Former WVU president dies

Harry Heflin was mentor, educator and educator, died Friday at his Morgantown home. He was 92.

"He was sitting in a large chair after a big meal," said Dora Heflin, his wife of 72 years. "I went over to talk to him and he didn't respond.

He had heart problems, but I'm pretty sure he went peacefully."

OBITUARY for Harry Heflin. Page 7-A.

She said her husband spent the last years of his life doing what he enjoyed most, building furniture and reading.

"He would have been 93 [today]," she said. "He was ready to celebrate his birthday. I'll miss being with him. He was my husband and best friend."

Heflin served as the university's 18th president in 1981. He decided to retire about four months into his term. By that time, he had spent most of his life giving back to the world of West Virginia academics.

"He started in a one-room school in Ritchie County called Highland School," Dora Heflin said. "He ended up president emeritus at WVU after serving as president of Glenville State College for more than 17 years. He first came on at WVU after that as vice president of administration and finance while Dr. Miller was president."

Paul A. Miller was WVU president from 1962-1966. Heflin accepted the administrative post at WVU in 1964.

Heflin also served as acting president twice before retiring in 1974 to serve briefly as the West Virginia Board of Regents vice chancellor

He was appointed WVU president after Gene Arthur Budig, who served from 1977-1981. When Heflin retired, Elwood G. Gee became pres-

Mon County School Levy

Voters to decide on school tax

DUE TO limited space, the "Day in the Life" Magistrate Court presentation planned for today could not run. It will appear next Sunday.

Monongalia County voters will decide Nov. 7 if they want to continue paying for the school levy. The money, about $16 million a year, helps pay for school operations and personnel. The chart below and the story on Page 4-A explain how the levy works and what it pays for. Because the levy money comes out of property taxes, it affects every voter. We offer this package to help you make an informed decision.

U.S. military: Suspect in 'final stages' of planning attack

Sunni Arab political leader arrested on Friday night

Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — The U.S. military said a captured al-Qaida suspect and members of his cell were "in the final stages" of planning an attack on the Green Zone

An unprecedented curfew prompted by the arrest left millions of Baghdadis stranded at home on Saturday without supplies during the Islamic holy month of Ramadan.

The U.S. military said the suspected al-Qaida in Iraq member was arrested late Friday at the home of senior Sunni Arab political leader Adnan al-Dulaimi, where he was working as a personal bodyguard.

Al-Dulaimi is a member of the Iraqi Accordance Front — the largest Sunni coalition in the 275-member parliament, where it holds 44 seats — and the military was quick to distance the politician from the raid, stressing that he was "not the target" was "not the target."

"This operation in no way implies Dr. al-Dulaimi was associated with any illegal activity," the military said, adding that the suspect was captured in a security trailer at al-Dulaimi's home.

After the arrest, Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki was advised by the U.S. military to shut down the capital and order its 7 million residents to stay at home.

FDA lifts 2-week-old spinach ban

New warning covers only specific packaged brands

SAN FRANCISCO — Most fresh spinach in the United States is "as safe as it was" before a nationwide E. coli outbreak, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration said, revising a 2-week-old consumer warning.

The warning now covers only specific brands packaged on certain dates. Consumers should continue avoiding spinach recalled earlier this month by Natural Selection Foods LLC of San Juan Bautista and four companies that it supplied, said Kevin Reilly, deputy director of prevention services for the California health department.

A week ago, the FDA had said it was safe to eat spinach grown anywhere outside of three Salinas Valley counties, and some stores began restocking. Dr. David Acheson, chief medical officer of the agency's Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition, said Friday that only spinach that had already been recalled shouldn't be eaten.

Other spinach "is as safe as it was before this event," Acheson said.

Natural Selection's recall covered 34 brands it packaged bearing "Best if Used By" dates of Aug. 17 through Oct. 1. Reilly said the recall and the expiration dates make it likely the tainted spinach that led to the E. coli outbreak has mostly worked its way

"Harry Heflin lived for WVU, always believing in its relevance and might," Budig said late Saturday.

Born in Pennsboro in 1913, Heflin married Dora Morgan in 1934. He graduated from Glenville State with honors in 1937 and was awarded a scholarship to George Peabody College in Nashville, where he received a master's degree in 1938.

In 1939, he began work on a doctorate at Ohio State University. He was awarded a fellowship by the University of Pittsburgh in 1940, where he obtained a Ph.D. in general education in 1942.

From 1943-1946, he served on the Admirals Staff of the U.S. Naval Air Training Command, leaving as a lieutenant. He then took a position as professor of education and director of the bureau of educational service at Marshall University.

Concord College granted Heflin an honorary Doctor of Laws degree in 1965. WVU gave him the same honor in 1978. And in 1982, WVU inducted him into the Order of Vandalia, the highest honor given by the university.

Dr. Morgan Heflin, of Columbus, Ohio, is Harry Heflin's only child. The retired orthodontist spoke haltingly about his father Saturday from the family home in Morgantown.

He said his father grew up in a log cabin near Pennsboro in Ritchie County and was a man who did what he said he was going to do a man of his word.

"He wasn't one to just talk," he day, Morgan Heflin said.

'He started out with nothing, but he went on to become president of that college," he said. "He also took the money he made and built a home for his mother. He was very giving and totally devoted to the WVU school system. We lost a good man," he said as his voice softened to a whisper. "This is hard."

Current WVU President David C. Hardesty Jr. issued the following

said. "My father had 15 bucks in statement Saturday: "Harry Heflin was a man of West Virginia who served West Virginia higher education throughout all of his long and productive life. He and his wife Dora have been coaches and mentors to Susan and me for almost 40 years. The entire university is saddened by the loss of a man of such uncommon goodness and high moral character. Our sympathies are extended to Mrs. Heflin and Dr. Heflin's family and friends."

Friends may call at Hastings Funeral Home, at 153 Spruce St., on Monday from 3-5 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. Heflin's body will lay in state Tuesday at Wesley United Methodist Church, 503 High St., from 10 a.m. until the time of service at 11 a.m.

Heflin will be buried Wednesday at the I.O.O.F. Cemetery, in St. Mary's, at 1 p.m.

River Ranch Fresh Foods of Salinas, Pacific Coast Fruit Co. of Portland, Ore., S.T. Produce of Seattle and RLB Food Distributors of West Caldwell, N.J., recalled products that contained spinach supplied by Natural Selection.

Natural Selection and nine farms

spinach have been the focus of inspectors searching for the source of the outbreak, which has sickened 187 people and killed at least one in 26 states. Nine packages of Dole baby spinach, one of the brands Natural Selection bagged, have tested positive for E. coli.

The FDA action came on the same day California growers and produce processors presented preliminary food safety guidelines the agency set as a prerequisite for that supplied the company with removing its spinach warning after the E. coli outbreak.

But state health officials said the FDA's decision to tell consumers they could resume eating all but a very limited supply of spinach was unrelated to the industry blueprint submitted earlier in the day.

"Our recommendation is that the public should not consume the spinach specifically cited in the recall," Reilly said. "As I've said pretty persistently, there are some concerns about systemic contamination in the Salinas Valley, and it's really critical the farms, the ranchers, implement good agricultural practices routinely and on every farm, every day.'

The recent outbreak is the 20th connected to leafy green vegetables — lettuce or spinach — since 1995, half of them linked to farms in central California's Salinas Valley. Investigators don't yet know how the greens linked to the current outbreak became tainted, and may never know for sure, Acheson

Congress says credit cards can't be used to settle online wagers

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional Republicans attached a measure cracking down on Internet gambling to a bill aimed at enhancing port security that passed Saturday.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., and Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., pushed for the gambling provision to be added to the larger bill.

Online gambling is generally illegal in most circumstances, but it is something that is difficult to enforce. The new measure tackles that by prohibiting gamblers from using credit cards, checks and electronic fund transfers to settle their online wagers.

'The enforcement provision provided by this bill will go a long way to stop these illegal online operations," Kyl said late Friday.

Kyl and Frist previously tried unsuccessfully to put the measure on a bill authorizing funding for the military, but critics said the Defense Department bill was no place for the gambling mea-

Similarly, Democrats complained Friday that Republicans had used the port security bill as a vehicle for other GOP-backed measures.

Internet gambling bill in July, but the Senate has taken no action on similar legislation.

Frist, eyeing a 2008 presidential bid, recently discussed the online gambling provision in the politically important state of Iowa. He also called it a legislative priority in a recent speech on the Senate floor.

'Congress has grappled with this issue for 10 years, and during that time we've watched this shadow industry explode," Frist said in a statement Friday. "For me as majority leader, the bottom line is simple:

The House passed a version of the Internet gambling is illegal."

The measure's supporters include the National Football League as well as conservative and antigambling groups. Some banking groups have lobbied against it.

Federal officials have made recent arrests involving offshore companies operating Internet gambling sites. The Internet gambling industry is headquartered almost entirely outside the United States although many of its customers live in the U.S.

The new gambling provision is not expected to affect gambling at tracks or casinos.

Federal judge revokes ex-Nazi guard's citizenship; lawyers will appeal

PITTSBURGH — A former Nazi concentration camp guard who has lived in western Pennsylvania for more than 40 years had his American citizenship revoked by a federal judge. His attorneys plan to appeal.

The Department of Justice had wanted Anton Geiser deported, saying he hid his service in the Waffen SS from U.S. officials when he immigrated in 1956.

Political career ends with apology

WASHINGTON — It was a shocking end for a rising star. Rep. Mark Foley's abrupt resignation from Congress on Friday ended a political career that was promising from the day he entered the House in 1995 as a swaggering leader among the big crop of freshmen who swept into office under Newt Gingrich's "Republican Revolution.'

He was brash. He was savvy. He looked good on television. Unlike many members of his freshman class, he had legislative experience, the result of four years in the Florida Legislature.

And he remained a favorite among House Republicans even while sometimes straying from the party line.

Foley's signature achievement came just two months ago amid smiles and handshakes, capped by a splashy bill-signing ceremony in the White House. After years of prodding and maneuvering, Foley saw final passage of his pet project: a bill designed to get tough on sexual

The new law imposes mandatory 10-year prison sentences for sex crimes against people under the age of 18. With the Internet in mind, it outlaws depictions of the sexual abuse of children and the transfer of obscene material to minors. It also shores up requirements for sex offenders to regularly report their whereabouts to authorities.

Along the way, his office sent out one public statement after another, often in bold capital letters, warning that convicted sex offenders were running loose, evading public scrutiny despite a law requiring them to be listed in a national reg-

"We track library books better than we track sex offenders," was his frequent refrain.

It is, for him, a cruel irony that his political demise comes as result of sexually suggestive messages over the Internet with a young House page. For his staff and many supporters, the fall brought shocked silence, followed by sadness.

'We love this man," said his chief of staff, Elizabeth Nicholson, her voice breaking when she emerged from Foley's House office to hand reporters a statement announcing his resignation. "He is a wonderful, funny, caring man. The staff is very loyal.'

Foley, R-Fort Pierce, once appeared to have good prospects for statewide office. He seemed perfectly positioned as a maverick Republican, conservative on some issues, moderate on others, capable of taking an independent path.

'I think that we see the value of our education system' If residents pass levy Nov. 7, the tax rate would remain the same

BY ERIC BOWEN

The Dominion Post

More pencils, more books, more teachers with cheerful looks.

Voters will decide Nov. 7 whether to renew a property tax that helps pay for salaries, supplies, buses, and music and science programs at Monongalia County Schools.

The tax, called an excess levy because it is in addition to the money the district receives from the state, essentially would extend the current levy that expires at the end of June for another five years. The money collected by the levy, estimated at $16 million a year, accounts for more than one-fifth of the district's budget.

Mon County Schools Treasurer Terry Hawkins said the levy supplements the money the district receives from the state government.

It is used to pay for supplies, technology and maintenance of the buildings among other items. And it is used for salaries and support personnel, such as some nurses and para-professionals, that are not funded by the regular allocation.

"A good portion of it goes toward supplementing salaries and toward nonfunded personnel so we can maintain all of the programs that are not funded," Hawkins said. "It's basically used across the entire operation of the school sys-

If the levy is approved, homeowners will continue to pay 34.42 cents for every $100 of a home's taxable value, which is 60 percent of the market value. On a house with a market value of $100,000, a taxpayer would pay $206.52 a year.

The tax is also applied to commercial and personal property, such as cars and industrial equipment. The school tax would be 17.21 cents on each $100 of agricultural property, and 68.84 cents on personal property.

The excess levy is paid in addition to the regular school taxes, Hawkins said. Every homeowner in the state pays the same tax rate, which is then added to state money and allocated back to the district based primarily on enrollment. Homeowners in Mon County also pay a tax to pay back the district's construction bond.

The ballot language for the levy spells out 14 different funding areas that would be paid for from the proceeds of the tax.

The bulk of the tax, about $9.1 million, goes toward salaries and benefits for teachers, service personnel and professional staff.

Other big-ticket items include

$1.1 million for instructional materials, about $1.3 million for building maintenance and $1.1 million for operations. The excess levy also allocates money for transportation, athletic programs, music and art, and science laboratories. And $92,000 is budgeted for school libraries.

Because state law prohibits school employees from promoting the excess levy, a group of local residents formed a committee last month to get the message out.

Vitale said that making sure kids get a good education is critical to the future of the state. Kids need to be educated to become productive workers, and schools need to be top-notch to attract people to Mon County.

"I think that we see the value of our education system for Monongalia County and the impact that it has in all of our lives," Vitale said. "In order to attract good employees, we need to be able to provide an outstanding educational system. I think it's important that private business understand the relationship between the success of the county school system and our success with-

Mon County is not the only community considering an excess levy in November.

Preston County voters will consider a three-year, $1.5 million annual maintenance levy this fall. The levy will be used entirely for maintenance and repairs at county schools. None of the money can be used for salaries or benefits for school employees. Preston voters have routinely past and have not had an excess levy since 1994. School officials have implemented several cutbacks to bring the budget into balance, and have delayed repairs to schools. Vitale said that Preston County turned down excess levies in the

is an example of what happens when the community doesn't support an excess levy.

Committee members and school administrators in Mon County will spend time during the next month talking to community groups, businesses and service clubs about the levy. He said they would focus on the importance of the money to the schools and to the community at large.

'One of the most important things to be considered is this is a replacement excess levy," Vitale said. "No new taxes are being assessed here. We're very fortunate in this community to have what we have.'

Student sues board over alleged harassment

CHARLESTON — The Kanawha County Board of Education is being sued by a Sissonville High School student who claims she was sexually harassed and physically abused by a male student. Chenoa Ellsworth, 16, claims in her lawsuit that the boy repeatedly grabbed her and fondled her during the 2005-2006 school year. The lawsuit, filed Thursday in Kanawha County Circuit Court, also names as defendants the boy and Sissonville Principal Calvin McKinney. Ellsworth's lawsuit alleges that the school board failed to intervene and that McKinney took no action when she and her mother reported the alleged harassment and abuse.

School board attorney Jim Withrow said Friday that he was aware of the allegations but had not seen the lawsuit. He said he referred the matter to the school board's insurance carrier when he learned about the allegations but that no other action was taken because the school year had ended.

Stamping plant lays off 203 workers

SOUTH CHARLESTON – Mayor Richie Robb wasn't surprised when the Union Stamping & Assembly plant laid off about 200 workers, but he said the move is still unwelcome.

Union Stamping's owner, Union Partners LLC, had announced in July that operations at the South Charleston plant would wind down by the end of September and the facility could be shut down by the end of the year.

On Friday, the company laid off 203 hourly workers, reducing its work force to about 100 workers, said Emil Clark, chairman of United Auto Workers Local

"It's certainty not good news, but we've been here before," Robb said. "The facility was totally closed 15 years ago and came back. It can happen again." Robb said the city would lose $500,000 in direct and indirect tax revenue if the plant is shut down.

find missing airliner in Amazon

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL — Brazilian air force pilots searching for a ietliner that disappeared with 155 people aboard spotted the wreckage of the aircraft Saturday, deep in the Amazon jungle. Emergency crews were unable to reach the plane immediately, and the fate of the passengers was unknown.

The president of Brazil's airport authority, Jose Carlos Pereira, said the pilots searched for Flight 1907 through the night in the thickly forested region before finding the wreckage. The Gol airlines Boeing 737 vanished Friday on its way from Manaus, a major river city in the heart of the Amazon rain forest, to Rio de Janeiro, 1,700 miles away.

"At this moment there is no way of telling if there are any survivors," said Denise Abreu one of the directors of the Brazilian Aviation Agency.

She said the plane crashed near a large cattle ranch by the Xingu Indian reservation, 1,090 miles northwest of Sao Paulo.

Kurdish group declares new unilateral cease-fire

QANDIL MOUNTAIN RANGE, Iraq — A Kurdish guerrilla group declared a unilateral cease-fire Saturday in its more than 20-year fight for autonomy in Turkey's southeast, but said it would not immediately give up its weapons.

Murat Karayilan, a commander of the armed-wing of the Kurdistan Workers Party, or PKK, made the announcement Saturday from his hideout in the rugged, isolated Qandil Mountains in Iraq's northeast corner where the group is based.

Karayilan said that starting Sunday his fighters will not use their arms unless attacked by the Turkish army. He also said the cease-fire "would be implemented by all parts within the PKK.'

ber of educators in West Virginia and throughout the country. He was a scholar and a gentleman. He always put others before himself, always giving other folk credit. He was always ready to salute many others who had given help along the way. There was a special interest in helping young students. He was born in Pennsboro, W.Va., Oct. 1, 1913, the son of the late Alpha

L. and Mabel Lewis Heflin. He married Dora Morgan in 1934. Dr. Heflin was an honor student in high school and attended Glenville State College, where he graduated with honors in 1937. He was awarded a scholarship to George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn., where the master's degree was awarded in 1938. During the summer of 1939, work was taken at the doctoral level at Ohio State University. A fellowship was awarded at the University of Pittsburgh in 1940, and a Ph.D. was conferred in 1942. Concord College conferred an honorary Doctor of Laws in 1965 and West Virginia University a Doctor of Laws degree in 1978.

Dr. Heflin taught in the public schools of West Virginia from 1934-1937. In June of 1938 he joined the faculty of Appalachian State College, Boone, N.C., where he remained until 1943. At the time of departure, he held the rank of Professor and the administrative post of Dean of Instruction. During the summer of 1942 he taught graduate courses for the University of North Carolina.

During the period 1943-1946, Dr. Heflin served on the Admiral's Staff of the U.S. Naval Air Training Command, U.S.N.R., leaving the service as a Lieutenant. In 1946 he accepted a position as Professor of Education and Director of the Bureau of Educational Service at Marshall University in Huntington, W.Va. He became Dean of Teachers College

Dr. Heflin served as President of Glenville State College from 1947 until 1964, when he accepted the position of Vice President for Finance and Administration at WVU. He served as Acting President twice before retiring in 1974 to serve briefly as Vice Chancellor of the West Vir ginia Board of Regents. Dr. Heflin was appointed the 18th President of WVU in 1981 and was later named President Emeritus. West Virginia University inducted him into the Order of Vandalia, the highest honor given by the University, and in 1982 recognized him as the most loyal West Virginian.

Dr. Heflin served on numerous boards and belonged to many organizations. He was a longtime member of the Masonic Lodge, the Rotary Club, Morgantown's XX Club, state and national educational organizations and the United Methodist Church. He had served on boards of the Chamber of Commerce, the Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation, The West Virginia University Foundation, the Monongalia General Hospital, the Ethics committee of the West Virginia State Bar, and the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education's studies committee as chairman for a term. With a group of college and University presidents, he was asked to spend six weeks in Germany to study their educational system. He had served as President of the organization of State College and University Presidents.

He authored a chapter in the book "Mountain Heritage," and had articles published in educational journals. Dr. Heflin finally retired in 1981 after 47 years of educational service. He served for 20 years on the Board of the First National Bank of Morgantown and on The Suncrest Board until it merged with the First National Bank. He was a member of the Huntington National Bank Board until age caused his retirement.

Governor Jay Rockefeller named him a Distinguished West Virginian and Glenville State College named him the most Distinguished Pioneer. The college also named their administration building the Harry B. Heflin Administration Building.

Dr. Heflin is survived by his wife, Dora Morgan Heflin; and one son, Dr. B. Morgan Heflin, a retired Orthodontist in Columbus, Ohio. He has two grandsons, Dr. Michael B. Heflin and wife, Lisa, and Dr. Gregory S. Heflin and wife, Gina. He has five great-grandchildren, Alex, Judy, Marisa, Harrison and Malaya, all living in Los Angeles.

He was preceded in death by a brother, Brooks; and a sister, Gertrude Jackson.

Friends will be received at Hastings Funeral Home, 153 Spruce St., Morgantown, from 3-5 and 7-9 p.m., Monday, Oct. 2.

The body will be moved and lie in state at Wesley United Methodist Church, 503 High St., Morgantown, Tuesday, Oct. 3, from 10 a.m. until the time of the service, in the church at 11 a.m., with Dr. Ken A. Ramsey officiating.

Megan Rochelle Lantz

Megan Rochelle Lantz, 8, of Terra Alta, our very loved and cherished angel who touched many peoples' hearts, went home to be with the Lord, Thursday, Sept. 28, 2006, at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, Pa.

She was born Aug. 4, 1998, in Oakland, Md., to her loving parents, Kammie and Jamie Lantz, of Terra Alta, W.Va.

To see Megan was like looking at a rainbow.

Megan's pot of gold will be found going through the golden gates of heaven.

Megan was diagnosed with mylodysplasia/AML (Leukemia) in August 2004, but never once took claim of it. Megan fought a tough battle for two years with the phrase "I got God in my back pocket." Megan will be remembered as one of the strongest little girls ever known, one who stood on her faith and drew her strength from the Lord our Father. He carried her through, performing miracles and proving doctors and statistics wrong, time and time again.

In addition to her parents, Megan will shine through her surviving sister, Kambra Dawn, and brother, Trey Lantz, both at home; grandparents, Butch and Helen Lantz, Jeri Dixon, and Bill and Nellie Dixon, all of Terra Alta; great-grandparents, Arlett Lantz, and Todd and Betty Sypolt; aunts and uncles, Jonathen, James and Teresa Dixon, Tonya and Jason Hefner, and Janet and Bobby Lantz; cousins, Brandon, Hunter and Gauge Lantz; and many great-aunts, uncles; and cousins.

Megan is also survived by many people who held a special place in her heart; Aunt Brenda Murphy, Aunt Ima and Shake Thomas, Pat Strain, Matthew Noland, Popeye Wotring, pastors Paul and Cathy Snyder, Nancy Teter, Aunt Angie Sypolt, Kenny McCrobie, Becca and Lisa Browning, Jared Hostutler, Bradley Anderson, Jeff Roy, Jason Funk, Mike and Valerie Felton, Anthony Sines, "Goofy" Felton, Justin Kelly, the nurses of the 6th floor at Ruby Memorial Hospital and the nurses of the 8th floor at Children's Hospital & PICU Childrens Hospital of Pittsburgh.

If we did not mention you personally, please know you were just as important to her, and you'll know who you are.

All of us together will keep Megan's memory going on through stories, pictures and reminiscing. Every single one helped her and us walk through the good times and the hard times.

She was preceded in death by Sue and Walt Kisner (Grandma and Pap Pap Walt); great-grandfathers, Bob Lantz, Isaac Peters and Roy "Pappy" Dixon; a great-uncle, Uncle Steve; and great-grandmothers, Agnes Weaver and Clara Dixon.

Megan would never tell you that she felt bad, hurt, upset or complain in any way. If you asked her how she felt, she would say "with my hands." Our little angel is in heaven, and we will be at peace knowing she will now be a normal kid, which was all she wanted.

Megan always reassured us with rainbows, knowing this was a sign from the Lord the storm is over. The storm is now over and every time you see a rainbow, think of our Miracle Megan.

We will miss our litte princess. We will receive friends at the Arthur H. Wright Funeral Home, Terra Alta, from 2-9 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 1, and from 10 a.m. until the 11 a.m. service, Monday, Oct. 2, with pastors Paul and Cathy Snyder officiating.

Burial will follow in the Terra Alta Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to Make-A-Wish Foundation, 3711 Morgantown Industrial Park, Morgantown, WV 26501.

Ernest Herman Boullioun

SEATTLE — Ernest Herman "Tex" Boullioun, a longtime Boeing Co. executive, died Sunday, said his daughter, Sue Cooper. He was 87.

Boullioun was born in 1918 and grew up in Little Rock, Ark. He joined Boeing in 1940, initially working on the B-17 and B-29 $\,$ bomber programs.

In 1967, he became vice president and general manager of the commercial airplanes division, and in 1972 was promoted to president. He held that position until he retired from Boeing in 1984.

Boullioun traveled the globe selling airplanes, often meeting with heads of state, royalty and celebrities as he worked to secure deals for planes, including the company's trademark 747 widebody jet.

He also was a top manager during the "Boeing Bust," a sharp downturn that began in 1969 and resulted in the company cutting 86,000 jobs over three Boullioun earned the nickname Tex when, soon after joining Boeing, he bet a month's salary that Texas would beat Oregon in a college football game. He won.

Boullioun started an aircraft leasing company, Boullioun Aviation Services, after he retired from Boeing. He sold the company in 1994.

Olivia Robello Breitha

HONOLULU — Olivia Robello Breitha, who shared her story of exile as a leprosy patient on a remote peninsula of Molokai island and strove to dispel myths about the disease, died Thursday. She was 90.

Her death was confirmed Friday by Janice Okubo, spokeswoman for the state Department of Health. Breitha was brought to the Kalaupapa settlement on Molokai in 1937, three years after she contracted Hansen's disease, also known as leprosy. Her 1998 autobiography,

"Olivia: My Life in Exile in Kalaupapa," enlightened generations of readers about the disfiguring condition that was feared for centuries.

More than 8,000 people were banished to Molokai after the disease became epidemic in the 1850s. Forced quarantine did not end until 1969 after sulfone drugs were developed to control Breitha continued to live in Kalaupapa even after the quarantine was lifted. Her death brought the number of patients remaining at Kalaupapa to 33.

She was one of three women to be given the first "Voices of Humanity" award by IDEA, the largest international advocacy group for leprosy survivors.

In 1997, Breitha and other Kalaupapa residents were honored at the United Nations at the opening of a World Health Organization photography exhibit about the accomplishments of leprosy patients.

Lucille DeView

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Lucille DeView, an award-winning playwright and a former columnist and writing coach for The Orange County Register, died Thursday. She was 85.

DeView, who also worked at The Detroit News, The Christian Science Monitor and Florida Today, died of heart failure in Palm Bay, Fla., the Register reported Friday. DeView started writing weekly columns for the Register in the 1990s. She was also among the first news-writing coaches in the nation as newsrooms worked to improve their prose in the late 1970s.

Early in her career, DeView wrote a series called "Dialing Detroit," in which she would dial a random phone number and write a story about the person who answered. Register reporters later repeated the idea with a series called "Everyone Has a Story.

In her late 70s, she wrote her first play, "A Summer with Hemingway's Twin," which won the 1997 National Play Award of the National Repertory Theatre Foundation.

It was based on a summer DeView spent as a maid at the cottage of Ernest Hemingway's sister, hoping to meet the great writer. She never did meet Hemingway, but the play was a suc-

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — JohnW. Peterson, who wrote more than 1,000 gospel hymns in a musical career that began before World War II, died Wednesday. He was 84.

Peterson died of cancer at his home in Scottsdale, said Derek Beach, a funeral director with Messinger Indian School Mortuary in Scottsdale.

Peterson's compositions included "It Took a Miracle," "Over the Sunset Mountains," "So I Send You," and "Surely Goodness and Mercy."

Peterson headed his own music publishing businesses in Scottsdale since moving to Arizona in the 1970s. Earlier, he served for more than 10 years as president of Singspiration, a sacred-music publishing company in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Born Nov. 1, 1921 in Lindsborg, Kan., Peterson served as an Army Air Forces transport pilot in the war, flying a route between India and China over the Himalayas known as "The

After leaving the service, he graduated from the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago and moved to Montrose, Pa., for a job as music director for Singspiration. He later led the organization before moving to Scottsdale and co-founding Good Life Productions and later his forced him to touch down on the then-uncompleted airfield. After the emergency was resolved, he made the first takeoff. In the 1930s, Scott had a chance encounter with Bill Boeing, founder of Boeing Co., when Scott was refueling his airplane at a marina in Alert Bay, British Columbia, where Boeing was refueling his yacht. Boeing hired Scott to be his personal pilot. Scott also served as chief production test pilot for Boeing's company from 1940 to 1966, flying both military and commercial planes. Boeing is now based in Chicago. The municipal airfield in Renton, south of Seattle, was renamed Clayton Scott Field last year, to celebrate Scott's 100th

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A man accused of theft arrived for a preliminary hearing wearing a cardboard box on his head in an effort to conceal his identity. Justin Michael Kalich, 26, wore the box at the suggestion of his lawyer while he waited outside a judge's office for an appointment

Thursday morning. "I'm trying to think outside of the box, so to speak," attorney Jeff Leonard said. Leonard said the move was prompted by concerns over whether a witness would be able

Mammograms should be available for all incomes

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. We know the most effective method of early detection is mammography screening. However, the most recent survey of American women has shown that more than 40 percent had not had a mammogram in the past year, that many women fail to get regular mammograms, and that only one-third of women without health insurance were able to get a mammogram the previous year.

This issue resonates deeply with me for reasons that go beyond my being president of the American Cancer Society and a surgeon who meets and treats women with cancer every day. I, too, am a breast cancer survivor. It breaks my heart knowing there are women who should be getting mammograms, but aren't. Mammograms save lives!

For many women, the decision about whether to get a mammogram is out of their hands. They simply can't afford it.

