West Virginia gas prices differ

Experts explain reasons why fuel costs vary

BY JANET L. METZNER

The Dominion Post

This weekend, a person traveling through West Virginia might have noticed a 20 cent or more difference in gasoline prices throughout

A gallon of regular gas ranged on Saturday, to $2.45 in Morgantown, according to westvirginia gasprices.com, a Web site where price spotters post the latest prices. AAA's Web site had average prices ranging from $2.31 in Parkersburg to $2.48 in Wheeling.

Morgantown's prices do not appear on the Web site. AAA checks Morgantown and similar areas every Tuesday.

Why the price difference? Folks in the transportation industry give a number of reasons.

During periods when gasoline prices are rising or declining, it's not from a low of $2.22 in Parkersburg unusual for prices to differ in a $3 per gallon Aug. 15, he said. The preneighborhood, or within a state, said Geoff Sundstrom, spokesman for AAA, in Heathrow, Fla.

> "When prices are moving up or down, it takes a while for all the market participants to decide to move in the same direction," he said.

Market participants include suppliers and retailers, among others. "That said, it is a little unusual, although pleasant, to see prices coming down as quickly as they have been in the last couple of weeks," Sundstrom said.

The nationwide average price of self-serve regular gasoline fell below vious all-time record high of $3.057 was set on Labor Day 2005.

Bevi Norris, director of communications for AAA East Central office in Pittsburgh, said AAA noted differences in average gasoline prices last week throughout West Virginia. But that's not unusual.

"We do see price fluctuations," she said. "We saw the very same thing in the springtime as the prices went up."

Norris said other factors that affect gas prices are:

■ Competition in local markets

■ Differing rents the station may be paying

Newsstand: $1.25

■ Real-estate taxes

■ Traffic patterns, including demand. "Where they are located can affect demand," she said.

■ Differing sources of the supply, including transportation costs.

Those factors can make prices different from station to station in the same metropolitan area, she said. On Saturday morning, prices varied by 10 cents in the Morgantown area, from $2.45 on the Mileground and several other stations,

Terrorist attack, violent weather, pandemic flu: How to be ready for just about any emergency

PREPARING kids for disaster is important. Page 7-A.

BY MARK PATRICK GRANDSTAFF The Dominion Post

Now more than ever, people realize they need to be prepared for disaster, said Shaunda Rauch, public information officer for the Monongalia County Office of Emergency Management.

Hurricane Katrina, the Indian Ocean tsunami of 2004 and the Sept. 11 attacks have heightened public awareness of the need for emergency-response organizations, Rauch said.

"Now the public realizes that there's a great necessity" for disaster planning, Rauch said. "The public has a role in the process."

The office has teamed with the Monongalia County Health Department to produce "Family Disaster Plan ... A Step-By-Step Guide," a comprehensive, 99page document that instructs residents on the steps to take before, during and after an emergency.

The document reflects an emergency-response philosophy that places a great deal of responsibility on the public's shoulders, said Shelley Martin, public health educator for the health department.

"What we're trying to stress is to have their family disaster kit and plan completed," Martin said. "They should have enough supplies to last a minimum of three days, because there are times that we have power outages that last for two to three days. [Until help arrives,] they're on their own."

"It could be three days before we even get there," Rauch said.

People with medical conditions have to make sure they have enough supplies to meet their needs during the first few days after a disaster, Rauch said.

"How are they going to keep their insulin cold? Where are they going to get their oxygen? What if the roads are blocked?" she said.

"We don't mean to scare people, but they need to be aware of the situation," Rauch said.

Today though Tuesday, The Dominion Post will publish excerpted material from the "Family Disaster Plan." Today's material includes information that is useful in any emergency situation: emergency contact information, communication plans, guidelines for storing food and water, and tips for keeping pets and livestock safe.

On Monday and Tuesday, The Dominion Post will publish information about terrorist and chemical emergencies, weather tips and steps to inventory possessions, and perspectives and information on a possible influenza pandemic.

Mon offers disaster guide to all counties

BY MARK PATRICK GRANDSTAFF

The Dominion Post

The 99-page "Family Disaster Plan ... A Step-By-Step Guide," is available in electronic form to every county in the state, said Shaunda Rauch, public information officer for the Monongalia County Office of Emergency Management.

But it may be some time before other counties distribute similar documents, if they choose to, she said.

'We sent it out three weeks ago," Rauch said. "They'd have to customize it to their specific counties."

Preston County has not worked to distribute the plan at this time, said Denise Knoebel, administrator of the Preston County Health Department. Knoebel praised the OEM for sharing the information.

"I do think that one of the really good things is how willing people are to share each other's information," Knoebel said. Sharing the disaster plan between agencies saves everyone time, she said.

"Why spend all of the time to reinvent things?" Knoebel said.

Preston County has been distributing threat preparedness pamphlets and has put up a billboard with Web site information, she said.

The Marion County Health Department has preferred to distribute information in smaller pamphlets, such as the "Are You Ready?" pamphlets from the Ready.gov Web site, said Tammy Hare, threat preparedness coordinator for the health department.

Hare said the health department does not have plans at this time to distribute the disaster plan.

Mon County's disaster plan "can be overwhelming for the general population," Hare said. "I really doubt you could get a general citizen in the county to read 100 pages.'

A resident is more likely to read smaller, more concise pamphlets than a single, comprehensive document, Hare said.

U.S., Afghan troops launch an offensive

Anti-Taliban operations to take place in country

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Thousands of American and Afghan soldiers launched an offensive against resurgent Taliban militants in five eastern provinces Saturday, seeking to expand the Afghan government's reach into the volatile frontier region, the U.S.-led coalition said.

The operation comes as a NATOled force, including 2,500 U.S. soldiers, is pressing heavy attacks on militants in Afghanistan's south, claiming to have killed hundreds of guerrillas during the past two

The new push in the east is "part of a series of coordinated operations placing continuous pressure on Taliban extremists ... in order to provide security to the population, extend the government to the people and to increase reconstruction," the U.S.-led coalition said.

Dubbed Operation Mountain Fury, the offensive involves 7,000 U.S. and Afghan soldiers in the central and eastern provinces of Paktika, Khost, Ghazni, Paktya and Logar, the military said. Insurgents and other Islamic extremist groups, including al-Qaida, are known to operate in the region, especially in areas bordering Pakistan where the reach of the Afghan government is weak.

LAGOS, Nigeria — A murder suspect accused of killing his brother with an ax told investigators he actually attacked a goat, which was only later magically transformed into his sibling's corpse, officials said.

The man, whose name was not released, offered police his explanation after being arrested Tuesday in the death of his brother the previous day at Isseluku village in southern Nigeria.

"He said that the goats were on his farm and he tried to chase them away. When one wouldn't move, he attacked it with an ax. He said it then turned into his brother," Police Commissioner Udom Ekpoudom told The Associated Press.

to $2.55 at Joe Moore's Exxon on Monongahela Boulevard, accordwww.westvirginia to gasprices.com.

Mike Kelly, president of Dulaney Oil on Dents Run, said the variety of prices at the pump in the Morgantown area is most likely because retailers have paid different prices for gasoline while prices continue to decline.

Kelly's company is a bulk-fuels distributor. That means it buys and then delivers fuels to area businesses, including gasoline to some convenience stores; it also operates a gas station on Dents Run, he said.

His station was selling gasoline at $2.45 per gallon Thursday, he

"Right now the prices are so sporadic because prices are going down, and a lot of places are operating off of their inventory. If (for example) two weeks ago, a distributor filled up with $2.65 gas, as they sell it off, even though the price is going down, they are still working off what's in those tanks," Kelly said Thursday.

Varying transportation costs are likely helping to cause varying gasoline prices throughout the state, he said.

For example, in Huntington, gasoline might be shipped on the Ohio River. But in north-central West Virginia, most gasoline is trucked in. And retailers in the eastern panhandle might have better access to ports such as Baltimore.

Each mode of transportation may have a different cost, he said.

It's important to note that the variety of prices is usually not more than 10 percent, Kelly said. "Fifteen years ago, when we had a price change, it would be 4 cents to

■ Wholesale tax: A 5 percent tax based on the average statewide price of gasoline. This is the tax Gov. Joe Manchin froze following Hurricane Katrina last year. It is still frozen.

According to the American Petroleum Institute, as of April, the wholesale tax, based on $1.30 per gallon, is 6.5 cents per gallon.

SOURCE: Brent Walker, spokesman for the West Virginia Department of Transportation

West Virginia has 45.4 cents tax per gallon, according to the institute. Ohio's prices are typically lower, Norris said.

"Ohio has the lowest gas prices in the country. Ohio gets their supplies (of gasoline) from three different areas — the East Coast, the West Coast and the Midwest, so they have a lot of supply options there.

Brent Walker, assistant director of communications for the W.Va. Department of Transportation, said gasoline taxes don't make that much difference in prices.

Rather, those differences more likely depend on a retailer's business practices.

"It's how people work through distributors, a function of maybe wanting to be competitive, take the profit margin a little lower," he said.

A suspected suicide bomber also blew himself up in the same province when explosives strapped to his body went off prematurely as he was approaching a police checkpoint Saturday. No one else was injured in the blast, police said.

The U.S. military said troops had been preparing the ground for Operation Mountain Fury for weeks and began the "maneuver phase" early Saturday.

A separate U.S.-led operation called Big Northern Wind has been going on in neighboring Kunar province's Korangal Valley since late August.

"Mountain Fury will continue until the conditions of bringing security, construction and growth are met," Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, the top U.S. operational commander, said in the statement.

"The Afghan people are tired of war. They want what their government is capable of providing: security, employment, education and a better way of life," Freakley said.

In the south, about 60 suspected Taliban militants attacked a police checkpoint Friday, sparking a gunbattle in which four militants died, police said.

NATO and Afghan soldiers came to the aid of police after the insurgents attacked the checkpoint near the district police headquarters in Khas Uruzgan district of Uruzgan province, said Mohammad Zahir, the district police chief.

"National reconciliation is a correct way of thinking and carries a high feeling of responsibility," al-Maliki said. "To succeed in this today, we have to embrace the culture of dialogue and reconciliation.

But no major Sunni insurgent group has publicly agreed to join the plan, and no steps have been taken to rein in Shiite militias. Since the plan was unveiled in late June, car bombings, mortar attacks and shootings have killed hundreds of Iragis.

Al-Maliki said that once the plan managed to create an "atmosphere of reconciliation and dialogue," his government would take steps based on the views expressed both by nongovernmental groups and by tribal leaders — who last month agreed to back his effort.

Officials hope barrier will prevent Baghdad attacks

BAGHDAD, Iraq — In the latest proposal to curb the seemingly unstoppable violence in Baghdad, the Iraqi government is planning to build a defensive barrier around the city to keep out terrorists and militants who might be planning attacks.

Iraq's Interior Ministry said Friday that the government wants to dig a trench encircling the capital. At a news conference in Washington, President Bush said at least said Bush and the Iraqi governpart of the barrier would be a berm.

'The enemy is changing tactics, and we're adapting," Bush said. "And so they (U.S. and Iraqi security officials) have got a plan now, they've adapted. The enemy moves: we'll help the Iraqis move. So they're building a berm around the city to make it harder for people to come in with explosive devices, for example."

In Baghdad, U.S. military spokesman Sgt. Jeremy Pitcher ment are talking about the same plan but could not give further details about the construction of the barrier.

"I know the Iraqi government said trench, and then President Bush said berm," he said. "There will probably be dirt moving somewhere."

The defensive plan would be a huge, difficult undertaking, Baghdad's circumference runs roughly 100 miles, most reconstruction projects are languishing unfinished or unstarted because of security concerns, and the government still is struggling to assert its authority in the capital.

Interior Ministry spokesman Gen. Abdul Karim al-Kinani, said the trench is part of the government's plan to pacify Baghdad, which initially was launched in June. It will be deep and wide enough to prevent cars from crossing, forcing all vehicles to go through the 28 access roads into the capital, he said.

THINK AHEAD

Things to think about when making your emergency plan:

1. Find out which disasters could occur in vour area.

2. Meet with household members to talk about the dangers of fire, severe weather, earthquakes and other emergencies. Explain how to respond to each. 3. Show family members how to turn off the water, gas and electricity at the main switches when necessary. 4. Post emergency telephone numbers near telephone. 5. Teach children how and when to call 9-1-1. 6. Take a basic first aid and CPR class.

7. Practice emergency evacuation drills with all household members at least two times each year.

8. Keep family records in a water- and fireproof container. Consider keeping another set of records in a safety deposit box offsite.

9. For assistance in planning for the elderly or disabled, visit the National Organization on Disability Web site at nod.org.

10. Check if you have enough insurance coverage.

COMMUNICATIONS PLANNING

Pick two meeting places

■ Choose a place where everyone will meet if you all have to leave your home quickly. It should be near your home, but a safe distance away. For example, choose a streetlight a few doors down or a mailbox on the corner.

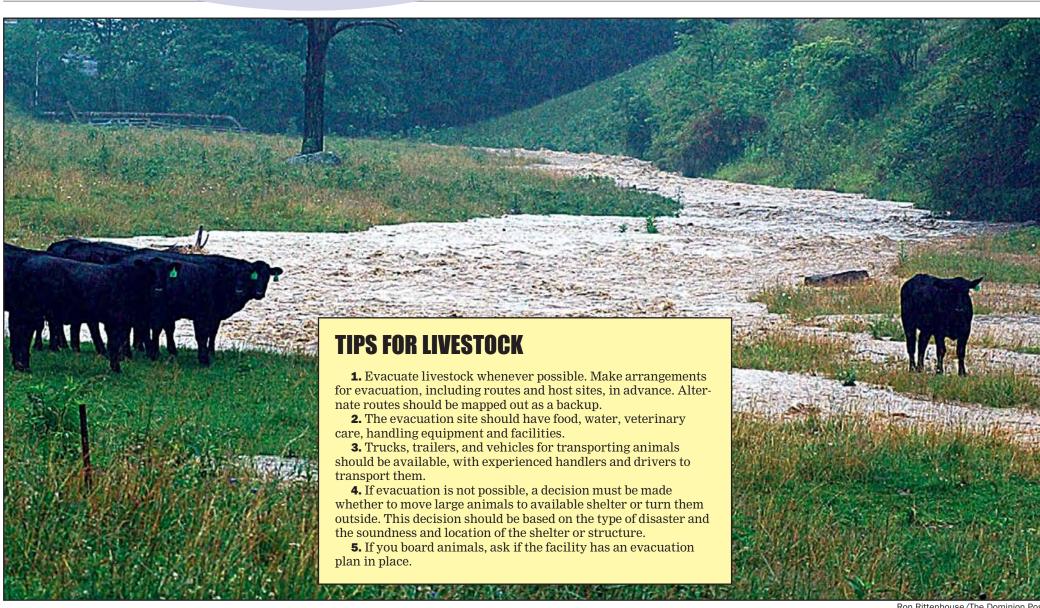

■ Choose a place to go in case an emergency makes it impossible to get back to your home or neighborhood. This should be in your community, but outside your neighborhood. For example, it could be the home of a friend or relative in another part of town.

Pick one contact person

■ Ask an out-of-town relative or friend to serve as your contact person for every family member to call or e-mail. Pick a person who doesn't live nearby, in case local phone service is down. In an emergency, everyone should know to contact this person right away.

■ Make sure everyone knows (and carries) the contact person's phone number and e-mail address.

■ Be sure everyone carries coins, a cell phone or a prepaid phone card.

TIPS FOR PETS

If you have to evacuate your iome, do not leave pets behind Make sure you have a secure pet carrier, leash or harness so if it panics, it can't run away.

For public health reasons, many emergency shelters cannot accept pets (unless it is a service animal assisting a disabled person). Find out which motels and advance of needing them (http://petswelcome.com).

1. Make sure identification tags are up-to-date and securely fastened to your pet's collar. Keep a photo handy in wallet for identification purposes — just in

2. Make sure a roommate, hotels in your area allow pets in neighbor or friend has an extra in the event you are unavailable. 3. Prepare a pet disaster supply kit. Include in your pet kits cage or carrier, bedding, water, food, toys, collar and leash, a pet first-aid kit, a water and feeding bowl, waste-disposal items and medical records.

FOOD AND WATER

Water

Having enough water is a top priority.

Store at least 1 gallon of water per person per day — at least 3 gallons per person total.

Change stored water every six months so it stays fresh. Store water in clean plastic, fiberglass or enamel-lined metal containers. Don't use glass or other breakable containers. If you purchase bottled water, keep it in the original, sealed container. Observe the "use by" date.

Food

Stock familiar foods that need no refrigeration or cooking and little or no water to prepare, such as: Ready-to-eat or canned meats, fruits and vegetables

Canned milk and juices Peanut butter, granola bars, crackers and other high-energy foods Formula or baby food if you have an infant Rotate stored food with your regular supply, so your emergency supply stays fresh. And remember to stock pet food and additional water for any pets. Keep emergency items in airtight plastic bags. Try to store everything in one or two containers, such as small unused garbage cans, camping backpacks or duffel bags. Keep the kit in a cool, dry place, such as a closet or cabinet. If space is tight, consider storing it on top of kitchen cabinets, under a bed or in a corner.

AFTERMATH

During and after an emergency, it is important to stay calm. Even after an event, there may still be many dangers. What seems like a safe distance or location may not Stay tuned to your local emergency station and follow the advice of trained professionals. Unless told to evacuate, avoid roads to allow emergency vehicles access. What you do next can save your life and the lives of others.

1. Remain calm and assist family members or neighbors, who may be vulnerable if exposed to extreme heat or

2. Locate a flashlight with batteries to use until power comes back on. Do not use candles — this can cause a fire.

3. Turn off sensitive electrical equipment such as computers, VCRs and televisions to prevent damage when electricity is restored.

4. Turn off major electrical and gas appliances that were on when the power went off. This will help to prevent power surges when electricity is restored.

5. Keep your refrigerator and freezer doors closed as much as possible to keep them cold.

6. Do not use the stove to heat your home this can cause a fire or fatal gas leak.

7. Use extreme caution when driving. If traffic signals are out, treat each signal as a stop sign. Come to a complete stop at every intersection and look before you proceed.

8. Do not call 9-1-1 to ask about a power outage. In case of a power outage, use battery-operated equipment to listen to news and radio stations for updates.

After an emergency occurs,

how can I help?

Contact the American Red Cross (598-9500) to find out how to donate blood, goods or your time.

Contact the relief agencies/organizations in your area to see what they may need, such as clothing or food.

Take a basic first aid or CPR class. Consider joining the Community Emergency Response Team, Medical Reserve Corps or Volunteers In Policing Services programs overseen by the Monongalia County Office of Emergency Man-

Join the local neighborhood-watch program to be better prepared for potential events.

Preparing your kids for disaster is important

PREPARING OUR CHILDREN for disasters is an extremely important facet in disaster planning.

News stories of disaster regularly make headlines around the globe. As you've watched others deal with emergencies, vou may have wondered what would happen if a disaster struck closer to home.

For parents and teachers of young children, the thought is even more troubling. Disasters can strike quickly and without warning.

While a disaster is frightening for adults, it can be traumatic for children if they don't know what to do. How would you and your children cope? Perhaps you've already experienced a disaster — what would you do differently next time? The answer to both questions is clear. Be prepared.

Help children understand the concept of a disaster and how to respond -

■ Explain that nature sometimes provides "too much of a good thing" — fire, rain, wind, snow. Tell them that a disaster is when something happens that could hurt people, cause damage or cut off utilities such as water, telephones or electricity.

■ Give examples of several disasters that could happen in your community. To get this information, contact our office or the River Valley American Red Cross chapter. Ask what disasters are most likely to happen and request information on how to prepare for

■ Explain that when people know what to do — and practice in advance — everyone is better able to handle emergencies. That's why we need to create a family disaster plan.

■ Teach children how and when to call for help. Monongalia County is served by MECCA 911 — 7 days a week, 24 hours a day. At home, post emergency telephone numbers by all phones and explain when to call each number.

■ Take a first aid and CPR course. These are critical skills, and learning can be a fun activity for older children. Contact the River Valley Chapter of the American Red Cross at 598-9500 for more informa-

Children are wonderful at adapting to situations when they know what to expect. By creating a family disaster plan, you can help children be ready to deal with emergencies. For more information on disaster preparedness, contact the Monongalia County Office of Emergency Management at 598-0301 or visit our Web site at www.moncooem.org.

Two Martinsburg residents found

Associated Press

MARTINSBURG — Martinsburg Police said two people died in a possible murder-suicide Saturday.

Responding officers and firefighters found the bodies of Jeffrey Michael Webber, 43, and Kimberly Anne Webber, 40, in a bedroom of a Martinsburg residence, police said. Both apparently suffered gunshot wounds to the head. Officers at the scene believed at least one of the wounds was selfinflicted, police said.

Grandma sees slings, arrows at family reunion

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I recently hosted a week-long family reunion for 40 relatives at our lake-side cottage, one family arrived with toys that included slingshots and a bow with rubber-tipped arrows.

To my horror, their 7-year-old son, "Andy," shot an arrow directly into a group of his cousins. I screamed his name, and he stopped and didn't shoot the other arrows. I explained that he could hurt someone and he should never shoot into a crowd, etc. Andy's father was annoyed with me for shouting at his son and kept muttering that a rubber-tipped arrow could never hurt anyone.

The next morning, I saw Andy aim his bow and arrow at another cousin only a few feet away. Horrified, I shouted, "Andy!" and the closest adult removed the bow and arrow from his hands. Andy then started crying and threw himself on his mother's lap, where he sobbed and wailed for one solid hour. Someone told me I had "humiliated" the boy. I was very disturbed and could not understand the parents' nonchalance about the possible danger.

The next morning I apologized to Andy and his parents for "humiliating" him. I explained I was concerned that someone would get hurt. Andy smiled and nodded yes in agreement, that he understood. His mother also smiled at me and gave me a "thumbs up." All appeared to be forgiven and forgotten.

In the middle of the afternoon, Andy's father announced they were leaving, that they couldn't wait to say goodbye to their grandfather, who was hiking with other family members. The family left without saying another word to me.

I have had many sleepless nights since, wondering if I was wrong to object to the child shooting arrows into groups of people. Did I make a mountain out of a molehill? Are rubber-tipped arrows harmless? Although two fathers told me not to let it bother me, I am still a ... VERY CONCERNED GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: I vote with the two fathers who told you not to let it bother you. Andy's parents were, in my opinion, guilty of reckless endangerment for allowing their child to play so irresponsibly with a toy he was not mature enough to handle.

JEANNE PHILLIPS writes "Dear Abby" under the pseudonym Abigail Van Buren.

BRIEFS

The Dominion Post

Boy Scouts fire lights back up, ignites tree

A Boy Scouts ceremony went awry Saturday night after a hollowed-out tree caught fire in the woods at Camp Mountaineer.

"Boy Scouts were up there doing a ceremony ... they thought they had it out; [the fire] came back later and it was on fire," said Capt. Keith Straight, of the Clinton District Volunteer Fire Department.

Straight said he did not know what kind of ceremony they were doing, or which Boy Scouts troop

The tree was located about 200 feet into the woods, he said. A MECCA 911 dispatcher said the call came in at 7:24 p.m. and the fire, located off of Camp Mountaineer Road, was under control by 7:50 p.m. "You could see flames coming out of the tree. It was like a chimney," Straight said.

Firefighters cut down the tree and soaked it and the surrounding area in water.

Accident backs up traffic on Easton Hill

A three-car accident backed up traffic on Easton Hill Road for a short time Saturday, a MECCA 911 dispatcher said.

The call came in at 2:51 p.m., according to MECCA's online

"It was a minor accident. There were two vehicles off the roadway, and one in the roadway. There were no injuries," she said.

Motorcyclist taken to hospital Friday

A motorcyclist was taken to Garrett Memorial Hospital on Friday after wrecking along U.S. 50 in front of Deerwood Service Center, a Preston County 911 dispatcher said.

The Preston County Sheriff's Department investigated, Aurora and Mount Grove volunteer fire departments responded.

Area Wine & Jazz Festival continues today

The Wine & Jazz Festival continues from 12:30-6 p.m

To get there, take Interstate 79 south to Goshen Road exit. Turn left off the exit, go about one mile and bear left onto 4-H Camp Road and follow the signs.

Admission is $15 per day per person. That includes music, a wine glass, a cork screw and, for people age 21 or older, a chance to taste wines.

The Mon River Big Band starts off festivities today at 12:30 p.m., followed by The James Miltenberger Quintet at 2 p.m., The Dan Paul Quartet at 3:30 p.m., and Salsamba at 5 p.m., among others. The West Virginia Wine and Jazz Fest Inc., according to its Web site, is a nonprofit (501C3) organization. Proceeds benefit endowed scholarships to the WVU school of music, and other educational endeavors, free concerts, and sponsorship of student and community organizations that assist with the festival. For info: wvwineandjazz.com.

Company supports Mollohan foundation

EG&G says it's a worthy institution

BY ERIC BOWEN

The Dominion Post

Morgantown-based EG&G Technical Services supports the Robert H. Mollohan Family Charitable Foundation because it's a worthy institution, not because of any expected payback for federal contracts, a company official said last

In 2003, EG&G received a $216,000 subcontract to study possible uses of methane produced as waste gas at a Harrison County landfill. Rep. Alan Mollohan, D-W.Va., appropriated about $270,000 for the project, and EG&G was the prime contractor.

EG&G donated $26,000 to the foundation during the past six years, Vice President Brent Armstrong said Friday. Mollohan serves as the secretary of the foundation, which honors his late father.

Armstrong said EG&G, a division of URS Corp., donated to the Mollohan Foundation because it does important work for the community. EG&G has participated in the organization's internship program for West Virginia students, and often tries to convince top-notch college graduates to stay in state.

"I believe it's a good foundation and ... it really does serve a good cause," Armstrong said. "You have the kids in the state here who are working in the state and hopefully when they graduate they will have a job and stay."

EG&G donated money for the Mollohan Foundation's golf tournament, held annually in September. In 2004, the company paid $10,000 to be a tournament hole sponsor. reduced its donation to $500, the minimum to be admitted to the reception.

Two other companies that donated to the foundation also received money from federal earmarks:

■ Galaxy Global Corp., based in Fairmont, donated $5,000 to the foundation in the same year it received a $517,591 contract from the WVHTC for technology services. WVHTC has a variety of federal contracts and has received about $20 million in earmarked funds from Mollohan.

■ D.N. American Inc., now a subsidiary of Fairmont-based Innovative Management & Technology Services

tion in 2004. In the same year, it was a partner in a $3-million grant earmarked by Mollohan to WVU to study electronics recycling. D.N. American helped expand an Internet exchange for electronics recycling, according to a press release.

Officials at Galaxy Global, and Innovative Management and Technology Services did not return several phone calls.

The Mollohan Foundation raises most of its money during the golf tournament, said foundation spokeswoman Teah Bayless. According to the foundation's IRS returns

Mason-Dixon Festival crowns queen

Winner Stephanie Bird will compete in state pageant

That means Bird will represent the festival at the West Virginia Association of Fairs and Festivals pageant in January, said Jacki Morgan, pageant director.

She will compete against about 70 to 80 other title holders from throughout the state for the state fair queen title. First runner-up was Gabrielle Ash, 17, of Salem, followed by Ashlee Rice, 19, of Morgantown. The Queen of the Monongahela pageant was for ages 16 to 21.

The pageants of the Mason-Dixon Festival represent Regina the Queen of the Monongahela, a fictional character depicted on the Morgantown state seal, Morgan said.

In a special ceremony Florence Merow, festival founder, was honored as Queen Regina Monongahela. She was crowned, and given a scepter and cape.

Other pageant winners:

■ Mason-Dixon Teen Ali Wilson, 14, Blacksville; Bethany Lojewski, 13, Morgantown, first runner-up; and Shannon Virtue, 14, of Morgantown, second runnerup. The competition was for ages 13 to 15.

■ Young Miss Mason-Dixon Tessa Dolan, 10, Kingwood; Alicia Holloway, 10, Morgantown, first runner-up; Kayla

Residents turn out for tasting, music

BY JANET L. METZNER The Dominion Post

Charles Whitehill's vinifera grapes grow well in the rocky shale soil of the drier side of a mountain in Keyser.

Whitehill said he's proud to be the only vintner in the state to grow those particular grapes. "They are the hardest to grow," he said. From them he produces chardonnay, riesling, pinot noir and meritage wines at his Potomac Highland Winery.

His pinot noir and sweet spiced wines sold out Saturday, the first day of the 20th annual West Virginia Wine & Jazz Festival. But he has six more varieties to sell today as the festival continues.

Potomac Highland was among the eight West Virginia wineries offering samples to taste, and bottles of wine for sale from tents surrounding the festival grounds at Camp Muffly.

They were joined by six restaurants from Monongalia County,

Newspaper seeks Preston students

THE DOMINION POST is looking for articulate Preston County students, elementary, middle and high school age, to talk about their schools before the proposed Preston County school levy. They will take a reporter and photographer on a tour of their school and talk about what they would like to see done. Students must have their parents' permission to participate.

To apply, call Kathy Plum at 329-1406, or send an explanation of why you should be selected to kingwood@dominionpost.com or by fax to 329-3001.

Impressive prosecution

Preston Assistant Prosecutor William Means was one of three prosecutors chosen to represent the state in August at a soutneast ern regional United States seminar discussing coordinated community responses to domestic violence. All his expenses at the Memphis, Tenn., seminar were paid by the Rape and Domestic Violence Information Center.

Part of Means' salary is paid through a STOP Violence Against Women Act grant. The funds support the prosecution of cases involving violence against women.

The grant had been $22,000, but this year was upped to $25,000. And two weeks ago, the Preston prosecutor's office was given an additional $4,000.

'Bill has done a very good job with these cases," said Preston Prosecuting Attorney Melvin C. Snyder III, explaining Means' selection for the seminar and the grant increases.

Making adequate progress

West Preston Middle School will be celebrating making Adequate Yearly Progress from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the West Preston Football Field. All West Preston students and Preston High freshmen from West Preston (last year's eighth-graders) and their families are invited.

Adequate Yearly Progress means that standardized testing and attendance for the 2005-2006 school year met state and federal No Child Left Behind standards. In addition, many school improvements were done during the summer, thanks to many volunteers' hard work.

Game transport

Kingwood Parks and Recreation, and Mountaineer Country Tours are sponsoring a bus trip to the WVU-Pitt game Nov. 16. The bus will leave the Craig Civic Center at 2 p.m. the day of the game and return between midnight and 3 a.m.

The cost is $100 per person, which includes round-trip bus fare, a ticket into the game and tailgating space. Coolers and folding chairs can be stored under the bus, but no alcohol can be consumed on the bus. Call 329-0856 or

A number of Preston High teachers and administrators attended the FBI National Academy Associates Crimes Against Children seminar in August.

PHS parents alert

All juniors and their parents are invited to the school library from 5:30-6:30 p.m. Thursday to discuss some items of interest.

The agenda includes WESTEST and writing-assessment results, PSAT testing, new requirements for the PROMISE scholarship, ACT testing and preparing for financial aid. Representatives from local colleges and universities will be on hand to answer questions.

End quote

"Without their assistance, these things would not have been completed as soon or in some cases in the foreseeable future," Preston Schools Superintendent John Lofink, praising parents and volunteers for their work at Central Preston Middle, West Preston Middle and Kingwood Elementary schools. The volunteers' names were read into the official minutes of the school board.

filed with the West Virginia secretary of state, 43 donors gave almost $450,000 to the foundation

Bayless said companies and individuals donate to the organization for a variety of reasons. She said many companies are part of the internship program, and that is a good indication of the support they have for the program.

Bayless said she does not think that companies donate to get access to Mollohan, or the foundation.

"I would like to think they believe in the mission of what we're trying to do and they see the value," Bayless said. "They don't get anything from me, or the Mollohan foundation, except that they helped out and made a difference in these young people's lives."

The Robert H. Mollohan Family Foundation was founded in 2000 in honor of the late Robert H. Mollohan, who served in Congress for 14 years until his son, Alan Mollohan, won the seat in 1982.

Bayless said the foundation provides scholarships for students in the math and science fields. The foundation also runs an internship program that gives students in high school a chance to work at local technology companies.

Students can also apply for a forgivable loan that allows students to borrow up to $2,000 a year. The student then promises to work in the state for a year for each year of funding to have the loan for-

Groups of festival-goers sat in folding chairs under trees and in front of the stage, drinking wine and visiting.

"The crowd is large, but also polite, well-behaved people having a good time," said Eric Deal, co-owner of Forks of Cheat Winery, and a member of the festival board of direc-

Allen Reynolds, of Owen Hollow near Shinnston, and Paula Musick, of Buckhannon, attended for the second year in a row.

"It's just really mellow," Reynolds said. "It's really relaxing. We just sit in our little chairs listening to the music and sipping the wine. The alcohol brings a lot of smiles.

Reynolds took home 20 bottles of wine. Their group of four friends bought a total of 30, Musick said, including her favorite, West Virginia raspberry.

Their advice? Bring a folding chair.

"This year I had an amazing group of young ladies and the judges really had their work cut out for them," Morgan said.

"They could have drawn names out of a hat, and had a wonderful representative."

The 2005 queens, or pageant winners, worked at the Rosenbaum Family House, at WVU Health Sciences Center, and provided a meal and talent show there, Morgan said.

They worked with the United Way and made 100 birthday bags for the needy, and worked with Dea Simpson at the Miss Ability Pageant, a pageant for mentally and physically handicapped young ladies.

Preparation, proper nutrition important in selling calves

COOLER TEMPERATURES and slow-

growing pasture is a sure sign that the calves born this past spring are getting big enough to be sold. Many W.Va. cattle producers leave their calves with mom until it is almost time to ship them. Although this method requires minimum input from the calf producer, many buyers are now requesting weaned calves that have been "backgrounded" on dry feed and have received proper vaccinations.

Dr. John B. Hall, extension animal scientist, beef, Virginia Tech, explains that calves that have been weaned at least a month prior to the ship date and have received vaccinations as part of a comprehensive herd-health program perform better in feedlots. Feedlot owners remember where their calves come from, and will pay a premium for calves that have the best chances of performing well.

Whether you wean calves on your own farm or at a custom backgrounder, managing calves prior to weaning is crucial for healthy calves that gain weight during the weaning period. Early September is the right time to ensure your calves are ready for weaning in October or November. Preparations include maximizing calf health and nutrition, and inspecting and repairing facilities. For calves to respond to a health program or withstand the stress of weaning, they must have proper nutrition. The most important aspect is that calves continue to gain weight. Often in August and early September, limited amount of forage that is poor in quality severely reduces calf gains. If good-quality grazing or hay is available, calves should be allowed access to it either with their dams or by creep grazing. If forage isn't available, then 3 to 5 pounds of a fiber-based energy supplement like soy hulls or wheat midds are good choices.

After a solid nutrition program, proper stimulation of the animal's immune system is essential for minimizing health problems during weaning. Modified-live vaccines provide the greatest level of immunity, but MLV bovine viral diarrhea and IBR are not recommended for calves suckling pregnant cows. Several MLV products are approved for use on calves suckling pregnant cows if the cows were vaccinated pre-breeding with the same product. You should contact your veterinarian for assistance in choosing the right type of vaccine for your situation.

Timing of vaccination is crucial. If vaccinations require a booster, they should be given so the second (booster) injection is given 14 to 21 days before weaning. Regardless of type of vaccine, the last dose should be given no later than 14 days before weaning. This will have calves at the maximum antibody levels at weaning. Remember to use clean, sharp needles and give all injections in the neck. Also keep vaccines cool and out of sunlight.

Well-maintained facilities will not only make weaning easier on producers, but will reduce stress on the calves. Corral fences should be sturdy and 5 feet high. Working chutes should allow calves to flow through the system easily and be worked quickly. Repair corrals well ahead of weaning or working cattle. Early repairs will avoid "make do" patches that usually result in injuries to cattle and people.

Calves should be exposed to water troughs or commercial waterers and feed troughs before weaning. Making a water trough the only source of water for cow-calf pairs for two to three weeks before weaning will accustom calves to drinking out of sources other than a pond or creek.

A limited amount of grain (2 pounds/animal/day) in a trough on pasture will get calves used to eating out of a bunk. If calves are fed alone, two feet of bunk space should be provided for each animal. If they are fed with their dams, then at least three feet of bunk space should be provided per animal.

Start your pre-weaning program this month.

Upcoming events

SENIOR NEWS

■7-11 a.m. Saturdays and 3-7 p.m. Tuesdays: Kingwood Farmers Market, 106 West Main St., Kingwood.

■ Preston County Buckwheat Festival, Sept. 28-Oct. 1. Market animal shows for junior exhibitors begin Sept. 27.

Garden tips

■ Check coniferous trees for tip damage on new growth. If the tips have been mutilated by borers or otherwise damaged, remove them and establish a new leader by forcing a new side shoot into an upright position.

■ Onions are nearly ripe when the tips of the leaves turn yellow. Break them at the necks. This will speed the final ripening process. Loosen the soil to encourage drying, and after a few days turn them up and let them cure on dry ground. Always handle them very carefully — the slightest bruise will encourage rot to set in.

Enrich your life through volunteerism

Service-learning opportunities

Through the WVU Center for Civic Engagement, students can get relevant, real-world experience in their field and earn college credit while making a difference in the community.

The Center for Civic Engagement works to prepare students for the real world through organizing service-learning and volunteer opportunities that give students experience in their chosen field. Whether it is biology, journalism, engineering or foreign languages, the CCE can find the right place for every student, faculty or staff member who wants to participate.

