Star Ridge owners charged

Two face five counts each for cruelty

BY BRANDY BRUBAKER
The Dominion Post

Two more people have been charged with animal cruelty in connection with Star Ridge Ranch and Rescue.

Lori Campitelli and Dale E. Axelson each were charged Friday with five counts of animal cruelty and one count of failing to register a kennel, both misdemeanors.

The animal cruelty counts carry a maximum sentence of six months each and fines. Failing to register a kennel is a fineable offense.

Axelson is the registered incorporator of Star Ridge, while Campitelli is listed as the owner, Preston County Prosecuting Attorney Mel Snyder said.

Last week, Star Ridge caretakers Jennifer Jay Ratliff, 33, and Garvis Lee Hayes, 36, were charged with one count each of animal cruelty.

Earlier this month, 165 dogs, cats and rabbits were seized from Star Ridge, a Bruceton Mills animal rescue group, because the animals were found to be living in unacceptable conditions. Of those, 34 to 40 had to be euthanized. Six were dead on site.

Snyder said Campitelli and Axelson were charged with five counts of animal cruelty to represent different ways the animals were neglected or abused — one count each for failure to provide food, failure to provide adequate space, failure to provide medical treatment, failure to properly dispose of dead animals, and abandonment of diseased or ill animals by not seeking medical treatment or euthanization.

Snyder said he's not ruling out the possibility Ratliff and Hayes could face more charges, but did say Campitelli and Axelson held more responsibility.

"From the investigation, we clearly know they are the principals of the Star Ridge shelter," Snyder said. "They were the owners rather than someone just brought in as a caretaker."

Campitelli and Axelson have not been arrested. A date will be set in Preston County Circuit Court for their arraignment, at which time bond will be set, Snyder said.

Hayes and Ratliff face Aug. 10 preliminary hearings.

Campitelli, reached at an out-of-state phone number Friday afternoon, said she hadn't been notified yet of the charges.

Attempts to locate Axelson for comment were unsuccessful.

Animals from Star Ridge Ranch and Rescue are now available for adoption, from Preston County Animal Shelter and Animal Friends of North Central West Virginia.

Preston County Animal Shelter is extending its hours to 9 a.m.-5 p.m. to give people more chances to adopt. Dogs, cats, rabbits and a horse are available for adoption.

In August, hours will return to normal, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday and Wednesday and 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturday. Some animals also have been listed on Petfinder.com.

People interested in adopting animals from Animal Friends should visit www.animalfriendswv.org or call 290-4PET for more information.

Animals have received daily veterinarian visits and are up-to-date on shots. Animals also will be spayed or neutered. Less than a handful of the confiscated animals had been altered during their time at Star Ridge.

Swimmer slips from air mattress, drowns

An ambulance carrying the body of Brent Dietz leaves Big Bear Lake Campground on Friday morning after emergency crews recovered his body from the lake.

Man's body recovered at Big Bear Lake

2nd drowning this year in Preston lake

BY KATHY PLUM
The Dominion Post

HAZELTON — Divers recovered the body Friday of a 26-year-old Bruceton area man who apparently drowned after slipping from an air mattress he and his wife were riding at Big Bear Lake.

West Virginia Division of Natural Resources Conservation Officer Troy Webber said Brent Dietz and his wife, Sandra, "were out sunbathing, and they were sleeping. At some time, he fell off the [air] mattress."

The air mattress was about 40-by-60 inches in size, said Nancy Friend, owner of Alyeska Inc., which owns the Big Bear Lake private resort and campground. Neither considered it a raft.

Dietz was riding the mattress with his body partially in the water, and Webber said they are unsure if his slipping off woke his wife. She swam to shore and sought help. Preston 911 received the call at 5:15 p.m. Thursday.

The couple were no more than 100 yards from the shore at the time. Friend said the water is about 13 feet at that spot, on the opposite end of the 35-acre lake from the dam.

"It's out on a peninsula, where they were," Friend explained.

The Bruceton-Brandonville Volunteer Fire Department began the search, calling dive teams and cadaver-sensing dogs to assist. The search continued until about midnight and resumed at about 10 a.m. Thursday.

Webber said a diver located Dietz's body in the water at about 11 a.m. in the area where his wife last saw him, and where cadaver-sensing dogs had some hits Thursday night. He said an autopsy has been requested.

This is the second drowning at Big Bear Lake this summer.

In June, a 17-year-old Baltimore teen who could not swim drowned after the "noodle" he was using as a flotation device came loose in the water.

There are no lifeguards at the lake, where visitors may swim at their own risk.

"To close the lake and not allow someone to swim is impossible," Friend said.

Alyeska owns the private resort and campground in northern Preston County, off the Hazelton exit of Interstate 68. It has 4,000 camp-

'She had a heart of gold'

Family: Alison Yanero talented but troubled

BY BRANDY BRUBAKER
The Dominion Post

Alison Yanero was a talented singer, a social worker, an avid reader, an excellent cook, a loving sister and wife, and an alcoholic.

Yanero, 44, was found dead Thursday morning in a small stream next to the camping trailer where she was living on Fairmont Road, just a few miles from the Marion County border.

Monongalia County Sheriff's Sgt. William Tennant said Friday that police await the results of Yanero's autopsy to shed more light on her death.

Although family members of Yanero, whose maiden name is Lowe, are devastated by their loss, they admit they were not surprised, said brother Jeff Lowe.

"I wasn't shocked at all," Lowe said.

Yanero's life began with much promise, he said.

"It's a sad story."

Family's vacation takes risky turn in Lebanon

A local family escapes strife in Middle East

BY EVELYN RYAN
The Dominion Post

For the Ramadan family of Morgantown, evacuation was an $800 taxi ride. It started in the mountains of central Lebanon, about 20 miles from Beirut, traveled through Syria and ended in Amman, Jordan.

This is not the way the family had expected to end an annual visit to relatives in the Jordanian mountains.

Rola Ramadan said she and her husband, Dr. Hassan Ramadan, a Morgantown ear, nose and throat doctor, are Lebanese natives who became U.S. citizens 20 years ago, leaving Lebanon in the midst of a civil war that ran from 1975-1991. The country has been beset by fighting since.

About four years ago, they decided their children, daughter Rayya and son Jad, needed to know their heritage and culture, and began spending part of the summers with family in Lebanon.

This year, the family left June 24, intending to start back July 18. The Ramadans weren't alone in going to Lebanon, where Beirut was known as the Paris of the Middle East.

This was to be the country's biggest year for tourists, bringing an estimated $4 billion to Lebanon's recovering economy.

But on July 12, Hezbollah staged a raid into northern Israel, kidnapp-

HEART

Yanero was extremely intelligent and loved to read. "If she ran out of books, it would really bother her," sister Vicki Brady said.

After getting a degree from Fairmont State University, Yanero began to work as a social worker. She also was the lead singer in a rock band, Misfit Toys, with her husband, Felix Yanero. Felix was the person who found Alison Yanero's body Thursday morning.

He said it's a moment that will be forever scarred in his mind.

"I started CPR, and I saw her hands were clenched and I knew she was dead," Felix Yanero said. Her mouth was clamped shut and she was still holding a pack of cigarettes, he remembered.

Yanero said he'd gone to bed the previous night before Alison came back from friends Dave and Sally Merrill's nearby home.

"I waited for her in bed for awhile and next thing I knew it was morning," he remembered.

When morning came and Alison still wasn't there, Felix Yanero said he became worried and went out to look for her.

Just a few steps from the trailer, he saw a flash of color — it was Alison, still in the tie-dyed shirt she'd had on the night before.

He screamed for his neighbor to call for help, but it was far too late. She was dead, face down in a few inches of water.

"I lost my best friend and my soul mate," Yanero said.

The pair, who had been married for 21 years, just reunited after spending some time apart.

Alison Yanero had gone to live with her sisters for more than a year after the Yaneros lost their house in Fairmont. Felix stayed with friends like the Merrills.

Alison Yanero recently was in jail for driving under the influence and Felix said he had gotten her out only 10 days before she died. She came to live with him in the camping trailer they rented from the Merrills.

"It was a few of the happiest days of our lives," Felix Yanero said. "We had hope we could make it again."

But it wasn't meant to be. Felix Yanero said Alison had gone out the day before her death to drop off job applications. He said police found an empty bottle of mouthwash and an empty bottle of cooking wine while investigating her death. He said there also were a couple of empty bottles of cooking wine found at the Merrills' house. Both liquids contain alcohol.

Yanero guessed his wife had again surrendered to her demons.

He figured she fell in the stream while stumbling outside and lost her balance. She never could keep her equilibrium while drinking, he said.

"It looked like an accident, and it probably is," Yanero said.

Her body was found face down in the stream, which only held 4 to 6 inches of water, he estimated. She had a large bruise on her face, but Yanero said he doesn't know if the fall or the water killed her.

"I'm still in shock. I'm crying on and off all day," Yanero said. "I don't know what I want to do. I love this woman more than life itself."

Alison Yanero's loved ones tried to remember the good days.

"She was my best friend," said her cousin, Lisa Shaffer, echoing Felix Yanero's words. "She was my soul mate."

Shaffer said Alison Yanero was and "extremely talented person, a wonderful vocalist ... soft spoken, caring and loving."

"I can't think of one person she ever made an enemy of."

Jeff Lowe said when Alison Yanero was singing, she was happy.

"She really loved that," he said. "She had a wonderful voice." The band even cut a couple of CDs. Lowe still has copies of each.

Sister Jane Lowe said Yanero wrote many of the band's songs. She had a passion for words.

"She was very, very bright and articulate," Lowe said. "She was sweet and fun, a very good actress and singer."

Alison Yanero's life took a turn for the worse though, Brady said. "Something went terribly wrong somewhere," Brady said.

Despite her siblings' repeated attempts to help, and several trips to detox and rehab, Yanero just couldn't be saved, Brady said. They even took her in for a couple of years.

"She just wouldn't meet us halfway," she said. "There was always something hanging over her she wouldn't talk to us about."

