day."

Area veterans remembered during the holidays

BY ERIC SLAGLE

The Dominion Post

Local members of the Daughters of the American Revolution saluted a dozen soldiers living at MonPointe Nursing Home with gifts and holiday cheer Saturday.

The men honored served both in times of war and peace, were in various branches of the military and ranged in age from their late 60s to more than 100.

Dorcas Harbert, Kathleen Cline and Joan Gibson of the DAR presented candy canes, wrapped sweaters and ball caps bearing the message "Veteran and proud of it" to the ex-military men in the lobby, halls and bedrooms of the nursing

"Thank you for all your service," Harbert said to a number of the veterans as she gave them their gifts.

Robert Schlobohn, who was an Army combat engineer during the Korean War, at first said he was going to save his gift for Christmas, but then thought better of it. Smiling, he seemed pleased at the WVU sweatshirt he tore from the wrapping

Schlobohn and Selby talked briefly about their war experiences. Both men said they preferred being out of the service to being in it. Selby recalled that an officer tried

"Christmas was just another day." Alisha Meadows, an activities assistant at MonPointe, said the vets have a lot of stories to tell.

"I love hearing their stories," Meadows said. "They just go on and on. They love talking about their buddies and the trouble they used to Meadows said she appreciated the effort made by the DAR because it touched even those residents who normally shun activities at the home. DAR members said they will return to MonPointe on future holidays to look in on veteran Rowdy Cutlip, who they are "adopting." Cutlip has no family, Har bert explained.

"It brings a tear to your eye to see these guys," Harbert said near the end of the visit.

KINGWOOD — It looks like Santa already has come to the Kingwood detachment of the West Virginia State Police, but he'll return later for a pickup.

The detachment has a stack of toys in the front office, collected as part of the recently-concluded 15th annual State Troopers for the West Virginia Needy campaign.

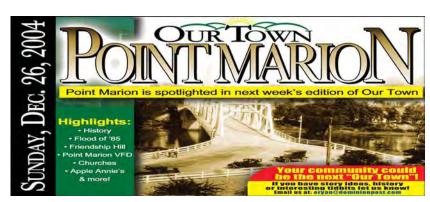

The bulk of the toys were bought by Preston High School Honor Society students, who raised $1,000 for the project, then went shopping for toys.

We appreciate the assistance of these organizations and all who izens of West Virginia in their time donated to help others in need,"

Detachment Commander Sgt. Randy Monroe said.

The toy donations are distributed locally through Food For Preston and Community Action, and are collected in conjunction with the Salvation Army.

The Kingwood detachment has participated in the drive each year since it was begun. State Police Superintendent Col. Howard E. The search for the perfect gift hen Tiffany Fincham went shopping with her father, sister and niece on Black Friday, her shopping experience was far from perfect.

Students finish up last-minute shopping before heading home for break

BY CARA SPAZIANI

With no room to maneuver her niece's stroller, the crowded outlets didn't make holiday shopping very easy for Fincham, although she was able to get most of it finished.

Now, the WVU elementary education major will wait for Christmas to receive her own gifts, one she hopes will be a digital camera.

"I really love to take photographs," Fincham said. "But I really don't like taking my big camera everywhere I go, so I'd like to have something that's a little bit smaller and more accessible"

But for Fincham, Christmas is more about giving than receiving. Fincham already has spent at least $300 on gifts for her family, boyfriend and roommates this holiday season and has bought many of her gifts at stores like Bath & Body Works, JCPenney and Cabelas.

"I love Christmas," Fincham said. "My mom was always into Christmas and giving out presents, so now I'm like that, too."

Fincham did most of her shopping during Thanksgiving break at the Hagerstown Outlets in Hagerstown, Md. and at the Morgantown Mall. She also ordered many of her gifts out of magazines

Brandon Ditty, a sophomore exercise physiology major, shopped at the Morgantown Mall this Christmas season, stopping at the Electronics Boutique for his brother and at Christopher & Banks for his mom.

But Ditty also hopes his family is shopping for him, too. One of the gifts Ditty hopes to receive is a CD player for his car, but that isn't the only thing on his Christmas list.

"I'd also like new skis this Christmas because I've outgrown my old ones," Ditty said. "And I need new pants because I've outgrown most of those, too."

Olivia Grantham, a 20-year-old pre-pharmacy major, also hopes to get clothes this holiday season.

But the gift that she is most looking forward to is the Christmas tree ornament she receives every year from her mom.

"My mom always gets me and my sister ornaments so that when we leave home, we'll have ornaments to decorate our trees with," Grantham said. "The ornaments are really sentimental to us, and it's something that I always enjoy opening."

Unlike Fincham,
Grantham hasn't accomplished as much shopping as she would have liked to this far into the holiday season. Grantham is shopping for her mom, dad, sister, brother-in-law, boyfriend and roommates, and even though she hasn't purchased her gifts yet, she does have ideas.

"My sister and I are getting my mom a coffee maker and my dad always wants Gold Toe socks for Christmas so that's what I'll get him," Grantham said. "Since my sister just got married I'll probably get her a few pieces of china and I'll either get my brother-in-law clothes or some form of power tool."

Even though Grantham has put off her shopping, she said she would rather give gifts than receive them.

"Christmastime is always so much fun because I get to give things to the people I love," Grantham said. "Between finishing up the semester and everything else I've had to do, I just haven't really had any extra time to go, but I'm sure I'll get it all done before Christmas comes."

Students discover ups and downs of online shopping

BY CARA SPAZIANIFor The Dominion Post

Gary Gearhart's girlfriend is pretty "picky."

So when the WVU psychology major couldn't find anything he thought his girlfriend would like, he decided to turn to the Internet for her Christmas gifts this holiday season.

Like many other WVU students, Gearhart decided to use the Internet for his shopping this Christmas because of its convenience.

"I'm guaranteed what I want online," Gearhart said.
"If I were to go to a store to look for what I wanted and they didn't have it, I would just be wasting my time and gas."

There is a drawback, though. Gearhart is worried some of his gifts won't arrive on time. He's already looked at several items he thought about buying, but since the purchase order date had already passed, Gearhart was forced to continue to look around.

"Internet shopping has its positives and negatives," Gearhart said. "After this year, we'll see if I ever do it again."

James Field, a 21-year-old biology major, is one Internet shopper whose positive experiences have kept him coming back. This Christmas season, Field has purchased electronics for his father at www.circuitcity.com. Field also visits the site to purchase printer ink and CDs.

"The Internet is great because I'm able to find whatever I want online," Field said. "But one thing that bothers me is that I have to wait for the product to be shipped to me."

Even though Field wishes his purchases could get to him sooner, the money he is able to save makes his online shopping worthwhile.

"I get to save a lot more on the Internet than if I were to shop at the mall," Field said. "The majority of my friends do it, and I'll keep shopping online, too."

WVU student becomes second from W.Va. to make perfect score on ACT

BY MEGAN BARNES
For The Dominion Post

Tracy Poff, an 18-year-old WVU freshman, didn't bother studying for the ACT academic achievement test last February.

While other students were apprehensive, Poff was calm. He went to bed at 2 a.m. the morning of the college entrance exam, not unusual for him. He says he gets an average of four hours of sleep each night.

"I figured it was not worth studying for," he said. "My philosophy is not to worry about the future until it comes."

When the results were in, Poff had a score of 36, becoming only the second student in West Virginia to receive a perfect score on the ACT.

"I didn't expect it. I couldn't predict getting such a high score," Poff said. "To be perfectly frank, the score I got doesn't matter to me at all. It's just a score on a test. It doesn't mean anything really. I like to learn, and most of the stuff in school is easy."

The Kanawha County Commission was so impressed with Poff's performance, they proclaimed May 27 Tracy Poff Day. Poff was also invited as a special guest to the Education Alliance's graduates of distinction luncheon, where he was acknowledged for his achievement.

However, one would not hear any of this from Poff himself. His mom, Darla, admits that Poff is quiet about his success. She, on the other hand, is not so silent.

"I probably screamed something like, 'Yeah!' We expected he would do well, but we didn't expect a perfect score," Darla said.

Ken Gullette, director of media relations for ACT, explained that during the 2003-2004 school year about 1.2 million students nationwide took the exam. Only 230 of those students scored a 36. "The ACT is a snapshot of how "The ACT is a snapshot of how you are doing and shows if you are ready for college course work," Gullette said. "Colleges want students who will succeed, and if you score a perfect 36 on the ACT, it shows that you are academically ready to go to a good school."

Poff, a Hurricane High School graduate, is now a math major at WVU. He says all of his college expenses are covered through a WVU scholarship.

"It's a waste of time to go to college just to find a job. I am here to learn. I am interested in everything," Poff said.

Therefore, it is no surprise that Poff loves to read. He is an avid reader of math and fiction books especially.

"He was born six weeks prema-

"He was born six weeks premature, but that evidently didn't hurt him. He started reading when he was three years old," Darla said. "I would say, 'Where did you learn that?' And he would say, 'The encyclopedia.' I didn't know he could even comprehend what he read at that age!"

The three most enjoyable fiction novels that Poff has read most recently are J.K. Rowling's "Harry Potter" series, J.R.R. "Tolkien's Lord of the Rings" series and Douglas Adam's "Hitchhiker" series.

Poff said he loves to read math books because to him, "math is a beautiful thing."

While Poff does a lot of reading on his free time, he rarely opens his textbooks. He explained that he learns what he needs to know while in class.

"I go to class everyday. I am taking 15 credit hours, which is not as many as I would like, but it's hard scheduling classes as a freshman," Poff said.

The fan of classic rock is enjoying his stay at Stalnaker Hall, but he will admit that his favorite place is home in Hamlin. He grew up living in a mobile home on an old piece of farmland with horses, chickens, dogs, cats and a vegetable garden.

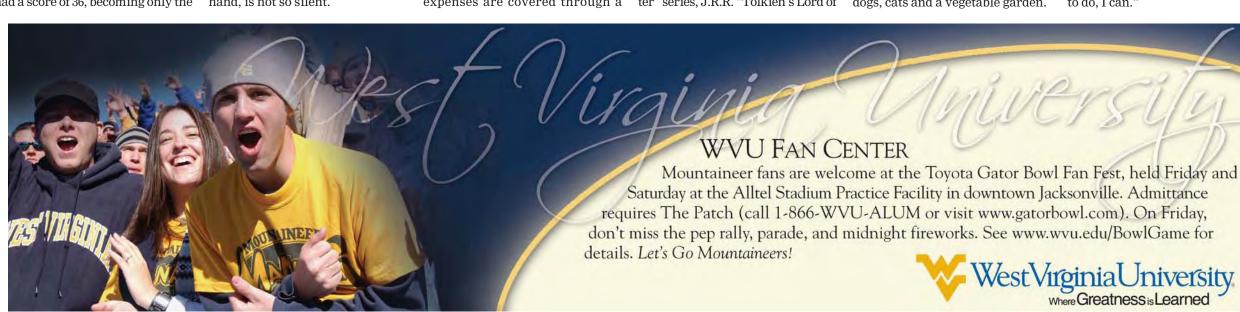

Now, the Poff family lives on the first floor of a three-story house that they are in the process of building. Poff helps his dad, Ronald, a newspaper delivery man and mom, a homemaker, build their new home.

"We go room by room. It's remarkable what little you have to learn to do—it's just doing those few things a lot of times," Poff said.

With a perfect ACT score and a slew of activities going at the moment, Poff said he has many things going for him, but he is not perfect.

"I have a bad memory. I wouldn't be able to remember if I cured cancer yesterday," Poff said. "I can't paint and I can't sing very well either. I can't have all the talents. But I do know that everything I want to do, I can."

BOB HERTZEL

Pargo's goes; so does 'fun of Christmas'

For the first time in more than a decade, they held a basketball game at the Coliseum and Pargo's was empty and dark, its doors locked and parking lot vacant.

No pregame lubrication for fans who knew it as a fun place, a happy place, a place where they could have a meal, down a few beers, talk, laugh and then walk to the Coliseum for whatever event was going on.

Football Saturdays, same deal, a little longer walk but by game time who really cared?

But today it's gone. We were all greeted with the news across the top of the front page of The Dominion Post on Thursday. The lead paragraph was straightforward and simple:

"Pargo's restaurant on Patteson Drive closed its doors Wednesday morning," it read.

That said it all. Or did it?

Justin McBride knows it didn't. He tended bar at Pargo's. On Wednesday morning he received a phone call. "Don't come in to work today," the voice on the other end of the line said. "In fact, don't come in at all.'

That was how he learned he was out of work.

It was 10 days before Christ-

"More than 50 people," he said later that evening, as he and a group of his co-workers spent an evening remembering while drinking to try and forget.

He was talking about how many people found themselves caught up in the Christmas season being tossed out on the street, not a word of warning to them.

Scott Goodwin was the kitchen manager. He came to work on Wednesday morning only to have Mike Slade, whose McLean, Va., company purchased Pargo's from Shonev's in 2000, and a couple of other men tell him the restaurant was closing and to go home.

"They opened the doors there in 1993. I started there six or seven months later," he said. "I put a third of my life in there."

Scott Goodwin is married and has three children.

He says he's not worried. "I'm sure I'll be able to find a job, but it's not fun. It takes the fun out of Christmas," he said.

One of the bartenders, who didn't want to be identified, pointed out that "they let us sell gift certificates right up until closing on Tuesday night.'

She was especially upset about one $50 gift certificate that was going to an underprivileged family. "Now what are they going to do?" she asked.

And what, they asked, of the gift certificates that had been and would be won in charity raffles?

It was odd, really, for these people weren't thinking about themselves at the moment. They were mad, angry at the way it happened, hot about the timing, but the idea that the paychecks were done hadn't yet sunk in.

It was, perhaps, unemployment shock syndrome where you see the problems of others but refuse at that moment to recognize your own problem.

True, for many of the employees it was a second job or a way to help put themselves through school. For some, though, like Scott Goodwin, it was his job.

"We knew it would be coming," he said, noting that business wasn't what it once had been. There were rumors swirling, too, that St. Francis Catholic Church owned the property but was transferring it to the university.

Somehow, though, they didn't expect it now, not with so many Christmas parties booked for the eatery, not with three more basketball home games in December.

But come it did. We'll all get along without Pargo's. Restaurants come and go. But for 50 or so former employees, this will be a Christmas season to forget.

hey come armed with notebooks and pads, pencils and pens and enough files of stats to please any member of the Elias Sports Bureau.

It's 9 a.m. Dec. 3, 2004, certainly not peak sports writing hours, yet members of the West Virginia Sportswriters Association are congregating on this day, at the Wheeling Downs Hotel, for one of the most important tasks they will ever face in the business:

Selecting the West Virginia allstate football teams.

Behind the scenes

You walk past all the glitz and glamour of Wheeling Downs, the neon lights and the sounds of slot machines paying out to lucky winners, and you enter a room that has none of it.

There are two long tables, one filled with containers of coffee, pitchers of ice water and plates of pastries, the other slightly covered with those stat papers and notebooks from the writers who showed up a little early.

Somebody cracks a joke, while other talk centers on the Class AA championship game to be played later that evening.

Eventually, the room fills with 11 sportswriters, all-state chairman Rich Stevens, of The Charleston Daily Mail, and the secretary of the association, Doug Huff.

This state covers 24,000 square miles and has two panhandles (one separated from the rest of the state by the Appalachian Mountains), and it can be a four-hour drive between major points of population.

The writers came one each from Charleston, Morgantown, Bluefield, Clarksburg, Wayne County, Moorefield, Martinsburg, Beckley, Parkersburg and two representing Wheeling.

A Knights of the Round Table it isn't, yet everyone arrives knowing beforehand that even after five hours of deliberation not everybody will be satisfied.

Seats are taken, papers are spread. Let the fun begin.

All-state offense awesome

Morgantown High's Farley a co-captain

BY JUSTIN JACKSON

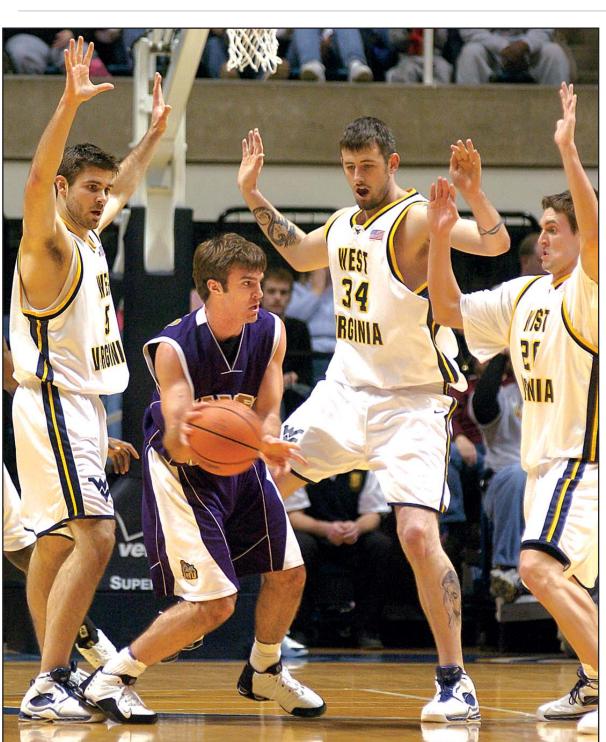

The Dominion Post

Just how dynamic is the Class AAA all-state team? The first-team offense features the state's leader in touchdown passes and the leading rusher, and neither was an offensive captain.

That honor went to the top two Kennedy Award candidates — Martinsburg quarterback Nate Sowers and Morgantown High tailback Spencer Farley, who were named offensive co-captains today by the West Virginia Sports Writers Association.

Sowers was named a utility player — he was the firstteam quarterback the past two seasons — and he truly did a little bit of everything for the Bulldogs, leading them to a runner-up finish.

The Martinsburg senior, who has given an oral commitment to WVU, threw for 2,613 yards and 26 touchdowns by completing 181 of 315 passes, but also led the team in rushing, with 1,186 yards and 16 touchdowns. In all, Sowers averaged 271.4 yards of offense per

At halftime of men's basketball games at the Coliseum, WVU and Papa John's are kind enough to conduct a contest where five contestants have a chance to dribble the length of the court and make a basket in five seconds.

On Saturday, two children made shots and won $100.

In the 20 minutes of basketball that preceded that, young men playing for James Madison made six shots.

Six.

Clearly, their affliction was not contagious.

What the Mountaineers had, though, was. WVU scored on six of its first seven possessions and held a 25-4 lead when JMU snapped a sixminute scoring drought in the middle of the first half.

The hot start, WVU's third in as many games, set the course for yet another blowout as the Mountaineers put down the Dukes, 77-48, before 6,297 inside the Coliseum.

Henshaws go head-to-head in Gator Bowl

Dream matchup for brothers

BY TODD MURRAY

Florida State tight end Matt Henshaw knew the identity of the caller before he picked up the phone, on Nov. 28.

He barely had time to say hello before the familiar voice cut him

"So, guess what losers we get to play in the Gator Bowl?"

It was Henshaw's big brother, senior West Virginia "spur" safetyspecial teams performer Mike Henshaw.

Matt Henshaw's lips curled into a grin.

He instantly recognized what was happening. The brothers' dream of playing against each other in a collegiate game was coming true.

Gator Bowl officials were poised to announced a WVU-Florida State matchup, in Jacksonville, Fla.

"Oh, please tell me we have a guaranteed win if we play you guys," said Matt Henshaw, who always carries a verbal zinger in his hip

The Gator Bowl smack talk had officially begun with the Henshaw brothers.

"I could tell he was pretty excited," Mike Henshaw said. That he was.

"I've always thought about playing against Mike ever since I came here," Matt Henshaw said. "I've always wanted the chance to play against my brother. How many times does it happen where two brothers in Division I football get a chance to play each other? It's something that might have happened before, but it's so awesome that it got to happen to me and Mike.'

Kathy Henshaw, the boys' mother, is a WVU graduate. She met the boys' father, George "Duke" Henshaw, during their undergraduate days in Morgantown. George Henshaw played football at WVU as a defensive tackle in the late 1960s and joined then-Mountaineers coach Bobby Bowden's coaching staff, in Henshaw, assistant head coach of the NFL's Tennessee Titans, later went with Bowden to Florida State, in 1976, and coached with him there through the 1982 season, which ended, coincidentally enough, with a 31-12 Florida State victory against WVU in the Gator Bowl.

Jeff Fisher, the Titans' head coach, gave George Henshaw permission to leave the team before Tennessee's final game of the season, on Jan. 2.

George Henshaw will fly out of Jacksonville on New Year's night and be back in time for Sunday's home finale, against Detroit.

He's still counting his blessings. "I'm very excited," he said. "A lot of things had to happen, not just for these two teams, but other teams had to do things for this to actually take place. It was something we always hoped would happen. We probably thought it wouldn't happen.

We're very thankful this opportunity Kathy Henshaw is quite the traveler during the football season. Each year she attends five WVU games and five Florida State games. She always drives from the family home, in Brentwood, Tenn., to Morgan-

MICHAEL CASAZZA

Beilein finding too much shhh in his shooters

HIS UNDERGRAD DAYS long gone now, his Master's degree in his pocket for more than two decades, John Beilein still studies during Finals Week.

"I went back and compared the first six games of this season to the first six games of last season and we're better almost all across the board," the WVU men's basketball coach said Friday afternoon.

Key word: almost. Better shooters, better defenders and, yes, even better rebounders. That's evident when the box score from last season sits next to the box score from this season.

Yet there are certain things he cannot accurately measure because those categories aren't on a stat sheet. It is therefore up to his players to prove that there have been improvements. And one area in particular is a regular worry. Personality, individually and collectively, for these Mountaineers. "It is a strength," Beilein said,

"and a weakness." Perhaps most important is that it is present. Every time Joe Herber gathers the team in a huddle, every time Tyrone Sally roars or bumps chests with a teammate, every time Patrick Beilein answers an opponent's 3-pointer with one of his own, these are all big things for WVU. It is a togetherness, a spirit, a determination that anonymously assures the players they are in fact good.

But it is also somewhat rare. "We're still too quiet," John Beilein said.

This has been a point of emphasis all season for Beilein and he pays attention to any relevant detail, no matter how small.

Beilein went through a situation he's seen many times before inside the Coliseum.

"You have two people walking down the hall. A person with my personality might say, 'Hey, how ya' doing today?"" Beilein explained, his head held high and his voice full of excitement.

"But we have guys that will say, 'Hey, how ya' doing?" the coach said in a low mumble with his chin tucked into his chest. "They're nice kids, but when they're on the floor, they're doing the same thing."

In the preseason, Beilein lined up his players in practice to rehearse how they would stand for the playing of the national anthem.

Some players, it seemed, were hanging their heads in prayer or thought, and Beilein wanted a proper posture that might exude, or even instill, more confidence.

"You can't modify personalities too much," Beilein said. "You sort of have to get them to adapt a little more.

Beilein has three seniors, players who presumably have adapted through the years. Sally and D'or Fischer play prominent roles, but neither is very vocal and both are comfortable playing and living in their low-key manner.

The senior who does tend to take charge, the player Beilein calls the "heart and soul" of the team, is Duriel Price, who rarely plays and whose personality is rarely noticed.

To be fair, though, WVU has been pushed more by its coach than its opposition to improve in this area this season. And when tested by an opponent — at Duquesne and at LSU — one would have to say the Mountaineers responded perfectly.

But to quote the coach, the opponents have not been as formidable as they were a year ago, and that is important because it doesn't figure to prepare the Mountaineers for the string of challenges the team will face in the Big East, when personalities help teams enjoy the highs and handle the lows.

"There are leaders there, but only example leaders," Beilein said. "The ones I'd like to speak a little more still don't. It's a constant struggle."

Beilein paused and, as he tends to do given his personality, he made light of the lone dark spot.

"It's a better problem than having leaders who might be drug guys or guys who might be missing class or drinking," he said. "It's far better than that type of problem."

to have away games and we have a home game, the Titans are a distant third, believe me.'

Because of his job demands, George Henshaw doesn't often have a chance to see his sons play in person.

He was at Milan Puskar Stadium for the WVU-Temple game this season, and he attended the 2003 WVU-Syracuse contest, in Syracuse. He hasn't seen Florida State play in person this season, but he did watch the Seminoles play at Notre Dame in 2003.

"I think they've both done very well," George Henshaw said of his sons. "I'm proud of their attitude and the way they want to do things. The most pleasing thing to me is they enjoy football and they want to be the best they can be.'

The brothers are most different in a physical sense. Matt is 6-4 and weighs 240 pounds, while Mike tops out at 5-11 and 200 pounds. Matt was recruited by Florida State — initially as a quarterback — while Mike took the walk-on route at WVU.

"Mike has been an overachiever his whole life," George Henshaw said. "He works for everything. He's very well-organized. He knows exactly what he wants to get done and tries to have a plan to get it done. He's a tough guy who is going to work hard and do whatever the coach asks him to do.

"Matthew is much more physically talented. He just really kind of came into his own recently. He had to move positions and really change his body type. He's had to grow into his height."

Matt Henshaw said he has long appreciated Mike's drive to suc-

"He wasn't blessed with all of the physical abilities other kids are blessed with or what my parents say I was blessed with," he said. "I am jealous of him because of his work ethic. If I had half the work ethic of Mike, I'd be sitting real pretty right now. That kid has fought his butt off his entire life. He's gotten everything he has through extremely hard work, and I admire him so much for that."

The brothers are in constant contact during the season. They often call each other the night before their games. They are each other's biggest fan.

"I think Matt's done a great job in the games I've seen," Mike Henshaw said. "His blocking has gotten a whole lot better over the years. Every time they throw him the ball he catches it. I don't understand sometimes why they don't play him more. I'd like to see him play more just like I wish I could have played more on defense the last couple of years.'

Mike Henshaw hopes he'll have an opportunity to play on defense in the Gator Bowl because one of his duties as the "spur" safety is guarding the opposing team's tight

"Matt is who I would be going against," he said. "People ask me, 'Are you going to try to kill your brother?' I don't know why they'd say that. I'd go hard, but I wouldn't try to go after him.'

If Matt Henshaw does run a pass pattern against his brother, he said it would be the "crowning" achievement of his collegiate

"Hopefully, I'll beat him and have bragging rights," said Matt Henshaw, a junior. "This is his last football game, so he can't get another chance."

Matt Henshaw, who is known for his happy-go-lucky demeanor, turns serious when asked what the best scenario would be at the Gator Bowl.

"Obviously, winning is the most important thing for Florida State, but honestly, as far as Matt Henshaw, I want my brother to go out with a win," he said.

"I know that sounds kind of odd, but I want my brother to go out with a win and get in there and make a big play during the game. I don't care if it's a sack or an interception or a fumble recovery. I just want him to get in there and make a big play. He's very capable of it. I'd be the only guy on the Florida State sideline jumping up and down if that happened."

WHEELING - No. 1-ranked Morgantown High poured in all six of its 3-point baskets during a 27-10 first quarter and coasted past Wheeling Park, 74-54.

Joanna Joseph netted 22 points and Keri Pryor 20, and each made a pair of 3s for the Mohigans.

'We got off to a great start," coach Alan Collins noted, "then shot fouls extremely well down the stretch."

Collins pointed particularly to Tara Napolillo, who scored all seven of her points in the fourth quarter by going 7-for-8 from the line. Overall, the Mohigans made 22 of 33 free throws.

Brittney Whiting added 12 points for MHS.

Defensively, the Mohigans held Wheeling Park without a 3, limiting Maggie Gompers — "an excellent outside threat," Collins said — to nine points.

"We were aware of where she was at all times," said Collins, who used mostly a matchup zone on defense. Chantel Nevels had 17 points and Rosa Tsacrios 13 for WPHS.

"This was a good win for us," Collins said. "Their only other loss was to Zanesville, a good Ohio team."

Two weeks ago, in Charleston, WVU scored the first eight points against St. Bonaventure and led, 20-8, before all of the crowd found their seats.

A week ago Saturday, WVU scored the first 14 points against Coppin State.

JMU (2-5) witnessed more of the same.

"The game was over by the second media timeout." Dukes head coach Dean Keener said.

By then, it was 19-4, and JMU had seven turnovers while shooting 2-for-9 from the floor.

"It's mostly been a product of our defense," WVU coach John Beilein said. "We're deflecting balls and getting steals and it creates a lot of run-out baskets. A lot of 3-on-2, 2-on-1 and 1-on-none situations have helped manufacture those points. It's not like we've really come out and run great sets continuously.' But the Mountaineers, 7-0 for the first time since the 1982-83 season, are scoring. The team topped 70 points for the seventh consecutive game, the best streak since nine straight in 1997-98, and several players are chipping in. D'or Fischer scored 11 points, his highest total since netting 24 in the opener, against Saint Peter's, and Joe Herber added 11. Jarmon Durisseau-Collins, shooting 26 percent from the floor and 21 percent from 3-point range entering the game, made his first two 3s as WVU raced away from JMU.

Gansey had five points, including a reverse dunk on a fast break early on, and Tyrone Sally had three, by far his lowest total of the season. Beilein said both had "very successful, but very demanding weeks in the classroom" during Finals Week

Fortunately, there was a bench that outscored the starters, 41-36. Patrick Beilein made 5 of 7 3-point shots and finished with 15 points, and Kevin Pittsnogle added 13 in just nine minutes. Duriel Price, a walk-on senior, had a career-high five points in five minutes at the end of the game.

"I know when I come in and I've been watching everyone hit shots, I just want to come in and make some shots," Pittsnogle said. "I think that's real contagious."

Upon entering the game, Pittsnogle and Beilein combined for all of WVU's points during a 14-4

"It's the way we're shooting the ball," Beilein said. "It's such a good thing when they're going in for everyone. It's hard to stop something like that."

WVU led, 47-17, at the half, the largest halftime lead since a 49-16 advantage against Western Carolina during the 2002-03 season.

That team, though, had the nation's leading scorer in David Martin. JMU was missing its top scorer, guard Daniel Freeman, and was clearly lost against WVU's changing defenses. The Dukes had 16 turnovers and six assists and shot 39 percent in the game.

Meanwhile, WVU had just five turnovers, shot 47.4 percent and made 11 of 28 3-point shots. The Mountaineers have now won games by 12, 15, 34, 15, 24 and 29 points. "I didn't think this was a 7-0 schedule at this point," John Beilein said. "I don't even know about 7-0, but the 20- and 30-point wins I didn't see. We've run into some teams in transition that are struggling to find their identities. We've caught them on a bad night and we've played very well."

A's deal Mulder to Cards

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Oakland Athletics traded their second top starter in three days, sending left-hander Mark Mulder to the National League champion St. Louis Cardinals on Saturday, for a package of prospects.

Mulder follows Tim Hudson out of town, leaving Barry Zito as the only remaining member of Oakland's vaunted "Big Three" pitchers. Hudson was dealt to Atlanta, on Thursday, for three mostly unproven players.

Mulder could be the top-notch pitcher the Cardinals sorely lacked when they got swept by the Boston Red Sox in the World Series, but that's if he's healthy.

In return, the A's got pitchers Danny Haren and Kiko Calero and minor-league catcher Daric Barton. Mulder's finish this past season was perplexing.

The 6-foot-6 lefty, the A.L. starter in the All-Star game, seemed destined for Cy Young award consideration midway through the season, but went winless in his last seven starts — 0-4 with a 7.27 ERA.

On Aug. 24, he became the first 17-game winner in the majors, then didn't win again.

When your Coach doesn't feel your pain

If you've ever taken a helmet in the ribcage, you know it can be rather painful.

Feeling acute pain, Jones signaled that he needed a substitute and headed to the sideline. But before he could get there head coach Bill Parcells asked him where he thought he was going and told him to get back in the Jones made a U-turn and reported back to the huddle. He ran three more plays before Parcells sent in the sub.

The message Parcells wanted to send came in loud and clear: No matter how much something hurts, you had better be tough enough to stay in the game until we take you out.

Move forward to week 2 of the NFL schedule. Dallas is playing host to the Cleveland Browns. Jones feels pain in his scapula (shoulder blade) early in the game. He's afraid to tell anyone or take himself out because he's supposed to be tough enough to

After the game is over, Jones finally tells the medical staff about the pain he's feeling. It turns out the pain he was experiencing was due to a fracture in that shoulder blade.

He ends up on the injured list and misses eight weeks.

The comments during and following the segment were about how much toughness Jones displayed by playing with a broken scapula and how those are the kinds of guys Parcells loves to have on his team.

Also, they talked about how Jones earned points with Parcells for doing that after Parcells openly questioned Jones' toughness after the rib incident.