In addition to creating volunteer and service-learning opportunities, the CCE makes contact and forms relationships with all kinds of nonprofit organizations and small businesses that need volunteers. The CCE also works with academic units to develop service-learning curricula so that students can earn college credits for their work.

Those interested in volunteering can choose from a wide array of opportunities, such as the Mountaineer Boys and Girls Club, BOPARC, Morgantown Hospice, the Morgantown Theater Company, Scott's Run Settlement House and Caritas, just to name a few.

The CCE also offers an innovative study-abroad opportunity through a partnership with the WVU Office of International Programs. The Amizade Global Service Learning and Volunteer Program allows students to earn college credit while studying abroad in a service-learning program in countries such as Poland and Germany. Unfortunately, many students overlook the importance of community involvement and don't realize the positive impact it can have on their college careers. The CCE makes it easy for students to get involved in serving their community, whether they can give an hour a week or 20 hours a week. Community involvement is surely an experience that no college student should miss out on.

It's been 11 long years since the WVU band has received new uniforms, and those garments were only anticipated to be around for eight. That's what spurred the Band Aid fundraising drive.

The Friends of Coal and United Bank were both corporate sponsors in the effort to raise money for new band uniforms. The drive kicked off June 16.

WVU head football coach Rich Rodriguez and his wife, Rita, set off the drive, pledging the $500 that was needed for a single uniform.

The goal was to reach $250,000 for the purchase of 400 new uniforms. To this date, the Band Aid drive has exceeded the goal, said Sarah Gibson, for the WVU Foundation.

Donors to the fundraising effort are said to receive different perks depending on what they contributed. Even if a person contributed $1, he or she would receive a car decal, according to the band's Web site.

Although band members took great care of the uniforms, Marching Band Director Jay Drury said the old ones were just too worn out. So, he and Director of Bands John Hendricks began discussing the details.

"Unfortunately the uniforms are very expensive so it takes a major fundraising effort to obtain the money for a new set," Drury said.

The new uniforms have a more modern look, with some of the details changed and some others simply updated.

tion of the long cape with the "Flying WV" on the back, Drury said.

In addition to individuals and companies, the College of Human Resources and Education decided to help with the drive. The WVU Nursery School showed their pint-sized pride by marching through Towers and floors in Allen Hall, said Bobbie Warash, director of the Child Development Laboratory.

"It was fun to have the Mountaineer, a band member, parents and the student chapter of the WVAYC and children marching to the music of 'Country Roads,' " she said.

Warash said that the 3- and 4year-olds raised more than $1,000, enough to buy two uniforms. The band debuted its new attire at the WVU versus Marshall game. Anne Hochendoner, a member of the band, said the crowd reacted positively to the new uniforms.

"We are very proud of our band, our university and our state," Drury said, "and we are very happy to have these new uniforms to help us represent the university and the state in the best possible manner.'

Work-study program offers flexible job option for students

FOR MORE information about the work-study program, go to finaid.wvu.edu.

BY WILLIAM JARRETT For The Dominion Post

Looking for work as a college student can often be tough with long hours required to get a decent paycheck. There is an option though for students that can give them flexibility around classes and their social lives.

Federal work-study is available at WVU for students who need money during their college semesters, but many times, students aren't aware of this option.

Steve Riffon, assistant director of WVU Financial Aid, said to get work-study, students need to fill out the Free Application For Student Aid form and send it out before the deadline, which is March 1 every

"Even with the form sent in on time, there would be a slight chance you can't get the work-study as part of your financial aid. Almost like a 'first come, first served' basis with the program," said Michelle Cowell, work-study coordinator for WVU Financial Aid.

Work-study can be accepted online on the WVU Star Registration Web site under the student's financial aid account and can be collected at the financial aid office. Students can then get an authorization formed signed.

Students who get work-study will be assigned to a work-study job. Often, the job will relate to their desired major, but that may not always be the case.

WVU journalism student Andrew Tate, for example, works at the WVU Math Library, in Armstrong Hall. Tate said even with the job not relating to his major, it does benefit him in other ways.

"If I have a math problem or an assignment in one of my math classes that will require me to come here, then I will already know my way around the place," Tate said.

Bryce Post, who is also a WVU journalism student, has been working at the Perley Isaac Reed School of Journalism as part of his workstudy. Post said working in the school gives him the chance to work with the professors and get to know the staff both in and outside the classrooms.

Besides the assigned job, students will be paid $5.85 per hour along with working up to 20 hours per week.

The program also allows students to change their job after a semester if they choose to work elsewhere. The choice of where to work varies from working on the main campus in one of the departments to working off campus at a nonprofit organization, such as Christian Help Inc. or Ronald McDonald House.

"Students who want to work at the nonprofit organizations get some experience in doing community service as well, which are some requirements for some majors," Cowell said.

Vs. guys, girl a wee bit out of her league

I DON'T MIND TELLING YOU, I'm mad this morning. Really mad. Seething mad.

See, I got stood up Saturday. That's right, everything was set. And man, let me tell you, she was a looker. Tall and beautiful, young and rich.

Everything a man could want. She was even boasting of having a scratch golf game, although those who saw her Thursday and Friday had a little trouble believing that.

I was going to meet her up in Farmington, Pa., at that glitzy, ritzy resort called Nemacolin Woodlands. She was hoping to have an early tee time Saturday and I was meeting her after she finished her round.

Only she never started her round. I called, tried to find her.

"No, sir," they said at the pro shop, when asked about her early tee time. "We don't show any tee time on Saturday for a Michelle Wie. Besides, the course has been reserved for a group of ... ahem ... men golfers for the weekend."

I called the desk at the Falling Rock resort hotel where my Michelle was staying.

"Hey, will ya ring Ms. Wie's room?" I said to the desk clerk who answered.

"I'm sorry, sir. She checked out and has left for Hawaii," he answered

"Why Hawaii?" I asked. "She said something about having high school classes on Monday," he answered.

Dejected, I looked at a newspaper. There it was in black and Scratch golfer? Yeah, sure. She missed the cut by 13 shots, was 23 shots behind the leader. Forget winning on the PGA Tour. She plays like that, she'd have trouble winning at a memberguest tournament at The Pines.

I've got to admit, I'm getting tired of this Michelle Wie charade.

It's not because she can't beat the men. It's because she shouldn't be playing against the men.

I'm going to guarantee something here. You take her golf game, put it into the body of a 27year-old pudgy 5-foot, 4-inch average-looking golfer and she couldn't get into a PGA Tournament without a ticket.

This isn't Chris Evert and Tracy Austin. This isn't Freddie Adu. This is a story made not for Golf Magazine but for Vogue. It's about looking good instead of playing good. It's about marketing and television and sponsorships.

And it's about a father who is guiding his daughter down a very wrong path for a very wrong reason. Money is nice, self-esteem and accomplishments are just as nice.

Defeat after crushing defeat can do nothing for one's confidence, especially when she hasn't exactly been a dominant performer within her own gender, still winless on the LPGA Tour.

I ask this question: Can anyone remember the last golf tournament Michelle Wie won?

The last I can find is the 2003 U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links Championship. She was 13 and that's a long time between loving cups.

Now it's true most 16-year-old girls do enjoy being around bovs. but I'm guessing Vijay Singh and John Daly aren't the kind of boys most 16-year-olds are looking for.

When Annika Sorenstram took on the men — and failed — at least she was the dominant player in women's golf. Her crossover was at least a noble experiment, not daddy's vicarious effort to obtain a green jacket.

And so it is that today I feel jilted, but can and will forgive. I just hope that one of those classes my Michelle takes in high school upon returning to Hawaii is golf.

Polar Bears heat up

Kelly, Allard pace 49-14 rout of Preston

BY JUSTIN JACKSON

FAIRMONT — It appears the slow start to Fairmont Senior's football season has come to an end.

The Polar Bears were one of the most-talked about teams in the preseason but that cooled off after losses to Robert C. Byrd and Morgantown High.

Maybe it's time to start talking again, because Fairmont Senior was hitting on all cylinders Saturday night in a 49-14 victory against Preston, at East-West Stadium.

Bears (2-2) missed on was a 38-yard field goal attempt near the end of the first half. Making it worse, Fairmont Senior coach J.L. Abbott called a timeout to get a better ball into the game.

While that move didn't work, everything else did for Fairmont Senior, as the Polar Bears scored on their first six possessions of the game on their way to a 42-0 halftime lead.

The Polar Bears' team speed was the difference. Preston defend-lineman for virtually all of his life, Brad Palmer admits he never envisioned scoring a touchdown. Doesn't happen for the big guys very often.

The thought never changed when he began playing tight end for WVU. Doesn't happen for those guys very often,

It did Thursday night in the 45-21 vicory against Maryland

Palmer finally got his hands on the ball and, appropriately enough, it was in a most unusual way for a senior who began as a defensive lineman and started for a time at fullback for the Mountaineers.

Lining up on the right side at the Maryland 2-vard line in the first quarter. Palmer blocked as Steve Slaton sneaked by before fumbling into the back of the end zone. Palmer pounced on the ball and established possession before sliding out of bounds.

A player with no catches and no carries in his career had scored a touchdown.

"Right place," he said, "right time. It's a place so many people would give practically anything to be, in the end zone with the ball, fans screaming, stadium shaking, heart racing. Palmer struggled to explain the moment, other than to say the obvious and assure everyone it felt great.

Who didn't know that, though? Who hasn't watched something Steve Slaton or Boo McLee has done and wondered exactly how it felt?

And who hasn't struggled to capture that feeling?

Fortunately, even on this weekend of rest for the Mountaineers, they are here to dispense the indispensible, to explain the inexplicable, to describe what it's like to ...

... break a long touchdown run Steve Slaton

You just try to read defenses, see where guys are playing. If you see a touchdown, you want to get there as fast as you can. It's something I love doing. I want to keep doing it until I can't do it any more. I don't pay attention to the crowd. You see the end zone and go. That's when it kicks in. It's the best feeling in the world.

Brohm threw for 181 yards and a touchdown to lead the 12th-ranked Cardinals to a dominating 31-7 victory against No. 17 Miami on Saturday, before leaving the game.

Backup quarterback Hunter Cantwell finished off the Hurricanes, who are 1-2 for the first time since 1997. Cantwell threw for 113 yards and a touchdown after Brohm went out with sprained ligaments in his right (throwing) hand. He will miss three to six weeks and return Nov. 2, against West Virginia.

The Cardinals had already lost one Heisman Trophy contender for the season. Running back Michael Bush broke his leg in the opener.

But the injuries didn't keep the Cardinals from getting the signature win they've been searching for under coach Bobby Petrino.

Kolby Smith, one of a committee of backs replacing Bush, ran for two touchdowns as Louisville (3-0) beat a ranked opponent from a Bowl Championship Series conference for the first time since 2002.

Christopher wins Combo in a runaway

MHS girls champions at Mountaintop meet

CROSS COUNTRY

BY MARK SCHRAF

The Dominion Post

KINGWOOD — When all 116 girls' cross country runners from 17 high schools lined up, ready for the starter's pistol to fire at the 2006 Mountaintop Combo Invitational at Preston High, there was one question on nearly everyone's mind.

Would the real Kaylyn Christopher be running?

Not the one who had been hampered by illness for most of this cross country season, who had run only a few races, who hadn't yet tried for a win in the state.

Well, 19:19 after a loud BANG, the question was answered.

She's ba-ack!

The senior from Preston defeated University's Amber Riley by almost a half a minute in front of an enthusiastic home crowd for her first win of the season, and Christopher's reaction to her performance wasn't a surprise, either. "I'm tired," she said with a laugh.

"I'm used to running this course, obviously, but I sure don't like those hills. They really wear on you. I wasn't running for time, just running my race. It was great to win in front of everyone from Preston who came out because they support area runners.'

Riley held the lead after both the first and second mile markers, but as the leaders came into view a half mile from the finish, Christopher had opened a significant gap that she maintained to the tape.

"I stayed with Amber for the first 2 miles," Christopher explained. "Then I felt good, so I decided to Morgantown won the girls' team championship, as the top five Mohigans placed in the top 21 spots. Preston finished third, just ahead of University, while North Marion was seventh.

In the boys' race, Wheeling Park junior Ryan Beabout and Cabell Midland junior David Bias ran together for the first mile, then Beabout took control and won by 23 seconds with a time of 16:45. Preston's Josh Feather finished fifth, a minute behind the leader.

Wheeling Park took the boys' overall championship. University was second, Preston fourth and Morgantown seventh out of 17 schools.

'The course was hard, very hilly, but it was fast," Beabout said. "I've had a lot of success so far this year, and I felt I had a chance to win, and "This is a big race," he said, commenting on the Mountaintop Combo, "It's halfway into the season, and it really gives you an idea of where you stand, and how you'll do at states.

Christopher has her eye on the state meet as well, but being out so long with anemia has given her a different set of goals for now. "I'm not really looking to states

yet. I just want to take it one race at a time," she said. "My iron level was low, and I could feel it. It took its toll on my body. But I've got it under control now. I'm feeling much better, much stronger now.'

For the rest of the girls in the state, it looks like winning a distance race this season may have gotten a whole lot tougher.

Turning Tip

ual flexibility and so your shoulder turn should not be judged by the amount of rotation you have, but rather by the position of the

backswing is all that really mat-

over the left foot at address and needs to move down and back, so that it is almost over the right

matter how much turn

When receivers block, the WVU offense can roll

OF ALL THE THINGS Rich Rodriguez could have touched upon when asked about the performance of Darius Reynaud on Thursday night, WVU's football coach decided to take this road:

"He's an explosive player who's always been a good player with the ball, but now he's becoming a better player without the ball," he said.

Odd choice, especially after witnessing what Reynaud did with the ball against Maryland, catching a 5-yard touchdown pass and returning a kickoff 96 yards for another score.

Does it mean he's running great routes? Certainly, but that was not the intended target of Rodriguez's praise.

No offense to Reynaud, but Darius Rucker would have been open on the same touchdown reception because the Mountaineers are almost indefensible when quarterback Patrick White is rolling out to his left with blockers in front and only a little bit of space remaining before the green turf turns blue in the end zone.

Maybe, then, Reynaud is better at readying himself to catch the ball — or not, as a national audience observed the simple botch on the kickoff that turned surreal when Reynaud recovered and raced past everyone for his second score.

Really, all that's left is lining up properly for each play, which Reynaud did and which was no small achievement for the Mountaineers, who drew a couple of flags for illegal formations on offense and setting up offside on defense.

We're missing the obvious, though. "He's become a much better perimeter blocker," Rodriguez

No second opinion can be provided because Maryland's David Holloway was unavailable for comment after the game. He was still searching for his legs after being cut off at the waist by Reynaud on Steve Slaton's first firstquarter touchdown run.

Seemingly all of WVU's receivers made a liberating block during the victory — and it seemed like all of them did their part on just one play, Slaton's second first-quarter score.

In all, there was Reynaud's razor, a series of big hits by Rayshawn Bolden, some artful maneuvering by Jeremy Bruce and Brandon Myles and a doubleeraser by Tito Gonzales.

Gonzales, who was once warned he might not have what it takes to play at this level, plays now because he's learned to block.

Wes Lyons, a true freshman, plays because he's learned to leverage his 6-foot-8 frame against defenders. Carmen Connolly, a redshirt freshman, is going to get more and more looks because of the way he blocked in the meaningless monotony of the second half against Eastern Washington.

If WVU's spread offense is designed to create space by extending the defense so it has to monitor the entire field, it's also designed for the offense to maintain those scripted spaces with precise blocking.

When you run nearly 80 percent of the time, you need the receivers to do more than take up space. You need them to take up defenders because you need more than five offensive linemen on every snap when the defense can usually guess "run" and guess right.

So these receivers block and when it's working, the offense is rolling and everyone wants to get a piece of the action. That's when White is flagged for a personal foul when carrying a block 5 yards ahead of the play and another 5 yards out of bounds.

"Actually, he was doing a good job blocking his guy," Rodriguez said, "but I guess he got caught up in it and the momentum kept him going."

Rodriguez was critical following the victory against Marshall, suggesting Slaton finished with just 203 yards because the perimeter was not protected as well as it could have been and Slaton was forced to stay inside.

The point was made that blocking matters. It mattered most against Maryland. The offensive line got Slaton and White to the second level, typically with ease, while the receivers enabled nearly everything after.

"I think it was the best one so far this year as far as total grades," Rodriguez said. "We do a stat with receivers called what percentage they got their man on that play blocked. This game was better than the past two.'

HOW DOES IT

Brandon Myles

As a receiver, going over the middle is mostly concentrating on the ball. The part about getting hit is up to you and your toughness. It's about hanging onto the ball or not. When I caught the ball, I saw the defender. When I caught it and looked, I knew it was a touchdown and I knew the guy was right there. I reacted to it and held on. It feels great to score a touchdown when you get hit hard like that. I think that's big.

Jason DeProspero/The Dominion Post photos

... return a punt for a touchdown Antonio Lewis

It happens so fast. It's like two waves — the bullets and the center. You get them out of the way and then it looks good.

If they come flying down there standing straight up, it's hard for them to stop all that body weight. You just lean one way and they're out of there. If you see a hole, it isn't going to be there but a second. You just want to be there before it closes. The end zone looks far away, but all those techniques and all that summer training kicks in. If you're tired after you've made a few moves, once you get outside you get your wind right back. It's a good feeling.

... pancake a defender

Dan Mozes You come off the ball harder than the other guy and get your helmet under his helmet, get lower than him and bring the punch and everything with it. You feel him rock back and fall back on his heels and try to get off your block. Finally, you're on top of him and it's over. Whether it's a successful play or unsuccessful play, you know you did your part. I usually lay on top of him just to get a little extra energy out of him trying to get me off of him. You can feel the discouragement they have laying on the ground.

... bulldoze a defender Owen Schmitt

It'd probably be an isolation play or a lead zone play. You start before the snap. You know the guy you have to get to, but you don't look at him before the snap. You look forward. You don't want to give him a hint where the play is going, so you just look straight ahead. Then you run at him and hope you get your helmet under his chin, punch your hands through, get a wide base and drive with your legs. During the play, it's kind of a blur. After the play, you can hear the crowd. Hopefully, they're cheering for you.

... kick a long field goal

You start out on the sideline wondering if you're going to get to kick it or not if you get stopped. Then when you hear them call you, you jog out on the field nice and slow, a relaxed jog. I find a spot with Travis McClintic, my holder, and we usually say something, like, "Let's have a good hold." Then I go back and take my steps and Travis asks if I'm ready. I tell him I'm good to go and the snap comes back. I keep my head down all the way through the ball, like a golf shot, and hope it goes through the uprights. When it does, it's a feeling of accomplishment, like you did your job. It's what you're supposed to do.

... kick a touchback Pat McAfee

First you get the ball from the referee and he usually tries to make a smart comment to make me laugh, like, "Keep your guys onside." You get the ball and put it on the tee and go back and break the huddle with the kickoff team. I try to make them laugh, throw a little joke in there. If we're at home, I listen to the keys jingle, then I take a few steps back and wait for the whistle to blow and see if the kickoff team is ready. Then I make the approach and kick the ball and hope it sails out of the end zone. Whenever you see someone not even try to catch it, that's probably the best feeling a kicker can have. When the guy standing on the goal line watches it go over his head, it's a great feeling, almost like a walk-off home run.

Wolverines crush Irish

Henne: 3 TDs; Brady: 3 picks

TOP 25

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Take that, Notre Dame.

No. 11 Michigan finally put a Big Blue bruising on the second-ranked Fighting Irish in a 47-21 rout Saturday — the most points scored against Notre Dame at home in 46 years.

Chad Henne threw three touchdown passes to Mario Manningham, and the Wolverines intercepted Brady Quinn three times and shut down the rest of the Irish offense. Prescott Burgess intercepted game to set the tone. The Wolverines were ahead 26-7 before the Irish had their initial first down. The Wolverines (3-0) ended a

Quinn on the second play of the two-game losing streak to Notre Dame (2-1).

It was a huge win for Michigan coach Lloyd Carr, who had been under fire for failing to win big games the past two seasons twice in bowl games, and twice each to Notre Dame and Ohio State. Carr, though, improved to 4-1 against No. 2 teams and 16-6 against Top 10 teams.

For Notre Dame, the loss was another setback on its road to restore its storied program. In 2000, there was a 41-9 loss to Oregon State in the Fiesta Bowl when the Irish were No. 10; three years ago it was a 38-0 loss to Michigan; and last year it was a 34-20 loss to Ohio State in the Fiesta Bowl when the Irish were ranked No. 4.

The Wolverines jumped on Notre Dame mistakes, including a pass that sailed through the hands of tight end John Carlson to Burgess. who returned it 31 yards for a touchdown. Then Manningham was left open for a 69-yard touchdown catch and David Grimes fumbled a kickoff return that set up a 2-yard TD run by Mike Hart, who finished with 124 yards on 31 carries.

(3) Auburn 7, (6) LSU 3

AUBURN, Ala. — Eric Brock deflected a pass near the goal line to stop one late drive and then made a game-saving tackle on the final play to preserve Auburn's (3-0, 2-0) win against LSU (2-1, 0-1).

(10) Georgia 34, UAB 0

ATHENS, Ga. — Freshman Matthew Stafford scored his first touchdown in a winning debut as Georgia's starting quarterback and the Bulldogs (3-0) put up their second straight shutout, blanking UAB (1-2).

(14) Va. Tech 36, Duke 0

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Sean Glennon and Virginia Tech's (3-0) offense started slow again, but the Hokies' fly-to-the-ball defense was again more than capable of shouldering the load, holding Duke (0-3) to 139 total yards.

Grothe accounted for 375 of South

(16) Iowa 27, Iowa State 17

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Drew Tate threw for 274 yards and three touchdowns and Iowa (3-0) rallied from a 14-3 deficit to beat in-state rival Iowa State (2-1).

(18) Oregon 34 (15) Oklahoma 33

EUGENE, Ore. — Dennis Dixon and Oregon (3-0) rallied for two touchdowns in the final 72 seconds — with help from a disputed onside kick — and the Ducks blocked a field goal attempt on the final play to seal a victory against Oklahoma (2-1).

Dixon's 16-yard keeper with 1:12 left brought the Ducks to 33-27 and set up the onside kick attempt.

The Ducks recovered the kick on their own 48, but Oklahoma argued an Oregon player touched the ball before it went the required 10 yards, which would have given the Sooners possession. Officials delayed play for an instant replay review, but the call stood and Dixon went to work.

After a pass interference call on Oklahoma, Dixon threw a 23yard TD pass to Brian Paysinger with 46 seconds to give Oregon the lead. Oklahoma wasn't done, though, as Reggie Smith returned a squib kick 55 yards to the Ducks' 27.

With no timeouts the Sooners ran one play, a run into the line by Adrian Peterson, then spiked the ball with a second left. Garrett Hartley's 44-yard field-goal attempt wasn't high enough to clear the line and the Ducks celebrated.

(23) Boston College 30, BYU 23

BOSTON — Matt Ryan threw a touchdown pass to Tony Gonzalez on the first play of the second overtime, then Boston College (3-0) waited for a replay review to verify Jamie Silva's game-ending interception and the Eagles escaped with a victory against BYU (1-2).

(25) Penn State 37 Youngstown State 3

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Tony Hunt ran for 143 yards and a touchdown, A.J. Wallace scored on a 76-yard reverse and Penn State (2-1) bullied Division I-AA Youngstown State.

Kansas State 23, Marshall 7

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Kansas State's defense forced three turnovers, and the Wildcats' (3-0) offense found its groove late in a victory against Marshall (1-2). The Herd scored its TD on James Johnson's 17-yard return of a blocked punt.

BIG EAST

worst road loss in three years. Miami quarterback Kyle Wright threw for 278 yards, but spent most of the second half running from a fierce Louisville pass rush that sacked him several times and harassed him countless others.

(1) Ohio State 37 Cincinnati 7

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Troy Smith and Ted Ginn Jr. hooked up on two touchdown passes and Ohio State (3-0) rolled past Cincinnati (1-2).

The Buckeyes' defense held the Bearcats to minus-4 yards rushing on 22 attempts and collected eight sacks for minus 59 yards.

Michigan State 38 Pittsburgh 23

PITTSBURGH — Pitt (2-1) took a 10-0 lead, then watched Michigan State (3-0) score 38 straight points before adding a pair of too-little, too-late touchdowns. Spartans quarterback Drew Stanton, who finished 16-of-25 for 198 yards and two touchdowns, led scoring drives of 75, 64, 83 and 99 yards in the second half, the final one featuring a 71-yard misdirection run by Javon Ringer.

Rutgers 24, Ohio U. 7

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Ray Rice rushed for 190 yards and two touchdowns to lead Rutgers (3-0) past Ohio (2-1). Rutgers is 3-0 for the first time since 1981. Ohio scored first with a 1-yard touchdown pass 4:37 into the game, marking the first time this season Rutgers trailed its opponent.

USF 24, Central Fla. 17

ORLANDO, Fla. - Matt Grothe threw a 27-yard touchdown pass to Ean Randolph with 3:27 left in the fourth quarter to lift South Florida (3-0) past Central Florida (1-2).

The Golden Knights had a chance to tie with 30 seconds left, but their 70-yard drive ended when Chris Robinson sacked Steven Moffett, forcing a fumble the Bulls recovFlorida's 433 total yards.

Wake Forest 24, UConn 13

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. — Defensive end Jeremy Thompson took a first-quarter interception 86 yards for a touchdown as Wake Forest beat Connecticut (1-1) to earn its first 3-0 start since 1987.

Connecticut outgained Wake Forest 324 yards to 209, but was hurt not only by the interception but a missed extra point attempt and a missed 28-yard field goal attempt.

Syracuse 31, Illinois 21 CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Junior

receiver Taj Smith, making his first start, picked up a dropped ball and ran 41 yards for a touchdown and scored again on a 65-yard pass as the Orange ended an 11-game losing streak by beating Illinois (1-2).

The Orange led 31-7 after three

Illinois (1-2) hurt itself with 12 penalties for 106 yards.

New Hampshire race should set the tone for rest of the Chase

NASCAR

Associated Press

LOUDON, N.H. — Call it the calm before the storm, that quiet time before the Chase for the championship officially begins and NASCAR's 10 title contenders are one big happy group — best friends forever. Those 10 drivers are fresh off a festive swing through New York City, where their status as Nextel Cup contenders was feted everywhere they turned. They sat together on shuttle buses, shared strategies over a steak dinner and laughed as a group during their appearance with David Letterman.

"It's the calmest, nicest I've ever seen these guys," Kasey Kahne revealed. "It was weird. We had a good time in New York and everyone was calm and happy. This weekend could explode. Who knows?"

It's a good bet that it will by the time the checkered flag falls for today's race at New Hampshire International Speedway. In the first two years of NASCAR's championship-crowning creation, Round 1 of the Chase has collected its share of contenders.

Tony Stewart, Ryan Newman and Jeremy Mayfield all had their title hopes crushed when they were collateral damage in Robby Gordon and Greg Biffle's bumper-car battle in 2004. None recovered enough to challenge Kurt Busch, who went on to win the race and ultimately the championship.

But Busch wasn't immune from the wreckage last season. Contact with Scott Riggs on the second lap of this race sent him spinning into the wall and to a 35th-place finish. It put him in a deep hole he could never climb out of, ruining his chances of defending his title.

So anything can happen today, when the top 10 jockey for position on New Hampshire's flat 1.058-mile oval. They'll be ever mindful of the 33 drivers racing around them who aren't eligible for the Nextel Cup title and don't really care what influence they have on the championship chase.

"This is a little bit like a short track because it's not an easy place to pass, so you'll see some bumping and banging and things happen," said Jeff Gordon, who is searching for his first title under the Chase format. "You've got guys who are battling for a championship. You've got guys that are trying to get themselves back into that form where they need to be to win races. You've got guvs in the back of the pack trying to get into the top 35 in points, as well as guys trying to get to 11th.

"So there are several different races going on. It's not just 10 guys out there racing. Any time you have that, you can have some craziness.'

It could come right off the bat, as several non-Chase drivers appear capable of winning today. Although Kevin Harvick, third in the Chase standings, won the pole and paced both of Saturday's practice sessions, he'll have plenty of competition from drivers not racing for the title.

Busch and Stewart both ran with the leaders Saturday, as did rookie Reed Sorenson, who has a crew chief unafraid of gambling in pursuit of an elusive first victory. And because of the tight confines of the track, passing will be at a premium and tempers could flare as drivers are held up by slower cars.

"It is an emotional race track because it is so difficult to pass,' Chase driver Jeff Burton said.

Curtis, Howell share 84 lead

Leaderboard crowded for the last round

Associated Press

FARMINGTON, Pa. — Don't let the colors fool you. Ben Curtis may be wearing Steelers black and gold this weekend — something he probably can't believe he's doing—but he's the biggest of Cleveland Browns fans.

Maybe that's why winning the 84 Lumber Classic would be extra special for Curtis, even though he's already won this year on the PGA Tour. After all, he can do something the Browns rarely do by winning in Steelers country.

Curtis, trying to win a lameduck tournament for the second time this summer, played his third consecutive excellent round Saturday on a day the leaderboard never stayed the same for five minutes to share the third-round lead with Charles Howell III.

SPORTS

encing a mostly terrible year in which he has changed his swing and his coach, had a 4under 68 to match Curtis at 12-under 204 for the tournament. Curtis had his second consecutive 69 after starting the tournament with a 66.

Howell, experi-

Curtis, who has worn a Steelers shirt and cap for three consecutive days to fulfill an endorsement contract, kept his share of the lead by sinking a tough 9-footer for par on the par-3 17th. He had a chance to take the sole lead, but pushed a 13-footer for birdie wide left on the par-4 18th.

Howell, who has won nearly $12 million on the PGA Tour but is only No. 81 on the money list this year, picked up four strokes in three holes with the best run of the day. After consecutive bogeys on Nos. 11 and 12 dropped him to 8 under, he birdied Nos. 14 and 15 and dropped a long putt for an eagle 3 on No. 16.

"I hung in there and I have a chance to win," said Howell, who hasn't finished in the top 30 since a tie for second at New Orleans in April. "I've been through my share of swing changes, and I've had an iffy year."

World Match Play

VIRGINIA WATER, England -Beating Tiger Woods was only the start of an amazing week for Shaun Micheel. Now he has a chance to win the richest prize in golf.

Micheel went the distance for the first time Saturday in the World Match Play Championship, outlasting Robert Karlsson, of Sweden, for a 2-up victory that put him into the final match against Paul Casey.

The winner gets 1 million pounds ($1.87 million), the largest check in official tournaments worldwide. Micheel, who started the week at Wentworth by ending Woods' fivetournament winning streak, again has to play an Englishman in front of an English gallery, which might be the closest he gets to a Ryder Cup experience. He beat Luke Donald in the quarterfinals.

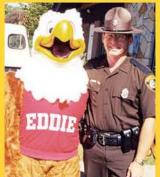

Casey kept the ball in play and kept the pressure on Colin Montgomerie, his third straight victory without going all 36 holes. Casey, trying to become the first player to win in his debut since Ernie Els, in 1994, hit a 5-iron from 210 yards into 4 feet for an eagle on the 12th hole, and only needed to par the next hole to win, 6 and 5.

Madrid Masters

MADRID, Spain — Ian Poulter made a 20-foot putt at the last hole to shoot an 8-under 64, taking a four-shot lead after the third round.

Cards' Carpenter nails down 100th win, 6-1

St. Louis cuts magic number to 9 in Central

ROUNDUP

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Chris Carpenter was dominant again, showing no mercy to a former teammate.

Carpenter carried a shutout into the eighth inning for his 100th career win, outpitching Matt Morris in his return in St. Louis and leading the Cardinals past the San Francisco Giants, 6-1, Saturday.

"I was trying to get the Giants' hitters out and competing as hard as I can," Carpenter said. "I knew he was going to bring his best and do the best he could to get our guys out." About the only concession Carpenter made was stepping off the rubber during an ovation from a sellout crowd before Morris' first at-bat in the second inning.

"I just wanted to get on with the game," Morris said. "It's hard to enjoy those moments when you're playing.'

Juan Encarnacion's three-run homer capped a four-run first for the Cardinals, who cut their magic number for clinching the NL Central to nine. Albert Pujols was 4-for-4 with an RBI and Aaron Miles tripled

San Francisco, which has lost three of four, started the day trailing San Diego by 2 1/2 games for the wild card. St. Louis has beaten the Giants four straight times by a combined score of 38-14 and manager Felipe Alou agreed with an assessment that the situation is dire.

Oakland pitcher Barry Zito works in the first inning of his team's 7-4 victory Saturday, against the Chicago White Sox.

"Some of (our starters) are tired, some of them are young, and we don't score that many runs," Alou said, "We fall behind three, four, five runs in the first inning, we don't score that many to overcome that."

Encarnacion lost a ball in the sun in the eighth to help the Giants score their only run. Pinch-hitter Todd Linden was credited with a leadoff triple on what appeared to be a routine fly ball and Steve Finley followed with an RBI single. That chased Carpenter and ended his run of 16 consecutive scoreless innings. "It's good that I lost the ball in a game like that, when we win by five runs," Encarnacion said.

Carpenter didn't mind, given Encarnacion's offensive contribution. He also pointed out Encarnacion's tumbling catch to rob Omar Vizquel in the third.

"If it wasn't for his big three-run home run in the first, we might still be playing," Carpenter said. "He's done a great job and he's made some phenomenal catches, and he made one today."

Carpenter (15-6) gave up five hits and struck out nine. He's 5-0 in his last eight starts, all of the victories coming at home, where he has a major league-best 1.46 ERA.

Cubs 4, Reds 0

CHICAGO — Rich Hill pitched a two-hitter for his first major league shutout and Jacque Jones homered, leading Chicago past fading Cincinnati.

Hill (6-6) struck out 10, fanning Edwin Encarnacion to end the Cubs' first complete game of the season.

Hill walked one and hit a batter in his first career complete game. The 26-year-old lefty has allowed just four earned runs in his past five starts for an 0.97 ERA.

Cincinnati lost for the 14th time in 20 games since moving into a virtual tie with St. Louis for the NL Central lead on Aug. 24.

Phillies 7, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Cole Hamels (8-8) pitched hitless ball for 62-3 innings and Philadelphia beat Houston to keep close in the NL wild-card race.

The Phillies began the day  $1\,1/2$ games behind San Diego for the wild card. Their win prevented the New York Mets from clinching the NL East title. The Mets got a chance to do it themselves Saturday night, at Pittsburgh.

Hamels did not allow a hit until Adam Everett lined an RBI double with two outs in the seventh. He improved to 6-2 in his past 10 starts.

American League Red Sox 5, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — With the AL East race all but over, Boston managed to beat New York. David Ortiz responded to booing fans with a pair of doubles, Josh Beckett (15-10) had just one shaky inning and the Red Sox defeated the Yankees in the opener of a day-night doubleheader. New York's magic number for clinching its ninth straight division title remained at six, but the Yankees' AL East lead is a comfortable 10 1/2 games over second-place Boston, which began the day 7 1/2 games back of Minnesota in the wild-card

Athletics 7, White Sox 4

OAKLAND, Calif. - Frank Thomas hit his 37th home run, passed the 100-RBI mark and helped Oakland beat his former team.

Thomas drove in four runs for the AL West-leading A's, who won their third in a row. Thomas has 485 career homers and has 102 RBIs mark the 11th time in his career that he's reached the century mark.

Blue Jays 6, Devil Rays 1

TORONTO — Adam Lind hit a scary line drive that struck Tampa Bay reliever Edwin Jackson and forced him to leave the game, and Toronto beat the Devil Rays.

passes of the game, including a 39vard touchdown to Adam Domico on the second play. Allard completed 10 of 13 passes in the first half for 160 yards and three scores.

He completed touchdown passes to Kelly (a 24-yarder on a nice swing pass) and to Ben Kettering from 27 yards out. Allard also threw a 45-yard touchdown to Drew Retton in his only passing attempt of the second half before the reserves played out the rest of the game.

Kelly finished with 43 yards on nine carries and the three touchdowns in his first game back. He had scoring runs of 8 and 2 yards.

The Knights (1-3), who have lost three straight since starting the season with a victory against Buckhannon-Upshur, had trouble getting their offense going.

The Knights were held to 6 total yards in the first half, and quarterback Michael Keim was pressured all night and was sacked three times.

Preston did begin to mount some offense in the second half. Josh Layton scored on an 8-yard run after Kelvin Fike recorded an interception early in the third quarter, and Jared Moore added a 12-yard run after another Fairmont Senior turnover.

Jags out to extend streaks vs. Steelers

Champs bring own winning string: 9 in row

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Few coaches have been as successful as Pittsburgh's Bill Cowher on Monday night. No team has been as successful against him as the Jacksonville Jaguars.

The Jaguars have won both games against the Steelers in what historically has been the league's most coveted time slot. They hope to extend their record to 3-0 when the defending Super Bowl champions put their nine-game winning streak on the line in Jacksonville on Monday night.

"It's a big-time game for bigtime teams," Jags defensive end Bobby McCray said.

For the Steelers, it's just another chance to shine in the spotlight. They won two of three games on Monday night last season, swept through the postseason and began defense of their title with a 28-17 victory against Miami in prime time winning the opener without quarterback Ben Roethlisberger.