Felix Yanero said he thinks his wife began to drink heavily after he was diagnosed with a rare and debilitating disease in 2000 called Sjogren's Syndrome, an autoimmune disease in which the body's immune system mistakes its moisture-producing glands for foreign invaders. The disease took away his ability to work and his wife's sense of security, Yanero said.

"I think it was the fear once I got this disease because she needed a caretaker," he said.

The Lowe family knew the life of an alcoholic. Their father battled the addiction.

It was sad for them to see Alison go down the same path — the baby sister they helped raise.

"She was the cutest little baby," Brady remembered. "She was the youngest, and we all just loved to play with her."

Now, the siblings prepare to bury their beloved sister and Felix, his wife.

"Because it had gotten so bad, you did just kind of expect it," Brady said. "But we felt we did everything we could've done."

Jeff Lowe said when their sister was taken to jail, the family thought it was a good thing.

"We were a little relieved because we knew where she was at and that she was safe," Lowe said.

"When I found out she'd gotten out of jail, I knew she'd be dead soon," he continued.

It was devastating for her siblings to learn how she'd been living — in a cramped camping trailer reportedly with no water or sewage.

"Her more recent lifestyle was so opposite from the way she was raised," Brady said. They grew up in their family home in Normantown. Yanero never needed material things, though.

"She was a person content with having very little," Brady said. "She thought as long as you have enough to eat and your mind was fed, that was enough."

The family wish their generous, loving and talented sister had one more chance to pull her life back together — no matter how many chances they tried to give her.

"By the time we realized what was happening, it was probably too late for intervention," Jane Lowe said. "She was never a particularly strong-willed person, and I don't think she had the stamina to fight it."

Felix Yanero said that's all he wanted, too.

"She would never hesitate to help a friend, but she could not make the decision for herself to quit," he said.

The odds didn't help though, Jane Lowe said.

"They say 1 in 4 children of an alcoholic will become an alcoholic," she said. "There were four of us, and she was the one."

The family said they'll always remember the good times and the fiery redheaded sister who went too soon.

"Her family loved her dearly," Lowe said. "She was our baby. God, we'll miss her."

Brady agreed. "She was always special to me," she said. "She never lost the love and support of her family. She knew we were always there for her."

For Felix, he'll miss his wife and the chance they had for a new life together.

"She was the most wonderful person you would ever want to meet," he said. "She had a heart of gold."

Israeli tanks, troops mass on border

Associated Press

ON THE ISRAEL-LEBANON BORDER — Israel massed tanks and troops on the border Friday, hours after calling up reserves and confirmed some units were already operating in Lebanon, as the army announced plans for a ground operation to destroy Hezbollah's tunnels, hideouts and weapons stashes.

With Hezbollah's rocket attacks and Israeli bombings undiminished, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said she would visit the Middle East beginning Sunday — her first trip to the region since the crisis erupted 10 days ago. But she ruled out a quick cease-fire between Israel and the Shiite guerrillas as a "false promise."

Israel, which pulled its troops out of Lebanon just six years ago after a lengthy and costly occupation that caused painful divisions within the Jewish state, was poised to carry out its third large-scale ground operation in Lebanon since 1978.

sites and year-round housing areas.

An average of 5,000 people are at the lake this time of year and up to 10,000 on weekends. Friend estimated 25,000 people came for the July 4 holiday. The resort has been in existence since 1971.

She said they don't take the deaths lightly.

"We average 50-60 employees per week, and every one of them gets involved, if not physically then mentally, in a tragedy like this," she said. "When we drive by the lake and see that spot we think, 'That's someone's son or husband or uncle or father or brother,' and that's horrible."

Preston Sheriff's Department deputies, State Police, Bruceton-Brandonville VFD, Preston County Dive Team, Belington Search and Rescue, Bruceton Ambulance Service and Monongalia County Dive Team were involved in the search and recovery.

ping two Israeli soldiers and killing eight.

"There's always been political turmoil there," Hassan Ramadan said, "they've always had issues with neighboring countries."

In June, when they left, there was no indication of trouble.

The Ramadans were sitting in a Starbucks, drinking coffee, when they saw news of the raid on television. He was apprehensive, hoping things wouldn't get worse.

But on July 13, Israeli jets flew over the country, bombing bridges and the Beirut airport runway.

Their relatives, accustomed to battle, urged the family to keep calm, saying the airport would be repaired in 48 hours and they could leave. Rayya and Jad agreed with their relatives.

"I said, 'I've been through this before. I don't have a good feeling about it,'" Hassan Ramadan said.

That night, the Israelis bombed constantly, targeting bridges and main roads. One was not far from where they were. "We could not sleep," Rola Ramadan said.

"The whole house shook," Rayya added.

When they couldn't get through to the U.S. Embassy by phone, Hassan and Rola decided to change their flight home to another airport. Flights from Syria were booked, so they had to fly out of Amman.

"By the time that was finished, I wanted to see if I could get a taxi to take us to Jordan," Hassan Ramadan said. The bombing damaged a lot of roads, so most drivers were not willing. He finally found one.

"The taxi cost was doubling by the hour," he observed. "In the morning it started at $200. I knew it was going to be even higher the later it went."

The driver settled for $800 for the trip. News reports Friday said the cost had risen to $800 per person.

"My husband and I grew up during the Lebanese civil war," Rola Ramadan said. She recalled the shortages, including lack of water, during that time. "The reason we moved to the United States was to get our kids away from this, and all of a sudden we are in the middle of it."

Getting a taxi was just the first step, Hassan Ramadan said. Ahead were the dangerous parts — riding in a cab negotiating damaged roads, hoping there would be no bombing, getting through border crossings without being held up, and lastly, finding a place to sleep until they were ready to board the plane.

They left at 7 a.m. the next morning, before other traffic was out, making the trip easier, Rola Ramadan said. They arrived at the border at 10 a.m.

The taxi took them through the main border crossing to Damascus, then south to Amman. They were able to find rooms at a hotel at the Dead Sea, where they spent two nights waiting for their flight.

Right after the taxi crossed into Syria, bombers targeted the road at the border, striking a taxi and killing all three people aboard, Rayya said.

It took the family four days to get back to the United States. The trip included an unanticipated overnight layover in London. While Rayya and Jad reassured their father the family was safe once it was out of Lebanon, old memories kicked in.

Hassan Ramadan remembered the problems in leaving 20 years earlier from Damascus. He would go to the airport with luggage, only to be told no seats were available, come back tomorrow. It happened again and again.

"I said, 'I'm not going to do this. I have a wife, two kids who have never been exposed to this, they've been living in America since birth,'" he said.

Ramadan remained tense throughout the drive and the 14 hours they were aboard planes.

"I didn't have a comfortable feeling until we landed at Dulles Airport in Washington," he said. "Once we landed, I was relieved. I just took a deep breath, said, 'Thank you God.' I knew it was over."

It was dark when they pulled into their driveway, to a house decorated with "Welcome Home" signs, metallic streamers and flags. Later, friends and neighbors gave them a more tangible welcome back with flowers and food.

"It was a great feeling, to know people cared," Hassan Ramadan said.

"Since then, everybody I see, says, 'We're glad you're home. I want to give you a hug.' I'm not much of a hugging person, but it felt warm and good when they give me hugs. It's like getting treatment for all the stress we went through. Every time you gave me a hug, I felt a lot better."

Attacker stabs several workers at Tennessee grocery

ARLINGTON, Tenn. — An attacker stabbed several workers at a supermarket on the outskirts of Memphis on Friday morning, a company spokeswoman said.

There was no immediate confirmation on the number of people wounded or their conditions. WMC-TV in Memphis reported that seven people had been stabbed and that police had a suspect in custody.

Lori Willis, a spokeswoman for Schnucks Markets, Inc., said all the victims were store employees and that the attack was shortly before 10 a.m. She didn't know how many people were hurt.

"Our first priority is the customers and associates," Willis said. She said officials from the St. Louis-based company were on their way to the scene.

Las Vegas makes it illegal to feed homeless

LAS VEGAS — In an effort to curb charity that is having unintended consequences, the City Council has made it illegal to give food to homeless people in city parks.

Residents complained that the large numbers of homeless gathering in the parks make it impossible for others to use them, said city spokesman David Rigglesman.

"We're trying to empathize with both camps," he said. "We're hoping we can improve their lives and improve the lives of people living around the park, some of whom have people urinating and defecating in front of their door."

The law, which went into effect Thursday, targets so-called "mobile soup kitchens."

Senators criticize voluntary bird flu testing program

WASHINGTON — Senators on Friday criticized the Agriculture Department's planning for deadly bird flu, saying the voluntary nature of its testing program threatens the U.S. poultry industry.

At issue is a federal audit that found the government lacks a comprehensive plan for testing and monitoring bird flu in commercial poultry. The department says it will have a plan in place by October.

Evacuations from Beirut speed up

U.S. Marines assist Americans

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. Marines pushed baby carriages and lifted children into transport boats Friday as Americans desperate to flee the Israeli bombardment of Lebanon lined up near Beirut's port as a massive evacuation operation picked up speed.

Up to 5,000 U.S. citizens are slated to leave — the largest number in three days. The boats ferried the Americans from a Lebanese military base north of Beirut to warships waiting offshore.

"It is very well organized, but as you can imagine with large crowds, it takes time," said George Tarzi, 55, a jeweler from New York who said he had been waiting for seven hours to get on a boat. U.S. officials, still smarting from criticism over delays in starting the effort, have said about 8,000 of the 25,000 Americans in Lebanon had registered for evacuation.

Woofs hosting animal adoption drive today

Some of the 20 dogs, cats and rabbits are Star Ridge survivors

BY JANET L. METZNER
The Dominion Post

Lucy is a spitfire. She's a 3-pound, 11-week-old Yorkie and dachshund mix looking for a home, said Jody Wolfe, owner of Woofs Canine Accoutrements and a member of Animal Friends of North Central West Virginia.

"She's very bright, very active. She's got that ornery look. You can tell she's going to have attitude," Wolfe said.

Lucy is among about 20 animals that will be lined up and ready for adoption from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. today outside Woofs, in Chelsea Square, 1137 Van Voorhis Road.