Here's the irony of the whole toughness, playing with pain thing. The Cowboys have a guy on the roster who's been a warrior over the course of his nineyear NFL career in terms of playing the running back position with pain and injury. That guy is Eddie George.

However, people in the know say his career is at an end because he doesn't have the same spring in his step. Go figure, his body is just too beat up.

Those of you who have seen the movie "North Dallas Forty" may remember how Nick Nolte's character needed cortisone shots in his mangled knee in order to relieve the pain enough so that he could play.

You may also remember how the coach used Nolte's character to manipulate another player into taking those shots as a means to play by comparing their levels of commitment, toughness and desire.

Playing mind games with athletes in an attempt to increase their productivity is always a bad idea.

Did Parcells use George to cajole Jones? Would anyone put it past him?

Does anyone cringe at the speculation of how many NFL players are taking pain medication on a regular basis to play, feel normal during the day or sleep through the night? Do you ever wonder how many of those players find themselves addicted to the pain medication?

Certainly, every athlete has to learn to be comfortable being uncomfortable with the nicks, bumps and bruises that are part of every sport. You can't excel if you quit every time you don't feel perfect.

At the same time, there's nothing wrong with making sure you're in one piece before you get back in the game. That's how anyone learns the difference between the normal bumps and bruises and having something seriously wrong.

Pain is not supposed to be ignored; it's designed to tell you something is wrong. The skill is in learning whether something is slightly or very wrong.

This goes without saying, your medical professional athletic trainer, doctor, etc. — is a far better resource for what the pain is telling you than the vast majority of coaches. That's why the NCAA established preseason football camp rules to reduce the deaths from exhaustion and heat stroke — coaches didn't know when to stop and one mistake there is too many.

Obviously, Jones is having a hard time discerning when the pain signifies a serious injury and Parcells seems to have no patience in the normal learning curve. They are both lucky Jones' ribs weren't really injured and that playing with the scapula fracture didn't somehow end his career before it started.

While pain is part of playing, you have to know your body well and you have to be smart about what you can and can't do.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — James Madison coach Mickey Matthews saw that Montana had problems against the run, and the Dukes exploited it to win their first Division I-AA championship.

Maurice Fenner and quarterback Justin Rascati ran for two touchdowns apiece in a 31-21 victory against Montana, late Friday. The Dukes, who lost to West Virginia 45-10, in September, rolled up 314 yards on the ground.

"We thought we could run it on them," Matthews said. "Athletically, they weren't like some of the defenses we had played."

Fenner ran 29 times for 164 yards, and Rascati carried 11 times for 57 yards and completed 13 of 18 passes The Dukes (13-2) took the lead

SALEM, Va. — Riley Jenkins turned a swing pass into a go-ahead touchdown with 5.51 to play Satur-Division III national championship.

The 10-yard score came one play after Zach Fleming disrupted Crusaders punter Hunter Hamrick by getting quickly into the backfield, causing Hamrick to fumble and fall on the ball at his 10.

One play later, Brett Elliott hit Jenkins out of the backfield. He made a one-handed grab, eluded two defenders down the sideline and dived into the end zone, capping a perfect season for the Wildcats (13-0).

Elliott finished 20-for-34 for 282 yards with two interceptions and two TD passes. The Utah transfer finished the season with an NCAA record 61 touchdown passes.

Mary Hardin-Baylor (13-2) had tied the game with 9:01 remaining on Freddie Rollins' 18-yard run and then his 2-point conversion run.

Cavanaugh and Pelini on short list

Pittsburgh A.D. Long conducting interviews

BY ALAN ROBINSON Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Pitt is stepping up its search for a new football coach, with athletic director Jeff Long interviewing Oklahoma assistant coach Bo Pelini on Saturday and planning to meet with Baltimore Ravens offensive coordinator Matt Cavanaugh today.

Pitt defensive coordinator Paul Rhoads, who is being pushed by some Panthers players to succeed Walt Harris, was interviewed before Long left town for the two weekend meetings.

Long met with Pelini in Indianapolis, where he also plans to talk with Cavanaugh. The Ravens are in Indianapolis to play the Pelini, Oklahoma's co-defensive coordinator, has been on Long's short list since Harris accepted the Stanford job, on Dec. 12. Pelini is a former NFL assistant coach who spent 2003 at Nebraska before moving to Oklahoma, where Long was the senior associate athletic director before taking the Pitt job, 19 months ago.

Pelini is regarded as a disciplinarian but is well-liked by his players. He was Nebraska's interim head coach for a 17-3 victory against Michigan State in the Alamo Bowl in 2003, after coach Frank Solich was fired — coincidentally, by Nebraska A.D. Steve Pederson, who previously held the same job at Pitt.

Cavanaugh was the quarterback of the Tony Dorsett-led 1976 Pitt national championship team and was regarded as the front-runner to become Pitt's coach before Harris was hired, in late 1996. Cavanaugh turned down the job because he wanted more coaching experience before becoming a head coach.

All but one season of Cavanaugh's coaching experience has been in the NFL. He previously was an assistant with the Cardinals, 49ers and Bears after beginning his coaching career in 1993, as Pitt's tight ends coach under Johnny Majors, his college coach.

Both Cavanaugh and Pelini grew up in Youngstown, Ohio, which is close to Pittsburgh.

Former Bears and Dolphins coach Dave Wannstedt was considered the front-runner at Pitt before pulling his name out of consideration Thursday.

Expect plenty of points in bowls

COLLEGE PICKS

The bowl season has arrived and college football fans can expect two things: Lots of games and lots of Nineteen of the 28 bowl games will be played between Tuesday and New Year's Eve. Many of the matchups may seem mundane, even odd. Memphis against Bowling Green? Toledo vs. Connecticut?

But don't be fooled. Often the pre-New Year's Day games are some of the most entertaining.

Check out some of these scores from 2003's second-tier bowl games: Hawaii 54, Houston 48; California 52, Virginia Tech 49; Miami (Ohio) 49, Louisville 28; Minnesota 31, Ore-

There are a few potential shootouts this year, too — starting with Memphis vs. Bowling Green, in GMAC Bowl.

The Falcons are one of a record five Mid-American Conference teams in the postseason and rank fourth in the nation in scoring, at 43.6 points per game. Memphis, making its second straight bowl appearance after a 32-year drought, averages more than 35 points.

Bowling Green quarterback Omar Jacobs is one of the nation's least-publicized stars. He's the nation's fourthrated passer (167.8), and has thrown for 3,637 yards and 36 touchdowns.

Memphis counters with maybe the most underrated running back in the country in DeAngelo Williams. The junior is third in rushing, with 166.2 yards per game.

The Hawaii Bowl could also be a fun one with the hometown Warriors facing UAB.

Timmy Chang, the NCAA's career passing yards leader, and wide receiver Chad Owens, a secondteam All-American, put up plenty of points and yards for Hawaii. And the Warriors' defense usually allows straight bowl wins. Memphis, 47-43. the same.

UAB's Darrell Hackney, a quarterback in the mold of the Minnesota Vikings' Daunte Culpepper, and wideout Roddy White, a third-team All-American, should make a good impression on NFL scouts.

Toledo-UConn, in the Motor City Bowl, features two more prolific passers in the Rockets' Bruce Gradkowski and the Huskies' Don Orlovsky. They have combined for 6,590 yards and 48 touchdown passes.

"We sure don't want a shootout," UConn coach Randy Edsall said. He might not have a choice. Texas Tech's Air Raid will try to keep up with a surly and very good California team in the Holiday Bowl, but for pure entertainment the Liberty Bowl could blow them all away No. 7 Louisville is No. 1 in the nation, averaging 50.3 points per game. No. 10 Boise State is second in scoring, at 49.7 points per game. Liberty Bowl officials weren't thrilled with losing Utah to the Bowl Championship Series, but they got a great consolation prize in Boise

"It's such a unique matchup," Liberty Bowl executive director Steve Ehrhart said. "We're always having to battle the bowls that have beaches and fancy new stadiums. That's why, this time, we have a terrific opportunity to showcase Memphis.

Nitro junior tailback Josh Culbertson led the state in rushing with 2,602 yards and scored 35 touchdowns on 353 attempts. Culbertson, also a first-team running back in 2003, had a career game in the first round of the state playoffs when he rushed for 396 yards and four scores in a victory against Robert C. Byrd.

Farley and Culbertson were joined in the backfield by Jefferson's Will Grantham, who led the Cougars to their first state playoff berth since 1992 by rushing for 1,213 yards and 10 TDs while adding three scores on receptions.

The quarterback is John Marshall's Zach Amedro, who led the state with 33 touchdown passes in 10 games. On the season, Amedro completed 188 of 289 passes for 2,939 yards.

Nitro junior Chris Fulmer leads the receivers. He caught 65 passes for 1,034 yards and seven touchdowns. Fulmer is joined by Robert C. Byrd's Matt Godfrey and John Marshall's Anthony Montes.

Parkersburg's Connor Louden was the punter for the second consecutive season.

The hard part

The Class AAA team comes first, and it takes longer to type this sentence than it does to confirm that Morgantown High tailback Spencer Farley and Martinsburg quarterback Nate Sowers will be on the first team. That's the easy part.

Now comes the hard part. There's still 24 spots left on the first team.

How does the all-state selection process work? Let's see. Before the meeting, hundreds of all-state ballots are mailed to high school head coaches and writers. Each ballot asks a coach to list his best players in order and asks the writers to list the best players they've seen. Below that is where players' names are placed next to the position they play. Not all ballots (coaches and writers) are returned. The ones that are collected are counted by Stevens, who has all the vote totals before the meeting even starts.

How much do the votes actually mean?

"The votes are a guide more than anything else," Stevens says. "Just because a player may have 30 votes, that doesn't necessarily guarantee he's going to be on the team. Now, that's a stretch saying that, because if a kid has that many votes it usually means he's one heck of a player. But votes are not the end-all, be-all."

Votes can come into play in situations where there are more nominations than open spots, but even that's not the general rule of thumb.

In the end, it's a mixture of vote totals, where the coach listed the player on his ballot, and discussion among the writers that decides the final outcome.

"Let me say this right away: No one person at the all-state meeting has the say as to what happens," Stevens says. "It's a group effort.

"What I don't think people realize is, not all states pick their allstate teams the way we do. I think our process is objective. It's a face-to-face human process."

Politics

Around Thanksgiving, sportswriters across the state will receive mail from coaches promoting their players for all-state consideration.

Most writers discard this information. Which brings us to possibly the most difficult part of filling out the all-state team.

You have a writer in Morgantown who gets a good feel for the talent level in his area. Problem is, that writer never sees a team from the Charleston, Martinsburg or Parkersburg area until the state playoffs — or maybe not at all.

The same can be said of those writers who don't see the Morgantown-area players.

"Let's face it, players in some areas are better than players in other areas," Stevens says. "So, how do you judge a player from one area against a player from another?

"First and foremost, the No. 1 goal for all-state is to get the most deserving players on the team, but you also want to make sure you have a decent balance or representation from around the state. It's very difficult to do. You have to be able to find a happy medium."

So, you ask why writers don't pay attention to information and letters given to them by coaches outside of their coverage area?

"Writers have to understand they are the voice for their area and their area alone," Stevens says. "Basically, your job is to make sure your area is represented."

It's that thinking that's supposed to cut down on outside influences and to make things as unbiased as possible. "In the end, though, it's impossible to make everybody happy," Stevens says.

Awards

The Kennedy Award, given annually to the state's best player as decided by the state's sportswriters, is determined before the meeting begins by a statewide vote.

The state's other two individual awards, the Hunt (best lineman) and the Huff (best defensive player), are decided at the meeting.

It all takes place after the Class AAA, AA and A all-state teams are selected, meaning the meeting is well into the afternoon and the pastries are long gone.

It may also be the simplest procedure of the entire meeting.

Players from different areas are nominated and then the writer from that area will speak about the player, usually bringing up stats, any kind of college offers and the importance that player had to his team.

At the end of the discussions, writers cast a first-, second- and third-place vote and the scores are Another all-state day come and gone. Let the discussions begin.

It's not just the writers

The coaches face the same problems coming up with the allconference teams.

"I would imagine coaches and writers are in the same boat and have a lot of the same problems.' says University High football coach John Kelley, who helps decide the all-North Central Athletic Conference team.

Even though the Hawks play everybody else in the conference, Kelley isn't taking time during the game to watch a defensive tackle from Elkins to see if he's worthy of all-conference or not.

"You break down film or you'll go scout a team and sometimes a player or two will jump off the page at you," Kelley says. "For the most part, as a coach, you're not going to know every player or how good he is that gets nominated."

As with all-state, there are numerous times when more players are nominated than there are open spots.

"There's always an argument at quarterback," Kelley says. "It's usually hard for us to limit the running backs, because most teams have some good ones and then everybody's best player seems to be at linebacker."

At the all-state meeting, stats about the players are usually compared to decipher who is more deserving. "We try to stay away from stats, because there's so many ways to inflate them," Kelley says. "You can leave kids in blowout games and things like that. Still, you try to get the most deserving kids on and sometimes coaches will leave the meeting with bruised feelings."

Saban a good fit for Miami, but ...

COMMENTARY

BY DAN LE BATARD

NICK SABAN WOULD BE an inspired, brilliant and perfect hire as the next coach of the Dolphins. What he wouldn't be is the most important hire.

Because he's doomed before he starts if owner Wayne Huizenga doesn't get someone even more inspired, brilliant and perfect to get Saban better players. Joe Gibbs and Bill Parcells and Jon Gruden haven't misplaced their genius this season. What they've misplaced is the kind of skill-position athletes who break games over their knees. And if you think Saban, a Monongah, W.Va., native, can win with what the Dolphins are presently putting on the field, you need to be spanked by David Bowens and sent away like a howling A.J. Feeley.

Saban, alleged messiah coach, is not smarter than everyone in the NFL. He isn't going to come in and blow a magic mist of X's and O's into the confused face of Bill Belichick. He would be inheriting the team with the worst record in the league. And he's smart enough to know he can't be both the coach and general manager for the Dolphins because Huizenga giving all that power to Dave Wannstedt is what got this franchise into this mess in the first place.

It is the single most egregious mistake Huizenga has made as the owner of this team - giving Wannstedt the control he gave Jimmy Johnson — but Saban is not an egomaniac dictator demanding god-like omnipotence. Saban used to be much too serious, but he has, by his own admission, lightened up considerably, doing things like giving a critical writer a coaching headset after an LSU loss this season so the staff could get his advice during games.

Money isn't going to be what Dolphin, and not just because Huizenga is going to take a leaf blower and spew millions at him until told to stop.

"I really don't spend much of what I've got right now," Saban says. "My wife does a pretty good job of it, but other than that, I work all the time and enjoy my work. Maybe one of these days I'll be able to enjoy life and sit on the side of the hill somewhere and look down in the valley and say, 'What did you really accomplish in your life?"

So you're not one of those ego guys who needs to be the highest-paid in the history of games,

"No, absolutely not," he says. "And I didn't really want that tag put on me in college, either, and tried to get out of it.'

He laughs here. It was written into his contract that he gets to be the highest-paid coach in the conference. How did he try to get out of it if it is written into his contract?

"Well, I just said you guys don't have to honor that," he said. "It wasn't our idea to put that in my contract to start with. The A.D. wanted to do that, and he did it, and I didn't really want to do it at the time after we won the first SEC Championship in 2001 because I didn't want this attention brought to that part of it because that's not the most important thing. My first job was at Kent State coaching the linebackers, and I made $8,000 a year. And I don't approach my work any different now than I did then.'

Asked to describe himself in five adjectives, he says, "A little bit of class. A little bit of professionalism. Players' coach that really helps players do their job better." He stops and laughs at himself here. "That might be only five words, and it's only three things. But they're things I think are important to build a football team with tenacity and competitive character."

Asked directly this past month whether he would demand personnel power, Saban said flatly that he didn't want it.

"It's really too big a job for one person," he said.

But he added this: "I do think from an organization standpoint, you really need to define what you are looking for, and everybody has to be on the same page. That doesn't mean you have to control it, but the people who are out there doing it have to be doing it together as a group and you have to have team-

In other words, he wants input into who his G.M. is. And he should have it. Because that's how Belichick does it with Scott Pioli in New England, and Saban is a Belichick disciple, which is part of what makes him so coveted now. A few days after winning one Super Bowl, Belichick was in Saban's office on Saban's campus watching film, not the other way around. If Saban wants current G.M. Rick Spielman gone or demoted or kept, he should get what he wishes because Saban is, bar none, the most coveted free agent in coaching right now.

Same page? Spielman and Wannstedt didn't seem to be reading from the same book or even in the same library. They couldn't agree on so much as their quarterback, only the game's most important position, and that's why Wannstedt is gone, and Spielman's fate appears to be in Saban's hands now as Miami must put everything on pause to begin the token-interview charade.

This is Saban's job if he wants it. And any minority interviewed from here (Art Shell? Really? Come on) is being sold an NFL-sponsored lie.

This isn't racism as much as it is institutionalized imbalance. White people tend to gravitate toward white people, African-Americans toward African-Americans, Hispanics toward Hispanics. It's human nature, not prejudice.

We are drawn to those with similar backgrounds, experiences, cultures, lifestyles, likes.

Think of it this way: Look in a mirror. Now, think about the friends who come into your home, were in your wedding, call on your birthday. Aren't most of them the same color as you? The people doing the hiring in the NFL — the Huizengas are white.

Look at the top of the corporate ladder in any of Huizenga's businesses, and you will see mostly white people. Doesn't make him racist. Makes him comfortable with what he knows.

And what he knows is this: Getting Saban would be a big

BEN COMES UP BIG

Roethlisberger outduels Manning as Steelers win 12th straight, 33-30

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The main thing separating Ben Roethlisberger and Eli Manning on Saturday was, the Pittsburgh Steelers' rookie quarterback made his biggest plays with the game on the line.

Roethlisberger threw for a seasonhigh 316 yards and hit four straight passes to set up Jerome Bettis' gamewinning 1-yard run with 4:57 to go, leading the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 33-30 win against the New York

"I am amazed, but he is an awesome quarterback," receiver Antwaan Randle El said, after Roethlisberger led the Steelers (13-1) to a team-record 12th straight win and handed the Giants (5-9) a seventh straight loss.

"He might have a long way to go, but he has this great poise," said Randle El, who caught five passes for 149 yards and a TD and also threw his first career TD. "You can have all the ability in the world but if you don't have to the poise to do it, it won't hap-

Roethlisberger, who has not lost in 25 straight college and pro starts, showed his poise in moving the Steelers from their 33 to the New York 8 after a Tiki Barber 1-yard run had given New York a 30-26

"He has been making good decisions with games on the line," coach Bill Cowher said of the 11th pick in the NFL draft. "In the fourth quarter, he has a feel for the game and an understanding of the game and he manages it well.'

Until Saturday, Manning has struggled in losing his first four starts. The No. 1 pick in the draft was horrible in his previous two games and seemingly had lost his confi-

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati Bengals center Rich Braham, a former standout at West Virginia, was placed on will miss the rest of the season because of a knee injury.

The Bengals signed rookie halfback Quincy Wilson from the Atlanta Falcons' practice squad to a three-year contract. The 5-foot-9, 225-pound Wilson was a seventh-round pick out of West Virginia in the 2004 draft.

Braham, who missed three games earlier this season due to a previous knee injury, started 10 games and was hurt this past week, at New Engpasses and set up Barber's go-ahead touchdown with three completions of 15 yards or more.

"I had fun because we were getting some stuff done," said Manning, who completed 16 of 23 for 182 yards. "We were making plays, running the ball, the line was protecting, receivers were making catching. We got in a rhythm and it was back to playing football again. It was a good feeling.'

Roethlisberger hit five passes of 34 or more yards in a much-hyped matchup with Manning, who only had one longer than 20 yards.

The two talked before the game and they congratulated each other after it was finished.

"I don't ever want to remember what it is like to lose," said Roethlisberger, who also threw two interceptions.

Randle El caught a 35-yard touchdown pass and threw a 10-yard shovel pass to Verron Haynes for a touchdown. Jeff Reed kicked four field goals, Hines Ward had nine catches for 134 yards despite finishing the game with a hip pointer, and Bettis ran for 140 yards for the Steelers.

Manning threw touchdown passes of 2 vards to Jeremy Shockey and 1 yard to Marcellus Rivers. He also hit Amani Toomer with two 17-yard passes and he added a 15-yarder to Ike Hilliard to set up Barber's goahead TD run.

Manning was sacked on a twopoint conversion attempt.

Roethlisberger then sandwiched passes of 9 and 11 yards to Ward around a dump-off to Bettis before hitting Randle El for 36 yards to the Giants 8. Three straight runs by Bettis got the ball in the end zone.

Willie Williams picked off a deep throw to a tripped Toomer on the next series and the Steelers ran out the clock.

Giants receiver Willie Ponder took the opening kickoff 91 yards for a score. It was the Giants' first game-opening kickoff return for a touchdown in a regular-season home game in their 80-year history.

The Steelers used trickery to tie the game with Randle El making the shovel pass after taking a lateral from Roethlisberger.

Manning, who had led the Giants to only one touchdown in 45 possessions since replacing Kurt Warner at quarterback, hit Shockey for a TD on the next series.

Manning gave New York a 24-23 lead with his TD pass to Rivers.

Redskins 26, 49ers 16 SAN FRANCISCO — Patrick

Ramsev passed for 214 vards and a touchdown, and linebacker Antonio Pierce returned one of Washington's four interceptions 78 yards for a score in a victory against San Francisco.

Clinton Portis rushed for 110 yards, Rod Gardner caught six passes for 111 yards and newcomer Jeff Chandler kicked four field goals and still, the Redskins (5-9) made many of the same mistakes that have plagued them in the first season of coach Joe Gibbs' comeback.

The offense scored its only touchdown on its opening drive, and Washington committed 11 penalties for 93 yards to stay on pace to break the franchise record.

But when teams face San Francisco, they've got plenty of margin for such errors.

The Redskins took a 19-point lead late in the first half, and the sturdy defense shut out the Niners' offense for more than 45 minutes between Brandon Lloyd's early TD catch and Curtis Conway's scoring grab with 4:26 left.

Ken Dorsey, making his fifth start in place of injured Tim Rattay, doubled his interception total for the season, including three in the first half. He finished 20-of-38 for 206 yards, but the 49ers (2-12) remained on track for the top draft pick with more of the bland offense and step-slow defense that has defined their season.

With season-ending losses to Buffalo and New England, San Francisco could match the worst records in franchise history, set in 1978 and Chandler, the former 49ers kicker signed by Washington earlier in the week, made a 49-yard field goal and three short kicks in an impressive debut. San Francisco's fans probably didn't recognize a player run out of town for his short kickoffs and shaky accuracy.

Injury will sideline Bulger for another week

Shoulder bruise hinders former WVU standout

Knight Ridder Newspapers

ST. LOUIS — Quarterback Marc Bulger will sit out the St. Louis Rams' game today, against the Arizona Cardinals, as his bruised throwing shoulder has failed to heal as quickly as hoped.

Rams coach Mike Martz said Chris Chandler will be the team's starting quarterback for the second straight week.

Jamie Martin will be backup, while rookie Jeff Smoker will serve as the third-string or emergency quarterback.

"I don't think that we'll have Marc up for this game," Martz said of the former West Virginia standout. "Just the follow-through bothers him. It's not come along as fast as it did the first week. We're obviously not going to put him in there when he's not ready and put him in jeopardy. We're fine with these other guys. They'll do all right."

After doing some light throwing in practice on Wednesday and Thursday, Bulger didn't pick up a football during practice Friday.

"I wanted to let it rest today," Bulger said of his shoulder. "It didn't get much better the last two days, so I think the rest will help.'

Bulger said his shoulder is no shape to handle the normal pounding that comes with playing quarterback in the NFL.

"To throw during warmup is one thing and to be where you know you need to be to play a game is totally different," Bulger said. "If we could play 7-on-7, I might be able to go, but if they got one hit (on the shoulder), I don't know what would

Bulger was confident the shoulder would be healthy enough to allow him to practice next week and play in the Rams' Monday night game Dec. 27, against the Philadel-

"That's what we were shooting for originally," Bulger said. "I think the extra day next week will help. That will put us 21/2 weeks out, which is right on time."

Bulger was leading the NFL in passing yards when he suffered a bruise to the tip of his clavicle on a sack by San Francisco's Bryant Young in the first quarter of the Rams' 16-6 win against the 49ers, on Dec. 5.

"It's something where they can say, 'You had the most attempts, that's why," Bulger said. "It would be nice to give our offense recognition and our receivers recognition if you can lead the league in passing. Not so much for me, but for Isaac's (Bruce) and Torry's (Holt) yards. It's a payoff for all of their hard work."

Chandler is coming off the worst game of his 17-year career. He threw six interceptions in the Rams' 20-7 loss to the Carolina Panthers this past

"I don't dwell on that really," Martz said of Chandler's interception spree against the Panthers. "We don't talk about it. We have to move on. We go all through that, whether as a coach or a player. You experience that. He's a veteran. He knows how to respond. He'll come back and play well this week. It's unfortunate that happened, but it happened. It's done. It's over with. Just don't make an issue of it, and move on."

U.K.'s Sparks wraps up comeback win vs. Cards

Wildcats trailed rival Louisville by 16 points at halftime

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The officials were checking TV replays to see whether Kentucky's Patrick Sparks should get three free throws in the final second against Louisville.

Hoping to keep his player calm, coach Tubby Smith went over, put his arm around Sparks, and struck up a conversation.

"I asked him what he's getting for Christmas — to kind of break the ice," Smith said.

Showing no nerves, Sparks made all three shots from the foul line to cap his 25-point performance and complete the Wildcats' big comeback for a 60-58 victory against their big rival and former coach Rick

The Wildcats (7-1) trailed, 32-16, at halftime and were down, 58-57, after Larry O'Bannon hit two free throws for Louisville with 15.2 seconds to go.

Smith called time out with 4.8 seconds left to set up the decisive play. Sparks inbounded the ball, then received a pass in the corner. He pump-faked, then jumped into airborne Louisville forward Ellis Myles to draw a whistle from referee J.B.

Caldwell. "I made a stupid play," said Myles, who had eight points and 10 rebounds.

The buzzer sounded an instant later, and Caldwell and referee Gerald Boudreaux checked to see if Caldwell made the call before time expired. While the fans and players waited, Sparks chomped on gum and wandered around the court before Smith approached him.

"I was just hanging out really," Sparks said. "I just wanted to step up there and knock them down.'

With 0.6 seconds on the clock, Sparks — a 71 percent shooter from the line — swished the winning

"I try to bring a lot of toughness to the team. That's what leaders do," said Sparks, who also hit five 3pointers.

The Wildcats had few doubts that Sparks would hit the shots.

"The guy's a shooter," Kentucky forward Chuck Hayes said. "We had all the confidence in the world."

O'Bannon's desperation heave from half-court wasn't close, and the Wildcats snapped a two-game losing streak to Pitino, who coached Kentucky from 1989-97, winning the 1996 NCAA championship. After a stint with the NBA's Boston Celtics, he took over at Louisville in 2001.

Chaney nears 1,000th game, shows few signs of slowing

73-year-old coach 'would like to stay as long as I can'

BY DAN GELSTON Associated Press

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

ohn Chaney barely had time to savor one of his earliest games back in 1972 when an indignant fan abruptly remarked he wasn't too happy to have the rookie coach around.

"I told him, 'Well, I'm going to be here for a long time so you better get used to me," Chaney recalled with a laugh.

Sure enough, Chaney is still raising hell on the sidelines 32 years after his college coaching debut, at Division II Chevney State, in suburban Philadelphia. Chaney eventually moved on to Temple, but not much else has changed for the Hall of Famer.

From threatening opposing coaches to giving a ref an earful in his loud, booming voice to reaching out to another underprivileged kid, Chaney's remained steady as ever through Chaney still seems restless and cranky, and his nattily attired appearance is usually in shambles after most games. As Chaney approaches his 1,000th career game, he knows his time on Temple's sideline is nearing an end. But don't go planning that retirement party just yet.

"I would like to stay as long as I can, as long as my health is good and as long as the kids keep listening to me," said Chaney, who turns 73 in January.

When Chaney (711-288) coaches Temple against Princeton, on Monday, he will become the 19th Division I coach to reach 1,000 games and the sixth active one, joining Lou Henson, Bob Knight, Eddie Sutton, Lute Olson and Mike Krzyzewski.

"I think it's a number that's really kind of inconceivable to me," said Saint Joseph's coach Phil Martelli, in his 10th season "Like a lot of things about John Chaney, it's hard to put your hands around.

Chaney, whose deep, dark eyes seem fitting for a school whose mascot is the Owl, was amazed he's lasted so long.

"I've never given it any nought," Chaney said, "It su prised me when they told me I accomplished 700 wins.' Chaney said though the games tend to run together, it's the people, the experiences and the stories that stand out.

"I can't remember all of their names," he said, "but sooner or later it comes back to me.'

EBL, junior high, D-II

Chaney dabbled as playercoach toward the end of his career in the Eastern Basketball League, then started full time at Philadelphia's Sayre Junior High (1963-66) and Simon Gratz High (1966-72).

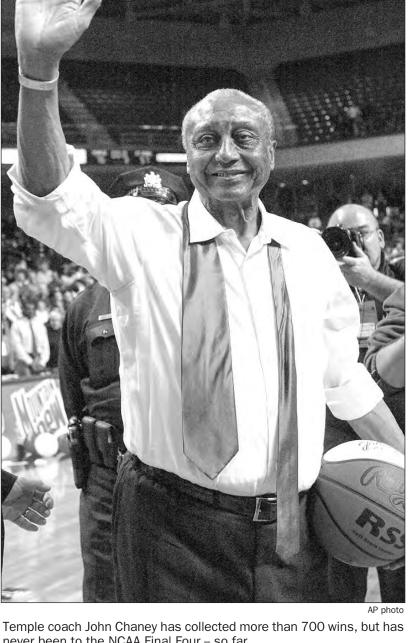

When Cheyney State came calling in 1972, Chaney was torn. Chaney, though, was convinced he could affect more lives on the college level. Chaney had more concerns when he considered the Temple vacancy, in 1982.

"I was very apprehensive," he said. "I was happy with where I was. I always believed that success comes when you're very happy with what you do."

Chaney had little to worry about — he went 225-59 and won the NCAA D-II title in 1978 in 10 seasons with the Wolves.

Chaney's experienced so much success that he has quite a list of prolific games to choose from for his most memorable.

His first game was a 68-58 loss, to East Stroudsburg. His first win came the next game, on Dec. 5, 1972, 82-67 against Monmouth. Chaney's favorite was Cheyney's never been to the NCAA Final Four - so far.

47-40 win against Wisconsin-Green Bay in the 1978 Division II title game.

'Without question the national championship game at Cheyney in '78 stands out the most," he said. "And my first time here getting into the NCAAs stands out. How exciting it was for all the students."

After a losing record his first season at Temple, Chaney took the Owls to the NCAA Tournament 17 times in 18 years. Before his arrival, the Owls had never played in consecutive tournaments.

The Owls have slipped the past three seasons, making the NIT. This year's team is 3-5 and game No. 999 was a three-point loss against No. 6 Wake Forest.

Though Temple still has nonconference games with Top 25 teams Maryland and Duke, Chaney believed the Owls can return to the tournament. 'If we continue to play like the way we have been playing against the top teams, if we get there, my team will be ready," he

A teacher first

No surprise there. After all, Chaney considers himself a teacher first, educating his players on everything from the matchup zone to a history lesson on the greats of the game — all usually done in those famous 5:30 a.m. practices.

The ones who are willing to put up with the no-frills approach and a raspy trail of four-letter words have usually been rewarded. Chaney has led the Owls to 21 straight postseason appearances, including five appearances in the regional finals (1988, 1991, 1993, 1999 and

Still, a Final Four berth remains the one void in his career.

"You only have to have lightning one time and I would like lightning one time," he said. During practice, Chaney still takes the court, shouting tips and showing reminders of what made him the 1951 Philadelphia Public

League player of the year. "He's out there showing us how to make slides, how to protect the ball, how to guard him," guard Mardy Collins said. "He'll be dribbling and he'll tell someone to take the ball and usually he throws an elbow or something like that."

Chaney — who once threatened to kill then-Massachusetts coach John Calipari during an infamous confrontation — hasn't mellowed with age. During timeouts, he normally sits — make that squirms, swivels, points and shouts — on a chair in the middle of the huddle. Pity the poor refs who must live with 40 minutes of hollering and foot-stomping after every tight play.

Chaney's filled with the same nervousness and superstitions before games as when he played. On a recent drive to practice, he threw his car in reverse and took another street after nearing a black cat. He'll never wear a designer tie again after a loss.