For the Jaguars, it's a rare opportunity on the sport's big regular-season stage. Jacksonville hasn't played on Monday night since beating Green Bay in December 2001. Nonetheless, Jacksonville boasts a 6-2 mark on Monday night, including wins against Pittsburgh in 1997 and 1998, when the teams met twice a year in the old AFC Central.

Cowher's team is 6-3 since then on Mondays, making his overall record on that night 18-7.

The Jaguars (1-0) have been even better against Pittsburgh in Jacksonville early in the season — when lingering summer heat and humidity have been known to wear down opponents unaccustomed to dealing with the sweltering Florida

They are 3-0 against the Steelers at home in September. Although Cowher said he doesn't expect the weather to be a factor, he cranked the heat up in the team's practice facility this week in hopes of simulating conditions the players might face.

Steelers quarterback Charlie Batch, who guided the team to a victory against Miami in the season opener while Ben Roethlisberger was sitting out due to an appendectomy, will likely resume his backup role Monday.

"I guess it's what you think it is," Cowher said. "I think both teams have to play in it, both teams are coming off a pretty hot training camp, so I think it's made out to be a little more than it is. The fact that we're playing at night, I don't think that's really going to be that much of a factor.

Maybe not. But the Steelers (1-0) have had heat-related problems in the past in Jacksonville.

Linebacker Chad Brown collapsed in the huddle in October 1995, and running back Jerome Bettis struggled through an asthma attack two years later in September.

"I don't see it being a problem," receiver Hines Ward said. "It's hotter in Pittsburgh. It's all a mind-set. For us, we don't really concern ourselves about the heat. We've played this game for a long time. We have a lot of veteran guys. We know what it takes to go out and hydrate to prevent cramping."

The Jaguars watched the Dallas Cowboys fade during the second half of last week's 24-17 victory. Players were slow getting to the line of scrimmage, gasping for air between plays and on the sideline, and seemingly ready for it to end. "It's hot, it's cold, it's snowing, it's freezing, it's 120 degrees. You go out and compete. That's the way I want our team to look at it," Jags coach Jack Del Rio said. "We're not looking for any favors. We'll take any advantage we can get, but we're not hoping that something goes wrong on their end. We've got to prepare to play good football on our end.

"Regardless of the circumstances— hot, cold, loud, quiet we've got to play. That's how we approach it.'

Jacksonville and Pittsburgh have played the past two seasons and split the games. The Steelers won 17-16 at Jacksonville two years ago after Roethlisberger drove them 56 yards in six plays, setting up Jeff Reed's 37-yard field goal with 18 seconds remaining. Roethlisberger finished 14-of-17 for 221 yards and two touchdowns. He also ran for 40 yards.

He missed last year's game because of a knee injury, and backup Tommy Maddox proved to be the difference in Jacksonville's 23-17 overtime victory. Maddox threw interceptions on two of the Steelers' first three possessions, fumbled the ball away to start overtime and later was picked off a third time this one returned 41 yards by Roethlisberger expects to play Monday, about two weeks after his third operation in 10 months. He had an emergency appendectomy Sept. 3 and missed the opener.

Rashean Mathis for the winning

His midsection remains a little sore, but he said the discomfort won't be a problem by Monday.

Ward, who had the same procedure four years ago, also believed his teammate would be ready for the Jaguars.

"He's not going to go out there and practice and not play," Ward said. "He's going to give it a shot and see how he's feeling. It's going to be another challenge, and we're going to see if we can go down there and steal a win in their backyard."

Bengals WR Johnson plans a big weekend

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Chad Johnson's weekend calendar was mighty full:

■ Publicly unveil this year's 'who-didn't-cover-me' list.

■ Do the "Chicken Dance" at the city's Oktoberfest.

■ Top it off with a big game, and, maybe, a new touchdown celebration, against the Cleveland Browns.

Nothing could be finer for the defending AFC North champs.

"Everyone will have something to look forward to," the Pro Bowl receiver said. "If I'm able to score this week, it's not going to be a big shebang but more of a teaser, more of a warmup, with better things to come later."

The Cincinnati Bengals (1-0) feel they're just getting started on a very special season. A 23-10 drubbing of Kansas City in the opener showed Carson Palmer is all the way back from knee surgery, and he's got a defense to back him up this year.

"You look at it, five or six teams realistically have a shot at winning the Super Bowl," receiver T.J. Houshmandzadeh said. "I believe we're one of those five or six teams."

In Cleveland, long-suffering fans are already wondering if the Browns (0-1) will again wind up as one of the league's worst. A chic pick as an up-and-coming team during the preseason, the Browns went out lost to New Orleans, 19-14, in their home opener.

Instead of up-and-coming, they looked more down-andout. Cleveland managed only 2 yards in the first quarter, and quarterback Charlie Frye was the leading rusher with 44 yards on scrambles.

Grouse season will stay open past January

It appears that the issue of closing the grouse season at the end of January is now dead.

As I reported from the previous DNR Commission meeting, this was defeated by a 5-2 vote. It was then proposed and passed to put it on public comment for the spring sectional meetings so the commission and wildlife division could get some feedback from the hunters.

Well, we got plenty of public comment at this past Sunday's meeting, at Chief Logan Conference Center, and none of it was in favor of the earlier closing.

Charles Brown, representing the Ruffed Grouse Society, was the first to speak against this. He went past his allotted time to speak and seven others in the crowd who were also opposed to the earlier closing donated their speaking time to him. A huge round of applause followed his speech.

DAVE MILNE

Dave McClane also spoke against it. He said, "Don't mess with grouse season. Leave it alone." Two others got up and spoke against it.

I believe this matter was finally put to rest when Commissioner Kenny Wilson proposed that it be removed from public comment. I seconded the motion and it passed, 6-1, with Commissioner Jan Riffe the only vote against it.

Commissioner Riffe had pointed out earlier that his proposal to end the season early was not "carved in stone." He said we should look at the population at the beginning of the year and see if we should close the season early. How much sense does this make? Who's going to have a good feel for the population since we haven't been able to hunt that much prior to the first of the year?

Remember, deer season lasts until the end of the year and I don't know anyone willing to take a bird dog hunting when the deer hunters are out. Also, many hunters don't go out real early in the season because the leaves on the trees make it hard to shoot.

Also, could you imagine trying to write the regulations in such a way as to say that we may or may not have a season in February? How would this be communicated to the public? How hard would it be to enforce this?

Oh well, I hope it's over. We did pass the proposed hunting and trapping seasons for small game for 2007. The proposed 2007 fishing regulations were also

A couple of changes in the fishing regulations that affect this area are the 15 fish-per-day limit for perch on Cheat Lake and a limit of two walleye per day with a 18-inch minimum on Cheat River.

Brad Toller, a frequent speaker at commission meetings and very "colorful" in his own way, spoke regarding too many crossbow permits being given to those who are not really disabled.

He said, "A guy that can move a huge truck tire and carry two buckets of mine bits isn't disabled."

The DNR is looked at this issue.

The West Virginia Outdoor Sportsman's Association donated $250 to the DNR for a new beartracking collar.

Tim Ross, president of the West Virginia Bowhunters Association, stated that he hoped bow shooting would soon be a sanctioned high school sport in West Virginia. This would be a logical next step since many schools now participate in the Archery in the Schools program, which has met with great success.

Jeff Lusk, the new executive director of the Hatfield-McCoy Trail Project, gave a report on the expansion that is going on. We all read of the many ATV deaths in this state and he pointed out there have been only two on the trail system since it opened, six years ago.

Another large group in attendance was people who live along Buffalo Creek. They wanted to express their thanks for the DNR for stocking trout in seven of the stream's 13 miles. They hope it can be stocked higher up in the future and have a fall stocking.

The Buffalo Creek area is a real success story when it comes to getting cleaned up. The citizens are the ones responsible for this. Edson Atkins, a Buffalo Creek resident, did point out they were having a few problems getting some permits from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to make some more improvements.

DNR Director Frank Jezioro said the DNR would look into this.

Unlike many streams in southern West Virginia, Buffalo Creek has no raw sewage dumping into it and there's no garbage dumped in it. The citizens do a fine job of policing it.

It will be determined later when and where the next commission meeting will be held.

Goats at the top of the mountain

PASSION FOR THE OUTDOORS: Dr. Dave Samuel writes what he knows. Page 1-G.

I KNEW GETTING UP AND DOWN the mountains for billy goats would be tough.

There was concern about my irregular heartbeat (thankfully, that was not a problem). One month earlier, I tore the tendon from the pinky finger of my right hand while helping my stepdaughter and son-in-law, Craig and Jennifer Alkire, finish work on their new Guard Dog Storage building on the Old Cheat Road (plug for the kids, writer's discretion).

As I will explain in a minute, that made using the climbing stick a difficult and painful procedure.

But a bad burn on my ankle a week before the hunt was the biggest negative facing me. You must wear high-top ankle-high shoes for support when climbing or descending those steep mountains. But the wound on my ankle made that impossible, and I'd pay seriously for that.

My guide was Petr Zidek, working for Moon Lake Outfitters. We drove two hours from Atlin, British Colombia, then put a boat into an unnamed but large lake. A 30-minute ride brought us to a renovated trapper's cabin at the base of the mountains. It would serve as a very comfortable home for the next few days.

That far north, the days are quite long at this time of the year (I hunted Aug. 14-21), but at 2 p.m. there was no time to climb the mountain and bowhunt before dark, so Petr cranked up the motor boat and we went up lake for 10 miles, using the spotting scope to look for goats.

They were there. At the lower altitudes we would see the younger billies. Higher up were the middle aged, 4-to-8-year-old goats. Near the top of these huge mountains were the old billies, living in areas that were sometimes totally inaccessible.

Petr told me that in many cases the billies were so inaccessible they lived their entire lives without ever seeing a human being. Wow. We saw 21 billies in all, so I was in the right location, if I could get up the mountains.

Mountain goats are great animals highly adapted to life in the high mountains.

DR. DAVE SAMUEL

Next morning we left the boat at 7:45 a.m., and the mountain was so steep that even with both hands free you couldn't climb straight up without falling backward. Dangerous situation.

So, one uses a climbing pole. You hold the pole in your left hand, lean into the mountain, and dig the top of the stick into the mountain to hold you when your feet slip. Walk to the right a bit, then turn, switch hands, plant the pole, lean into the mountain and come back. Using this technique, you zig-zag your way up the mountain. It is a bit tricky to learn, but once I got the hang of it, things went fairly well.

But my hand hurt, and my ankle was bleeding, so three hours later I was beginning to wonder if this was going to be possible. Petr was patient and encouraged me to continue. At 11:45 we were near the most remote, steepest cliffs when Petr spotted a bedded billy. He was on a fairly flat rocky outcrop, and just then he decided to get up and feed. When he walked over the cliff and out of sight, we ran to the spot. As we got close, we became very quiet, sneaking up to the edge and looking down for the goat. I'm afraid of heights (what was I doing there?) and it was almost straight down. But I spotted the billy feeding along the mountain at 30 yards.

I kneeled, and Petr grabbed my belt as I leaned over the cliff to shoot. I was excited and forgot to account for the shooting angle, and the arrow went over his back by a foot, out into space — it may still be falling for all I know.

The billy never heard the shot and a second arrow was on the money. He walked off along the cliff and died about 200 yards from where we watched. It was rough country and it took me two hours to get to him. After photos, caping the hide and boning out all meat, we loaded up our packs and started down at 3:30.

I knew it was going to hurt, and indeed it did. Worse going down than coming up. I was completely finished when I reached the boat at 8:30 p.m. Exhausted, but happy.

The rest of the week we fished, looked at grizzlies and prowled the lake shore. What a great adventure and one I wished I could have done when younger. It was a challenge I was thrilled to accomplish, especially at age 66.

Those who don't hunt may not understand, and that is OK. Those who bowhunt and know the mountains will understand that a billy with a bow ... well, just being able to make the attempt was a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

Yellow perch are being caught by boat anglers around the I-68 bridge. Bank fishermen will have the best luck for largemouth bass and sunfish in the backwaters at the Cheat Lake Park. The rock riprap on the lake side of the park is also a good spot for bass and sunfish. 1/32-ounce rooster tail spinners are effective baits for sunfish. Boat anglers will do best from late evening until early morning throughout the lake. Target smallmouth bass by boat in the upper end of the lake above Mt. Chateau. Try surface plugs and buzz baits in the backwaters after dark for night-fishing excitement. Channel catfish are abundant throughout the lake. Try the tailwater fishing pier for walleye, sauger, and many other species. Minnows are the best bait now. Start fishing at dark. The pier is about 25 minutes from Morgantown. Take U.S. 119 to Point Marion, Pa. Turn right after crossing the Cheat River and proceed 4 miles to Cheat

Monongahela River

The river is at the normal summer level and species of fish. Currents are important during low summer water levels because fish are attracted to the moving water. Therefore, lock and dam tailwaters and creek mouths are good areas to fish now. Hybrid striped bass move in and out of the tailwaters and are being caught using large crank baits or casting spoons. Bass tournaments on the river continue to be successful using tube jigs fished along rocky shorelines and around logs and brush. Game fish such as smallmouth bass, sauger, and walleyes are found along the shoreline where there is current or rock. Minnows have been particularly good baits but 3-inch plastic grubs, tube iigs, and shallow-running crank baits have also been productive. Chicken liver is a good catfish bait now.

Tygart Lake

The lake is 12 feet below the summer pool level and falling slowly. The water temperature is 79degrees at 5 feet, 78 degrees at 25 feet, 71 degrees at 50 feet, and 69 degrees at 100 feet. Walleyes prefer temperatures around 70 degrees so start fishing very deep during the day. They will move into shallower water after dark to feed. Bass will be feeding along the shoreline as the water level drops. Tube jigs have been good baits for bass all this summer. White bass feed on the surface at dawn and dusk and can be caught with spinners or shallow-running crank baits. An extra stocking of larger trout occurred last month. The tailwater temperature is 69 degrees, which makes it the best area water for trout fishing right now. # Time to get on the road again

Viable solutions to traffic woes should be steered by community

Ever wonder where this or that road goes? They don't go anywhere — they stay right here.

At least that's the impression most Monongalia County residents drive off with of the traffic gridlock, uh, grid in Morgantown and surrounding areas.

As this area continues to experience unparalleled growth and development, its roadways continue to go nowhere.

A story featured on our front page this week described the timeless effort to redesign an intersection in Morgantown where five streets meet.

In the big picture this intersection sees nowhere near the traffic of that of a score of other major intersections in our city. Yet, this snapshot of our traffic woes might best describe the typical dilemma before our community.

Below, we offer in a five-point position paper what we believe could be done in the shortterm, the longterm and the interim to renew the search for a solution to Morgantown's traffic.

One problem, that seemingly is part of the solution, is whenever traffic patterns change in Morgantown, especially at busy intersections, they lack the signage to declare these changes.

The solution is to install more prominent signage that warns of lane changes and new restrictions on turns, etc.

One intersection that comes to mind in recent months is in front of the Coliseum, where Jerry West Boulevard connects with Patteson Drive and U.S. 19. Months later, loud horns continue to signal someone still doesn't get it. Still others, a year later are at the intersection of Pleasant and Spruce streets; and the confusion below University Town Centre on U.S. 19.

Another proposal that continues to fall on deaf ears is an old idea that never went out of style: Traffic cops. If we can get police out there for football games, why can't we find enough officers to monitor and direct traffic at certain intersections during rush hours?

Nothing gets the attention of motorists like a traffic cop. No lights, laws, or heaven forbid, common courtesy, approach the presence of an officer dictating who stops and who goes.

One more idea that continues to be bandied about is the installation of lights and signs that transform turn lanes into traffic lanes at rush hour. Obviously, that would restrict left turns, but this temporary inconvenience to a few is overshadowed by the convenience to the vast majority.

Roadways like Beechurst Avenue, Chestnut Ridge Road, Patteson Drive and others could be utilized to accommodate rush-hour traffic at little cost.

Other efforts we continue to promote as viable solutions to gridlock are the creation of community park and rides, an expansion of the PRT and Mountainline's service, along with improved bike paths and sidewalks to reduce the number of vehicles in traffic.

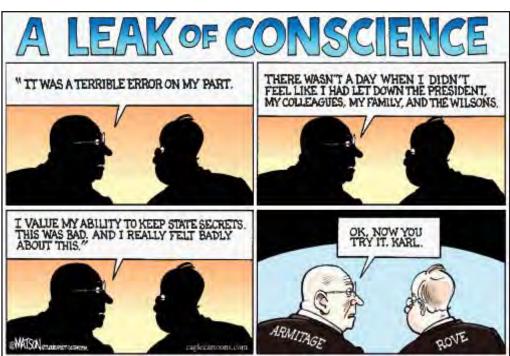

Finally, although each of these pieces to the puzzle are integral to positioning our region for future growth, none is a substitute for the real solution: New roadways and revamped old ones to accommodate increased traffic.

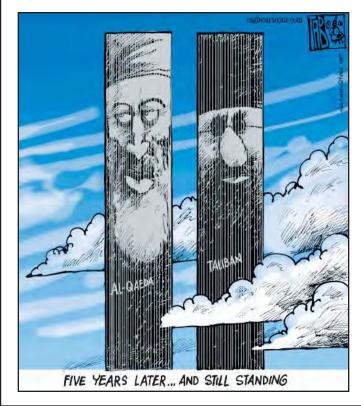

More than six months after the state Legislature empowered communities like Morgantown to designate "user fees" to pay for new roadways, we are still waiting for the first idea to emerge on the drawing board.

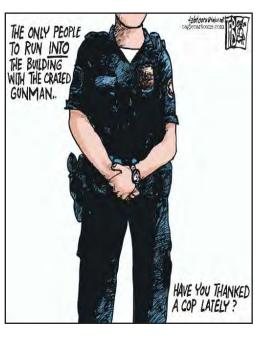

No one ever thought our community would take the high road after the fractious debate in the 1990s over the West Run Bypass proposal. Yet, many of us thought we would be further down the road than where we are.

The light's green. Let's roll.

Arney carries on his crusade

ADD FORMER House Majority Leader Dick Armey to the list of top Republicans heading for Iowa.

But the former Dallas-area congressman says next Tuesday's appearance in the first caucus state doesn't mean he is running for president. "I can't imagine anybody who'd want that job," he said in an interview. "The only person who should be trusted is the person who doesn't seek that job.'

Still an enthusiastic supply sider, Armey hopes to generate pressure for Social Security reform, including personal accounts, lower taxes, smaller government and school choice in early primary and caucus states.

"I don't feel our candidates are addressing those issues," he said. "I'm disappointed in the extent to which our people don't seem to remember the Reagan legacy and don't seem to remember the importance of pocketbook issues."

He invoked the successes the House GOP enjoyed in the 1990s in passing institutional reforms and teaming with President Clinton to balance the budget, cut taxes and pass welfare reform.

'When you're bold like us, you win," he said. "When you're timid, you lose."

But he acknowledges it's a tough fight because Republicans have lost their zeal and Iraq has distracted President Bush something he warned of in 2002.

"If you go in there, you're likely to be stuck in a quagmire that will endanger your domestic agenda for the rest of your presidency," Armey told Bush, according to "Hubris," a new book by Michael Isikoff and David Corn, an account the former congressman confirmed.

He also criticized his one-time Texas GOP colleague, former Rep. Tom DeLay, who succeeded him as majority leader.

"I don't see where Tom DeLay did much to restrain spending, he said. "Tom DeLay proved himself to be an appropriator, and, of course, appropriators are in business to spend money.'

Armey's vehicle for his ventures is FreedomWorks, which bills itself as a grass-roots organization seeking to mobilize "citizens who support lower taxes, less government and more freedom."

It claims it can mobilize 800,000 conservative activists and plans to spend $4 million helping likeminded GOP candidates.

Since leaving Congress in 2003, Armey has continued to push issues he advocated in office. He also lobbies Congress as a special policy adviser to DLA Piper, a law firm.

Armey's lobbying has spurred some controversy. He tangled with Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., when he opposed a complex asbestos liability bill. And he has been accused of using his nonprofit policy group to push issues that benefit clients. A longtime advocate of personal retirement accounts, his clients have included the mutual fund industry, which might benefit if they became law.

Though he once vowed never to be a lobbyist, Armey's public focus has scarcely changed since he left academe in the early 1980s to seek elected office in Texas. And he still works with conservative lawmakers to whom he was closest, such as members of the Republican Study Committee.

"He's given us some informal advice on how best to challenge the system and the status quo,' said Rep. Jeb Hensarling, R-Texas, one of the group's leaders.

Though Hensarling conceded progress has been modest in terms of numbers, he said, "Relative to what's doable, we've achieved a lot, and his guidance and inspiration have helped a lot.'

Armey's travel plans also raise questions over how much impact he can have in states teeming with presidential hopefuls.

"I think he can have some limited success," said David Yepsen, the veteran political columnist of The Des Moines Register. "He's asking Republicans to do what they're already predisposed to do."

Armey said he relishes challenging the odds.

'When I wanted to do base closing, everybody said it was impossible," he said, referring to his successful effort to create a procedure to close dozens of military bases and save billions. "You don't quit doing something that's well worth doing because it's tough to take on."

How will we make them talk?

In its way, it is a sign of a return to normality. For decades, the CIA was spooked by the possibility of congressional hearings and lawsuits into forswearing any risk-taking acts. Immediately after 9/11, everyone agreed that the CIA needed a down-and-dirty ability to operate in the twilight world of our enemies. Now, five years later, CIA officers are scared of lawsuits again.

According to The Washington Post, CIA counterterrorism officers are rushing to buy legal insurance. They worry about their exposure in conducting interrogations that have broken up plots and helped roll up much of al-Qaida's top ranks. President Bush wants legislation defining prosecutable conduct more precisely, but key Republican senators are resisting it, on the grounds, apparently, that the CIA should be able to fend off terrorists and lawyers all at once.

Bush's recent speech detailing how terrorists Khalid Sheik Mohammed (the mastermind of 9/11 known as KSM) and Abu Zubaydah were made to talk using "special" interrogation techniques in secret CIA prisons overseas was an overdue entry into a debate dominated by the administration's critics. In a key victory for them, the Department of Defense has released a new field manual that authorizes only noncoercive techniques. The toughest allowable method is separating a detainee from his comrades, and this requires the approval of a four-star combatant commander.

This overly restrictive standard is likely to migrate across the U.S. government and apply to the CIA as well. This is foolish, because the CIA doesn't deal with lawful, captured enemy soldiers — who should indeed be protected from coercive interrogations — as the military does. Instead, the agency handles terrorists who might have information that can save countless lives.

One reason critics have been faring so well in this debate is that they dishonestly conflate basically any interrogation method not acceptable in a domestic-criminal context with "torture." According to ABC News, six extraordinary techniques were approved for use against toplevel terrorism suspects, including shaking and slapping, stress positions, cold cells and "waterboarding" (simulated drowning). Some of these techniques aren't close to torture; others could be torture depending on their severity; and waterboarding is perhaps over, the line. Most terrorism suspects can't withstand waterboarding for more than 14 seconds, and KSM impressed his interrogators by holding out for more than two minutes. In a forthright debate, Congress might ban it. On the other hand, we might decide that in extreme cases we will subject them to the same waterboarding used on our own military during Survival Evasion Resistance Escape training. Certainly for most Americans, reserving this expedient for the likes of KSM wouldn't "shock the conscience," to borrow the phrase often used to define torture.

Because they don't have faith in the sheer moral force of their argument, opponents of coercive interrogation also contend that it "never works," because it only forces people to lie. But it doesn't make sense that everyone always lies.

Opponents of coercive interrogations want to conjure a just-so world, where terrorists always tell us what they know through the sweet art of persuasion and where we never have to do anything that morally discomfits us. Would that the world were so clean and simple. Let's hope the judgment that scholar Paul Rahe rendered on those unwilling to make morally complicated choices prior to World War II never has to be made against opponents of coercive interrogation: "They were more nice than wise. In refusing to commit the smaller sin, they incurred a far greater wrong.'

Complaints about fans

only follow WVU wins I am tired of all the exaggerated talk about how bad Mountaineer fans are. It appears that every time the Mountaineers have a big win — all you ever hear about is couch burning or bad fans. You never hear about the great plays by Steve Slaton, Pat White, or the other players make. You also never hear about how truly humble this 2006 football squad really is. The immaturity of the fans, from other schools, who write in complaining is beyond description. Funny how they never write in complaining when they win the game!

Guess I should complain about being attacked by Notre Dame fans at the Fiesta Bowl in January 1989 — I believe they call it assault and battery. But I didn't. Guess I also should have complained at the Louisville game a while back while finding the women's rest room. As a result, I don't leave to find the rest rooms alone — even at home games because an ignorant fan can be anywhere at any time.

Point is — grow up! Are we so sensitive now that name calling is almost a lawsuit? Ever go to a bingo game? Interesting what you hear there. How about cell phone conversations in the middle of the grocery store?

Seems to me (and I should know from chemo and surgery), that there are bigger issues out there — besides name calling. Maybe we should start playing the old "sticks and stones" game again — I particularly like the part about — but names will never hurt me!

Traffic lights will create conditions for accidents

I have lived on Apolla Drive and Dorsey Avenue for 18 years and in that time during bad weather — rain, snow, etc. — at least three to four times a month there are accidents on or near these roads.

One of those accidents involved a tractor-trailer and a car. If the tractor-trailer was carrying a load, it would have wiped out my home.

My concern is when the traffic lights go into use at the intersection of Dorsey and Kingwood Pike this will back up traffic and cause even more accidents.

And since the entrance to Mountainview Elementary School is the next road on the left from me and scores of parents have to use this to pick up their children this is even more alarming.

Why can't the state Division of Highways groove the road like it did on Easton Hill? Does someone have to lose their life or property before someone wakes up? This is something to look into now.

Chamber's policy papers responsive to state issues

The West Virginia Chamber of Commerce has proposed a package of policy recommendations that, if enacted or implemented, would greatly advance West Virginia's capability to generate business investment and employment growth. Jobs continue to be the No. 1 issue on the minds of West Virginians, and the Chamber's policy solutions will help to provide more good-paying jobs to state residents.

Twenty-nine recommendations have been approved as part of the West Virginia Chamber's policy program for the 2007 legislative session. Among key issues addressed are business tax reform/relief, legal reforms, transportation funding, healthcare reforms, workplace wellness proposals, small-business development incentives and asbestos/silica lawsuit limits.

The Chamber's 2007 policy papers correlate to the major concerns and issues of interest to large and small businesses business development, jobs, taxes, health care, legal reform, sound environmental regulation and responsible, progressive public policy. Many of these policy papers have been developed by the 16 policy committees of the West Virginia Chamber. Hundreds of volunteers from the Chamber's diverse membership contributed their time, talents and knowledge as part of our policy development process.

Enactment of many of the key policy recommendations, particularly those dealing with lawsuit reforms and business taxation relief, are needed to further advance the state's economic growth and create a more stable and competitive environment for businesses and professionals to operate, invest and employ West Virginians. Enactment and implementation of these policies will substantially improve the state's business climate and truly will make West Virginia "open for business."

The West Virginia Chamber prides itself on being a solutionoriented organization; one ready with progressive solutions that will help to make more West Virginians healthier, wealthier and better educated. This should be the goal of all West Virginia's leaders, and adoption of our policy papers would help to move our state in this direction. To read the Chamber's policy papers, please go to www.wvchamber.com.

The majority once again denied its civil liberties

I was disappointed to hear the Harrison County Board of Education was dropping the defense of the lawsuit against hanging a picture of Jesus. I was glad someone finally decided to stand up against these religious zealots that constantry start trouble where none exists, in the name of protecting my rights, as they see fit to define them.

The zealots have won again and the majority, yes I said the majority of the people concerned are forced to comply. Why is it that the majority is always forced to comply? I was under the mistaken idea that the majority rules in this country. The needs of the many outweigh the needs of the few. It seems so often any more that a few loud obnoxious people can steamroll their ideas over whole states of people. And it usually has the words civil and liberty in it somewhere.

Virtually no one complained about that picture in that school. And the majority spoke by donating money to defend it.

Why have we become so complacent? Oil companies steal our livelihood. Wal-Marts put our smaller businesses out of business. Legislators pass ridiculous laws. City fathers have to be told by the citizens that something, so obviously a bad idea, needs to be re-examined and controlled. Then when they are forced to wake up, they take the credit. They need to take the credit for being dumb enough to get us into it to begin with.

That picture of Jesus no more represents that school as promoting any one religion than a picture of Thomas Jefferson would have them supporting slavery. A picture of Stonewall Jackson in his Confederate uniform would not for a minute have any one think the school supported the Confederacy and all it stood for. Jesus is a figure known the worldover as a teacher. Where better to hang the portrait of a world famous teacher than in a school.

I wouldn't be afraid to bet a year's pay that that principal has never denied anyone who asked to hang a picture representative of any religion. I'll bet no one has asked.

When is the majority in this country going to stand up and be counted. Most often it just takes a call to your councilman. Can no one dial their phone any more. Try putting your councilman's number on speed dial then. I bet the pizza shop is on there.

Do you know that the Constitution does not say "the separation of church and state." It does say "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." To me that means the government will make no law declaring any one religion the official religion. This separation rhetoric is all man-made by people like those who sued the BOE and people that think like them. The Constitution protects us from the government, but unfortunately it doesn't protect us from zealots who want to force their warped definition of things on us.

The Constitution actually says, "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." You people are trying to prohibit my freedom of religion.

Sooner or later the people of this country are going to decide, as our forefathers did, that enough is enough. We are not going to stand for this constant barrage from the few people who think they represent us, trying to tell us what we really want. Since we can't leave and start our own country like they did, we are going to take ours back.

To the man who stole the picture from the school, I hope your intentions were to protect it. To the school board I offer you this thought. You were elected by the people who gave you the money to fight for their rights. I appeal to you to honor those wishes.

Also it sounds to me that he's being a little selfish; like he wants to continue brood mare services from teens who don't want to be pregnant in the first place. He misses the point being that women don't want to go through the dangers and agony of pregnancy and childbirth, but being a man, he can't understand. Flo Kennedy sums it all up in a great quote: "If men got pregnant, abortion would be a sacrament."

"I love my kids, but if I had it to do over, I wouldn't go through it again." If I had a dollar every time I heard that, Warren Buffet would borrow money from me! Also there's the abstract angle. All of the world's problems are either directly or indirectly related to overpopulation.

I feel I'm doing the environment, my body, my sanity and my bank account a great service by remaining child-free. I have three older sisters who did the same.

Although women's reproductive rights are always being threatened, I do believe we'll ultimately get our way.

Universal health care needed in United States

I lived in the United Kingdom for five years, and had access to the National Health Service.

Knowing it was free meant that I used it when I needed it. Now that I am back home, I find it takes something serious to get me to visit my doctor because I am worried about the cost.

However, I'm not medically trained, and something I think is benign could well be serious, as I found out three years ago when I almost died due to what I thought was simple food poisoning. We need universal health care. It's disgraceful that such a rich country ranks so poorly in health

California PAC should butt out of local election

Why should West Virginians let a San Francisco lawyer tell them how to vote? That is exactly what Charles Bell, a San Francisco lawyer and counsel to the California Republican Party is trying to do. His 527 political action committee, The Economic Freedom Fund, is trying to influence the congressional race between Rep. Alan Mollohan, D-W.Va., and Delegate Chris Wakim, R-

The PAC is targeting the voters of the 1st Congressional District with telephone calls, direct mail and television advertisements attacking Mollohan on a variety of issues, foremost among them, his alleged ethics violations. The fund of course fails to mention that the congressman has nothing to hide and proved this by releasing all relevant documents to the investigation.

The fund also attacks Mollohan for voting against the Bush prescription-drug plan.

This claim is true, and West Virginia seniors should be thanking Mollohan. The plan is so complicated that many senior citizens cannot figure out how to enroll and the plan does nothing to address the skyrocketing costs of prescriptions. Of course there is no mention of this in the ads. The motives of the group are obvious.

Bell supports the same rightwing agenda that Wakim does and wants to send Wakim to Washington, knowing that he will support legislation favorable to the super wealthy of the country, including more tax cuts for the richest Americans.

West Virginia voters are smart enough to make up their own minds without California getting involved. Shame on Mr. Bell and his PAC for insulting the intelligence of West Virginia voters.

No wonder West Virginia still leads nation per capita in ATV deaths

BY JEFF BEJUNE

The Dominion Post did the public a disservice by printing the guest commentary, "ATV riders still at mercy of who interprets the law" (DP-Sept. 3).

The author claims to have read the state ATV laws, "over and over," but one has to wonder what laws she is actually reading, because she was wrong on so many points.

She also contends the 2004 ATV laws are confusing for many, but it is her article that is both confusing and inaccurate.

Using the Summary of West Virginia ATV Laws by the WVU Center for Rural Emergency Medicine on the Division of Motor Vehicle Web site (www.wvdmv.gov/downloads/ATVLaws.pdf) and other supporting facts, I would like to dissect her arguments.

The author gives conflicting statements throughout her commentary regarding riding ATVs on roads with center lines. I'm not sure if she is unknowledgeable about the law or that her article was written in a manner that would surely confuse any reader.

She first mentions that she read an article where Morgantown police officers said it was illegal to ride on paved roads with a center line. She follows this up with, "If that's the case then why do the state's laws stipulate that you are allowed to travel on roads with center lines up to 10 miles, as long as you are doing so in order to get from one destination to another?"

The law is pretty clear when it states that no ATV may be operated in this state on any road or highway with a centerline or more than two lanes except for the purpose of crossing the road, street or highways. The law does permit you to drive ATVs up to 10 miles on the shoulder of a road with a centerline to get to your destination. She puts it right in the following paragraph when she mentions about legally driving on the berm to get to her destination, but then contradicts herself throughout the rest of her commentary. She writes about how she, her husband and friends ride on roads with centerlines. As she puts it, "We have to be able to ride on paved roads with center lines some of the time," and adds that she, "will continue to ride on paved roads with center lines ..."

To make things clear, you are breaking the state law if you drive an ATV on a road with center lines, but you are permitted to ride on its shoulder up to 10 miles.

She also states that the law says you need a license to carry a passenger on an ATV, but most ATVs have stickers on them that say you cannot carry passengers. She must have missed the other part of the law that states, "No ATV may be operated in this state with more than one passenger unless more passengers are allowed under manufacturers' recommendations.'

A good indication an ATV is senger by its manufacturer is if the ATV comes with a sticker on it that says not to carry a passenger. So if you are carrying a passenger with one of those stickers on your ATV you are breaking state law.

not recommended to carry a pas-

In fact, most ATV models by most manufacturers are not intended to carry a passenger. Take for example the ATV manufacturer Polaris, 27 of their 28 2006 models are not intended to carry passengers.

The author states, "Most ATV accidents that happen are usually because of speeding, drugs, or alcohol was involved, not because of paved roads." According to the facts, 40 percent of the crashes occur on paved roads or streets and 22 percent of crashes involve alcohol or drugs. Considering that a large majority of ATVs are only driven off road, the fact that 40 percent of all crashes occur on paved surfaces indicates the inherent danger of driving one on pavement.

The author then goes on to state, "Motorcycle riders can go anywhere they want to. What it boils down to is they have to be licensed and the state makes money from them.'

The reason properly equipped motorcycles are allowed on paved surfaces has nothing to do with state revenue, but for the fact that motorcycles and ATVs are different types of machines with different handling and driving capabilities.

When West Virginia was crafting its ATV laws, ATV manufacturers sent a letter to the state Legislature asking its members to consider such provisions as prohibiting the use of adult-size ATVs by children under 16, barring multiple riders on a single-rider vehicle, requiring riders to wear helmets and eye protection while riding, and banning ATV use on paved roads. The letter was from Arctic Cat, Bombardier, Honda, Kawasaki, Polaris, Suzuki and Yamaha (Dealer News, 2004). That covers every ATV manufacturer that I know of. Some might also recognize the fact that five of these seven companies manufacture motorcycles too.

It's no wonder why West Virginia leads the nation in ATV deaths per capita. We have so many ATV riders that think they know more about a product than its manufacturer and are clearly misinformed about the current ATV laws.

What makes this situation worse, our lawmakers bow to the ATV rider lobbyists over the recommendations of the ATV manufac-

I have nothing against ATVs or ATV riders. I have driven many ATVs and have owned many dirtbikes. I imagine there will be a time when I eventually buy an ATV, but that doesn't change the fact that I think there needs to be something done now. How many lives have to be lost before our lawmakers are moved to action?

How to Read the Mutual Fund Tables

Here are the 1.950 biggest mutual funds listed on Nasdag. Tables show the fund name, net asset value (NAV) and daily net change and weekly net change:

Name: Name of mutual fund and family. Saturday NAV: Net asset value. Daily Chg: Net change in price of NAV for last day of week.

Wk Chg: Weekly net change in price of NAV. Total return: Percent change in NAV for the time period shown, with dividends reinvested. If period longer than 1 year, return is cumulative. Rank: Fund's letter grade compared with others in the same group; an A indicates fund performed in the top 20 percent; an E, in the bottom 20 percent. Min Init Invt: Minimum dollar amount needed to invest in Pct Load: Fund's sales charge, expressed as a percent of Footnotes: e - Ex-capital gains distribution, f - Previous day's quote.  $\boldsymbol{n}$  or  $\boldsymbol{N}\!L$  - No up-front sales charge.  $\boldsymbol{p}$  – Fund assets used to pay distribution costs.r – Redemption fee or contingent deferred sales load may apply. s – Stock dividend or split. t – Both p and r. x – Ex-cash dividend. NA- No information available.  $\mathbf{NE}$  - Data in question.  $\mathbf{NN}$  - Fund does not wish to be tracked. NS - Fund did not exist at start date.