We have spent decades in the fight to reduce cancer disparities by working to ensure that a greater proportion of Americans have access to screening and treatment. The society has been a longtime supporter of the CDC's National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program, which provides access to high-quality breast cancer screenings and treatment to uninsured or underinsured women, with an emphasis on women between the ages of 50-64.

While the program has done extraordinary work to save the lives of women from breast and cervical cancer, it serves only 20 percent of eligible women due to lack of funds. And if that is not sad enough, its limited reach could be further compromised by proposals out of the White House and Congress to decrease funding.

For more information on the program, or to find a local program to determine their eligibility, your readers should call 1-800-ACS-2345. — CAROLYN RUNOW-ICZ, M.D., AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

DEAR DR. RUNOWICZ AND READERS: Rather than cutting a valuable program that serves only one out of five women, shouldn't we be asking how the program can be extended to reach the other four who need help?

JEANNE PHILLIPS writes "Dear Abby" under the pseudonym Abigail Van Buren.

City police investigate reported robbery

The Morgantown Police Department is investigating an aggravated robbery that occurred on Junction Street, according to a press release Saturday. The department did not specify the date and time of the robbery.

According to a witness, three black men broke into the residence and demanded money. The black men attacked the victim and took his wallet, and then fled. The area was searched, with negative results. The Morgantown Police detective division is continuing the investigation. Anyone with information can contact the police department at 284-7522

Fire Prevention Week is Oct. 8 to 14

BY BRANDY BRUBAKER

The Dominion Post

Area fire officials are urging residents not to watch what they eat, but to watch what they heat.

Oct. 8 to 14 is National Fire Prevention Week. This year's theme, set by the National Fire Protection Association, deals with the dangers of cooking fires.

According to the association, cooking is the leading cause of home fires and the leading cause of homefire-related injuries.

One in three fires in homes begin in the kitchen, the association said. The state fire marshal's office said that, from July 2004 to June 2005, 397 fires started in the cooking area of the kitchen. In about one-third of those fires, cooking materials, such as food and grease, were the first items to be ignited, the office said.

State Fire Marshal Sterling Lewis said it doesn't take long for food to turn to fire.

"Often when fire departments are called to a fire that started in the kitchen, the occupants say that they only left the kitchen for a few minutes," Lewis said. "Sadly, that's all it takes for a dangerous fire to start."

Morgantown Fire Marshal Max Humphreys said a small fire can spread quickly, burn up wooden

WVU open house draws 400 prospective students

The Dominion Post

WVU's fall open house Saturday drew more than 400 prospective students and their parents, who spoke with university administrators and staff about beginning their college search. The event gives WVU a chance to bring to light its academic programs.

The event also gives high school students an opportunity to gather information about the university's programs and services that will help them in their decision-making process.

Various campus service representatives were on hand to answer questions regarding admissions, housing, various

ROTC programs. Families also learned how to finance students' education and about available scholarships Parents also learned how to get involved in the Mountaineer Parents Club. The open house featured campus tours led by current WVU students, as well as an information fair at the Creative Arts Center. WVU President David C. Hardesty Jr. welcomed prospective students and their parents after the information

His remarks were followed by tours of WVU's Student Recreation Center and lunch at the Evansdale Residential Complex dining hall.

Clare Smith, of Silver Spring, Md., speaks to Adele Siba, Assistant Director of Admissions and Records. Smith is planning to apply to WVU.

Springhill Suites by Marriott used to have eight smoking rooms among its 80 rooms.

Guests should check if hotels still offer smoking rooms. The Marriott company is eliminating other hotel smoking rooms, and one in Morgantown is consider-them.

But by early last week, the hotel had converted smoking rooms, and was offering only nonsmoking rooms, said Brian Herron, general manager of the hotel located at gantown. "We as part of the Marriott chain have instituted a 100 percent nonsmoking facility policy," he

A hotel free of smoke is what customers want these days, he said.

"Guests think this is the next step in customer satisfaction. ... It seems to be the way the wind is blowing," he said.

This summer, the company announced its 2,300 hotels and corporate apartments would be smoking-room free.

Before extinguishing smoking rooms, most of its properties were 90 percent smoke free, a Marriott news release stated.

At least one other area hotel, Euro-Suites on Van Voorhis Road, is considering a similar move because smoking rooms are a tough sell, said Melanie Filandino, general manager.

She said nonsmoking rooms are easier to sell.

But other hotels say they'll keep smoking rooms because customers demand them. At the Morgantown Motel on W.Va. 73, smoking rooms will stay, said Dorothy Labombard. "I have a lot of customers who come here and smoke, and it wouldn't be fair to them," she said. The motel has no trouble selling the smoking rooms, she added.

The Clarion Hotel Morgan at 127 High St. is keeping its 26 smoking rooms, said Andy Wharton, general manager. It has 50 nonsmoking rooms, he said.

"There really aren't any plans to eliminate the smoking rooms. ... We have a lot of people who are smokers who would be upset if we didn't have smoking rooms." Hotel Morgan customer Robert

Townsend said that one of the first questions he asks before making a hotel reservation is "Do you have a smoking room?"

If there are none he'll find another hotel, he said. "I am a smoker and I would not stay in a hotel where I could not smoke in my room," he said. Euro-Suites Hotel has 13 smoking rooms among its 79 rooms, but owners might go nonsmoking, based on what customers need, Filandino "It seems smoking rooms are the

Think Pink!

Show your true colors in October, National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Call 285-2730 or 599-7358 throughout October, to request your free "In-the-Pink" breast cancer awareness pack, which includes a pink enamel ribbon pin.

Wear the pin as a reminder of the progress being made in the battle against breast cancer. Wear it year round as a personal reminder to conduct your own monthly self-breast exam and to call your physician to schedule your annual mammogram.

In addition to your pin, you will receive a self-breast exam shower card, a monthly purse calendar, post-it notes, ink pen, magnetic ribbon, awareness bracelet, informational literature, and more.

Let Wedgewood Imaging Center and the Zelda Stein Weiss Cancer Awareness and Early Detection Project of Mon General Hospital help you color the town pink. Call early, supplies are limited.

LAST WEEK I DISCUSSED some of the issues about fall pasture management. These included when to time your last cutting or grazing cycle, how to stockpile for winter grazing and a reminder to take a soil test. This week I was able to find some guidance for fall weed management for grass hay and pasture fields.

Bill Curran and Dwight Lingenfelter, Pennsylvania State University Cooperative Extension, remarked that, "Fall is an excellent time to manage certain weeds in grass hay and pastures." In particular, biennials such as common burdock, wild carrot, and bull, musk and plumeless thistles are much easier to kill while they are in the rosette stage of growth and prior to surviving a winter.

Once these weeds start growth in the spring, they grow very rapidly to the reproductive stage, making them very difficult to control. Usually, late summer and fall is the best time to control most perennials with a systemic herbicide. The application window runs from early September through the end of October.

Applications to perennial species like horsenettle, smooth groundcherry and woody species like multiflora rose should be on the early side of this window, while cool-season perennials like Canada thistle and dandelion can be effectively controlled after several light frosts. With both biennial and perennials species, adequate leaf tissue must be present and it should be reasonably healthy to absorb the herbicide.

There are a number of systemic broadleaf herbicides for grass hay and pasture. Currently there are no products labeled for grass control in cool-season grass, hay or pasture. In addition, most broadleaf weed-control products will kill or injure any legume companion crops. Some should not be used on certain grass species because of injury concerns.

Here is a quick summary of some common herbicide recommendations:

2, 4-D ester 4E (1/2 to 1.5 pt/A) is a systemic herbicide that controls annual, biennial and perennial broadleaves. The ester formulation is slightly more active than the amine and should not be used post-emergence if temperatures are greater than 80 degrees F. This herbicide is commonly mixed with other herbicides to improve control. This is an inexpensive herbicide but tends to be weak on a number of weed species including wild carrot, dock species, bedstraw, horsenettle, hemp dogbane, common milkweed, pokeweed, brambles and most woody perennials. It has a 7 day grazing and 30 day haying restriction.

Clarity 4S or Banvel 4S (0.5 to 4 pt/A) is a systemic herbicide that controls many annual and biennial broadleaf weeds and provides suppression or control of numerous perennials.

Overdrive 70WDG also contains dicamba in addition to diflufenzapyr (a synergist) and can be used in established grass stands (not seedlings) for control of numerous broadleaf weeds. The Overdrive use rate is 4 to 8 oz/A and can be tank mixed with numerous herbicides. Dicamba has a fairly broad spectrum but tends to be weak on wild carrot, buttercup species, dandelion, milkweed and bedstraw, to name a few.

Cimarron 60DF (0.1 to 1 oz/A) controls many annual, biennial and some perennial broadleaf weeds, depending on the rate used. It can be used in established warm- or cool-season grass stands. It is often tank mixed with 2, 4-D or dicamba to increase activity and provides good control of weeds like Canada thistle, bull, musk and plumeless thistle, and multiflora rose to name a few.

Crossbow 3E (1 to 4 qt/A) is a systemic herbicide that can be used on established cool- or warmseason grass stands for control of a variety of annual, biennial and perennial broadleaf weeds, and is also effective on woody plants and brush. Crossbow is often the standard product used for bedstraw control, but is only fair on Canada thistle.

Stinger 3E (0.33 to 1.3 pt/A) controls certain broadleaf weeds and is especially effective on thistles (Canada, musk, bull) and other aster-family species. It can be used on established warm- or cool-season grass stands. A more economical use of Stinger is as a spot treatment.

Milestone 2L (3 to 7 fl oz/A) is a newer active ingredient labeled for grass hay and pasture. Milestone controls many annual, biennial and perennial broadleaf weeds, and is effective on thistles (Canada, musk, bull), burdock, dock, bedstraw, horsenettle, knapweed, sowthistle, ironweed and others. It is less effective on wild carrot, hemp dogbane, common milkweed and most brush species to name a few. Milestone can be tank-mixed with other herbicides.

As always, when using any pesticide, carefully read and follow all label directions and follow all precautions.

Garden tips

■ Onions are nearly ripe when the tips of the leaves turn yellow. Break them at the necks. This will speed the final ripening process. Loosen the soil to encourage drying, and after a few days turn them up and let them cure on dry ground. Always handle them very carefully — the slightest bruise will encourage rot to set in.

■Apples keep well for about six months at temperatures between 32 and 45 degrees F.

■A Styrofoam chest or a double cardboard box in a cool mudroom or cellar can approximate root cellar conditions. Remember to give your apples an occasional change of air. Apple cider may be frozen after first pouring off a small amount to allow for expansion.

■Put some parsley plants in a box and place the box in a light cellar or shed.

■Clean, oil and store lawn mowers.

Beginning with Hot Lotto ticket sales for the drawing on October 4, 2006, and ending with ticket sales for the drawing on October 28, 2006, West Virginia Lottery players may qualify for an entry to win one of five trips to Las Vegas!

- · Players who purchase $5 or more in Hot Lotto plays on a single ticket will receive a single entry coupon to mail for a chance to win.
- . On Friday, November 3, 2006, five (5) winning entries will be drawn.
- · Mail each ENTRY to:

West Virginia Lottery Viva Hot Vegas 2nd Chance Drawing PO Box 99 Dunbar, WV 25064

· All Viva Hot Vegas entries must be received by the end of the Lottery's business day Thursday, November 2.

Each trip will include air transportation for the winner and one guest to Las Vegas; three (3) nights lodging at one of four (4) Las Vegas "strip" hotels, the Wynn, Venetian, Bellagio, or Mandalay Bay (based on availability); limousine service from the airport to the hotel and return; and a $1,000 stipend (to be awarded approximately 10 days prior to departure). The winner may use the $1,000 for entertainment, food, etc., while in Las Vegas, or may use it to defray income tax liabilities on the trip prize package, or for other purposes.

Winners will have until November 30, 2007, in which to take their trip. Blackout dates and other travel restrictions will apply. Once a trip is booked for a winner, the winner will be responsible for any costs incurred in changing a trip's itinerary.

Neither the Multi State Lottery Association nor the West Virginia Lottery shall be held responsible for gratuities, food, beverages, or other incidental expenditures outside the scope of the prize package.

Players may enter multiple times, but may only win one prize. The prize may be transferred to another person(s), if the recipient is 18 years old, or older, and does not have child support debt. The person to whom the prize is transferred must present valid identification to the Lottery. The original prizewinner, however, is responsible for applicable taxes. It is between the parties to agree on the transfer of the $1,000 stipend.

Mis-addressed or illegible tickets are ineligible and will be DISCARDED. One envelope represents one entry, as long as at least one (1) valid entry ticket is enclosed. If more than one entry ticket is enclosed, only one will be used as an entry.

All entries must be mailed from within West Virginia in accordance with U.S. Postal Service regulations.

All entries must be stamped, postmarked, and received by either US mail or by a courier that delivers mail to the designated post office box number being utilized for the drawing. Hand-delivered, certified, faxed or registered mail will not be accepted. The Lottery is not responsible for mail delays.

BEING PREPARED FOR EMERGENCIES

can reduce the fear, panic and inconvenience that surrounds a disaster. For those individuals who have special needs — the elderly, infants, the disabled - an emergency situation can cause extra stress for the victim as well as their family. Here are a few steps that can be taken to help get you and your loved ones be prepared for the next emergency situation:

1. Check for hazards in the home. During and right after a disaster, ordinary items in the home can cause injury or damage. Anything that can move, fall, break or cause fire is a home hazard. Check for items such as bookcases, hanging pictures or overhead lights that could fall in an earthquake or a flood and block an escape path.

2. Be ready to evacuate. Have a plan for getting out of your home or building — ask your family or friends for assistance, if necessary. Also, plan two evacuation routes because some roads may be closed or blocked in a disaster.

3. Have disaster supplies on hand — a flashlight with extra batteries, portable, battery-operated radio and extra batteries, first-aid kit and manual, emergency food and water, nonelectric can opener, essential medicines, cash and credit cards, and sturdy shoes.

4. Maintain a list of the following important items and store it with the emergency supplies. Give a copy to another family member and a friend or neighbor.

■ Special equipment and supplies — i.e. hearing-aid batteries, current prescriptions names and dosages, names, addresses, and telephone numbers of doctors and pharmacist, and detailed information about the specifications of your medication regime.

5. Create a self-help network of relatives, friends or co-workers to assist in an emergency. If you think you may need assistance in a disaster, discuss your disability with relatives, friends and co-workers, and ask for their help. For example, if you need help moving or require special arrangements to receive emergency messages, make a plan with friends. Make sure they know where you keep emergency supplies. Give a key to a neighbor or friend who may be able to assist you in a disaster. 6. Contact our office now. In preparing our community for any disaster that may hit, we need to maintain a register of people with disabilities so they can be located and assisted quickly in a disaster.

7. If you have a severe speech, language or hearing disability: When you dial 911, tap the space bar to indicate TDD call, store a writing pad and pencils to communicate with others, keep a flashlight handy to signal whereabouts to other people and for illumination to aid in communication, remind friends that you cannot completely hear warnings or emergency instructions, ask them to be your source of emergency information as it comes over their radio, if you have a hearing-ear dog, be aware that the dog may become confused or disoriented in an emergency, store extra food. water and supplies for your dog.

Fall colors emerge in the state

The Dominion Post

Autumn has arrived in the Mountain State and with it comes the anticipation of seeing some of the most plentiful fall foliage in the nation.

Although anticipation of brilliant fall color is high, most of the state's foliage currently is only in the beginning stage of transition. Here are some of the best spots this week to see:

The higher elevations of Grant, Pendleton and Tucker counties have the most color change with foliage ranging between 25 and 40 percent peak. Mount Storm and Dolly Sods in Grant County are showing some color, as is Spruce Knob in Pendleton County. In Tucker County, the higher elevations are close to 45 percent peak foliage with reds mostly showing through the otherwise green landscape.

In Pocahontas and Randolph counties the higher elevations are at 25 percent peak color, and maple, birch, and poplar leaves are changing quickly. Foliage along the Scenic Highway in Pocahontas County is developing its traditionally spectacular fall hues.

Foliage in Hardy County ranges between 15 and 25 percent peak. Old Route 55 from Wardensville to Baker is the recommended drive for that county. Sycamore, poplar and maple trees

Sycamore, poplar and maple trees are starting to take on color along the New River in Summers County, although color is presently only near 15 percent peak.

The Division of Forestry will provide fall foliage reports throughout the month of October.

Turning over a new leaf

Why leaves change colors: Each fall, leaves turn breathtaking shades of orange, purple, red, yellow and brown in a fantastic show of nature's glory. But why do leaves change color? Although Jack Frost gets most of the credit, the scientific reason for our beautiful fall foliage is a process called photoperiodism. As the sun moves further south, the hours of daylight shorten and the temperatures fall. This causes leaves to cease production of chlorophyll, the chemical that colors leaves green. As the chlorophyll disappears, the underlying colors of the leaves are unmasked. The next strongest pigment becomes dominant, giving the leaves a "new"

LIEAP applications accepted

The Dominion Post

The West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources will accept applications from the public for LIEAP beginning Dec. 4 and ending Dec. 15. Those who received LIEAP in 2005 will receive applications by mail in October. The LIEAP program will allow households to obtain assistance with home heating before the start of winter weather increases demand and shortens supply of some fuels, such as wood.

Applications may be picked up and dropped off at local DHHR offices, Community Action agencies, or senior centers operated by any area agency on aging. Applications will also be available, wvinroads.org, beginning Dec. 4 and ending Dec. 15. The application must be printed and mailed to the DHHR office located in the applicant's county of residence.

Mailing the application to any other office or to a utility may delay receipt of the application by DHHR or prohibit processing of the application. In situations where a heating emergency exists, applicants must be seen by s DHHR worker.

Eligibility for LIEAP benefits is based on income and household size. Income must be below 130 percent of the federal poverty guideline for the household size.

All applications, whether mailed or dropped off, must be received by DHHR or postmarked by Dec. 15. Applications received after this date will be denied. The program is limited to the amount of federal funding allocated to West Virginia under the LIHEAP Block Grant.

Many counties are already experiencing a shortage of vendors available for some types of bulk fuel, especially wood and coal. Anyone interested in becoming a bulk fuel vendor for LIEAP should contact the local DHHR office to obtain a LIEAP Fuel Supplier Agreement and register as a vendor. Information concerning LIEAP vendors is not used for any other program and is not shared with any other agency.

WVU to host breast cancer events in Oct.

WVU will host a series of free events throughout October in observance of breast cancer awareness month, and mark the 10th anniversary of the Betty Puskar Breast Care Center and fifth anniversary of the Comprehensive Breast Care Program.

The free events include a clinical exam, special dinner and educational seminars led by cancer physicians, nurses and other health care

Clinical breast exams will be offered from 5-8 p.m. Monday at no charge in the Cancer Center clinic. If a follow-up mammogram or ultrasound is warranted, breast imaging will be offered at the Breast Care Center, on a limited basis, that evening. Following the clinical breast exam, participants will be escorted to the Breast Care Center for a tour, instruction in breast selfexam and refreshments.

Advance registration is required, 598-4558.

The Betty Puskar Breast Care Center also provides education about prevention and early detection, along with several diagnostic services.

The annual Evening of Celebration dinner will be held Oct. 8 at Lakeview Resort. Nearly 500 breastcancer survivors, their families and friends are anticipated to attend the annual event.

Info, or to register: 598-4558.

A variety of topics relating to breast cancer will be discussed during educational classes in the lobby of the Mary Babb Randolph Cancer Center. They are open to the public and will begin at 7 p.m. on the following days:

■ Oct. 9, Genetic Risk and the West Virginia Breast and Cervical Cancer Screening Program.

■ Oct. 16, Breast health and plastic surgery.

■ Oct. 23, Breast cancer screening. Oct. 30, Obesity, and cancer and other surgical issues. The Breast Care Center is actively working with the Comprehensive Breast Cancer Program at the Mary Babb Randolph Cancer Center. The program includes a variety of breast-cancer specialists who see each patient on the initial visit, and work together to develop and deliver the best possible treatment plan. It is the only comprehensive breastcancer program in West Virginia and the surrounding region.

The program is the only one of its kind in West Virginia to offer genetic counseling for patients at high risk of developing breast cancer.

PROGRAM

The fire-safety programs include a puppet show and information about fire safety that could save a child's life.

City Fire Marshal Max Humphreys said topics such as how to call 911 and how to use a smoke detector will be covered.

The program also will go over how to tell the difference between a good fire and a bad fire, how to escape a house engulfed in flames, and how to stop, drop and roll, Humphreys said.

He said many local schools are bringing their children to the Met Theatre for the event, and that homeschooled children or others are invited to attend.

Reservations must be made by 4 p.m. Friday, and can be made by calling 284-7480.

Humphreys thanked the Met Theatre for allowing the fire department to use the space.

Mollohan in fight of his political life

 ${\tt CHARLESTON-West\ Virginia}$ has a penchant for federal "pork," and Rep. Alan Mollohan has shoveled his share. In the last decade, the 12-term Democrat has earmarked an estimated \$480 million for his 20county 1st Congressional District.

Such largesse has won Mollohan fans among his constituents. It also threatens to topple the veteran congressman, amid allegations that appropriations improperly benefited friends, former staffers, business associates — and ultimately his own campaign war chest.

At issue is at least $202 million of that federal funding channeled by Mollohan since 1996 to five nonprofit groups created with his support, according to audits filed with the U.S. Office of Management and idents, including Mollohan's friends and political allies. The congressman and his political action committee, Summit PAC, have received more than $146,000 during that time from people affiliated with these nonprofits.

A review by The Associated Press shows that contributions from these nonprofit executives, staffers and board members amounted to less than 5 percent of the $3.1 million Mollohan and Summit PAC raised. The AP also found that Mollohan is not the only member of Congress to establish a nonprofit and then find it federal funding.

The FBI subpoenaed financial records from Mollohan's nonprofits earlier this year, after the National Legal and Policy Center asked federal prosecutors to investigate Mollohan in April.

Last month, another Beltwaybased group ranked Mollohan among the 20 members of Congress it considers "most corrupt." Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington also alleges that Mollohan improperly steered federal funds in exchange for campaign contributions from nonprofit staffers as well as fro\]uidpro-quo going on there," said Melanie Sloan, the group's executive director. "You're not supposed to be appropriating for your friends."

Mollohan decries any suggestion linking campaign donations to the earmarks he's secured over the years.

"I'm extremely proud of each and every one of mine. I wear each of them as a badge of honor," Mollohan said. "These are funds that better the lives of my constituents." Since at least the 1990s, several what to do, Nolte said, can make the fire very bad, very quickly.

"Cooking fires are extremely dangerous because it's typical for people to panic," Nolte said.

You're heating vegetable oil on your stove, for example.

You put the stove on high and walk away for just a few minutes. When you come back, the pan is on fire.

What do you do? Nolte said most people would either: a) dump water on the pan; b) run the pan over to the sink; c) pour flour or sand on the fire; or d) douse it with a fire extinguisher. The correct action is none of the above, Nolte said.

The best thing to do is smother the fire by turning off the heat and covering the pan with a lid, she said.

Dumping water on the pan could throw flames outward, which could easily ignite a nearby potholder or kitchen towel, Nolte said. Running the pan to the sink also could spread flames to something else, the person could be burnt, or they could fall. Pouring flour or sand on the fire won't put out the flames, but give them something else to burn. Plus, Nolte said, some flour can explode. Dousing the fire with an extinguisher can just spread the flames elsewhere.

"People severely underestimate the power of fire every day and any firefighter can tell you how quickly a fire can spread," Nolte said. "People have minutes sometimes seconds — to react."

Pa. voters asked to OK borrowing to aid Gulf War vets

Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Nearly 33,000 Pennsylvania veterans who participated in the Persian Gulf War may qualify for state combat "bonuses" of as much as $525 each if voters approve a $20 million bond issue that is on the Nov. 7 statewide ballot.

The payments, authorized by a law that lawmakers overwhelmingly approved and Gov. Ed Rendell signed with little fanfare in April, would be similar to previously authorized bonuses for veterans who served in or during wars dating back to the Spanish-American War in the late-1800s.

"Pennsylvania has had a history of providing a war/conflict bonus to resident veterans," said Rep. Jerry L. Nailor, R-Cumberland, a sponsor of the bill.

"I think it's important to reward all veterans equally,' said another sponsor, Rep. Neal P. Goodman, D-Schuylkill.

While it has been overshadowed by this year's high-profile races for Congress, the governorship and the Legislature, the initiative remains a priority for major veterans' groups.

Richard Coccimiglio, an alternate member of the American Legion's national executive committee, said this is the first time in modern history that Pennsylvania has not provided bonuses for veterans connected to a war. In 1992, by a margin of nearly 2-1, Pennsylvania voters rejected a $25 million bond issue that would have compensated Gulf War veterans and provided money to build a veterans' memorial.

Farm Aid goes from saving farms to promoting health

CAMDEN, N.J. — John Mellencamp never figured Farm Aid would still be needed now, 21 years after its debut as one of many examples in the 1980s of musicians trying to do good.

"We thought we'd have the concert and the government would change things," he said before taking stage at the nearly annual concert Saturday.

When Mellencamp, Willie Nelson and Neil Young founded the charity in 1985, they were mostly concerned with saving family farms, which were going out of business fast in a time when land values were falling and interest rates were soar-

The mission has changed over the years. With the farm crisis in the past, the organization is mostly concerned now with connecting farmers and consumers. They talked as much Saturday about getting kids to eat fresh food as they did about keeping farms commercially viable.

'We started out trying to save the family farm," Nelson said, sitting among farmers. "Now, it looks like the family farm is going to save us."

Over the years, Farm Aid has raised some $29 million, which it uses to help farmers in crisis and support organizations with missions such as setting up farmers markets and encouraging farmers to go organ-

As for the concertgoers at the Tweeter Center, the farming may have been secondary to the music. Some donned faux Willie Nelsonstyle braids and plenty wore T-shirts proclaiming their favorite artist.

Hillary Aderman, from Cherry Hill, stopped by a table run by the Land Stewardship Project to sign a petition urging Congress to pass legislation next year that would help small farms.

"I came for the bands, but I support the cause," Aderman said.

The list of artists performing at the concert ranged from Southern rockers Gov't Mule to rock pioneer Jerry Lee Lewis to reggae stars Steel

At this year's event — the farthest Farm Aid has ever gone into the heavily populated Northeast — a big emphasis was on teaching urban-ites about where food comes from. At a pre-concert news conference, Nelson and other musicians shared a stage with farmers and others trying to promote local food.

Tina Johnson is the founder of a grocery cooperative scheduled to open next year in the struggling community of Chester, Pa., just south of Philadelphia, a town that has not had a grocery store in 15 years.

"You ask a child where milk comes from, they'll tell you 'the store,' they won't tell you, 'a cow."

Organic beer, pork sandwiches straight from a family hog farm in Missouri, soy milk and information about how to go organic were among the many samplings on Saturday.

And for the first time this year, Farm Aid persuaded Aramark, the company that sells all the food at the Tweeter Center, to include some organic and local options.

Of all the lines for food, the one with those offerings was the longest. Some of the selections — such as a veggie burger and fish tacos — could become staples at non-Farm Aid events, too, said Ian Moran the district manager for Aramark.

Judy Rogers, wearing a Willie Nelson T-shirt, and her friend Toni Matlosz were trying the $9 organic hamburgers there.

"I'm tired of those hot dogs and hamburgers," said Matlosz, gesturing to the regular amphitheater fare.

Rogers said it was Willie Nelson and Farm Aid who first inspired her to think about the value of local

Coca-Cola plant will close

YORK, Pa. — A Coca-Cola sales and distribution plant in southcentral Pennsylvania will close Dec. 2, a company official said.

Coca-Cola Enterprises Inc. will close the Springettsbury Township plant as it consolidates following the Feb. 28 purchase of Central Coca-Cola Bottling Co. plants in Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Maryland, spokesman Curtis Etherly said.

Some of the 78 employees may be able to transfer to other plants in the area, Etherly said.

Atlanta-based Coca-Cola Enterprises is the nation's largest Coca-Cola bottler and the largest soft drink bottler in the world, and owns about 400 production, sales and distribution facilities in North America.

Pa. hospital files for bankruptcy

TYRONE, Pa. — Tyrone Hospital filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection Friday so the hospital can keep operating while officials figure out how to deal with mounting debt, including the hospital's share of a $4 million birth malpractice lawsuit verdict.

Chief Executive Officer Walter Van Dyke issued a one-page statement saying the hospital will stay open and the filing will not affect services. The hospital hopes to emerge from Chapter 11 protection within a year, Van Dyke said.

A couple sued their doctor and the hospital claiming they didn't act quickly enough to deliver the boy by Caesarean section after he stopped breathing while his mother was in labor. Their son, born in 1995, now suffers from cerebral palsy.

A Blair County jury found the doctor 80 percent responsible for the boy's condition, and the hospital 20 percent responsible. But under Pennsylvania law, either party could end up paying whatever part of the verdict the other party cannot.

Three western Pa. gas companies cut rates

PITTSBURGH—A warm winter, mild hurricane season and increased natural gas supplies have prompted western Pennsylvania's three largest gas companies to give their customers a break in pricing.

Equitable Gas and Dominion Peoples filed their quarterly cost adjustments with the state Friday, indicating the prices they will charge customers Sunday through year's

Columbia Gas also filed its rates with the Public Utility Commission, but will release them Monday, spokesman Matt Pitzarella said. Columbia customers "will be paying significantly less" than they did last winter, he said.

Equitable will charge its customers $9.98 per thousand cubic feet, or mcf, down $3.74 from a year ago and $1.24 from the current rate of $11.22 per mcf, spokeswoman Pat Kornick said.