His winning ties, mostly gray, are neatly folded in a drawer behind his office desk. Before every game, he'll reach in and grab one for luck. So far, he's picked a winner more often than not.

Learn to play golf

Chaney hears the grumbling gaining steam that he's too old to coach because the Owls have missed the tournament lately. But Chaney feels he still has something positive to offer.

And when he stops coaching? "I need to find a way to play golf," he said. "I don't play golf. Maybe I'll learn how to play golf."

Until then, it's more early morning practices and more afternoon bull sessions. Who knows? Maybe that Final Four is still within reach. For Chaney, the last 999 games don't matter the next one is only one that "I always look forward to the next moment, the next game, the next time you go out," Chaney said. "As long as you're involved in sports, you must always have a vision. It should be something in front of you, not something that is behind.'

Some things negative for hunting

THERE HAVE BEEN THREE major stories recently that won't help hunting. Two were so far out, though, that the trickle-down negative effects probably won't have much impact. The third is a bit scarier for bowhunters, but really isn't anything new.

First we had the hunter shootings in Wisconsin. For those hiding in a cave, on Sunday, Nov. 21, a nonresident deer gun hunter killed six other hunters in the woods of Wiscon-

Seems that around midday he got into a treestand, located on 400 posted acres. Two hunters with permission to hunt there found this guy in their tree stand and asked him to leave.

In Wisconsin you have to wear your license number tag on your back, and one of the legal hunters wrote that number in the dust on his 4-wheeler.

When the trespasser was 40 vards from the tree, he stopped, removed the scope from his semi automatic, and opened fire on

He later stated that they shot at him first, but this seems doubtful in light of what followed.

One of the wounded hunters used his cell phone to call friends at their nearby hunting cabin for help. Five came, and then a second group of hunters came, and in the next hour or so, the trespasser shot six more hunters. Of the eight wounded, six died.

I'm sure PETA and others will try to make some antihunting hay out of this tragedy, but it won't go far. Right from the getgo it was obvious that a man with severe anger management problems went off the deep end.

I've not heard any newscasters try to make more out of this than that. Not a word about how hunting causes aggression, or any such dumb, untrue statements. Actually, the interviews of hunters at the scene show compassionate, sympathetic and caring people.

What a tragedy for everyone involved.

The second news item is just downright stupid, but for awhile it will be a hunting public relations problem.

Seems that a land owner from San Antonio went on the Nov. 18 "The Today Show" to talk about his idea that uses new technology to allow hunters to "shoot animals" over the Internet.

Whoa. The "hunter" pays a fee that allows him to use a keyboard and mouse and remotely fire a rifle at a living animal. The landowner says this will be for disabled hunters who can't get into the woods.

Hmmm. That's supposed to make this something we should cheer about? I don't think so. Even if it is just for the disabled, this whole idea reeks of bad judgment on his part. No matter how you cut and slice it, this ain't hunting.

Have no fear, this won't come to pass. There are several legal issues that need to be solved before anyone moves ahead with this hare-brained idea.

But even if this guy somehow passes those issues, Texas legislators will create a law to prevent this from happening. Maybe he doesn't mean to, but this man is trying to make all hunters look bad.

THE HUMANE SOCIETY

It won't stick. But the television urban-based media folks loved this one.

Finally, there comes the announcement that the Humane Society of the United States and the Fund For Animals will merge into a huge, $96 million animal rights conglomerate. They immediately announced their goals, and one was to abolish bowhunting.

The fact that these two groups want to abolish bowhunting isn't new. Joining together to do it doesn't change anything except to put huge money into the process.

The issues the animal rights groups have used to try to stop bowhunting remain the same:

- It isn't safe to use in suburban environments (yet no one has ever been injured in such bowhunts — hmmm???).
- Deer will run around the suburbs and city and county parks with arrows stuck in them (so rare that no reports are ever
- Wounded deer go off and die a slow and painful death (I know, they've worn this out, even after the Camp Ripley wounding study showed extremely low wounding losses).
- Bowhunting is strictly recreational and plays no part in deer management (hmmm bowhunters take nearly 100,000 deer a year in Michigan, but that isn't management?).

Even though the arguments this new merged organization will present to the press are not new, even though those arguments have been dealt with from a scientific front, even though the safety issue isn't really an issue, the bowhunting community needs to unite on this and be proactive.

There are pamphlets out on the effectiveness of the bow, bow safety, urban bow hunts, wounding, the use of bowhunting as a management tool, and the problems with using contraception.

Those pamphlets need to be distributed with new press releases to outdoors writers, state bow associations, newspaper columnists, and the bow community in general.

A proactive approach now will force the HSUS-FFA merger to focus on something other than bowhunting.

Fishermen sit on the melting ice of the Neva River in downtown St. Petersburg, Russia, on Friday. It's no accident that Russians, Scandinavians and Poles tend to dominate international ice-fishing events.

Advice for ice anglers: Go light and get bites

Sitting in a box in my office are two ice-fishing rods, one that a friend brought from Russia and another that I bought in Finland. They can be differentiated from the ice-fishing stuff sold in American stores by their size. They are tiny, each less than 9 inches long.

Knight Ridder Newspapers

Those rods are meant to be used with extremely small lures, some no bigger than a BB, and light line, 2-pound test at the heaviest and sometimes less than 1 pound.

It's no accident that Scandina vians, Russians and Poles tend to dominate international ice-fishing events, like the world championships that will be held in Sweden in March. They spend a lot of time angling in waters that get heavy fishing pressure, and they often fish for tiny prey species that American ice anglers would use as bait for the toothy predators we're often after.

So if you decide to buy some icefishing gear, give a thought to emulating our European colleagues by purchasing at least one rig that's lighter than anything you've used in the past.

Buy the smallest rod you can find, preferably no longer than a foot. It should be limber enough to bend slightly under the weight of a 1/32ounce jig. You can rig it with a tiny reel, but if you're going to fish mostly in shallow water — say, less than 10 feet — you can get by with a simple plastic spool or a couple of pegs on the rod to wind the line around.

This rig will be used for small fish, like bluegills and perch. You could use it for bigger fish, like walleyes, but why bother? Ice fishing is rarely a catch-and-release activity. Most of us eat what we catch, and the idea isn't so much to give the fish a sporting chance as to get it up through the hole as efficiently as possible.

Ultra-light systems help us accomplish that with fish like bluegills and perch, which can be finicky biters. I've seen days when bluegills wouldn't touch a lure hanging on 4pound line but grabbed it eagerly when it was attached to 1-pound. Lighter line also makes it possible to use much smaller lures. If you've ever watched bluegills and perch ice, you know they spend a good amount of time feeding on stuff so small we can't see what they're eating from 5 or 6 While you're at it, pick up a few of those teeny bobbers, the pencilshaped ones an inch or so long. When the line is properly weighted so only the quarter-inch red or green tip of the bobber is above water, it will signal a bite if a fish so much as breathes on it. And by having the bobber weighted properly, you can see lift bites when the bobber rises a fraction of an inch as a fish takes the little lure or bait in its mouth.

There are drawbacks to lightline ice fishing. For one thing, those cobweb lines are affected by even the lightest wind, and if you're not watching, the line can blow against the side of the hole and freeze in place. And every now and then the lure is grabbed by something a lot bigger than you had planned on, and your chances of landing it are slim indeed.

But the drawbacks are so far outweighed by the advantages — more bites and increased sensitivity to bites — that you should finish the season well ahead.

Fewer deer in the woods? That's right

THE WEST VIRGINIA Division of Natural Resources has released the unofficial deer total for the twoweek firearms season.

The total buck kill was an impressive 64,547 deer, but it was down 12 percent from 2003. The antlerless deer harvest during the season was 42,537 compared to 47,064 a year ago. Overall, the decrease is pretty significant.

A number of counties reported a significant decrease for the buck season. For example, Preston County dropped from 2,561 bucks in 2003 to 2,016 bucks this season.

The DNR's position on the decrease is that it shows the division's overall management plan is working and the deer populations are closer to published objectives. From conversations with hunters who hunted in various parts of the state, it also appears that rain and fog the first two days contributed to some degree to the lower numbers.

But the talk around office water coolers and in the barber shops is also interesting, more that a few hunters think the liberal antlerless hunting opportunities have gone too far — that too many does are being taken out of the herd and that there are fewer deer than a few years ago.

Guess what? They are right; but that is the stated (and published) goal of the DNR.

The DNR management plans state that in 2004, the deer population exceeded management objectives in 22 counties. The way you reduce the deer population is to aggressively take antlerless deer out of it.

However, one of the bigger downsides of antlerless hunting is that a number of the antlerless deer taken will be young-of-theyear or button bucks. It can't be avoided.

Those would be the antlered deer in future seasons.

For comparison, the buck kill for the past five years follows: 2004—64,547; 2003—73,128; 2002— 96,555; 2001—99,375; 2000—88,677.

Overall, it's obvious that West Virginia remains one of the elite deer states in this region. But when the buck kill drops from 99,375 bucks to 64,547, it's also obvious that something very significant is happening within the state's deer herd.

Ross was wrong; let's move on

Sen. doesn't understand what he did wrong in voting for funding Former state Sen. Mike Ross still doesn't understand what he did wrong when he voted, along with other state legislators, to give $750,000 of state money to the Pete Dye Golf Club to help put on a professional golf tournament.

Ross, who was defeated for re-election last month, still faces charges brought about by the state ethics commission.

He said during his hearing that he didn't have any more to gain than the other 500 members of the Bridgeport golf club. However, he is the only member of the club who voted to give our tax dollars to the club to put on a tournament.

Ross' relationship with the club is stronger than most. In 2001, he loaned Pete Dye Golf Club owners $7 million and thus has exclusive privileges that other members do not, including lifetime membership for himself, his family and his heirs.

The whole mess could have been avoided if Ross simply had removed himself from the voting, citing a possible conflict of interest. The measure probably would have passed anyway.

In hindsight, Ross agrees.

"If this came up again, you better believe I would have taken myself out of (voting)," he was quoted in an Associated Press hearing story.

That would have been the wise thing to do.

Seemingly, the voters in Ross' district must have also felt things weren't done properly. He blames the negative publicity generated by the ethics investigation for his defeat.

We think justice has been done. The voters have spoken, and Ross will not be able to steer tax dollars anywhere, at least for the next two years.

We don't believe Ross was underhanded or tried to gain personally from this deal. Obviously, someone who can loan $7 million has enough money.

But when you're dealing with other people's money, you must be extra careful.

Ross wasn't.

In addition, it wasn't as though he were alone guiding the money to the course. He was just one of a majority who voted in favor of the measure. Ross said he doesn't even play golf and that he donated many rounds of golf to charity fund-raisers.

We think the continuation of the hearings is a waste of public time and money. The voters have spoken. Allow Ross and everybody else to go on with their lives.

Even if Ross doesn't understand what he did wrong, his electorate surely does.

Meet the new advisory board

EVERY COMMUNITY is defined by common interests, its locality and its laws — its likeness. But at the very same time, its differences also embody what makes up a community.

The Dominion Post consciously aims to reflect our community in its pages daily as this region's newspaper of record. One of the most effective ways we do this is by listening to our readers' advice via our Community Advisory Board.

This board, composed of 12 members, is replaced annually in the interests of new ideas and a fresh perspective on our community and its newspaper.

Recently, the newspaper's editorial board chose the latest dozen members to sit on this panel for one year. This decision was not easy. More than 40 people applied for a spot on the advisory board this fall. This year's board is as different as it is alike. It runs the spectrum from a CEO to a social worker, from a lifelong Preston County resident to a recent arrival from the Washington, D.C., area, and from a retiree who helped integrate WVU in the mid-1950s to a young oncology nurse who treats the terminally ill.

We are fortunate to be able to count these men and women as our neighbors and as members of this newspaper's advisory board.

With that said, we want to briefly introduce you to The Dominion Post's 2004-2005 Community Advisory Board.

ROBERT CLONCH and his wife moved to Morgantown in 1974 to complete their graduate work at WVU and never left. His career includes stints as the first coach of a girls basketball team at University High School, an administrator for Monongalia County Schools and for the past decade, he has been employed by the U.S. Department of Energy.

J. MICHAEL FIKE has spent 23 years of his life in public education following his calling in life as an advocate for children. He is an elementary school counselor in Monongalia County and past state president of the West Virginia Counseling Association and the West Virginia School Counselor Association.

SABRINA CAVE is the mother of a 10-month-old son and may have a different perspective on parenting than many of us because she serves as the director of the Mountaineer Parents Club at WVU. Her primary duties include working with the parents of the 18,000 undergraduates who are still very much involved in their children's education.

Democrats need to look forward now

Four years ago, the president won 49 percent of the vote. The Republican Party treated it like it was a mandate, and we let them get away with it. Fifty-one percent is not a mandate either. And this time we're not going to let them get away with it.

Our challenge today is not to re-hash what has happened, but to look forward, to make the Democratic Party a 50-state party again, and most importantly, to

The pundits have said that this election was decided on the issue of moral values. I don't believe that. It is a moral value to provide health care. It is a moral value to educate our young people. The sense of community that comes from full participation in our democracy is a moral value. It is a moral value to make sure that we do not leave our own debts to be paid by the next generation. Honesty is a moral value.

If this election had been decided on moral values, Democrats would have won.

reform cannot be the focus of our attention for only four months out of every four years.

Reform is a daily battle. And we must pursue those reforms with conviction — every day, at all levels, in 50 states.

A little while back, at a fundraiser, a woman came up to me. She identified herself as an evangelical Christian from Texas. I asked her what you are all wondering — why was she supporting me. She said there were two reasons. The first was that she had a child who had poly-cystic kidney disease, and that the illness made it impossible for their family to get health care.

The second thing she said was, "The other reason we're with you is because evangelical Christians are people of deep conviction, and you're a person of deep conviction. I may not agree with you on everything, but what we want more than anything else from our government is that when something happens to our family or something happens to our country — it's that the people in our government act out of deep conviction."

We are what we believe. And the American people know it. And I believe that over the next two ... four ... ten years ... election by election ... state by state ... precinct by precinct ... door by door ... vote by vote ... we're going to take this country back for the people who built it.

Kerik's immigration sin and ours do it." Nonsense. Open-borders

THE WITHDRAWAL of Bernard Kerik's nomination for secretary of Homeland Security has revived the "nanny issue" from the 1990s. Like two failed Clinton nominees for attorney general, Kerik employed an illegal immigrant as a nanny and failed to pay Social Security taxes on her labor. Whether the nanny was really the main problem with Kerik's troubled nomination is open to debate — media vultures are still picking away at his record — but the brouhaha sheds light on the looking-glass world of American immigration enforcement.

The political elite, which otherwise maintains an unshakable insouciance about the widespread disregard for the country's immigration laws, seems to think these laws should only be vigorously enforced when it comes to people nominated for Cabinet posts. If you might one day be considered for one of the nation's 15 Cabinet-level agencies, you must act as if immigration laws mean something. This double standard is, of course, absurd. We would never insist that only Cabinet nominees pay income taxes or abide by drug or labor laws.

But politicos seem to realize that the largely upper-middle-class indulgence of hiring illegal household help, when engaged in by people nominated to enforce our laws, risks igniting a populist revolt best avoided. Thus Kerik - nominated to head a department with responsibility for immigration enforcement, for goodness' sake! — had to go. And he really had no excuse. Verifying an employee's legality is usually only a matter of asking for documentation or calling an 800 number to verify a Social Security number or immigration-document number. As the ton of bricks descends on Kerik, however, it is worth noting the stew of hypocrisy surrounding this issue. Last year, the same congressional Democrats now tsk-tsking the loudest about his fall initially opposed expanding a pilot program available in several states to allow employers to get an instant check from the federal government on the legal status of prospective employees. Democrats cited, among other things, concerns that it would discriminate against Hispanics. Republicans suspected the enforcement any easier. The expansion eventually passed, and the sys-advocates make it sound as though there were never any housekeepers or nannies prior to the age of mass illegal immigration. There were. And somehow today, in those large swaths of the country without any illegal immigrants to speak of, people still manage to get their houses cleaned and their children cared for.

The reliance on illegal labor on the coasts and in major urban areas is deeply corrupting. It fosters a casual contempt for the law among those who do the hiring, and it hurts the country's most economically vulnerable citizens. Poorly educated workers who might compete for the kind of jobs taken by illegals are either shoved out of the way entirely or see their wages cut by the unfair competition. Democrats and Republicans both tend to buck popular sentiment to defend this status quo for their own reasons — Democrats to pander to ethnic lobbies; Republicans to pander to businesses that like cheap labor with no rights.

All of this is why immigration laws should apply much more broadly than just to Bernie Kerik, or the next Cabinet nominee too careless to have observed the law in his own household.

The Dominion Post's Dec. 5 editorial pointed out that there is a tremendous amount of development taking place in Morgantown, and that our existing roads and highways are not adequate to handle the additional load. There's not a person who travels throughout Morgantown who will disagree with the fact that traffic is very bad and is likely to get worse. What they will disagree with is how best to address the

During the past few years, three predominant proposals have surfaced. The first was the West Run Expressway, a limited access connector north of Morgantown that would essentially connect Interstate 68 and Interstate 79 with feeders into Morgantown. In opposition to that came the First Things First initiative, a proposal focused on improving/widening existing roads. Finally we have the Pastureland Parkway, a limited access road connecting W.Va. 705, near the intersection of Stewartstown Road, with U.S. 119 at the bottom of Easton Hill.

As presented by the supporters of the Pastureland Parkway, the proposed route does little more than shift the congestion off the Mileground onto the Parkway itself. Unless there is going to be a series of elaborate ramps and bridges, there will need to be additional traffic lights added to W.Va. 705 and U.S. 119 at the Parkway's endpoints. It also doesn't take a lot of imagination to see another traffic light on the Parkway to serve all the development that is taking place on the side of Easton Hill.

I'm not an engineer, but I see a few problems with this proposal: ■ Southbound traffic on U.S.

119 coming around the curve at West Run Road will run into traffic stopped at the Parkway traffic light. Once through that light, they hit another traffic light within a few hundred yards.

■ Traffic leaving Morgantown via W.Va. 705 will get backed up even farther by adding the additional light that will connect to the Parkway, within a hundred yards or so of the existing traffic light at the Stewartstown Road intersection.

■ The volume of traffic leaving Morgantown via W.Va. 705 will quickly overcome any improvements made as the current and proposed development in this area is completed.

Next is the First Things First proposal of improving/widening existing roads, such as Beechurst/University avenues and W.Va. 705 (among others). There's nothing wrong with improving existing roads, but there's one fundamental flaw with this proposal.

In an effort to reduce congestion, this group proposes putting these already overcrowded roads under construction!

The traffic is already unbearable and there's nowhere for it to go. If you want a taste of what it will be like, try driving through Sabraton this month during rush hour. Then picture Beechhurst and University under construction — for years.

That leaves us with the West Run Expressway. The northern part of Morgantown is experiencing tremendous growth. A quick look at a map will show you that the natural boundary of the Monongahela River forces new development to the north and east. With that growth comes increased traffic, and there is nowhere for it to go but onto our already overburdened roadways. To relieve the stress, we've got to give that traffic somewhere else to go.

During the construction of the West Run Expressway, current traffic loads will be minimally impacted because the road itself doesn't exist. However, once the road is opened, motorists in the northern part of Morgantown can get out of town quickly. Once the volume of traffic on the existing roadways is reduced, you can then start making the improvements advocated by First Things First. At least then there will be an escape route from all the construction.

The loudest argument made against the West Run Expressway seems to come from businesses on the currently jam-packed roads. I wonder if these businesses have considered the fact that perhaps their bottom-line will improve? I'm sure I'm not the only person who avoids the Mileground like the plague because of the traffic. When was the last time you sat in bumper to bumper traffic, looked off to the side of the road at a store and said, "I think I'll stop and shop at that store instead of sitting in this traffic?" With less traffic on the Mileground and Beechurst/University, consumers will be more inclined to visit businesses in those areas.

All three proposals have their merits, but the argument centers around what to do first. I submit that the answer is in the logistics. Give the traffic somewhere to go, then improve the roads from which it came.

It's time to put aside our selfish interests and do something that's important for all of the Morgantown area. It's been almost seven years since the 2020 Transportation Plan told us to build the West Run Expressway. At the rate we're going, does anyone want to guess what the 2040 Transportation Plan is going to say?

Solution to pedestrian crossing issue is possible

I am responding to the article concerning pedestrians crossing Mon Boulevard at the (Edith B. Barill) Star City Bridge.

I live in the Star City area and am also a frequent pedestrian. I have a possible solution to the hazards of crossing on foot there.

While standing on the rail-trail under the bridge, you see a large hill of dirt leading to the parking lot at Foodland. Why not grade and pave this making a path connecting the trail with the parking

This would make things handicap accessible as well as more pedestrian friendly. It may also give the trail a boost. I hope officials give this some thought. It could turn out to be just the solution needed. It can be very hazardous to cross there. I know from experience.

Christmas should not be about stress, shopping

Christmas is a time to rejoice because our Savior Jesus Christ should be a time of joy, but is it? Do you feel stressed and compelled to buy gifts you can't afford and don't have the time to buy? Are you spending more time shopping for your loved ones than being with your loved ones? If you aren't a Christian, why are you buying all of those presents? If you are a Christian, why are you buying all of those presents? Do you think Jesus would want you to be stressed in his name? Who took Christ out of Christ-

The malls are full and the churches are almost empty. Why do we have poor churches? Some churches are struggling to stay open because of lack of funds; but the big corporations are benefiting from all of the Christmas shopping.

You don't have to buy all of those presents to celebrate the birth of Jesus. You can go to church every week and celebrate His life. All of us sinners, rich and poor, are welcome in the House of Our Lord Jesus Christ ion Post reported that West Virginia has the slowest small business growth rate in the nation. During the recent economic recessions, West Virginia's recovery has also been at a rate slower than that nationwide. WVU's Bureau for Business and Economic Research noted that part of the problem is that a fair amount of West Virginia small businesses start up, but quickly go under.

Unfortunately for West Virginia entrepreneurs, annual "lawsuit" taxes are only part of the start-up penalties you may incur as a small business owner. West Virginia's workers' compensation system is the most expensive in the nation. With more than $4 billion in estimated debt, average workers' compensation premiums in West Virginia are twice as high as they are in California. Part of this problem is because our state Supreme Court almost always rules in favor of payouts. In one recent year, our state Supreme Court ruled in favor of payouts 88 percent of the time, requiring small business owners to foot the costs.

Be sure to include higher than average insurance rates in your small business start-up costs too. Because of our hostile courts, West Virginians are paying, on average, twice as much for insurance as citizens in our bordering states. That means it's more affordable for someone to start a small business outside of the Mountain State, rather than inside the City of Morgantown. Another effect of lawsuit abuse is the high cost of health care that pay for their employees. The for healthcare providers, which then get passed on to the public. Medical treatments and health care services disappear due to Simply put, West Virginia's small business owners face a nificantly by our broken court system. Often, the burden is too much to bear. National studies year 2006 because of our unfair legal climate. Clearly, West Virginians can't afford to pay the costs of a broken legal system

Reader thanks Marshall for visit to schools

I had the pleasure of listening to Rasheed Marshall give the graduation speech to a very excited and attentive group of DARE students from St. Francis and North Elementary schools. We, as Mountaineer fans, have delighted in what Rasheed has done for WVU on the field. Today, he showed what he does off the field is more important. For Rasheed to take time away from his busy finals week, to hand each student a certificate, speaks volumes about the character and class of this young man. Rasheed might be completing his competition for WVU in the upcoming Gator Bowl, but his performance today might have been his best, at least for this lucky group of elementary students.

Congratulations Rasheed on such a fine career at WVU, and I wish you the best in the future. With the class, charisma and leadership that you exhibit, both on and off the field, you will go far.

This Mountaineer fan is also a huge Marshall fan, Rasheed that

Why the Republicans beat the Democratic 527s in getting out vote

BY JOHN CARLISLE

Liberal activists are pondering how pro-Democratic advocacy groups, such as America Coming Together and MoveOn.org, exceeded their goal in turning out record numbers of voters on behalf of John Kerry yet still lost to George W. Bush.

The answer is simple. While Democratic groups did a good job in mobilizing their base, the Republicans did a great job. The reasons for the GOP's success are mainly due to a better use of volunteers and a centralized, partybased strategy that allowed for more effective coordination.

To a significant extent, the Kerry campaign and the Democratic Party depended on "527" committees to get out the Democratic vote. A 527 group, named after a portion of the federal tax code, can accept unlimited donations for spending on ads, voter mobilization and other activities as long as it doesn't directly coordinate with a political party or candidate. America Coming Together (ACT) and the MoveOn.org Voter Fund, the leading pro-Democratic 527s, spent $125 million and $21 million respectively during the campaign.

These 527s employed thousands of paid, professional organizers to contact potential voters. ACT, for instance, brought in activists from New York, California and Massachusetts to work in key battleground states such as Ohio. In that state, ACT's army of canvassers knocked on 3.7 million doors, held more than 1.1 million doorstep conversations and registered 85,000 new voters. Including the efforts of the MoveOn.org Voter Fund and other 527s, liberal activists registered a total of 300,000 new voters

Traditionally, Democrats won in Republican-leaning Ohio by boosting turnout in Democratic counties and minimizing the

GUEST COMMENTARY

GOP-margin of victory in Republican counties. In Democratic Cuyahoga County, where Cleveland is located, ACT's goal was to get at least 350,000 votes for Kerry, which presumably would ensure victory statewide. ACT exceeded that number; Kerry received 433,262. Overall, Kerry's 2.66 million votes were the most a Democratic candidate had ever won in

But it wasn't enough. The Republican voter mobilization campaign in Ohio as elsewhere was run strictly by the GOP and did not include 527s. And unlike the Democrats, the Republicans relied on unpaid, local volunteers. This gave the GOP a major advantage over the Democrats. Living in the communities targeted by the GOP, these volunteers took advantage of social networks, such as church groups and homeschooling associations, to contact friends, neighbors and relatives. Nationally, in the last 72 hours of the campaign, the Party's 1.4 million activists contacted — either by phone or knocking on the door — at least 15 million voters.

As a result, in Ohio, while the 527s significantly boosted the Democratic vote in a few key urban counties, the Republicans broke records in dozens of GOPleaning counties. Indeed, the 10 counties with the highest percentage of voter turnout went for Florida was no different. Thanks in large part to ACT, Kerry received far more votes than Al Gore in 2000. For example, in the nine critical counties running along the Interstate 4 corridor between St. Petersburg and Daytona Beach, Kerry picked up 206,000 more votes than Gore. While impressive, Bush did even better, adding 334,000 votes to his 2000 numbers. The Democratic victory strategy was premised on the notion that Kerry would win Florida if he could get 3.31 million votes. Kerry in fact received 3.57 million votes. Yet Bush comfortably won the state by 52-47 percent.

The Florida case again showed the superiority of the GOP's use of community-based volunteers conducting face-to-face canvassing. Bruce Cain, a University of California Berkeley political science professor, says that the Democratic 527s actually irritated potential voters. "They have to rethink the strategy of bringing people in from out-of-state. This tactic seems to backfire," concluded Cain.

The issue of coordination highlights the limitations in using 527s. The Republicans were so successful because they employed the Republican Party apparatus to mount a centralized voter mobilization campaign. The Democrats, on the other hand, were plagued by an unwieldy network of labor, civil rights, 527 and other groups that were legally prohibited from coordinating with the Democratic Party. This frequently led to situations where the groups were working at crosspurposes to the Kerry campaign, causing a duplication of effort and sending confusing messages.

Prior to the election, many political analysts were impressed by the emergence of the 527s, some even speculating that they might replace the political parties. This is not going to happen. As evidenced by the superiority of the Republican Party-led voter outreach effort over the 527-led Democratic effort, the 2004 election proves that the political parties still reign supreme.

Holiday season tipping is a win-win situation

NEW YORK (KRT) — As you check off items on your holiday todo list, don't forget to tip your hairdresser, baby sitter and other service providers.

Holiday tips are a traditional way of showing your appreciation to the people who make your life easier throughout the year. Tipping is also a way to ensure that you continue to receive quality service in the year to come, says Jodi R.R. Smith, president and founder of Mannersmith, a Boston-based etiquette consulting firm.

So who should receive a tip? Smith suggests you include: nannies or baby sitters, your building superintendent, maids or housekeepers, lawn maintenance or snow removal teams, your newspaper deliverer, hair stylist, manicurist, garbage removal team and other service people you regularly use.

You should base the amount on your tip on what you usually pay per week, visit, etc. For example, if you typically pay your housekeeper $100 per week, you should tip at least $100. Ask neighbors or other patrons what is typically given. The amount can vary widely, depending on where you live. "You need to be able to judge what is appropriate for you," says Smith. Some businesses or organizations may even stipulate mandatory holiday tips in their contracts with you might tip more than if you exchange only an occasional "hello" in the halls.

There are other people you interact with who should be recognized for their service, but should be given a gift rather than a tip. Smith notes that some workers, such as postal and other government employees, are not permitted to accept money. Others, such as teachers, might be insulted by being tipped. You might consider small tokens of your appreciation or gift cards for these people.

If handing out tips has caught you by surprise, remember next year to add in tips to your holiday budget. Otherwise, "the end of year crunch can be very painful," Smith says. The only way to avoid tipping and not be labeled a miser, she says, is to stay away from people and establishments that will expect tips — for example, by eating fast food instead of visiting a sitdown restaurant.

Analysts: Toys R Us still has hot toys, Wal-Mart is depleted

Discounter disputes shelves are lacking

NEW YORK (AP) — With one week left until Christmas, customers can still find some of the season's hottest toys like Dora's Talking House and Bella Dancerella, a ballet kit, at Toys R Us Inc. But it's a different story at rival Wal-Mart Stores Inc., whose inventory of many of the popular items has been depleted.

With its future dependent on the outcome of 2004 holiday shopping, the nation's second-largest toy seller behind Wal-Mart has been determined not to let the Bentonville, Ark.-based discounter spoil its Christmas as it did last vear.

"We are in great stock with all the hot toys. ... This is when we shine," said Kathleen Waugh, a spokeswoman at the Wayne, N.J.based retailer, which went back to its toy suppliers last month to reorder some of the surprise hits this season.

Those include Spin Master Ltd.'s Aqua Doodle, a coloring mat with water-filled pens, and Mattel Inc.'s Fisher-Price's Magic Hair Fairytale Dora, a 15-inch doll that comes with a butterfly wand.

Wal-Mart spokeswoman Suzanne Haney disputed the contention that the store's shelves were lacking, saying: "We still have a great selection of toys at everyday low prices."

In August, Toys R Us, whose profits plunged more than 60 percent last year, said it was considering selling its toy business; how it fares this holiday season will be a big factor in its decision.

To help reverse its fortunes, Toys R Us has stocked its shelves earlier than it did last year, has more exclusive merchandise, and has been beating the discounters on price at least in November.

However, while Toys R Us has an advantage on selection, it is too soon to tell whether it will bring home a healthy quarter. Last year, Toys R Us wound up with a disappointing holiday season even though it still had the hot toys.

Sean McGowan, an analyst at Harris Nesbitt, an investment research firm, said customer traffic will be the deciding factor in how Toys R Us fares this year, but he believes that this year "should be bet-

McGowan said based on last week's spot check of 25 hot toys, Toys R Us was in stock on 68 percent of the items on his list. That compared with 56 percent for Target and 48 percent for Wal-Mart.

Mark Rowan, an analyst at Prudential Equity Group, LLC, said Toys R Us was in stock on 82 percent of the items on his list of 28 hot toys, while Target had 72 percent. Wal-Mart had only 44 percent.

"I am finding huge holes" at Wal-Mart, McGowan said.

Some retailers require photo identification for returned items the holiday season upon us, a trip to the merchandise return counter can't be far behind. Just be sure to bring along your receipt — and, in some cases, a photo ID, too.

Some retailers have begun implementing stricter return policies that require photo identification — such as a driver's license — to complete the return, even if the returner has a receipt and price tags are still on the item.

The reason? Fraud. According to the National Retail Federation, returns of used or stolen merchandise are costing the industry $16 billion annually.

Express, K.B. Toys, Sports Authority and Guess, among others, — including name, address and

ing the personal information directly from IDs to help stem crime and to prevent price increases due to losses from stolen merchandise.

But some consumer advocates say collecting personal information and storing it in databases infringes on customers' privacy.

Beth Givens, director of the Privacy Rights Clearinghouse in San Diego, said she had received complaints from some consumers about the ID requirement.

"They say: 'I've got the receipt. Why can't I make the return? I feel as if I'm being coerced," Givens said. "We've also heard from customers that they don't like handing over a government-issued ID to make a return."