WVU biology professor's work on biofuel is published in Science

Poplar tree chosen as a model-fuel candidate by the research team

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Stephen DiFazio, assistant professor of biology in the Eberly College of Arts and Sciences at WVU, has co-authored a study in genome research that points to trees as the new biofuel.

The study, "The genome of black cottonwood, Populus trichocarpa (Torr. & Gray)," is featured on the cover of the Sept. 15 edition of Science and includes the first complete DNA sequence of a tree. Science is the prestigious journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Populus trichocarpa, better known as the poplar tree, was chosen as a model crop for biofuel production due to its rapid growth and compact genome size.

A genome is the hereditary information encoded in an organism's DNA. The poplar is one of the tallest broadleaf hardwood trees in the western United States and grows from the Pacific coast of San Diego to Alaska.

The research team discovered 93 genes of the poplar associated with the production of cellulose, the building blocks of plant cell walls. Cellulose, the most abundant organic material on earth, can be broken down into sugar, fermented into alcohol, and distilled to produce fuel-quality ethanol.

The research team discovered 93 genes of the poplar associated with the production of cellulose, the building blocks of plant cell walls. Cellulose, the most abundant organic material on earth, can be broken down into sugar, fermented into alcohol and distilled to produce fuel-quality ethanol.

The poplar project began in 2001 and has 108 co-authors represented from 40 institutions in 8 countries and 12 states. It supports a broader Department of Energy goal to research biofuel production under the Bush Administration's Advanced Energy Initiative.

DiFazio earned his doctorate and master's degrees from Oregon State University. Before joining the faculty of the WVU department of biology in 2005, he was a research scientist in the Environmental Sciences Division of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee.

Recently he received the WVU Award for Research Team Scholarship for his study, "Mechanisms of Cadmium Tolerance in Poplar Trees." His research interests are in plant genomics, molecular ecology, forest biotechnology and plant reproductive biology. He currently teaches molecular ecology.

SBA announces teen workshop

The U.S. Small Business Administration announced the launch of new online resources for young entrepreneurs at the Mind Your Own Business teen Web site, mindy ourownbiz.org, to help young entrepreneurs succeed in the world of business.

The SBA and Junior Achievement Worldwide have teamed to develop three new Mind Your Own Business resources: a student activities guide, a volunteer guide and an assessment tool — Start it, Grow it, Own it! — that serves as a companion tool to the student activities and volunteer guides. Each of these resources is available at mindy ourownbiz.org and is cosponsored by JA Worldwide.

Titled "Make It Your Business," the student activities guide includes an interest inventory and group activities designed to teach teens the fundamentals of business ownership.

The "Make It Your Business' volunteer guide instructs group leaders through student business sessions that can be implemented in the classroom, in student clubs or in an after-school setting.

The SBA and JA Worldwide introduced the Mind Your Own Business teen Web site to provide support to the growing interest in entrepreneurship among teens, and to serve as a smallbusiness portal for youth entre-

If you own a canine, be responsible

THIS PAST WEEK, I was lying in my bed, sound asleep, when suddenly something told me, "Wake up now."

So I did. And what do my sleepy eyes see? My dog, Tobey the T, looming over me, his nose a mere two inches from my own.

Who knows how long he'd been standing there on the pillow next to mine, staring at my snoozing face, willing me to wake up. With The T, it's hard to say. I've seen him sit stock-still for stretches at a time. So it could have been a minute. Or it could have much longer.

Suffice it to say that the The T's strong telepathic powers penetrated my slumber, his wordless mantra of "Wake up now. I have to pee." boring into my semi-conscious mind.

My first inclination, though I'm not proud of it, was to just open the bedroom door, allowing The T to truck downstairs and do whatever damage he needed to to the living room rug. After all, I have Woolite OXY Deep Pet Stain & Odor Carpet Cleaner for just this type of thing, right? (Hey, it was 3:16 a.m.)

"No," my brain finally fought back. "That is for accidents. For when Mommy and Daddy aren't home to take them out. Not when they're just too lazy to."

And so we got his sister, Geert, and headed outside. And let me tell you, before dawn, it's darn cold these days.

The point is, I had to do the responsible thing. Regardless of how unappealing waking up at Odark-thirty (as my dad would say) to go outdoors is. It's all part of being a parent.

Incidentally, today is AKC Responsible Dog Ownership Day. There will be a huge event in New York City to mark the occasion but that doesn't mean we pet parents here in Morgantown can't do our part, too.

The AKC has penned a Responsible Dog Owner Pet Promise, which you can sign online at gopetition.com. It's just another way we can spread the word about how incredibly important it is to care for our furry friends.

Here is a sampling of what we pet owners do solemnly swear to do upon signing: recognize that our doggies are dependent on us; provide fresh water and good food; take our dogs to the vet regularly and keep their vaccinations up-to-date; clean up our dogs', well, you know; ensure the proper amount of exercise and play; and outfit our dogs with ID.

All of which we should really be doing already.

Yes, we all experience those moments of bad parenting — those times when doing the responsible thing is a whole lot less palatable than doing the easy thing. Like, say, getting dressed first thing Saturday morning and going for a long walk, when you could be watching an '80s movie marathon on TBS in your jammies.

But our dogs don't ask much of us. They'll never come home whining for a pair of Juicy sweats, a Coach bag or a Razr phone.

There'll be no college tuition, no help with the rent, no expected inheritance. Just the occasional trek out in the twilight, dressed in clothing that should never be worn past the front door, so our little loved ones can enjoy a nice, proper, peaceful pee in the grass.

That isn't is so hard now, is it?
The T hates to go potty inside.
It strips him of his dignity, steals from him his self-respect. It is, after all, behavior unbefitting an oracle — which is, after all, what he is. So who am I to deny him this simple request, morning or middle of the night (or sort-of both)? Besides, he asked so nicely. And he was being so responsible.

Which just proves, once again, that we all, the world over, have very much to learn from the patient, unwavering majesty that is The T.

Rowlesburg celebrates Labor Day with railroading, roast beef

PLANS ARE IN THE WORKS for an autumn tour of Cannon Hill over Columbus Day weekend. Info: 454-9218.

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The Big Labor Day Weekend Festival, expanded to a four-day celebration from the famous Ox Roast on Monday, kicked into high gear on Sept. 2 in Rowlesburg with Railroad Reunion Day.

Railroad Reunion Day

Rowlesburg Park is only one of three locations for people to visit while in town. Visitors could also see the B&O Depot Museum, which is now renovated and full of artifacts and pictures of railroading in Rowlesburg.

The M&K at Rowlesburg was the citadel of railroading in this part of the state, once employing hundreds of railroad workers. The huge helpers that push long coal trains up Cranberry and on to Cumberland are still operating here. The newly renovated 1926 B&O caboose was opened to the public for the first time over Labor Day Weekend. The big hit, as last year, was the model train show in the Ambulance Building and the Community Building. Three railroad clubs brought modular layouts for the weekend.

The day began with the formal opening of the vintage B&O caboose, C2050, now a permanent exhibit on the Railroad Museum grounds. The interior is renovated and freshly painted exactly as it was when last repainted and serviced in the B&O's Chillicothe, Ohio, repair shops. A vintage castiron caboose stove now sits in the caboose, courtesy of Jack Sanders, former co-owner of Sanders Sawmill in Rowlesburg. He also made a number of benches for the caboose, from the existing patterns. Dwight Jones, B&O caboose expert from Columbus, stenciled the caboose recently. Jones has written 10 books on cabooses, and prepared a history of the caboose in Rowlesburg. Part of the floor was replaced with oak milled and donated by Cheat River Wood Products of Rowlesburg and installed by Paul Riggs and Don Shields of Rowlesburg.

Speakers for the opening were Lucille Grimm, curator of the museum and grounds, and Tim Weaver, who funded the caboose restoration project. The caboose had been donated last year to the Rowlesburg Area Historical Society by Harlan Castle, owner of Cool Springs. Weaver was presented

Rowlesburg has not seen a caboose

Fully loaded trains still require helpers to push the thousands of tons of coal, chemicals and other freight up the steep grades east and west. Several hundred visitors toured the sites.

The Rowlesburg Depot Museum was open for the entire weekend. The museum houses an O-scale model train layout mounted around the inside perimeter of the building on two levels. The trains make a roundtrip of more than 100 feet just above head level. The two trains were running on time all day through the weekend.

The museum exhibits antique railroad tools, lanterns, complete conductor uniforms, a rare in-perfect-condition railroad satchel carried by conductors, solid brass ticket punchers carried and used as long as 80 years ago, a fully restored freight wagon and hundreds of railroad photos, graphs and prints of Rowlesburg and the M&K Junction dating back to the mid-1800s. Among the prints is an original engraving from Harpers Weekly showing Union troops from the Ohio Volunteers crossing the Tray Run Viaduct.

A new addition to the museum is an 1850 B&O concrete marker. The marker was put down as the railroad was being built through the rough mountains of the Rowlesburg area. Sterling Queen of Terra Alta donated this valuable artifact.

Sterling Queen, a Civil War collector wearing an original Union sergeant's uniform, stands in front of a blow-up in the Visitor Center of Sgt. J. A. Carrico of the Sixth West Virginia who served in Rowlesburg during the Civil War. The Civil War exhibit was part of Rowlesburg's Labor Day Festival.

the Labor Day Weekend activities began: a full-scale working replica of an 1841 Mountain Howitzer, the type of cannon thought to be used in Rowlesburg to defend the railroad.

Rowlesburg has a an important Civil War history. Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee targeted Rowlesburg for attack early in the war. The two large bridges crossing Cheat River and its tributary, Tray Run, were important to Lincoln and his generals. They were prepared to defend the town and its bridges as early as 1861. Destruction of these bridges would have meant cutting the B&O Railroad to the Ohio and that would have been a severe blow to the Union cause.

Mountain Howitzers were an important part of the Rowlesburg defense. Both sides used these cannons in mountain combat to devastating effect.

As Professor Mike Workman of WVU wrote in his recent research on the battle, Rowlesburg was the only town or outpost in western Virginia that was a principal target of the raid to stand up to the Confederate onslaught and emerge unscathed.

One of the most popular exhibits this year was at the Visitor Center. On exhibit were three private collections of Civil War artifacts collected in and around Rowlesburg.

A car show was one of the attractions at Rowlesburg Park on Labor Day, the final day of the town's three-day celebration.

that engaged in the Battle of Rowlesburg in 1863. Just across the street was another popular exhibit, the World War II Museum and Gallery.

Civil War collectors packed their collections to the Visitor Center; on display were muskets, cannon balls, original uniforms, musket balls, tools and many more artifacts.

The addition of the WWII Museum and Gallery made the stop at Sanders Mill one of educational value. Visitors had an opportunity to learn the Civil War history of their area and the history of parents and grandparents.

Folks traveled back and forth all day from the Rowlesburg Park, to the Visitor Center and WWII exhibits and the railroad history with its model train exhibits. Many took advantage of the rides up to the top of Cannon Hill. Saturday was capped off by the traditional fireman's parade.

Sunday Bicycle Tour and Elvis

On Sept. 3, 34 bicycle riders from the tri-state area came to Rowlesburg for a mountain roads tour, organized and sponsored this year by the Country Roads Cyclists Club of Clarksburg. The CRC Club includes members from Harrison, Marion and Monongalia counties.

The 30-mile ride started at Rowlesburg Park, followed Salt Lick Road to Terra Alta and returned. The 60mile tour went south on W.Va. 72 to St. George, took Location Road On the museum grounds, a new The artifacts were left behind by up a steep hill coming out at Amboy bang—a fireworks display. #### Monday: Labor Day Ox Roast

Monday is usually the biggest day of the festival in Rowlesburg and this year was no exception. In all, hungry guests consumed nearly a ton of the pit-cooked beef. This year the beef was cooked in a new pit. The old pit was too small for the growing crowds and was in need of repair. Thanks to gifts from area residents, a new enlarged pit was constructed and ready for the 2006 festival. Volunteers stayed up all night on Saturday starting and tending the fire, placing the packages of beef on the red-hot coals and then covering the pit for the overnight cooking of the beef.

Monday is also the day when a hundred or more classic and antique car owners drive into Rowlesburg and exhibit in the park. This year classic 1950s Chevys, Model A Fords and many others graced the park. Prizes were awarded to owners in several categories.

This year's event ended with a

Fall styles are cleaner, simpler

BY JACKIE WHITE McClatchy Newspapers

Check your supply of leggings and tights. Put oversized cozy knit sweaters on your shopping list. So many choices, so little time. And for many of us, so little budget.

As fall approaches, fashion in the stores and magazines reflects some of the most significant shifts we've seen in years. The old wardrobe may need some attention.

Be aware, most of the new clothes are cleaner, simpler and a touch more grown up. Put away the crystal-splattered outfits and the jeweled jeans. Bohemian has gone the way of cropped tops and short shorts. Lose the chandelier earrings and the cowboy boots. Tone down the flared, patterned skirt. The A-line and pencil-slim skirts secretaries wore in the 1950s are in favor.

Not that we are tossing our old clothes for a fall shopping spree. But touches here and there can make a transition. Start with one garment that makes you feel like you're ready for whatever fall brings.

If you can buy one thing, start with tights or leggings. If you're not comfortable with a calf-length skinny knit that looks like you're wearing long johns, don't fret. Opaque tights or stockings keyed to your shoes or your skirt are an option.

A white blouse should be in your closet. It may be silk and lacetrimmed or simple cotton. It's a classic garment you can wear with jeans, a suit or trousers.

Make a simple suit interesting with lean lines and narrow pants or a pencil skirt. Bring out your black from seasons past. Also consider gray, because it suits the seriousness of the times, and brown. For a bit of color, choose green, purple or red. And to update what you have, add brown to blue and pink, and black and neutrals to brights.

For accessories, put a belt on your list. Shoes come with a variety of toe styles, from machete-pointed to round and child like. Platforms, which add a sense of woman-in-charge, are the mark of high fashion. As for handbags, the larger the better.

A child is a chance at spring again

My friend Kathy has a baby in her arms. Blissfully. Gratefully. And at long last.

Kathy lives in Maryland, but a photograph was taken in the hospital nursery just hours after the birth and e-mailed across the cyber world to a scattered and eagerly awaiting

No surprise, this child's a beauty. We moon over the pink cheeks and rose lips of infancy and, somehow, mysteriously, catch a glimpse of a red-sneakered, mudpie-making childhood ahead. They've named her Hannah Summerly, which sounds full of flowery fields and softball games.

Kathy's an older mom, like me. For a few months now, we've been sharing the hopes and fears that come with motherhood after 40. The first concern, the birth itself, has been eased for her. I didn't feel that fear because my daughter's adopted and a different set of trepidations come with that.

Of course, certain nagging apprehensions - will I be adequate? will I be enough? — are universal, I think. All firsttime mothers must have those

Once in a while, when I was tired at the end of the day, I would worry that Georgia would wish she had a younger mom. That fear's gone, too. Now I know most mothers are tired at the end of the day, no matter their age. Comes with the hard joyful job.

Kathy said once that her daughter-in-the-making was her "chance at spring again." If you knew her you'd know she carries spring with her, but I understood. You don't have time to be old with a baby in the house. Or a toddler. Or a child. Or, as it turns out, an adolescent. I'll let you know in a year or two if it's the teen years that bring on old age with a vengeance.

I have another friend, Fran. whose daughter. Therese, is 7 years old. The decision to conceive her was hard because their second child, Greg (15 now) is autistic and their hands were full. But along came this sassy little bundle to this mom in her 40s, and the fear came with her. Fran said she nipped it in the bud.

"What was gonna happen was gonna happen," she said a few weeks ago when we were talking about Kathy and reminiscing about ourselves. "I refused to let fear steal that time away from me and Therese.'

Of course, now that Therese is a rambunctious and chatty little redhead, she says she'd kill to have an hour away from her once in a while. I understand that, too. Alas, one day, so will Kathy.

Anyway, this is what I know now about our hopes, our fears, and our children: They cohabitate. They thrive on each other. They board the tiniest roller coaster somewhere in our hearts and ride it over and over and over again. I also know that age doesn't matter as much as love. Someone lays that baby in your arms for the first time and there's a completion you can never explain. Georgia and I are a perfect match. Fran and Therese, too. And Kathy and sweet Hannah Summerly.

Guess that old Bonnie Raitt song has it absolutely right – in the end, we luckiest most blessed of mothers truly can find our love in the nick of time.

Many adults are behaving like kids again

BY JACKIE BURRELL

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. — They play kickball, eat cupcakes and draft annual reports for their Fortune 500 companies on berry-colored computers. They adorn their office cubicles with action figures — or, like Lander International CEO Richard Tuck, mix pinball and circus management with running a high-powered IT recruitment business.

In short, this isn't Peter Pan. These are uber-responsible thirty-, forty- and fiftysomethings who haven't let adulthood deprive them of a fun-filled life.

"The common misperception is this 40-year-old virgin sad sack in his mom's basement," said Christopher Noxon, who charts the trend in his new book, "Rejuvenile." "But the vast majority have healthy family relationships and high-stress jobs and refuse to give up stuff they loved as kids. One part of your day is doing an annual report, heading down to the bakery for cupcakes, gabbing online about HR Pufnstuf."

Noxon calls that playfulness a safe zone — "a place where you can play and bring that same spirit back to your responsible life.'

Tuck has known that since he

"I learned a long, long time ago," said the 57-year-old CEO, "that if I focus on goals like adults often do, set myself up for deprivation, that doesn't work for me. In my life, every day has to be fun and once I realized that, everything in the universe made sense."

In addition to his El Sobrante, Calif., company, Tuck manages Circus Chimera and works on his favorite project, a family fun center that will eventually become Playland-Not-At-The-Beach. Scores of volunteers gather each weekend to build amusement park displays, refurbish toys and play a

"My title is Master of Fun," Tuck said. "With Playland, with Chimera, I am a catalyst to help other people discover the child inside and enjoy every moment."

It was only a few decades ago that any self-respecting grown-up limited his leisure hours to golf and bridge. The more daring might tackle canasta or Yahtzee, but a Twister party? Kickball? Puh-leeze.

Not anymore. Today there are mini-golf tournaments in Myrtle Beach and hopscotch fund-raisers in San Francisco, which boasts about Richard Tuck plays pinball at Playland-Not-At-The-Beach in El Cerrito, Calif., recently. The museum and family fun center features toys, games and memorabilia from bygone amusement parks and circuses.

40 kickball teams with unabashedly playful names like the Baby Bouncies, Los Sexies and Giggidy Giggidy Goo. The latter is a reference not to babytalk, but to Quagmire, the Hefner-wannabe on TV's "Family Guy" — a TV cartoon resurrected from the depths of cancellation by a legion of rabid adult fans. That's rejuvenility at work. And it's not just cities. The suburbs have embraced cartoons, kickball and cupcakes, too.

It was kickball that brought Noxon and his wife, a television producer, together in the first place. A writer and stay-at-home dad, Noxon was watching cartoons with his kids when he first realized that today's grown-ups had reinvented themselves somewhere along the way.

"I (was) spending big portions of my day watching SpongeBob and eating popsicles and having an incredibly good time," he said. "I realized this is not the kind of parenting my own parents did with me.

In fact, the idea of serious, steadfast adulthood dates to the Victorian era. Etiquette books touted self-control and formality, says Noxon, with rules "about as natural and forgiving as the rib cage-crushing corsets of the era.

An 1883 book, "Manners, Etiquette and Deportment," cautioned that adults should "keep yourself quiet and composed under all circumstances." A family magazine published in 1889 was even blunter: "The only safety for man or woman is to do exactly right. The least deviation from the path of rectitude may lead to the direst disaster."

That path of rectitude echoed down through the decades—until the baby boomers came of age.

"In the flower children," Noxon said, "there was a lot of romantic innocence and wonder of the child wrapped up in the anti-establishment fighting against this Ozzie and Harriet ideal of what adulthood was.'

The Boomers transformed the notion of adulthood, adding first a wistful nostalgia for their childhood selves and then a full-blown embrace of those childhood pursuits. Today, it's all cross-generational. Teens love SpongeBob and Strawberry Shortcake, the treacly cartoon character marketed to the Many of Tuck's customers are adults just looking to feel young again. The trend of adults refusing to grow up is so prevalent, a term has been coined to describe it: Rejuveniles.

toddler set. And more than a quarter of Disney World's clientele are people in their 50s and 60s — with

And the enthusiasm for playful children's pursuits holds true for generations that have come since, says Noxon, even though many members of the X and Y generations didn't have those "wondrous childhood memories to start with. A lot of the Xers I talk with lived through the divorce spike. They were latchkey kids."

Kickball and cupcakes bring levity to a stressed-out exec's day, says Noxon, but it shouldn't be taken as carte blanche for other childlike behaviors, like brattiness or poor impulse control. And, Noxon adds sorrowfully, today's super-charged, ultra competitive environment can taint even the most innocent, goofball pursuits.

Kickball has formal leagues, bylaws and, in the newest development, "kicking strategists" who will teach you how to run up to home plate, pigtails flying, and launch that big red rubber ball on a properly competitive trajectory.

What fun is that?

Got a question about that commercial?

BY RANDY A. SALAS McClatchy Newspapers

A new fall TV season is beginning, football broadcasts have geared up and the baseball playoffs are just around the corner. You know what that means, right? More people watching TV and the accompanying barrage of big-buck primetime commercials. But the ads aren't all bad. Sometimes, pitches can catch viewers' fancy. These Web sites come in handy when you want to know ...

What's that song?

Songtitle.Info (songtitle.info) comes to the rescue when you hear a catchy tune in a TV commercial and must know what it is. The site is organized by time period, so that you can see what's hot now although it could benefit from a master database. Entries are organized by the company making the pitch and include the subject of the commercial, the artist or composer for the song and a linked audio sample from Amazon.com, where vou can buy the CD. If you don't find what you're looking for at Songtitle.info or want to learn more, check out the blog and helpful forums at Adtunes (adtunes.com), the guide to TV-commercial music.

Whose voice is that?

If the voice-over in a TV commercial sounds familiar, chances are that it is. Many celebrities, including Julia

Roberts, Keifer Sutherland and Gene Hackman regularly provide uncredited narration for everything from AOL to Apple Computers to United Airlines. STEVE DALE MY PET WORLD

A few methods exist to remove bladder stones

Q: Latte, my 9-year-old Bichon frise, was having accidents, and was diagnosed with bladder stones. She was put on a special diet, but it was difficult to maintain because we have another dog. The diet didn't seem to help, anyway. My parents are not willing to pay the thousands of dollars for an operation. So Latte wears baby diapers all the time. I think this is preposterous. Even worse, she's forced to live with bladder stones. But I'm only 16 and my parents won't listen to me. Maybe they'll listen to you. Any advice? — A.B., Boca Raton, Fla.

A: You sound like one smart and compassionate 16-year-old. Dr. Carl Osborne and Dr. Jodi Lulich, both internal medicine specialists and professors at the University of Minnesota College of Veterinary Medicine, St. Paul, are renowned for their expertise on bladder stones in dogs.

"Go to any pet store, buy a guppy net and see if you can catch any stones. Give those stones to your veterinarian for identification," Osborne said. "You can't design an efficient therapy unless you know what kind of stones the dog has. And this is an inexpensive way to do that."

There are two kinds of bladder stones, calcium oxalate and struvite. Treatment depends on the type of stone.

Lulich says there are other ways to remove stones besides surgery. One is called voiding uro hydro propulsion. The bladder is filled with a fluid and expressed, in the process dissolving and/or dislodging the stones. Lulich created the technique. The treatment can be administered by many veterinarians in private practice, and it certainly should not cost thousands of dollars. Another option — which is more costly requires special equipment to zap the stones using sound. If the stones are calcium oxalate, and diet thera py is suggested, merely feed your two dogs in different rooms.

I understand financial constraints, but having your dog wear diapers doesn't seem like a longterm solution. Treating illness is a part of the responsibility of having a pet. Many veterinarians will allow payment over time. If your veterinarian is having difficulty, another option is to see an internal medicine specialist, perhaps at the closest veterinary college. Your vet can also contact either Osborne or Lulich.

Q: We had two cats when a kitten came into our life. Why does this kitten pick up her toys and drop them in the three food dishes? — L.S., Las Vegas.

A: "Your kitten has killed its (make believe) prey and is returning to a safe place to eat later, and dropping it off for friends, too," said Pam Johnson-Bennett, Nashville-TN-based board member of the International Association of Animal Behavior Consultants. She says the behavior is particularly common among kittens, who sometimes grow out of it. The only down side is that your other cats might not appreciate toys in food bowls, and you may not appreciate wiping cat food off toys. You can probably curb the behavior by playing with your kitten at least a few times daily using an interactive toy, such as a fishing pole type toy with feathers or fabric. Or teach your kitty to play fetch with a toy she can return to you instead of a food bowl.

Helping children overcome dyslexia

Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune

Don't worry, Max Martens' teacher kept assuring his mother, Bianca Zick of Minneapolis. It's just a matter of time before things click and Max starts reading easily. But nothing "clicked."

By November of third grade, Max, who scored in the "highly superior" range on IQ tests, was struggling to read past a firstgrade level. His spelling was abysmal. Every day Zick sat him down and made him read for 10 minutes. Just that much left him exhausted.

"Not knowing what the problem was caused a lot of tension and conflict," said Zick, who took Max to Children's Hospitals and Clinics in St. Paul, Minn., for an assessment in late 2004.

Max had a classic case of dyslexia, pediatric neuropsychologist Bonnie Carlson-Green told Zick and her husband. Andy Martens. Dyslexia is most commonly discovered when children are 8 and in third grade, when reading lags become noticeable.

No one knows precisely how many American children suffer from dyslexia. But one out of every five children in the United States has some sort of reading disability; 2 million American children receive special education services for reading problems.

Dyslexia is much more than flipping letters or numerals. It's a processing disorder affecting parts of the brain where written language is linked to sound. Dyslexic kids have trouble breaking down a word into its component sounds and don't grasp that each sound is represented by letter symbols, said Janet Oliver, an educational specialist at Children's.

They also have trouble blending sounds into words.

Dyslexia is best treated when it is spotted early, ideally by kindergarten or first grade but certainly by age 8, when the brain is still plastic.

It was comforting for Max to learn the diagnosis, his mother

"We're very open about it: 'This is why reading is difficult for you. We know how hard you're trying.'

Carlson-Green recommended that Max receive extensive tutoring using the 80-year-old Orton-Gillingham method, a systematic, phonetic, multi-sensory, highly repetitive approach.

"It's never too late," said Karen Sonday, owner of the Edina, Minn., center, where she Touch and motor memory are powerful tools for helping learners associate letters with sounds. One of Oliver's favorite exercises in tutoring dyslexic kids at Children's is to spread chocolate pudding on a dinner plate and tell them, "With your index finger make the 'pa' sound." After correctly drawing a "p" in the pudding, students get to lick their finger.

Three months after Max started therapy he did something at 9 that he'd never done before: He read a road sign from the car.

"My heart just stopped and I felt like crying with joy," Zick said. "At that moment I knew something was starting to happen."

After a year of twice-a-week sessions, Max, now 10, gained two grades in reading. His new skills are giving him the freedom to Google increasingly sophisticated topics and read directions for the gadgets he loves putting together.

Plus, his tutor Rina Lang, 29, is a hip, high-energy teacher who makes him feel successful. Max and Angela Charley, 9, who is also in fourth grade, face Lang at a child-sized table. Over the past year she has drilled them on explicit rules of written language that most of us absorb without ever having to think about it.

Like many children with dyslexia, Max has trouble distinguishing between b's and d's. Lang taught him to form a visual image of a poster bed by holding his thumbs up and putting his fists together. The shape of his hands reminds him which direction the letter faces.

Other tricks help him decode words and check his spelling. Starting with a closed fist, he "finger spells," popping up his thumb for the first syllable of a word, index finger for the second, middle finger for the third.

Lang gives Max a textured rubber mat the size of a mouse pad to finger-trace words that are hard for him to write accurately with pen and paper. When he stumbles in dissecting a word, Lang talks him through it, uncovering syllable by syllable with her thumb: 'in-di-vid-u-al.'

The hour goes fast. But by the session's end, Max is rubbing his face with fatigue.

It's 7 p.m. before Zick gets Max and his sister Zoe, 11, home, feeding them with Chinese take-out bought on the way.

Providing all the support a child with dyslexia needs has required commitment from Max's whole family. Tutoring costs $45 an hour. Zoe patiently waits through the sessions and offers her brother reading help at home when he gets frustrated.

Max is a creative kid who spends hours devising mazes, catapults, rope ladders, bird houses and clever inventions spread throughout his home. "The hot glue gun is his best friend," Zick said. She is determined to preserve Max's passion for discov-

Even with his remarkable reading gains this year, however, she worries as required readings get progressively harder.

"Dyslexia doesn't just go away," she said. "The hope is that they get those building blocks to move ahead through more advanced reading. But it isn't the kind of thing that I can think, 'In two more years he can do anything he wants independently.'

Dyslexia facts

- German neurologist Adolf Kussmaul first described dyslexia as "word blindness" in 1877. A decade later. German physician Rudolf Berlin coined the term "dyslexia" in a medical journal.
- One out of every five children in the United States has some sort of reading disability; 2 million American children receive special education services for reading problems.
- Dyslexia is equally common in girls and boys, but boys' high activity levels may draw more attention to their problems.
- Dyslexia is most often discovered when a child is in third grade — around age 8.
- Reading disabilities diagnosed after third grade are harder to treat. The brain in younger children is more malleable for the rerouting of neural circuits.
- People do not outgrow dyslexia. It is a chronic condition, not a temporary reading lag.
- People with undiagnosed dyslexia fight the incorrect notion that they aren't smart. In the past, many went undiagnosed and didn't finish high school. Behavioral issues developed when they were viewed as lazv. unmotivated. unintelligent or uncooperative.
- There is a link between dyslexia and creativity; many famous artists, inventors and entrepreneurs have it. "People with dyslexia are forced to think outside the box. They don't get from point A to point B the regular way, so they find a new way," said Arlene Sonday, who developed the Sonday Learning System.

Spotting dyslexia

- Delayed speech; often not talking until ages 2 or 3 or later.
- Frequent ear infections. ■ Pronunciation problems.
- Difficulty sequencing sounds
- in words. ■ Doesn't understand rhyme or delight in rhyming stories
- such as those by Dr. Seuss. ■ Difficulty reciting ABCs. ■ Confusion between left
- and right.
- Problems retrieving sounds or names of colors, shapes or letters.
- Confusion between such words as before/after, yesterday/tomorrow, up/down.
- Family history of reading problems.

Media images of young Hispanics vary from their own concept

BY JORDAN LEVIN McClatchy Newspapers

MIAMI — Several recent marketing studies of teenage and 20something Hispanics showed that many of them are frustrated and puzzled at not seeing themselves reflected in the media or broader U.S. culture.

Because so many of them live in cities with a high percentage of Hispanics, they often believe that they are half of the U.S. population, instead of the 14 percent that is the reality.

"In their hearts and in their bubble, they know who they are," said Antoinette Zel, senior executive vice president of network strategy for Telemundo. "But in media and in public, they have to navigate. It's not easy for them. There is a hunger to give clarity into how they fit into the fabric of American culture.'

In their own realm, younger Hispanics are largely confident, proud, and at ease slipping back and forth among being Latino, American, or part of their parents' specific culture, speaking Spanish at home and with friends, English at school and work.

"They're not just OK with being Latino, they want to flaunt it," said Lucia Ballas Traynor, general manager of MTV Tr3s. "What we keep hearing is they want the best of both worlds.

To hear firsthand about some of this younger generation's concerns, The Miami Herald sat down with a group of Hispanic middle school students and their high school and college-age teachers at Summerbridge, a program for gifted students at Ransom Everglades School in Miami.

A group of Hispanic 20-somethings from Miami's music/club/ art worlds were also asked about how they saw themselves and the way their generation is portrayed.

All were frustrated by stereotypes that they say don't fit them or reflect their diverse backgrounds, which ranged from being born in the United States with one Hispanic parent to growing up in two countries in multicultural families.

The Summerbridge kids said they were often subjected to racist comments and stereotypes.

"Latinos should come out more 'cause most Americans think all Latinos are Mexicans, which is not true," said Freddie Rojas, 12, whose parents are Honduran. "I don't like to be called Mexican when I know what culture I am. It makes me really mad.'

The older group often felt that their Latinidad was questioned. "People of our generation are constantly having to prove themselves to the lady making coffee, to the older generation," said Arielle Castillo, 22, an editorial assistant whose father is Cuban. "You're not Latin enough."

Ask a black guy or a white guy what do you see Latinas as, they don't see intelligence, they don't see pride, they see body.

"When my cousins would come from Ecuador to visit, they would be into Latin pop culture down there, which I just thought was silly. ... It was a big culture clash," said Pedro Mena, 30, who produces club concerts.

term they prefer over Hispanic. "I feel it, I know it," said Manny Prieres, 28, a Cuban-American artist. "I haven't experienced what my parents experienced. But we do have the culture. It's almost like a different type of Latino.'

They want to define what that type means. "I don't want to be told what to listen to based on what percentile of the population I am," said Nicaraguanborn Melissa Martinez, 21, who works in public relations. "I'd rather gravitate towards whatever I want, whether it's Spanish or English." "I don't feel like my driving moti-vator is I'm carrying the Latino flag," said Mario Garibaldi, a Peruvian-born musician and TV producer. "I hope that whatever I do, people accept it because of who I am and not because I'm Latino.'

The "hot Hispanic babe" cliche particularly irked some.

"Ask a black guy or a white guy

Rican, Jamaican and Trinidadian. "How come we can't be seen on TV as being the smartest Latina out there, or just being out there? Why do we have to be the ones half naked that don't have a brain?"

But they are mostly proud of their complex selves.

"Sometimes I think I'm 100 percent American 'cause when I'm with my friends, the only thing I'll talk is English," said Dayleen Perez, 13, whose parents are Puerto Rican and Cuban. "But when I go home, that's when I feel Latina. It's fun. It's like (you're) unique."

"When I first came here, I had a lot of problems fitting in," said Lara Coppola, 24, who was born in Venezuela to Jewish Italian parents and came to Miami at the age of 11.

The benefits of a flexibility training plan

BY BRENDA HAWKINS

Monongalia Health System

Many times when we think about exercise programs we think of strength training and cardiovascular activities. There is a third and very beneficial element to a good exercise program-flexibility.

According to the American Council on Exercise (ACE) Fit Facts, Flexible Benefits, flexibility training can:

- Allow greater freedom of movement and improved
- Increase physical and mental relaxation.
- Release muscle tension
- and soreness. ■ Reduce risk of injury.

One's genetics, gender, age and physical activity level can determine your level of flexibility. As we age we tend to lose flexibility more as a result of becoming less active than the aging process itself. With regular training, flexibility can improve just as cardiovascular endurance and muscular strength can improve.

Before stretching, it is a good idea to begin with a lowintensity warm-up like walking. This will warm the muscles and help reduce the risk of injury. A good warm-up should last between five to 10 minutes. When performing the stretch the action should be slow and gentle and held for 10 to 30 seconds.

There are some common mistakes to avoid when stretching. Doing these could cause injury or make the stretch ineffective. Avoid the following when

- Don't bounce a stretch. ■ Don't stretch a muscle
- that is not warmed up.
- Don't strain or push a muscle too far; ease up if it
- Don't hold your breath. Not having enough time is usually the excuse people give for not stretching. At least 30 minutes, three times per week is ideal for flexibility training but five minutes at the end of an exercise session is better than not doing it at all. Stretching can fit into a schedule. You can stretch after a shower when the muscles are warm, by pointing your toes or reaching your arms above your head before getting out of bed in the mornings, or by taking a yoga or tai chi class.

Remember the three elements to a good fitness program include strength, cardiovascular and stretching. Visit acefitness.org for more information on exercise.

Suburban lifestyle carries risk of sleep disorders

BY JULIE DEARDORFF

Chicago Tribune (MCT) CHICAGO — The suburban lifestyle, already blamed for increasing obesity rates, now poses a related health risk: sleep disorders. Though rates of sleep apnea, restless-leg syndrome and insomnia are on the rise everywhere, suburban hospitals are facing increasing demand for beds at sleep labs, where patients are wired and monitored overnight for a diagnosis. In Naperville, Ill., Edward Hospital recently expanded its sleep center to 10 beds because nonemergency patients were waiting two to three weeks for an appointment.

Now boasting one of the largest in ${\bf DuPage\ County--it\ can\ handle\ 70}$ patients a week — the hospital also plans to open a Sleep Center on its

Plainfield campus later this year. "We're seeing an increase in weight gain, (a risk factor for) sleep apnea," said Edward Sleep Center supervisor Deb Jokinen. "And an increase in awareness."

After a sleep study, about 80 percent of patients, who often have been encouraged to check into a sleep lab by their concerned bed partner, end up learning they have sleep apnea or sleep-disordered breathing. Though 18 million Americans suffer from it, making it as common as adult diabetes, it is still severely undiagnosed and only recently has been considered a serious condition by the medical com-

People suffering from sleep apnea stop breathing during the night, sometimes hundreds of times for a minute or longer, which decreases the amount of oxygen in the blood. The most common symptoms are loud snoring and excessive daytime sleepiness, according to the American Academy of Sleep Medicine. Morning headaches or waking with a dry mouth or sore throat are other

Overweight men over 40 are at highest risk, but sleep apnea can strike anyone at any age, even

"Snoring alone doesn't mean you have sleep apnea," said Babak Mokhlesi, director of the Sleep Disorders Center at the University of Chicago, which has a total of 14 beds. "If it's loud and disruptive with a crescendo, if your bed partner notices you've stopped breathing, or if you sleep eight hours but are still tired, then something is interrupting sleep."