The new rate will drop the average Equitable customer's monthly bill from about $150 a year ago to $119, based on annual usage of 98 mcf. Based on the current mcf price. the average monthly bill will drop $10, Kornick said.

Dominion Peoples will charge

$8.67 per mcf for the final quarter of and pricing. this year, down $4.15 from $12.82 in the final quarter of 2005. Domin-ion's current rate is $9.21 per mcf. The average Dominion Peoples customer's bill will drop from $135 last year to $101, company spokesman Elmore Lockley said.

By law, utility companies cannot make a profit on the sale of heating

"We paid less for our gas than what we expected to pay over the past few months, so now we're returning that to customers," said Joseph Gregorini, Dominion's manager for regulatory affairs

Some consumer advocates, however, pointed out that the rates still are higher than a few years ago and many families will struggle this winter to pay their bills.

Pittsburgh-based $1 Energy Fund, paid for largely by contributions from utilities and customers, helped more than 12,750 households avoid losing heating service last winter. Executive Director Cindy Datig expects even more demand this winter.

"While the prices are down, over the long run, people still can't afford their utility bills," she said. "We don't see any increases in the incomes of the working poor.'

Pittsburgh-based Dominion Peoples serves about 357,000 customers. Earlier this year, Dominion announced it would sell Dominion Peoples and Clarksburg, W.Va.based Dominion Hope, which serves more than 116,000 customers in north-central West Virginia, to Equitable for $970 million. The two utilities represent less than 12 percent of Dominion's 4 million customers. The sale is awaiting government approval.

The next rate adjustment is slated for Jan. 1.

Flu vaccine schedule set

Ever since the fall semester began, it seems like everywhere you look someone is coughing or sneezing in your general direction.

If you hate to be sick like me, before you do something drastic like running away when someone sneezes near you or wearing a surgical mask to class to ward off those pesky germs, think seriously about getting a flu shot.

Conveniently enough, the Student Health Service will be offering flu shots to the general student population at the Student Recreation Center. The vaccines are $15 and will be given on Oct. 18th and 26th from 3-8 p.m., so be sure to mark your calendars now so you don't forget.

Getting a shot can be a drag, especially when you have to pay someone to stick a needle in you, but getting sick is even worse. If you are like me, you will get sick at the most inconvenient times, like when you have two papers due and a test to study for, so I plan on getting the vaccine just to save myself the grief. So take my advice; keep yourself healthy, save your sanity, and just get a flu shot.

Class appeals to outdoor enthusiasts

BY DANIELLE CONAWAY For The Dominion Post

Would you like to take a class where you get to spend more time outdoors and have a little fun? PE 135-136: Horsemanship may be just

The class teaches basic horsemanship skills while also challenging students to learn how to communicate with their horse. "It's a life sport — something students can do as they get older,' said horsemanship instructor Michele Koury. "It's definitely a challenge too because you have to deal with a living breathing ani-

Koury and her husband bought the farm in 1977, and Koury went into business for herself in 1980. "It's certainly a passion for me — not only my profession, but also my avocation," she said.

Koury had professional riding instructions from age 8 to 18. After receiving a degree in sociology from Franklin College, Koury began working in Salem, N.Y., at Elmwood Farm with Wayne Carroll, a well-established instructor and Upon moving to West Virginia with her husband, Koury began freelance riding instruction in Morgantown. She also started instructing persons with disabilities and created the Monongalia Riding for the Handicapped Association.

In 1984, Koury became coach of the WVU Equestrian Team, and she has remained involved since. Because of her commitments to the WVU Equestrian Team, Koury only teaches one horsemanship class per semester — PE 135 (fall) and PE 136 (spring).

The 14-week class has a maximum capacity of 20 students and a lab fee of $225.

"Some students drop out because of the distance to get here and the lab fee. We have 14 students this year," Koury said.

"[The class] is a fun little break from learning all the normal book stuff," said Kimmy Locy, who took the horsemanship course in the spring of 2005. "You start off learning the basics of how to sit and the right ways to communicate with the horse. You also learn a lot about how good of shape you are in and a little about teamwork."

Koury has seen a wide variety of majors come through PE 135 and 136 — everything from football players to accounting majors and edu-

In spring 2002, Koury experienced a great success with one of her students, who had never ridden a horse before. "In 14 weeks, he looked like he'd been riding for 3 years, and he said if he had known how much fun it would be, he would have started riding as a kid," Koury work. "It gets you out of the house and into a different environment. I do it because I love the people and getting involved," Ross said. "Through the gym class, you can get involved in the [equestrian] team and the riding club. All freshmen should join a club."

Koury said the horsemanship course is definitely not your typical gym class.

"It's not something like a bunch of basketballs you put back in a net and walk away," Koury said. "There's a certain nurturing and caring that the kids get out of it."

SPORTS EDITOR BOB HERTZEL ■ 291-9429 SUNDAY, OCT. 1, 2006 THE DOMINION POST 1-C

BOB HERTZEL

Sometimes we get one wrong, believe it or not

A SIX-PACK OF THINGS I've been wrong about, and you may have been, too ... 1. Rich Rodriguez will never win because of his coaching Never mind.

When Rodriguez first came to WVU with an X-rated vocabulary and a Mini-Me size fuse, he appeared to be on self-destruct.

That was a coaching style out of the dark ages. Today's kids, especially kids out of the inner city, would never stand for it.

With WVU finishing fifth in the nation last year and now standing fourth, coaches from around the country are coming to town to see how he does it ... and it isn't only with X's and O's.

2. Morgantown High will waltz to a third consecutive state championship

Six games into the season, the Mohigans have two losses and that isn't any waltz I'm hearing.

All of a sudden, John Bowers has discovered the other side of coaching. Everything isn't a victory celebration this year and now it's time for him to try to save the season by rallying his team and finding a way to make Friday's loss to Wheeling Park the last of the year.

This is a team that still can win a state championship, but now it's going to have to do it the

3. The Pittsburgh Pirates will lose 110 games this year

True, 95 losses or more, which is what they will have, is nothing to write home about and finishing last in the N.L. Central, which they may do, isn't exactly the team's goal.

But through the second half of the season, the Pirates were a different team, one that offered real hope for the future (as compared to the false hope of years gone by).

In truth, as bad as the final record will look, they actually salvaged what looked to be maybe the worst season they would have had since the 1950s.

4. The ACC will become the dominant football conference in the country

Raid, schmade.

The ACC is a fraud. It wasn't very good before it raided the Big East and it isn't appreciably better after.

Talk about patsies. Duke, North Carolina, Miami. OK, Miami isn't a patsy yet, but if the Hurricanes don't find some offensive linemen and a quarterback, thev'll be Duke South.

5. Wild cards will ruin base-Right, and Mark McGwire didn't dabble in chemistry.

Certainly, the system will produce some undeserving teams in the playoffs, which many years ago, by the way, I predicted would ruin baseball.

But it has created wire to wire interest in the sport in cities that need it. Consider the season is going into its final day and no one knows for sure who is where.

Philadelphia, for example, was 11 games out of first place going into the weekend but was still in it for the wild card, although its chances were slim, having to win twice while Los Angeles and San Diego lost twice.

6. Jerome Bettis picked the right time to retire

Turns out, there was no right time for Bettis to retire. You can point fingers at Ben Roethlisberger if you like — and between a motorcycle wreck that nearly took his life and an appendectomy just before the season began you certainly may be right — but his poor play isn't the sole reason the Steelers are not the Steelers. But there is a soul reason and it is Bettis' absence. Not only don't the Steelers have the punishing goal line runner that Bettis offered, they also don't have the inspiration he brought to them.

They aren't a team looking for an offense. They are a team looking for a heart.

Cee-Bees waltz past Bishop Walsh

CLAY-BATTELLE 45 BISHOP WALSH 6

BY JUSTIN JACKSON

The Dominion Post

LaVALE, Md. — Ryan Wilson entered this season knowing he'd have a pretty good defense at Clay-Battelle.

About the only thing that's changed through the first five games from pretty good to dominating.

C-B held Bishop Walsh to 94 yards of offense Saturday on its way to an easy 45-6 victory against the Spartans.

"The defense has really been coming along," Wilson said. "We're still young in a few spots, but we're playing much, much better every game."

The ninth-ranked Cee-Bees (5-0) held the Spartans (1-4) to a grand total of minus 4 yards in the first half for a 31-0 lead.

Only after the Cee-Bees took out their starters did the Spartans mount any offense. This defensive performance came a week after the Cee-Bees recorded their first shutout of the season, 28-0 against Oak Glen.

"I think we gave up just 102 yards is, the Cee-Bees' defense has gone last week or something like that," numbers have looked pretty good, but we've still got five tough games to go."

The Cee-Bees' defensive numbers are indeed impressive. Through five games, Clay-Battelle has given up 393 yards rushing (78.6 per game) and 341 yards passing (68.2 per

The Spartans were held to minus 10 yards rushing Saturday, while Bishop Walsh quarterback Zac Hare threw for 104, with 70 coming on one play late in the fourth quarter.

By that time, C-B starters were lying on the sideline with their heads on their helmets, looking more like they were sunbathing than watching a football game.

The Cee-Bees were without lead- we've improved a little bit. We've got Wilson said. "So far, our defensive ing rusher R.J. Beach, who injured his ankle last week. Beach was cleared to play and was dressed. but Wilson decided to hold him out.

> "It was just a precautionary measure," Wilson said. "Had we needed him, he could have played, but we decided to rest him up for next week."

> In his place, Josh Ammons rushed for 97 yards and a TD and caught a 43-yard TD pass from Tyler Barnette. Levi Sanders did return after sitting out last week and added 30 yards rushing and a TD.

> Barnette threw for 103 yards on the day and two scores for the Cee-Bees, who travel to Weirton Madonna next Friday.

"We're pleased to be 5-0 right now," Wilson said. "Each week a tough game next week, so we'll see how good we really are.

Honor quiets WVU's Coach K once again

Salem's Athletic Hall of Fame tabs Kirelawich

BY BOB HERTZEL

The Dominion Post ill Kirelawich was ... well, no, you can't say he was speechless, because the man is never speechless. Shocked is probably more the correct word for his reaction when he learned last week he had been selected for induction into the Salem Athletic Hall of Fame. Quite frankly, for one of the first times in his life, he didn't know what to say.

"That surprised the hell out of me." the longtime West Virginia University defensive line coach said "Believe me I never thought I was a good football player. I just got lucky, I guess.

"I tell my players all the time, number one, I was never an athlete. I was never one of them guys who could do anything. What I was was a guy who could kick anybody's butt." And, apparently, often he did.

"When I was a little kid, I was the kid nobody else could play with," he said, laughing the deep, roaring laugh that comes so easily to him.

But don't go off believing Kirelawich wasn't a good football player when he was captain of the Salem team at linebacker in the late 1960s. Donnie Young, the former WVU assistant who now serves as an advisor in the football office. was the head coach at Salem when Kirelawich "He was a good football player, not gifted with athletic ability, but he had great toughness," Young said. "He played like he coaches. He was very aggressive on the field." One of Young's assistants was a fellow named er, he was one of the smartest players on the field and he was tough," Pastilong recalled. "He didn't back down to anyone. I can still see him before the game, getting his forearms all ready, getting into the Ray Nitschke mood.

Ed Pastilong, who today serves as athletic direc-"He wasn't the fastest guy on the field, Howey-

"When you were giving instructions or a pre-game pep talk, you looked into his eyes and you knew you didn't want to be standing in front of the door when it was time to play. He was ready to hit the

"I coached linebackers here at WVU for a long time," Young said, "and I don't think I've ever been around a tougher player than Bill Kirelawich." He was tough. He was determined. "A coach's dream," Pastilong called him. "To Bill, every Bill Kirelawich "wasn't the fastest guy" on the football field, recalls Donnie Young, now an advisor in WVU's football office. "However, he was one of the smartest players on the field and he was tough."

Steelers' start not so super

Big Ben promises 'a new team' soon

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers didn't need long to figure out that winning the Super Bowl doesn't buy any victories or sympathy a season later.

Three games into a season that certainly hasn't gone like they envisioned, the Steelers (1-2) are in the same position they were in December — trailing the Bengals (and the Ravens, too) by two games in the AFC North. Only there is no promise this time they are about to win every remaining game like they did last season after being 7-5.

"I think you'll see a new team come out of this bye week," Ben Roethlisberger said. They hope to see a different quarterback, for sure.

Roethlisberger, his offseason an adventure at every turn, still looks like he is only a few weeks into training camp — understandable for someone who went through surgery twice in barely two months. His passer rating is the second lowest in the league — normally, he is close to the top — and he has five interceptions and no touchdown passes.

Is it rustiness? The appendicitis? The motorcycle crash? A preseason in which he played only four series? Or he is a young quarterback yet to find his game after one of the best starts — he won 27 of his first 31 games — by any in NFL history? "It's hard to say," he said. "The last time you played a real game was in the Super Bowl and then ...' he didn't play again until a 9-0 loss in Jacksonville on Sept. 18 because of his appendectomy. "But I'm not going to sit here and break down his whole game," Cowher said. "There's a lot more to this than one position.'

That's because Roethlisberger is hardly the only Steelers player or coach — who is slumping.

Hines Ward missed most of training camp with a sore hamstring and has yet to have a big game; he has one TD catch after having four at this point last season. All-Pro safety Troy Polamalu, bothered by a sore shoulder, hasn't been the disruptive force he was a year ago. The secondary gave up four touchdown catches against Cincinnati.

Pryor, Peck duke it out with WVU Dec. 8

Ex-MHS stars team up again, for Duquesne

BY JUSTIN JACKSON

The Dominion Post

There's a calendar that hangs on Keri Pryor's door in her dorm room and it serves as her No. 1 source for motivation as she embarks on her college basketball career at Duquesne University.

"Every morning I wake up and cross off another day," Pryor said. "I have the countdown going to Dec. 8."

Which just happens to be her 19th birthday, but also the day Duquesne's women's basketball team travels to Morgantown to play WVU.

"I'll be 19 and I can't wait," Pryor said. "I'm coming home to Morgantown and get a chance to play against WVU. It's a day I've thought about for a long time."

Just down the hall is Amanda Peck, also in the first stages of her college career. She said she's getting used to college life as well as can be expected.

"It's a big adjustment. I mean, I thought Morgantown was a big city," Peck said with a laugh. "I think I'm doing pretty well so far. It's nice having Keri right down the hall. We both have one-bedroom rooms, but she's usually in my room or I'm in hers.'

The two combined at Morgantown High to help give the Mohigans one of their most successful runs in school history, complete with a state championship in 2005.

They are also the latest in an impressive line of girls' basketball players from West Virginia to compete at the Division I level. That list includes Alexis Hornbuckle (Tennessee) and Renee Montgomery (UConn).

Pryor was the state's Player of the Year last season, averaging 23.4 points, 5.9 rebounds and 4.4 steals. She finished her career at MHS with 1,858 points.

Peck's prep career began at Buckhannon-Upshur, where she racked up impressive stats but didn't have many wins to show for it.

She moved with her family to Morgantown before the start of her junior season and played her final two seasons with the Mohigans. As a senior, she caught on to the faster pace of play the Mohigans use and averaged 14.4 points and 8.1 rebounds.

Now the two are with the Dukes, a program that is rebuilding under Dan Durkin, in his 14th season at jectory down on windy days or to escape from tree trouble, by going under the limbs and back into play. Here's how to hit a punch shot: Take two extra clubs, grip down on the handle, play the ball back in your stance and take a shorter swing. Another important key to hitting a punch shot is to swing easy. Clubhead speed creates backspin and that lifts the ball up into the air. A slow tempo will decrease backspin and keep the For more golf tips and advice, buy "Master Strokes: 401 Proven Lessons for Mastering Every Golf Shot," (Run "BY PHIL FRANKÉ WITH AMERICA'S TOP INSTRUCTORS" America's Discount Golf Store! 63 Don Knotts Blvd. We Have All The Name Brands at Golf USA Across from University Motors • Callaway • Taylormade • Titleist • Cobra (304) 291-GOLF • Cleveland • Tour Edge • Many More Ping Mon. - Sat. 10 am - 7 pm Sun. Padres, Dodgers win, in

BASEBALL

Associated Press

PHOENIX — The Padres are in the postseason for the second year in a row, thanks to David Wells' first victory since he was traded to San Diego a month ago.

The 43-year-old left-hander (1-2), who missed his previous start with gout in his right foot, threw six scoreless innings and Mike Cameron hit a two-run homer to power San Diego past the Arizona Diamondbacks, 3-1, on Saturday.

The Padres' win clinched consecutive playoff appearances for the first time in franchise history.

Whether they advance as N.L. West champions or as the wild card team won't be decided until today's regular-season finales.

The San Diego victory eliminated Philadelphia from postseason contention, while the Padres and Los Angeles remained tied for the N.L. West lead after the Dodgers won at San Francisco, 4-2.

If the two still are even after Sunday's games, the Padres get the division title because they won the season series against Los Angeles.

Dodgers 4, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO - Greg Maddux (15-14) outdueled star rookie Matt Cain, hit a single and even stole a base as Los Angeles won its sixth straight game, beating San Francisco.

The Dodgers' victory ensured them and first-year manager Grady Little at least the wild card — the rest of the N.L. playoff picture was still to be sorted out.

It was fitting that Maddux had much to do with the Dodgers' return to the playoffs. They acquired the 300game winner from the Chicago Cubs at the trading deadline to give them a veteran arm for the stretch run and he won six games for them.

Cardinals 3, Brewers 2

ST. LOUIS — Pinch-hitter Scott Spiezio hit a bases-loaded triple with two outs in the eighth inning and St. Louis Cardinals cut its magic number for clinching the N.L. Central to one, rallying past Milwaukee.

Second-place Houston played at Atlanta on Saturday night. A loss by the Astros would eliminate them.

Other games

- MINNEAPOLIS Jon Garland (18-7) took a shutout into the ninth inning and Tadahito Iguchi had a homer among his three hits and three RBIs, leading the Chicago White Sox past Minnesota, 6-3. That left Detroit needing one win in its last two games, or a loss today by Minnesota, to clinch the AL Central. The Tigers were scheduled to host the Kansas City Royals later Sat-
- \blacksquare NEW YORK Alex Rodriguez and Gary Sheffield hit consecutive home runs in the fourth inning but the New York Yankees lost to Toronto, 6-5. Alex Rios hit a go-ahead, two-run triple against T.J. Beam as Toronto rallied from a 4-1 deficit in a four-run seventh inning.
- SEATTLE Adrian Beltre homered twice and Felix Hernandez (12-14) pitched seven strong innings as Seattle defeated Texas, 3-1.
- MIAMI Philadelphia overcame an early deficit and nursed a one-run lead through the final seven innings to beat Florida, 4-3.

Notes

- The New York Mets will be missing ace Pedro Martinez for more than just the postseason. The Mets right-hander will have rotator cuff surgery next week and be out eight months. The injury is expected to sideline him until at least June.
- Frank Robinson will not return as the Washington Nationals' manager in 2007, the team announced. Washington will end its season with a third consecutive last-place finish. Robinson, 71, has managed the Expos-Nationals franchise for the past five seasons.
- NEW YORK Major League Baseball broke its season attendance record Saturday and was on track to finish with the second-highest per-game average in the sport's history. Through Friday night, the 30 major-league teams had drawn 74,922,200, just shy of the 74,926,174 fans who attended games in 2005, and the record was broken when Minnesota drew 46,219 against the White Sox. The average was 31,348 through Friday.

UHS's Riley wins big cross country meet in Virginia

LEESBURG, Va. — University High's Amber Rilev beat 218 other runners to win the individual race and lead University High's girls to a fifth-place finish Saturday, while the Hawks' boys took ninth at the huge Oatlands Invitational.

The meet — 35 teams and 239 finishers in the "A" varsity boys' race and 32 teams and 219 runners in the girls' — is the largest invitational in which UHS has ever competed.

Riley ran the 5-kilometer (3.1mile) course in 19 minutes, 30 seconds. Freshman teammate Lydia Martinelli was just 20 seconds behind but wound up 18th. If she had run in the freshman-only race, Martinelli would have won.

Jennifer van der Sloot took 75th place, Sarah Martinelli 78th, Lindsay Wyatt 86th, Jennifer Sirockman 87th and Hannah Vernon was 121st for UHS.

Eric Frohnapfel was the top finisher for the UHS boys, placing 25th, in 17:10. Chris Cole came in 29th, Julian Bergstein 81st, Adam Frohnapfel 87th, Matt Schiffbauer 123rd, Sam Spanovich 159th and Ethan Elliott 163rd.

■ RICHMOND, Va. — The Morgantown High girls' cross country team finished fifth out of 18 teams at the prestigious McDonald's Cross Country Festival.

Eleanor Roosevelt (Greenbelt, Md.), the No. 1 team in the Southeast, won the meet.

Monica Chase finished ninth to lead MHS. Chase's time was 19:12.92. Allison Pettit was 10th (19:13.12), Emma Berry 39th (20:38.53), Ahna Lewis 41st (20:41.86) and Aubrey Moskal 46th (20:51.85).

The MHS boys finished fifth out of 36 teams in the Copper Division with Matt Long taking seventh (17:33.25). Andrew Malauskas (18:35.78) was 37th, Scott Berkow (18:38.03) was 38th, Kyle Boyce (18:52.53) was 52nd and Kari Selin (18>52.76) was 53rd.

Boys' soccer

■ Diego Duran scored on an assist from fellow Colombian exchange student Juan Huertas to push Morgantown High ahead for good, and Wes Shumway scored twice to keep the Mohigans (6-4-2) in front in a 4-2 victory against Parkersburg South, during MHS Senior Night. Huertas assisted on Shumway's second goal, and Josh Dye scored with an assist to Rhett Reidpath. MHS goalie Zach Muniz made five saves.

■ BECKLEY — Derek Meluzio scored two goals to lead Trinity past Shady Spring, 4-0. Philip Swart and Landon Talton also scored goals for the Warriors (9-2) and David Lacko recorded six saves in goal.

Freshman football

ELKINS — Morgantown High outscored Elkins, 42-28. The Mohigans were led by Anthony Vecchio, who rushed for 146 yards and two scores. Jeff Allen ran for 103 yards and scored twice, while Andrew Bradford carried for 96 yards and two touchdowns.

College volleyball

VILLANOVA, Pa. - WVU volleyball team battled back from a two-game deficit to tie the match before falling to Villanova, 3-2 (30-15, 30-17, 25-30, 27-30, 15-11).

Abby Tevis led the Mountaineers (1-16, 0-3 Big East) with 17 kills. Setter Kailee Goold totaled 41 assists, three short of her personal best this season. Libero Aurora Ebert-Santos led WVU's defense with 22 digs.

WVU plays Rutgers today.

Canadiens acquire Niinimaa

Associated Press

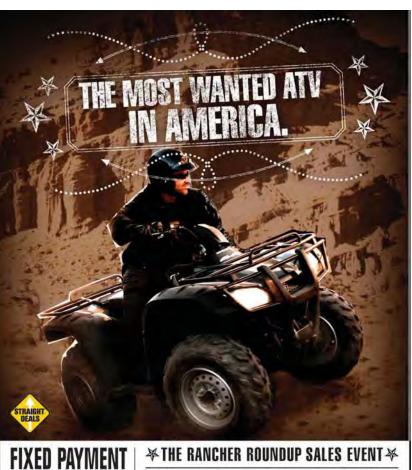

MONTREAL — The Montreal Canadiens acquired defenseman Janne Niinimaa from Dallas on Saturday in a trade that sent center Mike Ribeiro to the Stars.

Niinimaa shores up a Canadiens defense that has lost Francis Bouillon and Jean-Philippe Cote to injury. The 31-year-old Finn has 54 goals and 262 assists in 700 career regular-season games with Philadelphia, Edmonton, the New York Islanders and Dallas.

"In judging by our team needs, what we really need and where we are vulnerable, it responds with an experienced player," Canadiens GM Bob Gainey said. "He can be a good, strong participant in that group and he can give us some added experience and added weight to our defense, as well as depth.'

Ribeiro had 50 goals and 103 assists in 276 games for Montreal. Gainey informed the Montreal native of the trade before Saturday night's preseason game.

practice was a game. He loved it. He was fun to coach."

"I was one of the few guys who played football because I enjoyed playing," Kirelawich explained. "I went there without a scholarship. I got one, which was nice, but had I not gotten one I wouldn't have been any different. I wanted to play football.'

Certainly, he had that one unforgettable moment at Salem. What

"Graduation," he answered. Pushed for a moment to come up with one on the football field, he stopped to think.

"I don't know. You're talking a long time ago," he said. "I intercepted a pass and returned it 89 yards for a touchdown, but I don't know if that's a high moment."

Thursday.

Part of the reason he was able to succeed and was "a coach's dream" was that he was also one of the more intelligent players anyone had run across.

Kirelawich likes to play down his intelligence, perhaps because the image of a defensive line coach isn't exactly built on anything but blood and guts. The salty language he uses may be one way he hides it from outsiders, but he is a man of many interests.

In truth, he's as likely to curl up at home with a real book as he is with his playbook.

After graduating, Kirelawich went back to Pennsylvania and taught high school for a while before joining his old buddies Pastilong and Young on Frank Cignetti's staff, which is where he was when Don Nehlen came to WVU.

"My first recollection of Kirelawich was after I came in for the winter program of 1980," Nehlen said. "I hired Lloyd Carr. Then I hired Bobby Sutton, who was going to coach the defensive line, but he only lasted three or four weeks.

"Kirelawich was a graduate assistant or volunteer coach for Frank Cignetti. Most of the G.A.'s were scared to death of me. But he was so enthusiastic he didn't know when I walked up to him. I said to myself, 'There's a football coach' and I hired him full time."

It may have been Nehlen's best hire, for Kirelawich not only was a loyal, successful defensive line coach but he also became a spectacular recruiter in Pennsylvania, bringing in such players as the Parker twins, Bo Orlando, Tommy Robsock, A.J. Nastasi and, even today, was responsible for Steve

LSU clobbers next Mountaineers foe

Mississippi State trails 35-0 at halftime

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

BATON ROUGE, La. — JaMarcus Russell threw for a career-best 330 vards and matched a school record with 14 consecutive completions Saturday as No. 9 LSU beat Mississippi State, 48-17, on Saturday.

Russell threw three touchdown passes and completed 18 of 20 passes without an interception against the team West Virginia plays next Saturday, in Starkville, Miss.

LSU (4-1, 1-1 SEC) led 35-0 early in the second quarter, prompting thousands of fans to leave at halftime. A 52-minute delay while a thunderstorm rolled through further emptied the stands in the third quarter, when the score was 35-3.

Mississippi State (1-4, 0-3) gained 24 yards and managed one first down on its first five possessions. LSU's first five series ended with touchdowns.

Two early scores were set up by long passes over the middle from Russell to Dwayne Bowe. The first went between three defenders for 25 yards, setting up a short touchdown toss to Craig Davis. Bowe's 41-yard reception to the Bulldogs' 6 led to Charles Scott's TD run for a 14-0 lead.

On his third series, Russell found Early Doucet on a 37-yard scoring

The 6-foot-6, nearly 260-pound quarterback wasn't finished. Shedding tacklers as the pocket collapsed, Russell rolled out and threw a 55-yard pass that tight end Richard Dickson caught over his shoulder as he was tackled at the Bulldogs 2.

The play made Russell 7-of-8 for 202 yards and two touchdowns through the first quarter.

(5) Florida 28, Alabama 13

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Ryan Smith had two interceptions, Reggie Nelson returned another pick for a touchdown and Florida (5-0, 3-0 SEC) beat Alabama (3-2, 1-2) to avenge last season's embarrassing loss.

(12) Notre Dame 35, Purdue 21

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Brady Quinn threw for 316 yards and two touchdowns and Darius Walker ran for 146 yards as Notre Dame (4-1) played its best offensive game of the season and beat Purdue (4-1).

(14) Oregon 48, Ariz. State 13

TEMPE, Ariz. — Oregon (4-0, 2-0 Pac-10) used a balanced attack and a relentless defense to crush Arizona State (3-2, 0-2).

Dennis Dixon threw for 215 yards and three touchdowns, Jonathan Stewart ran for 142 yards and Jaison Williams caught 10 passes for 137 yards and two touchdowns. The Ducks registered six sacks and lim(15) Tennessee 41, Memphis 7

SALT LAKE CITY — Jared Zabransky passed for 210 yards and a touchdown and ran for a score and Boise State (5-0) turned what was expected to be the Broncos' toughest test this season into a blowout, handing Utah (3-2) its worst home loss in 17 years.

(24) Georgia Tech 38 (11) Virginia Tech 27

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Reggie Ball and Georgia Tech (4-1, 2-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) made their second consecutive visit to Virginia Tech (4-1, 2-1) a huge success, jumping out to a big lead and avenging last year's 51-7 loss to the Hokies.

Ball finished 9-for-16 for 176 yards with two interceptions. He also ran for 34 yards, and Calvin Johnson caught six for 115 yards.

(25) Missouri 28, Colorado 13

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Chase Daniel threw four touchdown passes to lead Missouri (5-0, 1-0 Big 12) past Colorado, giving the Tigers their first 5-0 start since 1981. The Buffaloes (0-5, 0-1 Big 12), meanwhile, have lost nine straight.

Big East Pittsburgh 45, Toledo 3

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh (4-1) needed less than five minutes to turn a pair of pivotal mistakes by Toledo (2-3) into a two-touchdown lead in the first quarter, and Tyler Palko threw for two scores that led the Panthers to victory.

Palko threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Derek Kinder shortly after Toledo couldn't convert on fourthand-1 from its own 42. One play later, defensive lineman Gus Mustakas returned an interception 9 yards to make it 14-0.