That is why some retailers, get, so far have decided against quent returners. Retailers say they are collect-requiring photo IDs.

"If it feels like it's a serious problem in the future, we'd do it," said John Kyees, chief financial officer for Philadelphia-based Urban Outfitters Inc. "But we don't want to aggravate customers. ... The relationship with customers is the most important in the retail business." By collecting IDs, he said, "you're painting the entire customer base. Everyone is guilty until proven innocent."

Charming Shoppes Inc., of Philadelphia, which operates Lane Bryant, Fashion Bug and Catherines stores, asks customers to fill out a form with their name and address when they make a return, but does not request a photo ID unless the customer has no receipt. The information is stored in a company data-

"With frequent-return customers, we ask them if they tried on clothes in the store," said Gayle Coolick, a Charming Shoppes spokeswoman.

As with many retailers, each of the company's stores has the discretion to refuse returns from customers they feel are abusing the system.

Return Exchange, an Irvine, Calif., company that manages information databases for many retailers including Express and K.B. Toys, said in a statement that data collected from the IDs of returners were sent to a secure system where they were electronically compared

Return Exchange, which declined to be interviewed for this article, said about 1 percent of returns are fraudulent — meaning they are returns of stolen or used merchandise that would not qualify for a refund.

The company declined to be more specific about how it uses the information in its database to flag potential frauds.

Anthony Hebron, a spokesman for Express parent Limited Brands Inc., said scanning data from an ID makes returns faster and safer for customers.

"All it does is speed up the process and make it more secure." he said. "If there are multiple returns at multiple locations, the system says 'denied."

If this happens, Express tells the customer to call Return Exchange to clear up the problem.

Seniors intrigued by idea of cruising through retirement

MIAMI (AP) — Gil and Teresa Betthauser spent more than a decade of their retirement touring the nation in a motor home and, now in their 70s, they can't imagine the idea of ending their travels to move into an assisted-living facility.

That's why they're intrigued by a recent study that proposes seniors who need only minimal care should take the money they would have spent on assisted living and book permanent passage on cruise ships.

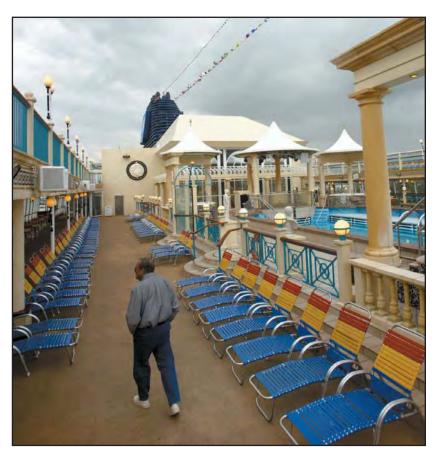

'When people have an opportunity to go to the Bahamas, they'd have something to look forward to and they'd live longer," said the 76year-old Teresa, who currently lives with her husband in a retirement community in Tucson, Ariz.

Two Northwestern University physicians who wrote the study, Drs. Lee A. Lindquist and Robert M. Golub, make the case that the costs for an entire year in an assisted-living center are comparable to those on a cruise ship. Doctors or nurses are always on call on larger ships. All meals are taken care of. Libraries, movie theaters and pools are available for entertainment.

And perhaps most importantly, the allure of being in the warm weather all year and visiting exotic places might persuade some resistant seniors to get the care they need.

"It comes to a point where they can't live at home alone," Lindquist said. "That's the hardest thing to do to send someone to an assisted-living facility. No one thinks they're old enough.'

The authors acknowledge that crew members would have to receive additional training, such as in dispensing pills and helping the elderly get dressed. And only seniors who weren't bedridden or seriously ill could live at sea.

"With assisted living, these are pretty much independent seniors. They'd need help with maybe one or two activities, meal preparation, shopping or taking medications,' Lindquist said.

The study calculated an annual cost in a double cabin on a Royal Caribbean Cruises Ltd. ship at about $33,000 per person. A search on Yahoo's travel Web site had prices as low as $399 per person in a double cabin for a seven-night cruise in the Gulf of Mexico on a Norwegian Cruise Line Ltd. ship. Port charges, taxes and government fees could bring that up to about $26,000 a year per person.

That's not a bad deal, the study contends, because the average annual cost at an assisted-living center is about $22,000 per person, according to federal and private data. In large cities such as Chicago, those costs can exceed $48,000 a year.

There would be extra costs, such as transport from the ship for emergency care and crew training. But Lindquist said she has gotten hundreds of e-mails since the study's November release from people interested in the idea, including the Betthausers. Lindquist suggests there could be an untapped market among

America's more than 35 million people who are age 65 or older.

About 800,000 Americans with an average age of 80 are in assistedliving facilities, according to the National Center for Assisted Liv-

There might only be 30 or 40 elderly people living on each ship, so companies wouldn't have to worry about being known as "the old folks cruise," Lindquist said. That way they could also mingle with a younger crowd, said Lindquist, who got the idea after taking a cruise with her parents, who are in their late 50s.

So far, the cruise industry hasn't enthusiastically responded to the proposal. The two biggest cruise companies, Carnival Corp. & PLC and Royal Caribbean, refused to comment on the plan.

About 9.8 million people traveled on cruise ships last year and more than a quarter were 60 or older, according to industry figures.

But the International Council of Cruise Lines, a trade group that represents the major companies, doesn't think the industry is prepared to handle a large number of permanent residents with special medical needs

"Cruises are intended to be a vacation. They're not intended to be a long-term assisted-living facility," said council president Michael Crye. Cruise lines have also been marketing themselves to a more active crowd over the past two decades, getting away from an old saying that the typical passenger was "newlywed, overfed or nearly dead." Crye said none of the council's members were considering Lindquist's idea, but agreed one day there might be a market for this type of cruising. "Baby boomers are going to be over the next decade or 20 years people that are going to be in this category," he said.

The proposal might work, but it's more likely just a "romantic idea," said Richard Grimes, president and CEO of Assisted Living Federation of America. Assisted-living homes are regulated in all 50 states, but there would be little control at sea because most ships are foreignflagged and travel in international waters, he said.

Grimes also didn't think "there would be a lot of people who would want to call the ship and a cabin their home. "I'd love to think I could go out on a cruise ship and live out my life," he said. "But the fact is that as people get older they want to be around their families more."

But Fay Aubuchon, 52, of St. Peters, Mo., thinks that when she has grandchildren, they would have plenty of reasons to visit if she and her husband lived on a ship.

"The kids would love to come because granny has a great swimming pool," said Aubuchon, one of the people who contacted Lindquist. "To me, I can't imagine anything better than that."

WVU students win national marketing event

A group of WVU students used the power of persuasion to woo FedEx and win a national sports marketing competition.

The students, all enrolled in the School of Physical Education's graduate sport management program, presented the most convincing argument to sway the overnight shipping company to sponsor a fictitious sports team. The competition was part of the Sport Marketing Association II Conference last month in Memphis, Tenn.

WVU team members are Kojo Mensah of Toronto, Kristin McCowan of Champaign, Ill., Marcus Blossom of Chicago, Jennifer Lastik of Greensburg, Pa., and Courtney Custer of Pittsburgh.

Competition came from the University of Northern Colorado, University of Southern Mississippi, Daniel Webster College and the University of Memphis.

The teams represented a sports property — the Charlotte Bobcats and presented their proposals to potential sport sponsor FedEx. Southern Mississippi and WVU were selected to compete in the finals.

Two FedEx Sport Sponsorship executives and the chief executive officer of FUSE Integrated Sport Marketing judged the WVU's PowerPoint presentation included ideas for FedEx including the "BOB (Blue and Orange Bucks)" Card, an affinity card program unique to this sponsorship.

PARENT TO PARENT

American culture squeezes single moms into corner

"So what about single parents, John?" asks a single mom responding to last week's column in which I proposed that it is in a child's best interest for his parents' relationship with one another to be stronger than their relationships with him. "How does all that apply to a single mom like me?"

I anticipated the question — and, in fact, am qualified to answer it (as you will see) — and had already prepared the response that follows.

As regular readers of this column know, my mother was a single parent for most of the first seven years of my life. During that time, she was a very interesting person in my eyes — one of the most interesting people I've ever known. She worked outside the home. She went to college (at that time, the College of Charleston) and eventually obtained a Ph.D. in plant morphology.

As she did her homework, she often took the time to explain to me things like the differences between animals with and animals without backbones. Sometimes she took me with her to the library, where I sat in awe of how quiet and still grown-ups could be.

Because she was interesting, I paid attention to her. She did not orbit around me; rather, I orbited around her, and she made sure that my orbit was ever-expanding. Through her independence, she encouraged mine. More than once she told me it was her job to make sure I could stand on my own two feet, which required that she not let me stand on hers.

She was affectionate, loving, and I always knew I could rely on her, but it was perfectly clear that she had a rich life beyond being John Rosemond's mother.

And by the way, my mother never, ever gave me the impression that having no father in my life was an excuse for misbehavior, not doing my best in school, poor manners, selfpity, "anger," etc. I was responsible, fully accountable. When I misbehaved, and tried to explain it away, my mother would look at me sternly and say, "There are no excuses."

Unfortunately, our culture no longer gives single mothers permission to be that kind of mom. Today's single mom is expected to feel guilty, not independent. She is expected to compensate for the supposed psychological trauma her divorce has imposed upon her children by orbiting around them, making them her life, which insures that she will not have one of her own. She thinks she can only validate that she is a good mom by doing things for her children; therefore, she rarely does anything for herself. She does not feel she has permission to discipline because, after all, (she thinks) her kids only misbehave because they are "angry" about the divorce, at the same time they (supposedly) feel responsible for it.

As a consequence of the box into which our culture squeezes the single mom (its walls are constructed of psychobabble), single-mom-hood in America is not what it was for my mother. Instead of a state of relatively enjoyable independence, it is confining, exhausting and guilt-ridden for all too many single moms.

A single mom recently told me that because she had always wanted to learn to paint, she was thinking of enrolling her 4-year-old daughter in art lessons. I suggested that she forgo doing something else for her daughter and enroll herself in art lessons, and then perhaps turn around and teach her daughter to paint. She looked at me quizzically for a few moments, then smiled and said, "I get it."

I hope she's enjoying her art lessons.

Chestnut Ridge Community Church teens give family

ne fortunate Morgantown family will be getting a great gift this Christmas — a newer, safer home — thanks to the hard work of several area teenagers.

Putting their own spin on the popular TV show "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition," on which a family in need is treated to some major home improvements, youth members of Chestnut Ridge Community Church are moving a single mom and her four teenage children (two girls in high school, two boys in middle school) into a newly remodeled, redecorated rental home. Just in time for the holidays.

The project is being funded through the Hoss Foundation, a foundation set up by Jeff Hostetler — former star player for Penn State, WVU, the New York Giants, the Oakland Raiders and the Washington Redskins — about 15 years ago to offer aid to needy families in the community.

Andrea Salamanca, youth leader, said the group collaborated with Bartlett House to find a suitable family.

The family, who wished not to be identified, has been living in a five-room apartment that has fallen into disrepair, Salamanca said. And while the original idea was to fix up the apartment, safety issues made it necessary to move the family to a new location altogether.

Calls were made, feelers put out. And eventually, Salamanca said, a rental house was located on Charles Avenue.

Once that was done, it was time for some elbow grease.

At least 25-30 youths, along with Salamanca, youth pastor Mark Byrer and Hostetler, gathered at the Charles Avenue home recently to strip wallpaper, paint, pull up carpeting, spackle holes, rip up old flooring and remove and replace furniture to ready the house for its new inhabitants.

"It feels good to know that I'm spending my time doing something worthwhile," said 16-year-old Morgantown High School student and Chestnut Ridge Youth Group member Amy Jo Ramsey. "To know that someone might have a nicer home because we helped."

Jonathan Haring, 15, also an MHS student, and Hostetler's 17year-old son, Justin, a student at UHS, echoed Ramsey's thoughts.

Byrer and the kids all agreed that while helping out is nothing new for youth members of Chestnut Ridge Community Church — in the past they have bought gifts for needy families and delivered presents to hospitals and to

Ronald McDonald House — this is definitely the largest project they have ever undertaken.

Zak Galeota, a 17-year-old UHS student, didn't have to hunt for words to describe how he felt about the project.

"It's just awesome to be able to help somebody out who might be less fortunate and to help them have a brighter holiday," he said, smiling broadly, before heading off to do "whatever's needed."

The kids had about 10 hours total to revamp the rental — from 3-8 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday. In that time they hoped to not only improve the basic look of the interior with fresh paint and new carpeting, but also to decorate the house for the holidays.

"I'm just so proud that so many of these kids showed up," said Salamanca, looking at the busy teenagers all around her. "You know, they're in school all day, a lot of them have jobs in the evening, but they're using what free time they have to come here and help. It just makes me so proud."

Salamanca said that while the kids definitely deserve the lion's share of the credit, the project — along with several other smaller projects aimed at making the lives of some single parents a little bit easier — wouldn't have been possible without the help of some local organizations including Bartlett House, Radisson Spa (which provided haircuts and massages for some of the single parents), Texas Roadhouse (which provided dinner for the family of five moving into the Charles Avenue house), Christian Help and Wal-Mart, who provided many of the furnishings for the Charles Avenue home.

Jeff Hostetler said helping others was always important to him while growing up, which is why he created the Hoss Foundation. "It's to help families through tough times, whether it be because of an illness or a traumatic injury or if they're just having a tough go of it," he said.

A member of Chestnut Ridge Community Church himself, Hostetler said the Hoss Foundation is a Christian organization.

"I've been awful blessed," he said. "And I grew up that way where we used to go help families in need, so I know what an impact it makes, not only for the family you're helping, but it's life-changing for these kids, too. They won't forget the look on someone's face when they wonder, 'Why did you do this for me?'"

Linda Golden, the family's representative at Bartlett House, said the family "could not have received a better Christmas present"

"This is absolutely what they needed," she said. "What the kids over at Chestnut Ridge (Community Church) have done for them — they're just overwhelmed by this. They don't know how to react."

Golden said she was particularly touched when she heard one of the teenage daughters say to her mother, "Mom, now I can have friends over."

"That statement can give you so much insight into what they were dealing with," Golden said.

The family saw the house for the first time at 11 p.m. Tuesday, Golden said.

"They were in total awe," she said. "They needed to bring nothing with them except their beds and their personal clothing. Literally everything had been provided for them: towels, sheets, new comforters, chest of drawers, tea towels, everything. They literally had to do nothing buy lay down and go to bed."

The girls' rooms were decorated in animal prints; the boy's in Harley- Davidson style. The mother's room features a rosepatterned bedspread. There is new leather furniture in the living room. The walls are painted tasteful, subtle colors and the carpeting and throw rugs are all new

"It'll be an adjustment for them," Golden said, "they're not used to living in a house like this. There were flowers on the tables, candles in the rooms.

"It's really amazing what these kids were able to pull off, in just a couple of weeks from the first phone call. This family didn't walk into a house, they walked into a home."

Stay healthy and warm in extreme cold

The Monongalia County Office of Emergency Management & MECCA 9-1-1 would like to remind residents that with the rapidly approaching winter season and the extremely cold temperatures that accompany it, could pose a substantial danger. Prolonged exposure to the cold can cause frostbite, hypothermia, or even death. Persons most susceptible to extreme cold are infants and the elderly.

Frostbite is a severe reaction to cold exposure of the skin that can permanently damage fingers, toes, the nose and ear lobes. Symptoms are loss of feeling and a white or pale appearance to the skin. If these symptoms are apparent, seek medical help immediately.

If medical help is not immediately available, slowly rewarm the affected areas. If the victim is also showing signs of hypothermia, always warm the body core before the extremities.

Hypothermia (low body temperature) is a condition brought on when the body temperature drops to less than 95 degrees F. Symptoms include slow or slurred speech, incoherence, memory loss, disorientation, uncontrollable shivering, drowsiness, repeated stumbling, and apparent exhaustion. If these symptoms are detected, take the person's temperature. If below 95 degrees F, immediately seek medical help. If medical aid is not available, begin warming the person slowly. Always warm the body core/trunk first. If needed, use your own body heat to warm the victim. Get the person into dry clothing, and wrap them in a warm blanket covering the head and neck. Do not give the person alcohol, drugs, coffee, or any hot beverage or food; warm broth is better. Do not warm extremities (arms and legs) first. This drives the cold blood toward the heart and can lead to heart failure.

Winter deaths

Everyone is potentially at risk with the actual threat depending upon individual situations. Recent winter death statistics in the United States indicate the following:

Related to ice and snow: About 70 percent occur in automobiles; 25 percent are people caught out in a storm; and the majorities are males over 40 years old.

Related to exposure to cold: 50 percent are people over 60 years old; over 75 percent are males; and about 20 percent occur in the home.

Recommended winter attire

Wear loose fitting, lightweight, warm clothing in several layers (the trapped air between the layers insulates). Layers can be removed to avoid perspiration and subsequent chill. Outer garments should be tightly woven, water repellent, and hooded. Wear a hat (half of body heat is lost through the top of the head). Cover the mouth with scarves to protect lungs from cold air. Mittens, snug at the wrists, are better than gloves. Gloves allow your fingers to cool much faster than mittens do. Try to stay dry. Do not stay outside for extended periods.

Be aware

Cold weather puts a strain on your heart, even without exercise. Be careful when shoveling snow, pushing a car, or performing other tasks. Regardless of your age or physical condition, avoid overexertion in the winter. Info: office of emergency management at 598-0301.

Knee replacement technology speeds recovery

BY PATRICIA ANSTETT

Knight Ridder Newspapers

DETROIT - Like so many Americans, Conrad Mallett Sr. delayed having knee surgery.

Mallett, 76, a former college president and adviser to Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, is an avid skier, who hits the slopes from "sun up to sun down."

Surgeons told him that if he underwent a knee replacement operation, he wouldn't be able to ski again. Too risky, once that delicate knee gets repaired, he was told.

He skied in pain throughout 2003, delaying his decision long enough to become eligible for a new knee replacement procedure that offers quicker recovery and a chance to return to skiing.

Orthopedic surgeons are noncommittal about the minimally invasive knee replacement surgery, awaiting more results. But as word has spread to patients, the procedure's appeal has grown in the two years since the federal Food and Drug Administration approved several new devices used in the surgery.

Nationwide about 300 000 Amer icans each year undergo traditional total knee replacement surgery. It's performed to rebuild the knee after injury or a type of arthritis, osteoarthritis — Mallet's diagnosis. Osteoarthritis causes the knees to bow in or out, and makes walking and exercise painful.

Mallett had his first knee replacement operation in June, and the second one Nov. 3 at Sinai-Grace Hospital in Detroit, where his son, Conrad Mallett Jr., a former Michigan Supreme Court Justice, is president.

The elder Mallett had almost no postoperative pain and was walking with a cane two weeks after surgery.

New tools, techniques

His surgeon, Dr. Robert Ference, director of minimally invasive joint replacement surgery at Sinai-Grace, says 96 percent of his patients are back to normal activities at six weeks, and half are back in just two weeks.

That compares to the three to six months other patients typically require after conventional knee replacement surgery. The timing of the return to activities depends on a person's level of fitness, age and general health.

back to normal activities more quickly because of two critical differences, says Ference. Surgeons do not cut into the quadriceps m uscle above the knee, as is done in traditional surgery. And, during surgery, doctors lift, but don't flip over, the kneecap, as is done in traditional surgery to help the surgical team gain access to the knee.

New tools and computer-guided programs as well as lining up the knee to the center of the ankle help surgeons perform the procedure without flipping over the kneecap.

Also, the incision is smaller, typically 3 to 4 inches, rather than 8 to 12 inches, Ference says. "What's important is not hurting the quadriceps.

Ference has performed 500 of the procedures in the past two years and is considered a leader in the field. He trains many physicians in the technique, both for Stryker Orthopaedics, a manufacturer of a device used in the surgery, as well as at surgery meetings. Earlier this month, Ference taught the technique to doctors at an American Academy of Orthopedic Surgery meeting in Rosemont, Ill. Ference says he expects that in five years, the minimally invasive approach will be the procedure of choice.

For now, orthopedic surgery groups are cautious.

Waiting for data

"The potential benefits, risks and costs of this have yet to be established," says Dr. Brian Hallstrom in knee replacement on the Web site of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgery (www.orthoinfo.aaos.org).

"Unfortunately, we won't know if these new techniques affect the long-term function and durability of the knee replacement for 10 to 15 years," Hallstrom writes. "Longterm durability is much more important than whether you were in the hospital for two days or four days after surgery.

Minimally invasive knee replacement was developed in 1991 by Dr. Peter Bonutti of Effingham, Ill. Last March, in the AAOS journal, he reported high success rates in studies of more than 200 patients two to four years after surgery.

Ference is confident enough with his results and team that he "takes all comers." His patients range from 150 to 400 pounds, averaging 262 pounds, he says.

Patients with a prior knee surgery who need a second operation, known as a revision, might be eligible for the minimally invasive technique if they don't have too much scar tissue that's developed at the incision site. Many of Ference's patients have had the traditional operation on one knee and seek him out for the new procedure on the other.

"The people who've had it done the traditional way can't believe the difference," says Lisa Hypna, one of Ference's two physician assis-

Rehabilitation after traditional surgery is so arduous that patients refuse to get their other knee operated on, she says. With the new procedure, "most patients book the other knee two weeks after surgery."

Both minimally invasive and traditional knee replacement surgery cost about $35,000. Insurance covers the traditional procedure but may not cover the new one.

The biggest problem following traditional surgery is infection, which occurs in two of every 100 patients, national studies show.

By comparison, Ference says, none of his 500 patients has developed an infection. He also uses regional anesthesia in the minimally invasive operation, compared to general anesthesia for traditional surgery. He says his patients aren't as groggy afterward, speeding their recovery. Ference's team tries to lower the risk of infection by mixing antibiotics into the cement paste he uses to hold the joint in place.

The team takes infection control in the operating room so seriously that they wear space- age-like operating garb, called bubble suits, with large, masked helmets.

Ference advises patients shopping for a surgeon to ask if they cut through the quadriceps muscle.

Some surgeons who call their operations minimally invasive use a smaller incision but cut through the muscle, he says.

Patients from as far as Connecticut, where Mallett lives, and Colorado are coming to Detroit for the surgery. Ference also has contracted with the Canadian health officials to bring patients to Detroit from Canada. Families who live more than 100 miles away from Sinai-Grace are housed for free in a top Southfield hotel with a shuttle to get them back and forth to the hospital.

Patients typically are discharged in two days, compared to three or four with traditional surgery.

Mallett is pleased with his results. Four days after surgery, he was able to lift his leg straight up.

Two weeks later, he was walking

Get to know your family health tree

BY KAREN SHIDELER Knight Ridder Newspapers

My grandfathers bequeathed me high cholesterol, Parkinson's disease and heart problems. My grandmothers added cancer and dementia.

My parents chipped in skin cancer. And knowing all that, I have begun to unearth my own medical history.

I still need to fill in some blanks, so while family members are visiting this holiday season, I hope we'll be asking some questions beyond "How were the roads?" and "What did you mean by that?" U.S. health officials have suggested we use the holidays as an occasion to share not only fellowship but medical information.

Thousands of diseases have a genetic component — they "run in the family." Some of them, like Huntington's disease and sickle cell anemia, can't be influenced by behavior, but how you live can have an effect on others.

If you have a family history of heart disease, for example, you can improve your chances of not getting it by keeping your blood pressure under control, exercising regularly, keeping your weight in check and not smoking.

The U.S. Health and Human Services Department offers free information about putting together a family health tree on its Web site and through the mail. But you can start right now:

Put your name at the top of a sheet of paper. Under your name, write your birth date. Then list any of your major illnesses, birth defects, allergies, vision or hearing problems, emotional or behavioral problems, such as depression or alcoholism, and chronic health problems, such as diabetes or asthma.

Do the same for your parents and your grandparents.

Add your children and grandchildren. Then start in on other blood relatives aunts, uncles and cousins. Include dates and causes of death, if you know them.

Note, too, at what age conditions occurred. My grandfather's heart problems came when he was in his mid-90s, which isn't worrisome to me. But if you discover that it's common for women on your mother's side to die in their early 60s, it's worth paying attention.

Now you know what you still need to find out. Once you've constructed your family medical history, take it with you the next time you visit your doctor. It will help both of you decide what tests you should have, what conditions to watch for and what you can do to avoid disease.

Underage drinking becomes a deadly dare

BY MICHAEL GRANBERRY

The Dallas Morning News (KRT)

For Rick Selah, the story of what happened to Lynn Gordon Bailey Jr. hit a little too close to home.

"Gordie," as his friends called him, was the University of Colorado freshman from Dallas who died of acute alcohol poisoning after a fraternity initiation rite on Sept. 17. The account of what happened to him, as published in The Dallas Morning News, drew dozens of e-mails from all over the country, ranging from empathy with his family to questions about a young person's responsibility.

But in Selah's case, the story resonated in a deeper way than it did for

"In many ways, it helps talking about it," he says, with a catch in his

On July 29, Kebra, Selah's 15year-old daughter, committed suicide in Coppell, Texas. Having reached a blood alcohol level of .10, Kebra punctuated her night of drinking by taking between six and 20 of her stepmother's prescription cough pills. She died in her father's arms before the sun came up.

There are many factors in her death, he says. But he sees peer pressure regarding alcohol — similar to what Bailey faced — as a main one.

Henry Wechsler, director of college alcohol studies at the Harvard School of Public Health, says such fatalities are becoming far more prevalent among young people, especially on college campuses. He says that 1,400 young people a year are dying in alcohol-related incidents.

Janis Dworkis of Dallas wrote in to say that "as a mother in this community, my heart breaks for Bailey's family and friends. But only the truth will help save some of the rest of our children."

She says the article "omitted the single most important fact of Mr. Bailey's sad, sad story. While you addressed the potential responsibility of Gordie's local fraternity 'brothers,' ... you made absolutely no mention at all of Mr. Bailey's responsibility in his own death."

She added: "All of this sounds as if Mr. Bailey were a pedestrian mowed down by a drunken driver. But the truth is far different."

Other readers raised similar questions. But Bailey's stepfather, Michael Lanahan, says it's asking too much of 18-year-olds to be able to handle a "forced drinking situation" less than two weeks after arriving on a campus of 30,000 students, when they want more than anything to be accepted by a new set of peers.

Cathleen Brooks, executive director of the Next Step Institute of Palm Bay, Fla., has for 25 years specialized in creating alcohol- and drug-prevention programs for high-risk young people. In her view, "social drinking" is not the focus of alcohol use in today's college fraternity culture. Rather, she says, it's now an instrument of abuse, a dangerous "thrill

"It is precisely that the drinking is abusive, life-threatening, personality-altering, mind-bending and illegal that makes it exciting," says

What frustrates many is that relatively little attention has been paid to the issue until recently, they say. But it's no longer appropriate, says Selah, to keep blaming the victims.

"Peer pressure at any age, but especially in your first year of college—and especially in fraternities — is almost uncontrollable," says Selah, who was "appalled" to read that Gordie Bailey's CU fraternity brothers gave him and nine fellow pledges a 10-bottle mixture of whiskey and cheap wine and told them to finish it in less than 30 minutes.

"They didn't put a gun to Gordie Bailey's head or pour beer down his throat," says Selah, "but they might as well have. He did it because he felt the pressure from his fraternity brothers. I was in a fraternity. I know what fraternities are like."

the Chi Psi fraternity, which has been shuttered at the University of Colorado. Donald Beeson, risk management director for the national Chi Psi fraternity, says the underlying message of the Bailey tragedy is that America needs to hone in on the issue of alcohol poisoning.

"We as a society have done a very good job of pushing the whole issue of drinking and driving, but we've failed to look at the whole issue of alcohol poisoning," says Beeson from his office in Chapel Hill, N.C.

At the moment, he says, members of the Chi Psi team are touring the country, "telling the Gordie Bailey story" to the fraternity's 33 chapters.

Beeson says Chi Psi is advocating a policy of zero tolerance when it comes to underage drinking. "We can't allow them to violate our policies and create another environment like the one that existed in Colorado," he

In an effort to prevent such tragedies, Lanahan and Leslie, his wife (Gordie's mother), have launched a foundation and Web site -www.thegordiefoundation.org whose mission, in its words, "is Bailey was a freshman pledge in threefold: to educate the public about alcohol poisoning, to identify steps parents and students can take to prevent such tragedies and to eradicate fraternity hazing in any form."

Just as members of the Chi Psi fraternity at the University of Colorado "say they didn't force Gordie to drink but did 'encourage' him, I'm going to encourage them to do something about this problem," says Lanahan. "I'm trying to hold out an olive branch to these people by saying, 'Don't make me do something I don't want to do."

Lanahan says he and his wife regret not providing a more aggressive understanding "of how to be responsible in a forced drinking situation."

In Selah's case, he wishes the best example had been started by himself, in his own house: He regrets ever taking a drink in front of his kids.

"I look back on that and realize what an example I was setting for my own kids," says the 44-year-old advertising executive. "Coupled with the fact that there's so much peer pressure about drinking, it's scary. Parents here get so worked up about drugs, but they're so hypocritical about alcohol, which may in fact be worse."

Don't let the holidays stress out your kids

The holidays are a stressful time for most adults. But many people don't realize they can also be stressful for children.

Ed Christophersen, a psychologist at Children's Mercy Hospitals and Clinics said, "If the adults are calm, children will be calm. If adults are hurried and frustrated, children pick up on that."

Some tips:

- Consider doing your holiday shopping without your children.
- Spend time with your children baking cookies, reading holiday books or making decorations.
- When family or friends gather, parents still have to spend time with and give attention to their children. Children don't appreciate that you haven't seen your relatives or friends in a long time. The children need you. So, plan to spend time with them, or don't bring them on the visit.

Sit and talk awhile

Next time there's an awkward silence at a family gathering – or just around the dinner table try filling the void with meaningful conversation. Don't know how? Pick up the newly published "Kids' Book of Questions," by Gregory Stock (Workman,

The book contains more than 250 questions designed to get families talking, from "What's the bravest thing you ever did?" to "If you had lots of money and could use it any way you wanted, what would you do with it?'

A Christmas greeting from Rabbi Marc Gellman

WE HOPE YOU enjoyed Tommy's Hanukkah greeting last week. Now, continuing our holiday switch-a-roo, we offer Marc's Christmas greeting. This is our way of showing you one of the deepest beliefs behind our love for each other: The sweetest fruit of interfaith dialogue is not tasted by merely helping someone of another faith understand our own. It is in coming to truly, sincerely and respectfully understand the way friends and neighbors of other faiths find their way to the top of the same mountain along a different path.

A Christmas Greeting from Rabbi Marc Gellman:

I've always liked manger scenes. I even like them on public property. As long as there's also a menorah somewhere, I love the idea of Christmas brightening what would otherwise be just the winter shopping season. I also like greeting people I think are Christians with "Merry Christmas" and not the anemic, politically correct greeting of "Happy Holidays!"

When people wish me a Merry Christmas, I take it as a wellmeant mistake, not a deep insult to my Jewish identity. So I wish you, my Christian brothers and sisters, a very Merry Christmas. I wish you a Christmas during which you remember what you must never forget: that you are gathered together not by your common belief in Santa Claus, but by your common belief that Christmas is the birthday of your Savior and redeemer, Jesus, whom you call the Christ.

What I take from the extraordinary life of Jesus is obviously not what you take, but it is still enormous. I take from him the commandment echoed in my daily prayers to love each other as people made in the image of God.

I take from him the ennobling idea from the Gospel of Matthew that feeding the hungry is feeding God, clothing the naked is clothing God and bringing hope to those who sleep in the dust is bringing hope to God. I take the example of his courage and his charity, his forgiveness and his humility as stirring examples for every spiritual seeker, even those who do not see Jesus as the

And even if I do not and cannot see Jesus as the Christ, I still marvel and exult in the joyous message you have brought to the world through this magisterial and glowing holiday of Christmas. I love your Christmas trees, but I love more the way you decorate them together. I love your caroling, but I love more that you are singing together.

I love your Christmas meal, but I love more the fact that it is eaten only after you have gone to church together. I even love that one of your best Christmas songs, "White Christmas," was written by a Jewish guy, Irving Berlin.

Some people think that the more Christian Americans profess their faith publicly, the more non-Christians have to fear. I strongly disagree. I'm comfortable admitting the truth that we live in a country that is overwhelmingly Christian, but I don't fear that the public expression of Christianity presents a threat to my freedoms.