Mild to moderate sleep apnea generally is defined as from five to fewer than 30 temporary (10-second) breathing pauses per hour of sleep. Those with severe sleep apnea have more than 30 breathing pauses per hour. The symptoms intensify with increased body weight and blood pressure.

"More research is showing even people with mild sleep apnea suffer," Mokhlesi said. "It increases the risk of motor vehicle accidents and puts people at higher risk of hypertension, strokes, heart disease." Newer research also shows it can raise the risk of diabetes.

At the new hotel-like Edward Sleep Center, located off-site from the main hospital, sleep-study patients typically check in about 9 p.m. After filling out a questionnaire on sleep habits, they get ready for bed in their individual rooms, which all have showers, bathrooms, televisions and DVD players, and sound-

A technologist wires the patient to record brain waves, eye movement, chin-muscle activity, EKG (heart rate), snoring, breathing, leg movements, breathing effort and blood oxygen levels. If the patient has a history of seizures, additional head wires might be used. Though sleeping with dozens of wires taped to the head, face, neck, chest and legs — and the presence of an infrared video camera — might seem daunting, most people do fall asleep. They might not sleep as well as at home, but Mokhlesi said three or four hours is enough for a study.

When sleep apnea is diagnosed, the most common nonsurgical treatment is the use of continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP). The cumbersome CPAP machine, which is worn while sleeping, delivers air pressure through a small mask that covers the nose but leaves the mouth open.

About half the patients tolerate the machine well. But Richard Rouse, 57, who was diagnosed with sleep apnea eight years ago after a study showed he stopped breathing 25 to 30 times in an eight-hour period, just couldn't get used to sleeping in a mask.

"I tried three nights and couldn't manage," he said. "When I did momentarily fall asleep, I'd wake up."

So Rouse, who had a history of severe sinus congestion, recently underwent another sleep study at the new Edward facility, with another overnight stay, to see if any new options were available. In addition to surgery, dental devices can be used to move the jaw forward and open air passages. Said Rouse, "My wife says it's getting quite severe in terms of my ability to sleep."

Core muscles key in overall body strength

BY HARRY JACKSON JR.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch (MCT)

If the muscles of your body have a first sergeant, it's the core.

The muscles of your core — in less trendy times called your trunk comprise the most important muscles in your body, say experts, because all the other muscles rely on them being strong and stable.

The weaker your core, the weaker you are. If you're disabled, your core is often what determines your level of disability; if you think you're a rough, tough athlete, a weak core will shorten your career.

That's why experts say if you're going to pay attention to one area of your body, the core is the place to

The core is an array of muscles from your chest to your hips. They maintain balance, ensure stamina, keep you upright and protect the routes between your brain and your appendages.

There's some disagreement on the scope of the core. Some say it's the midsection from the neck to the pelvis — about 50 muscles. The more common definition is that it starts at the diaphragm to just above the pelvis, or the "pelvic floor." Some say it includes parts of the gluteus (buttocks) muscles.

The National Institutes of Health describes it as the center of everything, comprised of 29 muscles.

Tricia Austin, assistant professor of physical therapy at St. Louis University, likes the NIH description. She says you should think about the core as a box that keeps you

'It acts like a stabilizer, a belt that helps stabilize our midsection and back, the spine," she said. "It can add stability so that we get good motion with our arms and legs in the activities we do throughout the day, particularly with athletes and sports performance.'

Austin specializes in physical therapy and training of athletes, working mostly on SLU athletes.

However, "It's not just athletes who need the core. People also need the core to pick up their child, get groceries out of the car or do yard work," she said.

Even athletes can be fooled about their core strength.

"It's not just strengthening them, it's also being able to (use) them," she said. "Someone may look strong having (nice abs), but in reality, they don't use the other muscles of the core, so the strength in their midsection may not be as strong. "And it might be strong, but they don't know how to use those muscles, to recruit them, when we need to. An example is swinging a bat. How do you get all of the muscles that come into play to work together?" Contrary to common belief, the abdominal muscle — the rectus abdominis — that gives you the sixpack is not by definition a true core muscle, because it runs vertically instead of horizontally, according to Keath Hausher. He's a St. Louisarea athletic trainer who runs fitness boot camps and helps design ath letic training programs for the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Experts agree that true core muscles wrap around the midsection and hold everything inside together. Still, the same exercises that work the ab muscles can certainly help the core muscles. But you need to do more than just ab work.

When it comes to developing the core, one size doesn't fit all, said Renee Ivens, a physical therapist at Washington University School of Medicine. Ivens explained that someone who's built with wider hips will have different needs than someone with a more flexible spine. Shorter midsections can be exercised differently than longer midsections.

The vast majority of her patients' problems start with core weakness. In other cases, problems start with overexercising parts of the core without exercising other parts enough, which can lead to soreness, imbalance and strain. It's a good bet to start with your family doctor before starting a core exercise program. Depending on what you need, you could get a referral to a physical therapist. Otherwise, you can visit a physical therapist for an evaluation without a doctor's referral, but you'll probably pay from $50 to $150 for an evaluation. Personal trainers — even those with good credentials — aren't trained to work with any information that you don't bring to them, experts said, which is why you want to start with an evaluation by a licensed medical professional.

But at the most basic level, Ivens said you can do some core exercises that don't require much prepa-

"Just pull in the abdominals a bit," she said. "That would be good for almost anyone to do."

Learning to snack healthy

BY MICHELLE THEALL McClatchy-Tribune News Service

You may have seen a button or bumper sticker reading, "Life is Short. Eat Dessert First.'

I proudly displayed this axiom on my car for a decade or so. No truer words have been spoken. Life is short (and probably would have gotten even shorter if I hadn't cut back on the candy bars, cake and cookies).

Most of us succumb to snacking at some point in the day. Our bodies need fuel to run, and the standard three meals per day don't always keep us going. Snacking provides energy, and it doesn't have to be a dirty

Healthy snacks exist, depending on how you define the word "healthy." For example, if you're looking for a goodfor-you cookie (that doesn't taste like cardboard), try Uncle Eddie's Vegan Oatmeal Chocolate Chip cookies (organic without dairy products). Tastier than any other chocolate chip I've tried (and I was skeptical at first).

Still, organic and vegan doesn't mean low-cal or low sugar. Depending on your goals, this delightful cookie might be the worst thing for you. It will provide a quick fix to your sugar craving, but your body will burn through the energy before you make it back to your desk. Then you'll need something else to keep you

More food. More calories. The vicious cycle continues.

Preparation will keep you out of trouble on the snacking front. Stock up on energy-providing yet satisfying treats and have them ready for the 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. bonk.

Tip: Head to the grocery store today and fill up your cart with munchies you can trust. A few examples: almonds, raisins, apples, sunflower seeds and yogurt. Energy bars can also provide good snacking. Just check the labels carefully before buying

Why it works: You can put a bag of M&Ms in your desk drawer or some honey-roasted almonds. Whatever's there, you're going to eat. Fill your snack drawers with all the right

GoSMILE Advanced Formula: Puts a bite on your purse

BY JODI MAILANDER FARRELL McClatchy Newspapers

Product: GoSMILE Advanced Formula B1 tooth whitening gel, 20 single-dose ampuls for $80.

Key ingredients: Alcohol, povidone, 6 percent hydrogen peroxide and mint flavor. The pitch: Created by dentist-to-the-stars Jonathan B. Levine, this whitens teeth up to 10 shades in seven days.

How it works: The hydrogen peroxide — brushed on teeth for one to two minutes twice a day for seven to 10 days — whitens by forming radical intermediates (extremely unstable and destructive molecules) that then break down into water and oxygen. Researchers believe these radical intermediates react with pigments that stain teeth, in part by destroying the doublebond network that creates the discoloration.

Pros: Research suggests that, when used as directed, bleaching does not cause permanent damage to the teeth or gums. The gel is cheaper than in-office power bleaching methods, such as BriteSmile, which cost $450-$750 a session. Last year, a study from the School of Dentistry at the University of North Carolina suggested that over-thecounter treatments such as this one can produce the same pearly shade as dentist-prescribed bleaching trays and in-office bleaching sessions.

Cons: Peroxide can cause tooth sensitivity and occasional irritation of the gums, warns the American Dental Association. This product is a lot more expensive than a $4 tube of whitening toothpaste, which has proven in some studies to provide the same subtle results. People who use whitening treatments tend to keep using them beyond two weeks, which can cause gum irritation, bluish enamel, uneven whiteness and — if the chemical seeps into a cracked tooth or an unfilled cavity — painful internal damage that can lead to a root canal. (Side effects usually clear up within a couple of weeks if you stop using the chemicals.) Doesn't work on veneers, fillings, caps or crowns. Bottom line: A tube of whitening toothpaste is cheaper and its effects will last just as long.

ARLINGTON, Texas — Here's a mesmerizing thought for folks with snoring spouses: quit listening.

Arlington hypnotherapist Deryl Harrison says that with a little soft music and a few well-placed words from a compact disc at bedtime, people can learn to do just that.

"Perception can be influenced by suggestion," said Harrison, who says he has been a hypnotist since he was 9. "Everybody has the ability to block out sounds.'

The former Church of Christ minister dreamed up the technique when his wife began complaining about his allergy-induced snoring. As he explains it, people who are drifting off are in the same suggestible state of mind as a hypnotized subject.

"When she was going to sleep, I gave her a suggestion," Harrison said. "She's not bothered by my snoring anymore.'

Harrison pitched his technique at a sparsely attended session last week at the Arlington Hilton. The drizzle may have dampened interest—there were no paying guests and no sales of his CD but Harrison was on fire, nonetheless. He produced a model of the human brain to illustrate a point. He tried out his hypnotic powers on a couple of people. Debbie Collins works for Sleep Centers of Texas in Bedford and allowed Harrison to make a practice hypnotism run on her. She didn't succumb but was relaxed and intrigued afterwards.

She said her husband is such a snorer that "we slept in a tent, and he sucked the tent in on us."

There was at least one believer in the ballroom.

"My wife said I need help," Harrison said. "She said, I never thought about divorce, but I thought about murder."

Sandra Harrison said, "Now, I don't want to kill him."

Preston, there's still enough time to make it shine

COMPANY'S COMING.

I panic when I learn guests are about to drop in unexpectedly at best, they call a few minutes ahead, at worst I'm alerted to their impending visit by the crunch of gravel in the driveway.

I catapult myself to the front door, peek out and I'm off, snatching discarded socks from the shoe rack. Stopping briefly to kick Barbie clothes and a Baggie of Cheerios under the couch, I notice watermarks on the coffee table. I scoot the basket of coasters over them.

I stop at each livingroom chair and scoop newspapers, magazines and junk mail into my arms, dump everything in a corner of the laundry room and warn the rest of the household not to open its door under any circumstances. The contents of the kitchen table get stashed in the dishwasher or the pantry, or failing that, in the middle of my unmade bed behind another closed door.

When company's coming, I don't have anything but my slovenliness to hide, no guilty pleasures like "South Park" or "Nip/Tuck" DVDs lying around. But I'd be just as embarrassed to have someone see my unfolded undies or a carelessly discarded ice-pop wrapper.

My real-fast redd-up (as our Steel City neighbors would say) is what I thought of when I heard a public service announcement urging Prestonians to pick up litter. Then Kathy Plum reported in Sept. 14's paper on the project, one under the umbrella of the Preston County Visioning Committee.

'We're challenging every Prestonian to go out with their families and pick up a bag of roadside trash," Beautification Committee member Vickie Jenkins told Dominion Post readers.

What went unsaid is that company's coming.

Almost 200,000 visitors will be in annual Buckwheat Festival, said Sheila Haney at the Preston County Visitors Center in Kingwood.

To get ready for them, Kingwood has been painting curbs, trimming grass and putting up

But the cleanup duties don't fall to the central city's residents alone. All those visitors have to pass through Masontown, Terra Alta, Bruceton and even Fellowsville and Tunnelton to get to Kingwood in the middle of the county.

Do we want them to see our unmentionables along the way? Perception is reality. Let's at least let our guests think we're clean and responsible, even if sometimes we're lazy and disrespectful.

Who cares what they think? For starters, anyone who runs a business, right down to the yard sales set up to capitalize on the increased traffic. We want people to stop and we want people to come back. Preston has a lot to offer all year, not just the last weekend in September.

The adventurous are drawn to ride the rapids in Cheat River. Nature lovers stroll the boardwalk in Cranesville Swamp to spot carnivorous pitcher plants. And between the Arthurdale New Deal settlement, grist mills and fixtures such as the Tunnelton Tunnels, Rowlesburg's railroad and World War II museums and the Tray Run Viaduct that stands without mortar, a weekend is not long enough for history buffs to see everything.

This weekend's forecast is sunny and warm — conditions ripe for picking up some trash along your road. Don't say you didn't put it there so you're not picking it up. Do you think I leave dirty socks and Popsicle sticks in the living

It is, as unfortunately it is in a lot of different situations, the duty of many to atone for the sins

I'm not preaching total reformation, nagging litterers about fouling their own nest. Though I vow repentance when the relatives pull out, I never turn from my sloppy ways.

I'm merely sounding the

Families find support in twin-laden city

BY BILL VOGRIN

The (Colorado Springs, Colo.) Gazette (MCT)

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — When Melissa Coleman gave birth to twin boys a year ago, a relative put wooden storks in front of her Springs Ranch home announcing the arrival of Caleb and Jared

The reaction to the signs surprised her: mothers of twins living near the intersection of Bexley and Highland Vista drives sought her out.

"All of a sudden, they came out of the woodwork," Coleman said, describing how women she didn't know called or stopped by with gifts, meals and, more important, encouragement and advice.

Turns out, there are at least six sets of twins within a block or two of the eastside intersection.

"It seems like every time we turn around, someone is pregnant with twins," said Yvette Pasley, mother of 9year-old twins Jason and Jordan, as well as four older children.

The collection of twins started six years ago when Pasley, her husband Darren and their brood moved onto Bexley.

A set of twin girls was born just up the street a year later. Their parents declined to be interviewed. Then came Brooke and Chris Martin and their boys, Christopher and Matthew, now 5. They moved onto Highland Vista when the boys were Brooke met the twin girls within a week and was introduced to Pasley at a neighborhood get-together a few months later.

"Turned out we were surrounded by twins," she said. "At the time, I was feeling overwhelmed. It was great to meet other mothers of twins.

"We lean on each other a lot. There's a connection you have with somebody else who has twins. You immediately understand each other.

Martin found Pasley's friendship especially valuable because she had so much experience as a mother with her four older children. Now, their combined experiences are being tapped as another outbreak of twins hits the neighborhood.

Besides Melissa and Kevin Coleman's 1-year-old boys, the neighborhood welcomed the births of Ken and Karen King's boys, Kaden and Kacey, about nine months ago.

At the same time, Connie and Vantoy Shackelford moved onto Bexley with their 3-year-old boys, Ethan and Caleb.

"There is so much support for us here," Ken King said. "It's awesome. Brooke comes by to see how the boys are doing and to see if we need any help. Melissa is there to offer advice. They are all great."

Pasley said such support is important for parents of multiples, as they are known.

"We let them know we're always here for them," Pasley said. "If they need to talk, call us. Let us help. I always encourage them to take any help someone offers. Grab a nap. Go out for dinner. Get things done. You need some time away."

It helps that Bexley and Highland Vista is a closeknit neighborhood. People look out for each other. They spend evenings outdoors with their children, making friends, the families say.

They have big parties and small get-togethers where they share stories and advice, such as encouraging expecting parents to join the Colorado Springs Parents of Multiples Club (cspoms.org).

They talk about putting twins on schedules for eating and naps. They discuss whether to separate them into individual cribs and individual classrooms. Whether to dress them alike or let them assert their individuality.

Connie Shackelford, the newest member of the Bexley twins club, also appreciates the warmth of the neighborhood and hopes to get to better know the other moms.

'We had a summer block party, and it was nice to meet all the different neighbors," she said. No doubt she won't have to wait long to feel the bond, as Coleman did. "The first year was so hard," Coleman said. "The other moms were really supportive."

The experience taught her an important lesson. So when she learned an acquaintance was pregnant with twins, she took her a

"Now, I can offer that support to other young mothers," Coleman said.

The difficult role of successor

Q: We have a very devout, loving and caring priest at our parish. He's very traditional, stands by what the Catholic church teaches and Will not compromise the faith. That, in my opinion, is the way it should be. What a good shepherd he is! However, his conservatism has caused some people to leave the parish. This concerns me.

One example: A young couple came to this priest to have their newborn baptized. In explaining the guidelines, he gave them the criteria for picking godparents and explained the important role they should have in a child's life. The couple had already picked a brother, who was living with another woman, as godfather. The priest explained to them why this was not acceptable, but also said that he would not turn them down and would baptize the child. Taking offense, the grandparents went to the former priest of our parish about this. He had no problem with anything and is going to perform the baptism.

Now, the young couple and the grandparents have left our parish and are going to a neighboring parish to attend Mass.

Why would a former priest

GELLMAN of our parish perform this baptism knowing that this family belonged to our parish, and how could he be so lenient about the rules and guidelines for baptism? It sounds like he's on the fence and does not support the Catholic Church and its guidelines for the sacraments.

Also, wouldn't this priest feel bad that he has overridden our present priest, who is only trying to be a good shepherd? I mean, can he just do that? What can be done about this situation? — P., via e-mail

A: The relationship between older clergy and their younger successors is almost always fraught with problems. It's hard to give up and it's hard to take over. Moses had trouble giving up the reins to Joshua and things have been the same ever since. Sometimes the transition is smooth and loving and not at all eventful but that's usually when the older clergyperson moves to the other end of the earth. In your case, much is not clear.

Birth Height:_

Apparently, both the older and younger priest agreed that the chosen godparent was not qualified to fulfill the responsibility of watching out for the religious education of the child if the parents were not able to do so. For a person living in sin to stand as a spiritual exemplar to a child is hard to justify.

However, for reasons you did not include, both priests were somehow willing to set aside their reservations and name the brother as the godfather. One seemed willing with some reservations, while the other seemed willing with no reservations. So what set off this family? Some facts seem to be missing.

We suspect that a bond of trust had been created with the older priest, and that family was simply not yet ready to transfer their allegiance to the younger priest. Whatever the reason, we hope that in time your good shepherd will be able to lead a united and eager flock.

Drugs leave no room for marriage

BY JANN BLACKSTONE-FORD AND SHARYL JUPE

Contra Costa Times

Q: I love my husband and I really would like to work on our relationship, but there's one major problem: He's a drug addict. It's tearing our marriage apart. I just turned 35 and really want to start a family. We've been married almost four years, and this has been going on the whole time. Should I stay or leave?

A: Of course we can't tell you if you should leave or not—that is your decision. But we can offer you some food for thought.

If your husband is a practicing drug addict, you haven't been living with him for the past four years; you are living with the drug. If you are like many who live with an addict, your entire life has been centered on coping with his addiction. This means your relationship with him has not been about forming a loving and trusting bond. It's been about lying to cover up the drug use, lying about where the money went that he used to pay for the drugs and denial on both your parts about the seriousness of the addiction. It's been a lot of apologies and starting-overs, only to find yourself right smack dab in the same place again. As a result, it's very easy to become co-dependent and think you are helping your husband cope with his addiction, only to find you are enabling it to continue.

Our first suggestion is to get yourself some help. Find a therapist who specializes in counseling family members of drug abusers and also find an Alanon support group near you. Alanon is a division of Alcoholics Anonymous and offers support to family members dealing with an addict. Second, if he's ready to go to rehab, then that gives you some indication of his commitment to get a handle on his addiction and his commitment to your relationship. If he won't enter rehab, consider what that is saying and based on that, we wonder why you would even consider bringing children into this world with a man who is a practicing drug addict.

COMMUNITY EDUCATION OUTREACH SERVICE

Flaggy Meadows CEOS

The September meeting of Flaggy Meadow CEOS was held at the home of Mabel Hartley. Ten members were present. Joyce Kitzmiller reported on the marketing and membership committee's brunch, which will be at Cheat Lake United Methodist Church on Sept. 23. Registration is from 9:45-10:45 a.m. Auction items are needed.

Myrtle Gabbert gave a report on continuing education, reminding everyone of the AARP driving course scheduled for Sept. 30 at the extension office.

Craft Day is Sept. 29 at the extension offfice. A scarf and whirligig craft workshop will be from 10 a.m.-noon. A tree and snowman workshop will be from 1-3 p.m.

Betty Bishop reported on the family committee. A meeting was held Sept. 7 at the extension office. A County Council meeting was held Sept. 8 at the WVU Coliseum.

Membership dues will be due at the next meeting.

Sign-up forms for hostesses and lesson leaders were filled out for the next year.

Kitzmiller, Gabbert and Mary Mason had items for show and tell.

The next meeting will be Oct. 4 at Helen Whetzel's home with Hartley as lesson leader.

Cass CEOS

Thirteen members were present at the Sept. 6 meeting of the Cass CEOS held at the Cassville UMC. Terry Shinkovich and Inge Milam served as hostesses. Club members brought baby items to be donated to The Settlement House as an extra community project.

Club members Marilyn Baumgras and Jean Tucker reported that they will be teaching the basics of sewing at the St. Ursula's Outreach Program on Sept. 11, 18 and be held Oct. 11. A variety of sewing projects will be undertaken that day. Each member attending will bring a covered dish to share for lunch. Members made final preparations to attend the membership brunch on Sept. 23. Five members plan to attend and two auction items will be taken to the brunch. The auction items were donated by Debbie Blehschmidt and Tucker.

A December fundraiser was discussed. A cookie walk will be held at Sundale Nursing Home in conjunction with a craft sale at the facility that day. Final preparations for this project will take place during the upcoming fall club meetings.

Officers for 2007 were put in place. They are: Milam, president; Tucker, vice president; Blehschmidt, secretary; Stella Long, treasurer; Mary McDilda, activity day; Shinkovich, reflections leader; Pam Frease, continuing education; Emma Lou Wujcik, family committee; and Marilyn Baumgras, marketing/membership committee.

Volunteer sheets were revamped by Nancy Dean and the hours for 2006 were submitted to the county office.

Milam gave lesson titled "Caring For Houseplants." The October lesson training would be held prior to the meeting.

The club is participating in the Stewartstown CEOS Ugandan Project by passing out Barnes & Noble vouchers that will allow for a percentage of all purchases made at the store to be donated to the project, and also by purchasing tickets for a Christmas quilt that will be on display at the bookstore until the drawing on Sept. 30. Club members continued to donate a variety of items for local charities and it was announced that spaghetti and spaghetti sauces would be the Oct. 4 community project. The meeting that day will begin at 11 a.m.

CEOS brunch, Arbor Day events coincide this year

THIS YEAR, the Community Education Outreach Service annual New Members' Recognition Brunch and Monongalia County's Arbor Day coincide — Sept. 23. Cheat Lake United Methodist Church will be the location for the brunch. The theme for this year's brunch is "Branching Out for Community Service" and will include a brunch, an auction to benefit Monongalia County 4-H and Energy Express. There will also be musical entertainment and speakers throughout the morning.

Arbor Day is a nationally celebrated observance that encourages tree planting and care, and the West Virginia Forestry Association and Monongalia County CEOS have teamed up to provide those who attend the brunch with Arbor Day-related information and gifts, including a West Virginia's Forest Resource Fact Book, pencils, bookmarks and young tree saplings to plant.

The CEOS organization provides the county with outreach and education through aid with such programs as Energy Express, 4-H, Project Linus and various other health awareness projects. The vision of CEOS is to be leaders in strengthening individuals, families and communities to become productive contributors to meet the needs of our changing and diverse society. Programs and activities offered by the WVU Extension Service are available to all persons without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age, veteran status, political beliefs, sexual orientation, national origin and marital or family status.

Other CEOS news

■ West Side CEOS met recently and voted in the officers for 2007. They were: Jennifer McCormick, president; Christine Godfrey, vice president; Linda Mills, secretary; and Donna Day, treasurer. The CEOS have been making favors for senior dinners held at Riverside United Methodist Church. Several members will be attending the members' brunch and the upcoming WVCEOS conference at Jackson's Mill in October.

■ Stewartstown CEOS members are working to raise funds that will be used to help provide basic goods for children in one specific orphanage in Kampala, Uganda. There will be a book fair benefiting this project at Barnes & Noble, University Town Centre, on Sept. 30.

Is ethanol too good to be true?

Dear Tom and Ray: I've always wondered about ethanol. It seems too good to be true — you just plant some corn, harvest it and in no time you have fuel for your car.

So I Googled ethanol on the Web. There are tons of Web sites extolling the great benefits of corn-based ethanol as a fuel. Then I found one, healthandenergy.com, that made the opposite case. You guys went to MIT. Am I missing something?

The report on this site says that 131,000 BTUs are needed to make one gallon of ethanol, but each gallon of ethanol only produces 77,000 BTUs. That means we're losing 54,000 BTUs for every gallon we produce. Just wondered if you guys have an opinion. — Charlie

RAY: This issue is not only very controversial, it's also ripe for all kinds of obfuscation from various interested parties.

TOM: Right. I mean, if guys with degrees in chemical engineering can't agree on the answer, how the heck are we supposed to know who's telling the truth?

RAY: Wait a minute. You do have a degree in chemical engi-

TOM: Yeah. But to understand this issue, I'd have to actually read all those papers! That would cut into my nap time.

RAY: All right. Well, from what we can tell, the basic issue is this: When you calculate how much energy it takes to produce a gallon of ethanol, you have to make certain decisions. Everybody agrees that you need to include the energy needed to plant the corn, water it, harvest it and convert the starch to alcohol. But, for instance, do you include the energy needed to manufacture the tractors that plow the fields? Scientists disagree about that.

TOM: They also disagree about the other side of the equation. The guy whose study you refer to, David Pimentel of Cornell University, has been studying this issue for years. He adds up his calculation of the amount of energy needed to grow the corn and then subtracts the amount of energy you get from a gallon of ethanol, and gets a negative number.

RAY: But there are other credible researchers, like David Lorenz and David Morris of the Institute for Local Self-Reliance, who take Pimentel's research and say yes, BUT, a gallon of ethanol isn't the only thing you get from that corn you grow. You also get stuff like corn oil and gluten feed.

So, some of the energy that goes into growing the corn has to be assigned to those other corn by-products, too. When they do the numbers, the energy ratio of ethanol comes out positive.

TOM: So, the answer is not clear. What everybody does agree on is that ethanol made from plants with more cellulose, like switchgrass or sugar cane, will produce more ethanol per acre than corn will. And that will improve the case for ethanol — no matter what your starting point.

RAY: People also agree that using ethanol that we grow at home reduces the amount of foreign oil we need, which may eventually mean we don't have to spend billions to send our kids to guard oil fields overseas. So, there's a national security issue here in addition to a scientific one.

TOM: And then there are other questions. Like, how much of this ethanol blitz is a big, wet, government-subsidized kiss to big agribusiness and corn growers? Is it ethical to use food to fuel our cars when people are going hungry? And if I'm using the stuff in my Grand Cherokee, will the price of a corn dog go through the roof?

RAY: We don't have the answers, Charlie. But we're eager to see some more light shed on the subject. And we're eager to move beyond corn to more efficient plant-based ethanol and see what kind of scale that could achieve. Meanwhile, pass the butter, will ya?

Upstate New York offers a glimpse of Millay, other writers' homes

AUSTERLITZ, N.Y. — Twin baby grand pianos stand in the living room of a white clapboard farmhouse high on the Taconic Ridge on the border of New York and Massachusetts. Here the poet Edna St. Vincent Millay composed and played duets. The sculpted bust of the Greek poet Saffo still dominates one corner, while a painting depicts Millay's husband and sister swimming naked in the outdoor pool, now filled with murky water beneath a heavy canopy of trees.

It's as if Millay had stepped out for a moment, awaiting some of her admirers to restore the house, known as Steepletop, to its heyday. Steepletop, which three years ago opened part of its grounds to the public, is one of several destinations in the area associated with literary figures from the 19th and early 20th centuries. Other sites include the homes of James Fenimore Cooper, Washington Irving, Robert Louis Stevenson and Mark Twain, and just over the Massachusetts state line, Edith Wharton. All are located in scenic areas where you can also hike, enjoy fall foliage and visit other local attractions.

At Steepletop, beyond the gate and around the corner, past an artists' colony and starting down the hill, a poet's walk leads through hardwood forest to Millay's grave. The trail, nearly a half-mile, invites visitors to read 11 poems excerpted along the way, the moss underfoot bright green and little trod.

"All I could see from where I stood/ Was three long mountains and a wood," the first poem began. "Renascence" put young Millay on the literary map in 1912, more than a decade before she arrived at Austerlitz, 30 miles southeast of Albany, with panoramic vistas of western Massachusetts and overlooking the Hudson Valley. It concludes, "And he whose soul is flat — the sky/ Will cave in on him by and by.'

Steepletop was a 700-acre private estate for Millay's bohemian lifestyle — including music, gardens, cocktails, and all types of social drama. This year, 230 acres of Steepletop were sold to New York by the Millay Society for $1.69 million to join a nearby state forest preserve. Her sister, Norma, used another piece to establish the adjacent artist colony in the 1970s. The society plans to use its windfall from the sale to start restoring the farmhouse where Millay died in 1950. It will also work on the remaining land and hire staff to raise funds to complete the job.

"We want to open this house as a museum," board member Frank Crohn said.

The poetry trail and gravesite are open to the public but the farmhouse and immediate grounds are closed, except for special events or by appointment. Norma Millay, who lived there until her death in 1986, kept her sister's things largely undisturbed, which conservators say will make it a particular jewel on the string of literary sites in the Northeast.

Those include Washington Irving's manor home, Sunnyside, on the banks of the lower Hudson River, in the neighborhood where his Headless Horseman rode in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." At the Quarry Farm in Elmira, in New York's Southern Tier, Mark Twain summered for two decades and wrote about Tom Sawyer and

James Fenimore Cooper's mark is all over Cooperstown, settled by his father in what has become known as "Leatherstocking Country" from Cooper's novels of the colonial wilderness, including

"The Last of the Mohicans." The cottage where Robert Louis Stevenson, author of the seagoing adventure "Kidnapped," spent an Adirondack winter has been preserved at Saranac Lake.

In the nearby Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts, Edith Wharton's estate The Mount, has three acres of formal gardens and a sprawling classical revival house. Wharton, author of the Victorian novel "The Age of Innocence," designed both house and gardens and wrote on the subject near the turn of the century.

In 1925, two years after winning the Pulitzer Prize for poetry, Millay bought Steepletop with husband Eugen Boissevain, a Dutch merchant. She was found dead by the caretaker one October day 25 years later on the narrow stairs, where she fell. She was 58 and had lived alone since her husband's death a year earlier.

"She was frail," said Holly Peppe, a Millay scholar and board member. "She was never that well."

The girl from Maine attended Vassar and lived in New York City and traveled in Europe. Neither Millay nor her sisters, an actress and writer, had children. In winter, Boissevain snowshoed or skied two miles down the back road to the post office. But it was no lonely mountaintop existence here.

'There was a lot of partying going on here," Peppe said. The poolside bar was set inside an old stone foundation. The standing joke was the flowers were watered with gin.

Millay was a national celebrity, and her readings would outdraw Robert Frost's, Peppe added. With lyrics like "What lips my lips have kissed ... "she was tagged a love poet, but she considered that limiting and not completely accurate.

'She had a real dramatic flair and people loved her. She was like Madonna of the time," literary executor Elizabeth Barnett said. "And the dresses. We have all of the gowns that she wore. They were just breathtaking.'

The library upstairs holds hundreds of books more or less as she left them, on subjects from the law and science to social justice and literature. A map shows the route of her 1943-44 cross-country reading tour. Her orange armchair is threadbare.

Within an open marriage, Millay had "a rather torrid affair" with George Dillon, who was 13 years younger and collaborated with Millay in translating Baudelaire's "Fleurs du Mal," Peppe said.

In 1951, Norma, whose husband Charles Ellis painted the swim-

The trail is open year-round. The trail is marked by a sign on East Hill Road, reached from State Route 22; parking at the trailhead.

QUARRY FARM: Elmira. Summer home of Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) and his family in the 1870s and 1880s. The house and farm, which belong to Elmira College and serve as a residence for Twain scholars, are closed to the public except for special events. The gardens around the house, which Millay once tended, are overgrown. The trail to the gravesite, where someone recently left a hand-written poem titled 'For Vincent," is not.

In "Mariposa," posted along the walk, Millay wrote: "Butterflies are white and blue/ In this field we wander through./ Suffer me to take your hand./ Death comes in a day or two.

After you enter the Millay Literary Trail you come to this first poem "Renascence, 1912" by Millay at Steepletop. The trail ends at the gravesite.

The National Association of Realtors is joining the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to launch National Preparedness Month 2006, which takes place throughout September. National Preparedness Month is a nationwide effort that encourages Americans to prepare for emergencies of all kinds A special Web site, www.ready.gov, has been created to share helpful and important information.

We believe in the importance of educating individuals on the potential life-saving steps that can be taken to ensure the safety of families in the event of a natural disaster or potential terrorist threat," said importance of preparedness including having a family plan and having an emergency supply kit ready and on hand. "Realtors are a strong voice for communicating the importance of being prepared in case of natural disasters," said Stevens. In addition to joining DHS's efforts, NAR has taken other steps, including the creation of a disaster-planning task force made up of Realtors from all across the county. NAR will hold a natural disaster symposium in Washington on Sept. 18, when participants will discuss the need for a federal natural disaster insurance program, as well as the need to plan and be ready for such disasters.

Communities across the country are planning a variety of activities to draw attention to the issue of planning and being prepared. To find out more about what might be happening in your community, go to www.realtors.org and click on the National Preparedness Month banner.

The National Association of Realtors, the leading advocate for homeownership, affordable housing and healthy communities, is using its voice to communicate the importance of individual preparedness before an emergency happens.

s the temperatures begin to drop, many people may groan at the end of summer's beautiful

What most people don't realize, though, is that nature has a few more tricks up its sleeve before winter actually arrives. Some of the most magnificent flowers bloom just in time to mix and mingle with the deep reds and golden yellows that mark the return of fall every year.

WVU Horticulture Specialist John W. Jett named a couple of the most popular homegrown fall-blooming flowers.

"Right now, it's early fall so plants like the pansy and the mum are starting to bloom," Jett said.

Pansies are a favorite because they are one of the most charming, versatile and colorful plants, Jett said. Plus, they can grow in so many different ares of the United States. Coming from the family Violaceae, he said the pansy appears during both spring and fall when the temperatures are around 60 degrees during the day and 40 degrees at night.

Pansies come in colors ranging from creamy white to deep maroon. Jett said some even display a combination of the colors thus resembling that of a "monkeyface." They thrive in the sun and look best in window boxes, around flower bed borders or even in hanging baskets, he said.

The Chrysanthemum, or simply "mum," is also a popular autumn choice among many gard

"There are a variety of fall mums that are planted. Many people use them because of their popularity and price. Since there is such a large availability, they are cheap to buy," Jett said.

The mum is a perennial flowering plant, which means it will come back each year in generally the same place. Annual flowering plants, on the other hand, must be planted each year, Jett said.

Although, "some people plant mums every September, let them grow and bloom, then pull them up after frost," Jett said.

However, one of the main attractions to using this colorful flower is that it remains blooming well into the chilly months of fall, he said. While they still need protection from hard frosts, mums most always out-bloom their competitors.

Wildflowers are also a favorite during the fall season. West Virginia is one state that is never at a loss for these simple treasures, said West Virginia Wildlife Extension Specialist Bill Grafton. He defended the bad reputations that fall-blooming wildflowers sometimes receive, citing flowers such as goldenrods, asters and sunflowers.

According to Grafton, goldenrod is nothing like its hay-fever-causing look-a-like ragweed. Goldenrod's pollen grains are meant to be carried by insects and are much heavier than those of the ragweed, he said. In fact, there are plenty of reasons why Goldenrod is a pleasure to have around, Grafton said.

"Goldenrod is free of insect disease, seems to attract butterflies, and you don't have to do a lot of work to get that great color," Grafton said.

It is also used for a variety of medicinal purposes. Historically, goldenrod has been used to treat wounds, tuberculosis and rheumatic illnesses, Grafton said. However, it is now being used to treat such things as allergies, kidney stones and sore throats. It also has the unusual ability to crossbreed with other plants. Therefore, there are at least 130 species of goldenrod in the United States alone, he said.

'It's just a pretty doggone nice plant to have around," Grafton said.

Coming in colors ranging from blues and whites to a variety of pinks and purples, the aster holds its reign as one of the most beloved fall-blooming flowers. Grafton said. There are more than 24 species of them in West Virginia alone.

'There are quite a few in this area. They grow in just about every place you can think of — anywhere from swamps to dry soil." Grafton said.

This fall-blooming beauty has been around for more than 4,000 years and is of the family Asteraceae, Grafton said. Even though asters come in a wide variety of sizes, colors and stature, there is one similarity for all: the center of each is made of up to 300 tiny flowerets, he said. They can grow up to two feet tall.