Syracuse 40, Wyoming 34

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Delone Carter rushed for 129 yards on 20 carries and scored the first four touchdowns of his college career, the final one coming on a 15-yard run in the second overtime, and Syracuse beat Wyoming for its third straight triumph. Syracuse registered six sacks to boost its season total to 25.

Navy 41, UConn 17

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. — Navy quarterback Brian Hampton ran for 182 yards and three touchdowns and threw for 141 yards and another score as the Midshipmen (4-1) routed Connecticut (2-2).

Navy racked up 605 yards with its triple-option offense, including 464 on the ground, against what had been the nation's 10th-ranked

Cincy 24, Miami (Ohio) 10

CINCINNATI - Greg Moore rushed for 119 yards and a touchdown to lead Cincinnati (2-3) past Miami (0-5). The Bearcats ended a three-game losing streak in running their record to 45-59-7 in the series, the oldest rivalry west of the Alleghenies.

Friday's game (23) Rutgers 22, USF 20

TAMPA, Fla. — Ray Rice ran for 202 yards and two touchdowns, leading Rutgers (5-0, 1-0 Big East) past South Florida (3-2, 0-1) in the Scarlet Knights' first game as a ranked team in 30 years. Jeremy Ito kicked field goals of 32, 40 and 53 yards for Rutgers.

WVIAC

Shepherd 20, Fairmont 0

SHEPHERDSTOWN — Dervon Wallace scored on a 5-yard run and John Sheehan caught a 20-yard touchdown pass from Tyler Lazear to lead Shepherd (5-0, 2-0) past Fairmont State (1-4, 1-2).

W. Liberty21, Duquesne 19

PITTSBURGH — Jay Gullion threw three touchdowns and Darren Banks intercepted three passes to lead West Liberty (3-2) past Duquesne

Charleston 42, State 29

CHARLESTON — Cory Isner threw two touchdown passes and Mike Williams returned an interception 41 yards for a score to lead the University of Charleston (3-3, 2-1) by West Virginia State (1-4, 0-3).

Concord 10, Wesleyan 7

BUCKHANNON — Zach Boyd kicked a 30-yard field goal in overtime to lift Concord (3-2, 3-0) past West Virginia Wesleyan (2-3, 1-2).

Glenville 21, Ky. Wesleyan 13

OWENSBORO, Ky. — Da Mon Lindsay scored three touchdowns to lead Glenville State (2-3) past Kentucky Wesleyan (0-6).

Another eagle boosts Tiger's AmEx lead to 6 shots

GOLF

CHANDLER'S CROSS, England Tiger Woods was exasperated after missing a half-dozen birdie putts inside 12 feet, each one costing him a chance to pull away in the American Express Championship.

One putt changed everything. Woods holed a 35-foot putt on the par-5 18th to make eagle for the third straight day, turning a decent round into a good one at 4-under 67 and building a six-shot lead Saturday going into the final round.

He was at 19-under 194 and had a comfortable lead on Adam Scott (65).

It was his lowest 54-hole score since he was at 18-under 192 at Firestone in the 2000 NEC Invitational, where he led by nine shots after three rounds and went on to win by 11. And the six-shot lead was his largest since Woods led by the same margin at the 2003 Western Open.

Woods is 37-3 on the PGA Tour (43-5 worldwide) when he has a 54-hole lead, one of the most intimidating marks in golf. He has never given up a final-round lead when leading by more than one shot, so that doesn't bode well for the rest of the field.

Southern Farm Bureau

MADISON, Miss. — D.J. Trahan

shook off a double bogey to maintain a two-stroke lead, birdieing the final two holes for a 1-under 71 on the Annandale Golf Club course.

Trahan, who has led after all three rounds, had a 12-under 204 total after opening with rounds of 65 and 68. Two-time U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen (67) was second, and Daniel Chopra (68) and Brad Faxon (72) followed at 9 under.

CONOVER, N.C. — Andy Bean remained in position for his first Champions Tour victory, shooting a 2-under 70 to take a two-stroke lead into the final round.

No need for Beilein to teach from scratch again

SINCE IT WAS JOHN BEILEIN Who authored the tantalizing turnaround within WVU's men's basketball program the past four years, he needn't be reminded things won't be the same again this season.

In fact, Beilein admits the approaching 2007 season is more likely to resemble 2003 than 2006.

Of course, that tends to be the case when a coach graduates five seniors and four starters from a team that rose from Division I laughingstock to having the last laugh with back-to-back Elite Eight and Sweet 16 appearances.

"In some ways, yes it will be that way, but I wouldn't say it's a duplicate situation," Beilein said last week. "That was really starting from, not ground level, but below the ground. Now, we think we have a strong foundation.

MICHAEL CASAZZA

There was some major rebuilding going on then, but I think if these preseason workouts are any indication, things look good for the future, the more immediate future. Who knows what the longrange possibilities are?"

No, what Beilein is maneuvering through during these early get-togethers with his team can in no way feel like what he experienced four years ago. There is less uncertainty, greater optimism, fewer doubters and more people ready to climb aboard a bandwagon vou sense might be chugging along by Christmas.

Still, the argument could be made that while the Mountaineers will have one starter, three or four regulars and five total players back, the team really has no one back in a familiar role.

Frank Young, the most seasoned of the players, will be a senior, a two-year starter, but he's never been asked to carry the responsibilities he might have to shoulder this season in scoring and leading.

Darris Nichols, the junior point guard, has started but two games his entire career and scored in double-figures just twice.

Rob Summers, a second senior and one with experience not only at WVU but also as a starter at Penn State, was sometimes forgotten in Kevin Pittsnogle's wake last year, though he made strides and finished as strong as a string of cameo appearances could allow.

Sophomores Alex Ruoff and Joe Alexander will be in new roles this season, ones with increased demands for effort and effective-

Now throw in the eight newcomers — seven freshmen and transfer Jamie Smalligan — and vou get an idea that everything is new inside the Coliseum.

"Many of us are re-reading the first chapter," Beilein said. "The freshmen are reading it for the first time and we're making sure they don't get rushed through it. But some of our veteran players are experiencing a more detailed version of it this time.'

The learning, you see, was so advanced with an established team the previous two years that Beilein could go over things once or twice, trust his most trusted players got it, and then move on. He'd told Johannes Herber and Jarmon Durisseau-Collins these things hundreds of times before. The lessons didn't need to be repeated in great detail again.

This batch doesn't get it quite as easily, not yet at least. So Beilein is much more intricate, more involved in his teachings. It's what the coach loves, what the Mountaineers need.

The recent success has allowed Beilein to recruit from a more attractive pool — and it would appear he's made a splash. Sufficiently satisfied with the players he brought to town, he's confident in his ability to teach them what they need to be taught. The holdovers will add to their knowledge and develop their depend-

In time, they will become their own players, which will be vital because this is, after all, a new team in a new season beginning what Beilein hopes is a familiar journey.

"We have to let go of what's gone on," he said. "We can still hang on to some things, but we have to let go of it on our minds. It's not going to help us next year. But they do know that hard work could pay off and that it will pay off in some way, shape or form as it has before for us.

UHS girls rebound, dash Dons

Win follows shutout loss

UNIVERSITY 6, MADONNA 0

BY MARK SCHRAF

The Dominion Post

The Hawks needed a game like this.

A tough, 2-0 loss Thursday to top-ranked Fairmont Senior on the road left the University High girls' soccer team "a little beat up, physically and emotionally," according to coach Ray Petrisin.

So it was a fortunate turn that the schedule makers matched UHS with an overmatched Madonna High team Saturday. The result, an easy 6-0 drubbing of the Blue Dons, came at just the right time.

"Sometimes, after an emotional loss or an especially physical game, it's great to have a little bit of a breather game," Petrisin said. "You get a chance to try some things, play the whole team, build your confidence back up.'

The Hawks started early, Emily Sphar scoring off an Alex Cranston assist in the second minute. Ten minutes later, Kylie Sphar settled a long pass into the box from her sister Emily and roofed a shot to put UHS up by two.

The Hawks added to their lead just two minutes later, when freshman Kara Seamon pounced on a loose ball after an Isabelle Zdatny shot and scored on the rebound. The prettiest goal of the game came in the 29th minute on a nice pass across the crease from Cranston to a wide-open Kylie Sphar, who one-touched the shot into the right corner to extend the lead to 4-0.

A pair of second-half goals off Emily Sphar corner kick assists, one by Seamon, the other by Cranston, closed out the scoring for the Hawks (8-5-1).

UHS finished with an overwhelming 30-1 shot advantage. Madonna keeper Tara Paoloemilio made 11 saves. Afterward, Petrisin was sure his team knew the difference between teams like Madonna and Fairmont Senior.

University High's Kylie Sphar (right) goes toe-to-toe with Madonna's Jennifer Nicka. Sphar scored two goals in the Hawks' victory Saturday.

"Pressure," he said. "It's all about pressure on the ball, and how you handle that pressure. We stress composure with the ball constantly, but it's easier said than done. When you have space like we did today, you can take chances offensively and creatively that you just don't get against close-marking teams.

"We're learning from the good teams," Petrisin continued. "We play them, then we ask the girls why they're so good. We're hanging around, staying close against ranked teams, and that's the first step. We just have to figure out a way to win those close matches.'

MHS's Bowers sees blocked conversion try as key point

PREP NOTEBOOK

BY JUSTIN JACKSON

The Dominion Pos

Today's world of football can be a tricky thing.

The linemen weigh 300 pounds or more, while tailbacks look more like professional body builders. A lot of quarterbacks are in the 6foot-4 frame and the best of linebackers are 240 pounds-plus and run like the tailbacks.

And sometimes a game is decided by a 165-pound kicker.

Of all the plays that upset Morgantown High football coach John Bowers in the Mohigans' 28-26 loss to Wheeling Park on Friday, the blocked extra point attempt in the third quarter may have been the most frustrating.

"It's a simple play. You snap it, block and kick the ball," Bowers said. "We didn't block anybody and the kick was blocked. We didn't execute and our kicker really didn't have a chance."

The extra point would have tied the game at 14; instead, later in the game MHS either had to score twice to take the lead or execute on a two-point conversion.

The Patriots came right back to take a 21-13 lead, which was followed by Levi Johnson's 16-yard TD run to make the score, 21-19.

"We had to go for two and the conversion rate isn't really in your favor," Bowers said. "Missing that extra point really had an impact on the game, and like I said, we simply didn't block on that play."

The two-point conversion pass failed and then Wheeling Park scored another touchdown.

"Once they had a nine-point lead, we really had to scrap the running game," Bowers said. "We would have liked to keep pounding the ball with Levi, but we couldn't do it, because the clock wasn't on

The power of the press

Grafton tailback Corey Westerman said he picked up some extra motivation Friday morning for the Bearcats' game against rival Lin-

Westerman and teammate Jarod Shaw read The Dominion Post's Fab Four predictions and saw three of the four writers predicted Lincoln to win.

Grafton won easily, 20-0.

"Me and my fullback [Shaw] were reading the predictions and when we saw that three out of four writers picked us to lose, it sort of fired us up for the game," Westerman said.

The 20-point victory was much needed for Grafton coach Mike Skinner, who saw his Bearcats play in three close games before this week. Two of the three were victories decided by a total of four points, while Grafton also lost a game by one point.

"Glad this one didn't go down to the wire for a change," Skinner said. "I still have plenty of hair on my head, but more of them are turning the wrong color with every close game we play."

Keep it running

Clay-Battelle's venture into Maryland on Saturday to play Bishop Walsh brought an interesting rule change.

In Maryland, when one team leads by 35 points or more, the clock runs continuously.

"I've been on both sides of that," C-B coach Ryan Wilson said. "I've been in some games down by 35 or so and all I wanted to do was get out of there as soon as possible.'

C-B won, 45-6, and the clock kept running after Levi Sanders scored on a 1-yard run with 5:02 left in the third quarter to make the score 38-0.

Wilson said he likes the rule. "I'm all in favor of it. The only thing about keeping it going is one team is probably going to miss out on gaining a few more yards, but that's neither here nor there with

McCoy at it again

DELBARTON (AP) — Paul McCoy ran for 658 yards in a high school football game and, believe it or not, may not have set a national record with his feat.

The total tops the National Federation of State High School Association's listed record of 619 yards, set by Ronney Jenkins, of Oxnard, Calif., in 1995.

But high school records historian Doug Huff said Saturday the recognized record is 739 yards, by John Giannantonio, of Netcong, N.J., in 1950, against Mountain McCoy piled up his yardage on just 29 carries — an average of 22.7 yards per attempt — and scored 10 touchdowns as Matewan beat Burch, 64-0, on Friday.

McCoy did set a state record with his 658 yards, and his 10 TDs would tie him with two others for the second most nationally. The record is 12, set by Ken Pearson, of Hugo, Colo., in 1930.

McCoy, averaging 345 yards per game, has 1,723 yards and 26 touchdowns this season.

GEORGE WASHINGTON 1 MORGANTOWN HIGH 0

The Dominion Post

It was bound to happen.

An undefeated season in any sport occurs about as often as President Bush attends a Democratic fundraiser, so it isn't surprising that the Morgantown High girls' soccer team finally lost Saturday, 1-0, to George Washington, at Pony Lewis Field.

It also isn't surprising that the Mohigans were shut out — they have been struggling to score against quality opponents.

But don't think for a second coach Mike Kelleher is ready to panic.

"All we really need is a little bit of luck," Kelleher said. "It's not like things are broken and can't be fixed. Against East Fairmont Thursday night, we took 36 shots and still tied, 0-0. So we're generating chances, but we're just not finishing."

MHS (5-1-6) had the better of the play and possession early in Saturday's match, but G.W. (8-4-4) absorbed the pressure and forced most shots to be taken from the perimeter. The Patriots were content with playing long balls to counter-attack, although the Mohigans' defense remained solid and organized.

The match changed suddenly in the 30th minute, when G.W. freshman Jasmine Soo collected a ball in the midfield, beat two defenders on the dribble and drilled a hard, swerving shot from 30 yards. MHS keeper Kat-

The majority of the second half was a midfield slogfest, as neither team could penetrate the defensive wall. G.W. managed one shot; MHS went without one for 20 minutes.

The Mohigans' best chance to score came after a G.W. defender passed the ball back to the keeper, who picked it up at the corner of the 6-yard box. The resulting indirect kick from the goalmouth was blocked by the defense, and MHS couldn't mount any serious threats the rest of the way.

Kelleher had a message for his team after the match.

"I told them that losing is a part of sports," he said. "It's all about how you respond to the loss. We've

King salmon running strong in Niagara River

BY JEFF KNAPP

For The Dominion Post Outdoors

Outstanding king salmon fishing is available within an easy drive of our area. The lower Niagara River, near Lewiston, N.Y., is boasting one of its strongest fall salmon runs in

According to Capt. Frank Campbell, one of western New York's most skilled and experienced multispecies guides, the current king salmon run on the Niagara is the best in 15 years

Not only has the run been strong but it also has started early. Cooler-thannormal water temperatures in eastern Lake Erie are the likely reason.

This past week I had the pleasure of experiencing the Lower Niagara's excellent king salmon action. I shared the boat with Bob Funk, of Mustad Hooks, and Ken Shultz, fishing columnist for ESPN Outdoors. During a session that lasted about seven hours, we hooked up with more than 20 salmon, landing about two-thirds of them.

Vacating the food-rich waters of Lake Ontario, each fall king salmon enter the Niagara during their spawning run. The area known as Devils Hole is a traditional hot spot. Devils Hole is located upriver of power generating plants on both the American and Canadian sides of the river. It lies just downriver of a series of rapids. The deep, relatively calm pool creates an ideal resting place for migrating salmon.

It is typical for salmon anglers to fish both the U.S. and Canadian sides of the river. The Canadian "drift" tends to be best early in the morning, as the current picks up during the day. The run on the American side is longer and slower.

The most common tactic is to present either natural bait or artificials while the boat drifts with the current. During my stay, the most productive bait was salmon egg skein. In regard to artificial lures, the Kwikfish, a banana-shaped bait, often gets the nod.

Depths in Devils Hole range from 10 to 30 feet. The key to success is to keep your bait on or very near the bottom while maintaining a vertical position in regard to the boat.

Baits are presented via a threeway rig. A pencil-shaped sinker is tied to a foot-long dropper off one eyelet of a three-way swivel. Weights we used ranged from 1 1/4 to 2 1/2 ounces, depending on the speed of the current. During my recent outing, we attached Mustad 92568 BLN snelled bait hooks to the swivel with a 4- to 6-foot 15-pound test fluorocarbon

The egg skein was attached to the hook by creating a loop in the leader by forcing it back through the eye of the hook. A chunk of egg skein was inserted in the loop. Tightening the loop pegged the eggs against the hook shank.

Baitcasting gear is ideal for fishing in a vertical manner directly under the boat. We used 7-foot medium/heavy action Shakespeare casting reels coupled with round Shakespeare level-wind casting reels spooled with 15-pound test fluorocarbon line.

The thumb bar on the reel made it a simple task to free-spool additional line when the depth increased.

Campbell said the salmon run typically stays strong until about the third week in October. Steelhead (lake-run rainbows) show up in the river about the time the kings begin dropping eggs. Brown and lake trout add to the lower Niagara fishery as fall gives way to winter. Trout fishing is a viable option throughout the winter into spring.

Shore fishing opportunities are available at the fishing platform located at the New York Power Authority's facility. Devils Hole is no place for boaters unfamiliar with the area. Wild currents and whirlpools lurk at the discharges of the power plants. Anglers new to the area should employ the services of one of the area's experienced guides, experts that have the experience and watercraft necessary to safely fish the area.

Licenses

The Niagara River is an international border water. When fishing the river from a boat, it's wise to have both a New York and Ontario license, as you will likely be fishing waters located in both. Additional information on licenses can be found on the New York Department of Environmental Conservation and Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources Web sites, dec.state.ny.us and mnr.gov.on.ca respectively.

Bait stores, additional guide services and current fishing information can be obtained at niagara-usa.com. You can order a regional fishing hot guide from this site. Local bait shops carry quality bait such as salmon egg skein. Good bait is a vital component to successful fishing in this area.

GO FISH!

West Virginia DNR

Cheat Lake

Yellow perch are being caught by boat anglers around the I-68 bridge using minnows or worms with a couple of split shot fished 10 to 15 feet on the bottom. Bank anglers will have the best luck for largemouth bass and sunfish in the backwaters at the Cheat Lake Park. The rock riprap on the lake side of the park is also a good spot for bass and sunfish. Target smallmouth bass by boat in the upper end of the lake above Mt. Chateau. Try surface plugs and buzzbaits in the backwaters after dark for night fishing excitement. Channel catfish are abundant throughout the lake. Try the tailwater fishing pier for walleye, sauger, and many other species. Minnows are the best bait now. Start fishing at dark. The pier is about 25 minutes from Morgantown. Take U.S. 119 to Point Marion, Pa. Turn right after crossing the Cheat River and proceed 4 miles to Cheat Dam. The pier is lighted for night fishing and is handicapped accessible.

Monongahela River

Water temperature is around 65 degrees. River flows are low but normal. Fish will be attracted to the moving water at the tailwaters of all the locks, and the warm water discharges at the Rivesville, Morgantown and Fort Martin power plants. Sauger and walleye are most active from dusk to dawn. Channel catfish can be caught in the tailwaters using chicken liver. Minnows, 3-inch plastic grubs, and crankbaits are still the most productive baits for most other species. The shoreline from the Morgantown lock to the mouth of Deckers Creek is always a good place to fish from the shore. There are lots of bass, sauger and drum along the shoreline. The opposite shoreline is good for larger sunfish. Bass anglers should try the weed beds from Morgantown to the state line using weedless surface plugs.

Tygart Lake

The lake is 20 feet below the summer pool level and falling slowly. Bass will be feeding along the shoreline as the water level drops. Tube jigs have been good baits for bass all summer. White bass feed on the surface at dawn and dusk and can be caught with spinners or shallow-running crankbaits. Walleye move into shallower water after dark to feed. A second stocking of brood trout occurred last month. The tailwater temperature is 70 degrees, which makes it the best area water for trout fishing right now. There are still lots of walleye in the tailwater. Walleye fishing is best during higher flows (1,500 to 5,000 cubic feet per second) and trout fishing is best at low flows (less than 1,000 cfs). Daily lake and tailwater conditions: 265-5953

Stonewall Jackson

The lake is 2 feet below summer pool and clear. Fishing is good. Lake surface temperature is 72. Bass are in 10 to 15 feet of water. Panfish are active and are hanging around cover. A few crappie have been caught but fish have been hard to locate. Try a minnow and jig. Catfish are being caught in the evening with worms and liver. Trout still remain in the tailwaters, try powerbait and worms. Yellow perch and crappie are being caught on live bait. Info: 269-7463.

Pricey guns and fun

MILNE

THIS PAST WEEKEND, I was invited by a friend from Virginia to shoot with him at the Vintage Cup and World Side-By-Side Championships, in Millbrook, N.Y.

It was held at Orvis' Sandanona Shooting Grounds. I was told this is the oldest gun club in America.

This was the 10th annual event and is sponsored by the Order of Edwardian Gunners Inc. This is a nonprofit corporation that was formed in 1994 by four friends who loved both side-by-side shotguns and the game of sporting clays. They recognized that the emphasis on scores at sporting clays events discouraged the use of fine game guns at these events.

In response, they set up shoots for classic guns with emphasis on fun targets, vintage attire, fine dining and good fellowship.

This group had too much fun to really care about scores. They do keep score, but it's not important to them. Their events put more emphasis on the social side than the shooting ability of the participants. Membership is open to anyone who shares their enthusiasm for the old double gun.

A little over half of the men I saw wore vintage-style clothing that included knickers, kilts, shirt and tie, vests, jackets and sports caps. Many of the women also wore outfits from the turn of the century.

This being the 10th anniversary, represented by tin, all of the trophies were made of pewter, since tin is the main metal in pewter. It's also the Chinese Year of the Dog, and so the program was dedicated to fine hunting dogs. Several breeders of gun dogs were there. Over the past few years that I have been shooting sporting clays, I've seen some expensive guns, but nothing like what was on display here. There was one matched set of new guns in 12, 20, 28, and 410 gauges that carried a price tag of $600,000!! That's a mere $150,000 per gun.

That's not bad compared to the Poli I saw for $192,950 or the matched pair of Rizzini's in 20 gauge they wanted $350,000 for. There was tent after tent just jammed full of guns, knives, clothing and dogs. The total value of the guns on display had to total around $15 million. No kidding!! A cheap gun ran around $5,000 and there weren't many of them. There were plenty in the $50,000-90,000 range. And, I didn't come home with any more guns.

This Poli (left) had a price tag of $192,950, while the asking price for the Holland & Hollands was $229.950.

Not only were there many events that you could enter covering all of the gauges of shotguns you could imagine and in both hammer and hammerless, but there was also competition for the old double rifles like they use to hunt large game in Africa. These rifles were in both black powder and regular ammunition that had to be 40 caliber or larger.

The events I shot in were the 20 gauge hammer and hammerless, 28 gauge hammer, 16 gauge hammer, 12 gauge hammerless, 12 gauge American classic, which had to be shot with an American-made gun around the turn of the century, and the main event that was 12 gauge in either hammer or hammerless. Since the only gun I own in this class is a Francotte made in Belgium, I had to borrow guns for the other events from my friend. I didn't think I was shooting very well, but a guy shooting with us said I was doing just fine and that there were a whole lot of people shooting a lot worse than I was.

Well, he was right. When they posted the scores, I was in the top 10 to 25 percent of every event except the 28 gauge hammer gun. I don't think I could have committed suicide with a box of shells with that thing.

I guess that's not bad for shooting borrowed guns I'd never had my hands on before. The 16 gauge and the 20 gauge hammerless didn't even come close to fitting me and my cheek is still tender from the kick. Remember, a gun that hurts you doesn't fit.

After shooting on Friday, a guy invited us over for an English beer. I met a man dressed in vintage attire and he said he was a physician from North Carolina. He asked where I was from and told him Bruceton Mills, West Virginia.

He smiled and asked if I had known George Bird Evans. When I told him Evans was my neighbor, he smiled and said he'd been on my farm when George kept his call-back pen for quail across from my house. He had owned a couple of George's Old Hemlock setters. It's a small world.

Two new calls could help bag a deer this fall

EVERY YEAR THE INNOVATIVE hunting industry comes out with new products for hunters. Most are just spin-offs of something old that the industry repackaged with more glamour.

However, there are two new deer calls out that I think have great potential for increasing your hunting success and enjoyment. Both may bring in mature bucks, and with the extra push on improving the number of mature bucks out there, especially in Pennsylvania, these calls can really be used to your advantage.

The first call is the "gruntsnort-wheeze." I believe this call is one of the hottest things in deer hunting this year. The gruntsnort-wheeze call is given in very aggressive situations when one buck encounters another, when a hot doe is nearby.

This is a great call to use when you see a mature buck or when you think one is in the area. I also use it during the chase phase of the rut, to blind call occasionally from my tree stand. Why not? You have nothing to lose. Last year I even was able to bring in a decent Illinois 8-pointer that was chasing a hot doe.

Mad Game Calls makes a grunt-snort-wheeze call, but you can easily do this call with your mouth. In fact I'd rather just use my mouth because it is easier and quicker than pulling out a call.

Simply place your top front teeth on the inside of your lower lip and loudly blow out three quick and short times. "Phhht. phhht, phhht." Then finish with one loud and long, extended "phhhhhhhhhhhhhhht" call, blowing through your upper front teeth. It won't scare deer (few attempted deer calls do) and it can work.

The second call is new this year. Actually, I don't think there is anything new about this call. I think it is just an extended, louder, more emotional version of the tending grunt call, but the folks at Mad Game Calls are really on to something with this call.

They have just come out with the Buck "growl" call, and I think the whole concept is fantastic. I can't make this call with my mouth so will be using the Mad

DR. DAVE SAMUEL

Game Call.

Prior to this summer, I'd never heard about this call. Growing up in Pennsylvania before the days of antler restrictions and living in West Virginia, I haven't been exposed to many mature bucks. And it is the mature bucks that give and respond to this call.

After looking at the promotional video put out by Mad Game Calls, I'm convinced this really works on bucks.

Use this call in late October and early November, when bucks are chasing does. This call is given by bucks exhibiting a high level of emotion in the rut. A hot doe is always involved, and it is also given when another buck comes into a buck chasing a hot doe.

You start by giving the short, normal tending grunt call. Grunt rather quietly several times, then, using the same grunt growler tube. you make the grunt call longer and much louder, which gives the "growl" or "bawl." Use this call to bring in bucks to what they think is a buck chasing a hot doe.

One video scene shows a buck harassing a doe and the buck gives this call repeatedly, especially when other bucks start coming into the area.

You can also use this call while rattling.

This thing works and I will definitely be using it the first week of November on my Illinois bowhunt and in Ohio as well. Hunters are now seeing better bucks in our West Virginia region, so there may be opportunities to use it here.

Just when you thought you had seen it all, or knew it all, something new comes along.

In this case, I believe it works.

Plan reignites burning issues

City's proposal for station points to need for developing fee formula

Morgantown City Council rekindled some old debates last week.

The dispute was sparked by a plan before the council to build and finance the Morgantown Fire Department's new station in the city's north side.

Although it appears that council is on the same page about paying for construction of the station and the equipment it will house, more firefighters are still optional nearly 40 years later, or in this case, arguable.

Earlier this year, the Monongalia County Commission and WVU each donated adjoining tracts of land to the city to build the fire station.

On Tuesday the city began hashing out the details — the time and money — mostly the money, which will be derived by hiking the city's fire fee.

And there again is another deep-seated argument that starts smoking periodically: Implementing an increase in the city's fire service fee.

We unequivocally believe the city needs to hire more firefighers and unequivocally needs to increase the fire service fee. The debate's over.

How many firefighters and how much the fee is raised need to be determined, of course. But that should easily be resolved by City Council directing the city manager to consult fire officials on an agreement

All anyone needs to know, who doubts the city needs to hire more firefighters, is that WVU's population has nearly doubled since 1967 to about 26,500 students. In the meantime, the fire department still has 45 firefighters — one more than in 1967.

On the other issue, the fire service fee has not increased since 1992. In the meantime, the costs of practically every other city fee has and some have virtually doubled in that interim.

It was 1999 when MFD Chief David Fetty first proposed an increase in the city's fire fee and tried to beef up his force. He's still waiting for a response.

Though we can understand why there has been debate on the numbers of firefighters needed and the amount of the fee increase, we cannot understand the inaction on this issue.

Admittedly, this fire department has continued to receive excellent ratings on internal and external audits of its services, despite the staffing issues and the static fire fee. But the credit for that goes to the MFD, not to our city leaders.

We realize taxpayers have their limits as to what they will shoulder, but we suspect most of them would agree more firefighters are needed, as is the new north side station, and are willing to pay for it.

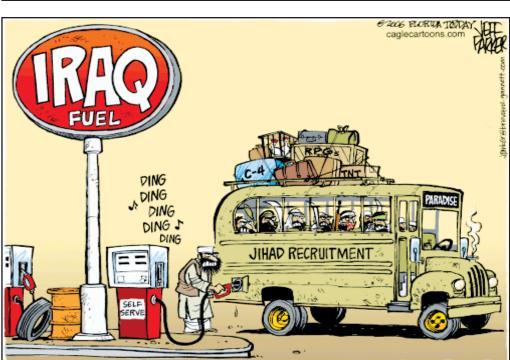

And anyone who doubts it will, probably at one point, come face to face with these firefighters in an emergency and hopefully walk away convinced they were worth every penny of the fire fee. That argument alone for expanding the department is convincing.