I trust that the free exercise clause of the First Amendment will always be balanced by the establishment clause so that both the free exercise of religion and the separation of church and state will both be honored as we celebrate the great American experiment in religious pluralism.

This is not the Middle Ages, and neither I nor any other rational members of the Jewish or Muslim communities need fear another Inquisition or Crusade. America is history's best example of a country where religion can be honored in public and in private without fear of some divine right of kings overwhelming our right to find God, or reject God, each in our own way.

So on this Christmas Day, I celebrate what Christianity has brought to our country and to our world. This Christmas, I'll help Tommy decorate his tree. Although I cannot celebrate the birth of the Messiah that is the reason for the tree, I can get close enough to see the lights, feel the joy, hear the music and know that the celebration points to another place, a better, more joyous place where one day everything will be light and the songs we sing will rise to praise God in sweet harmony.

Merry Christmas!

President and Mrs. George W. Bush are the first presidential couple to include a scripture verse on their holiday cards. The First Lady is in charge of choosing the cards. Cards the couple sent out following Sept. 11 also included a verse from Psalms.

Bush holiday card contains scripture

The Dallas Morning News

About 2 million friends and supporters of President Bush found something in their mailboxes this month that no other president has offered: A holiday card with a Bible verse.

This card has a line from Psalms, 95:2: "Let us come before him with Thanksgiving and extol him with music and song.'

Presidents have been sending season's greetings since Calvin Coolidge wrote "Merry Christmas" on White House stationery in 1927. And many presidents issued proclamations about faith-related events ranging from the National Day of Prayer to Ramadan.

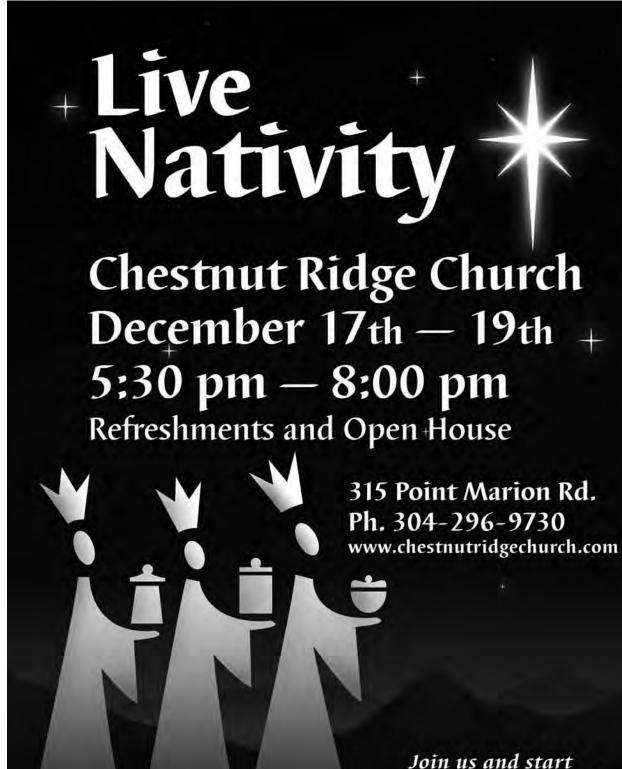

But this administration is the first to include Scripture in the annual card, said Mary Evans Seeley, author of "Season's Greetings From the White House: The Collection of Presidential Christmas Cards, Messages and Gifts." Seeley and her husband have a complete collection of the presidential holiday cards.

First Lady Laura Bush supervises the card selection. She picked cards with Bible verses when her husband was governor and has continued to do so in the White

WHEN IT COMES to clothing, I have always been a firm believer in fashion over function.

After all, four-inch heels aren't exactly functional for anything except maybe the development of ankle equinus and hammertoe.

But it seems that lately there is a trend toward outfits that multi-task. Clothes that not only serve to keep you covered, but also to provide you with music, data and lighting through built-in electronics.

As one who still doesn't know how to program her VCR, nevermind use 98 percent of the features on her cell phone, the idea of trying to figure out how to change the channel on my collar seems downright scary. I have a hard enough time just getting my Diane von Furstenberg wrap dresses wrapped $\textbf{Most years, when} \ I \ think \ of$ Christmas, I think of mangers, Hickory Farms meat platters, the occasional reindeer and maybe a sleigh ride.

This year, my attention has been diverted from the regular holiday spectacles by an infusion of diamond advertising that has left me, and many other men, feeling incredibly inadequate.

Diamond ads have always been a part of the holiday, and the unusual influx of them this season probably means marketers think the economy is doing well enough for folks to start spending their hardearned money on sparkling trinkets.

As a youngish, still-single male, I feel these ads are aimed at influencing me to buy a ring, to get engaged and to make a sweet woman really happy. But this year, it seems the diamond marketers don't care about selling engagements. I guess they figure they have the market cornered. Why should they remind guys they need diamonds to get married when girlfriends far and wide are already doing that for them?

This monopoly on engagement-wear has freed up the jewelry industry to focus on new markets. Last year, jewelers were focusing on single, professional women who weren't on the marriage track. The "right hand ring" is the diamond industry's solution to getting stones on the fingers of those unmarried women who have a

With the official start of winter only two days away, one seasonal truth is clear. It's only going to get colder. Now is the time to ask yourself, before hitting the road on your holiday travels: Can your car handle the coming wintry weather?

Here's a guide to finding out if your wheels are adequately winterized.

UNDER THE HOOD

Electrical:

If your car is three years old or older, it is a good idea to take it car in to be checked, said Herb Dodrill, consumer parts pro at Advance Auto in Sabraton. Some parts stores offer this service for free, including Advance Auto. It is also a good idea to have your alternator checked. * Check for corrosion on battery terminals, loose terminals, frayed insulation. Corrosion is the gunky stuff that can build up around terminals, Dodrill said. Insulation needs to be replaced if frayed, cracked or pulled apart. There are products one can buy to remove corrosion on a car battery and similar products that can be applied to prevent corrosion once

Check alternator belts. Ideally, an alternator belt should have a smooth, black surface. If the belt is shiny, cracked, torn or showing other signs of wear, it should be replaced, Dodrill said. If your car is three years old or older it is generally a good idea to replace it.

Check all cooling system hoses. Look for signs of wear: cracks, tears. An old hose will be very soft and easily bent, Dodrill said. A new hose will be firm and strong.

Check all fluid levels (antifreeze, wiper fluid). This can be done visually, as reservoir tanks are generally clear. If fluids are low, refill them.

* Antifreeze capability — the lowest temperature at which it will work — can be tested using a specific gravity device, available for a couple of dollars at any auto parts store. The device contains several colored balls; the number of balls that float up in the air indicates the temperature to which your antifreeze is effective. Dodrill said it is important to remember to only do this test when the engine is cool.

* Again, if your car is three years old or older it is a good idea to have all fluids flushed; all reservoirs cleaned and refilled with new fluids. It is possible to do this yourself or you can take your car to any tune up shop, such as Jiffy Lube or Grease Monkey.

Fuel and air delivery systems:

* Check your air filter by looking in between each of the pleats for grime, dirt and dust. If it is dirty, replace the filter. You can also try holding the filter up to the light — if little or no light shines through, it's time for a new filter, Dodrill said, adding that people who live on dirt roads or dusty roads or in dusty areas will have to change their cars' air filters more often. It is generally a good idea to change the air filter every 10,000-12,000 miles or so.

* Have your fuel filter checked. This is not something you can do by simply looking — you will need to visit a mechanic for this one. You should probably do this at least every 10,000-12,000 miles also.

in the fuel tank. Dodrill recommends always keeping your

During the winter, there is more chance of condensation tank full or almost-full during the winter months to help prevent condensation and freezing. For optimal upkeep, use a fuel injection fluid every third tank of gas or so. This fluid is poured right into the gas tank.

Windshield wipers:

#"Winter" wiper blades are available. They usually have sturdier, longer blades. A lot of newer good cleaning edge, Dodrill said.

Christine Croucher, aka The Tire Lady, owner of Rainbow Tire in Masontown, said probably the most important thing to remember in winter is to check the air pressure in your tires.

"As the temperature drops, it's more important than ever to test the air pressure in your tires because for every 10 degrees you lose in temperature, you lose one pound of air pressure." What that boils down to, she said, is a possible loss of up to five pounds of air pressure from summer to winter. And low tires mean compromised safety and performance on the road, she added.

Another thing to check for: make sure you have the valve cap on your valve stems to avoid getting ice in the valve steam, which can cause a leak.

And while all-season tires are fine for some people — those who live in town or in areas where snowfall is low — winter tread tires are a safety must for those in higher altitudes and on treacherous rural roads, Croucher said. All winter tread tires will have the "severe service emblem" — a mountain and a snowflake — on the tire.

Traction is the name of the game when it comes to tires — especially when you're talking about slick, wintry roads.

"Those four 'footprints' are the only connection between you and the highway," Croucher said. "So you want plenty of tread."

Winter driving tip: Don't PANIC!

WINTER DRIVING classes are available from The Tire Lady at Rainbow Tire in Masontown by request. Christine Croucher, owner (and The Tire Lady), will also come to your organization, office or business and teach a group class. Info and rates: 864-3999.

BY KATIE LONG

OK, so your car is fully winterized. But what about your driving? Christine Croucher, better known as The Tire Lady, and owner of Rainbow Tire in Masontown, said there are several key elements to learning to drive in win-

Trained at a winter driving school in Steamboat Springs, Colo., Croucher offers winter driving classes by request. The biggest mistake she notices, she said, is people panicking behind the wheel. "Having the knowledge of how to handle your vehicle in a winter situation is critical," she said.

Preparedness is of the utmost importance. Get an early enough start that you have time to warm your car, she said. Warming up your vehicle will increase your visibility (no nasty ice or snow blocking your windshield, side windows, mirrors or rear window) as well as the visibility of your car.

"It's important that others see you," Croucher said. "That way you can get the snow off your headlights, taillights, and make yourself easier to be seen by other motorists." Being comfortable that you have the correct emergency equipment will also make one feel more confident driving in harsh conditions. And always wear your safety belt. Also, it never hurts to practice braking — while in a safe situation, of course.

"There are a lot of things people probably don't know, like that roads are at their slick-

IN THE TRUNK:

Emergency supplies:

"No matter how well-maintained you car is, things can and do go wrong," Dodrill said. So it's advisable to keep a few emergency supplies ready in the trunk in the event something unfortunate happens.

Dodrill suggestions: flares, candles for light and warmth; a blanket; sensible, warm shoes and a pair gloves; a flashlight for light to help you pinpoint the problem; jumper cables; nonperishable food items (you never know how long you may be stuck); bottled water (same deal); extra car fluids.

few grand sitting around and feel as if their fingers aren't getting the attention they deserve.

The newest wrinkle in the superfluous diamond category is what some may call an upkeep ring. These expensive pieces are intended to reaffirm a man's devotion to his wife — because his continuing to live with her simply isn't getting the message across.

In my least favorite commercial of the year, an attractive middle-aged couple cavort in a European piazza, and the man tells his wife that he'd marry her all over again. When she looks up, as if to say, "What a dork," she spots her parents in the crowd and turns to find her husband on bended knee. As Romeo re-proposes, the folks in the crowded plaza applaud the transaction, and televisionviewing women everywhere look at their hubbies and think, "How come he never flies me and my parents to Rome to marry me again?'

Two cushions over, men roll their eyes as they remind their wives that one engagement ring is enough. Then they curse Kay jewelers for trying to establish another imaginary standard that men must meet to prove their devotion.

Although women may look at that ad and get weepy with sentiment, I see a more troubled situation in which the husband is likely caught with his pants down in the company of an Aspen hotel concierge. I don't think that's a re-engagement ring; I think that's a very expensive apology. Therefore, the message I get is that when you're married, you'd better behave or you can count on taking your wife and her parents to a more romantic continent so you can give her an enormous ring in a very public place.

Just thinking about it should be enough to completely eradicate male infidelity.

Don't get me wrong. I am a romantic, and I look forward to showing the woman of my dreams my devotion with a beautiful diamond she can wear forever. I'm just not sure I like the implication that to be a big sweetie involves diamond-buying as a lifelong process.

enough idea (the Hoodio, not looking before crossing the street — that goes without saying). To be honest, I'm actually somewhat tempted to try it (could come in handy for dog-walking). Being freakishly small, I probably could find one that fit — I just wish it came with AM. I may be short, but I'm still old. The only FM I listen to is NPR.

Levi's is also getting into the electric-gear game, marketing a "musical jacket" in Europe complete with fabric keyboard. I would love to be able to explain to vou how it works, but, being a bit shall we say, techno-challenged, I can't. So if you're curious (and clever), check it out for yourself at http://computer.howstuffworks.com/computer2-clothing2.htm.

While researching this electrotrend, it came as little surprise to me that one of the biggest markets for this stuff is in the extreme sports arena. I found ski jackets that light up, Gore-Tex jackets equipped with two-way radios, Oakley sunglasses with built-in earphones capable of storing 4 hours of digital tunes and a ski/snowboard helmet with speakers and a mic to which you can connect either an iPod or your cell phone (see, I told you people take their cell phones everywhere).

Maybe one of the kookiest things I found is a jacket by Nyx, an L.A.-based clothing company, that features a built-in flexible display screen that connects to a Palm OS PDA or a smartphone (like the Treo or Kyocera) and can display an illuminated message across the back. You can program the message to blink or to scroll across, and Nyx even offers a gizmo that makes the message synch up with music as it flashes.

Currently, the jackets are only being marketed to Nyx clients – at about 900 bucks a pop. But the price is expected to drop to about $250 once mass-manufacturing begins, supposedly early next year.

Obviously, the temptation to display something funny and mildly profane is there — but if I was actually able to figure out how to do that, I'd be much more apt to want to share that news. In big, pulsing red letters. Scrolling across my back:

"Oh my God, I programmed something."

And at about the same price as a DVF dress, at least this thing would be easier to get on.

Look younger,

'Malcolm' mom delivers with dispatch

BY BRIDGET BYRNE For The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It's Jane Kaczmarek's lunch hour and she's cramming as much conversation as she can between bites of her salami and provolone sandwich.

Her talk ranges from her fondness for lunch meat to her admiration for Meryl Streep. But her main topic is time.

"I'm so acutely aware of how little time I've got ... I just don't want to waste it ... I'm kind of a nut about that," says Kaczmarek, who turns 49 on Tuesday.

It's her sixth season as Lois, the opinionated tough-love mom of an often chaotic bunch of boys in the Fox sitcom "Malcolm in the Middle" (Sundays at 7:30 p.m.).

Kaczmarek and actor-husband Bradley Whitford ("The West Wing") have three young children and she wants each day's shooting on "Malcolm" to pass swiftly so she can get home in time to read to her kids before they go to bed.

"As a young actress I would have killed to have more face time. Now the first thing I do is pick up the script and go, 'Damn another scene," laughs Kaczmarek as she sits in her dressing room on the CBS lot in Studio City.

"But in a funny way, I think it's why I have probably got so much acclaim for this part. I just want to go home. I deliver lines with great dispatch because I want to get going ... so I think that probably created Lois more than anything."

She's been nominated for an Emmy five seasons in a row and walking the red carpet gave her the idea for clothesoffourback.org, which raises money for charity by auctioning the clothes stars wear at award shows.

"I feel like I have my 15 minutes of fame and I know the amount of money you can raise and the amount of awareness you can bring to certain things you care about," she says. "I want to die knowing that I really did as much as I could with the

He also kids about how her hip replacement last April has affected her work.

"When during rehearsal we discuss why a character should do this or that, Jane is always (suggesting) 'I think she's lying in bed at this time!"

During rehearsal on this day, Kaczmarek didn't get to lie down, but she was seated on the bed with Cranston as Lois and Hal discuss how little time they seem to have for each other. The result of this chat is that

Hal turns their garage into a facsimile of a tropical happy-hour spot. Here, the couple plan to spend time each evening together, while Malcolm and his brothers are assigned the household chores.

Inevitably the show has evolved from its first season when the main buzz was around Frankie Muniz as Malcolm, the second of Lois and Hal's four sons.

The oldest son, Francis (Christopher Kennedy Masterson) only appears occasionally now, and the clearly teenage Malcolm and his brothers Reese (Justin Berfield) and Dewey (Erik Per Sullivan) have been joined by a fifth boy, Jamie, born at the end of the fourth season and now occasionally glimpsed as a toddler.

Kaczmarek admits it has taken awhile to feel comfortable with story lines about a teenage Malcolm because "naughty children' is funny, 'naughty teenagers' is a little more menac-

Born in Milwaukee, Kaczmarek grew up in the Midwest where "a climate of celebrity didn't exist" and she was expected to become either a hairdresser or a nun.

Yet she does recall playing a peach blossom in a school pageant, leaving the stage in the wrong direction and convincing the other peach blossoms to follow her.

"That was probably the first time I remember having a certain power or authority to convince people of something, even though it was wrong," she says, laughing.

She went on to graduate from the University of Wisconsin and study drama at Yale. An early role came in the 1984 movie "Falling in Love," as wife to Robert De Niro, who leaves her for Streep.

"I think Meryl Streep was the only actor I have ever met I was totally tongue-tied in front of," says Kaczmarek.

She has treasured memories of the kindness and encouragement of the two-time Academy Award winner, who went "to bat for me" to help ensure the supporting role of the wife didn't get short shrift.

"I remember thinking, wow, if I'm ever in a position to be gracious and encouraging to other people I must remember how Meryl behaved."

Brides exercising equal right to female versions of the bachelor party

BY DARRYL E. OWENS

The Orlando Sentinel (KRT)

Violet Hall Kramer

ORLANDO, Fla. — When Amy Brouwer asked Holly Rhoda to serve as her maid of honor, Rhoda felt honored and obliged. Honored that Brouwer treasured their friendship, obliged to show her friend a good time when the moment came to fire a parting shot at singlehood.

The moment arrived on a recent Saturday night. Rhoda gathered the bride and a handful of her closest friends at an Orlando hotel room for the obligatory shindig. When the guests arrived, caution tape stretched across the door.

It read: Bachelorette Party ... Danger: Wild

Bachelor parties have long been the domain of "short-timer" single men. But women are exercising their equal right to get tanked up and tawdry in a girls-night-out version of the male bacchanal.

"If the guy can have a bachelor party where he's allowed to do whatever he wants," says Rhoda, 27, "why can't the girl?"

That why-not attitude has emerged over the past 20 years, as bachelorette parties have become increasingly popular. In September, Overture, an advertising company that tracks the popularity of Internet search terms, reported Web surfers searched "bachelorette party" 47,235 times. "Bachelor party" registered only 19,299 hits.

Meanwhile, businesses are cashing in. For example, in June, MLT Vacations, a Minnesota-based company, rolled out bachelorette parties as an add-on option for its Las Vegas-bound customers. Nightclubs are offering "bachelorette packages." "The Boston Belle," a 57-passenger charter that sails Boston Harbor and caters to bachelorette parties, might be the ticket for some wanton patriot games.

It's as though brides have decided they need something that generates more heat than toasters and bridal

"It used to be way back when they used to have tea parties and that would be their party before the wedding," says Alan Lasky, vice president of Bachelorettepartyfun.com, an Internet bachelorette party-planning service. "Men have always been known for drinking and carousing. Now women have the best of both worlds."

Changing attitudes

Women entered that strange new world in earnest about 30 years ago, says Beth Montemurro, assistant sociology professor at Penn State University. She thinks the popularity of bachelorette parties comes from the sexual revolution.

"Men had bachelor parties because they were about to be trapped in marriage," Montemurro writes in her study, "Sex Symbols: The Bachelorette Party as a Window to Change in Women's Sexual Expression." Before the '70s, she says in the study published recently in the journal Sexuality and Culture, "women did not have similar parties because it was not believed that they were giving anything up in marriage. As the sexual double standard lost some of its power and as women's rights and freedoms became more pronounced, it has become more socially acceptable for women to acknowledge that they, too, are entitled to a 'last night of free-themed novelties, and lick tequila from strangers' chests, she concluded, bachelorette parties are hypersexualized rituals.

That bachelorette parties are so steeped in sexuality owes no small part to the growth of the Internet. Popular wedding Web sites such as The Knot.com offer etiquette tips and themes for bachelorette parties, while party planners surf the Internet in search of advice, ideas, and phallic party favors.

"People don't like to go to the adult stores," says Tom Nardone, president and founder of Bachelorette.com, "so the Internet's been a natural for us."

Indeed, the party favors common to bachelorette parties give brides another reason to blush. Among the phallic-themed items available are pinatas, Jell-O shot trays, toothpicks bearing figures illustrating pages of the Kamasutra, and cups and napkins featuring near-nude men.

Eclectic final flings

Not that bachelorette parties aren't as eclectic as brides.

For Christina Payne's final single fling last month, her girlfriends planned supper at P.F. Chang's, followed by club-hopping at Universal's City Walk and in downtown Orlando.

"It's just one last time to get together, to celebrate the last night on the town" says Payne, 25, a marketing writer. "It's basically to give the bride a proper sendoff. It's just really fun." Her fiance, Miguel Valecillos, 31, took his bachelor party on the road to Las Vegas. Yet, from the condom-covered bridal veil Payne sported to the "dare card" game that challenged Payne to try deeds such as begging free drinks from strangers, Payne's friends vowed her party certainly wouldn't

The night was designed to "bring it all (the revelry) into public," says Shannon Hawkey, one of four bridesmaids who masterminded Payne's party, "and try to embarrass her and be obnoxious.'

Others prefer to bottle up the antics in a private setting.

Sherice Eubanks, an Orlando-based consultant with L.O.V.E. Parties, an in-home party provider that specializes in adult-themed products, books about 15 bachelorette parties a year. Her events include a 90-minute sales pitch of lingerie, body oils, and erotic toys, preceded by naughty-butnice games. After years of watching the man have his cake and watch a stripper jump out of it, Eubanks says, bachelorettes decided "instead of tea and cookies, we're going to spice it up and have a great time.' Sometimes the spice comes packaged in a G-string. Eric Slain, a booking agent with ExoticFloridaStrippers.com, says women will spend $99 for a 10-minute strip-o-gram or pay $750 for a five-man chorus line of strippers Chippendaling their hearts out. Clients are asked to judge the anticipated riotousness of the bachelorette party before booking the talent. Conservative parties rate a one, while Slain says a six means, "outta control, call the police.'

Chilling effect on men?

Strippers aside, Montemurro thinks women view the affairs less as a turnon than a source of fun and bonding.

"These women seemed to find amusement in the shocked or embarrassed expression on the bride-to-be's face," she says. Women, she adds, seem to be "not only mimicking the bachelor party, but they were mocking it as well."

Determining the cost basis of your home

LAST WEEK, WE TALKED about the exclusion form taxes of the gain from the sale of a principal residence. In order to determine the exact amount of the gain, it's necessary to establish your cost basis, in other words, what you paid for your property, plus changes to the property that add to or subtract from that amount. If you live in your main residence only a few years, and make no changes to it beyond maintenance and repairs, the basis remains what you paid for it, except as discussed below. If, like many of us, you live in your home over a longer period, the cost basis becomes more complicated to determine.

While the fees paid to obtain a mortgage do not add to your basis, certain closing costs will increase it. Examples are fees paid to a lawyer for a title search and closing, recording fees paid to have your deed entered at the courthouse, transfer taxes, title insurance and non-refundable fees for installing utilities such as new cable service. Fire and mortgage insurance premiums and money set aside monthly to pay property taxes, however, cannot be added to your basis. Also, if the seller paid points for you when you bought the property, the total amount of the points must be deducted from your basis.

Beyond these additions and subtractions to your basis, improvements to your property also add to your basis. The easiest to understand are adding things to your home that previously weren't there. If you added a heating and air conditioning system to a home that had only space heaters when you bought it, all the cost of that improvement adds to your basis. Adding or remodeling rooms, especially kitchen and bath updates, adding a deck, porch or garage, wiring upgrades, paving a previously unpaved driveway and many other such changes both inside and outside your home will change your basis.

On the minus side, if a tree falls on your home and your insurance covers the cost of repairs, the insurance coverage decreases your basis by the amount you receive. Also and importantly, improvements that are no longer part of your home can no longer be included in the basis. When you bought your home, you installed wall-to-wall carpet, which added to the basis. Then years later, you replaced the by-now worn out carpet and installed new. The cost of the carpet you installed years ago must be subtracted from your basis, but the cost of the new carpet will be added in its place.

If you live in your home for a long enough period, there are probably many changes you will make. A good rule of thumb is that the basis is increased only by those improvements that are still part of the property on the day it is sold.

Shiny-Brites, once popular in the '50s, return to the market

Knight Ridder Newspapers

If you grew up in America in the '40s and '50s, Shiny-Brite ornaments were probably a part of your childhood. The little glass globes were charming, colorful and completely unassuming, all lacquered with gleaming pink, green and blue or encircled by peppy stripes.

These were not the intricate European ornaments of yesteryear, with all their handpainted complexity. No, there was a certain purity to the Shiny-Brites. They were refreshingly simple, cheerfully bright, often transparent. They were ornaments that represented the frank and fresh-faced American sensibility of the mid-20th century. And, mass-produced and sold for a few cents at Woolworth's, they were a solid, practical decorating choice.

Shiny-Brites enjoyed their heyday in the '50s, and when they stopped selling as well in the 1960s, it was a sign of the times. They weren't made at all anymore by the '70s, and it was just as well; by then, in a nation confused by Vietnam, the sweet pink-and-purple glass ornaments seemed almost naive.

Fast-forward to today. It's a new century, and Shiny-Brites are back; holiday designer Christopher Radko has been producing replicas since 2001. We found the new ornaments in gift boutiques and a few department stores, as cheerfully colorful as ever.

Of course, the original Shiny-Brites never really went away. You can find vintage glass ornaments in antiques shops and on eBay, at garage sales and estate sales — and, of course, on Christmas trees across the country, handled lovingly by people who have pulled them out every year for half a century or more.

Shiny-Brites have come to represent the hope and optimism of Americans in the mid-20th century — probably because they were a childhood fixture for lots of baby boomers. But Shiny-Brites, with all their joyful glimmering, were created in the dark days before World War II.

Before the war, Americans bought intricate, hand-painted glass ornaments that were imported from Germany and Poland. But in the late 1930s, when it became clear that a world war was imminent, Max Eckardt knew he had a problem. Eckardt, who imported ornaments from Europe, knew the war would complicate international trade and besides, Germany was slowing down its ornament production and rededicating its factories to war materials. So he looked for a way to make the ornaments in the United States.

Shiny-Brite ornaments enjoyed their heyday in the 1950s. The little glass globes were charming, colorful and completely unassuming.

He found one: By 1937, he was in business with the Corning glass manufacturing company in New York, making glass ornaments on machines that were designed to make light bulbs.

In 1939, Eckardt's ornaments got the boost they needed to make them ubiquitous in American homes: The Woolworth five-and-dime chain placed an order for more than 200,000 ornaments. In December 1939, the mass-produced Shiny-Brites were sold nationwide in Woolworth's stores for just a few cents apiece.

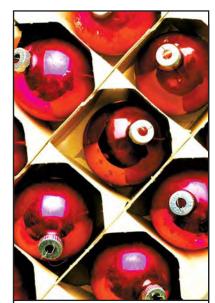

If they were sold in Woolworth's and for such an affordable price—you know they were on Christmas trees all over America. The packaging bolstered the all-American vibe. The boxes — solid brown cardboard, enhanced in later years with a cellophane window — featured the words "American Made." For several years the boxes even had a picture of Santa shaking hands with Uncle Sam. Shiny-Brites were popular throughout the '40s and '50s — but then the company started making plastic ornaments, and it was all downhill from there; by the 1970s, the company had stopped making Shiny-Brites altogether.

But in a marketplace where boomer nostalgia reigns, Shiny-Brites couldn't have stayed away forever. A few years ago, Christopher Radko, a holiday-decor designer whose complex glass ornaments are handblown in Poland, began selling Shiny-Brite replicas. Radko has an interesting story of his own — in 1984, his family's

Where to buy Shiny-Brites

NEW: Christopher Radko's Shiny-Brite ornaments are sold in boutiques all over the country. See www.christopherradko.com for a retailer near you. ANTIQUE: Antique Shiny-Brites often pop up on eBay, with prices that range from dirt-cheap to "who has that kind of money?" A BETTER BET: Shop for them at antiques stores, where you can see what you're getting before you buy.

Christmas tree fell over, shattering almost every one of the family's 2,000 mouth-blown, European glass ornaments. Determined to replace them, Radko traveled to Poland, where he found a man who could duplicate the ornaments. On his way home, though, bearing ornaments for family use, Radko sold them all to friends in New York and discovered that he was onto something. The twentysomething Radko quit his job in a talent-agency mailroom and went to work designing ornaments; over the past 19 years, he has made a name for himself in holiday ornaments and decor.

Radko bought the Shiny-Brite name in the late '90s and started selling replicas of the old Shiny-Brite glass ornaments in 2001. The lustrous little baubles look just the wav they used to, in colors that seem brighter than ever.

Top-quality wood doors prevent air leakage, won't warp

DEAR JIM: I need a new front door. Several neighbors have beautiful wood doors. I want an attractive door with glass like theirs, but I am afraid it may eventually warp and need repairs. What do you think?

- Sandi T.

Dear Sandi: If you install a topquality wood front door, you won't have to worry about its becoming warped. A warped door is not only unattractive, but the air leakage around it will increase your utility bills year-round. It also creates chilly drafts and allows allergens and dust to get indoors

Keep in mind though, even the best wood doors require a periodic inspection and they are not as maintenance-free as are insulated steel and fiberglass doors. Wood is a natural material, so it may grow and shrink with seasonal changes in humidity and temperature. A good-quality finish on the door should seal the wood and minimize these changes. Some doors are delivered prefinished and other are finished at your home. Your regular inspection should be for scratches and nicks that might allow moisture to enter the wood. Seal any spots with a touch of urethane.

DULLEY

Many top-quality wood doors are made of solid hardwood rails (horizontal sections) and stiles (vertical sections). If the climate conditions in your area are severe and have caused other front doors to warp, consider a door made of laminated veneer lumber or other engineered lumber. For stability, these consist of small pieces of wood bonded together under a wood veneer.

Another option is a wood door with a foam insulation core. Solid wood is a fairly good natural insulator, but the foam core quadruples the overall insulation level. These designs also use two-piece rail and stile construction for greater stability in any climate and weather conditions.

The type of decorative glass you install in the door will likely have a greater impact on its efficiency than the door construction or the foam insulation. Also, adding large decorative glass panels, such as leaded, stained, beveled, arched, etc., can almost double the cost of some doors.

Triple-pane glass is best for all climates. It is energy efficient (two air gaps) and it is more difficult for a thief to break through it. The decorative pane is between the outer two for protection against accidental damages or degradation by the sun, air pollution, cleaning, etc.

The wood you select (oak, maple, ash, birch, mahogany, hemlock, walnut, cherry) does not have a great impact on the durability of the door as long as you maintain it and keep the surface sealed. Make your selection of the wood type based its appearance and your budget. If you prefer a stylish look, select one with an embossed metal (brass, copper, or pewter) skin.

DEAR JIM: I have completed the trench around the foundation of my house for drainage pipe. It now has a thin layer of leaves in it. Do I have clean out all the leaves before I fill in some base gravel and install the pipe?

Dear Al: Installing perforated drainage pipe in a trench around the foundation is an excellent way to minimize water leakage problems. You can remove the leaves with a vacuum if you wish, but it probably is not necessary. Under the weight of the gravel and with the high moisture content in the drainage ditch, the leaves will rapidly decompose into loose soil. The gravel separates the holes in the pipe from the soil so it should not clog.

Collectors love to search for different versions of Santa Claus figurines

FATHER CHRISTMAS BELONGS to the English holiday tradition. Pre Nol was French. Kris Kringle came from Germany in the 18th century. St. Nicholas, who wears bishop's robes, was the patron saint of sailors in the Netherlands. And Santa Claus is the American version of the bearded man who gives gifts to children at Christmastime.

By the 1890s in the United States, Santa was known as the leader of a workshop of elves at the North Pole. He had a wife by 1899. Santa's appearance changed from a large man who dropped gifts down chimneys to a jolly little elf who came down the chimney with gifts.

By the early 1900s Santa wore a red suit trimmed in fur, and by 1931 he was a large man dressed in red and was pictured in a Coca-Cola ad. Collectors treasure early versions of Santa as a jolly round elf or as a rotund man wearing long robes and a wreath of holly.

Any Santa figure that is not wearing red is of extra value, because it is probably more than 90

Many people collect Christmas items year-round. Another group gathers old family Christmas ornaments, cards and figures to use each year in December.