Joining Lucy will be dogs, cats and rabbits, including survivors from Star Ridge Ranch and Rescue in Preston County.

"These animals have gone through so much at Star Ridge. They've pretty much grown up in filth and neglect," said Cynthia Lucas, executive director and founder of Animal Friends.

Wolfe said the Star Ridge animals have been certified disease-free. They've been quarantined for the past three weeks, thoroughly examined and tested by local veterinarians, according to a news release from Woofs.

On June 30, Preston County Animal Control seized 165 dogs, cats and rabbits from Star Ridge, a Bruce-ton Mills animal rescue group, because the animals were living in unacceptable conditions. Of those, 34 to 40 had to be euthanized. Six were dead on site.

Those wishing to adopt will have room to walk with some of the pets and will complete an application for approval, Lucas said.

Cost of adoption is up to $85, Lucas said.

The adoption drive set for today is unusual, Wolfe said. That's because there are many organizations coming together, bringing animals for adoption.

The event is sponsored by Woofs Canine Rescue Crew — a group of Woofs staff and customers that offers foster care for animals — and Animal Friends.

There will be puppies coming from the Boston Terrier Rescue of West Virginia, Woofs Rescue and the Preston County Animal Shelter, and kittens from Star Ridge that have been cared for at Hillcrest Veterinary Clinic, Wolfe said.

Many of the people participating are members of West Virginia Citizens for the Humane Adoption of Pets, formed to bring attention to the condition animals were living in at Star Ridge, Lucas said.

Tropical storm deaths in China reach 482

Associated Press

BEIJING — China's death toll from tropical storm Bilis more than doubled to 482, after a hard-hit inland province reported a sharp rise in fatalities, state media said Friday.

Authorities in Hunan province said 346 people died in floods triggered by the storm, while 89 others were missing, the Xinhua News Agency said. The province previously reported 92 deaths.

Bilis slammed into China's southeastern coast on July 14 and churned inland, triggering flooding and landslides. Nearly 3 million people were forced to flee their homes, the government said. The higher death toll in Hunan included 197 victims in the village of Zixing, where a state television reporter found the local government had underreported the number of deaths, Xinhua said.

Luo Xiwu, a Communist Party official from Zixing, was quoted by Xinhua as saying the disaster caused a "breakdown of communication and traffic systems," which made it hard for authorities to collect information on deaths and damage.

"The officials did not shift their work focus from rescue and relief to death toll head count and damage investigation until rainstorms stopped and floods receded," Luo said.

Few leads surface in area woman's disappearance

Police still have few leads in the disappearance of a Morgantown woman last week.

Rebecca Slaughter, 55, has been missing since July 12.

Morgantown Police Sgt. H.W. Sperringer said Friday that detectives processed Slaughter's vehicle, which was found in a rural area of Garrett County, Md., this week, and found no evidence to help in the case.

The car doors were locked, the windows were up and the keys had been taken. The car had gas and was not broken down. There was no evidence it had been stolen, Sperringer said, although he could not rule out that possibility.

A search of Slaughter's house turned up nothing either. Nothing appeared to be missing. It looked as though Slaughter had just stepped out to run a quick errand — her back door was unlocked and her dog was tied up on the front porch. Family members offered no explanation for why Slaughter may have taken off. No sightings have been reported and there's been no activity on Slaughter's credit cards or bank account.

That doesn't mean police are giving up, Sperringer said.

"We're still looking," he said.

Rebecca Slaughter is 5 feet, 7 inches tall and 130 pounds, with gray hair and blue eyes.

She drove a 1999 red Subaru Forester and lived alone in the South Park area.

Anyone with information about the disappearance of Rebecca Slaughter should call 911 or Morgantown police at 284-7522.

Work resumes at Blacksville No. 2 mine

State and federal mine inspectors gave the go-ahead for Blacksville No. 2 mine west of Blacksville to resume coal production early Friday.

The mine was shut down Thursday and all production stopped when the investigation into a small flash fire showed possible damage to some ventilation controls, CONSOL Energy officials said Thursday.

The flash fire sent three people to the hospital. All three have been released after treatment.

Clothing needed for area children

Two children who were recently taken from their parents' care are in need of clothing.

To donate, call Connie Covington at 594-3070.

Items needed include girls' size 8 slim pants, size 6 shirt, size 3 shoe and size 8 coat, and boys' size 6 regular pants, size 6 shirt, size 6-8 coat and size 2 shoe. Socks and underwear would also be appreciated. Covington said they are trying to get summer and winter clothing.

University Health Associates has confirmed that several medical billing documents were mistakenly dropped at the Monongalia County Community Recycling Center by a waste hauling truck from Allied Waste, formerly BFI.

An unknown number of other documents left at the same site were shredded shortly after their arrival there, said Bill Case, WVU Health

Confirmation comes about one week after The Dominion Post received several calls that medical records had been spotted at the recycling center.

The documents were part of a large load of papers Allied Waste picked up July 13 from UHA's business office in Morgantown for transport to Fairmont for destruction. The pickup was part of a long-standing contract between UHA and Allied that specified the paperwork contained health information protected under federal law and must be secured at all times until destruction.

Case said the documents were the type patients normally fill out when being screened before treatment.

"Apparently, some of the papers remained in the truck after the drop-off in Fairmont," Case said.

"When the same truck was used to transport cardboard boxes from another location to the Morgantown site, a number of the UHA papers were deposited with the cardboard."

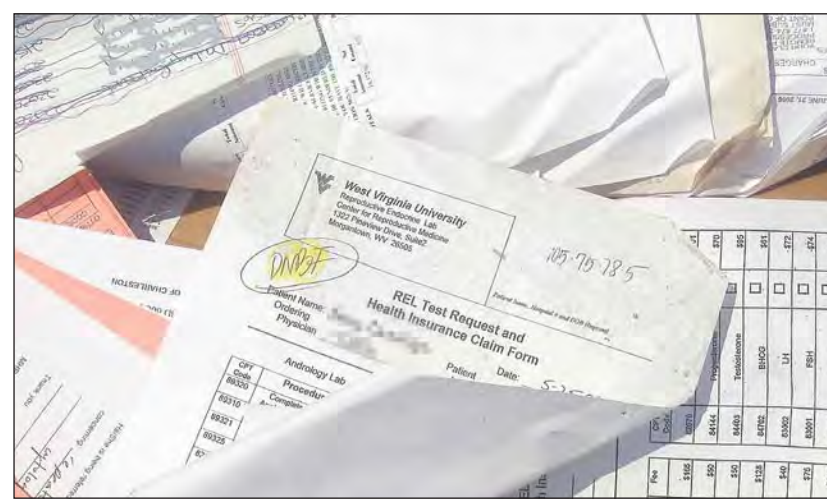

Case said records from all WVU medical offices are locked in large plastic garbage bins to keep them out of sight and secure.

Allied picks up the material at UHA's office at 255 Scott Ave. Workers unlock the bins and dump the records in garbage haulers, Case said.

"So, they may take them out of the bins, but they still should remain contained and out of sight until they get to Fairmont where they are destroyed," he said.

Energy Express isn't 'anything like school'

Kids, mentors express their happiness with summer reading program

WHAT IT MEANS

A total of 80 Preston County students are maintaining their reading skills this summer in two Energy Express programs.

THIS STORY appears again today because it was not published in its entirety Friday.

OPEN HOUSES will be at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Tunnelton Energy Express and from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Thursday at Kingwood Energy Express.

KINGWOOD — Enter either of two Preston County elementaries this summer and things seem a little skewed. That's definitely reading going on in a classroom, but chairs are pushed against the wall, and word webs and "messy art" adorn the walls.

This isn't school, it's Energy Express, a six-week, federally funded program to maintain and improve students' reading levels and nutrition during the summer.

"Since they told him it wasn't anything like school, he was all for it," Kelly Plum said.

Fearful family continues search for Preston man

Daughters, wife want Rogers back

David Rogers

ANYONE WITH information in the disappearance of David L. Rogers is asked to contact State Police in Kingwood at 329-1101.

BY BRANDY BRUBAKER

The Dominion Post

David Rogers has disappeared without a trace.

It's been more than a week since anyone has seen or heard from the Preston County man, and family members say they're beside themselves with fear.

Rogers, 42, was last seen at 1:15 p.m. July 14 at his Independence home, police said.

His wife, Angel Greene, and his seven daughters — three from his previous relationship, four from hers — have been looking for him ever since.

Greene said July 14 was a bad day for her husband of almost a year and partner of four years.

He was suspended indefinitely from his job at Allegheny Power, where he'd worked 18 years, after some safety violations, Greene said.

Rogers called Greene at her job between 9 and 10 a.m. that day and left a message telling her he was going to meet with company officials about the violations later that day.

Greene said she called him back at 11:30 a.m., between tasks in her work as a nurse, and told him to call her as soon as he met with his bosses.

Greene said that at about 1 p.m., she saw a voicemail on her cell phone from her husband but decided to call him right back rather than listen to it.

She said he sounded upset, but OK, and told her the suspension was indefinite.

Greene gave Rogers directions to her new place of work — she had just started that Tuesday — and told him to come meet her.

Five o'clock rolled around and Rogers never showed up.

Then, Greene decided to listen to the voicemail he'd left earlier.

She said her husband sounded like a different man than the one she'd spoken to not long after he left the message.

He sounded absolutely distraught, she said.

"He said he couldn't take it anymore. He couldn't handle losing his job, and he didn't know what to do," Greene said.

Instantly, Greene said, she knew something was wrong. When she got home, her daughters told her Rogers had stopped by the house at about 1:15 p.m. but stayed only a couple of minutes.

"My daughter said he sat at the kitchen table for a few minutes and then went to the bedroom," Greene said. "He [came back] and said he was going for a drive and would be back."

Greene said nothing in the house is missing. It doesn't appear Rogers packed a bag or took a weapon. The only things not there are the T-shirt, blue jeans, brown work

Recalling railroad memories

HOW CAN WE do without the railroad? At this point in time, with automobiles consuming a good percentage of one's income, the answer to that question is even more compelling than it was during the peak existence of the iron horse.