Sunflowers are one plant often not thought of as a fall-blooming flower, but Grafton begs to differ. Also from the family Asteraceae, the sunflower can grow to more than 3-feet tall, he said. Like the aster, it has many disc florets that make up the center of the flower, Grafton said, and these disc florets mature into sunflower seeds, which are actually the fruit of the plant.

'The sunflower is one of my favorites. During fall, they really start to bloom along Decker's Creek Trail," Grafton said. "It's a neat treat to go up there and look at

How to choose a good washer that is energy efficient

DEAR JIM: I want to buy a new energy-efficient clothes washer, but I would prefer a toploader because of back problems. Are top-loading washers really much less efficient than the large front-loading washers?

— Leslie I

Dear Leslie: Front-loading washers are the most efficient design, using about half as much water and detergent as a top-loader, but they are less convenient to load and unload. I use one at my own home and it is difficult not to drop some clean clothes on the floor when unloading it. If you have a bad back, unloading heavy wet clothes can be a problem.

There is a new design of toploading washer, by Whirlpool and Sears, which is almost as efficient as a front-loader. Instead of using a large rotating agitator, it uses a wobbling washer plate and small agitator in the tub to move clothes through the soapy water. This design does not require the entire tub to fill with water and has a fast spin speed for a top-loader.

If you want the most efficient and best cleaning washer, a front-loader is difficult to beat. With the tub on a horizontal axis, the tub has to be only partially filled and the clothes naturally tumble through the soapy water. Fins inside of the tub also catch some of the water and shower it down over the tumbling clothes. The rotation reverses so clothes do not get clumped.

Other advantages of a frontloader are you can stack the dryer on top of the washer to save space and the tub spins at a much higher speed, up to 1,600 rpm, during the rinse cycle. This high speed forces more soapy water out of the clothes.

Just as tumbling the clothes cleans them better, it also rinses out the soap more effectively when the fresh rinse water comes into the tub. You can select the number of rinses (up to five) with the final high-speed spin cycle to remove the most water and soap residue. This also reduces the time required in the dryer so even more energy is saved.

As with most appliances today, front-loading clothes washers are becoming smarter and more automatic. Instead of setting the water level dial depending upon the size of the load, the washer automatically senses the weight of the clothes and selects the most effective and efficient settings. These also have manual overrides in case you prefer a particular setting.

Another option is a combination front-loading washer/dryer. Put your dirty clothes in it and remove clean, dry clothes a couple of hours later. These have a smaller capacity than wash-only models. By using a condensing dryer design, these models do not have to be vented outdoors, so they can be placed anywhere near a faucet and drain.

Collectors seek fantasy art pieces made at the Kirkpatrick Pottery in Illinois

FOR MORE information about antiques and collectibles and free price information, visit our Web site, www.kovels.com

ARTISTS HAVE USED THEIR ART to present their moral and political views for centuries. The Kirkpatrick Pottery in Anna, Ill., made useful storage jars and crocks from its founding in 1859. But the owners, brothers Cornwall and Wallace Kirkpatrick, also made one-of-a kind fantasy pieces that today's collectors seek.

Experts think about 100 of these folk-art pieces were made. Some are pigshaped bottles, about 6 inches long, decorated with incised lines showing railroad routes and events. Some are commemorative jugs that include the names of people and dates. But most unusual are the temperance jugs decorated with 3-D snakes, frogs and other creepy-crawlies. They are meant to show the evils of drinking.

Recent prices for the snake bottles and other unique Anna Pottery pieces range into the thousands. In 1988, a record $16,500 was paid for a jug decorated with snakes and people.

Q: I recently purchased a Chippendale-style bedroom chest from an antiques dealer who was going out of business. It has 21 drawers, a single small door in the middle of the center tier, a pullout shelf in front that can be used as a desk and a smaller pullout shelf on each side. There's a platform at the bottom that pulls out so you can stand on it to reach the top drawers. A brass plate on the chest reads "Amos G. Rhodes, Tier Chest, No. 0166." Can you tell me something about the maker?

A: Amos G. Rhodes opened his first retail furniture store in Atlanta in 1875. Rhodes Furniture Co. eventually owned 80 stores in 13 states, but it went bankrupt in 2005. Rhodes Hall, the mansion Rhodes built in Atlanta in 1904, is now a museum.

Q: I bought two Steiff stuffed animals at the Steiff factory in Germany in 1984. One is a German Shepherd named Arco and the other is a brown bear named Cosy Lommy. Both have their body and ear tags. How should I store them and what are they

A: Steiff was founded in 1877 and has made stuffed animals for well over a century. The most valuable ones are in excellent condition and date from the early 1900s, although Steiff has made some limited editions and museum replicas since the 1980s that sell for high prices. Your animals are not among those. You might find a collector willing to pay $50 or more for each of your animals. In the meantime, we suggest you make sure they're clean, and then store them away from heat, light and humidity.

Tip: Don't lock furniture with antique locks. If they stick, it is almost impossible to open the door or drawer without damaging the wood.

GARDENING Q&A

BY NANCY BRACHEY

McClatchy Newspapers

Q: This spring I planted some caladium bulbs in a semi-shady spot and they have done beautifully. Do I have to dig them up and store them for winter? Or can I mulch them heavily and let them overwinter in the ground?

A: Cooler weather apparently has led a number of you to start thinking about cold weather, and you are interested in protecting your valuable ornamentals through the winter. However, there are still many weeks of mild weather ahead for caladiums and other tropical and near-tropical plants.

When cold weather does approach, dig up your caladiums, cut off the stems and leaves, clean off the soil and let the bulbs dry on newspaper for a couple of days. Then store them in a cardboard box or onion bag in a dark, cool but frost-free place for winter. Replant in early May, when the soil gets warm.

Q: I have holly shrubs along the front of my home. They are about 6 feet tall and 25-plus years old. They are trimmed on a regular basis but they are extremely thin on the inside. Otherwise, they are healthy. Is there anything you could suggest to get the inside to fill out?

A: You can make those hollies fuller by doing two things: tip-pruning the stems late next winter before new growth begins and gentle thinning of the plants to allow light to reach the interior of the plants.

Tip pruning is exactly what it says. You simply go over the plant and trim off the tips of stems. This forces growth to the lateral, or side, buds and encourages a fuller plant.

However, since your plants need extra encouragement, do some gentle thinning of stems to open the interior of the plant to sunlight. To thin, go over the plant and select stems to cut back to the next branch. It should create a billowy effect, the same as you want boxwoods to have. Try to do this thinning evenly over the plant.

If your plants require reduction of height for safety reasons, do this in October, by which time the plants will be approaching dormancy and unlikely to put out new growth that could be damaged should there be an early, deep freeze.

Your plants are obviously mature and have robust root systems that should generate excellent growth next spring, especially if you use some slow-release fertilizer formulated for hollies and other acid-loving plants.

In the future, avoid shearing them to the same length all over, which encourages growth at the tips and reduces it along the interior of the stems.

Q: Some time ago, I read not to cut the old stems off hardy lantanas (Miss Huff) until after freezing weather is over in the spring, so as to keep water from going down the stems and freezing the roots. I would hate to lose them, as they are some of my favorite flowers. So we never cut them, just look at the weird mess until spring. Is this necessary?

A: I have read the same thing. However, I can tell you from both my experience and observation of other plantings of Miss Huff that you do not have to look at the "weird mess" all winter. The roots are hardy to at least minus 5 degrees, and that is a rare event in the Piedmont.

One large planting of Miss Huff that I've watched for many years is always cut back to near ground level in late autumn and covered with several inches of pine needles. The plants rest there all winter and new growth emerges in spring, more robust than ever, even after sitting under cold rain, a thick layer of ice or packed snow. The plants grow larger every year.

Q: What type of plants would grow well in our area if planted under 30-foot-tall cedar trees? I'm considering oak leaf

A: Thanks for giving me the chance to talk about one of our best, native plants for partly sunny to semi-shady areas. This large shrub usually matures as a roundish plant that is 6 to 8 feet tall and about 8 feet wide. It produces lovely white flowers at the ends of graceful, slightly arching stems. The large leaves turn to

It grows best in moist but welldrained soil.

Pat Stewart Realtors hires 2 new agents

Lankford

Two new Realtors - Richard Moore and Tina Lankford – have joined Pat Stewart Realtors.

A lifelong resident of Morgantown, Moore received his education in the public schools and graduated from WVU in 1968 and 1970 with B.S. and master's degrees, respectively, in business administration. He served in the USAF from 1970 to 1973 and was honorably discharged with the ran of captain. Moore taught business and accounting at Fairmont State College (1973) and served as assistant budget director for WVU from 1974-1980.

Subsequently, he worked with Summers Auto and Heavy Duty Truck Parts Inc., a family-owned business from 1980 to 2000 and since 2000 he has worked in various areas of the real estate business before joining Pat Stewart Realtors. He has been married to the former Linda Summers since 1967 and they have two children, Lori and Chris.

Lankford, who holds a bachelor's degree in social work from WVU, has worked with Monongalia Physical Therapy Service since 1984.

As office manager, she handles all aspects of Worker's Compensation, conducts investigations into pending and rejected claims, provides monthly reports for management and has general management over all business matters.

Lankford's other employment includes 10 years with Wedgewood Family Practice and four years with WVIJ.

She also has completed some credits toward a master's degree in special education.

"Both of these new agents bring a tremendous amount of talent and experience to our office, and we are delighted to have them," Pat Stewart said.

'Cabinets are the foundation of the kitchen:' Reface them instead of replacing

BY STACY DOWNS McClatchy Newspapers

The kitchen is the most expensive room to overhaul, and new cabinets eat up more than half the space's remodeling budget. Instead of spending the average $30,000 it costs to replace cabinets, does it make more sense to resurface them? It can, says kitchen designer Sally Sweeney of Kitchens Only, a company independent of specific product lines, which she runs from her home. Hang on to your cabinets if they have these three things going for them: Everything inside can be easily reached. "Cabinets with dark corners where things get lost, or ones that are too narrow to store anything, aren't worth saving," she said.

A good relationship with the refrigerator, stove, microwave, dishwasher and sink. "Cabinets are the foundation of a kitchen," she said, "because they set up the workspace and hold the stuff.

At least mediocre craftsmanship. For starters, that means the cabinet boxes shouldn't be made of ultra-thin particleboard. "You just can't make a cheap cabinet into a good cabinet," she said.

Several resurfacing options are out there if your cabinets work well but don't look their

Repainting

Leslie Sobek, of Leawood, Kan., replaced her laminate countertops with granite, the white tile backsplash with tumbled stone and old appliances with new ones. Her cabinets functioned fine, but the shiny orange sheen of the golden oak fronts seemed hopelessly outdated, and she didn't have the money for new ones. "Sometimes just changing the handles isn't enough to make a cabinet look different," she said.

Sobek received an $8,300 bid to have her 35 drawers and doors refinished. whelmed by the expensive prospect, she decided to do the work herself. "I spent weeks preparing the wood," she said. "I purchased a sander and started to experiment. What an enormous job it is to do this. It took weeks to figure it out, and the doors that I worked on looked horrible."

So Sobek started calling faux-finish painters in the phone book. She found Sarah Smith & Associates of Overland Park, Kan., a team of three to six female painters depending on the job, to do the work for $2,300.

Now her cabinets are brick red with brown glaze. She hasn't had to retouch them since the work was finished in August 2005. However, many people with painted cabinets have had to touch up nicks in the paint, so it's a good idea to keep a professional's special paint blend on hand.

Although this type of resurfacing is the least expensive option especially if you do it yourself — it takes hours of prep work. Expect to pay more for elaborate paint jobs that include faux details such as watermarks or fly flicks.

Refinishing

Sydney Mosburg of Overland Park, Kan., doesn't consider herself a do-it-yourselfer, but her kitchen cabinets turned her into one. She was sick of the country look of her kitchen with its golden oak doors. Her friend told her about a cabinetry refinishing class at Surfaces Fine Paint & Decorative Arts Studio in Lenexa.

Refinishing is different from merely priming and painting cabinets. It means degreasing, stripping and sanding before adding coats of paint or stain. Mosburg spent a month refinishing the 37 doors and drawers in her kitchen. She transported the cabinet pieces to Surfaces' work space where cure lights helped them dry. To pass the time, she listened to books on tape. "It took a lot of patience and time, but it ended up being fun," Mosburg said. "I'd do it again.'

Mosburg spent about $900 for the project, which included materials and studio time. Her cabinets are off-white with a handrubbed brown finish. "I like how you can still MERGURY see the texture in the grain of wood," she said. "The cabinets now look like pieces of furniture.'

Refinishing takes the most prep work of any resurfacing option, but the results last longer than priming and painting. Keep in mind some chemical strippers can emit hazardous fumes.

The work involved in refinishing often leads professionals to charge almost as much as refacing. And with refinishing, you're stuck with the existing style of the same old cabinets.

Refacing

Keith Harmon and his wife, Lucy, had nutmeg-brown kitchen cabinets from the 1960s. The doors were banged up, but the cabinet boxes were in OK shape. The couple chose Cabinet-Reface.com of Overland Park, Kan., to reface their cabinets. Thin sheets of real maple, stained with Sherwin-Williams' Martha Stewart Tractor Green, were glued to the cabinet boxes. New molding and doors, stained the same color, were installed.

The Harmons spent $10,000 on the cabinets. They chose refacing, rather than replacing, and also to use their kitchen during the remodeling process.

The disadvantage of refacing is the price tag, which is the most expensive compared to other options. It's key to ask professionals whether they use laminate or real-wood veneer. Keep in mind that refacing is usually too difficult for nonprofessionals.

Keith Harmon said refacing his cabinets was worth the money. 'The cabinets make it feel like a whole new kitchen," he said. "And that's the point."

Don't forget the insides

To add function, pull-out shelves, lazy Susans, drawer dividers, baskets or plate racks can be retrofitted in cabinets. Components start at $50 and are available through cabinet refacing companies and home stores.

Send newsletter easily with a bit of regrouping

Q. I am looking for a program that will allow me to put out an electronic newsletter to be sent by e-mail. I want something easy to use, above all. I do my own e-mail in Microsoft Office, and there may be a way to use that program, but I can't see what it would be. Any thoughts?

- Vivian Browner aol.com A. I have thoughts about a great alternative suggestion than just e-mail for digital newsletters, Ms. B. But first let me note that most e-mail programs make it very easy to create an e-mail mailing list and send the same message or newsletter to a large number of people.

Consider Outlook Express, the e-mail program built into Windows. With Outlook Express open, click the Address Book icon on the toolbar and click on File in the address window that this summons. There you will find a prompt to add a new name or to add a new group. You simply enter the e-mail addresses of everybody you want to get the newslette and give the Group its own name.

Now open the Tool item in the Address Book display and select the Action choice. This brings a prompt to send a message to each person in the selected group. Your e-mail program will run automatically, letting you write a note and fire away with newsletters for each individual.

Now let me make that alternative suggestion I promised.

Yahoo and Google let members start group message boards that will be set up on a special page on the companies' respective servers but which will largely use e-mail to post and read messages among all group members. The idea is that you set up a number of names, and later you can add folks by having them subscribe to your group. All subscribed members get a copy of every e-mail that other members send in reply to past messages, or that were sent by someone who wants to bring up a new topic.

In addition to getting all the postings by way of e-mail, everybody in the group can go online to the Yahoo or Google Web site and read all of the messages posted together.

To make sure I'm up to date, I set up a group on each service and invited myself and the missus to join each.

Almost instantly we got emails informing us that the group was being started and inviting us

Both setups worked so well that I say toss a coin to choose. Here are two addresses to get started: Groups. Yahoo.com or Groups.Google.com.

ducator, author, bowhunter and conservationist. Those are the four words used to describe Dave Samuel on his Web site.

Samuel has always had a passion for hunting. Through the years, he has made a living doing what he loves because he's been able to turn his favorite hobby

Samuel, 66, has expressed his views on wildlife in columns for many hunting and wildlife Web sites. He's also appeared on television hunting shows and writes columns about the outdoors for The Dominion Post. He has written for Bow Hunter Magazine for the past 35 years and has served as the conservation editor for the magazine since 1971.

Samuel was taught to use a gun when he was 12, but it was never his favorite way of hunting. He started bow hunting soon after because of his passion for archery.

With bow hunting, you can be part of the surroundings and you can ready your shoot with accuracy," Samuel said. "It is also challenging. I enjoy the quietness and calm of the outdoors when I go hunting."

Besides 54 years of bow hunting skills, Samuel has a doctorate in wildlife biology. Samuel taught as a wildlife management professor at WVU for 30 years. He taught about the negative impact on hunting and wildlife management until his retirement from the job in 1998.

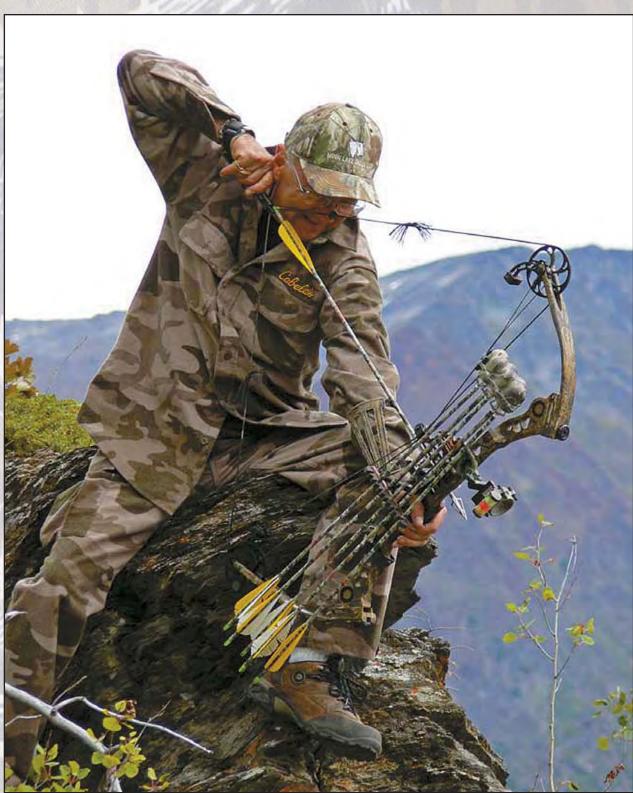

But Samuel didn't stop there. Besides writing, he makes speeches for dinners and presentations, as well as participating in some charity events for churches. He's written a book, "Know Hunting: Truth, Lies and Myths," which covers what he's learned from hunting, combined with information from his lectures when he was a professor. But he is quick to point out that his book isn't a "how-to" guide for hunting.

This book will be more for the understanding of why hunters hunt and why protesting hunting happens," Samuel said. "And above all, the effects that hunting and protesting does for the wildlife management in a negative way if not monitored."

Samuel has also been a guest speaker for his former student and WVU wildlife professor John Edwards' class that focuses on the same subject as Samuel's class.

"I have used his book in our class lectures, and it is a great pleasure to have the author of the students," Edwards said.

Edwards said the book has been helpful as he uses bits and the class that still hold true to bowhunting and wildlife in today's society.

But with his busy life of speeches and hunting, Samuel still finds time for his wife, Catherine, and his stepdaughter, Jennifer. He said they not only support his writing, but also his regular hunting trips, which have taken him everywhere from Africa to Canada hunting and observing wildlife.

Hunting can be a valuable tool, Samuel said, as long as it isn't abused or misused. That's the point of most of his teachings, which are now more in written word and book form.

Samuel's next book will focus on deer hunting and his bow hunting journeys.

As an outdoors writer, Samuel said there are some rules to follow for those wanting to follow in his footsteps and pursue this kind of career.

"You've got to write what you know and be able to develop your own style in writing," Samuel said. "It will make you stand out among others who are writing the same subject as you, and you will get noticed for that.

Do research before the big job interview

BY MARIE G. McINTYRE McClatchy-Tribune News Service

Q. As an applicant, I get frustrated when interviewers don't bother to tell me anything about the company or the job. Without this information, how can I know whether I want a future with a potential employer? Are job applicants expected to learn about the company on their own before accepting a position?

— In the Dark A. Sounds to me like someone is being a bit lazy. Before you ever set foot in an interviewer's office, you should have thoroughly researched the company. Fortunately, the Internet makes this so very easy. In the olden times, people had to dig around in libraries, but now you can gather a wealth of information with just a few clicks.

Interviewers actually expect you to have done some homework, so a lack of knowledge may cause them to question both your interest and your common sense. Always remember that employers look for applicants who are motivated to work for their particular organization. If you know nothing about the place, how can you be excited about working there?

Research also has other benefits. You can ask questions that may impress the interviewer, like "How was your company able to achieve such a significant increase in market share?" And the more you learn, the better equipped you will be to decide whether an employer is a good fit for you.

You seem surprised that interviewers withhold information, so here's the reason: They want unbiased answers to their questions. The more they tell you, the more clues you have about how to give the preferred response.

If you need more information to answer a question, however, you should politely request it. For example: "I could address that subject more thoroughly if I knew more about the type of projects involved in this position.'

Q. My husband, "Jerry," is experiencing a lot of internal was the acting manager of his team. Now he has a new boss whose style is very different from his previous manager. She is slow to act on things like filling open positions and resolving customer service issues. Morale is at an alltime low, and Jerry feels responsible for the downward spiral in the department. He has tried talking with her, but she is not a strong communicator. What can he do? Worried Wife

A. Getting a new boss can be a tough transition, especially if you liked your previous manager. And when you have to step down from an "acting" role, the adjustment is even more difficult. Unfortunately, however, everyone has to adapt to the boss that they're given.

If Jerry plans to continue in this job, he must bury his "internal strife" and accept the fact that he has a challenging manager. Instead of fretting about things he can't control, he should put on his game face and maintain a pleasant and cooperative demeanor at the office.

Since Jerry's stuck with this boss, he might as well figure out how to manage her slower decision-making style. Strategies could include clear agreement on schedules, reminders about important issues, and taking independent action when appropriate. Or he may simply need to become more patient.

If he can do it without complaining, Jerry might also help her understand the problems caused by delays. For example: "We have a customer issue that's been pending for awhile. If we don't address it soon, we might lose this account. Would you like me to follow up on it?"

Although the decline in morale is understandably troubling, that's really no longer Jerry's responsibility. But he can help by refusing to participate in gripe sessions and by coaching others on how to work successfully with the new boss.

Generation Y finding the comforts of home at work

BY IEVA M. AUGSTUMS

The Dallas Morning News (MCT) hen Tara Kirk arrives at work, she immediately walks upstairs to the kitchen and grabs

Typical morning behavior, right? But a majority of her coworkers at Firehouse, an advertising and branding agency in Far North Dallas, do the same thing and then they sit and socialize in their company's living room.

"I just like to catch up and then I head to my room — oh, I mean office," says the 24-year-old copywriter. "It's nice having your own room. It's a coming of age type of thing. It's a status symbol."

Generation Y, the younger work force known for wearing flip-flops and listening to iPods at the office, has been transforming the culture of corporate America.

But it's also changing the physical workspace. Businesses are now providing "personal" rooms, more open areas and break lounges with full kitchen amenities. The corner office with windows is no longer just for executives. Instead, it's now a cubicle for any employee traditional offices have been moved to the inside of the floor, sans city view.

"The way we design space today is radically different than 10 years ago," says Kim Hogan, a principal at Corgan Associates Inc., a national architecture and interior design firm.

In Deloitte's downtown Dallas office, the difference is as distinct as night and day.

On one of the company's floors, dark hallways encompass creamcolored cubicles. The only natural light is seen through partner offices on the outer edges of the

But on another level, bright white and open spaces greet workers. On this floor, half-size cubicles get the window view and fullsize offices sit in the middle. There are "touch-down" workstations for drop-in workers, large gathering areas and full-size kitchens and dining areas that serve as break rooms.

"From my perspective, what the younger people are bringing is a refreshing look, and we have a willingness to look at it," says Stan Smith, principal and national director of next-generation initiatives for Deloitte & Touche USA LLP. "It's not that we should have already been doing this. ... The young people are helping.'

Deloitte's Irving, Texas, offices have the same concept, as do many of its offices nationwide, including Denver, Chicago and Deloitte, which has made its office modifications over the last couple of years, is feeling a sense of urgency to accommodate the changing work force.

'This is the first time we've had four generations working in the workplace," says Rebecca Szelc, a partner for Deloitte in Dallas. "It's

"They are working with colors, plants and light to create an environment that feels more airy and more open even though more people are working in smaller spaces," says Morrison, noting that cubicle space is smaller and divider walls are shorter.

"They still have a sense of space and privacy." But younger workers — Gen Y

(those born after 1980) and Gen X (those born 1965-1979) — also want multipurpose rooms and diverse functional spaces.

"We hardly design any project anymore without some sort of central gathering that brings people together," says Hogan, whose company is constructing a huilding for itself in Dallas with some of these concepts.

'Gen X and Gen Y are social. They really want to be part of a working community.

But wanting to work in an enjoyable team environment isn't

James Helms, art director/associate creative director, and Jason Fox (background), writer/associate creative director, work on ad ideas in a Firehouse meeting room furnished like a den.

"It was kind of like a frat party crossed with corporate America, Morrison says. "[For] Gen X for the most part, it was their first experience with a nontraditional work space."

Although Morrison doubts offices are on the way back to those days, he says companies will have to start rethinking their work environments, if they haven't already.

"Look at young adults today they are the bottom of the ladder. They are feeling the greatest pain with the least benefits," he says. "And in that sense, a way a company can start to increase employee satisfaction is to put that little cappuccino machine out there." The physical changes are just part of Deloitte's larger efforts to attract and retain young people. And they seem to be working.

Current employees — everyone from Gen Y'ers to baby boomers (born 1946-1964) — don't want to

"There's a lot of change in our ' Deloitte's Szelc says "A lot of the third- and fourthyear seniors are not leaving because they are not seeing that standard out there."

Even the youngest employees plan to stay put.

"The bar has been set," says Allison Johnson, a 24-year-old audit practices staff member in Dallas. "The way the floors have been designed, it's very modern. It definitely appeals to our age.

"Why leave when it's a fun, very enjoyable workplace?"

Crabbers have long endured, but their jobs don't get any easier

BY STEVE GOLDSTEIN

PASADENA, Md. — The sun was just peeking above the horizon as Ed Sienkiewicz nosed the Katie G out of the Patapsco River into the broad expanse of the Chesapeake Bay, picking up speed as he headed east.

In 30 minutes, he guided the 32foot dead-rise workboat alongside the first buoy — a seeming miracle of navigation in the vast sameness of the bay. Wearing rubber overalls, Tshirt and ball cap, he grabbed the buoy and attached the line to an electric winch.

Moments later, the first of 20 black galvanized wire pots rose from the sea, a half-dozen caged crabs scudding in alarm. Brock Spilker, 19, grabbed the pot and turned it over, shaking the crabs onto the culling table and stuffing a menhaden into the bait trap before stacking the pot in a rack.

All across the bay, the scene was repeated on a late August day, as watermen pried a living from the sea.

It was so picturesque, so soulnourishing, that pushing away thoughts of a fading way of life on an increasingly imperiled bay seemed the natural thing to do.

There are 64,000 square miles in the watershed of the Chesapeake, North America's largest estuary and the world's third-largest estuary, but life isn't getting any easier for those who harvest the bay, many of whom are third-, fourth- even fifth-generation watermen.

On the Katie G, a neighbor's son entering eighth grade quickly sorted the jimmies (males) and sooks (females) into plastic crates, and tossed the undersized (less than 5 inches) overboard.

Once all 20 pots had been emptied and rebaited, the process was reversed and, in less than five minutes, the traps were back in the water. Sienkiewicz pushed the throttle forward and made for the next buoy etched with his license number.

One line produced a measly haul, the pots evoking the aftermath of a jailbreak, and Sienkiewicz hauled in the buoy and towed it 250 yards away, to deeper water.

"That's called crabbin'," he said with a wry grin.

The bay is victimized by its own beauty. Between 1970 and 1997, the Chesapeake region's population grew by 28 percent and is now more than 15 million. By 2020, it's expected that nearly 18 million people will live in the region.

"Population growth begets all the stressful impacts — development, energy consumption, pollution, runoff from farms and roads, and loss of dock space," said Michael Slattery, assistant director of the Maryland Department of Natural Resources.

There is also a changing demographic, away from the rural roots of the area.

The fact that we have these bucolic fishing communities on the bay is less and less important to people overall," Slattery said, "and there is less public will to fight to preserve these traditions.'

New residents of the bay communities love the romance but not the reality. When their watermen neighbors fire up boat engines at 5 a.m. or pile crab pots in their yards, the civilians curse the newfound

"They don't understand what we do, so they want to come here and change it," said Larry Simns, president of the Maryland Watermen's Association. "We work early, and we stay late.'

And they pay more. Fuel costs have doubled; bait — particularly clams — costs a lot more; and the galvanized wire pots have risen to between $25 and $30 from $12 in 1996.

Said Sienkiewicz: "It isn't that we have to work so much harder, but we have to work smarter.'

Working smarter entails battling diverse forces, from declining water quality and low oyster stocks to state regulations that restrict time on the water. Commercial interests feel pressured by recreational fishermen and their advocacy groups, such as the Coastal Conservation Association.

Dead zones — oxygen-free zones have gotten bigger in the last few

Crab stocks vary from year to

"Just because we caught 40 million pounds of crabs last year doesn't mean we can expect the same this year," said Simns, 68, who started crabbing out of the eastern shore with his great-grandfather. "Some folks expect consistency. We don't."

Sienkiewicz works the water year-round. He has 500 crab pots in the bay from April to late November. Shoreline Seafood in Crofton, Md., pays him $100 for every 40 pounds of crabs. In the winter, he uses gill nets to fish for rockfish.

In a very good year, Sienkiewicz will make more than $30,000.

Unfavorable weather will keep him at the dock and make that num-

"We don't get credit from the state for missed days," the bayman Several years ago, the state Department of Natural Resources passed regulations, including size limits, to reduce crabbing "effort." The rules curtail the time a waterman can be on the bay and require a mandatory day off Sunday or Monday.

Diminishing, too, are the numbers of men and women trying to wrest a living from the water.

In 1996, the state licensed 7,876 watermen. Ten years later, the number has dwindled to 6,656 and an even smaller number are making their living at it, said Gina Hunt, the assistant director of Maryland fisheries.

The economics are daunting, Slat-"If you're a young kid growing up on the shore ... are you going to work that hard to make peanuts and maybe not be able to take care of your family? Or maybe move outside of Annapolis and work for Geeks-on-Wheels?" he asked.

Watermen "work exceedingly hard to be comfortable," Slattery said, "and for them it's all about the independence, the attachment to

Bloggers look online for their 15 clicks of fame

BY ERIC BENDEROFF

McClatchy Tribune Chicagoan Elaine Soloway, the author of "The Division Street Princess." has an obsession: She checks each day, often more than once, to see where her book ranks on Amazon.com's sales chart. "I feel really good when it's in five figures and I'm a little down when it's in six figures," she said.

Soloway checks because it's crucial to know what might be driving sales of her first book, a memoir. But she also checks compulsively because "I check all the time," she said on a day when her book had jumped to 92,407. "If you consider that obsessed, I am." She's not the only one.

The Internet's ability to track everything one looks at or clicks on has created a new gauge for the millions of computer users who have a flag planted in cyberspace:

How popular am I?

In the eminently measurable online world, people fixate on how many 'friends' they can add to their MySpace.com Web pages, while bloggers strain to get their sites ranked as high as possible.

There is even a term — ego surfing to describe the phenomenon of people who constantly monitor for new responses to comments posted on a message board, or who check over and over to see how many viewers have logged onto their photo display at

This infatuation over one's standing in the digital age is an outcropping of the most unique and basic attributes of the Internet — its ability to keep count. It's also a reflection of how the Web has evolved into a culture where participation is encouraged and opinions matters.

Web sites put this tracking information to use in different ways, all based on the idea that there is value in keeping tabs, continually and instantaneously, on what people are doing online. As a result, Amazon keeps score of book sales—from "Freakonomics" at No. 13 to "A History of the Fragrant Rose," currently No. 1,063,867 — while Youtube.com promotes its top 100 videos and Yahoo.com lists its most e-mailed news stories. But for those Web denizens who use the Internet as a means of communication and identity, the ability to count visitors, or comments, has become an entirely new form of personal validation, and even a way to make money.

More firms seeing benefits of letting workers step back from labors

BY AVRUM D. LANK

fter six years of running a nonprofit organization, Colleen A. Fitzgerald was worn out — mentally, physically and spiritually.

So at the start of this year, the 57year-old woman "went from full tilt to full stop," she recalled over a cup of coffee recently.

For three months, she holed up in the mountains of New Mexico and Lake Country of southeast Wisconsin, reading, painting, hiking and thinking.

She emerged from the sabbatical with "more energy, more bold ideas, more enthusiasm and conviction," she explained in an essay recounting her experiences.

Fitzgerald had certain advantages in being able to do so: She was her own boss, her son is grown, and her husband was supportive and had a job that provided health insurance during her time

But the idea of routinely offering sabbaticals is starting to creep into private business, both as a way of retaining experienced employees and helping recruit younger ones.

According to a 2001 survey by the Society for Human Resources Management, about 14 percent of employers provide unpaid sabbaticals as a benefit.

"Common in academia, sabbatical leave is becoming a more common tool in business," the society says on its Web site (shrm.org). "As adapted by many non-academic organizations, sabbaticals are provided to allow employees to pursue education, engage in personal projects or attend to special family needs."

"The baby boomers are taking sabbaticals to open up an opportunity for younger people to come in, and then they come back to help mentor," said Larry Pheifer, executive director of the Human Resources Management Associa-

Six years at a nonprofit group left Colleen Fitzgerald worn down, so she took a sabbatical. After three months to recharge, she started a new company, but she still reserves Friday mornings for painting. Slowly, businesses have seen the value of sabbaticals.

tion of Southeast Wisconsin. "It is not really retirement, but it is a sabbatical type of thing." Organized, regular sabbatical programs are rare among companies in the Milwaukee area.

"We have looked at that, but they are expensive to do "said Leslie Dixon, chief human resources officer for Robert W. Baird & Co., the Milwaukee securities firm.

The company employs about 1,300 in the metro area, but has another 1,000 employees scattered around the U.S., in Europe and Asia. "We are doing it more on an asneeded basis," she said.

Baird encourages some financial analysts who have been promoted to take a month off, she said.

When it comes to time off for other employees, "we have tried to teach our managers that they have the autonomy to do what they need to do, as long as they meet the business need," Dixon said.

She has been in human resource management for 19 years, and in the past decade, she has seen a surge in consideration of leaves and flexible work arrangements that let employees better balance work and life.

"We have had more people asking," she said. "The more we look at it the more we realize that to attract and retain the best people possible, we needed to have" such policies.

The changing face of the work force also is forcing such changes, said Shelley Jurewicz, executive director of the Young Professionals of Milwaukee.

Younger employees see time flexibility as much more important reasons to stay with an employer than do most companies, she said.

"You are going to have to put ergy into these emerging top ben efits if you want to compete for talent," she said.

Jurewicz agrees with Pheifer that sabbaticals also can help to retain older baby boomer employees as they start to think about retirement.

How can I keep other people from stealing my business idea?

AllBusines.com (MCT)

Q. I've been circulatplan to colleagues, lawyers and potential investors. How do I make sure they don't steal my busitime you've spent developing your business idea, the last thing you need is for someone to steal your ideas and beat you to market. There are many instances where you'll want to share confidential information with another party. But the key is making sure that the other party will be bound to respect the confidential information you provide them and not use the information to your detriment.

Thankfully, most people you'll show your business plan to are professionals. If they think you have a viable idea, they'll want to invest in it or join your team. And in that case, it's in their best interest to keep your idea confidential. Just to be on the safe side, though, describe your product or service in your business plan, but don't include a full set of blueprints: critical data such as circuit designs or the confidential pricing with key clients. To limit the circulation of your business plans, clearly state on the cover page of your plan that photocopying or duplicating your business plan is strictly prohibited. You can go one step further and ask that anyone who reads your business plan sign a confidentiality or nondisclosure agreement (NDA).

NDAs reached mythic proportions during the height of the dot-com boom, when most startup companies were rabid about them. But now it's important to be more discerning before requiring others to sign an NDA vou don't want it to be a barrier in an otherwise productive business conversation. In fact, venture capitalists often refuse to sign NDAs before looking at your business plan.

There are many instances when an NDA is appropriate. NDAs can help protect your company's confidential information when dealing with customers, suppliers, employees and the press. A typical NDA requires the signer not to divulge trade secrets, patents or other confidential information to anyone outside the company receiving the information. A written NDA is an important legal tool; if a company can prove that someone violated the agreement, the company may be entitled to injunctive relief, damages and even compensation for lost profits.

The principal situations to use NDAs are when you wish to convey something valuable about your business or idea, but you want to ensure that the other side doesn't steal the information or use it without your approval. Here are some typical situations where a confidentiality agreement is often used:

■ An invention or business idea will be presented to a potential partner, investor or distributor.

■ Financial, marketing and other information will be shared with a prospective buyer of your business.

■ A new product or technology will be shown to a prospective buyer or licensee.

■ A company or individual will be providing you with services and will have access to some sensitive information in providing those

■ Employees will have access to confidential and proprietary information about your business in the course of their job.

But nondisclosure

agreements aren't foolproof. Your ability to enforce an NDA depends on many factors, like the value of the information in question, how and why someone violated the agreement, and whether the information is available from other public sources.