RALPH & KOVEL

Q: Sometime during the 1950s, I received a 10-inch doll called "Littlest Angel" for Christmas. The joy this doll gave me continued for a whole year, because each month a new outfit for the doll arrived in the mail. Each outfit went along with the month. So there was a slicker and boots for April, a swimsuit and towel for July, a school outfit for September, and so on. I still have the doll and her trunk full of clothing. Can you tell me who made the doll and what it's worth?

A: Check the back of your doll's head. It should be stamped "R & B," the mark used by the Arranbee Doll Co. of New York City. Arranbee introduced its hard-plastic Littlest Angel dolls about 1954. The dolls came with vinyl heads starting in 1957. In 1958 the Vogue Doll Co. of Medford, Mass., bought the Arranbee Doll Co. Vogue continued to sell Littlest Angel dolls marked "R &

B" until 1963. Your doll, in excellent condition and wearing her original white outfit, would sell for about $150. If you still had her original box, the doll could be worth nearly twice that much. Each of her outfits, boxed and unopened, sells for about $50. Outfits that have been opened and played with sell for considerably

Tip: Don't wrap Christmas ornaments in newspaper; the ink might rub off. Don't store them in plastic bags; moisture might condense and cause problems. Don't store glass ornaments in a damp basement; mildew will cause damage.

Give tool lovers gifts that make the cut

When it's cold outside, the temptation is great to stay inside and putter around. So it's not surprising that tools turn up on a lot of holiday wish lists. More tools are sold in the fourth quarter than at any other time of the year, manufacturers and retailers say.

No matter who you are or who's on your gift list — or his or her skill set there are tools aplenty.

Skil's X-Shop

Talk about multitasking! X-Shop is a 15-amp, 10-inch tablesaw that converts effortlessly into a shaper, drill press, stationary sander or scroll saw just by attaching portable tools to inserts that fit easily into the platform. Of course, you'll need to buy the portables (drill, scroll saw, router and sander), but doing so is cheaper, and X-Shop takes up much less space than comparable stationary tools. Cool feature: The tablesaw shows the distance between saw blade and fence as a electronic readout for greater accuracy. Price: $380; www.skil.com.

Sarut's Hawaiian Tools They look pretty, but they mean business: They cut, hammer, grip and tighten. The tools (hammer, scissors, screwdriver, stubby screwdriver, pliers and utility knife) come in packs of four for $30 or individually for $7.50. The hammer's handle is a detachable slotted screwdriver with two detachable stubby screwdrivers in the bottom; www.sarut.com.

PDI's Light Switch and Outlet Covers

Here's one of those ideas that's so simple yet so ingenious: These reusable little covers eliminate the need to meticulously tape around electrical switches and outlets when you're painting. Result: You save time and protect the wiring. It's a great stocking stuffer. Price: sixtynine cents each, available in "painter's dozen" packs of 13 for $8.95; www.theoutletcover.com.

Ryobi's AirGrip

If you never get anything straight, this laser level may help. It operates on two AA batteries and rotates at 360 degrees to give a straight line at every angle. Best feature: It uses a vacuum to grip the surface, leaving no marks and the user's hands free to adjust pictures, etc. Price: $39.95; www.ryobi.com.

Barbara K. Tools

Barbara Karovit acknowledges that her products are geared to women, but her ideas have universal appeal. The Barbara K 12-volt cordless drill/screw gun ($49.99), for instance, is not much different from the others, but you can reduce fatigue by detaching the battery from the drill, inserting it into an adapter, and slipping it into a pouch that clips onto a belt. Her 30-piece toolkit ($49.99) comes with all you need for simple jobs such as hanging pictures and shelves and replacing washers in faucets. One nice feature: The pliers have a springassist clip, so they are easier to hold and adjust; www.barbarak.com.

Stanley's ZAG folding workbench retails for $40.

Bosch's Power Box

Run an extension cord from the nearest outlet to this guy and watch what happens. The box charges Bosch batteries, has four protected electrical outlets, and has an AM/FM tuner and a CD player with anti-skip technology that is MP3 and CD-R/RW compatible. Oh, you can recharge your cell phone in it, too. Price: $179; www.boschtools.com.

Black & Decker 12-volt battery-powered nailer

Make nailing a one-shot deal. With a one-hour battery charge, this cordless nailer can drive in 400 1-gauge nails, ranging from five-eighths inch to 2 inches, at two nails per second. An indicator lets you know when it's time for a fill-up. Price: $199; www.blackanddecker.com.

KRT Photos

Roller Wizard

Power-wash your paint rollers with this baby; it sits in a sink and draws on your faucet for the necessary cleaning force. Simply insert the roller (handle and all) into the washer, connect the hose to the faucet (adapter included), and spin the manifold till it picks up speed, moving it up and down to wash the roller thoroughly. Shut off the water, turn the manifold clockwise, and the roller dries. Price: $29.99; www.roller-

Stanley's ZAG folding workbench

Need something portable for small projects? This bench weighs practically nothing but can hold up to 550 pounds, and it sets up in 15 seconds. Its storage bag has 13 pockets, and there's a shelf for storing that extra gallon of paint. Price: $40; www.stanleyworks.com.

Craftsman's Fold-N-Lock

You should never be too far from the right screwdriver, and this one gives you six blades in a compact package that fits in your pocket. Each of the blades locks in three different positions with push-button release, so you can get into hard-to-reach places. Price: $9.99; www.craftsman.com.

Energy efficiency pays off for builder, buyer

BY KEN SHEINKOPF

The Orlando Sentinel (KRT) Each summer, the Southeast Building Conference recognizes home builders in 11 southern states for their homes' design, quality and features. As part of the Aurora Awards, builder Luis Diaz of Americas Homes in St. Cloud was this year's top winner in the solar-home category. Diaz believes that conservation is more than saving energy; it means providing buyers with a quality home and a community designed for livability. His homes meet Energy Star standards, plus they include solar water heating. One model that earned praise in the competition is a 2,426-square-foot home that is certified to meet the Environmental Protection Agency's Energy Star criteria for new homes.

The awards were part of the Sun Built program sponsored by the Florida Solar Energy Research & Education Foundation and the Florida Department of Environmental Protection's Energy Office. The program, detailed at Sunbuilt.org, offers incentives to builders when they include solar technologies in their homes.

This builder's achievements and philosophy are an example of what many home builders around the country are doing these days. They're not just building homes that meet minimum standards or cutting corners to keep the price as low as possible. Instead, the trend is growing nationwide to offer homes that meet standards like those set by the Energy Star and Sun Built programs and other regional programs so that buyers get homes that are comfortable, affordable and, as a result, are more enjoyable places to live. For years, those of us in the energy-efficiency field have been speaking to builders about the many reasons why they should be offering energy efficiency and renewable-energy systems in their homes, and more of them are listening. An energy-efficient home is a well-built home, and one that will probably have a higher resale value in the future.

Builders often find that energy-efficient homes are easier to sell because of the many benefits the homes offer. Their customers are happier in their houses after they've moved in as they enjoy the comfort and the lower energy bills, resulting in more referrals as well as future purchases. One of the biggest benefits is that builders earn a stronger reputation and more prestige by selling these quality houses. Odds are good that there are builders like

Diaz near you. In addition, there are architects, engineers, designers and other building specialists who also use these features in their projects. When you consider building a new house for your family, make sure you seek out professionals with experience and interest in energy savings. I've heard people say that they didn't think they could afford a house that had a solar water heater or energy-efficient windows or other features. I enjoy pointing out that they can't afford not to get these features. If you're planning to have a house built, work with a knowledgeable builder and architect. It is the first step in building a house that will be comfortable and quiet and will have lower energy bills that will pay back the cost of energy-saving features over time.

Safety is the gift that keeps on giving

It may be the most wonderful time of the year, but the holidays can be dangerous, too.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that each year, 12,800 Americans require emergency-room treatment just for decorating injuries such as falls, cuts and shocks.

There are other things to worry about, too: Are the toys your children have been asking for dangerous or age appropriate? If you are going away, will your house be a target for burglars?

Here are some suggestions for making your season safer: ■ Lights. If you're reusing last year's lights, make sure they're neither frayed nor damaged.

The same goes for the extension cords. Use appropriate lights. Indoor lights have only a green holographic Underwriters Laboratories mark. If the UL mark is red, they are good for outdoor use as well. Again, the same goes for extension cords.

When linking light strands together, follow the UL limit of three standard-size (100 lights) strings. Unplug lights when you're not home or are asleep. Don't overload extension cords and electrical outlets.

Never use electric lights on a metallic tree. ■ Trees. If your tree is artificial, make sure it's labeled "fire-resistant." If your tree is live, fresher is safer. It should be green and the needles difficult to pull off. The butt of the trunk should be sticky with resin. Remove a few inches from the bottom of the trunk to increase water absorption. Check the tree stand regularly to see if there is water. Keep the tree away from fireplaces, radiators or portable heaters. ■ Decorations. Use only noncombustible or flame-resistant materials. Make sure the tinsel or artificial icicles are plastic or are made of non-lead materials. Artificial snow sprays can irritate lungs if inhaled. To avoid injury, read container labels; follow directions carefully.

Kenny Kehr, who grows Christmas trees in Chalfont, Pa., points out that a real tree provides oxygen and habitat as it grows, and isn't made from oil.

Sappy vs. snapp

Knight Ridder Newspapers PHILADELPHIA

ing Crosby is on the CD player, dreaming of a white Christmas, and Steve Maurer is getting into the holiday spirit in his South Philadelphia townhouse by indulging in a family tradition putting up the Christmas tree.

The fade-resistant, flame-retardant, lop-sided plastic Christmas

Decorating is a breeze. It takes about 15 minutes, from stringing on the lights that came with it to sticking the wire star on top. "It takes me longer to take the tree out of the closet and get it out of the box," Maurer says.

He's been an artificial-tree aficionado ever since ne bought one as a joke years ago for $5 and then promptly fell in love with it. Maurer has paid for it in teasing, though. After all, he is the publicrelations manager for the Pennsvlvania Horticultural Society.

"I'm part of an organization that is committed to planting and maintaining trees," he says, defending himself. "Cutting one down and bringing it inside feels sacrilegious.'

"That's his way of saying he's cheap," says his wife, Roxanne Christensen.

Maurer is hardly unique in fancying fake. Americans are displaying more faux firs during the holidays than ever.

The National Christmas Tree Association reported an uptick in sales of real trees last year, to 23.4 million, after three years of steep declines, and it's projecting another increase this season. But fake-tree sales are soaring. Last year, sales jumped nearly 30 percent more than 2002, according to the association's tally, to 9.6 million — and that doesn't count the millions of artificials bought in previous years that will be dragged out of attics.

"What we're seeing is that more and more people are putting up multiple Christmas trees in their homes. Often that will include live and artificial trees," says Lowe's spokeswoman Jennifer Smith.

Tree farmers are fighting back. In September, Oregon growers unveiled "the first designer Christmas tree" during New York's Fashion Week, a Noble fir hand-picked for its beauty, fragrance and color.

How perfect is it? Grower Joseph Sharp says somebody walked up to one at a trade show, felt its branches, and said, "That's the most beautiful artificial tree I've ever seen.'

Keep it real or go faux? Each side says it's barking up the right tree. The tree on the left is a real tree. The one on the right is an artificial tree.

The Christmas tree trade group also is boosting live trees through a cross-promotion with "The Polar Express" and a contest offering college scholarships (see www.realchristmastrees.org).

You can chalk up some of the faux trees' popularity to the introduction of Christmas-in-a-box, or what's officially known as the prelit hinged tree.

"You pop it out of the box, the limbs drop down, and it's ready, so to speak," says Michael Petrie, a vice president at J. Franklin Styer Nurseries in Delaware County, Pa., which sells both real trees and fakes. The biggest faux tree in his store is a 14-footer that comes in four sections, all prelit.

Some artificial trees look remarkably lifelike — unlike the blue, pink and platinum-colored numbers that started showing up in hipster home furnishings stores a couple of years back and are really big now, riding the retro wave.

They flaunt their phoniness, harkening back to the aluminum trees that lit up the '50s and '60s, and got a boost this fall with "Season's Gleamings: The Art of the Aluminum Christmas Tree" by John Shimon and Julie Lindemann (Melcher Media, $16.95), a photographic celebration of metallic memories.

When we first started accumulating the (vintage) trees, they were very passe. That was in the early '90s, and they were a dollar, five dollars," says Lindemann, who, along with Shimon, lives in Manitowoc, Wis., where aluminum trees were born in the 1950s as an offshoot of the cookware industry.

Lindemann and Shimon acquired enough for an art installation, which spawned the book. Vintage aluminum trees are hot these days, but Lindemann and Shimon's foil forest isn't for sale.

"We've actually received nasty emails saying, 'Oh, you're just going to cash in on them," " says Lindemann. "But we love our trees. We remember where we got them all.'

Amid the fakery, let's not forget fiber-optic trees, whose pulsing lights bring back that disco feeling, or trees with their own remotes so that, without getting off the couch, you can change the color of your lights, or make them twinkle at different speeds. (Try that on Uncle Albert after his third eggnog.) "Yes, more consumers are buying artificial trees," admits Bucks County, Pa., tree farmer Kenny Kehr, who probably knows as much about the Christmas tree business as anyone around. For 25 years, he's sold real trees all over the East Coast for Kirk Co., one of the biggest tree producers in North America. On the side, he runs a small choose-and-cut farm near Doylestown, Pa. Kehr shoots down the old argument that artificial trees are kinder to the environment because they're not tossed out each year. "They are manufactured from oil," he says.

Tree-farm trees, on the other hand, provide erosion control because they are usually planted on marginal farmland, and they help clean the air. An acre of growing trees gives off enough oxygen to meet the needs of 18 people.

"And while it's growing, it provides (habitat) for the birds and wildlife," Kehr says. After the holidays, you can put the trees in the backyard as a haven for birds, or they can be recycled as mulch or used to control beach erosion.

But, Kehr allows, "in our fastpaced world, a lot of consumers like the convenience of the artificial."

Not Beverlee and Collier Kirkland of Glenside, Pa. Every year, on the day after Thanksgiving, they go to Westlake Tree Farm in Pottstown, Pa., to choose among the live trees.

"We get Frasers, because the branches have space so the decorations can sit into them," says Beverlee, who went tree-hunting with her father when she was a child.

Now her own daughter, Nikki, is 20, and she doesn't see an end to the tradition. "It's the smell, the feel of the tree itself. When you are decorating it, there's a tree there, not plastic.

Nostalgia and tradition are big at Christmas, even for those not normally inclined that way.

"The holidays are a tacky time anyway, so do you go thermonuclear tacky to blow everyone else out of the water, or do you go understated and dignified?" asks Tres Fromme, planning and design leader for Longwood Gardens. At his house there will be a real tree.

"I'm certainly not a traditionalist, but the whole idea of going out and getting the tree with family and friends, taking it home, putting it up ... is an essential part of the holidays.'

Of course, tradition is where you find it.

Though they wrote the book on aluminum trees, Lindemann and Shimon "aren't particularly festive people, so we never really decorated for the holidays," Lindemann says. But one image that's etched in memory is that of Shimon's grandmother.

Every year, long after the trees had passed from the popular scene, she'd put up one of Manitowoc's aluminum beauties in her farmhouse.

There it stood, in all its glistening glory, surrounded by the spruce trees of the Wisconsin countryside.

Warm up a winter evening with a fire, fondue, family

I LOVE THE LONG EVENINGS of win-

Daylight in cold weather is a bore, really. It makes you feel like you should be out hiking through snowy woods. Or splitting logs or something. Nothing beats losing the light when you're tired of raking and your hands are numb.

Dusk is a demarcation between nature and civilization. Nightfall means: Leave the slushy boots at the door. It's time to wrap up in a silk robe, put Tony Bennett on the stereo and sip a hot toddy in front of the fire. Since we have two kids at home, here's what we do instead: Watch videos, play games and eat fondue in front of the fire. Of course, you have to do some advance promotion to get buy-in for what a high-school friend used to call "FFF" Forced Family Fun. You can't just ask, "How 'bout 'Key Largo after dinner?" Fourteen-yearolds are hardwired to reply, "How 'bout no?"

Instead, you ask, "When should we have Family Movie Night?" Or Family Canasta Night, or Fondue Night. Naming is key. It creates anticipation and an expectation that certain protocols will be followed, particularly with regard to space planning and refreshments.

For Family Movie Night, everyone gets a comfy chair or sofa within easy reach of a table where popcorn and a drink can be placed. Pillows and throws are parceled out to those who freeze or doze. There should be Twizzlers.

I tend to pick old classic films. Audrey Hepburn, Cary Grant and Ingrid Bergman frequently grace the screen. It is crucial to have on hand a second, shorter, movie that can be substituted for the longer scheduled film if dinner runs late. Old favorites are good for this. Nobody will mind postponing "Seabiscuit" if 'The Pink Panther" is in the Game nights follow a similar pattern. A card table and chairs are set up, and snacks are placed within reach, on low tables or TV trays. Lately our favorite games are Canasta Caliente and Blokus (around $16 and $30, respectively, at toy stores and Web sites such as www.areyougame.com and www.brainbuilders.com). Fondue Night is the most preparation-intensive. We put the card table in front of the fireplace at an angle, so everyone has a view. The table is laid with a fancy cloth and the electric fondue goes in the center. (Sterno burners smell funny and don't stay hot enough.) We do beef fondue, where you cook chunks of tenderloin in garlic-and-rosemary-infused oil. Everyone gets two spears for cooking and a plate with five compartments for sauces. It doesn't get any better than lingering at the table for an hour stabbing, dipping and chatting.

And in darkest December, if you start the family event early enough, you can still get the toddy in later.

Board of Realtors member receives GRI designation

Catherine Thorn, a member of the Morgantown Board of Realtors, was awarded the Graduate Realtor Institute designation by the West Virginia Association of Realtors.

Thorn was awarded the designation after completing 90 hours of classroom instruction, covering subjects such as contract law, professional standards, sales and marketing, finance and risk reduction.

Courses are taught by leading real estate instructors from around the country

The Realtor Institute of West Virginia, which is conducted by WVU at Parkersburg and West Virginia Association of Realtors, was developed to satisfy the need for a more comprehensive and effective learning experience in various phases of real estate. Individuals completing the program learn the fundamentals of brokerage and other areas of real estate specialization, allowing them to better serve prospective clients and customers.

The institute is designed to educate practitioners about local, state and national real estate practices that affect them, their clients and customers. The designation indicates to the public that the individual has obtained a professional educational foundation on which to base the services they provide. Only members of the realtor organization may earn the GRI designation. The Realtor Institute is more than 25 years old and has graduated thousands of realtors nationally.

The Morgantown Board of Realtors is one of 1,800 local associations of realtors that comprise the National Association of Realtors, representing 700,000 real estate professionals around the country.

Amid job woes, more are staying close to home

IF YOU'VE BEEN worrying about getting a job, keeping a job or about having enough personal time you're not alone.

"The economic and unemployment trauma of late" that much of the U.S. work force is experiencing has precipitated "a new era," said Paul Schneider, partner in Scherer Schneider Paulick Inc., a careercoaching firm based in Chicago.

A result of not knowing if your job is secure — if you're lucky enough to have one — is that "people are not relocating (for jobs) the way they used to," Schneider said. "Instead, they are opting to stay close to their families and support networks."

And an increasing number of people, reports Schneider in his company's newsletter, Perspective, "are rethinking their lives."

That introspection means there's also a "trend toward professional independence ... workers today are prone to question more, and to assess both the organization's direction and their individual needs," the career coach said.

So while the current labor market is a tremendous challenge and worry for many workers, it also has a positive aspect because it has led to self-examination and concern about work/life balance.

Child care as it should be

Parents of newborns often orry about how to take care of their babies when the regular child-care provider isn't available. A typical solution is to stay home from work until other arrangements can be made.

But the New York Life Insurance Co. has a well-thought-out solution to the problem of quality child care and absenteeism:

It provides on-site backup care for children ages 3 months to 13 years at its corporate headquarters in New York. And the company, which has 10,700 licensed agents and 8,100 employees, goes the extra mile:

According to a New York Life representative, the caregiver-tochild "ratio in the infant-care room is one-to-one or one-to-two, depending on the maturity of the infant. The closer the children are to their first birthday, the more likely they are to receive individualized care.

"However, the younger infants, ages 3 through 9 months. almost always receive one-on-one care," the company reports.

Another thoughtful aspect: Not only are parents eligible to use the center for their children, grandparents can use it for their grandchildren when regular child-care arrangements fall through.

MBA women

The power graduate degree in corporate America is the MBA, and that's why it's always interesting to track how having that important credential affects the professional and personal lives of the women who hold it.

Especially in comparison with MBA men.

To find out what's going on in the minds of new holders of MBAs, the Committee of 200, a Chicagobased group of leading women's business owners and corporate executives nationwide, commissioned the Center for Women's Business Research to do a survey.

The study includes 306 women and 501 men, all of whom recently received their MBAs and are employed. Among the findings: Only 15 percent of the women said "they need enough money to support a family on their own. By contrast, 55.6 percent of the men see themselves as the sole source of financial support." CAROL KLEIMAN writes for the Chicago Tribune. She can be reached at ckleiman@tribune.com.

Rail-trail system faces funding gap

BY JOHN GEVER For The Dominion Post

If you've ever had a gravel driveway, you know that taking care of it is constant work. Ruts need to be smoothed and weeds pulled. Washouts after heavy rains must be repaired.

Now imagine that your driveway is 43 miles long, and you can't afford to hire help. Then you might understand why Anita Mayer sounds concerned, even desperate.

Mayer is president of the Monongahela River Trails Conservancy, which led the development of the popular rail-trails along the Mon River and Decker's Creek. The city of Morgantown has taken responsibility for the eight miles of rail-trail within the city limits, but it is still up to $\overline{MRTC}-a\ volunteer\ group\ with$ little free cash and one part-time staffer — to keep the rest of the 51-mile system safe and clean.

Asked if she would use the word "crisis" to describe the situation facing her organization and the trail system, Mayer replied, "Yes. I absolutely would."

At issue is the long-term health of one of the region's top recreational assets. Developers on Morgantown's waterfront say the rail-trail is a key part of their plans. Moreover, the trail system represents a multi-million dollar investment that, its supporters say, will deteriorate if not looked

"The rail-trail is an important component (of) the public-private partnership" that is driving the planned West Virginia Public Theatre and marina-restaurant complex adjacent to the Wharf District, said Rich Lane of Platinum Properties. The complex is expected to create dozens of new jobs. He called the trail a second front door to the complex, and said it was important that its full length be cleared and passable. "If it's not maintained, folks can't use it fully," he said.

MRTC has been hugely successful in winning government and foundation grants to build the trail. Just last week, it announced three new federal grants totalling more than $115,000, which will allow MRTC to complete the Mon River section north to the Pennsylvania border.

Despite that success — or indeed, because of it — MRTC is increasingly ill-equipped to follow up on it. The group has almost no money available to fund ongoing maintenance or even to pay its own staff. Its executive director, Ella Belling, described her position as "tenuous," and may leave the post in January unless new grants are approved.

The rail-trail looking south from the Westover Bridge is in perfect paved condition, according to Anita Mayer, president of MRTC. Funding is needed for rail-trail maintenance in areas outside the city, such as along Deckers Creek where the trail crosses Summers School Road in Dellslow.

In mid-December, an MRTC financial report indicated the group had about $26,000 in cash assets and debts of $13,500. Under the grants' terms, most of the cash is earmarked for specific purposes that don't include trail maintenance or administrative expenses, Belling said.

Until now, MRTC has done what it can with volunteers and a few pieces of equipment. However, Mayer said, volunteers can't handle most of the heavy work such as clearing ditches and culverts, needed to prevent washouts. Most of the group's unrestricted income comes from membership dues and its annual Trail Mix festival, which together bring in about $10,000, Mayer

Mayer said MRTC saw years ago that it would have to hand off responsibility. In 2001, the group organized a summit meeting of local and state leaders to discuss what would happen after the trail-building phase was completed. "Our task was to find the funding to build this trail system," Mayer said. "Long-term, sustained funding would become their issue," meaning local government, and she said they

"We have held up our end," she added, suggesting it's time for local governments to live up to those commitments.

MRTC estimates the annual labor and material costs needed to maintain the trail system at about $2,500 per mile, Mayer said. For the 43 miles outside the city limits, that means a budget of some $107,500.

If local governments fail to put up that kind of money this year, Mayer warned, trail users will see the trail visibly deteriorate. Already, she said "it's overgrown (with) weeds that need cut." One likely outcome would be that MRTC would put up "use at your own risk" signs at trail entrances. Mayer said that many trail users would find the signs discouraging, taking away from the "sense of safety" they now

MRTC leaders have nothing but praise for the city of Morgantown. Morgantown Mayor Ron Justice told the MRTC board at a recent meeting that the city would provide roughly one-third of the money needed for trail maintenance outside the city. That's in addition to the city's previous commitment to maintain the trail within its borders. "It's more than their fair share," Mayer said. She also praised Star City, which for five years has donated office space valued at $500 a month, and said she expected that Preston County would contribute fairly as

The Monongalia County Commission doesn't get such high marks. Publicly, MRTC leaders say they're encouraged by preliminary discussions they've had with commission members. However, Mayer made it clear that a formula for long-term trail maintenance should have been in place already.

Commission President Bob Bell said his impression is that most rail-trail usage occurs on the paved portion within Morgantown and Star City. "It gets limited usage" outside of those sections, he said. Nevertheless, he agreed that it has potential as a county asset and that, eventually, "I'm sure the county will step up for our share."

Bell said the commission had met "briefly" with city officials to discuss a management formula. A likely scenario is that the city's BOPARC agency would handle the maintenance chores for the whole system, since it already has much of the needed equipment and personnel. But, he said, several issues remained to be settled. One was how to constitute an agency that would manage trail maintenance. Another, more important matter has to do with legal responsibility. "Neither one of us (the city or the county) wants the liability issues," he said, noting that governments are more attractive targets for lawsuits than cash-strapped nonprofits like MRTC.

He said those issues could probably be worked out quickly, but it was unlikely that the county could come up with its "full" funding portion — roughly $50,000 — before 2006. About half that could be available this year, he said. That would leave the funding pot roughly 40 percent short of MRTC's estimated requirement.

It's not out of the question that MRTC could make up the 2005 shortfall. Mayer said the group has grant proposals out now that could produce funds for maintenance. In the longer term, MRTC will seek major donations for an endowment, which would create a permanent income stream that the group could spend without the restrictions typical of grants.

Right now, though, "We're definitely at a fork in the road,' Mayer said.

Employees who come to work sick leave companies feeling ill

BY BARBARA ROSE

Chicago Tribune (KRT)

CHICAGO — When a virus infected more than 1,200 guests and employees at the Flamingo Las Vegas Hotel in October, managers offered a powerful incentive for sick workers to stay home: six days off with pay.

The measure was part of the hotel's efforts to quell an outbreak of norovirus, a highly contagious disease that causes vomiting and diarrhea. Health officials praised the hotel's response.

"What they're doing is great," said Jennifer Sizemore, spokeswoman for the Clark County Health District in Las Vegas. "That is what we would like to see more people doing, paying people to stay home."

Yet, except in cases of a public health threat, employers send mixed signals about staying home from work in a society in which many embrace Woody Allen's observation that "80 percent of success is showing up."

The trend among employers is to eliminate distinctions between sick leave and other types of paid absence, forcing workers to choose between burrowing under the covers with a cold or toughing it out at work in order to preserve time off for a family emergency or vacation.

The start of flu season also coincides with crunch time at many companies, when businesses are closing out books at the end of the calendar year and stretching to meet annual sales goals.

Employees feel increasing pressure to produce in a competitive economy, as many companies are cutting costs and asking workers to do more with less. And it's no secret that employers hold the upper hand in a tight labor market.

"You feel a pressure to be there and be seen," said Roslyn Stone, chief operating officer of Corporate Wellness Inc. in Mount Kisco, N.Y., which arranges medical services for midsize companies. "It's a very real pressure."

Studies suggest that productivity losses from working while sick — a phenomenon known as "presenteeism" — far outstrip the costs of absenteeism, especially in cases of chronic ailments, such as headaches, allergies or depression.

"There's a much greater impact than we thought," said Dr. William Bunn, vice president for health safety, security and productivity at Navistar International Corp.'s International Truck and Engine

'Our approach is, we try to do things to help people keep well,'

Keeping employees healthy during the flu season will be harder this year because of the flu-vaccine shortage. Sixty percent of employers polled by the Virginia-based Society for Human Resource Management had planned to offer flu shots, but most inoculation programs were canceled because of the shortage.

Shots are considered good prevention. An employee who gets a flu shot has 43 percent fewer sick days and 44 percent fewer doctor visits, according to a 2000 study in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Productivity is going to be affected," said Dr. Richard Chaifetz, chairman and chief executive of Chicago-based ComPsych Corp., which advises businesses on employee assistance programs.

Instant messaging causes a problem for companies

'This is one of those things where you really have to go back to the introduction of PCs themselves'

Knight Ridder Newspapers

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Instant messaging — real-time text conversation that takes place in private online chat areas — is beginning to mount a challenge to conventional e-mail in the workplace.

Some 11 million people are estimated to be using "IM" at work. But long before this wave of Internetbased communication turns, "Did you get my e-mail?" into a workplace-banter equivalent of "Hand me the white out," many employers are wary.

"Most workplaces don't know how to deal with instant messaging," said Amanda Lenhart, coauthor of a report on the technology from the Pew Internet & American Life Project. "They wonder, is this a productivity tool or a waste of

Some companies embrace the technology. Others have banned it. Many take a "don't ask, don't tell," attitude about employees downloading instant messaging software off the Internet and putting it on their desktops.

Research into users of IM suggests reason for concern. The Pew Internet project found one-of-three users it studied believes IM prompts gossip.

The American Management Association found in a study of 850 companies this year most of the workplace IM users said they engage in personal chats. Among the chatroom fodder: jokes, insider information about the company or a client and even sexual content.

Use of IM is growing and rivals e-mail for some age groups. Fiftythree million adult Internet users traded instant messages in 2004, up 29 percent from 2000, when the Pew Internet & American Life Project first started tracking its use. This year, it estimated work place use at 11 million. Among users who are 18 to 27 years of age, 46 percent use it more than e-mail, the group found.

"This is one of those things where you really have to go back to the introduction of PCs themselves,' said Lou Latham, principal analyst at Gartner, a technology research group in Stamford, Conn. "In the late '70s, and early '80s, people were sneaking them into the office. It was considered a strange and alien ... technology by the powers that Companies like Stellar Technologies in Naples, Fla., are trying to help employers understand the latest alien. It sells software to businesses that acts as a security guard, recording IM activity and allowing bosses to monitor employee realtime chats.

While many are wary, a growing number of employers are embracing what they see as big benefits.

Fallon Worldwide, a Minneapolis advertising agency, is rolling out Lotus instant messaging software to about 400 employees in seven offices worldwide.

Soon all will have one sanctioned, company-supported messaging system and the ability to integrate that system with the firm's e-mail address books. If they want, workers can route their instant messages to their cell phones, said Rich McGeheran, Fallon's director of IT.

It is a way to give globetrotting employees access to information cheaper than a phone call and more quickly than e-mail. And everyone is on the same page instead of having the headaches and security issues of people on all different ver-

Some Fallon employees have been testing it. "We use it for instantaneous communication," McGeheran said. "It's quick. I'm not sending someone an e-mail waiting for someone to respond. I send a message. Ding they get it. Ding they respond. It's instant gratification.'

Others, though, simply see a gradual annoyance.

Steve McFarland, president of technology outsourcing firm Orbit Systems in Eagan, Minn., acknowledges IM is popular among the 32 tech workers in his office. He's not one of

"I'll get on the instant messaging system and use it for a period of time until it drives me crazy," McFarland said. "Then, I won't get back on it for months.'

Video-game workers sue for overtime pay

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Working in the video-game industry is a dream job for those raised on "Super Mario Bros." and "The Sims." Thousands of programmers and artists have flocked to companies such as Electronic Arts for the chance to create popular games like "James Bond" or "Madden NFL 2005."

Living the Silicon Valley, Calif., stereotype, they subsist on pizza and soft drinks, working six-day weeks for months on end to make deadlines so there will be plenty of games under Christmas trees.

But Jamie Kirschenbaum, a 26year-old lead animator at EA's Redwood City, Calif., studio, is not a happy elf. In July, he filed a classaction lawsuit against the world's largest video-game company, alleging EA drives workers to exhaustion without paying overtime.