Even with so many hikers and bikers enjoying trails installed on former rights-of-way of railroad tracks, remembrances of the old days continue to dominate discussions among many older residents.

Morgantown's last passenger train departed for Connellsville, Pa., in 1953, but more than 50 years later folks have stories to tell about their experiences with trains and train rides.

For many years, people here boarded the B&O in Grafton and the Pennsylvania and other trains in Connellsville, which Amtrak continues to serve, for an adventurous ride through the countryside.

Then there are experiences with railroads that people would like to forget, even if their stories fit nicely into random conversation. There was always something different about the railroad systems that left you wondering why they were able to exist through the 20th century.

They sometimes didn't meet their schedule, for one reason or another; you had to motor some distance to get aboard, and then there were times when your train went on an inside track and you wondered how you were going to get there in one piece. Even freight deliveries often were undependable, although that probably is true with today's delivery system by other means.

I've had experiences, mostly good but bad in one instance, that are memorable to say the least. One of my more enjoyable trips was from Pittsburgh to Rhode Island, an all-night trip during which I spent a restful night in a Pullman berth. That was courtesy of the U.S. Navy, otherwise I couldn't have afforded that adventure.

Then there was the time back in the 1940s with the National Limited, I believe it was; we boarded in Grafton and made it as far as Mountain Lake Park, Md., before the train rammed two carloads of pigs that had been left on the wrong track. Unfortunately, the engineer and fireman were killed and about 50 other people were injured, not including me or my brother.

I recall reading about it in a newspaper. There were pigs roaming through the countryside, and people were offered $5 reward for any of the porkers they retrieved.

The only trips I ever made from the Morgantown station were on Morgantown High School

All aboard for free-for-all in air

Airlines taking creative approach to boarding procedures

When it comes to flying, the next best thing to being upgraded gratis is getting on the airplane first. That way you get first dibs on overhead storage, hanging space and extra pillows — that is, if your airline still provides pillows.

Passengers know this. That's why they jockey for position at the gate. All airlines know they want to board their airplanes as fast as possible because those planes aren't making money sitting on the ground.

Not everyone can board first. When 100 people attempt to do so at once, the result is squishing, shoving and bottlenecks that bring the entire process to a halt. This keeps the planes on the ground longer.

Airlines are constantly tinkering with their boarding procedures to speed things up. Southwest Airlines has been hugely successful with its long-standing policy of first-come, first-served boarding without assigned seats. But it's now going to experiment with giving you a seat number. It will test five boarding patterns to see which works best.

Northwest Airlines plans to drop boarding by row and go with the free-for-all method that Southwest may dump. American Airlines boards back to front, probably the most common method. United Airlines boards window seats first, then middle, then aisle. All of these patterns have advantages and disadvantages. All work just dandy in computer simulations. But none eliminates the latecomers and out-of-order boarders who foil the airlines' best-laid plans.

There is a way to speed up boarding. Ban carry-ons. Or at least put tighter limits on their size and number so passengers aren't clogging the aisles while trying to stuff all their earthly belongings into the overhead compartment. Airlines have tried this in the past and failed miserably. Each time an airline attempts to impose limits, angry passengers rebel. They react as if access to the overhead compartment is spelled out in the Bill of Rights.

So, no matter which neat, orderly pattern airlines adopt in the futile attempt to speed up boarding, it seems passengers will mess it up.

They will continue to carry on luggage that won't fit. They will continue to block the aisles while loudly insisting to the flight attendants that just one more shove will do the trick. They will continue to show up late and make the aisle and middle-seat people unbuckle their seatbelts, get up and stand in the aisle while they work their way into the window seats. And they will grumble under their breath when everyone else does the same thing.

We have a solution, though the Federal Aviation Administration probably won't accept it.

Open the doors, wait 10 minutes and start the takeoff. That'll get 'em to sit down quick.

Project to honor Knotts as Barney appropriate

I, for one, was appalled at the attitude taken by Don Knotts' widow, Francey, and Andy Griffith. "Don's statue should be in Morgantown, but not depicted as Barney Fife."

There can only be one reason for this and that's money. CBS owns the rights to the show, along with that the likenesses of its characters. Therefore, Don Knotts ends where Barney Fife takes over.

Don Knotts was a fine, friendly, caring individual of immense talent who was proud of where he came from. Barney Fife is a commodity to be bartered by the owners of his likeness for whatever gain they are happy with. The man under there has no say.

I was talking to a friend recently and he said, "Why did they wait till he died?" Good question.

As for the statue, have you ever seen a likeness of Robert E. Lee not in uniform? Stonewall Jackson in anything but uniform and usually on a horse?

My point is, a statue of Don without that uniform, badge, hat and empty gun in the holster would not do him justice. The depth and breadth of his comic genius are epitomized by the character of Barney Fife. It was his and his alone. No other person on this planet could be Barney Fife. Even though the many other characters he played were unique in some ways, other people could have done them justice. But not Barney. Don was the only one.

Therefore a statue depicting him any other way would not pay tribute to the boundless talent he possessed.

The face would show Don Knotts, the gentle man that everybody loved and admired. The costume would remind everyone what he could do.

The little man that took a badge and an empty gun and became a giant in a field that doesn't hand those positions out very often.

Now I know that things like this need looking after to protect the integrity of the "intellectual property." But we aren't wanting to name an X-rated theater after him.

We should do all we can to change the minds of these people and let this project go through. The Courthouse Square could

City should have spent recreation dollars better

While reading The Dominion Post last week, I saw two announcements concerning new recreation opportunities in the region.

Kingwood built a new building above its existing swimming pool in order to permit a year-around use of the pool. Adults and the elderly can now use the facility for exercise and recreation at any time. School-aged children will receive water safety instruction, physical exercise and recreation 12 months a year.

In addition, school- and community-based swim teams will have full use of the facility during the harsh winter months.

The city of Morgantown recently dedicated Sky Rock and the Dorsey's Knob Park. The lodge will now be available for use by out-of-town guests during football weekends. The conference center will be in competition with the hundreds of other meeting rooms available to the residents of this community. And Sky Rock will be visited once each year by most Morgantown residents, unless they have out-of-town guests and don't wish to make the drive to Cooper's Rock.

So while the elderly residents of Kingwood can get their daily exercise during the winter in the indoor pool, elderly Morgantown residents can get their exercise by shoveling the snow off the driveway going up to Dorsey's Knob Park. And while the competitive school-aged swimmers in Preston County can be watched from the stands of the indoor facility, Morgantown area parents can watch their child practice in the Monongahela River from the great view from Sky Rock. And while school-aged Preston County students will receive swimming lessons during the winter months, Monongalia County parents will continue to be concerned about water safety.

It's not that the city of Morgantown invested $1.5 million to $2 million on Dorsey's Knob Park that concerns me. It's that a like amount could have been used to enclose one of the community pools, put a bubble over the tennis courts, improve the ice rink, etc. Let's face it, the Dorsey's Knob Park will be seldom used once the newness of the facility wears off.

A much wiser investment would have been in one of the active-use facilities that benefit the adults and youth of the community. But the city of Morgantown has never really been supportive of youth-related programs, services or facilities, has it? Councilman Frank Scaffella should be ashamed of himself.

Bush still good for a laugh on the international circuit

NEVER LET IT NEVER be said our president does not provide laughs, even as we wobble on the rim of war in the Middle East.

Look what a good time Vladimir Putin had with him. Bush, responding to questions from the international press corps on his conversation with Putin the previous evening, said, "I talked about my desire to promote institutional change in parts of the world like Iraq, where there is a free press and free religion, and I told him that a lot of people in our country, you know, would hope that Russia would do the same thing."

Putin, with a fairly straight face, replied, "We certainly would not like to have the same kind of democracy they have in Iraq, I'll tell you that quite honestly."

MOLLY IVINS

Don't you hate it when the international press corps laughs at what a stoop Bush is? Bush, who fancies himself something of a fast-reply artist, said, "Just wait." Heh, heh.

I think the problem is the rest of the world doesn't understand Dekes (Delta Kappa Epsilon). We need a Deke short-course in embassies around the globe.

Another citizen looking a bit nonplussed at the G8 Summit was Tony Blair, listening as Bush, noisily chewing with his mouth open, said, "See, the irony is what they need to do is get Syria to get Hezbollah to stop doing this s—t, and it's over. I feel like telling Kofi to get on the phone with Assad and make something happen."

Could he possibly believe that? You could probably suggest unleashing Israel on Syria, except the Israelis don't seem interested in the program.

One, they don't know who would replace President Assad. And two, it could get them stuck there for years — kind of like, oh, you know, that great democracy "what's its name."

Meanwhile, the nation needs to take a break from FOX and get a grip — the 24/7 drumbeat for war is silly.

Back to politics for comic relief. The most luckless candidate so far this year is Katherine Harris, now 30 points behind Democrat Bill Nelson in the Florida Senate race.

Three campaign managers have quit on Harris, not to mention a dozen or so other staffers. The latest defector, Glenn Hodas, said her "tantrums were uncontrollable."

Another former campaign manager, Jamie Miller, said no one from Florida would work for her: "It's a nuclear wasteland in there. Anyone who goes in is going to be tainted."

Some of them are upset by the fact that she's involved with a corrupt defense contractor who showed up in the Duke Cunningham scandal. Harris also loaned her own campaign

Meanwhile, the nation needs to take a break from FOX and get a grip — the 24/7 drumbeat for war is silly.

$3 million, but then took back $100,000 so she could refurbish her house in Washington, D.C.

Also providing comic relief these days is Holy Joe Lieberman, senator from Connecticut, Al Gore's 2000 running mate, and the most annoyingly sanctimonious person in politics.

Lieberman has more than miffed Connecticut Democrats by backing the war in Iraq and other Bush policies, setting off a big primary fight.

Lieberman now threatens to run as an independent if he loses the primary, thus opening the seat to a Republican and further alienating Democrats.

Brother Ralph Reed, alas, tanked in Georgia. Do you think he knows Baptists don't approve of gambling?