EMPLOYMENT Q&A

BY ELLEN SIMON Associated Press

O: How can I avoid automated customer service lines and speak to a human? And what can I do if I'm still not happy after I talk to a person?

A: You're not alone in your frustration with automated customer service lines. Paul M. English, a software engineer, got so frustrated, he started a Web site, gethuman.com in 2005. The site now has a database with the customer service numbers and shortcuts to a human being at 415 companies.

To talk to a human at Costco.com's customer service line, for instance, press 5 twice. To talk to a real person at Bellsouth FastAccess DSL, press 11112 at prompts, ignoring messages. To talk to a real person at Ikea, press 0 quickly and repeatedly. We tried the tip for Verizon Communications Inc.'s phone service (don't press or say anything) after this conversation:

Mechanical voice: "In just a few words, tell me what I can do to help you." Reply: "My phone doesn't work."

Mechanical voice: "I don't understand. Please try again.'

Gethuman's tip worked. The site, which was launched in February, has been wildly popular; it's now visited by about 20,000 people a day, according to English. Volunteers maintain the database. Gethuman.com, along with Microsoft Corp. and Nuance Communications Inc., which both sell automated-phone system platforms and services, are developing a standard that will use a distinctive series of tones to let customers know they can dial 0 or say "operator" to reach an operator and dial GBP or "repeat" to have a phone tree's menu repeated.

Lunch should be work-free

BY HARRY WESSEL
The Orlando Sentinel (MCT)

Q. I have an hourly job as a highwaysign maintenance worker. We are given a half-hour, unpaid lunch break every day, during which we are required to monitor the company radio

I thought that, for a lunch break to be unpaid, workers have to be "totally free of all job-related duties." Is my employer's lunchtime requirement legal?

A. Almost certainly not. "Employees must be completely relieved from duty to be off the clock" during unpaid meal breaks, said David Spalter, a labor-and-employment lawyer with Jill Schwartz & Associates in Winter Park, Fla.

Federal laws are unambiguous on this point, Spalter said, and they apply to any private company covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act as well as all federal, county and municipal employees. State employees, who are not covered by the FLSA, are exceptions.

So if you are a state employee, the practice may be legal. If you aren't, it's almost certainly not.

A survey of executive men and women, taken at 20-year intervals beginning in 1965, shows that, while attitudes have shifted in regard to female executives, some real gaps remain.

Unlike 40 years ago, men are now as favorable toward female executives as women are.

But when asked about the prospects of the business community fully accepting female executives, men and women still differ, according to the study's lead author, Texas A&M University professor Dwayne Whitten.

Women still have less faith than men that they will be accepted in executive roles, and women are more likely to think they must be exceptional to succeed.

Citing the fact that women hold fewer than one-fifth of corporate officer positions in Fortune 500 companies, "men's perceptions are overly rosy," wrote Whitten and his co-authors.

Their research is scheduled for publication in the September issue of Harvard Business Review.

It's no secret that U.S. workers receive and take a lot less vacation than those in other industrialized countries.

That remains true even though U.S. workers this year received an average 14 days of vacation — two more days than they received in 2005, according to the latest American Deprivation Vacation study by the online-travel company Expedia.

Here's how those 14 vacation days stacked up against some of the competition, according to Expedia:

- Australian workers averaged 17 vacation days a year.
- Canadian workers averaged 19 vacation days.
- British workers averaged 24 vacation
- days.
   German workers averaged 27 vacation days.
- French workers averaged 39 vacation days

days.

Receiving and taking vacation days are two different things, however.

U.S. workers, for example, on average will use only 10 of their 14 vacation days this year.

That's more days "left on the table" than any of the other listed countries. For those keeping score, Australian, Canadian and French workers leave two days on the table, while British and German workers leave one.

Santa Claus is coming to town — several months early

Some stores begin filling shelves with holiday items now

The Philadelphia Inquirer (MCT

It's that special time of year again, when the first plush Santas, singing snowmen and blown-glass Christmas ornaments begin to appear on store shelves.

You know. September. What, you find it hard to muster yuletide spirit when you're wearing a bathing suit?

Well, too bad.

At T.J. Maxx in Norristown, Pa., 2-foot-tall Santa figurines are already watching over a clutch of silver stocking-hangers, wooden-soldier nutcrackers and glittery tabletop trees. A few doors down, at the Dollar Tree, Frosty snow globes wait near the cash registers, not far from a selection of redand-green ornaments.

At the Cracker Barrel Old Country Store in Plymouth Meeting, Pa., a full-size Christmas tree is up and shining. Below its boughs, a toy Santa blows a saxophone, though it's hard to hear his version of "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town" while a nearby mechanical snowman is crooning "Jingle Bells."

"It's a retail mentality that you need to be first out of the gate, and people keep making the race longer and longer," said William Cody, managing director of the Baker Retailing Initiative at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

Labor Day, Columbus Day and Halloween, much less Thanksgiving, are now mere speed bumps on the highway to Christmas, folded into the 115-day month of Septoctnocember.

Researchers call it "Christmas creep." That's shorthand for the ever-backward march of the holiday retail season.

"It burns me up," said Carter Lee, who is raising two daughters with her husband, Peter Maas, in Haddonfield, N.J. "It makes me want to go the other way. It makes me not want to buy anything."

It's not that area malls are decked in garlands. If last year is a gauge, that won't happen until Nov. 1, followed three weeks later by the arrival Santa and his crew. It's that Christmas accoutrements — so far, no Hanukkah goods have been spotted — are being and-clay carolers.

"It's over the top," said Claire Daniels, of Springfield, Pa. "I would never, ever, positively never buy a Christmas item in September or August. On principle."

The pitch for other holidays comes early, too, Halloween candy has been in grocery stores for weeks, raising the question of why anyone would want to serve, much less eat, a 3-month-old Snickers bar.

But experts say the Christmas season starts earliest because it's crucial to retailers.

In 2004, shopping malls took in $227.8 billion — 28 percent of their annual sales — in November and December, according to the International Council of Shopping Centers. If a retailer can boost its take by getting customers in the holiday mood earlier, it's worth it.

The question is whether the jump start results in increased sales — in which case Rudolph may someday appear arm in arm with the Easter Bunny — or whether it only spreads the same dollars over a longer period. No one has a definitive answer. "To the extent that you, the retailer, are there, and your competitor isn't, you may grab a few extra dollars," said Stephen Hoch, chair of the marketing department at Wharton.

The danger, he said, isn't just in turning off consumers but in becoming a prisoner to that promotion. One way retail sales are measured is year against year. If going early brought in extra dollars last year, a store is almost forced to go out as early, or earlier, this year.

Cracker Barrel put up Christmas displays on Aug. 1. Terry Maxwell, senior vice president of retail of the Tennessee-based restaurant-store chain, compared them to the previews before a movie, a way to offer "just a little hint of the coming season."

He wouldn't disclose figures, but he said Cracker Barrel has found that having Christmas items out in summer generates additional purchases, not just early ones.

"We're doing quite a bit better than what we anticipated," Maxwell said.

Gary Sugarman, chief operating officer of Steve & Barry's University Sportswear, doesn't like stores to haul out the Christmas stock before November.

It's a marketing crutch, he said, store managers thinking "people buy lots at Christmas, and I want to extend that as far as I can."

Ford touts 2007 Ranger's safety, security

For 2007, the Ford Ranger offers genuine "Built Ford Tough" heritage in a high-quality, high-value package. Attractive pricing, an abundance of series, a variety of 4x2 and 4x4 drivetrains, a trio of cab configurations and a wealth of options mean there's a customized Ranger for every buyer.

Ranger emphasizes safety and security for the 2007 model year, with Ford's Personal Safety System, tire pressure monitoring system and SecuriLock passive anti-theft system all as included as standard equipment. The Personal Safety System includes a front-passenger sensing system and dual-stage driver and front-passenger air bags. The tire pressure monitoring system uses sensors mounted on each of the wheels except the spare to monitor air pressure.

Design and equipment

The 2007 Ranger is available in XL, and FX4 Level II trims, in regular-cab and in two- and four-door Super-Cab configurations. A 7-foot box option is available on XL and XLT regular-cab models. Two new 16inch aluminum wheels are available across most of the 2007 Ranger

Three striking new colors help draw attention to key exterior design elements that include aggressive lower valance and power-dome hood structures and a nostril grille: Pueblo Gold Clearcoat, Vista Blue Clearcoat Metallic and the reintroduction of Screaming Yellow.

The sporty and functional interior features seats with sculpted bolsters and seat backs for comfort and support. Also available are sport bucket seats, leather-trimmed seating surfaces and a leather-trimmed steering wheel.

Comprehensive packages allow customers to order a Ranger that fits their needs — from the FX4 Level II Package with skid plates, bold aluminum wheels and Bilstein shocks to an earth-shaking, 510-watt audio system with the TREMOR

Shortly after the 2007 model-year launch, all audio systems except the base AM/FM receiver will be equipped with an auxiliary audio input jack as standard. In addition,

MP3 compatibility is added to the single-disc CD audio system. SIRIUS Satellite Radio is available on STX, XLT, Sport and all FX4 models.

Powertrain and chassis

Ranger offers three engine choices: a 2.3-liter, inline four-cylinder (I-4) and two V-6 engines.

The 2.3-liter, dual-overheadcam I-4 produces 143 horsepower at 5,250 rpm and 154 pound-feet of torque at 3,750 rpm. This engine offers the highest fuel economy of any pickup in the market, delivering 24 miles per gallon in the city and 29 mpg on the highway. It's now the standard engine for STX 4x2 regular cab and STX 4x2 two-door SuperCab, in addition to XL and XLT two-door SuperCab 4x2 versions.

Ranger's 3.0-liter, overhead-valve V-6 engine produces 148 horsepower at 4,900 rpm and 180 pound-feet of torque at 3,950 rpm. The larger, 4.0-liter, single-overhead-cam V-6 produces 207 horsepower at 5,250 rpm and 238 pound-feet of torque at 3,000 rpm. All five-speed manual transmission and are available with a five-speed automatic transmission.

Four-wheel drive and comprehensive chassis upgrades are available for off-road use.

Safety and security

For 2007, Ranger emphasizes safety and security with Ford's Personal Safety System, tire pressure monitoring system and SecuriLock passive anti-theft system all included as standard equipment.

Ranger includes four-wheel antilock brakes, air bags, safety belts with front pretensioners for outboard seating positions, and sideintrusion door beams as standard equipment. Lower Anchors and Tethers for CHildren (LATCH) childseat mounts are provided in the front-passenger seat on all models.

Can hold anything a full-size pickup can, but most won't want to get it dirty — or take it offroad. Short box for easier parking and garaging. Get the $250 running boards to ease entry/exit. V-8 mileage rating makes gas a luxury. First 20,000 buyers get a scale model.

MAYBACH 57S: Base price: $367,000; Engine: 6-liter, 604-h.p., twin-turbo V-12; Fuel economy: 11 mpg city/16 mpg highway. What's not to love?

Pull-out rear seat table tops to hold your laptop computer. DVD screens in the backs of the front seats to show movies. Holders for a champagne bottle and flutes, as well as the glasses themselves, for rear-seat passengers, plus a mini fridge built into the center armrest in back. And if you decide to get out of the car and it's raining, a Dunhill umbrella is built into the trunk lid. Oh, and the 6liter V-12 has slap-you-backinto-the-seat power and slapvou-back-to-reality mileage. Sticker: $367,000 plus options. Deal or no deal?

Convertibles are on the rise, and hardtops too

BY ANN JOB Associated Press

For many new convertible owners, there's no need to put the car away for the winter.

This year has seen one of the most competitive and sizable convertible markets in decades, dominated by new, lower-priced hardtops that aim to offer both the open-air delight of warm, sunny days and the security and snugness of regular cars when the cold moves in.

"If you're in Chicago, this is a fine car to drive in the wintertime," asserts Volkswagen spokesman Steve Keyes of his company's Eos. Along with the Pontiac G6 Convertible, Volvo C70 and Mazda MX-5 Miata Power Retractable Hard Top, it's one of a number of models this year that are changing the convertible world.

Not least in price. Just last year, an American consumer couldn't find a new, power-operated hardtop convertible for less than $40,000. Now, three of the nine models with power-operating hardtop have starting retail prices under $30,000. In addition, a record 40 convertible nameplates, softtop and hardtop, are on sale in the United States, and 30 percent of them have starting prices under $33,000. That puts them within reach of many mainstream buy-

The previous lowest-priced hardtop convertible on the U.S. market was the two-seat Mercedes-Benz SLK280, which started at $44,125 in 2007. The new price leader is the 2007 MX-5 Miata with power hardtop, which began arriving in showrooms late this summer, starting

VW's 2007 Eos is the second lowest-priced hardtop, starting at $28,620, and the 2007 Pontiac G6 is third, at $29,150. Indeed, they are only $850 to $1,380 more, respectively, than the starting price of a 2007 Toyota Camry Solara Convertible with a fabric

"Convertibles are on the rise again," said Jim Hall, analyst for automotive research firm AutoPacific Inc., of Tustin, Calif.

This year has seen one of the most competitive and sizable convertible markets in decades, dominated by new, lower-priced hardtops that aim to offer both the open-air delight of warm, sunny days and the security and snugness of regular cars on colder ones. The two-seat Mercedes-Benz SLK280 (above), starts at $44,125. Automakers like stylish convertibles because they can attract new buyers who might not normally shop at a certain brand. The 2007 Pontiac G6 Convertible's (left) appearance has drawn people into dealerships.

VW's Keyes said the U.S. market is following what has been going on in Europe. VW officials decided they needed a hardtop convertible more than three years ago after learning that Peugeot and Renault would be introducing models.

"They are, at least in Western Europe, major competitors to Volkswagen," Keyes said.

Hall said BMW also is putting a hardtop on its next 3-Series convertible. And Chrysler's 2008 Sebring convertible will be offered with a power-operated hardtop.

While softtops now dominate in the United States, some analysts say hardtops might account for the majority of convertible sales by 2015.

Today, technology and new materials help make the new hardtops easier, more reliable and more cost-effective.

And consumers see benefits to hardtops, which are less prone to break-ins and vandalism, and can be easier to care for and clean than fabric tops. When a hardtop is on, the car may be safer in a crash than a softtop car. Hardtop convertibles also tend to be quieter than fabrictopped cars when the roofs are

There's also the "wow" from bystanders watching the intricate folding of the roof sections into the vehicle's back end.

To be sure, there are drawbacks. Though prices are coming down, hardtops still are more expensive than comparable softtops. The lowest-priced convertible, overall, in the U.S. market this year has been the Chrysler PT Cruiser with fabric roof, which starts at $20,530.

Hardtops tend to weigh more than comparable softtop models, and, with a metal roof, can even weigh more than a comparable coupe with fixed roof. With more weight, fuel economy and handling can suffer.

Mechanical complexity also increases with a power-operated hardtop, making repairs more costly. The Eos' top, for instance, has eight motors. It's not uncommon for hardtops to have 10 or 12 motors.

In addition, the extra room needed to store a hard top typically reduces trunk space. The Pontiac G6 Convertible, for example, has only 2.2 cubic feet of trunk room when the roof is folded and stored, down from the maximum 12.6 cubic feet when the roof is on. The sibling G6 sedan comes with 14 cubic feet of trunk room.

A final note: Convertibles set a record in new-vehicle registrations of 315,306 in calendar 2004. But they remain a minor niche, accounting for only about 3 percent of total vehicle sales in the country.

Automakers like stylish convertibles because they can attract new buyers to a brand. Jace Stokes, Pontiac product manager, says the G6 Convertible's appearance has drawn people into dealerships "in areas of the country that have not traditionally been strong for Pontiac.'

Higher priced than comparable sedans and coupes, convertibles also can be profitable for carmakers, Hall said. And it doesn't hurt that auto company

Is the market for sport utility vehicles dead?

BY TOM KRISHER

DETROIT - It's great for family trips and comfortable around town, but Scott Hall feels a little guilty going from point A to point B in his 2000 Ford Expedition.

So even though there are only 62,000 miles on the 4.6-liter V-8, Hall, of Ann Arbor, Mich., put an ad in the paper to sell the big red truck with a gray leather interior that gets 16 miles per gallon of

"I feel like we were maybe a little bit on the selfish side buying it," Hall said on a recent Saturday morning. "Our views have kind of changed since then. Maybe this is not the right thing for this world."

Judging by sales figures this year, Hall is part of a trend. Gas prices around $3 a gallon have pushed people away from the truckbased sport utility vehicle category in droves. Instead, they're buying cars or car-based crossover vehicles that have plenty of room and are more efficient.

The pace of the exodus has surprised Detroit's Big Three automakers, who have relied on the expensive truck-based SUVs for huge profits. And it has many industry analysts speculating that at least part of the SUV segment is headed for extinction, like the wood-paneled station wagon of the 1970s.

David Healy, an analyst for Burnham Securities, predicted that the mid-sized SUV — vehicles such as the Ford Explorer, Chevrolet TrailBlazer and Toyota 4-Runner — will be gone in a few

"There's no excuse in the world anymore for having a truck-based SUV, and the segment is going to go to zero," Healy said.

When the SUV was in its heyday in the late 1990s, most people who bought them didn't need a truck with off-road capability, but they purchased them because they were trendy, said David Lucas, vice president of Autodata Corp., which gathers and analyzes auto industry statistics.

"The trendiness has passed of having a large SUV," he said.

Sales of the Explorer, the largestselling mid-sized SUV, dropped 30.7 percent in the first eight months of this year compared to the same period last year. TrailBlazer

A new H2 Hummer is on display outside a new Hummer dealership in Richmond, Va. Gas prices around $3 a gallon have pushed people away from the truck-based sport utility vehicle category in droves. sales were off 30 percent.

The mid-sized SUV segment, which includes 21 vehicles, is down 21 percent overall from last year, according to Autodata.

The decline is part of the reason why Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corp. and DaimlerChrysler AG's Chrysler Group have announced production cuts for the second half of the year. Even Barry McCahill, president of the Washington, D.C.-based Sport Utility Vehicle Owners of America, an advocacy organization for SUV owners, agrees that the mid-sized SUV will go away. But he wants to make sure the larger truck-based SUVs are still sold.

'There are people who need these vehicles, whether it's for work, whether it's for lifestyle," he said, adding that the big SUVs are used to tow horse and camping

Analysts and top executives of the Big Three agree there will always be a market for the large truck-based SUV with three rows of seats because people with large families need the seating or the power to tow boats or camping trailers.

In fact, Ford and General Motors recently came out with new models in this category, and even though sales of truck-based SUVs are down overall, both companies' top executives say they are confident there are people out there who need them.

Even if the market is smaller, the companies still make oodles of cash on each big SUV. Most of them have sticker prices above the sales of our new full-sized utilities," GM Chairman and CEO Rick Wagoner told a recent industry conference. "In fact, our market share in the combined large and large-luxury SUV segment is now 65 percent.'

'We're especially pleased with expensive.'

GM has touted its cylinder deactivation technology, which cuts a V-8 to four cylinders on the highway when the full engine isn't needed. It also has six-speed transmissions in the works, and a hybrid truck that uses electric motors combined with other technologies.

David Cole, chairman of the Ann Arbor-based Center for Automotive Research, believes technology will save the large SUV. GM says its "dual mode hybrid" will enable it to come out with a large SUV in the 2008 model year that gets nearly 23 miles per gallon in combined city and highway dri-

Healy said the auto companies are preparing to replace the midsized SUV with more efficient carbased vehicles.

Ford spokesman Jim Cain said the market is moving toward carbased crossovers, but he would not say what Ford will do with the next generation of Explorer.

Americans now rank fuel efficiency among their top three concerns when buying vehicles, up from seven or eight a year ago, according to Mark Fields, Ford's executive vice president and president of the Americas. Ford research, he said, also shows that 70 percent of people are concerned about the environment, up 10 points in the last five years.

Ford will continue to make money off SUVs even though the segment is shrinking, Fields said. But the company is shifting more to cars, where savings from using the same car platforms worldwide are expected to make cars more profitable, to compensate for the revenue lost on SUVs.

Hall, the SUV owner, said he is getting a company car, but also plans to replace his Expedition with a crossover, perhaps a Ford Escape or something even smaller.

"When gas was two bucks a gallon, it didn't hurt us," said Hall. "Now people are thinking it's too

AUTOMOTIVE Q&A

BY BRAD BERGHOLDT

San Jose Mercury News (MCT)

Q. I recently purchased a new car that has gauges for the engine instead of the red warning lights that I'm familiar with. Each gauge has a red zone but I'm wondering what the best position should be for each as I'm driving.

I'm a little concerned, as I want to spot a possible problem before it becomes a big one. I liked the red lights, as I didn't have to keep watching them all the time.

Sherri Fowler, Santa Clara, Calif.

A. Typical automotive gauges include oil pressure, coolant temperature, system voltage and engine speed. Some vehicles will illuminate a warning lamp should a gauge go out of range, but most require at least occasional monitoring.

Let's look at each of them: Oil pressure. Adequate oil pressure is vital to an engine's health and varies with engine speed and temperature. At engine operating temperature, oil pressure usually ranges from 15 to 30 pounds at idle to about 45 to 75 pounds at higher engine speed. When the engine is cold, engine oil is thicker, and pressure will be a bit higher.

Your greatest potential concern will be very low or no oil pressure. Should this occur, the engine should be shut down immediately to avoid serious Excessive pressure is unlikely to occur, and the most likely cause of low pressure is insufficient oil in the crankcase.

Coolant temperature. Engine temperature will rise from ambient temperature at start-up to engine operating temperature, which is typically around 195 degrees Fahrenheit in about three to five minutes. Under demanding conditions coolant temperature might rise to 220 to 230 degrees, but anything higher is of concern.

Common causes of excessive temperature are an inoperative cooling fan, low coolant level or a missing or damaged air deflector beneath the front bumper. Reducing engine load or turning on the heater are good defensive measures should temperature rise above normal. If the temperature exceeds 250 degrees, the engine should be shut down to prevent possible damage.

An engine that runs too cold (less than 180 degrees) increases engine wear and exhaust emissions, but doesn't pose a breakdown threat. To prevent possible injury, never remove the radiator cap of an overheated engine until it cools.

System voltage. System voltage, usually indicated by a battery symbol, infers charging system performance and should range between 13 and 14.5 volts under most conditions. Voltage will rise slightly with increased engine speed and fall slightly when major electrical accessories are in use.

Insufficient voltage (less than 12.6) indicates a charging system failure and continued driving of the vehicle will likely result in breakdown and/or a no-start condition after a couple of hours of continued use.

A loose or missing alternator belt is a common cause of insufficient voltage and a faulty voltage regulator is the likely cause of excessive voltage (above 15.5 volts).

In the rare case excessive voltage should occur, turning on as many accessories as possible will help bring voltage down as you seek a same- or next-day repair.

Engine speed. Engine speed (RPM) ranges from idle to redline, which is usually 5,000 to 7,000 RPM. Maintaining the lowest RPM the engine will tolerate (operating smoothly) improves fuel economy.

Zooming to higher allowable levels increases engine power, and wear — to a very slight degree.

Your driving style will determine shift points during acceleration, and it's entirely your call to go for economy or enjoy the feeling of being pressed back in the seat.

Car-show traffic on the television dial is getting congested

BY ANN JOB

On Mondays, television viewers can watch three beautiful sisters take to the drag strip in A&E's "Driving Force."

On Tuesdays and Wednesdays, vehicles are revamped on The Living Channel's "Overhaulin" and "Rides." Thursdays bring MTV's "Pimp My Ride," and weekends offer PBS's "Motor-Week," Spike TV's "Muscle Cars" and A&E's "King of Cars."

And for those who really can't get enough automotive programming, there's the 24-hour-a-day Speed cable channel.

Gearheads or not, Americans today are being offered an ever wider variety of shows about

A few aim to educate and inform: There's comprehensive "how-to" advice on car restoration on "My Classic Car" (the Speed Channel) and serious test drives of new vehicles on "Motor-Week.'

But many of the newer automotive shows, such as "Pimp My Ride," seek, in entertaining fashion, to combine a love of cars with the latest television trends, including lifestyle and reality

"Automotive and motorcycle television is a well-established genre" now, said Roger L. Werner Jr., an owner of WATV Productions, which creates vehicle-related programs, including "Truck Stop," which aired on ESPN2 earlier this year. "It has a proven track record of generating ratings, sponsorship dollars and loyal fans."

Werner was an executive at the ESPN sports cable network in 1980 when automotive programming was in short supply. He helped push for more — as well as for the 24-hour-a-day auto channel originally called Speed-

"I think what I saw was simply a reflection of my own tastes and the recognition that there was very little on television anywhere to serve my appetite as a babyboomer gearhead kid who grew up with cars and bikes, and was a hot rodder and an SCCA [Sports Car Club of America] racer and everything else," he said.

"I thought, 'There are hundreds of thousands of guys like me. There has to be a big opportunity here to build a franchise.'

Race forward to today. SpeedVision, renamed Speed, is now owned by Fox. "The industry kind of figured out that there was something big here about the time SpeedVision turned 5 years old," said Werner. who co-owns WATV Productions, in Los Angeles, with partner Lenny Shabes.

John Davis, host of the 25-yearold magazine show "Motor-Week," which airs on both PBS and the Speed Channel, said about a third of his audience "will watch anything about cars."

"Another third is industry professionals, and the rest are people who are considering buying a new car," Davis said.

He said 25 percent to 35 percent of "MotorWeek's" viewers are women — "unusually high for automotive television," Davis

At MTV, "Pimp My Ride" is a half-hour in which cars are customized to fit their owners' lifestyles. A dilapidated sedan, for example, might be repainted and tricked out with a digital camera in the visor and a photo printer in the dashboard.

Meantime, in "Driving Force," drag racing champion John Force mixes time on the racetrack and time with his family: three grown daughters and an estranged wife. In one episode, for instance, the daughters, formidable drivers themselves, prefer to spend time with their boyfriends rather than take a family vacation.

John Higgins, business editor for Broadcasting and Cable magazine, attributed the growth in automotive TV shows to economics. Many car shows are cheap to produce, he said. They "can be done for $100,000 to $150,000 per hour. By comparison, a broadcast network sitcom will cost $1.3 million per half hour."

To be sure, no automotive show, save for some big NASCAR races, has approached the kind of audience numbers that network TV hits garner. But, Higgins said, "just about any car show can find a small, core audience of enthusi-

A refresher course on getting better fuel economy

BY ANN JOB

Associated Press With gasoline prices refusing to come down, more drivers are looking for ways to get the most out of every gallon of fuel. But they may not like what experts recommend: Change your behavior. "There is a direct correlation between fuel economy and the driver's behavior and vehicle care," said Stephen Hunter, Ford Motor Co. hybrid vehicle engineer.

From keeping a car wellmaintained to driving at a more controlled pace, motorists can have a noticeable impact on the kind of mileage they get. According to Eric Kaufman, engineering manager for fuel economy and drive quality at General Motors Corp., motorists need to look at vehicles, as well as driving, the way experts do: in terms of energy consump-

A careful, "fuel-conscious" driver of a traditional gaspowered vehicle might be able to save a considerable amount of energy — "as much as a tank of gas every other month," Kaufman said.

Expert tips for improving fuel economy start with the ■ Plan trips and driving routes to avoid traffic congestion. Backed-up traffic and redundant trips cause motorists to be on the road longer, burning more fuel.

■ Avoid excessive idling. "Warming the car up before departure, or idling for more than 30 seconds is a waste of fuel," Hunter said. "Modern cars actually reach operating temperature faster if you start the car and leave immediately."

■ Accelerate evenly and drive smoothly so you keep abreast of traffic but aren't braking frequently. "Any time you hit your brakes, you're throwing energy away" in a traditional gaspowered vehicle, Kaufman said.

Note: Gas-electric hybrids with regenerative braking are different. They recapture braking energy and store it onboard for use later, so hybrid drivers should feel comfortable braking at a steady rate. ■ Use cruise control when traffic conditions allow because it "will smooth out the transitions" and help maintain an even speed, Kaufman said.

■ Look ahead and drive strategically. "Avoid big changes in speed, such as jumping on the gas to pass two cars, just to get caught in traffic again," Hunter said. "These won't save you much travel time [and] will drain the gas tank faster.' ■ Don't carry more than you need. For example, rooftop cargo carriers, no matter how aerodynamic, will detract from fuel mileage by creating drag. Get rid of things you don't need for your trip, such as sports equipment stored in the trunk. Kaufman estimates there's a "2 percent penalty" in fuel economy for every extra 100 pounds of cargo and people in a vehicle.

■ Keep your vehicle properly maintained. This includes keeping the air filter clean, getting regular oil changes and, especially, routinely checking to ensure tires are properly inflated. Underinflated tires can tax fuel economy by as much as 10 percent, Kaufman said. And according to AutoZone, a parts store, a new oxygen sensor alone can improve fuel economy in an older car by up to 15 percent.

■ People driving pickup trucks might consider adding a tonneau cover over the pickup bed in back. A hard tonneau can lessen the drag from air being buffeted into and around the open bed, Kaufman said.

A Plymouth Road Runner, to be precise. Vintage: 1969. Engine displacement: 383 cubic inches. Horsepower: 330. Color: scorch red. It belongs to baby boomer David Keith, and is the second love of his life — next to his wife. Keith had wanted a Road Runner as a teenager, and bought this one used when he was in college, spotting it in the back lot of a Portland Chevrolet dealership in 1973.

"I had stars in my eyes for this car," says the 53-year-old.

"Eight years ago I decided either to sell it or redo it. I chose to redo it. We did a ground-up restoration. This is the car of my youth, and I kept it."

The Road Runner was among scores of vintage muscle cars lining the streets of Seaside for the annual Muscle Beach Cruz — Pontiac GTOs, Dodge Super Bees, Oldsmobile 442s, Chevy Chevelle Super Sports, Ford Torino GTs, Plymouth 'Cudas.

With their big, growling V-8 motors, stripped-down looks and often spartan interiors, these muscle cars were lusted after by young bucks in the Vietnam War era. As baby boomers head into their retirement years, many are lusting again after these relics of their youth.

There's nothing subtle or refined about muscle cars. They were built to burn rubber, taking off from a standing start like Apollo rockets — dragsters for the street.

With the 1973-'74 oil crisis, muscle cars gave way to vehicles that didn't have to make as many trips to the gas pump and weren't so expensive to insure. But in the past few years, they have become among the hottest commodities for collectors.

Baby boomers "are realizing they're not going to live forever," said Keith Martin, editor and publisher of Sports Car Market magazine and a commentator at the annual Barrett-Jackson car auction in Scottsdale, Ariz.

At the Barrett-Jackson auction, an extravaganza that sells all kinds of vehicles, muscle car sales rose from $6.7 million in 2003 to nearly $40 million this year, the auction house said.

Dana Mecum, another car auctioneer, began specializing in vintage muscle cars over the past few years. "A good friend of mine said ... why don't you forget about chasing Duesenbergs and Ferraris. Chase what your customers are already buying," said Mecum, president of Mecum Auctions, in Marengo, Ill. At Mecum's spring auction, sales have risen from $4 million in 2003 to $30 million this year.

There's so much nostalgia that American car companies have begun making modern versions of these cars. They resemble their ancestors in looks and horsepower. But the new cars outshine the relics in sophistication, technology, cornering ability and gas mileage — which can be more than twice that of classic muscle cars.

Dodge has brought back the Charger, and is introducing a new Challenger in 2008. A new Chevrolet Camaro will hit showroom floors in 2009.

Mileage in the single digits was the norm for muscle cars of the 1960s and 1970s, and their braking and cornering left much to be desired.

The Internet makes it easier than ever to find vintage muscle cars, said Tony Begley, owner of ClassicMuscleCars.com, which sells them via the Web.

"Now you may live in Fairbanks, Alaska, get on the Internet and find that dream car," Begley said in a phone interview from Wauconda, Ill.

'Car of Tomorrow' examined

BY JENNA FRYER
Associated Press

rett Bodine knows firsthand how quickly a run-of-the-mill NASCAR accident can go awry. It happened to him in 1992 at Dover International Speedway, when the force of a crash caused his head to jerk left and bounce off the concrete retaining wall.

Although he was wearing a helmet, Bodine still suffered a concussion and a pair of brain bleeders.

Fourteen years later, he believes NASCAR's "Car of Tomorrow" project will go a long way toward preventing similar injuries.

"This project was started with safety in mind," said Bodine, who traded in his car keys two years ago for an executive position at NASCAR's research and development center.

"Along the way it developed into something that will, in fact, be safer, but it will also have on-track performance upgrades and ultimately help reduce costs for our competitors. It's taken a long time for NASCAR to get to this point, but we believe we've finally got the right blueprint on something that addresses three critical areas of this sport."

The "CoT," as it's known, is a five-year project that began under the watch of Gary Nelson, NASCAR's former vice president of research and development, when the sanctioning body was reeling from the 2001 death of Dale Earnhardt. The sport's biggest star was killed in a wreck on the last lap of the Daytona 500, triggering a backlash of criticism over an antiquated safety system.

It took Earnhardt's death to push NASCAR into making some aggressive improvements, from the mandatory use of head and neck restraints to installing energy-absorbing foam barriers.

But the Car of Tomorrow was the biggest undertaking. It debuts in March at Bristol Motor Speedway, the first of 16 events in which teams will be required to drive it

next year.
The car will run next season on all short tracks, the two road courses and Talladega Superspeedway, and then in 2008 in 26 races, including the season-opening Daytona 500. By 2009, NASCAR wants it in all 36 events.

The design changes are not subtle.

The Car of Tomorrow is 4 inches wider and 2 inches taller than NASCAR's current race cars. The driver compartment (roll cage) has been shifted 3 inches to the rear, and the driver's seat 4 inches to the right — making it more difficult for the head to snap to the side and hit the wall the way Bodine's did.

Placed side-by-side with a current stock car, the CoT is obviously bigger. But the differences don't end there

An energy-absorbing material between the roll cage and the car's skin gives drivers a new layer of protection. The exhaust system runs through the body, diverting heat away from the driver and letting it out on the right side. The drive shaft is covered by a tunnel under the floorboard to keep it from tearing through the car if it should explode.

vers are impressed.

"It's safer," Jeff Burton said. "I don't know how to tell you what percentage safer, but there's no doubt it's safer."

It's also expected to be racier.

The windshield is more upright, designed to increase the amount of drag and slow the cars. The front bumper is 3 inches higher and thicker, boxier in design, and should catch air rather than deflect it. And the air intake is placed lower, below the front bumper — which in today's cars can be covered by wind-blown trash, leading to overheating.

Then there are the add-ons. A "splitter" in the form of a flat shelf is now below the front bumper. And the current rear spoiler has been replaced with a wing that looks more like something on a street car than a stock car.

Both features are designed to improve racing conditions and make the CoT compatible with various tracks. The splitter and the wing are both adjustable, so teams can tinker with them to improve handling.

The wing will push air both over and under it, giving the car more stability in traffic and improving the aerodynamics of the trailing

"I'm not a wing guy. I wasn't a proponent of the wing until I ran the car with the wing," Burton said. "But I like the adjustability of the wing. I think the wings will make racing better. The aero push behind the body won't be as bad and the loss of aerodynamics to the sides of the body won't be as bad.

"I think it will breed a situation where you can pass more and also run side by side more."

Ryan Newman, a book-smart driver with an engineering degree from Purdue University, initially balked at the car's design. But once he tested it in traffic, he was willing to overlook the funkiness of the splitter and the wing because of the tradeoff in improved performance

"It's aesthetically not pleasing to me," he said. "But that's not the point. It's all about the racing."

quickly get over how the CoT looks.
"I have seen cars that are painted and decaled up with numbers and stuff and in that configuration they are fine," he said. "I think if the racing is good, the fans will like it."

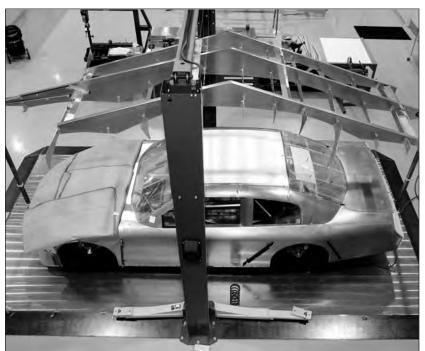

The cost savings come largely from the fact that the same car can be adjusted to run on everything from a short track to a superspeedway. Currently, teams build about a dozen different track-specific cars. With the CoT, NASCAR hopes teams will only have to build four or so different cars a season.

What it takes to drive on vegetable power

ON THE WEB: biodiesel.org; enginemanufacturers.org; greasecar.com

BY MICHAEL HILL Associated Press

oe and Barbara Floeser were cruising for free fuel behind a strip mall when they spotted the Chinese takeout place and stopped the

"Do you have any oil you're throwing out?" Joe asked through the back door.

"I'd like your oil ... Our car runs on it."

The suburban couple's 2001 Jetta diesel has been retro-fitted to run on vegetable oil — even stuff already used to fry egg rolls or chicken wings.

As gas prices and anxiety about global warming rise, more people like the Floesers are bypassing the corner gas pump to run their cars on vegetable power. Kits are now available to create cars like the Floesers' Jetta — nicknamed "Greased Lightning" — and biodiesel pumps are popping up in more places.

Either way, a diesel vehicle is a requirement. It also helps to have a sense of initiative — the sort that can take you to the service door of a Chinese restaurant looking for a fill-up.