Around the same time, game programmer Neil Aitken filed a similar suit against Vivendi Universal Games in Los Angeles. Aitken claims he and his co-workers regularly worked 12-hour-plus days without being paid overtime and then were asked to falsify time sheets.

The lawsuits have opened a window into a long-smoldering controversy in the $10 billion U.S. videogame industry over the widespread practice of "crunch time," or working long hours to finish a project as its deadline nears.

The debate also is part of a larger battle in the technology industry: Who qualifies as a creative professional and who should receive the protections of labor laws designed for work habits of a different era?

"I thought it was awesome to get a job here because I started playing EA games when I was young," Kirschenbaum said. "But it's a job. I never felt I should devote my life to it."

Electronic Arts is now considering making some jobs eligible for overtime, according to an internal company memo.

EA has begun a project to make its production process more efficient to reduce the number of lastminute changes that wreak havoc with employee schedules.

pany, which has $3 billion in revenues and 5,100 employees, issued a statement that it offers workers competitive wages and benefits.

In response to the suit, the com-

Vivendi declined comment on Aitken's case. Within a month of being hired at EA, Kirschenbaum said, he started working 60 hours a week on a

'James Bond" title. As the deadline to complete the game approached, he would work from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on weekdays and 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturdays and Sun-

He says the project's producer apologized for the long hours in a meeting, promising it would not happen again. Veteran staffers laughed at the remark.

After the "James Bond" game was finished, Kirschenbaum was assigned to work on another project that was in crunch mode for several months. Then he moved on to "The Sims 2" followed by "The Lord of the Rings: The Third Age.'

He recalled one night when he sat in his cubicle until 11:30 p.m., with a producer looking over his shoulder for three hours straight asking him to tweak his images so they looked

Although Kirschenbaum said managers promised to give him days off after each project, the comp time never materialized.

EA issued a statement in response to Kirschenbaum's lawsuit, which was filed in San Mateo, Calif., Superior Court. "We offer competitive salaries, bonuses, stock options, health care and a wide variety of other benefits and work environments that are second to none in our industry," the company said. tomers and our employees and will continue to do all we can to ensure EA is a great place to work."

Where once game developers toiled alone in garages to finish games, they are now part of a global multibillion-dollar industry where games often cost $5 million to $10 million to develop and take two or three years to complete. As the costs go up, the temptations to cut corners and overtime pay — are plentiful, said Jason Della Rocca, director of programming for the International Game Developers Association.

"It's a critical issue in our industry." said Jamil Moledina, director of the Game Developers Conference, which will hold several "quality of life" panels at its March 2005 event. "Creative people have basic needs in order to function. At a management level, they have to be able to schedule properly to avoid crunch time and plan for delays that are inevitable in projects of this kind."

To be sure, the work environment at EA is hardly Dickensian. The company offers such amenities as an upscale cafeteria, gymnasium, soccer field, game rooms and a theater where it shows movies and hosts concerts. In 2003, the company made the Fortune magazine's list of "100 Best Companies to Work For," which is based in part on employee surveys.

Nor do video-game workers earn sweatshop wages. For instance, an animator with eight years experience like Kirschenbaum typically makes $65,000 to $74,000, according to Game Developer magazine. And entrylevel animators make $40,000 to $45,000. Bonuses can equal up to 15 percent of annual pay.

But Kirschenbaum's complaints about crunch time are common in the industry, according to a recent survey of video-game workers.

Kirschenbaum's portrayal of EA's work culture was corroborated by several current and former co-workers, who requested their names not be used so as not to jeopardize their job prospects.

'We don't get paid enough for how much life we give up. EA spouses call themselves EA widows," said one employee. Another disgruntled worker called the company "a divorce factory."

In November, one "EA widow" posted an impassioned condemnation of the company's working conditions that left her partner exhausted. "The extended hours were deliberate and planned; the management knew what they were doing as they did it," she wrote on the LiveJournal blog site (www.livejournal.com), generating thousands of generally sympathetic responses.

Companies like EA have dropdead deadlines for finishing games because they often have to ship products for the holiday selling season or the beginning of a sports season. Crunch time has become a way of doing business even on large multimillion-dollar projects with 200person teams. Even with good planning and big budgets, games inevitably go off schedule because of unexpected programming bugs or design changes prompted by player

In contrast to other Silicon Vallev workers who traditionally receive stock options and other rewards for working around the clock, game developers are expected to put up with the unpaid overtime for their love of video games.

"The growing pains some of these companies are going through have already been experienced by Disney and others in the film industry," which now pay for overtime, says Daniel Pyne, an employment attorney at Hopkins & Carley in San Jose, Calif.

EA studio manager Neil Young sent an e-mail to employees shortly after Kirschenbaum sued. "This is a very sensitive issue that the entire digital entertainment industry is grappling with," Young wrote. "Fundamentally, it is about redefining who makes creative decisions in the development process. There's no clearcut, final answer as each new generation of technology forces us to reexamine jobs and responsibilities."

Independent retailers are optimistic about holiday sales

BY JOYCE M. ROSENBERG

With his store stocked with handmade jewelry and hard-to-find home furnishings, Tim Vancha is optimistic about the holiday shopping season.

Vancha, who owns Surrender, a gift shop in Chicago, doesn't sound at all uneasy when he talks about business, unlike many of the country's big retailers who have had an uninspiring season so far. He said his sales are running 10 percent to 15 percent ahead of the 2003 holiday season, when business was already up a huge 30 percent to 40 percent.

Independent retailers like Vancha have found ways to thrive in an industry that's increasingly dominated by big chains like Wal-Mart, Home Depot and Gap. Using a mixture of unique merchandise and superior service — and even an emotional connection with customers — these stores find that retailing doesn't have to be a struggle. Vancha says he caters to an eclectic clientele, selling unusual items for the home, jewelry made by artists and bath and body goods. His inventory changes frequently, and that keeps customers coming back.

"I don't buy the same things over and over again," he said. "What you see this week, you might not see next week.' Toy retailers have to differentiate themselves from Wal-Mart — or find themselves in the same tight spot as Tovs R Us Inc., which despite its own size has lost market share to the big discounter.

Linda Ambrosino, who owns G. Willikers, a toy store in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., as well as stores in nearby Albany and in Kennebunkport, Maine, describes her inventory as "a more unique kind of toys, powered by children's imagination."

"I cannot beat them (Wal-Mart) pricewise, so I stay away from anything mass market," she said.

So far this season, Ambrosino said, she's happy with business. But she added a caveat: "It's not over till it's over — a snowstorm in Saratoga Springs can knock us out for an entire day.'

Selling unique products also works for Ava Allen, owner of Be Beep, A Toy Shop in Columbia, S.C. When Wal-Mart started selling Lego blocks some years ago, she stopped.

She also reports a strong season so far: "We're pretty much running out of stock, but that's OK. ... I'm still ordering.

Perhaps the biggest advantage that independent retailers have over mega-competitors is that they can offer more personal customer

Ambrosino said her staff waits on customers individually, a luxury the big chains can't provide. Employees also carry packages to customers' cars and will deliver merchandise to their homes At Kandor and Lavender, a Boise, Idaho, gift retailer, "we try to kill everyone with kindness," said employee Karen Christeson, noting that if the store doesn't have what a customer is looking for, "we'll find products for them."

So far, the store, which competes with Pottery Barn, is having a good season, Christeson said, although many customers aren't expected to do their shopping until the final week.

At Zinman's Furs, which has eight stores in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, business has been good for three reasons: fashion, sales events and service that continues long after a purchase, president JoAnn Morgan said. This season, fur is fashionable, with shoppers looking not just for coats and jackets, but also for furtrimmed accessories including handbags, Morgan said. She also reported that more men are interesting in wearing fur. But Zinman's has worked to bring customers in, running sales promotions that drew customers back in October, when many people weren't yet thinking about cold

Two Twins from Texas was the name that Steve and Greg Dale used for their mobile window-washing/miniblind-cleaning businesses in 1989. They really were twins, born in San Antonio. Steve Dale is now president of The Dale Group in Lake Forest, Calif., while his brother owns a separate but related company, Picture Perfect Window Coverings in Texas. Steve Dale, who has come a long way in 15 years, sent the e-mail because he thought other business owners might benefit from some lessons he learned about business on the way up. The Dale Group has nearly 700 dealers operating Blind Butler cleaning services or Blind Brokers Network in-home window-covering sales. Sales by those dealers will total about $48 million this Dale's first epiphany for running his own company successfully came from two books: "E-Myth Revisited" by Michael Gerber, which stresses the need to set up systems that turn self-employment into true business ownership, and "Business by the Book" by Larry Burkett, which emphasizes the wisdom of running a business by biblical prin-

"I decided to run my business God's way ... with integrity, without greed," Dale explained.

His second epiphany was that he could help more people — and make a profit — by teaching them how to run businesses instead of running the businesses himself.

Middle Eastern customers seek answers after their bank accounts are closed

AmSouth Bank refuses to cite reasons for closures

BY KATHY HANRAHAN

Associated Press Writer

RIDGELAND, Miss. — After three years as an AmSouth Bank customer, Imad Aleithawe got a one-page form letter telling him his account had been closed.

The bank refuses to explain why, citing confidentiality and a broadly written customer agreement allowing accounts to be shut down at any time "for any reason."

Aleithawe, a civil engineer with the state's transportation department, says that without answers he is left with only the lingering suspicion that it has something to do with his Middle Eastern heritage.

At least three other Mississippi residents with Middle Eastern backgrounds including a university instructor and business owners — have also had their accounts closed. Those affected — all U.S. citizens - say others with Middle Eastern ties have complained to them about closed accounts but were unwilling to go public.

AmSouth officials declined to talk about the Mississippi cases or if similar actions are being taken in other states served by the financial institution — Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana and Tennessee.

'It is standard practice in the indus try not to disclose the reason for closing an account," said Rick Swagler, spokesman for the Birmingham, Ala. based AmSouth. "Regulators require that banks analyze accounts on the basis of transactions and other activity, and in some cases that will result in accounts closing."

"When AmSouth closes an account, it does so in accordance with the law and for appropriate reasons," he said. "Any suggestion that an account was closed because of a customer's ethnicity is false."

But American Civil Liberties Union officials say the cases are hardly isolated. Nationally, the organization has received more than 1,000 discrimination complaints from people of Middle Eastern descent since 9/11 — and dozens of those complaints have involved financial institutions.

"There is no doubt that this is a huge problem," said Dalia Hashad, an advocate at the ACLU headquarters in New York. "It's become increasingly difficult for average people, who just happen to be Muslim or Arab to live everyday, normal lives. You have people who are unable to do simple things like wire money, open a bank account, close a bank account, transfer funds.

Hashad said part of the problem is confusion over the flood of banking regulations that have been put into place as part of the federal USA PATRIOT Act.

"Individuals at corporations or corporations or banks themselves are inventing rules that don't exist and barriers that don't exist for Muslim and Arab clients,' Hashad said.

In some cases, she said, people have completed the paperwork for a transaction and then told by the bank that their money is being held in limbo "because we're not sure if you're a terrorist or not.'

At least two of the individuals in Mississippi said they routinely sent cash in relatively small amounts to family in the Middle East.

But the former AmSouth depositors say they wonder if the bank's recent reporting troubles have led to a broad approach in dealing with potential depositor prob-In October, AmSouth was ordered to pay $40 million to the federal government in an agreement with prosecutors over its failure to report a money laundering scheme that bilked investors in four states.

The bank was cited by the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network and the Federal Reserve Board for not filing accurate, complete and timely Suspicious Activity Reports.

"It's not right to take it out on the Middle East people. It's not our fault. It's their fault," said Suzi Fino, who said several of her AmSouth accounts were closed.

Suzi and her husband, Emad Fino, received notice Sept. 8 that AmSouth would be closing up to seven of their business accounts and one personal account. The accounts were tied to clothing stores the couple own in Jackson, Hattiesburg and in Louisiana.

Mahmoud Nabulsi, an accounting instructor at his alma mater, Jackson State University, said AmSouth closed an account that he established to handle transactions on the auction Web site Ebay.

Nabulsi acknowledged he was selling Iraqi currency on the site but said his business had been cleared by the Mississippi Department of Banking and the FBI after he gave them a client list for review.

Each resident said they sought answers from branch managers who signed their account termination letters.

reporter, Aleithawe entered an AmSouth branch in Ridgeland, just north of Jackson, only to be told by branch manager Mark Floyd that he would only speak with Aleithawe alone. Aleithawe emerged from the closed-door meeting without what he came for a reason his accounts had been closed. Suzi Fino and Nabulsi said they had similar conversations with bank branch man-Aleithawe said he called the bank's customer service line and was told his account's wire transactions may be to blame for the account closure. Before the account closing, the 45-year-old father of two had been a regular AmSouth customer, often using his account to wire money to his brother in Jordan. 'I got to that point where I go into the bank and they just look at me and say, 'How much you gonna wire today?" said Aleithawe, noting he never sent more than $1,500 at a time. Nabulsi also used his bank account to

After his meeting with the branch manager, Nabulsi said he spoke with the FBI and offered to show the bank a list of his clients. He said the bank didn't respond. "I covered everything. I have informed the FBI of all my business. I am doing legitimate business. There is nothing wrong with it. I told the bank people, Nabulsi said. Suzi Fino said she contacted Chad Cargile, consumer banking manager for Mississippi and north Louisiana AmSouth banks. She said Cargile first said her accounts were fine but after a few days told her the accounts must he closed

Suzi Fino said she asked Cargile if the action had anything to do with the fact that both she and her husband are of Middle Eastern descent

"He said 'It might," Suzi Fino said. "Then he said, 'Maybe that was one of the reasons."

Calls to Cargile by the AP were deferred to AmSouth spokesman Swagler.

John Byrne, director of American Banking Association's Center for Regulatory Compliance, said banks are not required do business with every person. With federal regulations governing the banks, Byrne said that decisions to close accounts are not made lightly.

While all are U.S. citizens, Aleithawe is from Iraq and the Finos and Nabulsi are from Jordan.

ACLU associate legal director Christopher Dunn said his organization is currently handling cases of mistaken identity, as a result of the recent crop of watch lists that have surfaced. These include the "No Fly List" and the Specially Designated Nationals and Blocked Persons list, compiled by the U.S. Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Assets Control.

Mentors especially crucial for the disabled

Knight Ridder Newspapers

Having a mentor makes a difference in getting and keeping a job. And mentoring is particularly vital if you are disabled, according to Marca Bristo, president and chief executive officer of Access Living of Metropolitan Chicago, a nonprofit organization.

It's estimated some 10 million people with disabilities are in the U.S. work force. "Mentoring is of critical importance for the large population of disabled persons who still are significantly outside of the work force," said Bristo, who is disabled. She is known nationally as a disability rights leader.

Bristo herself had a mentor — and it made a difference. "She was a director of nursing at a large hospital," Bristo said. "She wasn't disabled herself but believed enough in me to recruit me to work and created a position for me. It included the concept of job sharing, which is incorporated into the Americans with Disabilities Act.'

The disability expert uses a wheelchair and goes everywhere and does everything, including being a mentor. "In some respects, everything Access Living does is mentoring, Bristo said.

And that includes not only mentoring clients but also mentoring staff: Sixty percent of the organization's 52 employees are disabled, and many of them are helped by mentors and expert mentoring "to go into many other kinds of positions," according to the chief executive officer.

Helping people with disabilities get jobs is always a challenge but is even more urgent when jobs are scarce. And that's why, in 2002, the American Foundation for the Blind, based in New York, introduced CareerConnect, a Web-based program for career exploration, job-seeking skills and for finding mentors. The address is www.afb.org/careerconnect.

"Mentoring is important because few people may have encountered a blind person," said Karen Wolffe, program manager of CareerConnect.

"That means the visually impaired are left with the sighted world's misconceptions about their ability to work — and that's where mentoring comes in."

BY MALCOLM GUNN

Wheelbase Communications

One very long look at the C-Class offerings for 2005 and you realize Mercedes-Benz has gone to extraordinary lengths to provide its customers with as much diversity as the company can muster.

Since the inception of the C-Class, which replaced the 190E in 1994, the line has steadily grown in range as well as in popularity. But the major additions to the C-Class fleet didn't occur until 2002 when the four-door sedan was joined by a hatchback coupe and wagon.

It was the C230 two-door, though, that caught most Mercedes-Benz enthusiasts off-guard. Its truncated rear end looked out of place, as did its king-size liftgate, similar in operation to most garden-variety econoboxes. But the real shock was its almost bargain-basement sticker of around $26,500, a price lower than that of any M-B vehicle sold on this continent in years. Had the company product planners gone

No, they had just become more marketing savvy. Then, as now, the little hatch, along with the sub-

The C-Class can be loaded up with plenty of add-ons such as a navigation system, Xenon headlamps, Tele Aid satellite-based help desk, sunroof and upgraded interior and entertainment packages, to name just a few.

ple into Mercedes showrooms who otherwise would have headed to more familiar and price-friendly front and rear body styling along with new seats, steering wheel, instrument cluster and audio systems. In addition, the sedans get body-side trim that's courtesy of AMG, M-B's in-house performance team.

Instead of simply basking in the comforting glow of improved sales and a broader customer base, M-B is keeping the cobwebs off its C-Class cars by tidying up the looks, upgrading the interiors, dialing in more content and offering a hot new model that promises to tear up the pavement and have it for breakfast.

As a final touch, the coupes, sedans and wagons each receive their own unique alloy wheel designs.

Under the hood, engine choices and output have remained almost untouched. Base C230 coupes and 'Kompressor' 1.8-liter (supercharged) four-cylinder. The C240 wagon uses a 168-horse V6, a motor that's also available on the C240 sedan. Next, the C320 coupe and sedan receive a 215horsepower 3.2-liter V6.

Both the C240 and C320 sedans as well as the C240 wagon can be ordered with 4MATIC, M-B's optional all-wheel drive system.

In the transmission department, the supercharged four-cylinder C230 is connected to a six-speed manual, while the C240 sedan and wagon and C320 coupe and sedan come with a five-speed automatic that offers manual-shift control.

The biggest change in the C-Class group has been made at the performance end of the spectrum. Replacing last year's C32 AMG is a new C55 AMG model. The thrust for this super sedan is provided by a 362-horsepower 5.4-liter V8.

With its explosive power and mandatory five-speed automatic with steering-wheel-mounted shift controls, M-B says the C55 will reach 60 m.p.h. from rest in a mere 4.9 seconds.

Although the full-on luxury treatment is reserved for the larger E-Class and S-Class models, you still can load up a C-Class with plenty of addons such as a navigation system, Xenon headlamps, Tele Aid satellite-based help desk, sunroof and upgraded interior and entertainment packages, to name just a few.

However, don't get too carried away. The beauty of the C-Class cars is in their ability to allow access to the three-pointed-star club without paying hefty dues.

It's a concept that continues to serve the company and its buyers

Chrysler future lined with trucks, two-seaters

CHICAGO (KRT) — Chrysler Group has unveiled sketches of a pair of concepts, the Gladiator and Firepower, that hint at a truck in the Jeep lineup and a high-performance sports car for Chrysler.

Both concepts will make the auto-show rounds next year, starting with Detroit in January, to gauge consumer interest.

Gladiator is a name last used in the 1960s, when Jeep offered a fullsize truck with the spare tire mounted along the bed on the driver's side. Gladiator does that as well.

Gladiator is what Jeep calls a flexible-utility truck, or FUT, derived from the Wrangler Unlim-compact Wrangler.

Gladiator is worth watching because Jeep plans to add a Wrangler derivative in the '08 or '09 timeframe as part of its commitment to grow the brand.

The four-wheel-drive Gladiator borrows a design feature from the Chevrolet Avalanche — rear seats fold and the wall that separates the cabin from the bed lowers to open the cabin to allow the bed to carry more cargo.

It also features a canvas top that opens and is powered by the same 2.8-liter turbodiesel engine that will be offered in the Jeep Liberty

The Chrysler Firepower is a concept two-seater derived from the Dodge Viper platform. But it's not a Viper successor; rather it is a possible '07 version of the Chrysler ME Four-Twelve concept introduced at the Detroit Auto Show last January.

The ME Four-Twelve was the pet project of Dieter Zetsche, president and chief executive of Chrysler Group, and Wolfgang Bernhard, the chief operating officer who now is with Volkswagen.

The ME Four-Twelve was powered by a 6-liter V-12 with four superchargers to give it zero- to 60-ited, the stretched version of the sport-utility vehicle early next year. mph acceleration of less than 3 seconds and a top speed of 248 mph.

Think rocket. Firepower, however, comes with a 6.1-liter, Hemi V-8, the same engine as in the Chrysler 300C SRT8 that arrives next spring. It's an even higher-performance version of the 5.7-liter Hemi powered 300C. "We'd all love to do the Four-Twelve because it would give Chrysler brand equity and help us sell other cars," Zetsche said when introducing the Four-Twelve. "But we wouldn't approve a project that we'd lose money on, and it wouldn't be easy accomplishing a profit on this car. Price and volume would be a challenge."

Knight Ridder Newspapers

Q. If hybrid vehicles are known to produce much better mileage and much lower emissions than vehicles powered by gasoline only, wouldn't it be prudent that all car manufacturers make all of their vehicles hybrids? Wouldn't it save a lot of money in the long run?

-M.S., Palos Hills, Ill. A. Hybrids make a lot of sense, but converting a fleet from gasoline power to gas/electric hybrid power takes time. It's not a matter of one-size hybrid system fits all vehicles. A hybrid system has to be developed to handle the variety of sizes and types of vehicles in each automaker's fleet.

Another consideration is that you lose some towing capability with a hybrid engine. But more important, a hybrid system costs more than a conventional gas engine and not everyone is willing — or able — to pay more for a hybrid.

Also, you'd never see an entire fleet of vehicles converted. For example, Chevrolet probably couldn't sell a hybrid Corvette, Ford a hybrid Mustang or Dodge a hybrid Viper.

Q. I find it helpful in comparing the value of cars by using the purchase price in dollars per pound. You and your readers may find it a useful way to compare and contrast the value of vehicles. Of course, I've had a number of strange looks from salespeople when I tell them this is one of my decision criteria.

-B.G., Glen Ellyn, Ill. A. Strange looks? Wonder why? Based on your method, a rear-wheeldrive Ford Escape XLS costs $5.80 a pound, but when you add four-wheeldrive it increases to $6.30 a pound. If using only the price per pound method of comparing one vehicle to another, you leave out such important intangibles as engines, transmissions and safety equipment. These items would affect weight and therefore price per pound and would make the lighter vehicle appear to be a better value than the heavier one. Have to admit, however, that whether $5.80 or $6.30, per pound sure sounds a lot better than $19,000 to $21,000 per vehicle. And wouldn't it be interesting if automakers were to announce a $1 a pound rebate?

Q. Why is the price of diesel fuel suddenly so high? I purchased diesel for my car at $2.37 a gallon while my wife purchased gas for her car for $2.15 a gallon.

—G.G., Bolingbrook, Ill.

A. We were told that diesel fuel is refined from the same oil used to produce home heating oil and at this time of the year more heating oil is refined. That means less diesel is refined, so the diesel price goes up.

Q. Has anyone ever given (thought) to altering the length of a pickup truck bed by being able to extend it when needed to carry long items?

-T.J., Tinley Park, Ill. A. Yup. It's been done in concept. A pickup with a power-operated bed was displayed at the Specialty Equipment Market Association show several years ago. Push a button and the Chevrolet S-10 Elongate's bed would extend to haul lumber, push a button and it would retract to make it easier to park and garage.

Couple drawbacks, if memory serves: The power system on the concept didn't work very well so the bed had to be moved manually, and there's the cost. Some trucks today come with midgates. The rear cabin wall lowers to extend hauling capacity from the bed into the cabin. Some trucks come with flip-over aluminum bars that rest on a lowered tailgate to expand cargo-holding capacity. So it appears automakers thought otherwise of power or manual expandable truck beds.

Q. I'm an 82-year-old male who plans on driving again. Before doing so I will make sure I get an OK from my internist, oncologist, ophthalmologist and neurologist and, if even one recommends against it, I will not pursue the matter. But assuming I get an OK, what do you suggest for local errands?

—W.T., Chicago A. For local errands, why not cabs or public transportation rather than invest $15,000 to $20,000 for a vehicle that will be seldom used yet has to be insured? As for specific vehicles, for ease of parking if you travel mostly in the city, you might check out a compact Ford Focus, Chevy Cobalt, Honda Civic or Toyota Corolla.

Q. Your article on the Mini Cooper was great. But didn't you mean to say that a Jeep Cherokee looks like a Hummer in the rearview mirror rather than a Wrangler looking like a Hummer?

—B.M., Glenview A. Nope, a Wrangler looks the size of a Hummer, a Cherokee looks the size of the Sears (or is it Kmart?) Tower.

We will do whatever it takes to sell these '04s before year end!

Land Cruiser stays true to its roots, but comes off dated

BY MATT NAUMAN

Knight Ridder Newspapers

WEED, Calif. — There's an oldfashioned goodness to Weed, this once-lumbering, now-slumbering city of 3,100 residents. It offers stunning views of California's Mount Shasta, except on days like this when it's shrouded by fog.

When you want a cup of coffee and an apple turnover, you go to Ellie's Espresso and Bakery, not Starbucks.

When you want something arcane, like a book that tells you whether a flush beats a straight (it does) when you're teaching your kids to play poker at a fish-camp cottage, you go to Country Drug, not a Wal-Mart.

I mention this because there's an old-fashioned goodness about the Toyota Land Cruiser that I was driving when I visited Weed and the small California towns of McCloud and Dunsmuir and Redding and all the little places near Mount Shasta and Lake Shasta in November

Of course, some of that oldfashioned stuff drives me insane. Let's get the bad out of the way

The Land Cruiser is Toyota's ancient sport utility vehicle. You still see it in TV news footage of events in the Middle East and Africa. It's solid and sure-footed. square in both shape and sensibility.

But, compared to vehicles such as the Highlander, Sequoia and even the 4Runner, the Land Cruiser is getting old.

And I'm not talking about the 50-plus years that Toyota has sold the Land Cruiser, in something like 150 countries.

No, I'm just referring to the current generation model — the fifth to date — that went on sale in

Ergonomically, it's not good at

Step in, and if you're a 6-footer like me, you'll bang your head. Try to enter the too-small back seat and your foot will get tangled up in the small door opening.

Today's SUVs and minivans are full of wonderfully inventive seats, especially those in the third row that fold into the floor or fold flat for loading cargo. Here in the eight-passenger Land Cruiser, it's old-fashioned all the way. The third-row seats fold sideways, taking up a lot of cargo room. For our trip, we needed the cargo room, which meant removing them. They were awkward and heavy, and putting them back in place proved an impossible task.

On the safety front, the Land Cruiser has good brakes with lots of added technology. It also includes traction control and a vehicle stability system as standard fare. But getting side air bags and side-curtain air bags is a $650 option — simply ridiculous on a vehicle with a base price of

The 2005 Toyota Land Crusier is a solid, but lackluster, SUV.

The vehicle navigation system. which we appreciated, includes a back-up camera, which is kind of neat. In total, though, it's part of a too-expensive $3,350 option package. For that you do get a DVD player, but it's nearly useless as it only includes a front monitor that lets you watch movies only when the car is in park. A rear-seat, flipdown DVD system is another expensive option.

Yet, much like Jeep's dearly departed Cherokee, the Land Cruiser remains true to its roots. We had absolutely no worries as we drove in the snow. Our family of four had plenty of room, as did our luggage and gear.

The power from the 5.7-liter V-8 was steady, if not spectacular. And it does offer a lot of torque —

320 pound-feet — which is what off-roaders and those who tow want. But these days, 235 horsepower isn't much. (Consider that Nissan gets 270 horsepower from the V-6 in the new Pathfinder and you'll quickly see how things have changed in recent years.) And gas mileage — 13 miles per gallon in the city and 17 on the highway — is predictably bad for a vehicle that weighs nearly 3

The Land Cruiser occupies a unique place in the market, rivaling only the (very similar) Lexus LX470 and the Land Rover Range Rover. That's a tiny market segment. Toyota dealers sold 5,959 Land Cruisers in the first 11 months of 2004. Lexus reports 8,431 LX470 sales, and Land Rover says it has sold 11,582 Range

Yet both Lexus and Land Rover are luxury brands, for which a very expensive SUV fits nicely into the mix. Other luxury brands including Porsche, BMW, Infiniti, Cadillac and others — sell high-priced sport utilities, too.

But the Land Cruiser is available through the mainstream Toyota brand, sharing floor space with compact cars and pickups that sell for $15,000. It feels out of place there, and probably wouldn't even exist other than its role in history. (It was one of the first Toyotas available in the United States in the 1958, and it was the brand's best seller here from 1961 to 1965.)

It's a hardy vehicle, and an historic one at that. But this 2005 Land Cruiser is in dire need of lots of things: a stronger engine, improved fuel economy, better interior packaging and a full complement of standard safety equipment to match its lofty price tag.

A century later, Chicago's Auto Show rides again — with changes

BY JIM MATEJA

Chicago Tribune (KRT)

What goes around, comes around, even if it takes 100 years.

For decades visitors to the Chicago Auto Show had to settle for slamming doors and kicking tires.

But visitors to the '05 show in February will climb hills in a Jeep Wrangler, tow lumber in a Dodge Ram and maneuver through a slalom course in a Chrysler 300C — all inside McCormick Place South.

For safety reasons, however, all visitors will be chauffeured by professional drivers.

The first Chicago Auto Show in 1901 in the Chicago Coliseum was held to introduce people to a new invention.

"A test track was set up so people could experience and drive something new — the automobile," said Jerry Cizek, president of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association, which sponsors the annual auto

Those who knew how to drive piloted the car on the track while those unfamiliar with the machine, the majority of the crowd, were chauffeured.

As the show grew there wasn't room for a track and, after 1905, visitors had to settle for stationary vehicles — the norm ever since.

For 2005, however, Chrysler Group will have three "test tracks" inside the show so visitors can travel an off-road course in a Jeep SUV, a construction site in a Dodge truck and a road course in Chrysler cars.

"Just looking at cars at auto shows has become yesterday's news," said George Murphy, senior vice president of global marketing for Chrysler Group, in an interview.

The test tracks are an outgrowth of the Art of Driving, a daylong event held in a dozen cities over the last two years where Chrysler owners were invited to drive the latest models in the fleet.

"The program got so huge we had to restrict attendance," Murphy said, which led to the idea of expanding it to the auto-show circuit. "We've found that 60 percent of those who attend an auto show will be in the market for a new vehicle within six months," Murphy said.

"The auto show is based on the same idea as the Art of Driving — seeing isn't believing, experience is believing. When people get in and experience the product, the sales rate is high.

Chrysler experimented with "Jeep 101" at the New York Auto Show earlier this year, a course set up in a huge tent alongside the regular show where professional drivers took visitors on an off-road adventure to experience Jeeps.

"The response was overwhelming," Murphy said. "We had 300,000 visitors and gave 35,000 test drives."

More important: "At auto shows you're lucky if 1 percent who visit your display can be converted to a sale, but in New York it was 8 percent. We did so well we decided to keep it rolling in Chicago." Rather than just Jeeps, the Chicago show will have a trio of tracks so visitors can travel in an SUV, truck or car. The Jeep course, which Murphy calls "a thrill ride," will include fording a stream, traveling at a 30degree angle along boulders, maneuvering over logs and climbing a 15foot-high hill. The truck track will consist of pulling heavy loads and towing in

Dodge pickups as well as some rough roads, though no hill climbing is planned as yet.

The car track will include a slalom course to test Chrysler and Dodge car agility as well as a washboard road with assorted potholes to experience how the cars handle rough sur-

The test tracks were made possible because the Chicago Auto Show will expand. Since 1997 it has been held only in McCormick Place South but adds 370,000 square feet of space in McCormick Place North for '05 for a total of 1.2 million square feet.

For now, only Chrysler will be giving test drives in the hall. Volvo has talked about test drives at an offsite location and is working on logis-

Once-unique features go mainstream in 2005

Knight Ridder Newspapers

DETROIT - It's the 21st century, and cars still don't fly, but they do have some new tricks the creators of "The Jetsons" never imagined. In fact, some 2005 models will do just about everything from frying your breakfast eggs to giving you a gentle warning if your mind wanders and your car begins to drift out of its lane.

The latest technologies usually show up first in high-priced luxury cars, but a few intriguing new ones are hitting the road this year in mainstream vehicles such as the $24.945 Ford Freestyle wagon and $30,190 Chevrolet Silverado pickup. Here's a highlight:

Cylinder deactivation

A big V8 engine is great when you're accelerating into traffic or towing a trailer, but it's way more engine — burning way more fuel — than most drivers need most of the time. General Motors Corp. and the Chrysler Group corrected that this year with V-8s that imperceptibly idle half their cylinders when they're not needed, reducing fuel consumption by 8 percent to 20 percent. This is not a reincarnation of the disastrous V-8-6-4 GM foisted upon a few unlucky customers in the 1980s. Modern electronic controls allow the system to work so quickly and smoothly that the driver never knows how many cylinders are firing.