Meanwhile, in Texas, we're all excited about the possibility of having Tom DeLay back on the ballot in his old district.

You must admit the Republicans have lost their moral compass since DeLay quit. Now, if we could just have a free press and free religion like Iraq!

The last person to talk to Rogers was his boss, Greene said. Rogers reportedly called him from his cell phone shortly after leaving the house.

An Allegheny Power spokesperson would not comment Friday on personnel matters but did say they are fully cooperating with law enforcement and the family in the effort to locate Rogers.

Greene talked to the boss about the conversation and said the boss said Rogers sounded OK.

A week has since gone by and no one has any idea where Rogers might be.

There's been no activity on his cell phone, credit cards or bank account. No one has found his car, a light blue 2005 Dodge Durango with West Virginia license number 4EE-595.

State Police Sgt. R.L. Monroe said there have been no sightings of Rogers or his car.

"I came to have fun, and you get to read," Louk said.

Forty children are enrolled at each site. Though not all come each day, attendance tops 30 daily at each site. Volunteers read to children one on one each day, and each day includes read-aloud time.

Tunnelton-Denver has about 27 volunteers, and Kingwood has 22.

Desiree Daugherty is site coordinator and Lori Baker volunteer coordinator at Kingwood. Rachel Miller is site coordinator and Anna John-Grose volunteer coordinator at Tunnelton-Denver. Each site has five mentors, who in addition to their work at Energy Express must perform community service. Each receives a stipend for the work.

Mentors are college students, but not, as you might expect, necessarily education majors. Majors range ble," Monroe said.

Police have done an air search by helicopter and searches with family members by car. They've submitted Rogers' information to the media in hopes of reaching someone who has seen him or his Durango, Monroe said.

"Until we find the vehicle, no really detailed search can be done with the dogs ... until we have his last point of origin," Monroe said.

Greene said she and family and friends have driven up and down every road they can think of, looking for any sign of Rogers. Rural Preston County isn't the easiest place to search, either.

"The area we live in, the whole place is nothing but trees," Greene said. "It's almost impossible to see at this time of the year."

It's been hard emotionally as well, she said.

"He is a husband, a father, a son and a friend, and he is missed dearly," Greene said. "He's a very caring, gentle, compassionate, loving man. He's an amazing man."

Greene has trouble believing that her new husband would go away this long of his own will.

from elementary education to psychology, business and anthropology.

Bridget Connard, 20, is an anthropology major, enrolled as a junior at Marshall University this fall.

"I think it's a good program, because kids do need someone to help with reading," Connard said, taking a break from her Tunnelton-Denver classroom.

She and the other mentors had three days' training and are mentored in turn, during the session, by the site coordinators. Connard said the first few times facing students was intimidating, and finding motivators can be hard.

But when she repeats something she's already read, and her students call her attention to it, it's rewarding.

"I think, oh, you were listening!" Connard said.

"It's been exciting," said John-

"We're still in our honeymoon phase," she said. "This is the longest we've been apart."

She fears the worst.

"I can't get rid of that feeling. I can't. Maybe I don't want to consider anything else, but I can't believe he would willingly leave his family," Greene said. "A lot of people want to look at this as a 42-year-old man who walked away from his family, but he wouldn't do that."

He would never leave his beloved daughters, she emphasized.

The girls "are not good. They want their dad back. They wake up in the morning and they ask for him. They go to sleep at night and ask for him," Greene said.

Their daughters range in age from 8 to 18.

If Rogers did just leave, for some reason, Greene said she can accept that — she just needs to know.

"A phone call, a letter, anything to let us know he's alive and well," Greene said. "I need to know he's OK."

"It's almost like he's vanished, but we all know that's not the case — he's somewhere."

band trips to Huntington for the State Band Festival in the early 1950s. Those were trips many looked forward to and generally had a good time traveling both to and from the events. And the band always got "superior" ratings, which made it that much more enjoyable.

Other folks have talked about their rides on the old Morgantown & Kingwood Railroad (the M&K), which followed Deckers Creek to Masontown, then to Reedsville, Kingwood and Rowlesburg, where passengers could board the B&O on its main line. Often they went only as far as Oak Park, an amusement area operated by the railroad for a time.

The M&K ran from Morgantown beginning in 1907 and its last trips were made in 1931, when the Great Depression took its toll on just about everything.

It was a privilege to be able to see the railroad station in Grafton, which was a magnificent facility, much like Grand Central Station in New York City. There was a spacious waiting area. Hearing the public address system give information about the arrival and destinations of trains was a great experience many will never have.

People who lived close to the railroad tracks knew when to expect trains' arrivals and experience the thunderous road of the cars passing by, clickety-click. At first it may have been a distraction, but from personal experience you can get used to the noise.

Even today you can hear the trains traveling on the west side of the Monongahela River, and know by the sound which way the wind is blowing. If it sounds like it's in your backyard, you know rain is on the way. Now, how can we do without railroads?

 Today is Saturday, July 22, the 203rd day of 2006. There are 162 days left in the year.
HIGHLIGHT IN HISTORY: IN 1796, Cleveland, Ohio, was founded by General Moses Cleaveland.

IN 1942, gasoline rationing involving the use of coupons began along the Atlantic seaboard.
IN 1975, the House of Representatives joined the Senate in voting to restore the American citizenship of Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee.
TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS: Former Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., is 83. Fashion designer Oscar de la Renta is 74. Game show host Alex Trebek is 66. Singer George Clinton is 65. Bratty little sister gets under skin of tweener

DEAR ABBY: I am 11. My sister, "Brittany," is 9. She makes fun of everything I do and cracks rude comments about me. She kisses up to everyone else and makes them think she's an angel.
 I am fed up with Brittany's smart-alecky comments and rudeness. She constantly annoys me because we have the same room. She thinks it's a huge joke that I am going through puberty and holds her nose around me all the time.
 I have tried talking to her, my parents, my grandparents, and anyone else who will listen. They think we are "just being sisters" and that I complain too much. Help! — FED UP IN GREENVILLE, S.C.

DEAR FED UP: Your sister is acting like a brat because she is only 9 and jealous of you. Please try to keep that in mind when she makes you feel "dumb" and "little," because you are neither.
 When Brittany teases you about going through puberty, remind her that in a few years she will be going through the exact same thing — and how will she like you holding your nose around her?
 Puberty is a difficult time under the best circumstances, and sharing a room with a little pest can make it even more so. Perhaps that room could be rearranged so that you both have some degree of privacy? Think about it and discuss it with your mother, because it is doable.

DEAR ABBY: I recently ended a three-year relationship, and afterward I found out my ex had fathered a child while we were together. This is not the reason I ended the relationship — I didn't know until after it was over.
 When I told our mutual friends, a few of them told me they had known the whole time, but were "giving him the opportunity to be a man and tell me himself." I feel hurt and betrayed. One of these "friends" was my own sister. What should I do? — BETRAYED IN FORT SMITH, ARK.

DEAR BETRAYED: Although you were told the reason they kept silent was to "give [your ex] the opportunity to be a man and tell you himself," it may also have been that they didn't want to hurt you. It was a misguided effort to protect you. So please try to forgive them. (That includes your sister.) And be grateful to the Lord above that you didn't waste any more time on that philandering jerk.

JEANNE PHILLIPS writes "Dear Abby" under the pseudonym Abigail Van Buren.

To get pink slip, Seabolt's sins must be severe

Why? It keeps coming back to that one little question. Why did Scott Seabolt, West Virginia University's men's soccer coach, feel he had to push the envelope until he was fired? As a rule, Ed Pastilong doesn't fire coaches. Cut your sport? Yeah, he might do that. But fire you? Not unless you put the university's reputation at risk.

Think about it for a minute. Don Nehlen coached football for 21 years. Gale Catlett coached basketball for 25.

Craig Turnbull took over as wrestling coach the last time the Pittsburgh Pirates won a World Series and that was 1979. When Veronica Hammersmith was named volleyball coach and Linda Burdette gymnastics coach, Johnny Bench was catching for the Big Red Machine against the Boston Red Sox in the 1975 World Series.

Coaching at West Virginia is like being a Supreme Court judge. It's a job you can keep for life.

Only a misstep can get you canned. Ask Terry Deremer, who coached WVU men's tennis from 1980 to 1993, the winningest coach in the school's history.

The NCAA found Deremer had a litany of violations from 1989 through his dismissal in 1994, most of them coming from using $26,000 of his own money to help student-athletes.

The charges against Deremer were many: supplementing scholarships of five student-athletes, paying four student-athletes for work they didn't perform, employing a couple of athletes at a summer camp before they were enrolled, paying for meals for student-athletes on partial scholarships, paying a volunteer coach, and taking money from a benefit tournament intended to purchase equipment and putting it into a personal account that he used "at his discretion" to provide further improper aid.

Obviously, it takes a good bit to make Pastilong act and he had to feel he had no choice but to fire Seabolt, especially after he refused to resign when the improprieties in his program were turned up.

This was shocking for, in Seabolt, WVU had a young coach gathering a head of steam in the profession, a coach with a degree from Duke University, which would make one think there was more than just mush between his ears.

There are those who have said that Seabolt's infractions were minor.

"On a scale of 1 to 10, 10 being the worst, they were a 1," one school administrator said — but that is difficult to believe.

A 1 would draw nothing but a slap on the wrist, both from the school and the NCAA.

This wound up with Seabolt losing his job and smearing his reputation. It had to be more serious than a 1.

We ask again: Why?

In many of these cases the cause is simply an overactive competitive gland that puts winning above ethics, but we suspect that wasn't the case here.

The reason we suspect this is there was no pressure on Seabolt to win. If he could keep his team — men's soccer, which does not rank very high in the overall scheme of the athletic department — at .500, he would have a job for life.

That just isn't it. Instead, it would seem Seabolt was victimized by good ol' Title IX, for his men's soccer budget is far behind the women's team's budget, his salary far behind the women's soccer coach's salary.

The only way he could reach the equality that Title IX is supposed to present in athletics would be to be as successful or more successful than the women. To accomplish that, he needed to find a way to stretch his limited resources.