"We're just regular people," Barbara said. "We're not scientists, we're not environmentalists

"There's a long list of what we're not," Joe said.

"But we can do this," Barbara said.

Waste oil from food joints is just one option for today's vegetable-powered driver. Coming on strong is biodiesel, a processed vegetable fuel often sold blended with petroleum diesel. Biodiesel is attractive to drivers who don't want to modify their diesel cars. The Floesers' Jetta retrofit cost $795 for the kit plus $600 for installation, but fuel is free for the asking.

Advocates of different systems argue about which is best, but they tend to be alike at heart. They generally are environmentally minded like Barbara Floeser, who felt bad about driving solo in her minivan when the kids were at school, and worse when fill-ups started costing $70. They also, at some level. seem to enjoy sticking it to Big

"Say goodbye to ExxonMobil & Co., you don't need them anymore," reads the pro-biodiesel Journey to Forever Web site.

Drivers considering any mechanical changes to their cars or putting alternative fuels in their tank should first check if they're voiding warranties.

Biodiesel is simple in some respects: Just put it in your diesel tank and go. First, though, you have to find a source

The National Biodiesel Board estimates there are more than 800 retail pumps nationwide selling everything from straight biodiesel (called B100) to mixes with petroleum diesel, which are named for the percentage of biodiesel in the blend (e.g., a 20 percent mix is called B20). Biodiesel cooperatives have sprouted up around the nation.

'I hated going to the gas station," said Sienna Wildwood of Berkeley, Calif., who gets her fuel from the worker-owned BioFuel Oasis in her town. "I hope I never have to go again."

Biodiesel prices vary, however, and drivers can end up paying more than if they pumped petroleum diesel.

One way to save money is to make your own biodiesel, either through a cooperative or on your own. It's simple enough to do in your garage — one Web site claims it's "easier than making beer" — but typically used substances like lye and methanol make it potentially hazardous.

vegetable oil at their home in Guilderland, N.Y. The oil is stored in a tank that goes where the spare tire would normally go. A tank with 16 gallons of vegetable oil is pumped using a pool pump through the two filters before being pumped into the tank in the car.

Barbara and Joe Floeser stand by their 2001 Jetta that runs on

Some people avoid the fuss and cost by simply blending vegetable oil with petroleum diesel; that is not the same as biodiesel and is not recommended. The Engine Manufacturers Association, a trade group, warns that using gooey vegetable oil in blends can have "significant adverse effects" on diesel engines.

The commercial "Greasecar" system installed in the Floesers' car is designed to get around

The Floeser's 2001 Jetta, which has been retro-fitted to run on vegetable oil, has a panel with a gauge (left), showing the amount of vegetable oil in the tank; a switch in the middle to change from diesel to vegetable oil (center) and a gauge that measures the temperature of the vegetable oil.

those problems by using two fuel

Greasecars run on petroleum diesel for the first five minutes or so until the vegetable oil heats up. Drivers purge vegetable oil from the system in the last five minutes of their trip and switch back to petroleum. Joe Floeser demonstrated on a recent fuelhunting trip, waiting for the engine temperature to climb before switching the fuel line from petroleum and punching the accelerator. The Jetta zoomed ahead on yesterday's fry grease.

"As you can see," he says, "no loss of power being on vegetable.

The Floesers' fuel supply seems safe as long as Americans keep eating vast amounts of fried food. They make regular circuits around chicken wing joints, diners and Indian restaurants, securing used vegetable oil in plastic five-gallon containers. Restaurant workers are happy to give away their garbage. At the Chinese restaurant, workers had trouble understanding the Floesers across the language barrier, but after some gesturing poured out enough oil to fill two five-gallon containers — enough to drive about 400 miles.

The Floesers must filter the syrupy brown oil before it goes in their car. It can be done with a simple paper cone, though they recently built an electric filter pump.

Joe Suchecki, of the Engine Manufacturers Association, warned that long-term effects of vegetable oil systems are unknown. Greasecar founder and president Justin Carven said some Greasecars have run more than 200,000 miles after conversion.

Greasecar reports selling between 100 and 400 kits a month, compared to 20 to 60 a month before Hurricane Katrina.

Meanwhile, biodiesel continues its growth spurt in the United States, with consumption tripling to 75 million gallons last year, according to the National Biodiesel Board.

With busted pipelines in Alaska and turmoil in the Middle East, expect more cars to pump out exhaust with the faint whiff of fried food.

Good quarter lightens mood, burden at GM

BY JIM MATEJA Chicago Tribune (MCT)

Rick Wagoner was jovial for a man who has carried a target on his chest since General Motors reported a $10.6 billion loss in 2005.

Last time we visited his office, Wagoner was a tad worn out from dodging arrows.

'You have to have thick skin in this business," he noted at the time. But a $1.2 billion, second-quarter operating profit later, the GM chairman is more relaxed. 'A good quarters helps," he says, smiling. That and no more mention of the "B" word (bankruptcy). No wonder his staff has returned all sharp objects to his desk and removed the lock from his 39thfloor window in the Renaissance Center. But Wagoner still sees no cause for celebration and, in offering this scribe a bottle of water during an interview, he noted that until profits are sustained, the refreshment was being put on a tab — minus the 5-cent Michigan recycling tax, of course.

While a second-quarter profit eased the tension for Wagoner, Ford Motor Co. posted a $797 million second-quarter loss in North America, forcing chairman Bill Ford to shop for a remedy.

Just last week, Ford named Alan Mulally president and CEO. Mulally worked his turnaround magic on Boeing, and Ford is hoping he does the same for its flagging fortunes. He gave Mulally $20.5 million in salary, bonus and perks as an incentive.

Mulally reportedly wasn't the only one being wooed. It's been said that just a few weeks ago Bill Ford called Carlos Ghosn, head of Renault and Nissan, to offer him the crown if a deal having Ghosn replace Wagoner at GM didn't pan Mulally's appointment pretty much leaves Ghosn for GM.

Wagoner's words and body language made it clear that if Ghosn gets any spot at GM, Wagoner would offer no better than the ledge outside his window — and maybe a

"Carlos said he likes his two jobs and isn't looking for another. And the Ford move is not out of sync with that," Wagoner said, which we took to mean what's good for Ford — Ghosn gone — would be good for GM, too.

Wagoner wouldn't talk about the Renault/Nissan and whether a joint venture, alliance or anything was "The study is still going on. I'm not going to speculate. I suspect we'll say something in October." But when billionaire investor and GM stockholder Kirk Kerkorian first made the talks with Renault/Nissan public, it had to cue the auto community that GM was willing to listen to offers.

So how many phone calls has he gotten from others seeking to team

"I haven't been deluged. I keep regular contact with others but I'd have to say I haven't noticed a change in the volume of calls," he said.

While the state gives children a driver's license, the parents must cope with the fallout

BY SHEILA NORMAN-CULP Associated Press

It's a ritual in every state across the nation. Some stranger you will never see again hands your child a driver's license — and you're left facing the consequences. As my ancestors would say, "Best o' luck to ya."

In truth, most parents are torn between wanting their children to drive at age 14 (to ease the endless schlepping) and realizing that some should not get their licenses until they are at least 25, when those testosteroneinduced storm surges have subsided.

Wherever you fall on that spectrum, one thing's certain: Parents, you can't even imagine the variety of car problems your children will come up with. Here's the story of one family (mine) with three teens.

Teen No. 1, my stepdaughter, scared the heck out of me when she was behind the wheel, so much so that I only sat on the passenger side of her car once in her first three years of driving.

She started off stuck at one speed — 45 mph — for every situation. I thought we were either going to be mowed down by passing cars on the Garden State Parkway or slaughter innocents ourselves as we careered through town. In time, she figured out how to vary her speed — but not how to slow down. She talked her way out of a speeding ticket in New Jersey but quickly got nailed in New York and again in California. "I was only going 83, not 93!" Teen No. 1 declared in a huff, failing to see how that argument would not impress a judge.

Teen No. 2, my stepson, got his driver's license at 16. Within two weeks, the California State Police called to report that he had been going 101 mph Friday night on a freeway outside San Francisco.

So many reactions bubbled up, so many questions. Everything from "Thank God he is alive" to "We'll kill him ourselves." Who has not heard about California's legendary traffic jams? Where were all those cars when we needed them?

Let's not even wonder why his mother would hand the Jaguar over to a novice driver with friends to impress. Any car of mine would have started to shake violently at about 72 mph and could have saved Teen No. 2 a court date.

So, besides temporarily losing his license, Teen No. 2 faced a $700 fine or 50 hours of community service. He chose the latter, which translated into shoveling elephant dung at the Oakland Zoo for eight days over Christmas break. I wanted to kiss the judge.

Still, the reverberations of that night lasted for years. Teen No. 2 did not drive again until he was almost 20. He ended up living in Switzerland for two years, where the driving age is 18 and everyone takes the train anyway. But when he came back to the United States for college, he didn't drive for another year because no one in the family could afford to put him on their insurance.

The biggest shocker? College applications that demanded information about court dealings. Since Teen No. 2 was not a 250-pound linebacker or a prized basketball recruit, he got rejected from every college that required those records. A pretty harsh penalty for being honest, I would say.

At last, with Teen No. 3, the family had an excellent driver, someone who could drive across the country at age 17 and make sure that Teen No. 1 arrived at college on time.

To accomplish this, however, my daughter drove illegally with her grandfather for weeks before she had any license. While I thought she was swimming and boating in upstate New York, the two of them were on daily two- to three-hour road trips, flying down highways and twisting country roads, visiting Amish country and resort towns, bakeries and ice cream stores. My father was never one for rules anyway.

That fall, I faced another dilemma.

Teen No. 3, at 16, was a budding college lacrosse recruit, but I was working and could not get her to tryouts in neighboring states. Her graduated New Jersey license banned driving solo until age 17.

What to do? I crossed my fingers and sent her off.

It took about 21 minutes for everyone at Montclair High to find this out. Several parents even called to report, confidentially, that they had seen Teen No. 3 driving. I said, "Oh, thank you for telling me," and hung up.

I understand why they called. Among Teen No. 3's friends, one totaled a BMW (not his) driving 150 yards to the convenience store. Another scraped her parents' Mercedes from stem to stern in the YMCA parking lot down ramp. A third ran into her own house while parking.

And those were just her close friends. Lord knows what havoc the rest of the school wreaked on the roads of New Jersey. And even good drivers have blind spots — in this case, parking tickets. Teen No. 3 got an $18 ticket. She meant to pay, but forgot. Was smart enough to hide the next five legal notices that came in the mail, but not wise enough to open and read them. How can someone who got straight A's in pre-Calculus not understand that parking tickets double every two weeks?

I finally saw something peeking out of her purse and opened it. Not only had the ticket and fines blossomed to $166, but MY license had been suspended two months earlier because I owned the car. I had to sit down as I pondered the complications that could have caused. Teen No. 3 paid the fines and I took away the car. Four days later she asked for her keys back. I said no. "OK, but that means I will be a passenger in cars driven by Montclair boys," she noted. Checkmate. A rough guess puts their accident and/or speeding rates at around 90 percent. I handed her the keys.

The title of this 2002 comedy doesn't refer to its length although it definitely feels longer than it is. Josh Hartnett gives an appealing performance as a young man who meets the girl of his dreams (Shannyn Sossamon) while trying to keep his vow to abstain from sex for Lent. Sadly, that appeal is eclipsed by the "Porky's"-on-Viagra script. Too bad, as somewhere inside this juvenile post-teen sex romp is a clever little bedroom farce trying to get out.

Politics in Hollywood,

Writer-producer Aaron Sorkin ("The West Wing") may have shifted his focus from Washington, D.C., to Hollywood, but he's still got politics on his mind in "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip."

The highly anticipated NBC dramedy, which premieres Monday, Sept. 18, goes behind the scenes of a troubled late-night comedy sketch show, where tensions reach critical mass during one taping. Ordered by an officious network lackey to cut a controversial sketch, the show's executive producer, Wes Mendell (guest star Judd Hirsch), erupts into an on-camera rant in which he angrily denounces corporate network suits for helping to "dumb down" the American public.

This public relations nightmare is inherited by Jordan McDeere (Amanda Peet), the incoming entertainment chief who proposes a risky solution to the problem: hiring the creative team of writer Matt Albie (Matthew Perry) and director Danny Tripp (Bradley Whitford) to take over the show.

Jordan's boss, network honcho Jack Rudolph (Steven Weber), has two big issues with that proposal, though: Jack is the guy who fired Matt and Danny from an earlier stint on "Studio 60," and, in any case, Danny is freshly back in recovery for a cocaine problem.

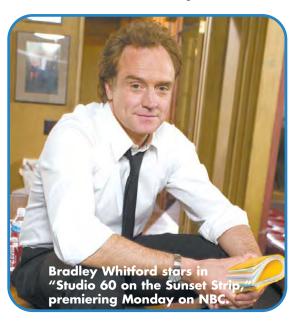

Matt's a little gun-shy, too: His old flame, singeractress Harriet Hayes (Sarah Paulson), is a current member of the "Studio 60" cast.

A lot of characters and relationships are thrown at us during the series opener, but this new setting clearly is fertile ground for Sorkin and his fellow executive producer Thomas Schlamme, both of whom won Emmys for their collaborative work on "The West Wing."

"At its heart, 'Studio 60' is the same thing that 'The West Wing' was at its heart," Sorkin says. "It's about a group of people committed to professionalism, committed to each other, to what they're doing, and hopefully we enjoy watching them every week.

"But as political issues came up on 'The West Wing,' I think that 'Studio 60' is tooled up to deal with issues of the culture wars in an interesting way, because certainly television in general and a sketch comedy show like this in particular would have a front-row seat for that kind of thing.'

open letter

If we didn't have live television, we'd have to invent it. I'm a bit of a news junkie, and that's what's playing in my office almost every day, except for the times I pop in a DVD or a tape. News is usually the first thing I have on in the morning (gotta check if the world's still there, beyond what I can see from my windows) and the last thing at night.

It's unlikely that I'm alone in this.

As mentioned here before, not long ago I got a cell phone on which I could watch Fox News live, along with clips from ABC and NBC news. The phone also has NFL Network live and other offerings from ESPN.

BY KATE O'HARE

Even though the phone plays music videos and trailers and mobisodes and stuff like that, most people's eyes only light up when I show them the live news and, especially if they're guys, the live sports.

So, this entirely unscientific research tells me that live television just may be the killer app. of mobile entertainment, just as e-mail was for the Internet in its early days.

There's just something special about viewing an event live at the same time as millions of other people, especially if it's a major news story or high-profile sporting contest. It becomes part of our collective memory in a way nothing else can.

Kenseth chasing another title

hether you're in the playoffs or merely trying to get in, pressure is everywhere in Nextel Cup racing.

NASCAR's Matt Kenseth knows that as well as anyone. Last year, he needed to finish with a flourish, taking five top-10 finishes in six August and September starts, to qualify for the Chase for the Nextel Cup, the 10-race, 10-driver playoff format that determines the Nextel Cup points champion. This year, he gave himself a little breather with two late August wins to lock up a playoff berth before Labor Day.

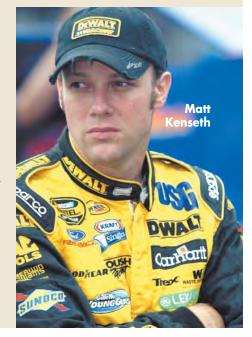

Still, he expects the pressure to ratchet up once again when the Chase begins Sunday, Sept. 17, live on TNT with the running of the Sylvania 300 from New Hampshire International Speedway in Loudon.

With consecutive August wins in the GFS Marketplace 400 at Michigan International Speedway and the Sharpie 500 at Tennessee's Bristol Motor Speedway, Kenseth joined Jimmie Johnson as the only drivers to lock up playoff berths before the calendar turned to September.

But large points totals fall by the wayside once the Chase begins, and Kenseth says any of the other nine contending drivers can be a threat.

"I think when you get in the Chase," Kenseth says, "any of the top 10 could get on a hot streak and any of the other guys could, including us, have some trouble or do whatever. So I really think that you can't just pick out one or two teams as a favorite. I think that you have to look at all 10. Obviously, the farther you get into the Chase, some guys start weeding themselves out, and it gives kind of a clearer picture of who's going to be the guy to beat."

when you have Jimmie Johnson backed by the deep-pocketed team of Hendrick Motorsports - and the firsthand knowledge that chasing a leader is a whole lot harder than being No. 1. In 2004, Johnson and his team had arguably the best season on NASCAR's Nextel Cup circuit, leading it in races won with eight and top-five finishes with 20, yet despite all that he could not catch points leader Kurt Busch, who ended up a mere eight points ahead of Johnson.

so simple, however, but it becomes a lot easier

So this season, the 31-year-old Californian changed course in an effort to capture that elusive Cup crown. Trying to avoid a frantic end-of-season points dash, Johnson raced to the top of the standings right out of the gate by winning the Daytona 500. wo more weekday talk shows premiere this week, featuring actress Megan Mullally ("Will & Grace") and perky food diva Rachael Ray. They join a crowded field of freshman yakkers, including "The Greg Behrendt Show," which is all about relationships, and "The Dr. Keith Ablow Show," which is all about relationships.

Of course, there already are the more entertainment-oriented shows, such as "The Ellen DeGeneres Show" and "The Tyra Banks Show."

Atop the talk-show pyramid is, now and likely forever, "The Oprah Winfrey Show." What do all of these shows have in common? I don't watch them - not a one. I haven't watched a talk show regularly since Mike Douglas, and now he's dead, so, so much

First, they're on while I'm working, and for a long time I didn't have a TV set at my desk. Now that I do, I leave the news on or play a DVD. And five episodes a week is too many to DVR. I'm already behind.

Nearly the last thing I want to do is listen to celebrities hawking their latest projects, or a bunch of ordinary folk talking about their bad family lives, their bad love lives, their bad work lives and how they're not sure who's the baby's father.

If I want celebrities, I can just go to work, and for the rest, I can just call my friends and family (except for the baby thing - we're pretty clear on that one in my circle).

But I'm in the distinct minority. Most people can't seem to get enough of chat. But on the off chance that talk show producers would like to woo folks like me, here are a few suggestions.

Run talk shows in the early evening, like 6 or 7 p.m. I know that's prime news time, but we have 24 hours of news now. Also, I might watch Ellen instead of "Entertainment Tonight" (to be honest, I don't watch "ET" either – again, it's too much like work). Also, there's prime time, which Larry King and Charlie Rose have to themselves in most markets.

Tone it down once in a while. I know it's an energy-level thing, but there's way too much yelling and screaming and hooting and cheering. That's half the reason I can't bear game shows. Again, this might just be me, but I suspect not.

Have on more interesting people. Granted, this isn't possible in the format of many shows, but sometimes I wonder if there's a factory out there, stamping these daffy guests out of a mold. Or maybe it's just that the really clever people will only go on "Charlie Rose" or "Oprah." That's possible.

Have old-school celebrities as guests as often as possible. They're pros, they're often articulate, and they have all the best stories.

Talk to cool authors for an hour. This doesn't only have to be on C-SPAN or "Oprah," you know. Ellen and James Ellroy - I like it.

"I was shooting 'The West Wing' at the same time as 'The Path to 9/11.' I had white hair in this and brown hair on 'The West Wing,' so it pretty much destroyed my head from July to November." Stephen Root on doing the two projects at once.

"I sort of panic when I get a script. I go into a tailspin. I work on something for a few hours. I get it in my body, and I review it every day. Then it is pretty good. I can't even remember it after I have done the scene. Victor Garber of Fox's "Justice" on memorizing lines.

"It does feel like independent filmmaking. It doesn't feel like when you're starting out in the business. It's rather revivifying; it makes you feel young and part of pushing the edge, pushing the envelope and creating a whole new genre here.

Morgan Fairchild of MyNetworkTV's "Fashion House," about putting a new spin on serial dramas.

'All My Children'

ianca Montgomery returns to Pine Valley as actress Eden Riegel rejoins the cast of "All My Children."

The announcement was made by executive producer Julie Hanan Carruthers, who says, "I am thrilled to have Eden return. She continues to be a cherished member of this talented ensemble. Bianca's presence enriches the canvas, and we all look forward to having her back home." Riegel returned to work Sept. 12, making her first airdate Oct. 11.

Can't get enough "Passions"? The NBC daytime drama is the first soap offered for purchase on iTunes Music Store

BY PAULETTE COHN

(www.itunes.com). Episodes are available the day after airing for $1.99

In other "Passions" news, Galen Gering (Luis) and wife Jenna got their first visit from the stork with the birth of Dillon Phoenix Gering on Aug. 3. He weighed 8 pounds, 4 ounces.

Ben Hogestyn (ex-Lucas, "General Hospital") has joined the cast of "The Bold and the Beautiful." Hogestyn, stepson of "Days of our Lives" star Drake Hogestyn, plays Harry, whose father died in a tragic accident on a tanker captained by Nick (Jack Wagner).

In other casting news, Eyal Podell joins "The Young and the Restless" as Adrian Korbel, a professor who interacts with Colleen (Adrianne Leon) at Genoa City University. His first airdate is Monday, Sept. 18. Also at "Y&R," Lorna Raver has been cast as Rebecca Kaplan, Brad Carlton's (Don Diamont) mother. Her first airdate is Tuesday, Sept. 19.

Does one get to call him Flipper, Flipper? Filmmaker and dolphin enthusiast Hardy Jones offers an up-close and personal look at these marine mammals, whose intelligence and friendliness have endeared them to humans. In "The Dolphin Defender," meet several dolphins he knows well, including Chopper, who once helped save him from a shark attack. He also shares some little-known facts; for example, the so-called killer whale is really a species of dolphin.

The Sahara 8 p.m. on (HIST)

Hippos in the Sahara Desert? Aren't they water-loving beasties? Turns out the Sahara wasn't always a desert; thousands of years ago, it was home to rivers, lakes and swampland, according to ancient rock paintings found there. That's one of the fascinating facts in this new special, which traces the history of the Sahara and includes a re-enactment of the 1805 invasion of Tripoli led by U.S. Marines—the one immortalized in their hymn.

The Miracle Worker 8 p.m. on TCM

Dedicated Anne Sullivan (Anne Bancroft) helps young Helen Keller (Patty Duke) emerge from her silent prison in this Oscar-winning 1962 adaptation of William Gibson's award-winning Broadway play. By turns poignant, funny, suspenseful and uplifting, the critically acclaimed drama scored Academy Awards for both Bancroft and Duke, reprising their stage performances. Inga Swenson and Victor Jory co-star.

The Amazing Race 10 8:30 p.m. on 2 5 7

A new crop of contestants is ready to rumble as the hit reality competition begins a 10th season, with China, Vietnam, Madagascar and Kuwait among the scheduled stops. The teams include six pairs of friends, two married couples, two dating couples, a pair of brothers, and a father and daughter. That last team could provide some drama; they were estranged for some time after the daughter came out and are hoping to use the race to help rebuild their bond.

Without a Trace 10 p.m. on 2 5 7

Ever have one of those days at work? Jack (Anthony LaPaglia) and his team are definitely having one in "Crossroads." The ex-boyfriend (guest star Jason Priestley) of their missing person du jour realizes they consider him a suspect. Furious, he grabs Jack's gun and starts firing wildly as he runs out of the FBI building. Yup, they'll definitely need to check this guy out a little further. Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio also guest stars.

Visiting Professor from WVU

Dr. Arthur Jacknowitz will be speaking at our next caregiver support group, which will take place at Senior Monongalians, Inc. at 10:00am on September 20th. Dr. Jacknowitz is presently a professor in the Department of Clinical Pharmacy at West Virginia University, where he served as Chair for sixteen years, from November 1985 to July 2001. A well-respected administrator, teacher and author, Dr. Jacknowitz has received numerous accolades for his accomplishments. To highlight a few, he was the recipent of the Merck, Sharp and Dohme Award for outstanding or the Merck, Sharp and Donme Award for outstanding achievement in the profession of pharmacy; he was the recipient of the Drug Information Association's Outstanding Service Award in 1966, and, he was chosen to be the Lady Davis Visiting Professor at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, where he spent a semester as a member of the Department of Clinical Pharmacy and Biopharmaceutics. Most recently, in recognition of his many accomplishments, a former student named and endowed a "chair" in his honor. This recognition, he feels, is the culmination of more than a quarter century of teaching, scholarship and service at West Virginia University

Although he'll briefly talk about current pharmacological research being done for the treatment of dementia, Dr. Jacknowitz prefers informal "get-togethers", where he and his audience actively participate in a discussion. He encourages caregivers to bring questions or concerns they may have about any medication (even overthe-counter drugs) their family member is taking, and he welcomes discussions about potential side effects and drug interactions

The Class 8 p.m. on 2 5 7

It's another "20-something friends" sitcom, but don't let that scare you off. You like "How I Met Your Mother," don't you? The hook in this show is the re-union of former third-grade class-mates. Jason Ritter, who obviously got Papa John's funny genes, leads the cast as the young doctor who brings them together, and newcomer Jesse Tyler Ferguson, who plays one of the classmates, manages to milk depression for major laughs. Lizzy Caplan ("Related") also stars.

How I Met Your Mother 8:30 p.m. on 2 5 7

To answer the question posed in the season premiere's title — "Where Were We?" — when Marshall and Lily (Jason Segel, Alyson Hannigan) were last seen, they'd broken up, and now Lily's headed to San Francisco. Still in the glow of new romance, Ted and Robin (Josh Radnor, Cobie Smulders) try to help Marshall snap out of his funk, but an inkling that Lily is back in town derails their progress. Neil Patrick Harris also stars.

Great Performances 9 p.m. on 🚯 🕰

Calling all opera fans! The Vienna State Opera celebrates the 50th anniversary of its reopening — it took 10 years to rebuild from severe World War II bomb damage — with a starstudded gala featuring, among others, Placido Domingo. Arias and scenes from the operas staged in the 1955 season, including "Aida," "Don Giovanni" and "Der Meistersinger von Nurn-berg," are interspersed with comments from artists who remember the bombing and its aftermath.

The Sons of Katie Elder 9 p.m. on (HALL)

It's no "True Grit," but this 1965 saga is still one of the best of John Wayne's later Westerns. He stars with Dean Martin, Earl Holliman and Michael Anderson Jr. as Texas siblings mourning the death of their mother. Subsequent events prompt them to avenge the wrongs done to both of their late parents. The supporting cast includes genre staples Jeremy Slate, James Gregory and Paul Fix, and stars-to-be Dennis Hopper and George Kennedy.

The New Adventures of Old Christine 9:31 p.m. on 2 5 7

So is old Christine (Julia Louis-Dreyfus) "old old Christine" now? Since Richard (Clark Gregg) and "new" Christine (Emily Rutherfurd) have split, Richard is spending a lot of time with his ex, which has their son, Ritchie (Trevor Gagnon), thinking they might be reconciling. He even tells his teacher so. When Richard hears that, he starts to think it might not be a bad idea to try again. Blair Underwood guest stars.

NCIS 8 p.m. on 2 5 7

Poor Tony (Michael Weatherly). He couldn't just ease into the job of leading the team in the wake of Gibbs' (Mark Harmon) retirement. He has to clear the name of one of his own: Ziva (Cote de Pablo), who's wanted by the FBI after witnessing an assassination by her former Mossad partner. Care-ful, guys, this one has "handle with care" written all over it. Where's Gibbs, anyway? Building boats in Mexico-nice work if you can get it.

Rashomon 8 p.m. on (TCM)

You've heard the word; now see the movie. The title of this 1950 drama from legendary Japanese director Akira Kurosawa has entered our lexicon as shorthand for the same story told from different people's viewpoints. And that's exactly what happens here: Four people give their accounts of a woman's rape and her husband's murder, including the dead man, who speaks through a medium. This one needs to be on every serious film buff's must-see list.

The Unit 9 p.m. on 2 5 7

Ready for some big changes? They're in the works for some of the Unit members including, for Mack (Max Martini), the end of Unit membership. Leaving this "family" behind isn't easy, as he and Tiffy (Abby Brammell) soon discover. Speaking of families, Bob and Kim's (Scott Foley, Audrey Marie Anderson) has a new member. Out in the field, the team intercepts a package in Pakistan then rushes off on another mission to stop the spread of a deadly disease.

Law & Order: Criminal Intent 9 p.m. on 9 11 12

They ought to call this episode "Criminally Intense." The murder of an ambassador's daughter turns out to be the work of a serial killer when a second body is found that matches the M.O. of the first murder. And this killer apparently has been around for a while; according to Goren's (Vincent D'Onofrio) old mentor (John Glover), this may be a blast from the past. Meanwhile, in the present, a member of the Major Case Squad goes miss-

Smith 10 p.m. on 2 5 7

If "Field of Dreams," "GoodFellas" and "Unlawful Entry" didn't put you on the Ray Liotta love train, it's not too late to get on board. The talented but under-rated actor finds a great showcase in this new serialized drama as a master criminal with an eye on retiring — but not before he pulls a few more jobs so he can do it in style. Virginia Madsen plays his wife, who takes a "don't ask, don't tell" approach to his secret life.

Pride & Prejudice 7:45 p.m. on MAX

This 2005 adaptation of Jane Austen's novel of 19th-century sisters and their romances benefits greatly from an excellent, age-appropriate cast. Keira Knightley shines as the sibling who has mixed feelings about the friend (Matthew Macfadyen) of a wealthy man (Simon Woods) who has eyes for her sister (Rosamund Pike). Donald Sutherland, Judi Dench, Brenda Blethyn and Jena Malone also are in director Joe Wright's solid lineup of actors.

Ghosts of Mississippi 7:45 p.m. on SHOW

Relax, folks, he's only acting. James Woods is chillingly convincing as racist killer Byron De La Beckwith in this 1996 drama recounting the final trial, in 1994, of civil rights activist Medgar Evers' accused killer. De La Beckwith had been tried twice in 1964 for the murder. Despite evidence implicating him, he was set free both times by hung juries. Alec Baldwin plays the liberal white prosecutor in the 1994 trial. Whoopi Goldberg shines as Evers' widow.

The Biggest Loser 8 p.m. on 9 11 12

The wait — and the weight — are history for you "Loser" schmoozers as the hit reality series returns for a new season. You know how it goes: Overweight contestants take part in challenges designed to take the pounds off, with help and guidance from personal trainers. This season takes a two-tiered approach, with 14 contestants staying at the ranch and 36 others following the program from home.

Face/Off 9 p.m. on USA

A miracle of modern medicine — a face transplant — gives an FBI agent (John Travolta) the mug of a comatose terrorist (Nicolas Cage). The plan is for him to fool the man's brother and get information from him about an upcoming germ attack. But things go awry when the bad boy revives and steals the fed's face. Gina Gershon, Harve Presnell and Dominique Swain also star in this far-fetched but fun action thriller from director John Woo.

Kidnapped 10 p.m. on 9 11 12

Relax, "Law & Order" fans; your show is on Fridays now. Let's hope it left some of its ratings karma behind in its old time slot for this new offering: a drama about the investigation of a teenage boy's abduction. Good casting is no guarantee a show will be a hit, but like chicken soup, it couldn't hurt that this one has Dana Delany and Timothy Hutton as the boy's parents and Jeremy Sisto as a former FBI agent who now freelances such cases. Hang on tight!

College Football 7:30 p.m. on (ESPN)

Virginia has won four straight against ACC rival Georgia Tech, but they'll be relying on an untested senior at quarterback tonight as they attempt to increase the streak. He's Christian Olsen, who's taking over a team that finished a disappointing fifth in the ACC Coastal a year ago. One of their highlights, though, was November's win over Tech, which looks to rebound at home with experience and talent in the form of QB Reggie Ball and receiver Calvin Johnson.

True Crime 8 p.m. on COURT

Yes, this is the channel devoted to true crime, but this particular crime is fake. Clint Eastwood is director and star of this nicely paced 1999 suspense tale. He plays a troubled reporter who suspects the death-row prisoner he's writing about is innocent. Denis Leary and James Woods play his bosses, who want him to stick to reporting and lay off his one-man crusade for justice. Michael Jeter, Diane Venora and Isaiah Washington also star.

Mrs. Doubtfire 8 p.m. on FAM

Grey's Anatomy 9 p.m. on 4

Changes are ahead for Meredith (Ellen Pompeo) and the gang this season. Whom will she choose — McDreamy (Patrick Dempsey) or Finn the hunky veterinarian (Chris O'Donnell)? Meredith, if you're listening, think Finn; unlike McDreamy's, his wife is dead. Speaking of dead, poor Izzie (Katherine Heigl) remains in an emotional tailspin over the death of heart transplant patient Denny Duquette. If her story doesn't grab you, you may need a heart implant.

Meet the Fockers 9 p.m. on (HBO)

It took four years to come up with a sequel to the comedy hit "Meet the Parents," but the result was just as potent. Ben Stiller returns as nurse Greg, whose prospective, ex-CIA father-inlaw, Jack (Robert De Niro), wants to meet Greg's parents. As played by Barbra Streisand and Dustin Hoffman, they prove to be the polar opposites of ultraconservative Jack, thus jeopardizing their son's looming wedding. Blythe Danner and Teri Polo also return.

The Longest Yard 7:05 p.m. on SHOW

It's an Adam Sandler movie, so it could be worse. Much worse. Sandler has Burt Reynolds' former part — with Reynolds as another inmate — in this crowd-pleasing 2005 remake of the football-behind-bars comedy. Sandler plays an incarcerated ex-gridiron star pressed into service by the warden (James Cromwell), who wants him to coach a team of guards to a championship. Chris Rock, Nelly and Brian Bosworth also star.

The Goonies 8 p.m. on MAX

If you were a kid in the 1980s, you probably have fond memories of this 1985 adventure flick, especially if you were a little "goony" yourself. Sean Astin, Josh Brolin, Corey Feldman and Kerri Green play misfit youngsters who find what looks to be a pirate treasure map and go in search of the booty, hoping to save their neighborhood from being bulldozed. Their journey takes them underground and into the lair of some crooks who also want the treasure.

Hud 8 p.m. on TCM

We rooted for Butch Cassidy and Fast Eddie, because Paul Newman can make outlaws, pool sharks and other baddies likable. But his character in this 1963 Western merits nothing but boos. "Cadillac cowboy" Hud Bannon is a womanizing sleazeball who takes selfishness to the level of an art form. Newman's performance is proof that he can do baddies bad, too. Speaking of great acting, Melvyn Douglas and Patricia Neal both won Oscars for their performances.

The Fifth Element 8 p.m. 10:30 p.m. on TNT

Bruce Willis saves the world ... again! The "Die Hard" star plays the driver of a flying taxi in this futuristic Frenchmade 1997 action film. After a prologue about a set of five totems discovered in 1914, the action leaps forward 300 years. With a planet headed for impact with Earth, an evil overlord (Gary Oldman) prepares to battle a high priest (Ian Holm) with knowledge of the totems. Willis' cabbie lends his fists to the fray. Milla Jovovich also stars.

Law & Order 10 p.m. on (9) (1) (2)

Fans of this series are used to cast changes by now, so the addition of Alana De La Garza ("CSI: Miami") as McCoy's (Sam Waterston) new assistant and Milena Govich ("Conviction") as a new detective should be easy to swallow. They may have a tougher time with the show's move to Fridays; after all, it's been a Wednesday staple forever. Hey, change is good, ruts are bad, and VCRs and DVRs are programmable.

tonight's PICKS

Jericho 8 p.m. on 2 5 7

Sometimes reruns are a good thing. Especially on this all-serial television diet they're feeding us lately. This week, with all the new shows premiering, folks are certain to have missed a few, and with serialized dramas such as this one about a small Kansas town reacting to a possible nuclear attack, it's miss a little, miss a lot. So thanks, CBS, for giving us the chance to catch

Any Given Sunday 8 p.m. on FX

He didn't get an Oscar, but Al Pacino should get an honorary Super Bowl ring for his work in Oliver Stone's 1999 football drama. The death of a team's owner puts its management in the hands of his widow (Ann-Margret), who couldn't care less, and his daughter (Cameron Diaz), who treats it like a business. The daughter is soon on a collision course with the coach (Pacino), who already has enough on his plate. The star-packed cast also includes Jamie Foxx and James Woods.

The Manchurian Candidate 8 p.m. on TCM

The remake wasn't bad, but there's nothing like the original: a first-rate 1962 thriller that showcases director John Frankenheimer at its best. Withheld from distribution for years, reportedly at the behest of producer and star Frank Sinatra, the drama casts Ol' Blue Eyes as an ex-soldier who learns another veteran (Laurence Harvey) has been brainwashed into committing a political assassination. Angela Lansbury is great as Harvey's evil mother.

Mrs. America 2006 8 p.m. 10 p.m. on $\overline{\text{WE}}$

Maybe in a few more years, there'll be a single Ms. America pageant open to women of any marital status. For now, though, this event gives married women their moments in the spotlight. And kudos to creator David Z. Marmel for not putting an upper age limit on eligibility, and to the judges for making that not just a formality; the first Mrs. America was 46. Actor John O'Hurley ("Dancing With the Stars") co-hosts with his wife, Lisa.

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit 9 p.m. on (2) (1) (2)

When Fin's (Ice-T) son, Ken (guest star Ernest Waddell), is arrested for digging in a vacant lot, he claims he and his cousin Darius (guest star Ludacris) were just checking out something they overheard. Something about his story sounds — well, ludicrous — and as Benson and Stabler (Mariska Hargitay, Christopher Meloni) investigate, they uncover an unsolved homicide and some potentially disturbing information about Ken in "Venom."