In fact, Chrysler's system works so imperceptibly that company executives are openly frustrated that they haven't gotten any public credit for the thousands of fuel-efficient V-8s they've put on the road this year.

Cylinder deactivation is standard equipment on the Hemi V-8-powered Chrysler 300C and Dodge Magnum RT, and on 5.3liter V-8 versions of GM's Chevrolet TrailBlazer EXT, GMC Envoy XUV and Envoy XL midsize SUVs.

Both companies plan to use the system on more engines and vehicles.

Honda also offers cylinder deactivation on high-end models of its V-6-powered Odyssey minivan, which is all new for 2005. Minivans equipped with the feature improve their fuel economy by 1 mile per gallon in city driving and 3 mpg on the highway in EPA tests.

GM, DaimlerChrysler to work together on hybrids

BY RICK POPELY
Chicago Tribune (KRT)

CHICAGO — General Motors Corp. and DaimlerChrysler AG announced Monday that they will jointly develop hybrid technology to sell starting in 2007, reversing their earlier dismissals that fuelsaving hybrid vehicles are too expensive and not in demand.

The announcement joins the world's first- and fifth-largest automakers in a mega-dollar effort to try to catch Toyota, the industry leader in the sale of hybrids.

Toyota expects to sell about 54,000 Prius hybrids in the United States this year and 100,000 next year. By contrast, GM and the Chrysler Group, Daimler-Chrysler's U.S. unit, plan to sell only a few thousand hybrid trucks in 2005 with less advanced technology.

Neither company would say that they misread the market for hybrids, which save fuel by using a battery-powered electric motor to supplement a gasoline engine. Both insisted they were teaming up to lower the cost of developing the technology, which they declined to discuss.

Tom Stephens, a GM vice president, would say only that GM is investing "hundreds of millions of dollars." Analysts believe that could run higher given that hybrids typically add $4,000 or more to the cost of a conventional gasoline vehicle.

Toyota said the announcement affirms that Americans want more hybrids. Its Prius has waiting lists of three months or longer in the United States.

"It validates what we've been saying all along, that there is a business case for hybrids and that there is tremendous demand," Toyota spokesman John Hanson said. "There is no denying that hybrid technology has arrived in the mainstream. The technology is there, and the market is there. If you're a mainstream manufacturer, you have to be in it."

Promising an advance in hybrid technology, the companies described it as a "two-mode system" that boosts acceleration and yields about 25 percent higher fuel economy in city and highway driving. Hybrids such as the Prius are more efficient mainly in the city, where an electric motor reduces reliance on the gas engine to save fuel.

The GM-DaimlerChrysler system will work on passenger cars as well as large pickups and sportutility vehicles that tow and haul heavy loads.

Components such as batteries and electric motors will be smaller and lighter than current hardware, and the system will work on front-wheel- and rear-wheel-drive vehicles and with gasoline and diesel engines from 4-cylinders to V-Rs

While the two companies will share some components, both will tailor the system to their vehicles for different performance and feel.

Neither would project production volume for the system, which will appear first on the 2008 Chevrolet Tahoe and GMC Yukon, due in fall 2007. Those are V-8-powered, full-size sport-utility vehicles that were in line for hybrid technology and whose sales have slowed in the recent run-up in gasoline prices.

n-up in gasoline prices. DaimlerChrysler said it would offer the technology soon after GM on its Dodge Durango SUV. The German-American company also plans to use it on its Mercedes-Benz luxury cars.

Both said they would offer the system to other auto manufacturers, the same as Toyota does with its technology. Nissan, for example, will buy Toyota components for a hybrid Altima sedan.

"We believe it is the most efficient full hybrid design for any vehicle configuration," GM's Stephens said.

Toyota, however, is a moving target that plans to offer new hybrid systems on more models in the next few years. It will introduce hybrid versions of its midsize Lexus RX300 and Toyota Highlander SUVs next year that will stress performance over economy.

"We're not done," Hanson said.

"Once they launch their joint-venture hybrid, then we'll be able to tell whether they have leapfrogged our systems."

GM and DaimlerChrysler said hybrids remain one of several fuel-saving technologies they are pursuing. Both will continue to develop diesels, more efficient gasoline engines and fuel cells.

"There's no silver bullet. You have to work on all those technologies," Stephens said, adding that projections for hybrids range from 5 percent to 15 percent of global sales by 2020. Currently, hybrids are less than 1 percent of the 60 million vehicles sold global-

Thad Malesh, an analyst with Automotive Technology Research Group in Thousand Oaks, Calif., thinks GM and DaimlerChrysler underestimated U.S. demand for hybrids, which he sees growing from 87,000 vehicles this year to 1 million by 2010, or about 6 percent of the market.

"We've entered a period in which we have high oil prices on average that are periodically interrupted by lower prices," Malesh said. "If one company (Toyota) offers a breakthrough technology that addresses that, it's something the others can't ignore for very long."

GM, he added, kept promising consumers that fuel-cell vehicles would be the ultimate fuel-economy solution, but, Malesh said, "With high fuel prices, consumers need solutions today. They don't want to wait five years or more."

GM expects to make fuel cell vehicles commercially available

With Monday's announcement, Malesh says the pressure is on GM and DaimlerChrysler to deliver a significant technology advancement.

"At this point, they really need a breakthrough because the others out there are going to be proven. That's going to make it very challenging for them to compete," he said.

Honda last week just put its third hybrid model on sale, the Accord Hybrid sedan. Honda also sells a hybrid Civic sedan and the two-seat Insight. Ford began selling a hybrid Escape SUV in August.

David Cole, chairman of the Center for Automotive Research, said despite the expected growth of hybrid sales, cost will remain a stumbling block because hybrids require two power sources, an engine and an electric motor. He estimated the current technology adds $4,000 to $6,000 to a vehicle's cost, and manufacturers may not pass all that onto consumers.

Two years ago Cole predicted such alliances would become more common because of the high cost of developing components such as engines, transmissions and hybrid drive systems.

That was when GM and Ford Motor co. announced they would jointly develop an automatic transmission both companies will start building in 2006.

2-door cars no longer Chrysler's coupes du jour

BY JIM MATEJA

Chicago Tribune (KRT)

Bid adieu to the two-door

Dodge Stratus and Chrysler
Sebring coupes.

"Two-door coupes have had their day. Two doors and four seats is a formula that doesn't work anymore," said Trevor Creed, senior vice president of product development for Chrysler Group.

The coupes are produced for Chrysler by Mitsubishi at its plant in Normal, Ill., but not for much longer.

"We'll stop offering them after the '06 model year," Creed said in an interview.

Creed insists getting people or things into the back seat of a coupe is more of a hassle than most are willing to suffer anymore.

Saturn tried a side access door with marginal success, but Creed said even with a small side door, "usable rear-seat space" is an issue with coupes.

Chrysler's Sterling Heights, Mich., plant along with the fourdoor Stratus/Sebring. Convertible production, insiders said, may move to a plant in Mexico with the Chrysler PT Cruiser.

The decision that two-door cars have proved impractical won't affect production of two-door sports cars.

"We're only talking cars with two doors and a back seat," Creed said, so Viper enthusiasts can breathe a sigh of relief.

While Chrysler Group will build a crossover type replacement for the Neon for the 2006 model year at its Belvidere, Ill., plant, it also could build replacements for the Stratus/Sebring sedans there.

Chrysler officials say they hope to convert Belvidere to flexplant operation to build more than one model there, but no decision has been made.

Compact Neon sales have had an on-again, off-again history.

Flex-plant capability would provide constant production despite

The Neon replacement and the next-generation Stratus/Sebring sedans are being developed jointly with Mitsubishi.

So Chrysler could build Stratus/Sebring at Sterling Heights, at Belvidere or at both. Stay tuned.

At www.TeenArriveAlive.com, parents will find global positioning satellite phones to monitor their teens' driving habits — and can enlist fellow motorists to spy on them as well.

Teen Arrive Alive, of Bradenton, Fla., offers free cell phones through Nextel. Parents pay for whatever monthly service plan they choose, plus $14.99 a month for decal service, $19.99 for GPS tracking and $24.99 for the decal plus GPS tracking, said Jack Church, vice president of marketing for Teen Alive.

With the GPS feature, parents can use an online satellite map to track the teens, the direction they're traveling and how fast they're going. They also can retrieve the information from their phone at home or work.

With the decal service, parents also can equip the car with a bumper sticker listing a toll-free number motorists can call to report unsafe driving to the Teen Arrive Alive message center, which phones or e-mails parents.

Be advised, however, that if the decal is on the family car and a motorist spots Dad or Mom driving foolishly, the teen at home could get a call.

Church said: "We don't know if kids cover up the numbers when they leave home. We get some feedback from parents about the calls, but since parents get the calls, we don't know how successful they've been. We know of one case where a call was made simply to report that the teen wasn't driving poorly, but had a low tire and the motorist called the number on the decal so the teen would be warned."

There comes word that the Ford Focus was supposed to be called the Fusion. Ford insiders say that former President Jacques Nasser became upset when the Fusion name leaked to the press and ordered the moniker changed to Focus.

Now that Nasser's gone, Fusion will be resurrected on the 2006 midsize sedan companion to the Ford Five Hundred.

Lane warning system fails to cross into utility

BY JIM MATEJAChicago Tribune (KRT)

In real estate, it's location, location, location, location. In autos it's execution, execution, execution.

Credit Infiniti for trying, but more work needs to be done to convince motorists that they need to buy a lane-departure warning system that will alert them when they've crossed the center line and are at risk of a head-on collision.

Some automakers have been tinkering with lane-departure systems but Nissan's luxury Infiniti division has made the first available in production vehicles, the 2005 FX35/FX45 crossovers. It's slated for the M45 sedan in March.

Very simply, the vehicles use sophisticated sensors and a camera mounted inside at the top of the windshield to detect lane markings that divide the road as well as the painted line along the side of the pavement adjacent to the shoulder.

If you cross the center lane divider or the solid line near the shoulder at about 40 mph, three short beeps sound to tell you that you need to get back in your own lane.

Using the turn indicator silences the beeps, because it tells the system you're awake and simply pulling out to pass or pulling off the road.

Frank Memole, vice president of automotive sensors for Iteris Inc., of Anaheim, Calif., which developed the system, brought a lane-departure-equipped FX45 to the office for a brief experience.

The system was supposed to be offered by Nissan two years ago.
"We were meeting with Nissan officials in California on 9/11, after which all car companies had financial troubles so it was delayed," Memole said. Now ready, the lane-departure system does as advertised. Reach 40 mph, cross the marker and the beeps start. Signal first with the turn indicator and enjoy silence.

Wonderful system, especially when Memole cites government

Wonderful system, especially when Memole cites government statistics that 55 percent of all fatal accidents are caused by lane departures — moving into the wrong lane or leaving your lane and heading for the tree along the road.

Auto donation write-offs will get tighter Jan. 1

BY RICK POPELY

Chicago Tribune (KRT)

Donating a car to charity, a popular tax deduction the federal government says was widely abused, will become less appealing in 2005, when new restrictions take effect.

Under the current rules, in effect through Dec. 31, donors can claim the "fair market value" of a donated vehicle regardless of how much a charity receives for selling it charity receives for selling it.

But starting Jan. 1, donors can claim only the amount that a charity receives from selling a donated vehicle for deductions of more than $500. Charities must inform donors of the proceeds within 30 days of

The rule also applies to deductions of more than $500 for boats and airplanes. An IRS spokesman said taxpayers can claim market value in 2005 for deductions of $500 or less or if the charity keeps the vehicle.

The spokesman said the 2005 rules are not final and have not been published. Because the rules cover donations that will be made in 2005, the IRS has time to produce new publications to address the issue.

Taxpayers typically obtain market value from price guides such as the N.A.D.A. Used Car Guide, Kelley Blue Book or Edmunds.com. The IRS considers market value a price that "a willing buyer and a willing seller" would agree to. Taxpayers have to itemize deductions to claim a vehicle donation.

For taxpayers, the new law means they can no longer use published market value to claim a $3,000 deduction for a "beater" that sells for

Charities say they will lose income because the rules will encourage donors to sell their cars.

Congress tightened the rules after a Government Accountability Office study found that charities often receive less than 10 percent of the value declared on individuals' tax returns.

In one example, a 1991 Ford Crown Victoria was valued at $3,100 on a tax return but sold for $300 and netted $165 for the charity after expenses. The GAO estimated that in 2000 taxpayers claimed $654 million in deductions from donations of 733,000 vehicles. The IRS spokesman said the IRS could not verify those figures.

Most charities use services that charge for towing the vehicles, selling them at auction and doing the paperwork. Some services give charities a flat fee instead of a portion of the selling price.

Body-shops want to stop insurers from owning collision-repair firms

BY GREGORY CANCELADA
St. Louis Post-Dispatch (KRT)

ST. LOUIS — When Allstate Corp. acquired Sterling Collision Centers Inc. three years ago, the insurer saw the deal as a way to enhance customer service, improve repair quality and lower costs in some markets.

Independent collision-repair shops, however, saw a conflict of interest, created when insurance claims and repair services are managed by the same corporation.

The result has been a small but growing movement among bodyshop owners to press for state laws that prohibit insurers from owning collision-repair businesses.

"Our role is to repair the cars in the best way possible and deal with the vehicle owner," said Bob Redding, who heads lobbying efforts for trade group Automotive Service Association in Washington. "We just don't support insurance companies being part of that particular process."

Redding sees independent repair shops as the advocate of the vehicle owner when it comes to repairing a car. "If you take that independent advocate out of the equation, it has the potential to skew the process."

Allstate, based in Northbrook, Ill., said no conflict exists and that the concerns reflect a misunderstanding about why the insurer acquired the repair chain, which now calls itself Sterling Autobody Centers. One of the nation's largest collision-repair chains, Sterling operates 60 facilities in 14 states.

More showbiz legends are Kennedy Center honorees

By Jay Bobbin © Zap2it

Rarely would two Oscar winners, a legendary acting duo, an opera star and pop music's 'Rocket Man' be saluted at the same time.

Leave it to the Kennedy Center Honors, noted as much for its variety as for sheer class. CBS airs the 27th annual edition of the ceremony subtitled 'A Celebration of the Performing Arts' Tuesday, Dec. 21. Warren Beatty, film composer John Williams, spouses Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee, soprano Joan Sutherland, and Elton John are the honorees.

After substituting for Walter Cronkite last year, Caroline Kennedy returns as host of the new special taped Dec. 5 in Washington, D.C. Other participants include Jack Nicholson, Steven Spielberg, Billy Joel, Kid Rock, Faye Dunaway, Robert Downey Jr., Angela Bassett, Broadway stars Audra McDonald and Brian Stokes Mitchell, opera veterans Renee Fleming and Marilyn Horne, and violinist Itzhak Perlman.

Beatty is cited for the multiple jobs he's filled in his film career, as both star and producer of 'Bonnie and Clyde' and 'Shampoo' and as director of 'Reds' - for which he won a best director Oscar - and 'Heaven Can Wait.' Having participated in two previous Kennedy Center Honors, Beatty calls the occasion 'an enjoyable night, at least from the point of view of a presenter.'

When he received the letter notifying him of the honor, Beatty was 'at home, having breakfast,' and he adds that his wife, Annette Bening, was nearby. Fellow recipient Williams appreciates sharing the accolades with both Beatty and Davis. 'I know Ossie very well, because he and I have performed together in quite a few concerts,' Williams says. 'I had met Warren many years ago with his sister, who I also know very well. I knew him then as Shirley MacLaine's younger brother.'

Currently scoring 'Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith,' four-time Oscar winner and Boston Pops laureate conductor Williams has created memorable themes for many movies, including 'Raiders of the Lost Ark,' 'Jaws' and 'Jurassic Park.'

'The more you write musically, the more you learn,' he reasons, 'and it's always exciting to feel you're growing. I also think any senior musician will tell you that he or she has more fun with it now than they did 20 or 30 years ago. There's something about music that makes it part of our human vocabulary, our way of communicating.'

Known for being unpredictably independent in choosing projects, Beatty maintains 'that's the only thing you can do in the long run. You can't guess what other people are interested in; sometimes it coincides and sometimes it doesn't, but that's the way it goes. At but that's the way it goes. At a certain point, you become spoiled, but only when you've been able to afford to follow your own interests.

0&A

Still 'Mad About' former sitcom co-stars

By Jay Bobbin

© Zap2it

What are Paul Reiser and Helen Hunt doing these days? Since "Mad About You" ended, they seem to have just disappeared from the scene. -Betty Smith, Atlanta.

Reiser wrote and co-produced the just-aired, computer-animated Fox special "Popeye's Voyage: The Quest for Pappy." He's also the writer, co-producer and star of the upcoming feature "The Thing About My Folks," in which Peter Falk and Olympia Dukakis play his parents.

Oscar winner Hunt became a first-time mom in May, having a daughter with writer-producer Matthew Carnahan ("Fastlane"). She'll soon be seen in a movie version of the Oscar Wilde play "A Good Woman." On the home screen, she'll appear in HBO's "Empire Falls" with Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Ed Harris, Robin Wright Penn and Aidan Quinn.

I recently watched "The Thorn Birds," and I am wondering what became of Rachel Ward. She did such a fabulous job with her role as Meggie. -Kathy E., Parkville, Md.

■The British-born ac-Atress still works occasionally, but when the classic miniseries had a 20th-anniversary showing last year, she told us she's iust as content to remain at home in Australia with husband. Brvan Brown, who played Luke to her Meggie in "The Thorn Birds," and their three children. Her most recent acting role was in Hallmark Channel's 2002 Western "Johnson County War," but she later appeared, along with Brown and Richard Chamberlain, in a retrospective documentary produced for Warner Home Video's DVD edition of "The Thorn Birds"

Please tell me if FX will be returning "The Shield" to its lineup. -Terry Frederick, York, Pa.

A twill indeed, and with quite an impressive addition to its cast. The gritty police drama is tentatively set to begin its fourth season in March, and Vic Mackey (Emmy winner Michael Chiklis) and his colleagues will have quite a formidable new boss. We know this because the part will be played by Glenn Close, in her first-ever turn as a series regular.

This is driving me name of the actor who played Homer Bedloe on the old "Petticoat Junction" series? I think he also had a bit part in "It's a Wonderful Life" and did a guest shot on "I Love Lucy" in the episode in which Little Ricky was born. -Deb Squirrel. Danville, Pa.

A The credits of veteran character actor Charles Lane read like a history of American entertainment in the 20th century. "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "42nd Street," "The Farmer's Daughter," "Mighty Joe Young," "No Time for Sergeants," "The Music Man" and "Murphy's Romance" are among his other movies.

On television, "The Real McCoys," "The Beverly Hillbillies," "Bewitched," "Soap" and "The Winds of War" also benefited from Lane's distinctive presence. His last appearance on record was in the 1995 ABC remake of Disney's "The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes," and our sources indicate that on Jan. 26, he will mark his 100th birthday.

Roswell, N.M., is famous for alleged UFO sightings in the United States, but England has its own version of such a situation. The British government's recent confession of a cover-up lends credence to the matter. Many witnesses recount what they believe they saw.

Grissom and Catherine (William Petersen, Marg Helgenberger) become suspicious of several other passengers, but the crucial evidence could be yielded by the horse after it dies. 7 p.m. on TCM BARBARA STANWYCK: FIRE AND DESIRE

She was equally at home in melodrama ("Stella Dallas"), comedy ("The Lady Eve"), crime tales ("Double Indemnity") and Westerns ("Union Pacific"), and she aged beautifully, gracefully making the transition from big-screen glamour girl to small-screen matriarch ("The Big Valley," "The Thorn Birds"). Sally Field narrates this 1991 profile of the great Barbara Stanwyck, which, of course, contains plenty of clips from her long career.

7 p.m. on TNT LAW & ORDER

In "Panic," a best-selling author (guest star Ruthie Henshall) blames an ob-sessed fan for the street shooting that wounded her and killed another. Briscoe and Green (Jerry Orbach, Jesse L. Martin) suspect a love triangle. But as McCoy and Carmichael (Sam Waterston, Angie Harmon) discover as they prepare to prosecute the case, the answer may be "none of the above." Tom Berenger ("Platoon," "Major League") also guest stars.

7:30 p.m. on TBS EVERYBODY LOVES

In "Fighting In-Laws," Ray (Ray Romano) overhears Debra's (Patricia Heaton) parents, Warren and Lois (Robert Culp, Katherine Helmond), having a heated argument while the family is gathered for Thanksgiving. He tells Debra what he heard, and she's shocked, having always assumed her folks had a much less combative relationship than, say, Frank and Marie (Peter Boyle, Doris Roberts). By dinnertime, though, she'll see for herself. Brad Garrett also

8 p.m. on 43 MY WIFE AND KIDS

Ever expect to see Wayne Newton and the Rev. Al Sharpton on the same show? They're guest stars-along with sports legend Michael Jordan - in the two-part story "Fantasy Camp." Michael (Damon Wayans) gets a very special trip as a gift from Jay (Tisha Campbell-Martin) - to the Las Vegas basketball camp run by Jordan. The rest of the family goes along, too. Part 2 airs Dec. 28.

8 p.m. on ② ⑥ ② THE BIGGEST LOSER

The new episode "A Look Back Special" showcases some funny stuff from the series' first eight episodes. The hour includes bloopers, previously unaired footage of departing contestants' exit interviews, and diet cheaters caught on tape. Caroline Rhea hosts.

8 p.m. on 🔞 🛂 NOVA

Einstein had his ideas, but there may be an even larger theory explaining absolutely everything that happens in the world. Columbia University physics and mathematics professor Brian Greene seeks that rationale in the two-hour "The Elegant Universe." Many of his theories sound right out of "Star Trek," involving hidden dimensions and rips in the fabric of space, but those are merely the beginning.

8 p.m. on 22 GILMORE GIRLS

Lorelai and Luke's (Lauren Graham, Scott Patterson) romance becomes generally known - although no one seems to care all that much about it at first - in "Written in the Stars." Rory (Alexis Bledel) clashes with a wealthy student (guest star Matt Czuchry) who treated her friend (guest star Wayne Wilcox) rudely. Paris (Liza Weil) stages a wake for her late love Asher.

8:30 p.m. on 4 GEORGE LOPEZ

Some serious matters fuel "George Searches for a Needle in a Haight-Stack." George and Vic (George Lopez, Emiliano Diez) comb the Haight-Ashbury district for runaway Carmen (Masiela Lusha) - and find her tailing rap star Chingy (who guest stars as himself) as a groupie. Comedian Carrot Top also guest stars in dream sequences.

9 p.m. on 5 7 THE 27TH ANNUAL KENNEDY CENTER HONORS

Caroline Kennedy hosts this annual event honoring top artists with one of the nation's most prestigious performing-arts prizes. This year's recipients are actor Warren Beatty, opera singer Joan Sutherland, pop icon Elton John, husband-and-wife actors Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee, and composer John Williams. The ceremony includes tributes to the honorees by a variety of stars.

Garry Marshall guest stars as the voice of Bernie, a white lion who idolizes Sarmoti.

9:30 p.m. on 4 RODNEY

Rodney Carrington found success as a stand-up comedian, but his fictionalized alter ego throws just about everything away in pursuit of getting laughs in this sitcom. Rodney Hamilton (Carrington) lives for the nights when he can perform in comedy clubs, and just marks time by day in a succession of jobs he can't stand. Jennifer Aspen ("Party of Five") plays his wife; Amy Pietz ("Caroline in the City") also stars.

Dennis Miller seeking laughs, not approval

★★ "White Chicks" (2004) Shawn Wayans.

By Kate O'Hare © Zap2it

Dennis Miller doesn't want to change your opinion of him on his self-titled CNBC talk show. If that happens, fine, but all he really wants is to hear you laugh.

In D3 "Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind"

'Contentious is good for television,' he says, 'but I try to be funny. God, I listen to some of these comedians who are politically oriented, mostly to the left, and they don't want to be funny. I want to be funny. I'd rather be funny than wise.'

If you laugh but still think the pro-George W. Bush Miller is a right-wing nut case, that's also fine.

'People can think whatever they want about me; that's their business,' he says. 'It matters not a whit to me. I just smile and keep moving through life.

'I think if you're in your 50s - I'm 51 now - and you're still trying to shoot your beliefs through the prism of strangers, you're an asshole. What are you going to do, call people up, ask friends in Hollywood what you should believe?'

'Dennis Miller,' which airs weeknights for an hour, premiered in January and had a rocky start creatively, resulting in a quick hiatus for retooling by Miller and senior producer Eddie Feldmann. A studio audience came in, and chimp Mowqli was relegated largely to taped comedy bits. More correspondents and writers were added, and the quality of guests was improved.

While the audience for HBO's weekly 'Real Time With Bill Maher' shows up for Friday-night tapings at CBS Television City ready to rumble, the audience for Miller's show - which tapes afternoons at NBC in Burbank, Calif. - seems friend-lier and mellower.

At a recent taping, when Miller apologized to the crowd for being a bit off his game, an audience member yelled, 'We got your back!'

All this hard work resulted in the show being renewed through 2005.

'One of the biggest things is to have a real mixture of people,' Feldmann says. 'One of Dennis' strengths is he can talk to a comic, go to a topical guest, go to a political guest, do a chef segment, and also on The Varsity debate panel, talk with some real heavy hitters in the commentary department.

 "Before Sunset" (2004)

'It's almost like a comedy Newsweek each day.'

Of course, having a politically oriented host - especially an outspoken supporter of President Bush - during an incredibly overheated election season didn't hurt.

'It was a good time (for us to be on),' says Feldmann.

Escape Claus: alternatives to all that holiday programming

By Beverly Foster Seinberg © Zap2it

The networks and cable channels are finally starting to get it: Many, if not most folks who are watching television over Christmas would just as soon not be reminded what day it is.

Sure, there are exceptions - families who make midnight Mass from the Vatican, the Walt Disney World parade on Christmas morning, an installment of TBS"A Christmas Story' marathon or NBC's Christmas night screening of 'It's a Wonderful Life' part of their holiday rituals.

There are others, however, for whom Dec. 25 is just another day. Some celebrate Hanukkah. Some are working that day and having their Christmas on the 23rd, or the 26th. Others are alone for the day and find all those reminders of family and togetherness depressing.

A few years ago, these folks couldn't turn on the television on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day without some cheery holiday programming in their faces. Fortunately, that's changed, as more channels are offering an alternative to recycled Christmas episodes, movies and specials over the holidav.

As a service to those who don't celebrate Christmas - as well as those who do but have had their fill of small-screen Santas and Scrooges for the season here is a partial guide to what's on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 24 and 25, that has nothing to do with the C word. Be warned, however, that you'll have to sit through occasional 'Merry Christmas from Channel X' greeting and, if you're watching a channel with commercials, lots of ads for postholiday sales.

MINI-'MATRIX' MARATHON, Cinemax, Friday. The cable channel airs the 1999 science-fiction hit in the afternoon, followed by its two sequels, 'The Matrix Reloaded' and 'The Matrix Revolutions' in prime time.

THE ADVENTURES OF ROCKY AND BULLWIN-KLE,' Fox, Friday. It's no 'Who Framed Roger Rabbit,' but fans of the cartoon squirrel and moose will enjoy this 2000 big-screen revival, which combines live action and animation. The two friends from Frostbite Falls are brought into the nontoon universe to foil a plot by Boris, Natasha and Fearless Leader (Jason Alexander. Rene Russo. Robert De Niro) to turn us all into zombies by flooding the airwaves with really bad television. Wait, hasn't that already happened?

JAMES BOND MARATHON, Spike TV, starting Friday. Not a true marathon, because the Bondage is interrupted Saturday morning for a few infomercials. extreme-sports shows and episodes of some of the channel's carand truck-related series. The 007 lineup includes 'Live and Let Die,' 'The Spy Who Loved Me, 'Thunderball, 'You Only Live Twice,' 'Diamonds Are Forever' and 'Never Say Never Again' on Friday, with 'The Living Daylights, 'Licence to Kill' and 'The World Is Not Enough' airing Saturday.

'OVERHAULIN' and TRADING SPACES' MARATHONS, The Learning Channel. Friday, catch nine hours of the makeover show for motor vehicles. Saturday, Paige Davis hosts 15 hours of the hit renovation reality series, including the two-hour '100 Grand' behind-theepisode, a scenes special, a 'best of 2004' installment, and an hour of bloopers and outtakes.

KID FLICK MARATHON, Showtime, Saturday. For young Hanukkah celebrants and other tots who don't spend Christmas morning opening presents. The fun begins early in the morning with 'Spy Kids 2: The Island of Lost Dreams,' followed by 'Charlotte's Web 2: Wilbur's Great Adventure, 'Madeline,' 'Hey Arnold! The Movie' and 'The Wild Thornberrys Movie.'

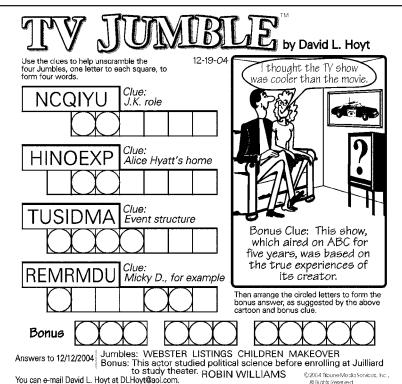

'THE MISTS OF AVAL-ON, 'EVER AFTER,' 'FIRST KNIGHT, TNT, Saturday. A minimarathon of fairy-tale flicks opens with 2001's made-for-TV take on the King Arthur legend from a female perspective. Anjelica Huston and Julianna Margulies star. Then a luminous Drew Barrymore portrays a Cinderella with feminist sensibilities in 1998's 'Ever After,' also co-starring Huston. Finally, 1995's 'First Knight' retells the Camelot tale with Sean Connery, Richard Gere and Julia Ormond as Arthur, Lancelot and Guinevere, respectively.

WELCOME TO MOOSEPORT, HBO, Saturday. The underappreciated Gene Hackman-Ray Romano comedy from last winter makes its pay-cable debut. Hackman stars as a former U.S. president who runs for mayor of his Maine hometown and is opposed by a local plumber (Romano).

'THE SOUND OF MU-SIC,' ABC, Saturday. No, really. This 1965 musical may have become a Christmas TV tradition, but the closest thing to anything Christmasy in it is a couple of passing references snowflakes and packages in the song 'My Favorite Things.' Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer star in the fact-based story of the Trapp Family Singers.

Don't want to be reminded it's Christmas? 'Trading Spaces' host Paige Davis takes your mind off the holiwith а 15-hour marathon of the hit reality show Saturday on The Learning Channel.

10 p.m. on 2 5 7 CSI: NY

There are 70 million rats in New York City, and Mac and Aiden (Gary Sinise, Vanessa Ferlito) need to find one of them - the one that bit a murdered drug dealer and might have swallowed the bullet. Stella (Melina Kanakaredes) has an equally frustrating case: a rape in Central Park that left the victim with no memory of the attack. Carmine Giovinazzo and Hill Harper also star in "Creatures of the Night."

Kirsten Dunst took a step away from her typical roles in this 2001 drama, directed by actor John Stockwell ("Top Gun"). She plays the unpredictable daughter of a politician (Bruce Davison), and her free spirit attracts a much more conservative high-school peer (Jay Hernandez). He could end up being swayed from his promising future by his love for her.

As "Distance" begins, Seth (Adam Brody) still hasn't returned from his impromptu sailing excursion, driving (Kelly Rowan) Kirsten crazy. She asks Sandy (Peter Gallagher) to retrieve him. Summer (Rachel Bilson) isn't happy about Seth's absence, either, but she makes a related pact with Marissa (Mischa Barton) whose own beau, Ryan (Benjamin McKenzie), also remains AWOL.

At first glance, it looks as if the Singing Nuns, a choir of Catholic sisters from Spokane, Wash., have already achieved their dream. They've toured extensively, recorded several compact discs and been on television. But what they really want is to put on a formal dinner and concert to thank all their supporters. In another segment, a stay-athome dad wants to break into stand-up comedy. Phil Keoghan hosts the new episode "Sister Act/Todd the Odd."

It's a great family-time op. Julie Andrews stars as the nunturned-nanny who wins over chilly baron а (Christopher Plummer) and his brood, turns them into a singing family and helps them escape the Nazis. Peggy Wood also stars in the 1965 musical.