Post 2 itching to play

Team takes field today after cancellations

BY TODD MURRAY
The Dominion Post

Andy Altemus didn't have to be reminded that he needed to be the ace of Morgantown Post 2's pitching staff this American Legion baseball season.

The right-hander from Morgantown High already understood the situation.

"Because our pitching staff isn't as deep as it's been the last couple of years, I felt a little bit more pressure to step up and get the job done when it's my turn," he said.

Fortunately for Post 2, that internal pressure didn't faze the unflappable Altemus, who went 6-1 in seven starts with a team-low 1.09 ERA.

Altemus returns to the mound today as Post 2 (24-10) begins play in the double-elimination Area 2 tournament at Hawley Field. Post 2 plays at 7 p.m. against the winner of the 4 p.m. game between Fairmont and Shinnston.

A victory moves Post 2 into Sunday's championship round, where Fairmont or Shinnston would have to defeat Morgantown twice to claim the title and a berth in the state tournament, which begins Thursday morning in Elkins.

Altemus is confident Post 2 has the pitching to stay in contention for the Area 2 title.

"I think I've done a pretty good job, but other kids like Travis Coldsnow, Kevin Holdsworth and Michael Martin — who came up from the Junior Legion team — have stepped in pretty well," he said.

Altemus takes the mound for the first time since pitching Post 2 to a 5-0 victory against Wheeling on July 13. This nine-day stretch without a mound appearance is one of the longest Altemus can recall in his young career.

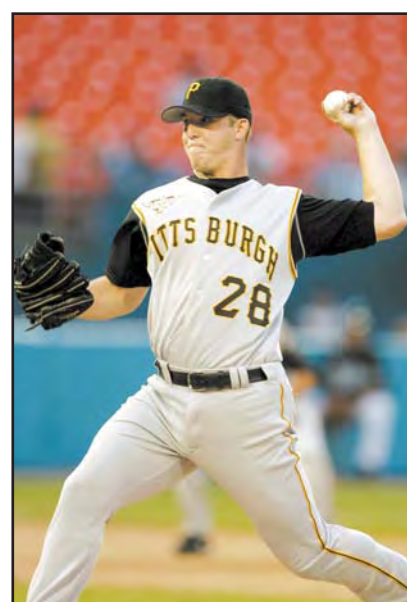

"I've been throwing in practice," said Altemus, who will pitch for Potomac State next year. "I don't think [the layoff] will affect me much, but I don't usually like to go this long without throwing in a game situation. You like to stay sharp."

Coldsnow (5-1, 3.85 ERA) will start Post 2's second game, whether it's Saturday night or Sunday. Holdsworth (3-0, 7.10 ERA) and Andrew Saab (1-3, 9.30 ERA) are the candidates to start a third game, if necessary.

"You never know what's going to happen," Post 2 coach Ernie Galusky said. "We may want to bring Saab or Kevin out of the bullpen Saturday. We told our pitchers Andy would start the first one, Travis would start the second."

Pittsburgh Pirates Paul Maholm pitches against the Florida Marlins at Dolphin Stadium in Miami on Friday.

Rookie Olsen posts 11 whiffs

Associated Press

MIAMI — Rookie Scott Olsen struck out 11 and Cody Ross hit a two-run homer to lead the Florida Marlins to a 4-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Friday night.

Olsen (8-4) allowed six hits in 6.2 innings and he struck out six straight hitters between the first and third innings. Joe Borowski pitched the ninth for his 20th save in 22 chances.

Ross was batting clean up for the third time this season and he homered for the second time in those games.

Olsen's strikeout run began with one out in the first, when he got Jason Bay and Craig Wilson. He then had a perfect second, striking out Jose Hernandez, Jose Castillo and Ronny Paulino. Olsen then retired Pirates pitcher Paul Maholm on a called third strike leading off the third.

Ross hit a 3-2 pitch from Paul Maholms over the wall in left-center in the first innings. His sixth home run of the season scored Dan Uggla, who reached on a one-out single.

Jose Hernandez's RBI ground-out in the fourth brought the Pirates within 2-1.

Florida made it 3-1 in the fourth on a fielding error by second baseman Jose Castillo. After Miguel Cabrera and Ross hit singles to start the inning, Maholm got Josh Willingham to hit a grounder to Castillo, who let the ball roll between his legs into right-center, scoring Cabrera from second and advancing Ross to third. Ross scored on Wes Helms' double play grounder.

Maholm (3-9) allowed four runs and five hits and struck out five.

Notes

Olsen's six consecutive strikeouts were one shy of Jesus Sanchez's team record. Sanchez struck out seven straight against Atlanta on Sept. 13, 1998.

HOYLAK, England — A brief look at Friday's second round of the British Open at Royal Liverpool (all times EDT):

Leading: Tiger Woods, who shot a 7-under 65, for a two-day total of 132.

Just behind: Ernie Els is one stroke back and Chris DiMarco is three behind.

Shot of the day: Woods' 4-iron approach from 209 yards hit the 14th green, hopped four times and disappeared into the cup for an eagle.

Heading home: Former British Open champions Nick Faldo, Seve Ballesteros, John Daly, Tom Lehman, Sandy Lyle, Paul Lawrie and Ben Curtis were among a host of major tournament winners who missed the cut. Seventy-one players will contest the final two rounds.

Key stat: Woods has used his driver exactly once in 36 holes.

a career filled with them, Woods seized the lead at the British Open with a 7-under-par 65 Friday and cast aside the notion that his poor performance at Winged Foot was anything more than a rare off week for the world's greatest golfer.

Woods pulled out his 4-iron at No. 14, the flag rippling in the breeze 209 yards away, and ripped a shot for the ages. The low drive came down at the edge of the green and hopped three more times before striking the stick, dropping straight in for eagle.

Walking toward the green, Woods heard the gasps from the gallery but didn't know where his ball ended up. When told it was in the cup, he broke into a wide grin, gave caddie Steve Williams a high-five and shrugged his shoulders, almost as if he was apologizing. Williams jokingly attempted to put the

They stood on the tees and hacked away, some balls flying straight and true, others wandering off into areas less explored than the moon.

But when the scores were compiled late Tuesday afternoon in the clubhouse at Mountaineer Golf Course, a strange thing happened. There were winners, but no losers, for this was the 8th annual Iris Kapnicky Memorial Golf Tournament and anything built on little more than a heart and dream can have no losers.

For the record, these were the winners:

A team composed of John Verbosky, Shawn Konchesky, Mike Bukrim and Jim Calain won the men's division gross with a 56. John Baliker, Bill Douglas, Vaughn Michael and Ron LaNeve's team shot the best net score in the men's division with a 50.

In the women's division, Karen Moore, Rhonda McIntyre, Wynn Johnson and Becky Harris posted the best women's gross score with a 59. Lauren Dean, Kathy Richards, Sharon Palfreyman and Barbara Barchiesi won the women's net with 48.9.

But everyone wins in this tribute from Paul Kapnicky to his late wife, a tournament that has raised about $140,000 for the Monongalia General Foundation, dedicated to supporting the oncology department.

It grew out of Iris Kapnicky's battle with cancer at the hospital. Paul would visit but realized that the hospital needed help.

"I saw a need for family comfort during those trying times," he recalled as the golfers began to come in late in the day.

That, added to his appreciation of the oncology nursing staff, got him going.

"Oncology nurses are special people," he said. "They're caring."

No punishment for ex-Navy QB in rape case

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A military jury recommended no punishment Friday for a former U.S. Naval Academy quarterback who was acquitted of raping a female midshipman but convicted on lesser charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and disobeying a lawful order. Lamar S. Owens Jr.' mother burst into tears, and his father leaned over a dividing wall and hugged him as the jury's decision was read. Prosecutors had recommended a two-year sentence for the 22-year-old from Savannah, Ga., on the charge of conduct unbecoming an officer. Owens' status at the academy, where he had been prepared to graduate, was referred to academy superintendent Vice Admiral Rodney Rempt. The five Naval Academy officers that served as the jury found Thursday that Owens had consensual sex with a junior midshipman in her room at the academy Jan. 29, but they found that Owens was not guilty of rape. His accuser had claimed Owens entered her room uninvited and raped her after she blacked out. Both Owens and his accuser testified that they had several drinks at separate locations in the hours before their early morning encounter.

BRIEFS

Lamar Owens

Willie Cooper

Cooper was shot in the buttocks when confronted in his yard Friday morning by an unknown person who fled after another player returned gunfire. Police said Cooper was able to walk after being shot and the injury wasn't believed to be serious, but he was taken to a hospital for treatment. After Cooper was shot, teammate and roommate Brandon Meriweather pulled a pistol from his pants pocket and fired three times at the person, who jumped a fence and fled with another person in a car, police said. It was unclear if the assault was hit. Police said Meriweather used his gun legally. Cooper and Meriweather told police they noticed a suspicious car parked outside their home near campus shortly after 6:30 a.m. When they went outside to investigate, a person crouched next to the house jumped up and shot Cooper.

Football

■ Two Steelers draft picks, defensive end Orien Harris and tight end Charles Davis, signed multiyear contracts Friday. The Steelers took Harris with the second of the team's two fourth-round selections. Davis was the second of the team's two fifth-round picks. Harris, a star at Miami, was named an Associated Press second-team All-American as a senior. Davis went to Purdue, where he had 78 career receptions. ■ St. Louis Rams running back Marshall Faulk will have major reconstructive knee surgery and miss the 2006 season, a blow that could spell the end of his career. Though coach Scott Linehan said at a news conference Friday that the 33-year-old Faulk wasn't ready to call it quits, retirement might be on the horizon. "We were hoping for the best, but we've been planning for both scenarios," said Linehan, in his first year with the Rams. "I think reality is setting in for sure that potentially his career is winding down."

Carl Crawford, Dioner Navarro and Julio Lugo also homered in support of left-hander Casey Fossum (4-3), who overcame a shaky first inning to enable the Devil Rays to stop the longest skid to open the second half of a season since Arizona lost its first 11 following the All-Star break in 2004.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — David DeJesus and Mark Grudzielanek hit three-run homers to help the Kansas City Royals beat the Los Angeles Angels 8-3 on Friday night.