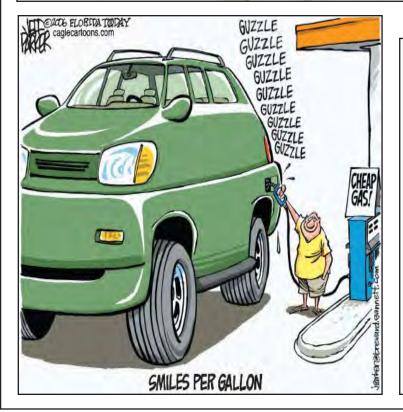

To pay for the new fire station and new firefighers the city needs to raise this fee. And if a 24 percent increase, as one council member suggested, is needed to hire and train additional firefighters, rather than a 16 percent hike to pay for the station alone, then council had better be thinking ahead.

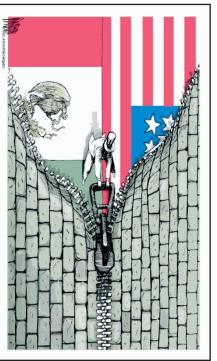

And the last word on that is City Council needs to develop a reasonable formula to build periodic, annual and nominal raises into the fire fee to ensure increases like the one needed now is never needed again.

Fires are known to rekindle several times for a good reason — they should be put out.

Spellings proven asset to Bush

IF DONALD RUMSFELD is the face of the war that is President Bush's most controversial initiative, Margaret Spellings is the face of the education program that might become his most successful one.

But the former Austin, Texas, education lobbyist might have been a tad optimistic when she compared the landmark No Child Left Behind education law to Ivory soap, declaring, "It's 99.9 percent pure or something. There's not much needed in the way of change."

Indeed, as Congress prepares to consider its extension next year, there are plenty of critics of the law Spellings helped pass in 2002 and now presides over as secretary of education.

Liberals say it's underfunded. Conservatives say it interferes with the primary state role in education. Others say it substitutes testing for learning, rates teachers by their degrees rather than their effectiveness and has failed so far to narrow the education gap between the haves and the have-nots.

And just about everyone agrees that there have been confusing discrepancies between state test results showing significant progress and the conclusion of a national evaluation group, the National Association of Educational Progress, that the changes so far have been minimal.

On Tuesday, before the National Press Club, Spellings defended her statement that, like Ivory soap, the act's "core principles" should be kept as they are.

"It's about specific targets for specific kids and is a major step forward in American public education," she said. "So I stand by it."

And the fact that the law still enjoys the bipartisan support that helped it pass was demonstrated when Rep. George Miller of California, a key House Democratic player on education legislation, said he agreed with her "in terms of its goal and its intent."

But Miller noted that "there are serious problems with implementation" and sharply criticized the administration and Republican-run Congress for failing to provide enough money for it.

Spellings also endorsed many recommendations in a national commission's proposal to extend the administration's efforts to increase education standards in colleges and universities, though she sidestepped its proposal to expand federal scholarship aid.

While she plans to put some proposals into effect administratively, others, like streamlining scholarship programs, require congressional action.

How many of them will pass remains to be seen, in part because they will face the same major battle over funding levels that's likely to mark the debate over extending

But at a time when the fiscal drain of the Iraq war and the normal flagging of power in a second term have sidetracked many Bush proposals, the way Spellings is running her department has proved to be a major administration asset.

Just as the elevation of Condoleezza Rice from national security adviser to secretary of state energized administration foreign policy efforts beyond Iraq, Spellings' move from White House domestic policy adviser to the education department gave new impetus to the president's most important domestic initiative.

Indeed, soon after taking office, she may have saved the landmark program when she acted to head off a major state revolt against the law by permitting flexibility in how states measure progress, improve teacher quality, provide tutoring and test children with disabilities — a big issue in Texas.

After 18 months in office, however, she is still cleaning up messes left behind by her predecessor, former Houston school chief Rod Paige, who seemed ineffective on Capitol Hill and in running the department.

One big advantage Spellings — and the administration — will have in seeking to reauthorize the No Child Left Behind law is that, unlike Paige, she is widely respected by both parties on Capitol Hill.

In a sense, the future of No Child Left Behind and that of Spellings are intertwined.

"She considers this part of the Bush legacy, and she considers herself part of the Bush legacy," Thompson said.

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba

To enter one of the heavily barricaded camps for detainees here feels like walking into a low-grade war zone. Which is what it is. The extremists held here haven't given up their ideology, or their fight. The struggle to harm America in whatever way, no matter how minuscule, carries on.

In one camp, detainees were taking apart the push-button faucets in their cells to get at a metal spring that they would stretch out to be used as a weapon. The Asian-style toilets on the floors of the cells used to have footrests, until detainees wrenched them from the floor to use as bludgeoning weapons. The guards are splashed routinely with urine and feces. The detainees have even been known to try to kick their soccer balls out of their recreation area into barbed wire, to cost the infidels the price of one ball.

All the disturbances or suicides have taken place in the camps where security has been loosened. It was in Camp Four, where the best-behaved detainees are allowed to live communally, that a minor riot took place this past spring. A detainee faked a suicide attempt to lure the guards into the living area, where the floor had been smeared with urine, feces and soap. When they slipped, the detainees attacked them with light fixtures and other makeshift weapons. The man in charge here, Adm. Harry Harris, says his conclusion was "there is no such thing as a medium-security terrorist."

While always mindful that they are dealing with dangerous men, the Americans treat them humanly. Seemingly every surface has a painted arrow pointing toward Mecca. Every detainee gets a Quran, and should it be necessary to search one, it is done by a Muslim translator, not a guard. Detainees are offered 4,200 calories a day. U.S. combat troops get 3,800. The average detainee has gained 18 pounds.

It is alleged that the facility here is full of innocent men. But they were first screened in Afghanistan, then a Combat Status Review Tribunal examined them upon arrival, and now an Annual Review Board acts like a parole board. Roughly 300 detainees have been released or transferred for detention elsewhere. Of those, roughly 20 have been confirmed to have returned to fight and probably others too. Nonetheless, roughly another 130 out of 460 are set to be transferred or released.

The rest are considered too dangerous. Just last year, an extremist cell of North Africans was broken up in Italy, based partly on information gleaned here. Last fall, FBI sketch artists were able to depict a wanted al-Qaida official from Afghanistan, thanks to input from Saudi detainees.

Interrogators rely on the soft sell. Detainees sit in a La-Z-Boy chair during interrogations, and beverages and movies are available to put them at ease. The most effective interrogator is said to be an older woman who adopts a nurturing attitude.

The facility here has been used, of course, to smear the United States. The press still uses photos from Camp X-Ray — the Spartan, temporary facility used for just four months in 2002 to house detainees — in its Gitmo stories, although it has been overgrown with weeds for years and replaced by modern facilities. The principle among the guards is to respond to any provocation with minimal possible force to avoid giving critics propaganda.

Dealing with unappeasable murderous fanatics, while at the same time honoring our civilized norms, is never going to be easy. Gitmo is an attempt to find that balance, in the midst of what everyone here — the detainees and their minders — recognizes as an ongoing war.

SIDEBAR

G. DYS, ESQ.

Anybody have any questions

WELCOME, to the premiere of "Sidebar," a column dedicated to answering your questions about

The idea behind this column is that I will be answering your questions about the law and the legal process — think Andrew Napolitano meets "Dear Abby." This column is interactive and requires not only your reading, but also your participation.

You see, the name of this column is quite instructive. A sidebar is typically held to the "side" of the "bar" (or judge's bench) during a trial when an attorney can ask a question, make an objection, or suggest procedure out of the hearing of the jury or any member of the public who may be sitting in back. It is, quite frankly, an opportunity for attorneys and judges to ask stupid questions, without appearing foolish in front of any but the necessary parties.

So it is with this column. You have had these times, haven't you? You're watching your favorite legal thriller when, suddenly, just when the perp is about to be sent packing to Sing-Sing, the defense counsel stands, pounds the table, and demands that the case be dismissed for some surprising technicality. As the judge dismisses the case, the prosecutors fume, and the credits roll, you lean to your couch-mate and say, "Can they really do that?!"

Well, dear reader, now's your chance to find out. Ask me.

You see, we live in, as John Adams once said, "A government of laws and not of men." As Americans, we proudly trumpet about our unique democracy within a republic, not always understanding exactly what that means. Find out: ask me.

We all know that if we were arrested we have the right to an attorney, the right to stay silent, etc., but do we get a phone call too? Ask me.

When we disagree with something that a politician has said, we critically assert our "freedom of speech," and yet, we're horrified when we discover that the freedom is sometimes a qualified one. Talk to me.

If you were paying attention in high school civics, you may remember that the 10th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution provides, "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." To live in our country, you have a duty to understand and participate in the actions of government; yet sometimes you have no idea what is going on in government. That's ok; let me help you.

I have a Doctor of Jurisprudence (that's fancy-talk for "law degree") and, now as a practicing attorney before the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia, I make daily sojourns into our laws.

It is my job to research the law and give someone my opinion about it in a way that makes sense. This column comes with only one rule: while it will hopefully make you a better citizen, it is a not a legal advice column. I'm not going to give you legal advice.

But, I am ready and willing to answer such questions as, "What does it mean that an attorney is admitted to 'the Bar?'", "Do our laws really come from the Judeo-Christian ethic", "What is a SCO-TUS?", "What are 'term limits?"", "Can Congress actually overrule a decision by the Supreme Court?", "Why do lawsuits take so long to resolve?", "What is mediation and arbitration?", or "What's the weirdest law you have ever heard of?"

Got it? Then send your questions to me at: opinion@dominionpost.com; put mail them to: Sidebar, c/o The Dominion Post, 1251 Earl Core Road, Morgantown, WV 26505; or drop them off our newspaper's office in the Greer Building.

It is my hope that you will find Sidebar informative and that, together, we can help ensure Lincoln's prophecy: "That government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the Earth."

JEREMIAH G. DYS, ESQ. is a local attorney who lives in Morgantown. This commentary should be considered another point of view and not necessarily the opinion or editorial policy of The Dominion Post.

wealthiest nor shield them from liability. What we need is an increase in the minimum wage, a reduction of the current federal deficit and the burgeoning national debt, a reduction in our dependence on oil, health care for all, and an end to raiding the Social Security trust fund to prop up runaway spending in Washington. Above all, we need honest leaders who see themselves as public servants working for their constituents. At the present time, these are not Republican priorities, which is why it is time for a change

Left-wing power politics cannot cope with enemy

Submit, or die, death to the infidels, this is the intent driving Islamic fanaticism since 622 AD. The riots, the mass demonstrations, the church burnings, and the demonstration killings are designed to suppress criticism and honest inquiry. They were successful in cowering much of the media to not publish cartoons lampooning Mohammad, and were partially successful making the Pope defensive about his quote of a Byzantine Emperor's accurate observation of how Mohammad propagated Islam. If the terrorist had their way, the Pope would be dead.

In this country, the efforts from specious musium civii rights' organizations are to the purpose of revising and whitewashing the history of Islamic fanaticism. They excuse the war laden exhortations in the Koran, (they are always "out of context") and the stark history of Islamic anti-Semitism. Moreover, the enemy and their fronts are using misinformation to pressure the more left wing politicians to push initiatives to hamper the war on

With this in mind, it is incumbent for Americans to know the enemy, and, by voting for the Byrd and Rockefeller ilk, will be playing Russian roulette with national security. The Democrats, excepting the few conservatives. are long standing members of the "cut and run" crowd, who, since World War II, have not met a war they could not stalemate (Korea), or lose. Liberal light hearts in both parties desperately search for the graceful path to defeat through constant caterwauling for premature negotiations, for 'dialogue', and useless, and consequently ignored, United Nations resolutions. This groveling process is embarrassing as well as futile when it comes to dealing with the Islamic Jihad. When they chant: "death to Jews" and "death to America" they mean it.

Do not take my word; heed the words of cleric, Al Safiri, one of many pushing for world wide dominance of Islamic Sharia law, which calls for the execution of Muslims who desire religious conversions, or decrees stoning of adulterous women. Al Safiri has been clear in stating: "All the world is a battlefield open in front of us." He continues: "The war with Israel [the United States included] does not depend on ceasefires...but is a Jihad for the sake of God and it will last until [our] religion prevails.

This leaves no hope for 'dialogue' and 'negotiation'—except for the brain dead. To wit, the this evil with a land for peace capitulation, but it did not buy peace because the land offered was not the state of Israel. It is delusional to think reasonable people can deal with the pathologically unreasonable; those who insist that there was no Holocaust and Israel must be "obliterated". The Quislings and their dupes enable these anti-Semites by the blame the victim mantra, "Israeli aggression," and Hezbollah's favorite mantra during their war with Israel, "military action will not solve this problem." It would, if it could be finished.

The allies proved against the Japanese and Germans that total victory can bring wonderful results. Failures such as Korea, the "Bay of Pigs", Vietnam, and Somalia bring lasting misery for the poor who must endure the tyranny left behind, while victories such as the Cold War and Grenada bring peace for millions.

Afghanistan and Iraq will be won through national perseverance if left-wing power politics can be held at bay.

It is time for all who love plurality and freedom to face reality and fight this menace. In this long struggle, the only earth the meek will inherit will be graves; the turning of the other cheek will be the last act before the sword; and the last words heard will be "Allah Akbar!" [God, the great]

GUEST COMMENTARY

BY JOHN E. PRESCOTT, M.D.

The Dominion Post recently published a Chicago Tribune guest editorial (DP-Thursday) that raised doubts about the effectiveness of the standards that were implemented in 2003 to assure that medical residents and interns get enough sleep.

It's an important issue, and the facts uncovered in the Journal of the American Medical Association article the Tribune quoted raise legitimate concerns. At WVU, we have taken steps to assure that every doctor who has responsibility for any part of a patient's care is alert and ready to provide his or her highest level of service.

Our patients deserve this, and they are our first priority. They also deserve, and get, access to care 24 hours a day, seven days a

The implementation of mandated standards for residents' work hours and rest periods has been a real cultural change for medical educators nationwide. In some hospitals, the tradition was to push doctors-in-training up against the limits of human endurance.

Although that attitude was never widespread at WVU, before 2003 a resident's schedule was strictly a matter between the individual and his or her depart-

Schedules could vary depending on the number of patients in the hospital, the procedures that need to be done, and the size of the department's staff.

That's no longer the case. Each resident's schedule is reviewed both at the departmental level and the hospital level to assure that we are in compliance with the standards in every part of our training program.

We have benefited from a closely-coordinated between the School of Medicine and WVU Hospitals to create institution-wide practices and standards that are enforced and Those charged with monitoring compliance with this program are aggressive in investigating suspected violations quickly. If rest requirements are not observed, the department must show that policies are in place to prevent a repetition.

Our patients also benefit from a culture where every member of the care team — faculty doctors, residents, nurses, pharmacists and other — is empowered to ask questions, to point out concerns, and to demand that others stop and consult before taking action.

The result has been that we have adjusted to the new rules without disrupting patient care. WVU residents are in substantial compliance with the duty hour requirements in all departments, and in all of our residency programs at WVU Hospitals and elsewhere in West Virginia.

The change has been good for patients, and good for medical education.

JOHN E. PRESCOTT, M.D., is dean of the WVU School of Medicine. This commentary should be considered another point of view and not necessarily the opinion or editorial policy of The Dominion Post.

Form follows dysfunction on downtown streetscape

BY GEORGE J. PAPANDREAS

For those of you that drive through downtown during the heavier periods of traffic, let me give you a glimpse of what just may be your future.

Imagine this: You turn off Willey Street on to High Street. Traffic is always bad, but it seems to be moving slower than usual. You eke your way down High to Fayette Street and there you see the problem. Angled in front of you is a bus that has made its way up Fayette only to find it can't navigate the turn onto High. The culprit? A new "bump-out" curb extension in front of the Pita Pit that narrows High Street by 8 feet and wreaks havoc with the turning radius of any vehicle longer than a pick-up truck.

You think to yourself, "Where in the world did that come from?"

Finally, after a few minutes the bus just drives over the "bumpout" causing a pedestrian to jump out of the way to keep his feet from getting run over — thank goodness they were paying attention!

You make it through the Fayette intersection and into the right hand turn lane beyond that silly "bump-out." Foot by foot you make your way past the front of the beautiful Metropolitan Theater. "What's this!" Another bump-out in front of Wall Street! Now you have to change lanes to get around that one before you can turn onto Walnut. Sounds easier than it really is!

I own property on High Street and have had business interests there since the 1970s. My life is there. I'm what you call, "involved." I've been involved with parking, economic redevelopment and this streetscape since the start and have donated a good bit of money to it as matching funds to make it possible.

In that respect, I am far from alone. All of the property owners on High Street are making similar donations. Don't think for a moment that your local small business owners downtown aren't contributing, too. For many of them, their business sales are down more than 50 percent due to the construction. Very few are complaining.

These folks are your friends, neighbors, relatives, etc. These folks don't get a paycheck and most don't get benefits. They pay their bills, their employees, and hope that there is enough left over to live on. When business is down, it comes off that last part. Support these folks. We're what are called, (here it gets technical), stakeholders. But, we'll get back to that later.

The streetscape really is a good idea Really. It will be beautiful. But first, it must be practical and safe! The 300 block of High Street from Fayette to Walnut is unique compared to all others. You not only have the two lanes that come down High from Willey, but you add the volume of cars turning onto High from Fayette. Presently, we have two lanes going down High and a dedicated right turn lane, (when enforced) along the right curb for a total of three lanes.

Doesn't it seem a bit ridiculous that the city would choose to narrow the flow of traffic at two points in this, the most congested block of High Street. Oddly enough, the trend seems to be to add lanes to handle the additional volume everywhere else.

Does the city know about this? They should. I've brought it up to everyone that will listen. Two weeks ago, there was even a special meeting of the Traffic Commission to address the issue. Property and business owners representing more than 60 percent of the property in that block spoke against the construction of these two "bump outs" and the negative effect that they will have on the downtown economy, traffic and safety.

The Traffic Commission mostly ignored the concerns of the businesses in favor of the overall aesthetics of the "bump outs" and the perception that they afford safety to pedestrians.

When you step off the curb, do you look to see if there are cars coming? If you do, you will be safe, be it one or five lanes. If, however you have your cell phone in your ear and step off the curb with no respect for the laws of physics, the phrase, "Can you hear me now?" will take on a new meaning — even if it is one lane. Studies reference how such "bump outs" actually increase the number of pedestrian accidents by allowing pedestrians mindless access to just step into traffic.

Even a U.S. Department of Transportation study concluded, "At most sites, however, these traffic calming devices did not have significant effects on pedestrians;"

and "The reader is cautioned that traffic-calming devices are not a panacea guaranteed to improve conditions for pedestrians. These devices by themselves cannot ensure that motorists will slow down and yield to pedestrians, nor that pedestrians will cross in the crosswalk. Moreover, traffic-calming devices have their disadvantages. For example, these treatments can hinder activities such as street cleaning and snow plowing, may impede emergency vehicle access, and may affect drainage."

I told you we'd get back to the 'stakeholder" part. We're all stakeholders. We will all have to deal with the outcome of a potentially bad design choice in the 300 block of High Street. If you feel that this is a serious concern, call, write or e-mail the city manager immediately!

Make it a priority! I can tell you that this will be happening within the next two weeks unless enough people make their feelings known.

Therapists train in problem-gambling treatment Submitted to The Dominion Post

The (800) GAMBLER helpline now has more therapists in the Morgantown area who can treat problem gamblers. Judith Wilkinson and Cheryl Riley, therapists in private practice, have each completed 35 hours of training in the diagnosis and treatment of problem gambling offered by the Problem Gamblers Help Network of West Virginia.

They join an existing network of more than 70 trained counselors statewide that offers free consultation and treatment to problem gamblers or

Dept. of physics finalizes addition to program

Week, contact newsroom@dominionpost.com.

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The department of physics in the Eberly College of Arts and Sciences at WVU has finalized a new addition to its undergraduate program called Areas of Emphasis.

The AOEs encourage students to tailor and expand on the basic requirements for the bachelor of science degree in physics to develop specialized competencies in selected interest areas.

An AOE differs from a minor in the sense that a minor focuses only on one field, whereas the AOE can span more than two disci-

The department worked to form agreements with the other colleges at WVU to provide their students access to many classes that were not previously available to them. For example, the astro/space physics AOE includes classes such as fluid dynamics, electrical circuits and digital imaging processing, all of which are offered through the College of Engineering and Miner-

On average, AOEs require 24 more credit hours than the basic physics degree, and each requires either a summer research experience (at WVU or another institution) or a capstone experience.

The available AOEs are applied physics, astro/space physics, biophysics, computational physics, materials science and medical physics.

Assistance available to people applying for black-lung benefits

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The U.S. Department of Labor. Employment Standards Administration, Office of Workers' Compensation, Division of Coal Mine Workers Compensation will be providing assistance to applicants applying for program benefits under the Black Lung Benefits Act from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Oct. 4 at the Mine Safety and Health Administration office, 604 Cheat Road, Morgantown and from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Oct. 11 at the Elkins Social Security office at the Jennings-Randolph Federal Building, 300 3rd St., Suite 325, Elkins. The Black Lung Benefits Act provides monthly payments and medical benefits to coal miners totally disabled from pneumoconiosis (Blacklung disease) arising from their employment in or around the nation's coal mines. The act also provides monthly benefits to a miner's dependent survivors (surviving spouses, orphaned children, adult disabled children, and fully dependent parents, brothers and

The program provides two types of medical services related to blacklung disease: diagnostic testing for all miner-claimants to determine the presence or absence of blacklung disease and the degree of associated disability; and for miners entitled to monthly benefits, medical coverage for treatment of blacklung disease and disability.

Diagnostic testing includes a chest X-ray, pulmonary function study (breathing test), arterial blood gas study and a physical examination. Medical coverage includes (but is not limited to) costs for prescription drugs, office visits and hospitalizations. Also provided, with specific approval, are items of durable medical equipment, such as hospital beds, home oxygen and nebulizers; outpatient pulmonary rehabilitation therapy; and home nursing visits.

Area man elected to leadership council

Mr. Matusky, a Marion county resident and an independent Glass Doctor franchise owner, has been elected to the new leadership council as regional representative for Clarksburg. Matusky has four locations in central West Virginia. The council serves as regional representatives on behalf of the system's franchise owners and will work with the corporate home office to develop ongoing strategic planning for the entire franchise organization.

The new council members will meet later this month in Dallas, Texas, to select a chairperson to head future strategic planning, review the current by-laws and determine term limits for council members.

UHS teachers attend seminar

Four University High School teachers participated in a "train the trainer" conference this summer at Stonewall Jackson Resort.

UHS special-education teachers Charlotte Judy, Sharon Kennedy and Rachael Lowe and English/Spanish teacher Jeanne Dreisbach attended the five-day conference "A Framework for Understanding Poverty" on July 24-28. The conference was structured on the work of nationally recognized educator Dr. Ruby K. Payne.

Kennedy and Dreisbach completed 22 hours of trainer certification through their participation. The UHS teachers also received funding from RESA VII to purchase related instructional materials to facilitate their work with students and their parents, especially those included in low socio-economic groups. Biology professor publishes study

Stephen DiFazio, assistant professor of biology in the Eberly College of Arts and Sciences at WVU, has co-authored a milestone study in genome research that points to trees as the new biofuel.

The study, "The genome of black cottonwood, Populus trichocarpa (Torr. & Gray)," was featured on the cover of the Sept. 15th edition of Science and includes the first complete DNA sequence of a tree. Science is the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

DiFazio earned his doctorate and master's degrees from Oregon State University. Before joining the faculty of the WVU department of biology in 2005, he was a research scientist in the Environmental Sciences Division of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee.

He received the WVU Award for Research Team Scholarship for his study, "Mechanisms of Cadmium Tolerance in Poplar Trees."

He currently teaches molecular ecology. Info: DiFazio, Stephen.Difazio@mail.wvu.edu.

Fox News Channel faces challenges from ratings

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Fox News Channel will mark its 10th anniversary this week in an unusual position: knocked back on its heels.

The network is in the midst of its first-ever ratings slump. Cable news' most stable lineup is being juggled. And the blowup over President Clinton's interview with Chris Wallace suggests that Democrats are attacking Fox because they perceive the same vulnerability in the network as they do in the Bush administration.

Maybe some of this was on Fox News chief Roger Ailes' mind one day last week when he rode the elevator to the 22nd floor of News Corp.'s office tower for an 8:45 a.m. stroll through the network's ad sales department.

Mr. Ailes? What are you doing up here, someone wondered aloud.
"Taking attendance," the hard-charging motivator replied.

Message delivered.

Loved by some, loathed by others, Fox News Channel has been the biggest success in the cable industry and profoundly changed television news since its signal turned on Oct. 7, 1996.

Ailes can still remember a reporter's laughter during the news conference to introduce the network. He had the last laugh: Fox News beat by a year his plan for overtaking CNN and grew to more than double its rivals in viewership. It made stars of Bill O'Reilly and Sean Hannity and put "fair and balanced" into news history textbooks.

Opinionated talk is now a staple on the TV dial, with Keith Olbermann on MSNBC, Lou Dobbs on CNN and Nancy Grace on CNN Headline News. Fox was first.

"I watched CNN for a week before I went on and I kept trying to wake myself up," Ailes told The Associated Press. "I kept nodding off and I realized they are biased, they are boring, they looked like a network that has never had any competition."

Ailes, a former Republican political operative, said simply presenting different points of view made Fox seem like a contrast to left-leaning news coverage elsewhere.

Before Fox, many in the media scoffed at the notion of a liberal bias and figured only a handful of people really believed that, said Erik Sorenson, former MSNBC

"Fox proved it's a much larger group than anybody realized," he said.

Their success clearly made others respond. The very idea that Rush Limbaugh would appear on a "CBS Evening News" segment called "Free Speech," heavily promoted on Katie Couric's first night as anchor, would have been unfathomable a decade ago, Sorenson said.

"I've had many people say to me we have forced people to think differently in their own newsrooms," Ailes said.

Fox's critics consider "fair and balanced" camouflage for an agenda. Whatever the truth, news-watching became increasingly partisan: more Democrats watched CNN, more Republicans watched Fox, according to a 2004 study by the Pew Research Center for the People in the Press. The year Fox started, CNN had more Republican viewers than Democrats.

While he cautioned not to overexaggerate Fox's influence, former CBS News President Andrew Heyward suggested industry sensitivity to Fox's popularity, coupled with shock after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, combined to dampen aggressiveness in questioning the government's assumptions leading up to the Iraq war.

Ailes dismissed that theory with an epithet.

Less attention has been paid to the look of Fox News. During its peak, it appeared more colorful, more graphically innovative and more urgent. It made CNN look stodgy.

But the years of explosive growth have ended at Fox. Viewership over the first eight months of the year was down 5 percent compared to 2005, with a steeper 13 percent decline in prime-time, according to Nielsen Media Research. For 12 straight months, Fox's prime-time audience has been smaller than the year before. Meanwhile, CNN viewership inched up 5 percent this year through August.

"It's hard," Ailes said, "to win the Super Bowl every year."

The timing is inopportune, since Fox is about to negotiate new fees with cable and satellite providers to replace contracts agreed to when the network first started. As a startup, Fox accepted low fees from cable providers and believes its success made those deals a bargain. Now Fox wants them to pay up, and in some cases is asking providers to quadruple their payments.

Theories abound on the ratings decline, and include simple rules of gravity: Ratings can't go up forev-

Some believe there's a correlation to the declining popularity of President Bush and concern about the Iraq war. "The rah-rah enthusiasm that was there in 2002, four years later has dissipated," Sorenson said.

Some of the bigger stories of the past year, such as Hurricane Katrina and the wars in the Middle East, played better to the newsgathering strengths of CNN, Heyward said

Olbermann's growing popularity — and growing partisanship — along with the response to Clinton's "Fox News Sunday" interview also indicate that Fox's foes have less fear about taking the network on Fox has recently made a handful of lineup changes — most notably yanking E.D. Hill from the popular "Fox & Friends" and giving her a daytime anchor slot, replacing her on the morning show with Gretchen Carlson. Ailes said FNC is trying to add some fresh faces to its contributors

Ailes is also up to old motivational tricks, including calling the occasional 5 a.m. meeting ("I think it's useful to wake people up and remind them of how they get their paycheck," he said). A large trade publication ad placed recently saying the network was looking for aggressive new producers was seen —for good reason — as being directed as much internally as at job

Despite the slump, Ailes is quick to point out that Fox News still consistently beats all competitors throughout the day and evening.

"I have to be careful because I'm never satisfied unless we're going upward," he said. "But the truth is, I wouldn't change places with anybody else and they would change places with me in a heartbeat. For all the attacks we get, do you think MSNBC or CNN wouldn't want to be where we are?"

When he gets up everyday, "I don't want to be where they are," he said. "I don't want to be sucking canal water every morning thinking, what am I going to do today to make things better?" You have to keep it in perspective, which I try to do."

Judge dismisses suit against Google

McClatchy Trib

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A federal judge granted Google a significant victory Thursday, ruling that the search engine did not violate federal law when it sold trademarked terms in an online advertising auction.

Judge Norman Mordue, of the U.S. District Court, northern district of New York, dismissed a suit brought against Google by Rescuecom, a computer repair and consulting business.

In a suit filed September 2004, Rescuecom had claimed that Google violated its trademarked name by selling it as an advertising keyword to competitors. When a keyword is entered by someone using Google's search engine, it triggers small text-based ads that run alongside search results.

Google's policy on the use of trademarks to trigger online ads placed by competitors has rankled a number of advertisers, including insurance giant Geico, which settled a similar suit against Google last year, and American Blind & Wallpaper Factory, whose case is pending.

Of the three biggest search engines, only Google allows advertisers to purchase a competitors' trademarks.

"They needed a green light from the legal system to run their business," said Eric Goldman, director of the High Tech Law Institute at Santa Clara University. "They've been operating under a cloud of doubt."

Google has been seeking legal approval of its business practice for several years.

In an e-mailed statement, Michael Kwun, a senior litigation counsel at Google, said: "We welcome Chief Judge Mordue's decision to dismiss the case, which again confirms our long-held belief that our trademark policy is lateful."

David Milman, chief executive of Rescuecom, said in a statement that he is considering his options for appeal.

Milman said the ruling set a "dangerous precedent . . . that allows a behemoth to pit smaller competitors against one another, while it rakes in the additional revenue."

In a suit filed September 2004, Rescuecom had claimed that Google violated its trademarked name by selling it as an advertising keyword to competitors. When a keyword is entered by someone using Google's search engine, it triggers small text-based ads that run alongside search results.

Mordue's ruling is not binding on other district courts, which have allowed other trademark suits brought against Google for its advertising policies to go forward. But its clear reasoning could influence other judges, Goldman said.

The ruling states that Google's use of trademarked terms to trigger online advertisements doesn't violate trademark law because "there is no allegation that the defendant places plaintiff's trademark on any goods, containers, displays, or advertisements, or that its internal use is visible to the public."

In August 2005, a federal judge in Alexandria, Va., hearing Geico's case against Google came to a similar conclusion, but found that Google may have violated trademark law in cases in which the advertisements placed by competitors also featured the word "Geico." At that point, Google and Geico entered into a confidential settlement.

Google also faces challenges overseas. It is appealing several rulings against it in France, where it has been ordered not to respond to a search request for information about one company with advertisements for another.

Cancer center hosts event

Grant deadlines for projects in agricultural sustainability

Grants are given to commercial farmers

The Dominion Post

The Northeast Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) program offers three different grant programs to explore innovative approaches to sustainable agriculture, all with application deadlines in the late fall and early winter.

Farmer Grants are for commercial farmers who would like to test a sustainable new practice, often by conducting an experiment, trial, or on-farm demonstration. Projects can explore a wide range of topics such as pest management, soil health, renewable energy, adding value, marketing, or new production techniques, and funds can be used for materials and to pay farmers for their time.

The application is straightforward and comes with a how-to guide that gives examples from past applications. Awards are capped at $10,000 and the deadline is Dec. 22.

Partnership Grants are for Cooperative Extension, NRCS, and other service providers who work directly with farmers.

Partnership Grants support onfarm research and demonstration projects in sustainable agriculture, and funds can be used to pay for personnel, materials, sampling, supplies, testing, and to compensate cooperating farmers for their time. Awards are capped at $10,000 and the deadline is Dec. 5.

Sustainable Community Grants are for projects that connect farming and economic development. Projects can address issues like land use, nutrition, employment, markets, education, public policy, and other facets of rural development. Applicants must be affiliated with an organization such as a community nonprofit, Cooperative Extension, local government, an educational institution, a planning board, a farming cooperative, or an incorporated citizens group.

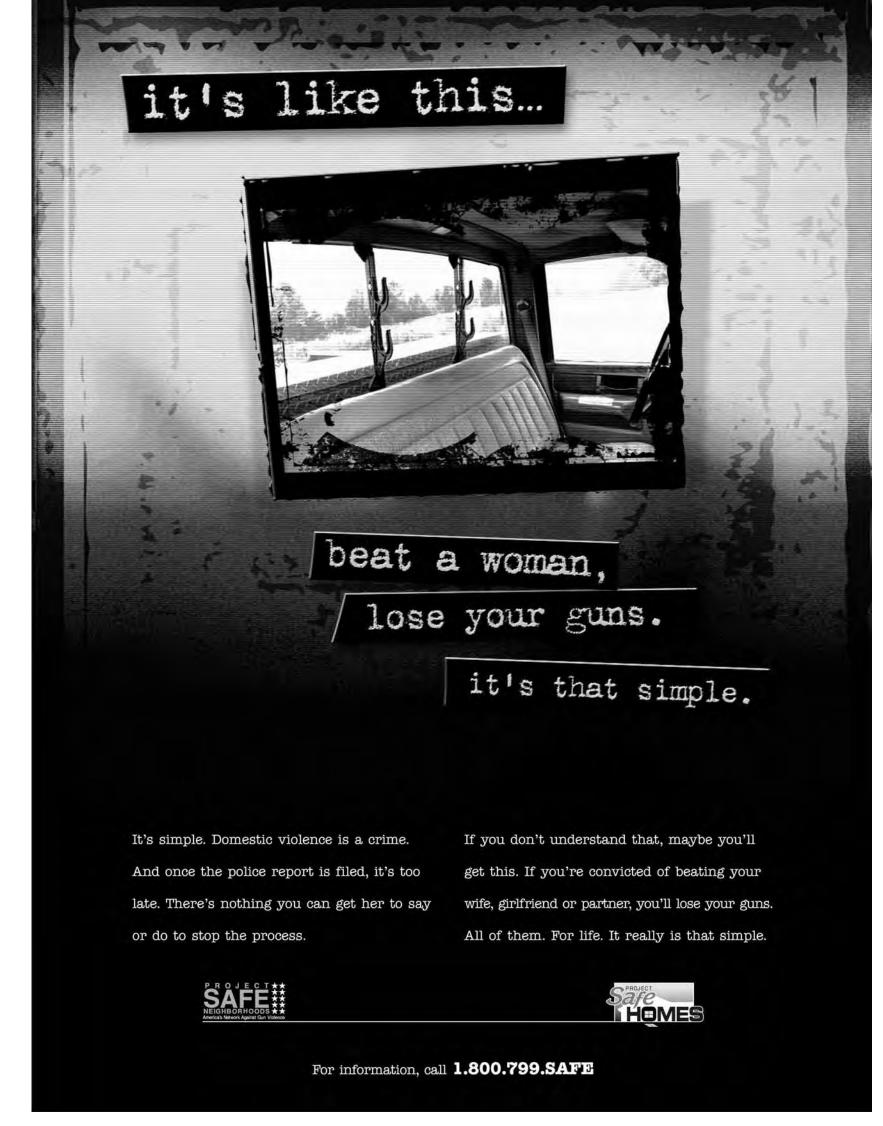

This grant is offered in partnership with the Northeast Regional Center for Rural Development. Awards are capped at $10,000, and the application deadline is Nov. 28.

This year, Northeast SARE will also offer the Appalachian Initiative as part of its Sustainable Community program. Applicants in West Virginia and selected counties in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New York can seek funds for innovative farm-based renewable energy projects and for adding value to farm products.

This grant is offered in partnership with the Appalachian Regional Commission. Awards are capped at $25,000, and the deadline is Nov. 28.

To learn more about SARE, its different grant programs, and its educational offerings, uvm.edu/~nesare or (802) 656-0471. The Northeast SARE region is made up of Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Colorado town mourns teen killed in school siege

BAILEY, Colo. — In a mountain meadow not far where she was shot by a gunman who invaded her school, those who knew Emily Keyes – and many who didn't — came together on a bright, breezy fall Saturday to remember the teen and hear a message of forgiveness and Family friend Louis Gonzales asked mourners to embrace Emily's last words, a text message that said "I love U guys."

Gonzales told the several thousand outside the National Farmers Union Education Center: "Picture Emily's face in your mind. Give it a kiss. I love you guys. Random acts of kind-

Speaking for the family, he said, "We have the power to do this. Let's take the random act that has occurred and turn it to random acts of kindness."

Keyes was shot in the head Wednesday as she fled from Duane Morrison, who had held her and five other girls hostage. Morrison killed himself after a SWAT team stormed the classroom.

"Emily was a part of my life and a part of all of your lives, and I know that," her twin brother, Casey, said. "And that part was torn away and stolen this Wednesday. But the part of us that can never be torn away and never be stolen is the love and strength that keeps us together.

The crowd greeted Sheriff Fred Wegener with a standing ovation.

"This is the hardest thing that I'll ever face, and I want the Keyes family to know that if I could trade places with Emily, I'd do it in a heartbeat," Wegener said. "Emily will be with me in my heart forever."

Ruth Barth, Emily's speech teacher and debate coach, told the crowd that no one should feel guilt because nothing more could have been done to save her.

"In fact, it's my personal belief that Emily is debating hard on the other side, and that she's winning every single debate, and that she's using her extemporaneous skills to confound any mind that she contends with," she said.

The family came in limousines preceded by a caravan of emergency vehicles and sheriff's department cars. Pink ribbons tied to ponderosa pines lined the road. Many mourners wore ribbons saying "Random acts of kindness for Emily.

On Friday night, a candlelight vigil was held. "I think everybody's looking for answers," said Gray Anderson, a counselor who has been talking with residents. "People are just looking for reasons why."

Earlier it was learned that Morrison had indicated he planned some violent act. A 14-page letter from Morrison was postmarked Wednesday in nearby Shawnee — the same day he took the girls hostage.

Morrison claimed in the letter that it was not a suicide note, Wegener said.

"However, many times, the letter references suicide," Wegener said. "This letter clearly acknowledges his pending death. It also apologizes to his family for his actions that will

CDC: Spinach scare aside, food illnesses at record lows

SAN FRANCISCO — Despite the recent E. coli spinach outbreak, food may be safer now than at any other time in the last decade, with illness occurring at record-low rates, new federal statistics show.

Consumers get part of the credit, for handling food more safely at home, but experts say the biggest improvement came from better industry controls and inspections.

"The food is actually cleaner to begin with," said Dr. Robert Tauxe, top food scientist at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Certain germs have dramatically declined, and "that to me is really solid progress.'

However, the trend could reverse in coming years if fruit and vegetable growers do not address problems like those that led to the spinach scare, Tauxe and others said.

"The meat and poultry industry has made great strides. The produce industry has a long way to go to catch up," said Michael Doyle, a microbiologist who heads the University of Georgia's Center for Food

On Friday, the Food and Drug Administration lifted its warning on spinach except for specific brands packaged on certain dates. Consumers should continue to avoid spinach recalled by Natural Selection Foods LLC of San Juan Bautista and four companies that it supplied.

The recall covered 34 brands bearing "Best if Used By" dates of Aug. 17 through Oct. 1, so most of it is thought to be out of the food Spinach farmer Dale Huss, of Sea Mist Farms (right) inspects spinach plants with Doug Mosebar, president of the California Farm Bureau Federation, on Friday, in a field near Castroville, Calif. The U.S. Foodand Drug Administration lifted its two-week-old consumer warning on most fresh spinach Friday, revising the alert to say it now covers only specific brands packaged on certain dates.

The spinach sickened 187 people in 26 states, hospitalized 97 of them and killed one. Outbreaks typically are far larger than the number of labconfirmed cases reported to federal officials, Tauxe noted.

Germs in food make 76 million Americans sick, send 323,000 to hospitals and kill 5,000 each year, the CDC estimates.

But the situation greatly improved over the last decade, according to illness statistics the agency reported Friday at a conference of the American Society for Microbiology.

In 2005, compared with the 1996-98 period when the CDC's FoodNet tracking system began, illnesses were down for virtually every major

CDC estimates the declines as follows: yersinia, 49 percent; shigella, 43 percent; listeria, 32 percent; campylobacter, 30 percent; the dangerous O157 strain of E. coli, 29 percent; and salmonella, 9 percent. Only vibrio, a germ spread through raw oysters, rose significantly — 41 percent.

Campylobacter and salmonella sicken the most people, usually through raw or undercooked poultry or eggs. Yersinia can taint raw meats, seafood and dairy products. Listeria causes problems in lunchmeats and soft cheeses.

E. coli outbreaks typically have involved undercooked ground meat. But in recent years, the germ has increasingly been linked to produce, as has a certain strain of salmonella.

'The problems have changed," said Caroline Smith DeWaal, food safety director for the consumer group Center for Science in the Public Interest. "A decade ago, beef was at the top of our list of concern. Now we're more concerned about pro-

Carol Tucker-Foreman, food policy director for Consumer Federation of America, agreed.

"Fresh fruits and vegetables are generally not subject to any regulatory standards," and the FDA has only voluntary "guidance" for growers to follow, she said.

She also notes that most of the decline in illnesses occurred in the earlier part of the decade, and that gains in more recent years have "Some of the gains have declined in the last two years," she said. She is most worried about certain strains of salmonella and wants the government to make further strides against listeria.

As concern over border security grows, so does the vegetation

HOULTON, Maine — The United States wants to better secure its border with Canada, but it might have trouble finding it in some areas, an official with the agency that maintains the border said.

The U.S. and Canada have fallen so far behind on basic maintenance of their shared border that law enforcement officials might have to search through overgrown vegetation for markers in some places, the official said.

"If you can't find it, then you can't secure it," said Dennis Schornack, the U.S. commissioner of the International Boundary Commission, the intergovernmental agency responsible for maintaining the U.S.-Canada border.

The Boeing Co. has been awarded a three-year contract to implement the first part of what could be a multibillion-dollar plan to reduce illegal entry along the 6,000 miles of border with Canada and Mexico using better technology, including cameras, sensors and even unmanned airplanes.

But commission officials say their budget of just over $3 million is insufficient and insist that if they are not given more money to buy basic machinery to beat back the weeds, bushes and trees that threaten to overtake parts of the border, all those high-tech gadgets could prove useless.

"I've talked and talked, and we don't seem to be getting anywhere," Schornack said. "Yes, it's not glamorous. It's not high-tech. It's chain saws and weed whackers. But if you don't get that basic job done, all I know is cameras won't work.'

The 5,525-mile U.S.-Canada border cuts a 20-foot-wide swath through many wooded areas. Down the middle are monuments and markers denoting the actual bor-

The agency, consisting of two commissioners (one from each country), seven field engineers and a small support staff, is responsible for surveying and maintaining more than 8,000 monuments and reference points.

The International Boundary Commission has warned that it has fallen far behind in clearing fast-growing brush and trees, especially in the United States' Northeast and Northwest — between Washington state and British Columbia and between New England and Quebec and New Brunswick.

Schornack will meet in Washington on Monday and Tuesday with his Canadian counterparts, high-ranking homeland security officials and members of Congress to lobby for more funding.

Part of his goal, he said, is to lift the agency's profile. The agency is so small, he said, that it gets lost in the $2.7 trillion federal budget.

"The boundary has been ignored for a very long time," Schornack said. "I'm not even sure people know we exist."

Canadian officials say the U.S. needs to contribute more money.

The U.S. contributed $1.43 million this fiscal year, compared with $2.2 million Canada contributed, the commission said. The U.S. contribution pales in comparison with the $33 million it is giving the International Boundary and Water Commission, which oversees maintenance of the border with Mexico, And a hill to erect a fence along the Mexican border went to President Bush on Friday.

"Some of the catch-up projects that the Americans are supposed to undertake are not being done. We're doing as much as we can with our funding, but the catch-up rate is not what it should be," said Al Arseneault, the deputy commissioner of the commission's Canadian branch.

Terror trials to affect fraction of prisoners in U.S. custody

WASHINGTON — The CIA interrogation program should now be back in business and terrorist trials can begin right away, according to proponents of new legislation passed by Congress

The legislation is a victory for President Bush, whose detention and interrogation program was deemed illegal by the Supreme Court in June. Bush turned to Congress and was able to push through legislation that would revive his anti-ter-

Lawmakers passed the bill and sent it Friday to the president to sign. But while the measure potentially applies to all 14,000 foreign detainees, it isn't expected to change the lives of many. Most are in military prisons in Iraq and Afghanistan and are unlikely to face aggressive, prolonged interrogations by CIA operatives. The Pentagon is expected to prosecute fewer than two dozen detainees

Under the bill, Bush can convene military commissions to prosecute terror suspects so long as he follows certain guidelines. The bill also for the first time provides specific definitions of abusive treatment of prisoners, though critics say it leaves unclear precisely what methods would be allowed.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and other proponents of the bill say it will prohibit such cruel interrogation techniques such as "waterboarding," or simulated drowning, though others have said that is uncertain.

The measure bans abusive interrogations for all detainees in U.S. custody, though in practical terms these protections will mostly affect terrorism suspects in CIA custody. Bush has said the CIA handed over to the military the last 14 detainees it had been secretly holding, and they are now at the detention center at the U.S. naval base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

The bill probably will have little effect on the majority of detainees those being held by the military because they were already protected by Pentagon guidelines that banned abusive interrogations.

So far, the military says it has enough evidence to try only 10 prisoners — all held at Guantanamo. The remaining detainees, most of whom are in Iraq, can be held without charge until hostilities there end.

Bush also is expected to try some or all of the 14 former CIA suspects now held by the military. The group includes Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, the suspected mastermind of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

The president previously attempted to prosecute terrorism suspects without congressional approval. But the administration was stopped by the Supreme Court, which ruled in June his system was illegal and violated the nation's treaty obliga-

Congress stepped in, with majority Republicans pushing through legislation that would allow Bush to resume trials.

Under the bill, Mohammed and others selected for prosecution would be guaranteed legal counsel and a chance to defend themselves against specific charges.

But the remaining prisoners not prosecuted — including all of those swept up in the battlefield in Iraq would not be guaranteed legal recourse. This would seem to have little effect on them because, practically speaking, prisoners in Iraq and Afghanistan currently have virtually no way to protest their detentions in U.S. courts.

Critics say the bill could violate the Constitution, which calls for equal legal protection for anyone under U.S. jurisdiction, because it bars detainees from protesting their detentions in court. That right is called habeas corpus, and eliminating it for many of the detainees will allow Bush to hold them without charge forever.

"What they've done with this legislation is wipe out — abolish the writ of habeas corpus for any alien held by the United States anywhere in the world," said Michael Ratner at the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York.

To proponents, the bill reaffirms decades of historic precedents.

New vaccines would immunize people against their bad habits

CHICAGO — Vaccines, the most potent medical weapon ever devised to vanquish deadly germs, are now being called on to do something totally different and culturally revolutionary — inoculate people against bad habits like overeating, cigarette smoking and drug use.

Whether this new era of vaccine research can actually subdue many of the poor lifestyle choices that are today's biggest threats to health — causing obesity, cancer, heart disease and other problems — has yet to be proved.

But the evidence is promising enough to persuade the federal government to put millions of dollars toward finding out if two of the vaccines can end nicotine and cocaine addiction.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse, which has spent $15 million on clinical trials for the vaccines and plans to spend more, predicts that one of the nicotine vaccines may be available for marketing in three years.

"The American Cancer Society has projected that we will have one billion people die from smoking in the world in this century, said Frank Vocci, director of medications development for the insti-

"If you had a vaccine that helped people quit and stay quit, or prevent them from smoking, that's where you'd get the greatest public health

Meanwhile, results from a major obesity vaccine trial under way in Switzerland are expected later this year and company officials are hopeful that the vaccine could be ready for use in a few years if all goes well.

To tamp out deleterious behavior, the new vaccines employ the body's natural immune system in an innovative way.

Instead of building antibodies to destroy germs as traditional vaccines do, they construct antibodies that lock onto nicotine and cocaine molecules, preventing them from reaching the brain.

"What we're seeing is a renaissance in vaccine technology," said Dr. Gary Nabel, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases' Vaccine Research Center. "It's only natural that when you have a technology that's this powerful it can be applied to other medical problems.'

Normally, nicotine and cocaine molecules are too small to be seen by the immune system.

So to make the vaccines, scientists attach these molecules to big target proteins, like harmless viruses or bacteria, which the immune system can recognize and attack with specialized anti-

When the person later smokes a cigarette or takes cocaine, the antibodies wrap up and neutralize the molecules before they can trigger feelings of euphoria and pleasure in the brain. Smokers and cocaine users given the vaccines say their pleasure is diminished or they no longer get as high, which decreases the desire for the drug.

Authorities: Wis. teen who fatally shot principal complained about being teased

CAZENOVIA, Wis. - A teenager who decided to confront teachers and the principal after complaining that other students teased him brought two guns to school and shot the principal to death, authorities said.

The shooting Friday also came a day after the principal gave 15-yearold Eric Hainstock a disciplinary warning for having tobacco, according to a criminal complaint.

Hainstock was taken into custody and charged as an adult with murder, the district attorney said. He could get life in prison if convicted.

Detectives executed a search warrant at Hainstock's house late Friday, the sheriff said. The teen was scheduled to make an initial court appearance Monday. It was unclear whether he had an attorney.

On Friday morning, Hainstock pried open his family's gun cabinet, took out a shotgun, retrieved the key to his parents' locked bedroom and took a .22-caliber revolver, according to a criminal complaint.

He entered Weston Schools with the shotgun before classes began and pointed the gun at a social studies teacher, but custodian Dave Thompson wrested it from the teen, the complaint said. When Hainstock reached for the handgun, Thompson and the teacher ran for cover.

Then Principal John Klang went into the hallway and confronted Hainstock. A teacher said that after the shots were fired, Klang, already wounded, managed to wrestle the shooter to the ground and sweep away the gun, the complaint said. Students and staff detained Hainstock until police arrived, District Attorney Patricia Barrett said.

No one else was injured. Klang, 49, was shot in the head, chest and leg. authorities said. He died hours later at a hospital in Madison. An autopsy was scheduled for Saturday. Sheriff Randy Stammen praised Klang's swift action. "The heroics of the people involved in this can't be understated," he said.

School officials said Klang had given Hainstock a disciplinary notice Thursday for bringing tobacco to school, and the student faced a likely in-school suspension, the complaint said.

Hainstock told investigators a group of kids had called him names and rubbed up against him, and he felt teachers and the principal would not do anything about it, according to the complaint.

It also said Hainstock had told a friend a few days earlier that Klang would not "make it through homecoming," referring to festivities planned for the school's homecoming weekend.

After the shooting, Weston's football game, dance and parade were canceled or postponed, and crisis counselors were brought in for students.

Resident Laurie Rhea, 42, said Klang spent last weekend at a gas station washing cars for a homecoming

We don't have to like shoes to love them

At the instant I sit down to write this, I have two pairs of boots, still in their shipping boxes, in the backseat of my car.

I ordered one pair three weeks ago; the other a week after that. They are, in actuality, the same exact boots, except one pair is distressed green leather, the other, tan. Thing is, I can't decide whether or not I even like the darn things.

Which is precisely why they remain in my Rav, unworn, still stuffed with that tissue paper they pack in there to keep the shoes looking perky. And every day I look at them and tell myself, "I'll ship them back tomorrow."

So why, you might ask, haven't I done it yet? Especially since they were expensive and I am clearly not all that crazy about them in the first place. Well, because. What if I like them eventually?

It's a common fear we women have — that the second you return something, you will discover that you cannot, in fact, live without it. This is particularly true of footwear.

See, we girls love our shoes. Even when we don't really like them. So much so that a recent survey by SmartBargains.com found that some chicks, 22 percent to be exact, would choose shoes over sex.

Now, I can't say most women I know would subscribe to that. I suppose it would depend on the shoe. (Just kidding — sort of.)

Some people say that one's eyes are the window to her soul. Not true. It is, most definitely, her feet. Or, more specifically, what she wears on them. Think that sounds silly? The same survey showed that 57 percent of women judge other women by their shoes. So there.

More statistics: Nine percent of all women have lied to their partners about the cost of their shoes (that's because most guys think 20 bucks is pricey. Tell them 200 and they'll suffer heart trauma). And 56 percent said they have between 10-30 pairs of shoes currently in their closets.

Some people believe that Carrie Bradshaw is responsible for this madness. But I don't agree. I happen to know many women who were shoe addicts long before "Sex and the City" ever hit the airwayes.

And the reason for this obsession is simple: Shoe-shopping does not require getting undressed in a tiny room with harsh lighting and a funhouse mirror. Clothes-shopping does. Plus, when you've gained weight, you wear the same size shoes as when you were skinny, so even if you feel like a manatee, you can still ask for something in a 6.

My husband, no surprise, fails to get it. Whenever I even utter the word "shoe" — God forbid suggest that I am in need of some — he loses it. "What about all those shoes you have already?" he cries. "You hardly even wear half of those!" To which I calmly reply, "I can name at least one time for every single pair."

At this, he will give me an exasperated look and move on to another topic (my "I have nothing to wear" comment perhaps).

Because he is a man, I excuse his lack of understanding. After all, he has only three pairs of shoes — the shoes he wears golfing, the shoes he wore for our wedding and the $24.95 black suede sneakery-type things that he wears whenever he is not golfing or getting married.

I am not sure whether he has consciously chosen not to comment on the boxes in my car, or whether he has just simply gotten so used to the constant flow of shipments from Zappos to our house that he fails to notice them any longer. But I do know this: He would think those boots are ugly and would tell me to send them back.

And, in this case at least, he would probably be right. So I'm going to return them. Definitely. Tomorrow.

Bad taste, big laughs and lots of heart

BY FRAZIER MOORE

Associated Press

NEW YORK — One reason "South Park" is so good is the united front, the shared vision, of cocreators Matt Stone and Trey Parker.

"Me and Matt love to argue," said Parker, "but in general our sense of humor is pretty much alike."

"We never have that problem where I want something one way and he wants it another," Stone said. "It never happens, and, when it does, we usually realize there was a flaw in the idea in the first place."

So it's them against the crazy world when "South Park" begins a 10th season at 10 p.m. Wednesday on Comedy Central, fresh on the heels of winning a prestigious Peabody Award. The first of seven new episodes will premiere as Stone and Parker rush in (as they have so many times before) where no one else would think to tread.

As ever, their surrogates in this enterprise are Stan, Kyle, Kenny and Cartman, four bratty, perpetually bundled-up youngsters in an unhinged Colorado cartoon town.

But this past year South Park has been a particularly outrageous place, stirring up more mischief than usual.

The scathing two-part "Cartoon Wars" last spring ripped Comedy Central for timidity in not airing an image of the Islamic prophet Muhammad, even as the show displayed Jesus Christ defecating on President Bush and the American flag.

Another headlines-generating episode, "Trapped in the Closet," may or may not have riled mighty Hollywood star and Scientologist Tom Cruise for its mocking treatment of Scientology (and him) — so much so that Cruise may or may not have pressed Comedy Central never to air it again. (Last March, the network denied accusations by Stone and Parker of having yanked the episode. It has since been repeated, most recently this week.)

From the start of "South Park" in August 1997, the catchas-catch-can crudeness of the series, where nothing was sacred or apologized for, was celebrated as its signature. But to the surprise of Stone and Parker, "South Park" seemed to have potential to be even more than that.

"Instead of being crappy," Stone said, "we decided we better figure out how to actually make it good."

"What we're always looking for is weird social issues and weird connections to make," Parker said. Lucky for them, there's no shortage of material.

Just consider how freckles and red hair provided them a way of addressing racial strife as Cartman rallied fellow "Ginger" kids to strike back against their blond and brunette oppressors.

Creatures from the year 4035 flooding into South Park through a time portal served as a pointedly absurd way of looking at the dicey issue of illegal immigration.

Reflecting the series' startling timeliness (each episode is created from scratch and aired within a week), "South Park" last October framed the failure of government agencies to respond to Hurricane Katrina in terms of a beaver dam that broke and flooded a nearby town, amid much finger-pointing but nobody helping.

And then there was the episode in March 2005 that seized upon the highly charged issue of a patient's right to die, even as Terry Schiavo lay comatose, a political and media circus raging around her.

What drives Stone and Parker to mine laughs and truth-telling from places that good sense, and certainly good taste, would declare off-limits?

"We're the guys who, if someone says you really shouldn't do an episode making fun of Scientologists, we say, 'Whatever,' " Parker explained. "Someone says, "They might come try to burn your house down,' we say, 'We'll just get another one.'"

But their comedic defiance is tempered by another quality that's seldom acknowledged. While "South Park" is often loud and lewd, it has an underlying sweetness.

"We try to never be cynical," Stone said. "I think we're really optimistic, happy people, and we want the show to have an optimistic message."

"I think one of the reasons this show has survived is that it has a big heart at its center," Parker said. "Other cartoon shows have people crap on each other and make racist jokes. But I don't think people tune in for that. I just don't think a show lasts for 10 years without a heart."

Heart, and some semblance of balance. "You can take any issue, no matter what side you're on, and make fun of the far extremes,"

AP Pho

Stone said. "So much of 'South Park' is a group on this side and a group on that side, all screaming at each other. And the boys in the middle are going, 'What are you all doing this for?""

However hilariously scandalous "South Park" may be, the message in the end is (could it really be?) wholesome and uplifting. As Kyle squawked to a network president in "Cartoon Wars": "Do the right thing!"

That's the Gospel of Matt and Trey ... out of the foul mouths of babes

Jon Heder aims to build dynamite career after indie hit

BY DAVID GERMAIN

is not uber-geek Napoleon Dynamite. He does relate to the triumph-over-your-own-inner-loser tenacity for which Napoleon stands, though.

Heder so far has stuck closely to that theme in the handful of characters he's played since becoming an icon for outsiders with the title role in the low-budget sensation "Napoleon Dynamite." His latest: "School for Scoundrels," with Heder as Roger, a pathetically meek parking meter man summoning the fortitude to battle a con man (Billy Bob Thornton) who teaches a guerrilla course in confidence building for nerds.

Though he does not share Napoleon's outrageously frizzy hair or Roger the meter man's submissive demeanor, Heder empathizes with such fringe characters.

"Irelate to most of the characters I play, because I do feel like an outsider," Heder said in an interview with The Associated Press, noting that growing up a Mormon who has an identical twin brother automatically set him apart. "And I wasn't into sports like all my friends were. I was into art and drawing and making movies. On top of that, I liked all the traditional geeky stuff. I was into 'Star Trek' and 'Star Wars.'

"Coming to Hollywood, I definitely feel like an outsider. I know at some point I would like to take on more dramatic roles. OK, here's a character I don't know or relate with at all. Here's this person doing something different from what I know."