Runelvys Hernandez (2-4) was recalled from Triple-A Omaha prior to the game, taking Scott Elarton's spot in the rotation. Elarton had been placed on the disabled list on July 18 with a shoulder injury. Hernandez gave up five hits and three runs in 7 1-3 innings. He struck out six and walked three. The right-hander won his first start of the season, but then went 0-4 over his next six starts before being demoted to Omaha on May 28.

Twins 14, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Rondell White and Michael Cuddyer each had four RBIs and Justin Morneau scored four times to help the Minnesota Twins extend their latest winning streak to eight games with a 14-6 victory over the struggling Cleveland Indians on Friday night.

National League

Phillies 6, Braves 5

PHILADELPHIA — Jimmy Rollins had four hits, including a homer, and pinch-hitter David Delucca delivered a go-ahead RBI single in the eighth inning to help the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Atlanta Braves 6-5 on Friday night.

David Bell went 4-for-4 and Chase Utley extended his hitting streak to 22 games for the Phillies.

Edgar Renteria and Scott Thorman each homered and Chipper Jones extended his hitting streak to a career-high 20 games for the Braves, who have lost two in a row after a season-high seven-game winning streak.

Mets 7, Astros 0

NEW YORK — Jose Valentin hit his second grand slam in the last two weeks backing John Maine's four-hitter and the New York Mets beat the Houston Astros 7-0 Friday night.

Valentin hit the ninth grand slam of his career in the second inning. It was the Mets' fifth in the last two weeks.

Nationals 7, Cubs 6

WASHINGTON — Alex Escobar's two-run single in the eighth inning capped a comeback for the Washington Nationals, who treated fans to handshakes and autographs at the stadium gates then went out and beat the Chicago Cubs 7-6 on Friday night.

The Nationals led 4-1, then trailed 6-4 after Aramis Ramirez hit a tiebreaking two-run shot, his second homer of the game.

WOODS

bag on Woods' shoulder as the two made a triumphant walk up the fairway.

"It's a bonus," Woods said. "Trust me, I'm not trying to put the ball in the hole. I'm just trying to put it on the green and get out of there with a 4."

Instead, he wrote down a 2 on the way to 12-under 132.

So, is this another Tiger runaway? Not yet.

Ernie Els, a three-time major winner who took the claret jug in 2002, didn't fade away in the afternoon, even with the winds off the Irish Sea kicking up just a bit.

The Big Easy matched Woods with a 65 that was more workmanlike than his rival's — seven birdies, no bogeys — and they'll see each other up close on Saturday when they're paired in the final group.

Els was a shot behind Woods at 133.

"Obviously I've got to keep it up," Els said. "I'm playing with the world's No. 1 player on the weekend. It should be fun."

Also in on the fun: a resurgent Chris DiMarco, yet another player shooting 65 to get three strokes off the lead, and two-time U.S. Open winner Retief Goosen, whose 66 left him four back on another good day for going low at sunny Royal Liverpool.

Phil Mickelson didn't take advantage of it. Trying to make up for his final-hole collapse at the U.S. Open, Lefty could only manage a 71 that left him a daunting eight strokes behind Woods.

"I'm obviously not excited about being eight shots back," Mickelson said. "But I still feel that a good round tomorrow will give me a chance on Sunday, and that's the goal.

Granted, Mickelson still has a chance. Among those projected to miss the cut: former winners John Daly, Nick Faldo and Ben Curtis; major champions Fred Couples, Vijay Singh and Davis Love III; and European stalwarts Colin Montgomerie, Padraig Harrington and Darren Clarke.

Daly had one of his notorious meltdowns, going to the final hole in good position only to make a triple-bogey 8.

ond one and everybody else be ready to pitch Saturday."

Post 2 hasn't played since Monday night's 24-3 seven-inning demolition of Preston Post 56 at Hawley Field. Post 2 thought it was going to play an Area 2 doubleheader against Fairmont on Tuesday night at Hawley Field, but Fairmont believed the game was scheduled for Wednesday night.

Consequently, the games were not played, and the teams did not meet during the regular season. Galusky has tried to keep his team sharp with practices and an intrasquad scrimmage Thursday night.

"I pitched and we had two teams and played everything live to kind of get back into a game feel of running the bases and reacting to balls and seeing the ball out of a pitcher's hand," Galusky said.

"We'll have a quick practice

[Friday] with a little bit of infield-outfield, pitcher's fielding practice and some swings. Hopefully, they'll be sharp for [today.]"

Post 2 defeated Shinnston twice during the regular season, taking a 22-11 decision in Morgantown on June 10 before earning an 8-3 win at Shinnston on July 6.

"Shinnston is improved from the past couple years," Galusky said. "The have some legitimate athletes, pretty good baseball players. They've beaten Bridgeport a couple of times, and they've played Fairmont very tough two times."

Post 2 and Fairmont are not strangers, even though they haven't met this season.

"Most of their players are Fairmont Senior kids," Altemus said. "We played them in the high school season. Legion is a different story. You bring in college players and some players from East [Fairmont]. They're a good team, but we're pretty familiar with each other."

HOSPITAL

So many times I saw them become attached to patients. They're not supposed to do that, but they could not help it."

And so he began this scramble.

"I didn't foresee this," he said. "I thought maybe 140 or 150 people and I'd be happy as the devil."

Last year, the tournament drew a field of 220.

"That," he said, "is unheard of, to run that many people through in one day."

This year, the field came in at 191 and the event raised between $20,000 and $25,000, depending on how the auction went, according to Mon General spokesman Bill Hennessey.

Golf tournaments are important to Mon General. Hennessey said he runs four per year and nets more than $100,000. It is especially important this year with the building program in full swing at the hospital.

The Kapnick money will go toward creating three rooms for families.

This year, Kapnick's family is making a bequest of $100,000 to the building fund for the oncology unit.

Kapnick dedicates himself to making the tournament a success.

"He does most of the work," Hennessey said.

That includes selling as many as 81 tee and cart sponsorships.

"We've had golfers here every year and we've had wonderful sponsors," he said. Sponsors include Danny's Door Service, B.T. Contractors, Inc., Communications Plus, Howard Hanna, Mountaineer Gardens, Mountaineer Supply, John Howard Motors and Point Marion Ford.

Scott Gump hits out of the sand during the second round of the B.C. Open in Verona, N.Y., on Friday.

Brooks best at B.C.

Defending champ Bohn 1 shot back

GOLF ROUNDUP

Associated Press

VERONA, N.Y. — For one day, Mark Brooks played like the champion he once was.

The 45-year-old Brooks shot a 7-under-par 65 on Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the first round of the final B.C. Open. One shot back were defending champion Jason Bohn and Harrison Frazar.

Gabriel Hjertstedt, the 1997 B.C. Open champ, was two strokes back at 67 along with Scott Gutschewski, Daisuke Maruyama, Matt Gogel, Omar Uresti, Scott Gump, John Rollins, Ryuji Imada, B.J. Staten and Jason Schultz.

Another former B.C. Open winner, 48-year-old Mike Hulbert (1989), was among a logjam at 68 after his best round in four tournaments this year.

It's been a decade since Brooks led a PGA Tour event after the first day and a decade since the last of his seven victories on tour — the 1996 PGA Championship. He would have plenty to gain with a win here because he's currently playing under the 10-year exemption he earned with that victory. A win would give him an exemption for another two years.

Whether Brooks, who won three times in 1996, can keep playing well is a big question mark. He's been bothered by back problems for the better part of five years and this season had missed 15 of 16 cuts before tying for 16th at last week's John Deere Classic.

On Thursday, he used his lone bogey on the round, at No. 17, as a spark.

"I had a bad tee shot and it turned out to be key," said Brooks, who opened the 1996 Byron Nelson Classic with a 64, then watched Phil Mickelson win it. "I got stymied behind a tree, chipped it out, missed the green, pitched it to the green and made a good 10-footer for bogey.

That was a pretty good putt. I was 4 under at that point. It would have been a pretty big swing in the wrong direction."

U.S. Girls Junior Championship
 CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Vicky Hurst made just enough putts to edge Mina Harigae Friday and advance to the final of the U.S. Girls' Junior at Carmel Country Club to face 13-year-old Jenny Shinn.

Hurst, 16, of Melbourne, Fla., will play Shin, of Torrance Calif., in the 36-hole final Saturday. Shin defeated Alexandra Bodemann in the other semifinal Friday.

Hurst broke a tie with Harigae by sinking a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 13. Hurst maintained a 1-up advantage until No. 16, when Harigae drove her second shot on the 456-yard, par-5 hole out of bounds with a seven-wood. Harigae could not recover from the one-stroke penalty and double-bogeyed the hole. Hurst made a 3-foot bogey putt to win the hole.

"It was so pathetic," Hurst said. "She hit the out-of-bounds shot and I was just looking for par ... I was trying to take advantage."

Barring collapse, Woods has Open well in hand

BY TIM DAHLBERG

COMMENTARY

NICK FALDO USED to play golf for a living. Played it so well he won a couple of British Opens, broke Greg Norman's heart in the Masters and shattered the hopes of the Americans in more than one Ryder Cup.

Not exactly the kind of guy you would expect to see acting like a Tiger Woods groupie.

But there Faldo was on Friday, asking Woods for souvenirs and making sure he didn't step in his line or sneeze in his backswing as Woods seized control of the British Open.

"The man has got a heart and brains that are better than anyone else's," Faldo gushed.

His golf game isn't too bad, either. Faldo wasn't the only one to notice that as morning turned to afternoon and everyone turned to the big yellow scoreboards at Royal Liverpool to see just how low Woods would go.

Plenty low, as it turned out. A 4-iron into the cup on the 14th hole will be the shot replayed over and over, but the methodical way Woods went about his business is the real reason why he will be holding the claret jug aloft for a second straight time sometime early Sunday evening.

The argument could be made that there's a little business left over the weekend, and the matter of Ernie Els and that pesky Chris DiMarco. And, yes, there are no guarantees in golf.