Heder, 28, is one of the great outsider success stories in modern Hollywood. An unknown less than three years ago, Heder trudged to the ski-resort town of Park City, Utah, in January 2004 for the premiere of "Napoleon Dynamite," directed by his Brigham Young University film school classmate Jared Hess. Amid bleak, sober dramas about adultery, drug abuse and pedophilia, "Napoleon Dynamite" was a blast of sweet, giddy fun, a tale of misfits finding kinship and acceptance. Heder's Napoleon was a prince among geeks with his breathy, exasperated exclamations of "Gosh!" and quirky dialogue such as "Tina, you fat lard, come get some dinner" and "I caught you a delicious bass."

By summer 2004, fans were quoting those and other lines as "Napoleon Dynamite" became an independent-film sensation.

Along with Thornton in "School for Scoundrels," Heder's upcoming co-stars include Will Ferrell in "Blades of Glory," the two playing rival ice skaters who team up as the first competitive men's pair, and Diane Keaton in "Mama's Boy," in which he plays a slacker whose cozy home life is threatened by his mother's new romance.

His co-stars say Heder's no fraud. Though a newcomer with little training or experience, Heder already has the goods to make it in Hollywood, Ferrell said.

"He just kind of has everything," Ferrell said. "He has this persona that comes through that's extremely likable, and it's really funny the different ways he observes the world through his characters."

"School for Scoundrels" director Todd Phillips, who adapted the movie from a 1960 British comedy, said the story hinged on the chemistry, or antichemistry, between the characters. Once Thornton signed on, Phillips went searching for his "180-degree opposite." Heder and his twin brother grew up the middle children of a family of six siblings, the two developing an early interest in drawing, film and animation. At Brigham Young, Hess cast Heder in the lead of a short film, a character who became the prototype for Napoleon Dynamite.

Animation remains a passion for Heder, who was among the voice cast for "Monster House" and the upcoming cartoon flick "Surf's Up." Heder and his brothers have formed a production company, and he said he someday hopes to direct an animated feature.

With Heder and his wife expecting their first child next spring, the actor is mindful of the types of characters he's willing to play. He's already said no to some scripts because the content or language conflicted with his upbringing.

While he hopes to branch out to more dramatic parts, Heder said he's comfortable specializing in upbeat stories such as "Napoleon Dynamite," where an unlikely hero makes good.

"That's what protagonists do. They work hard, they have a conflict, they overcome the obstacles," Heder said. "They get to the climax and they win. Or they lose. Just as long as something is gained, a lesson is learned. I do like those. The more quiet victories are always great. In 'Napoleon,' that was very much a quiet victory, you know? He learned something, and he gained a little something. ...

"I don't ever see me doing a really dramatic role in a feature that's, like, really depressing. I love those kinds of movies sometimes, but still, being brought up the way I was, I have no problem teaching those kinds of principles in films."

Mom worries she doesn't match up

WHAT KIND OF mother am I?

First day of dance. Two dozen little girls in leotards. Almost as many mommies and daddies with cameras Cameras? On the first day of class?

"Cameras are for the recital," I thought.

Well, I thought wrong. I spend the first half of class comparing myself to the other mommies in the room and my child to their children.

Is her leotard like the others? Is she paying attention? Is she graceful or lumbering? If she hangs back, I scold myself for not socializing her with other children more in the first three years of her life.

I spend the second half of class berating myself for being a bad mother, regretting the fact that there'll be no "first day of dance" page in the scrapbook. And wondering what other milestones I'm going to mess up in the next 15 years: "Just watch, you'll be out of film on prom night. You've already misplaced the curls from her first haircut. Are you ever gonna finish her baby book? Can you remember all her firsts?'

"Whoa whoa whoa," I can imagine Janet Penley saying.

"Too often we focus on our shortcomings rather than our strengths, our mistakes rather than our successes," the author writes on her Web site, motherstyles.com. "Good mothers come in many styles. No mother is perfect. Every mother is human with strengths but also limitations, needs and vulnerabilities. Kids don't need perfect mothers; they need human mothers because they're human, too."

Penley's book "MotherStyles" identifies 16 types of mothers, based on whether they see themselves as extrovert vs. introvert, thinker vs. feeler, sensing vs. intuitive and judger vs. perceiver.

A quiz on motherstyles.com determined my personality type is introverted-sensing-thinkingjudging, which adds up to "The

for work, home, family. Her efforts are largely focused on providing her children with order and routine. She wants them to be able to count on her and the structure she provides. [She] is organized, industrious and detail-oriented. [She] also sets a good example and provides her children with practical guidance on being a productive, responsible individual. Still, with all her seriousness, she may delight family members with her quick wit and observations about the details of life." (Hey, I'm quoting here. This is what the Web site quiz told me.) So much psychobabble?

Maybe, but it's comforting if not spot-on. Penley, mother of two, has a bachelor's in psychology and an MBA. She bases her theories on 18 years of interviewing and observing mothers. "MotherStyles" uses a system of personality types developed by Carl Jung and Katharine Briggs and Isabel Briggs Myers.

Here's a sampling of the advice Penley offers moms like me:

- An introverted mother can get help to stimulate an extroverted child, be it a play group or grandma.
- For the sensing mom, "taking care of me" means feeding her senses with rich experiences. Too much dullness and sameness in the things around her can make her wilt. ■ A thinking mom should
- remember to validate the competence of her children. She should balance constructive criticism and suggestions for improvement with a healthy dose of appreciation and praise for what the children do accomplish on their own.
- If a judging mother becomes frustrated when she can't control what her children do, she could focus on organizing and closing out projects that she does control.

Answer four questions on motherstyles.com, to get a picture of what kind of mother you are.

Plugged-in preschoolers

Being computer savvy has become necessary for kids

BY JOHN REINAN McClatchy Newspapers

MINNEAPOLIS — For our nation's youngest learners, computers are as familiar as the "Cat in the Hat.

Two-thirds of all preschoolers and 80 percent of kindergartners now use computers, according to a study released this month by the U.S. Department of Education.

In a high-tech world, many parents and educators believe, there's value in getting children in front of computers, even those too young to read or type.

This is an essential modern skill," said Lisa Peralta of Minneapolis. Her sons, 2-year-old Emileo and 4-year-old Mateo, aren't allowed to watch TV. but they do visit Thomas & Friends and other children's Web sites.

ters, 3-year-old Rachel and 5year-old Sarah. When Sarah started kindergarten this fall, the teacher told the children to find the thing in the classroom that interested them the most.

Sarah pointed to the computer. "As long as you're monitoring and you know how much time they're spending, it's not a problem," Hank said. "If I didn't monitor her, she'd never get outside."

That's exactly what concerns some educators, who fear that computers will simply become this generation's electronic baby sitter.

"The computer has become part of the culture now, and people are no more thoughtful about kids being in front of computers than they are about sitting in front of televisions," said Lowell Monke, an associate professor of education at Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio.

Creating data-entry droids? Research shows that computer use might help promote cognitive development, according to the Department of Education study. Computer use also is linked to higher levels of education and standards of living, the report says, and computers can help motivate young students to do their schoolwork.

But to critics, machines are no substitute for teaching.

"Everyone is gung-ho to give kids computers, but you see more improvement with one-on-one tutoring," said Lucy Payne, an associate professor of teacher education at the University of St.

Thomas. "If we took the money we're dumping into technology and spent it on people who can interact with children, we'd be better off." Payne isn't anticomputer; her own 4-year-old daughter plays a computer phonics game featuring Clifford the Big Red Dog. But it's always done with a parent, Payne said, and there's always discussion during and after the game.

Unless computer use by young children is coupled with adult interaction, Payne said, the machines yield few benefits in creative thinking and problemsolving skills.

'l'm afraid if we keep pushing this technology, we're going to have a whole bunch of people who can do data entry, but nobody who can solve a problem," she said.

At Wood Park Montessori in Burnsville, Minn., students are offered an optional weekly class in computers. About one-fourth of the school's 70 preschoolers take it, said school director Priyanthi Sundaram.

"I think it's a necessary skill for the students," Sundaram said. "The kids pick it up so fast. And whether it's music or computers, it's best if you start at a young age."

Your life is your legacy

One of the best gifts you can give your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren is the gift of your life story. It will provide context for their lives and be a source of joy and practical information.

Remember: Details and information are more important than your writing style. Describe the personalities of the important people in your life. Describe all the smells, sights, sounds and tastes you can recall. Use plain language.

Use photos to trigger memories. Talk with family members and friends to help you remember significant events.

Use index cards to organize memories. Write each memory on its own card. Arrange the cards in chronological order and refer to them as you write.

William Fletcher, author of "Recording Your Family History," suggests organizing your autobiography by decades or groupings of years (kindergarten, elementary school, high school, college, early adulthood, middle adulthood, retirement).

Don't spend a lot of time describing world events or popular culture. Those are easy to research elsewhere. Instead, describe your reactions to those events. Try to capture the relationships you have with family members, friends, neighbors, teachers and mentors. How did these relationships influence your life? What to cover when writing ■ Major life events — joyous

- and sad including responses to those events. ■ Date and place of your birth

Missionary's zeal annoying, not effective

Q: Recently, my sister and I were jogging in the park when we slowed to a walk to catch our breath. That's when we noticed several people in what looked like military uniforms, playing horns and singing weird songs. This seemed odd, but OK. The First Amendment does guarantee freedom of speech. However, as we came by, one of the men handed us a pamphlet of the group's religious dogma and even tried to jog with us to try to convert us. We were both annoyed and upset. We both felt that this man's method of ministering was really just a way to manipulate and control others. We both felt he ought to have realized he was being manipulative by waiting for opportunistic situations to take advantage of people in the name of the Lord. Why else would he harass two young women, tired from their physical exertion, and try to get them to listen to his beliefs? Such cult-like missionaries think people's unwillingness to engage them is part of the challenge of spreading the word. They also seem to have an answer for every argument and become more aggressive and ambitious

HARTMAN when you disagree with them. In the name of God, they disrespect your wishes. Where is the line between a political/religious platform and harassment? Where is park security when you need them? These missionaries have simply found another place to harass people, and it seems as if they've decided to forsake the privacy and respect of others in the name of their Lord. Apparently, common sense is irrelevant these days. I'd appreciate some feedback from you on the initial issue and advice on how to handle such situations in the future. — J., via e-mail

A: Thankfully, we live in a culture of freedom. Your experience reminds us of the costs, inconvenience and glory of free speech. Yes, we agree that you should have been allowed to jog in peace. We agree that both good manners and good theology ought to have taught that missionary from whatever cult-like group was meeting in the park to recognize that you and your sister were not running to meet him, but were running to run. However, missionaries have rights, too. They believe that their message is essential for others' salvation. They want your soul (and your cash) and America gives them the right to make their pitch for both. We have the same gripe about commercials in movie theaters and people handing out flyers on the corner, which recipients simply throw in the street after two or three steps. But America is one big marketplace, assuring hucksters and helpers equal rights. You have rights, too. You and your sister could have just resumed your jogging and run past the missionaries, or you could have responded that you only follow prophets who don't have body odor. When well-intentioned but intrusive missionaries invade Marc's private space, he usually asks them, "Do you agree that Jesus was Jewish?" When they answer, yes, he says, "Well, if it was good enough for Jesus, it's good enough for me." Try that next time, or just run faster!

STEVE DALE MY PET WORLD

Puppy should do fine going cross-country

Q: My husband and I have a 5-month-old pup who's driven in the car with us up to four hours. The pup is good on a leash. Do you think it's practical to take our dog on a trip to California with us? We love him dearly and he's very attached to us. What should we do about food on the way? What should we do about eating out in California? How can I find pet-friendly accommodations? — N.C., Addison, Mich.

A: I vote to take your pup along. "Do understand you'll also have to take your senses of humor on this trip," adds Arden Moore, a real pro at traveling with dogs, and a contributor to Fido Friendly magazine and fido friendly.com. If you subscribe to the magazine, you'll receive lots of free pet perks and discounts. "Kind of like a AAA for dogs," explains Moore, of Oceanside,

These days, you can stay anywhere with your pooch (as long as he's really housetrained and isn't a nuisance barker) from the Peninsula Hotel in Beverly Hills to any Motel 6. Lots of Web sites offer lists of pet-friendly accommodations, including petswelcome.com and dogster.com/travel/. Always get in writing that your pet will be welcome.

On the road, Moore said dogs are safest using a harness or safety seat specifically made for dogs (available online and at pet stores), a toy with a treat stuffed inside to keep the pet busy while vou drive, vaccine records and a spare leash. With a pup your age, you really need to stop every three to four hours.

As for eating on your way to the West Coast, Moore said you can stop at some drive-thrus, but would soon worry about your cholesterol. "Buy at least a few fresh lunches, and have a picnic at a roadside stop," she

Moore said your trip might lose some spontaneity, as a tradeoff to planning your destination cities in advance. Call the local chamber of commerce or animal shelter to learn about pet friendly parks or restaurants. Once in California, Moore said most restaurants with outdoor cafes welcome well-behaved dogs. Once your pup grows into a good citizen traveling companion, you'll be able to take him pretty much anywhere dogs are allowed

Q: Our cat, Buster, is snoring. Or my husband is snoring: I can't tell which it is. If it is the cat, is that normal? — S.H., San Diego, Calif.

A: "Just as some people snore, so do some cats," said feline veterinarian Dr. Elizabeth Hodgkins, of Yorba Linda, Calif. If the cat's snoring is something new, see your vet to make certain there's no obstruction in its pharynx or nasal passage, Hodgkins advised. Sometimes, obese cats are more likely to snore; taking off a few pounds can make a silent sleeper. If it turns out your husband is making all the noise, have him see a doctor.

Ornish Program offers healthier path for devotees

FOR MORE information on WVU's Dean Ornish Program for Reversing Heart Disease, or to sign up, see hsc.wvu.edu/wellness/ornish, or call 293-2520.

BY KIM ORIOLE For The Dominion Post

Steve Bevins didn't like the alternative.

"It's called death," the 53-yearold Bruceton Mills man said.

So he jumped into a specialized diet and exercise plan called the Dean Ornish Program for Reversing Heart Disease under the WVU Hospitals' Wellness Program.

The people who run the program, and those who are devoted to following it, say it's a powerful tool to help people take control of their health and their lives.

But it's not easy.

For many people, it's a radical change in the way they live. They must give up all meat and cheese.

They must exercise. And they must make time every day to do yoga and other relaxation techniques.

Bevins, who has been an Ornish devotee for 15 months, said the dietary changes were the toughest for him.

"But it's changed the way I feel physically and mentally," he said. "My life has come back to me. It is a good thing for people to live healthier, live more

Before Ornish, Bevins was exhausted. He came home from work and slept away most evenings.

Now, he plans to get a master's degree at Fairmont State University.

His weight dropped from about 195 to 165, and his cholesterol fell from 276 to 151.

It's a common refrain among people who fully adopt the Ornish program.

They're converts, exhorting the advantages of a new life to anyone who will listen.

People like Bevins who see a dramatic turnaround in their health almost always stick strictly to the plan.

But others may adopt parts of the plan or "cheat" a little by adding occasional meat to their diet, not going to the weekly support sessions, or not following the relaxation techniques.

The Ornish plan is somewhat complicated — what you can and cannot eat — and time consuming — fitting in exercise and relaxation every day.

But it is not expensive, and program research shows it really does work. It can not only stop, but reverse, the damage done to heart and arteries, Ornish research shows.

The program is aimed at people with very serious heart troubles, according to Dave Harshbarger, wellness program manager for the WVU Health Sciences Campus.

"People with serious medical problems tend to do the best because they have the most to gain," he said. "You may be walking around 20, 30 or 40 percent blocked, and be perfectly healthy, but problems are in your future.'

Most people come to Ornish because they have had a heart attack, stroke or other chronic problems, and they're ready to really help themselves.

Ornish himself is a clinical professor of medicine at the University of California, San Francisco, and has done clinical research for 25 years that shows that comprehensive lifestyle changes may begin to reverse even severe coronary heart disease without drugs or surgery.

Ornish wrote in an article

sion. Regular exercise is one component of WVU's Dean Ornish Program.

Group member Steve Bevins runs in place during the workout session.

changing has never worked very well, so his program makes people look and feel better, and that becomes their motivation.

No one just wants to live longer, they want to live better, he wrote.

The Ornish team at WVU is six people — dietician, nurse case manager, medical director, stress management specialist, group support facilitator, and exercise physiologist/program director.

They start a new group of patients every three months, and the program is intense. For 12 weeks, they meet every Tuesday and Thursday for four to six hours at a time, devoting eight to 12 hours a week to their "new"

Then they come back for another 12 to 24 weeks for two hours a week.

They learn about and practice their new diet, exercise and relaxation, and, perhaps most important, they get group support and encouragement.

They learn how to eat at restaurants without going off their diet and how to grocery shop to get the foods that are good for them.

They can keep participating after "graduation" in what Ornish followers call a selfdirected community, similar to a support group. The Morgantown community meets every Monday evening for three hours, and members help each other stick to the plan. Harshbarger said about 90 people have gone through the full Ornish program at WVU in four years, and all have improved their health.

He checks back in with participants every year for three years. "At three years, 75 percent of folks are still adhering to the program in some way," he said. "All of them are leading a much healthier lifestyle.' The WVU program also offers a six-week educational program for people who aren't as sick, but want to stop their slide toward heart disease, Harshbarger said. Several insurance companies cover participation in the Ornish program — Mountain State Blue and Highmark Cross, PEIA (Public Employees Insurance Agency) and WVU Hospitals Health Plan.

Medicare covered it as an experiment, and is now studying whether to continue it, Harshbarger said.

Or people can pay their own way through the $4,600 program.

The United Health Center in Clarksburg also has an Ornish program.

Program converts see medical turnarounds

BY KIM ORIOLE For The Dominion Post

Jeannie Lewis' medical turnaround is an amazing

She lost weight, lowered her blood pressure, and has been able to go off almost all of her medications.

Sharon Brinkman-Windle had a similarly astounding turnaround when a blocked artery to her heart cleared on its own.

These two Morgantown women are dramatic illustrations of the work of the Dean Ornish Program for Reversing Heart Disease at WVU Hospitals' Wellness Program.

Both women went through the intensive, 24-week program of diet, exercise, relaxation and group support, and both are continuing to follow the four-part Ornish program on their own with the help of weekly support meetings.

Lewis, 57, was a healthy woman who hiked all over America after she retired about 10 years ago.

Then she became sickly, gained weight, and started having heart and other medical troubles.

She got colon cancer in 1999, had two mini-strokes, and was taking 75 mg of high blood pressure medicine and 40 mg of cholesterol medicine every day.

Then, in September 2005, she started the Ornish pro-"I'm 57, but I feel better than

I have in years," Lewis said. "I'm so delighted with my results; I'd shout it from the

Ornish ways

The four Ornish components are: ■ A very low-fat vegetarian diet (less than 10 percent of calories from fat). ■ An improved exercise plan, including aerobic and strength training and

■ Relaxation practices to help cope with and reduce stress.

■ Group support to help participants deal with emotional problems and rooftops if I could."

Today, her blood pressure is normal without medicine, she weighs 144 pounds instead of 177, and she pays $25 a month for her one prescription instead of more than $100 she used to pay for four.

"It's been a wonderful experience for me. I am amazed." Her husband, Jim Lewis, has lost 35 pounds just by eating Ornish with her, even though he doesn't do the other aspects of the program.

Jim eats meat when they dine out, but said the Ornish meals at home "are fine. I don't find it too big an inconvenience here at the house at all. They eat tasty things."

Lewis was initially motivated to continue by fear — fear

Parents, teachers learn about 4-H

In this community, 4-H has as much name recognition as Coca Cola. But while most people can describe a Coke product, far fewer really know what 4-H is. Those who do — teachers, parents, 4-H alumni – sing 4-H's praises. October, the kickoff of the new 4-H year, is a great time for parents and teachers to discover the real 4-H.

4-H members will tell you that 4-H means fun and friends. 4-H supporters look around and look back. Then they tell you that 4-H means belonging to a group that cares about you, learning to master a variety of life skills, growing in independence and valuing service.

Working with parents, teachers and community volunteers, 4-H builds successful kids who grow into successful adults.

In 4-H, the focus is on helping young people develop leadership, citizenship and life skills. 4-H engages youths ages 9-21 in handson, experiential learning projects that cover almost any area of interest. Young people like 4-H because they can choose projects and activities that meet their interests and needs. When do cows enter the picture? When you want them to. Or not at all. Cows, pets and other animals are just one route to the ultimate destination: successful people.

To paraphrase one WVU visionary: 4-H success is not measured by the growth of the animals. Success is measured by the growth of the 4-H members as they experience the responsibility of working with their animals.

The key "I did it!" experiences are not only packaged in animal proiects. They come in a variety of topics - such as bicycles, child development, computers, entrepreneurship, photography, rocketry, theater and sport fishing. 4-H projects are developed by WVU Extension Service faculty and faculty at land-grant universities throughout the United States. 4-H members connect with new and potential friends through many additional educational opportunities, including community clubs, overnight camping, day camping, service projects, and state and national events. Though youths can join 4-H any time during the year, October traditionally kicks off the new 4-H year. The year begins with a celebration of National 4-H Week, observed today through Saturday. WVU welcomes 4-H members to reconnect with 4-H while inviting prospective 4-H members and their families to discover 4-H's benefits.

Morgantown Soroptimists seek award applicants

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Women who serve as the primary wage earners for their families and seek financial assistance to go back to school can obtain applications for the Women's Opportunity Awards, Soroptimist International of Morgantown's major service project. Applications may be received by contacting Shirley Eagan at 594-2560. Completed applications must be returned to Soroptimist International of Morgantown by Dec. 15.

Since 1972, the Soroptimist

Women's Opportunity Awards program has provided women who serve as the primary wage earners for their families with the financial resources to offset costs associated with their efforts to attain higher education or additional skills and training. The award can be used for tuition, books, childcare, carfare or any other education-related expense. The Morgantown club will provide a $300 cash grant to its award recipient, who will then advance to the Soroptimist

South Atlantic Region level, where one recipient will receive $5,000. The program culminates with three finalist $10,000 awards.

Soroptimist International of Morgantown is a volunteer service organization for business and professional women dedicated to improving the lives of women and girls, in local communities and throughout the world. Founded in 1955, the Morgantown club is part of Soroptimist International of the Americas. Morgantown members join with almost 100,000 soroptimists in about 120 countries and territories to contribute time and financial support to communitybased projects benefiting women. In addition to participating in the Women's Opportunity Awards program, Soroptimist International of Morgantown helps those less fortunate through a variety of service projects.

Modern Life

MALINDA REINKE NICK OF

Fall into memories of home

Everyone knows that one lonely day author Thomas Wolfe told the vagabonds of the world that, try as they may, they can't go home again.

But he must have forgotten, for a moment, about fall. Because on another day, maybe on an autumn afternoon bursting with the fiery season around him, he wrote: "All things on earth point home in old October; sailors to sea, travelers to walls and fences, hunters to field and hollow and the long voice of the hounds, the lover to the love he has forsaken."

Mr. Wolfe must have loved October.

I love all the cliches — the nip in the air, the crisp clear mornings, the cerulean skies. I love the crunchy brown rugs of cottonwood and oak leaves. I love the asters and the goldenrod, the brilliant days and the spooky nights.

Autumn, to us readers, is cinnamon cider, a book and a comforter. To sports fans, it's football (and the boys of October). To sentimental fools, it's a ratty old sweatshirt that's seen too many falls. And one regretful dawn, alas, it's the first glittery frost on the tired green grass of summer.

Ever notice how easy it is to travel in October?

I go home every year. A whoosh of leaves above the sidewalk and suddenly I'm 7, romping in the front yard of a skinny little duplex in my old hometown. My brothers are there, too. Our arms are flung, our eyes are closed and we're falling, falling, falling into a spongy mountain of crackling maple leaves.

An October Sunday, and I'm 9. My dad piles us into the car again — the whole family, the five of us — and we're off for adventure on the winding back roads of rural South Jersey. Up a hill and down another. The sun blazes upon the red and gold and orange of the trees until inevitably, as always, we pass the yellow field.

"Oh-h-h-h-h—" Dad croons, grinning, with a flirty glance at my mother. "When the goldenrod is blooming and the corn is turning brown ..." Mom smiles and, as I lean my face toward the open window, my ponytail whips the back of my neck with a sting I will feel forever.

"Go! Go! Go! Go! Go!" It's a glorious October and the stadium roars with "We're number one!" I'm roaring, too. I'm on my feet and shouting till it hurts. I'm 19. I'm on my own. And somehow I know that never again will I feel this free. This ready. This sure of my life. October once more. Mom and I sit by the garden out back. I'm a visitor. We sip hot coffee and talk about our day. She heard from the boys. I have a project at work. Overhead, a noisy flock of geese honk by.

We loved those geese. I still hear them.

And so once in a while I have to wonder: On a perfect autumn night, under a sky immense with stars --- if the breeze was fragrant and the sounds were soft — might Mr. Wolfe perhaps have left us wanderers a little wiggle room? "You can't go home again," might he have written, "except for a narrow window of time each October."

'Luxury salespeople' latest addition to the easy life

BY KI-MIN SUNG

The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Interior designer Michelle Nussbaumer fields a barrage of phone calls for orders and advice and directs furniture past fragile valuables at her store, Ceylon et Cie, in the fashion district. She needs to wrap up by 2:30 p.m. so she can prepare for her ninth-grader's birthday party.

Nussbaumer moves in wealthy, well-coiffed circles. She has outfitted the showcase penthouse bedroom at Trump Park Avenue luxury condominiums in New York City and is working on a historic Addison Mizner house in West Palm

Part of exuding great taste in interior design is wearing superior clothing. But squeezing in time for fashion research is a challenge for this mother of four who works all over the

That's where Robin Wilkes steps in.

Wilkes is a high-level sales associate for Neiman Marcus who commands an institutional memory of fashion. She can come up with designers and fashion lines as quickly as a Google search. Most important, she knows her clients' tastes and lifestyles and dresses them accordingly.

That level of understanding is what distinguishes a luxury salesperson such as Wilkes from an hourly sales associ-

Luxury salespeople also may be called selling specialists, personal shoppers or stylists. Whatever the name, they act as advisers and treasure hunters to busy professionals who are seen and photographed — people who are projecting an image that can enhance their portfolios and invitations to social events. Their wardrobe can give them an edge.

So for customers such as Nussbaumer, experts such as Wilkes aren't a luxury, they are essential.

"In any industry that's supposedly based upon style and a sense of fashion and creativity, you can't afford to be caught with your guard down," said Marshal Cohen, chief analyst at the NPD Group and author of "Why Customers Do What They Do" (McGraw-Hill, $24.95).

"If I'm constantly complimented wearing something that was brought to me by my stylist, you better darn believe I'm running back to them the next time I have a need," said Cohen, a former personal shopper. "In the stylist world, they're only as good as the last compliment given to their

In return, top salespeople, known as "big books" in the trade, can command six-figure salaries. Those who sell $1 million to $2 million of merchandise per year can earn $70,000 to $250,000, according to the fashion industry publication Women's Wear Daily, and some in the industry earn up to $500,000 per year.

Stores recruit big books because, when they move, customers follow. The entry of luxury retailer Barneys,, has created another high-profile destination for big books such as Suzanne Warner.

After developing Stanley Korshak's men's department over 18 years, she's moved to Barneys, where she will manage the men's and women's personal shopping office. "When somebody bigger comes into town, it just raises the bar for everybody to have higher standards and achieve better customer service," Warner said.

Cohen says such people, and their clients, are coveted. "They're much like a key player on a sports team. They're the ones that are bringing the following of a pretty loyal and Wilkes has a customer base that extends over two decades, starting with a Jil Sander boutique she co-owned in the 1980s. Nussbaumer met her there in 1998 and followed her to Neiman Marcus downtown in 2001 before Wilkes was recruited by Cartier in 2005. Wilkes returned to Neiman Marcus in Dallas in August.

Her touch is found at Ceylon et Cie, from the unopened wardrobe that hangs behind Nussbaumer's desk to the photographs of Nussbaumer from national publications that grace the wall. Her outfit reflects Wilkes' selection: a dramatic orange Hermes scarf draped around her collar and Prada sandals that match her black spaghetti-strap dress

"She knows what I have in my closet better than I do." said Nussbaumer, who has been working with Wilkes for nearly a decade. "As an interior designer, it's important for me to be dressed the part. A lot of times, I'm working, and I have four children. I don't have time to go out and go see all the different shows and lines. It's a lot of work.'

Neiman Marcus would not allow Wilkes to discuss her job

"I'm not very interested in sharing what they do well publicly," said Neiman spokesperson Ginger Reeder. "There's no reason for giving away the secret sauce.'

What they do

Sales specialists say that selecting a wardrobe for a client isn't just about knowing what's hot. Their job is to enhance the client's style, not to turn him or her into a carbon copy of Mary Kate Olsen or Usher, unless that's requested.

They go to great lengths to provide customer service. The best in Dallas will go to homes to rearrange closets and help clients match outfits in a new way. They come armed with new styles and haul away clothes that are outdated or need

And some clients have special needs. When she worked at Stanley Korshak, Warner took digital photographs of outfit arrangements and numbered them to help clients who are genetically colorblind.

"It's really about the ultimate customer service,"

In the stores, luxury salespeople set aside clothes from the sales floor for favored clients and provide advance

The salespeople keep information about purchases, send clients birthday presents and keep preapproved credit-card agreements on file that allow a client to make a purchase without signing a receipt. Transactions are closed with a hug instead of a signature.

Some luxury salespeople will fly to other cities to help clients, and some clients never set foot in a store. A lot of business is done over the phone and through the mail.

While working for Cartier, Wilkes called stores around the world until she tracked down a particular Prada jacket in New York and a skirt in London. Nussbaumer wore that jacket for an Elle Decor profile in this month's issue.