But, barring an unexpected hurricane off the Irish Sea, there are no surprises in this Open for Woods. The wispy rough offers no penalty, he can tee off with a 2-iron when others are hitting driver, and the par-5 might as well be par-4s.

This is as close to a lock as it gets. Woods could give Faldo his driver and still win it.

Actually, he just might. Faldo asked him for it for his son, and since Woods has hit it only once all week he really doesn't have any use for it anyway.

"If the weather stays decent, he will get to 20-under and good luck," Faldo said. "How are they going to beat him with that score?"

Phil Mickelson certainly won't. Mickelson's chances of rebounding from his U.S. Open meltdown ended with little drama while he was still on the putting green Friday watching Woods on his way to a second round 65.

Mickelson had been feeling pretty good about things after shooting a 69 in the first round. His ever-present smile was a bit more forced Friday when he found himself nine shots off the lead before even striking a shot for real, and remained there when he was done.

Players usually talk about the weather during a British Open. On Friday, it seemed all they were doing was talking about Woods.

They don't have much chance of controlling either.

McNabb fires back at Owens

Eagles QB calls 'T.O.' a 'children's book'

Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Donovan McNabb does a better job avoiding tacklers than questions about Terrell Owens.

Donovan McNabb

Speaking to reporters after practice Friday, a cordial McNabb called Owens' recently released autobiography a "children's book," mocked the star receiver for saying he was misquoted in his own book and disputed some of the written allegations.

McNabb and Owens helped lead the Philadelphia Eagles to the Super Bowl during the 2004 season, but their relationship quickly deteriorated in 2005. Owens eventually was kicked off the team and signed with the Dallas Cowboys in March.

In "T.O.," which came out earlier this month, Owens mostly offers his side of his tumultuous second season in Philadelphia. McNabb joked that he should have been a co-author because Owens mentioned the five-time Pro Bowl quarterback at length in the book.

"It won't sell unless he's talking about me," McNabb said, adding that he didn't read the book and is waiting to play himself in the movie.

Owens likens McNabb to a bully who spat in his mouth as a teenager while he innocently slept on a school bus. He traces the root of the friction to when McNabb didn't throw him the ball on a play in a game during his first season with the Eagles.

McNabb scoffed at Owens' version of events.

"He told me, 'Hey, I was open on that. Throw me the ball,'" McNabb said in a soft voice. "And you guys believe that, I'm sure. I mean, you think about that."

Owens also claims that one of the offensive coaches told him McNabb gets tense in big games.

"It's funny how they would just come to him," McNabb said sarcastically. "Why wouldn't they just say something to me? To say that I can't play in big games, I don't think that's a true statement at all, so I don't get offended by anything he may have said in his book that he was misquoted."

McNabb denied the implication that he influenced management's decision to suspend Owens.

"I can sit here and say that's not true," McNabb said. "If I had that much pull, a lot of changes would be made."

Master of Pocono, Hamlin holds pole for second time

Driver took his first career victory at track

Associated Press

LONG POND, Pa. — Denny Hamlin is the new driver to beat at Pocono Raceway, proving that Friday by winning the pole at the track where he scored his first career victory.

Hamlin, who won here last month, made his qualifying lap very late in the session with Ryan Newman and Kasey Kahne sitting on top of the chart. But he posted a lap at 169.827 mph to grab the pole.

"You like this place, don't you?" crew chief Mike Ford asked Hamlin as he climbed out of his car. He certainly does.

"I just went out there, the track had a lot of grip, and it was good enough for the pole," Hamlin said.

Hamlin mastered this track in June, partly because he had studied Pocono's characteristics during hours upon hours of racing it on a video game.

He then won the pole, overcame nearly wrecking his Chevrolet after a blown tire sent him spinning through the grass, and held off the competition after a late red-flag to score the win.

Hamlin would love another win — or even a decent finish — to work his way into Chase for Championship contention. He heads into Sunday's race 12th in the standings, just 18 points out of the top 10.

He'll be racing the same car that he took to Victory Lane.

"We had the patience to not race this car again until we came here," he said. "When we did that, our car was right on target. But the rest of the year we are going to use it up pretty good."

Newman, who won the pole last weekend in New Hampshire, was second with a lap at 169.418 mph. He'd like to go to the end this week, though — he crashed and finished 39th last week.

"If we can make one lap, we can put them together and make 200 here," Newman said. "It's just a matter of getting things right."

Kahne was third and was followed by Hendrick Motorsports teammates Brian Vickers and Jeff Gordon.

Jeff Burton, Kurt Busch, Kyle Busch, Scott Riggs and Joe Nemecek rounded out the top 10.

Stephen Leicht, a 19-year-old Busch Series driver for Robert Yates Racing, qualified 36th and will make his Nextel Cup debut on Sunday. With Elliott Sadler and Dale Jarrett both leaving RYR at the end of the season, many believe this is the first step toward Leicht getting one of those empty seats in 2007.

Landis covets Tour lead

Race concludes Sunday in Paris

Associated Press

MACON, France — After a leisurely ride Friday, one of the most dramatic Tour de France editions in years reaches a crucial stage Saturday — the individual time trial.

The question on everyone's lips: Can American Floyd Landis overcome a 30-second deficit and wrest the yellow jersey away from race leader Oscar Pereiro of Spain?

The two men have traded the yellow jersey back and forth since last Saturday. Now, the time trial likely will determine who will wear the maillot jaune when it counts — Sunday in Paris.

"I feel pretty good about my chances," Landis said after Friday's mostly flat stage, in which the leading contenders rode together, trying to recharge after three agonizing days in the Alps.

"I'm optimistic." Saturday's race against the clock is a 35.4-mile ride that snakes from Le Creusot to Montceau-les-Mines. It shouldn't take riders, who will leave one by one in reverse order of the standings, much more than an hour to complete.

The last three riders to go will be Landis, second-place Spaniard Carlos Sastre, who's 12 seconds back, and Pereiro.

The course is about the same

length as the Stage 7 time trial, though a little more hilly. Landis finished second in that stage, 1:10 faster than Sastre and 1:40 ahead of Pereiro.

But extrapolations mean little in this year's Tour, which has featured seven different riders in yellow — one short of the record.

Wild unpredictable finishes are replacing Lance Armstrong's era of domination.

Whereas Armstrong meticulously chipped away at his rivals, 30-year-old Landis has shown a flair for drama — nearly cracking one day, then coming back with a once-in-a-lifetime ride.

He became a fan favorite Thursday, winning the final Alpine stage to slash his 8 minute, 8 second deficit to Pereiro to 30 seconds putting him back in contention.

Making it even more incredible is that Landis is riding with an arthritic hip, an injury from a 2003 crash that he hopes to correct with surgery this fall.

"The other day, when I saw Floyd (struggle) ... I can say in my heart that I wasn't happy," said Pereiro, a former Phonak teammate who calls Landis a friend. "Now I am."

"But it's clear that it's going to be harder for me to win the Tour," he said, acknowledging that Landis is typically stronger in time trials.

"I'm going to push the limit." Friday, he and the other top riders took it easy as Italy's Matteo Tosatto won the 18th stage, outspurring two other breakaway riders.

More letters on end-of-life discussion

DR. PETER GOTT

DEAR READERS: Here are two more provocative letters in response to my column on end-of-life issues.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your response to one of your readers in your column was both erroneous and arrogant.

You began with, "How we handle end-of-life decisions is a private matter for which each of us must take responsibility." That's erroneous. Our decisions are always a public matter, since all of us live in society, and most of us even have family, friends, and loved ones, all of whom are affected by our death.

Second, it is arrogant of you to lecture others that, "We don't need organized religion to demand of us what we wish for at the end of life." Perhaps someone should lecture you that, "We don't need organized medicine to demand of us how we care for ourselves medically?"

Unlike you, the nun at least recognizes that each of us lives in society, not in your imaginary state of self-isolation in which our life (and our death) supposedly has no impact upon anyone else. Unlike you, at least she recognizes that our life (and our death) is most assuredly not the "private matter" you claim it to be. As she wisely (and correctly) pointed out, "We have a culture-of-death mentality."

Sadly, you apparently have a culture-of-isolation mentality. Yet you apparently have no problem lecturing others week after week in your little newspaper column, "demanding" of them how they should deal with their medical issues!

DEAR DR. GOTT: It's fortunate that there are doctors such as you and my personal physician, regarding life's choices.

Religious people believe that all of us are responsible before God for our own actions, yet they'll jump right in and judge (and try to change) others whose convictions differ from theirs.

The nun who wrote to you quoted the "Thou shalt not kill" law, and yet society (religions included) always has a ready argument in favor of killing on the battlefield and through abortions. In other words, murder is wrong except ... ?

Why is it society feels it's its duty to force individuals to stay alive — no matter that their quality of life is zero and/or they are merely existing in excruciating pain and misery 24 hours of every day, and yet if an animal is in pain — or merely in poor health — it is "put out of its misery." Forcing a human to stay alive under such circumstances is the epitome of human abuse! Any other abuse is illegal.

Saturday, July 22, 2006

The year ahead may be a period when you will find it far easier to make friends and draw people to you for both business opportunities as well as social ones. This cycle will offer many advantages you didn't enjoy previously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Greater success in your endeavors can be substantially enhanced at this point in time if you start relying upon yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — An endeavor to which you have already devoted considerable time may begin paying off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Events may be such that you'll be able to make some of those transformations in your relationships which can make things far more pleasant for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You will be more effective if you are able to operate independently of others. Partnerships should be put in abeyance at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — If you've wanted to take a trip of some kind, this could be a perfect time to start gathering information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Some factors which have been instrumental in determining your course of action may surface helping to settle things.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Forces are at work creating a perfect balance between you and those who mean a lot to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — You may find it necessary to subordinate your desires for amusement and concentrate on the needs at hand, yet you won't mind.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — There are strong possibilities that you could meet someone new who will have a most positive affect upon your social affairs.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Major alterations pertaining to some personal developments that didn't live up to your present expectations can be made.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You're in a brief cycle of time where conditions will be ripe for meeting and making new friends and social contacts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Over the next few weeks the general trends which affect your material well being will be quite favorable for you.