"These salespeople have tremendous roles, have very deep knowledge and understanding of the brands that they sell and the lifestyle of the store they wish to impart," said Dana Telsey, a luxury retail analyst in New York. "What makes these people special is that they develop relationships over time."

Carrie Mollohan is a big book at Forty Five Ten. On a recent Saturday morning, she gets a big hug from Jenny Kirtland, 33, musician and wife of record producer John

"I brought you a cookie!" Kirtland says, bubbling with excitement.

Within 10 minutes, Mollohan has nearly a dozen outfits arranged in the fitting room. The floor is lined with Moschino and Chloe shoes. Kirtland walked into the store wearing jeans and a white long-sleeved shirt. The clothes displayed are black and gray evening gowns, sweaters and platform

As Kirtland is being outfitted, Forty Five Ten coowner Brian Bolke pulls more clothes for her and fusses with the fit.

'Carrie knows what I like and probably what I wouldn't like," Kirtland said inside the fitting room. "So she can bring things in quickly, and I can try them on and skedaddle. It doesn't take all day.' In less than an hour, Kirtland wraps up by purchasing fall outfits and three pairs of shoes. She puts one dress on hold while she checks her social calendar. Kirtland is one of many women at Forty Five Ten who are being dressed for charity balls and parties in Dallas, including October's Two by Two for AIDS and Art gala and Decem-ber's Crystal Charity Ball. That same day, art collectors Cindy and Howard Rachofsky, who organize Two by Two, come in to Forty Five Ten, while a pharmaceutical executive tries on a dress for a celebrity party in New York. A bank vice president also picks out gowns. Mollohan's next customers are residential designer Julie Butler and Texas Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst. Mollohan and Butler talk about upcoming events, and another wardrobe is laid out. Mollohan directs Butler to additional pieces in the store.

As the women stroll past a $2,860 Yohji Yamamoto corset and an asymmetrical jacket by Martin Margiela, Dewhurst sits on a bench nearby. He's surrounded by Azzedine Alaia pumps and boots as he flips through "Robert Lee Morris: The Power of Jewelry" and sips iced tea. Dewhurst calls Mollohan a godsend for helping him select gifts for friends — something he says he's often at a loss to "I don't know any of my friends that haven't experienced the sensation of giving a gift that you picked out yourself and had this blank reaction from a woman, a pause, and then those infamous words: 'Oh ... thank you very much.'

Sales associates say their clients gravitate toward them because of similarities in personality and taste.

"She's so honest," Butler said of Mollohan. "Everything in this store is just gorgeous, and I would love to wear it all, but she tells me what I can and can't wear. I know I can trust her, which is great.'

Mollohan, who has worked at Forty Five Ten for nearly six years, says the toughest part of her job can be convincing clients to get rid of outdated or unnecessary clothes "A lot of times, there's stuff they forget that's in there,"

Mollohan said. She reorganizes closets about once a week, showing clients how to wear the old with the new. "By the time I'm done, they have half of a new closet where they just never thought of putting certain things together in a million years.' As exotic as it may sound to the average person, using big books involves more than spending a lot of money for great clothes and having someone else do the shopping. If you're independently wealthy, you can afford to spend the time to develop your own style, Cohen said.

"Part of the fun of being rich and idle is shopping. So you critical is when you're very busy and you do want someone to take the time to provide you with a sense of style.' For Nussbaumer, having Wilkes find the right wardrobe don't necessarily need the same resources to do that. What is provides time for other priorities. "I need to feel good and I need to feel confident when I go into meetings," Nussbaumer said. "Getting compliments is not what it's about. "The most important thing for me is that, during down time, I'd really rather be with my family," she said. "Shopping can be a full-time thing for people. So it's great to have other people figure it out."

WEDDINGS

Honest, cleaning can be manly

McClatchy-Tribune Newspapers

Dads, have you ever made the bed for your little person, only to be told, "That's not how Mommy does it"?

Your child probably didn't get that you made the bed in your special dad's way. That's why David Bowers wrote "Dad's Own Housekeeping Book" (Workman Publishing, 196 pages, $10.95). The chuckle-filled guide is packed with guy-to-guy advice on how to keep a home neat, tidy — and manly. As a stay-at-home dad of two sons, Bowers does a little more housekeeping than the average Joe. Bowers always did the cooking, and would help his wife with cleanup whenever he could. But as he took on more responsibility for the entire home, he couldn't find a resource that spoke to men about cleaning.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics in 2004, 33 percent of men do some kind of household chore every day. But Bowers says most don't know how to do them.

"So many men haven't been taught about housekeeping," he says in his lilting Irish accent. A native of Dublin, Ireland, Bowers lives in New York City.

He says that women take their knowledge of some housekeeping duties for granted, "like doing laundry with all the symbols." In the book, Bowers decodes the meanings of the little graphics that appear on some clothing tags.

Getting along with women is another reason Bowers thinks dads should learn to be good housekeepers.

"It makes the relationship better," he said. "Most women are happy just knowing that you are trying to help out.'

Q: What is the "dad's way" of housekeeping?

A: If the guy is looking after the house, he doesn't have to fold towels a certain way. Men and women have different approaches. That doesn't mean either is wrong. Guys are much more minimalist. That's something that has to be compromised.

Q: How much should dads clean? A: It varies. It should be something you should pick up as you feel comfy, and most women are happy to know that you're trying.

Q: Moms still do most of the housework. How do they get dads to do more?

A: Dads have to talk to their spouses, and Moms have to say, "You have to help me out." It has to be helpful pushing. And guys respond to praise. If there is animosity attached to housekeeping, it isn't going to help the relationship.

Terry and Trish Bolyard will to Orlando, Fla., in January.

They were married Oct. 2, 1976, at Sabra Methodist Church.

Norma Whipkey of Arthurdale, is a Terry, son of Carol Bolyard of Grafton and the late Raymond Bolchild, Peyton of Fairmont.

Associated Press PARIS — Maybe they should call it the "Mama Lisa."

Researchers studying 3-D images of the "Mona Lisa" say she was probably either pregnant or had just given birth when she sat for Leonardo da Vinci's 16th-century masterpiece. The clue was something she wore.

Scans turned up evidence of a fine, gauzy veil around Mona Lisa's shoulders — a garment women of the Italian Renaissance wore when they were expecting, a leading French museum researcher, Michel Menu, told The Associated Press in an interview recently.

As the painting aged, the veil darkened. The thick, dark varnish on the work made it hard even to know what color her dress is — it has been described as everything from black to brown to green. A piece of fabric draped over Mona Lisa's shoulder was sometimes interpreted as a shawl or a scarf.

But images obtained from infrared reflectography tell a different story. The veil — called a guarnello — is transparent, and it looks similar to a gauzy garment in Sandro Botticelli's "Portrait of a Lady," depicting a pregnant woman with her hand over her stomach.

Tradition holds that the "Mona Lisa" is a painting of Lisa Gherardini, wife of Florentine merchant Francesco del Giocondo, and that Leonardo started painting it in 1503. In France, the painting, on display at the Louvre Museum, is referred to as La Joconde

Mona Lisa

— the French version of her married name. The name Mona Lisa is the equivalent of "Madam Lisa."

The veil "would confirm art historians' hypothesis that Giocondo asked for a painting of his wife to celebrate the birth of his second son," said Menu, chief of the research department at the French Museums' Center for Research and Restoration, which has its offices in the Louvre. The scans also make clear that Mona Lisa does not have her hair down, as it appears. Most of her tresses are pinned back into a chignon and covered with a veil, Menu said. The analyses of hairstyle and clothes were made by Bruno Mottin, curator of the research department at the center. Various high-grade scans were taken over three sessions in October 2004, on days when the Louvre was closed, sometimes overnight. The scans have been collected in a book, "Mona Lisa: Inside the Painting," published this month by Harry N. Abrams, Inc. Menu and Mottin wrote the book with another leading French researcher, Jean-Pierre Mohen. Teams from the National Research Council of Canada analyzed the painting with three-dimensional digitization through laser scanner technology. The scans revealed depth resolution so detailed it was possible to see differences in the height around the paint surface cracks and in the thickness of the varnish.

"We know how the painting is painted with very thin layers," Mottin told reporters in Ottawa, Canada. "That's one of the things we couldn't see by the naked eye, and that Canadian technology brought us."

John Taylor of Canada's National Research Council said there were no signs of brush strokes. "That includes the very fine details of the panel Leonardo used as his canvas, but the painting is in relatively good shape. We didn't see any sign of paint lifting," Taylor said. "So for a 500-year-embroidery on the dress, the hair," he said. "This is the 'je ne sais quoi' of Leonardo. The genius. We don't know how he applied it." The data show warping in the poplar old painting it's very good news. And if they continue to keep it the way they have in an environmentcontrolled chamber, it could remain like that for a very long time." Canadian scientist Marc Rioux said the data would be studied for many years to come, providing more insights into Leonardo's painting.

'We've barely scratched the surface of the data available. Scientists now have access to a virtual copy. I would say this is the most important achievement of the project," said Rioux of Canada's National Research Council. "There will be a lot more information about that painting just because there are many more scientists looking at the data."

'What is amazing and paradoxical about that painting is that people think it's been analyzed but it's exactly the opposite," Rioux added. "This is the most inaccessible painting in the world. Why? Because it's 99.9 percent of the time in the Louvre for the public to view. The last time it was up for examination was 1952."

Mona Lisa's smile has for centuries inspired speculation. In the 1950s, Nat King Cole asked in a song lyric if she was smiling to "tempt a lover" or "to hide a broken heart?"

No scientific research will ever figure out exactly what Leonardo was trying to convey, or why exactly she was smiling.

New discoveries "don't take away the mystery," Menu said. "On the contrary, they merely add another layer to the meaning, which only makes things more interesting."

Zune marks Microsoft's entrance into crowded MP3 player market

BY ALLISON LINN Associated Press

SEATTLE — Microsoft Corp. has vowed to put considerable money and effort behind its bid to dethrone Apple Computer Inc.'s market-leading iPod, but it won't be using price as a weapon. Microsoft announced Thursday that it will charge $249.99 for its new Zune music player, about the same as Apple Computer Inc. charges for an iPod with the same storage capacity.

The Zune and its companion online music service will debut on Nov. 14 in the United States. The music service will let people buy individual songs for about 99 cents, the same amount Apple charges for songs from its iTunes Music Store. For Zune, Microsoft will use the same payment system as its Xbox Live online video game service, which lets people without credit cards buy prepaid cards at some retail stores. Microsoft also will offer a Zune Pass subscription service, which will let users listen to any of about 2 million songs for $14.99 per month.

RealNetworks Inc. charges the same monthly fee for its online music subscription service, Rhapsody to Go. Scott Erickson, senior director of product management for Zune, said Microsoft is hoping that people will use the subscription service to seek out music they might not have known about, while also buying some songs outright.

Microsoft has said it plans a major promotional effort for Zune, but analysts say the world's largest software maker faces an uphill battle against the iPod and iTunes. Erickson wouldn't provide finan-

Other hardware manufacturers, including Creative Technology Ltd. and Samsung Electronics Co., already offer portable media players that support Microsoft's software, but they've had little success against Apple.

The Zune player, to be made by Toshiba Corp., will have 30 gigabytes of memory, enough to hold about 7,500 songs. It also will feature a 3-inch screen and a built-in FM tuner, and will come loaded with about 25 songs and other content.

An iPod with a 30-gigabyte hard drive and a 2.5-inch screen sells for $249. Apple also offers lower- and higher-priced versions.

Microsoft is hoping to differentiate itself from the iPod by including wireless technology to let people share some of their favorite songs, playlists or pictures with other Zune users who are close by.

Other users can then listen to the songs three times over three days before deciding whether to purchase the tune themselves.

Making plans for the future

West Virginia Public Theatre holds third fundraising gala oo-wop music and plans for the future were at the core of the West Virginia Public Theatre fundraiser held Sept. 23 at the Waterfront Place Hotel Ballroom.

Ron Iannone, founder and artistic director of WVPT, said the event honored Consol Energy and Ron and Stephanie Stovash. "Consol has been with us from the beginning. We've been here for 23 years — wow, I can't believe it every time I say that, 23 years — and they've been with us from the start, willing to support us in the arts," Iannone explained. "They've increased their corporate sponsorship yearly. And then when Ron (Stovash) came on with them it increased even more.' With their tireless fundraising efforts, Iannone said, the Stovashes have helped bring many people to the theater who otherwise wouldn't attend.

As cochairs for this year's other major fundraiser, the Stovashes helped raise more than $70,000 between the two of them, bringing in new corporate and private sponsors. Helping to raise funds through corporate and private donations is key, Iannone said, the importance of such efforts cannot be stressed enough.

WVPT hopes to be in its new home on the Waterfront by the summer of 2008. Current plans are for the theater to be under the same roof as an event center and parking garage. The facility could support intimate theater as well as shows supporting a much larger audience. The newest design concept uses a permanent stage along with corporate boxes and built-in digital sound and light systems, but creates flexibility in theater size by the use of state-of-the-art moveable walls and seating. Similar designs have been used in several new facilities throughout the nation.

TOM & RAY MAGLIOZZI

Father's idea keeps son safe on the highway

Dear Tom and Ray:

Am I a jerk or a genius? My son is now 18, and when he was 15, I wrote him a check for $1,500, postdated three years. I told him that if he managed to reach the date of the check without (1) receiving any tickets, (2) being involved in any accidents or (3) breaking any of our house driving rules, I'd cash the check for him. My goal was to provide an incentive for him to play by the rules long enough to form some good driving habits. Anyway, my son very nearly made it. A few months shy of his 18th birthday, he received a speeding ticket. He was cruising along the highway, singing. And he suddenly realized that the light show accompanying his karaoke act was being provided by the flashing lights on top of a cruiser. He fessed up about the ticket promptly, and was bemoaning the fine of $126. I gently reminded him that the ticket had actually cost him $1,626, as he had failed to fulfill our bargain. My question: Am I a genius for coming up with the carrot that made him a good driver during his crucial first years behind the wheel, or am I a jerk for piling on a $1,500 fine? Please note that his younger sister is watching carefully to see how this is resolved. She's 14, and whether I fold on this will go a long way in setting her expectations. My son took the news well, but I have friends who are treating me as though I smashed the kid's piggy bank and took his inheritance. Your take on this ethical dilemma? — Ted

TOM: Are you a jerk or a genius? Well, it's possible to be both, Ted. I'd say you're definiteliant way to encourage a kid to drive responsibly, and I'm all for anything that accomplishes that.

RAY: I agree. Clearly, it has worked. For nearly three years, the kid was careful, he avoided getting tickets, he avoided accidents and he lived by the rules of the household. Do you know how many insanely jealous parents are reading about this kid today?

TOM: So you definitely get points for parenting. Now, are you also jerk? Actually, I don't think so. The fact that you're asking us whether you're a jerk means you're not one. Because jerks, by definition, never think they're being jerks. So clearly, you sense, somewhere in that hard, little, dried-up stone of a heart you have, that you're being a little rough on the kid.

RAY: I understand the desire to teach your kids that "a deal is a deal." But it's also worth teaching them about fairness, flexibility and that there's value in trying hard, even if you don't always succeed. After all, your mission is essentially accomplished. After driving responsibly for his first three years, your son is unlikely to turn around now and go out and drive like a moron.

TOM: So I would extend your offer. Make it clear to him — and to his younger sister — that since he dutifully fulfilled the contract for most of the three years, you appreciate his effort and you want to offer him a chance to redeem himself.

RAY: Right. Tell him that if he maintains a clean record for an additional six months after the original deadline, you'll still cash the check for him. Or you'll cash a slightly smaller check — say $1,400 — for him. And you can make it clear to both kids that were it not for his excellent performance up until the speeding ticket, you wouldn't be offering him a second chance.

TOM: You can also make it clear that this is a one-time offer. That if he fails again, you intend to cash the check yourself and spend the money on that vibrating recliner you've had your eye on.

RAY: But you both deserve a lot of credit. You came up with a great idea, and your son has had the good sense to buy into the deal. Congratulations to both of you.

Keith Simpson, Jennifer Godfrey and Wayne Godfrey tour Hong Kong Disneyland on the park's firstyear anniversary on Sept. 12. Australia's Disney addicts embarked on a world trip that takes them to every Disney park in the world — from Tokyo to Hong Kong, Paris, Orlando and Anaheim.

One Disney park at a time

Associated Press

HONG KONG — The rain was pouring, the skies were a murky gray and Mickey's magic wasn't working on the visitors cursing and scampering for cover at Hong Kong Disneyland.

But Keith Simpson and his six friends from Sydney — all Disney fanatics sporting matching polo shirts that show Mickey ears over Australia's map — couldn't have been happier.

The group was in Hong Kong on the second leg of their Disneythemed round-the-world tour, realizing months of planning for a 32-day trip that takes them to every Disney park in the world from Tokyo to Hong Kong to Paris, to the U.S. flagships, Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., and Walt Disney World near Orlando,

It was a dream come true for the "Down Under Disneyana" fan club members, who have all been to one or more Disney parks before but have never done them all at one go. The idea of a world tour was especially appealing for Australian fans because they live so far away from all the Disney parks, Simpson said.

"We can't go to Disneyland every week. We can only go once every year, and that's if we're lucky," said Simpson, 36, a fraud investigator for a bank. The nearest park — Hong Kong — is more than eight hours' flight away.

The fans also organized the trip so that it coincided with several important dates for Disney. The group was in Hong Kong for the first anniversary celebrations at Disney's newest theme park on Sept. 12. They planned to finish on Sept. 30, the last day of 50th anniversary festivities at the original Disneyland in Anaheim. Along the way, members expected to mark the occasion with group photos in front of all the iconic Sleeping Beauty and Cinderella castles, said Wayne

Godfrey, the organizer of the trip. They also planned to spend minimum time sightseeing outside the parks, while trying to go on every single ride at every single park they're visiting. In fact, discounting time spent onboard flights and transfers from airports, virtually every minute of the month-long trip was to be spent in one Disney park or another.

"It's the first time for all of us. I don't know anyone who's done quite what we're doing," Godfrey, 48, said. None of the seven traveling members had been to Paris before, so that was the most eagerly anticipated park, he added.

Godfrey, who describes himself as a "pretty big" Disney fan, founded the Down Under Disneyana Club 13 years ago.

"I grew up watching the 'Wonderful World of Disney' on TV, with Walt Disney narrating," he said. He now shares his passion for all things Disney with about 200 Aussies, whom he meets regularly for themed parties and to share trip reports.

The finance manager has been collecting Disney memorabilia like books, magazines and DVDs for more than 20 years. He "got hooked" onto Disney parks ever since he visited Disney World in the early 90s, he said, and has since been back to the Orlando park seven times, and to Disneyland in California nine times.

Simpson, meanwhile, didn't get his first taste of Disney parks until he visited Anaheim last year. The fan said the "Beauty and the Beast" movie and its soundtrack initiated his Disney obsession, and he has now collect-

Disney park is anything but repetitive.

"Every time you go to a park there's different things to do, and you get out of it what you put into it," explained Simpson, who said he's sure he will enjoy every moment of the world tour. "I don't think I'll ever get tired of going. What I like about Disney parks is that once you go through those front gates you sort of leave the real world behind you. That's why it's so appealing.'

The world trip cost about $4,661, inclusive of discounted rates for hotels, transfers and passes to the parks, Godfrey said. The Tokyo leg cost an extra $526, because the air miles went over the prescribed mileage limit in the round-the-world airfare, he said.

"Coordinating the airfare was the trickiest part," he said. "But once we decided to go with a regular round-the-world airfare, it all came together really quickly."

Godfrey has a word of advice for anyone trying to organize a similar trip. "I would book a round-the-world airfare. I would try to stay at the moderate (Disney) hotels. I'd also make sure I go out of season, not on holidays when the parks are crowded,' he said.

Members all groaned when asked how it would it feel when the trip's all over. "It'd be sad when you have to go back to reality," said Della Whitton, 41, Simpson's girlfriend and fellow Disney addict.

She didn't have to despair -Simpson said the couple has opted out of the Tokyo leg of this trip so that they could "save" it for later. A Disney cruise and repeat trips to the Florida park are also in their future.

Walking regularly can help reduce blood cholesterol, lower blood pressure, increase cardiovascular endurance, boost bone strength, burn calories and keep weight down. In "A Walk A Day," a Fit Fact from the American Council on Exercise, a study is briefly mentioned on the health benefits of walking. An eight-year study was performed on 13,000 people and reported that people who walked 30 minutes a day had lower risk of premature death than those who rarely exercise.

Before starting a workout, remember to begin with a light warm-up and a few stretches. You want to get the blood flowing before performing the stretches. Walking primarily works the muscles of the legs, but stretching vour back, shoulders and arms can loosen up any tension and make the walk more effective.

Beginning walkers should make their workouts less intense by limiting the distance walked and their speed. ACE provides the following tips for beginners:

- Walk short distances. Begin with a five-minute stroll and gradually increase your distance.
- Forget about speed. Walk at a comfortable pace. Focus on good posture, keeping your head up and shoulders relaxed.
- Swing your arms naturally and breathe deeply. If you can't catch your breath, slow down or
- Be sure you can talk while walking. If you can't converse, you are walking too fast.

Once you have reached a level where you can walk a few miles with ease, you can vary the intensity of your walking program. Adding hills will help increase your cardiovascular endurance as well as tone the muscles of the legs. You can also lengthen your stride or increase your speed to advance vour workout.

There are no set rules when it comes to walking. A minimum of 20 minutes a day is recommended. Walking is an activity you can easily fit into your schedule, whether it is two 10-minute walks each day or an hour-long walk a few times a week. Get

Making headway on migraines

BY MICHAEL PRECKER

The Dallas Morning News (MCT)

DALLAS — If you've never had a migraine headache, said Mel Pokorny, you just can't imagine what it's like.

"It's indescribable to most people," said Pokorny, who's suffered from migraines for more than 30 years. "You can hear the blood rushing through your head. You start seeing spots in your vision and within a few minutes you're throwing up."

Still, the malady isn't always apparent.

"You can't see a headache, and that makes it harder for people to understand how debilitating a migraine can be," said Suzanne Simons, executive director of the National Headache Foundation. "For many years, physicians as well as lay people thought people with migraines were just complainers, or didn't handle stress well, or just wanted to get out of doing something.'

These days, people know better — but not enough of them. Dr. Stephen Herzog, a neurologist at Baylor University Medical Center at Dallas, said that out of about 28 million Americans who suffer migraines, "only 10 million are properly diagnosed and only 4-5 million are properly treated."

Despite major advances in recent years, Herzog said, "There's probably no disorder that's as misunderstood and misdiagnosed and mistreated as migraine.'

To try and clear that up, here are a few basics:

Migraine, said Herzog, is a 'chemical disorder of the brain, like diabetes is a chemical disorder of the pancreas. Ninety percent of the time it's hereditary.'

The pain is caused when blood vessels become dilated and inflamed, which can last a few hours or a few days. Depending on the severity, the pain can be accompanied by nausea and vision problems, plus extreme sensitivity to light and sound. That can happen once a week or once

Though migraine is a chronic condition, headaches are often caused by triggers that vary from person to person. They can range from certain foods to stress, menstrual cycles to changes in the weather. Treatments

tive medications and lifestyle changes to ward off migraines, as well as medications — and actions — that minimize attacks when they occur.

The bad news, Herzog said, is that the condition has no cure. The better news is that there has been an "explosion of science to understand migraines and new medications to target them.'

Proper treatment for migraines usually starts at a neurologist.

That's what Nancy Christy finally did about 15 years ago after suffering headaches for most of her life.

"I just thought it was normal all those years, and I just learned to function with it," said Christy, 60, who lives in Dallas. "But they were getting worse."

So with her doctor's help, she said, "I began to get educated, and I began to take control of > Taking control, Herzog said, begins with a comprehensive history: tracking when headaches occur, charting the patient's eating and lifestyle habits. Then comes a process of trial and error: ruling out possible triggers, testing which medications may help, making changes ranging from losing weight to getting more sleep. "It can take months to sort out, and it

some work for the patient, but we can do more than ever before both in acute treatment and preventive therapy," Herzog said.

Christy, a potter who does ministry work in her church, has made a lot of changes during the years.

She lost a lot of weight, worked on relaxation techniques and learned to watch out for too much sugar, red wine and MSG, among other things.

"I'm much better and much smarter than before," she said. "I couldn't make it without the preventive medicine, but I function real well. I don't let it become an allconsuming deal."

Pokorny, a 51-year-old emptynester who's a student at the University of North Texas, took a similar approach — without medica-

After years of taking painkillers, she said she didn't want them in her system anymore. So she worked at relieving stress and learned what to do when she feels a migraine coming on: ice packs, a dark room and relaxation.

"If I don't catch mine right at the beginning, I can be down for a couple of days," she said. "But you learn what works for you and what you need to do. I have it down to about six a year.'

Herzog and Simons are optimistic about the prospects for making progress against migraines. The battle rages on many fronts, from research into brain chemistry to drugs developed for other uses that may be effective in controlling migraines.

Baylor is one of 60 sites around the country studying the phenomenon that when some people have a small hole in their heart called the patent foramen ovale repaired, their migraines go away.

In the meantime, Simons said, the message should be clear: "People who have migraines don't just have to suffer. We want them to know there is something they can do."

WVU diabetes conference set for Oct. 18-20

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Health educators, clinicians and others working in the field of diabetes are invited to question and learn from national experts during WVU's award-winning diabetes symposium Oct.18-20 at the Embassy Suites in Charleston.

This year's Bridging the Gap with Education: Diabetes Symposium and Workshop features 10 presenters who will help healthcare professionals learn the latest treatment advances, nutritional information and prevention techniques.

The diabetes experts researchers and practitioners will explore the challenges and opportunities of providing education and support to individuals with diabetes and their families.

Two speakers are well-known to both health professionals and the general public. Dr. David L. Katz and Dr. Tim Church are famous for their work in diabetes prevention and care.

Katz is an associate professor of public health and director of the Prevention Research Center at the Yale University School of Medicine. He has become familiar to the public for his columns in O, The Oprah Magazine and The New York Times.

Church is the medical director and vice president for medical/laboratory research of The Cooper Institute in Dallas, Texas. Church is frequently used as an expert in obesity and exercise. He has been interviewed by NBC's "Today Show," USA Today, TIME magazine, Reuters, The Washington Post and CNN.

A nationally recognized event, the Diabetes Symposium and Workshop is sponsored by the WVU Extension Service, WVU Robert C. Byrd Health Sciences Center and the West Virginia Diabetes Prevention and Control Program.

The program can provide continuing education hours for physicians, physician assistants, nurses, dentists, dietitians, dietary managers, social workers, community heath education specialists and American Association of Family and Consumer Sciences members.

For registration details and other program information, visit the symposium's Web site, ext.wvu.edu/ dsw2006, or contact Guen Brown, WVU Extension Service nutrition and health specialist, 293-2796 Ext.

DALLAS — In Fran Di Giacomo's bloodline, cancer is an alltoo-familiar bedfellow. Coming from a gene on her mother's side, a gene she calls defective, it claimed her brother at 42 and her mother at 46. Her sister endured a near-fatal bout of breast cancer. And Fran?

"I'm not even supposed to be here," she said with a wry laugh.

For Di Giacomo, 61, cancer and the searing pain that comes with it exist in the form of a scorecard: 12 operations in seven vears: 21 surgeries total: seven years on chemotherapy, using 12 different forms of chemo; 15 hospital stays dating to 1984, when she was diagnosed with breast cancer, which triggered a radical mastectomy.

In 1998, she endured Stage 3 ovarian cancer, which brought on nearly continuous chemotherapy, not to mention an onslaught of operations designed to "clean house" by removing tumors the size of sugar bowls that continue to invade her lean, graceful body like its own ugly insurgency.

"The result," she said, "is permanent nerve damage, inside and out. ... Wherever you have nerves, that's what hurts. Every pore in my skin burns like I'm boiling in oil. My lips and tongue and mouth exist in a kind of permanent numbness, like the kind you have when you've gone to the dentist and your mouth is just beginning to wake

One might be surprised to learn that Di Giacomo is a naturally funny person who has managed to turn such egregious suffering into her own laugh-out-loud humor. She's the author of "I'd Rather Do Chemo Than Clean Out the Garage: Choosing Laughter Over Tears" (Brown Books, $16.95) and routinely speaks to audiences of 800 or more about a subject she knows as well as anyone alive:

Pain. She is an advocate for the American Pain Foundation and the Pain Care Forum. They seek passage of the National Pain Care Policy Act (HR 1020), whose mission is to Cancer survivor Fran Di Giacomo, who has had more than 21 operations and has been on chemotherapy numerous times over the years, uses art to cope with pain.

"declare adequate pain care research, education and treatment as national public health priori-

As proponents of the bill have noted:

- More than 50 million Americans are partially or totally disabled by pain.
- About four in 10 American adults experience pain each day, and nine in 10 experience pain each month.
- More than one-third of terminally ill patients die in pain.
- More than 75 million Americans suffer serious pain annually.
- The number of people suffering chronic pain is higher than, and includes, those with breast cancer, AIDS and nearly all other serious or terminal illnesses.

For Di Giacomo, the worst of the worst came two years ago, after enduring yet another cancer surgery. A complication caused a perforated bowel, after which the colon "came apart and spilled into the peritoneal cavity.'

This one, she said, ranked No. 1 on the all-time hit parade, producing what she calls "brainscreaming pain" that dragged on without mercy for six gruesome days. As her husband, fellow cancer survivor Len Di Giacomo, notes, such an event usually results in death in two to three days.

"At that point," said Di Giacomo, "I knew what it was like to be a soldier on the battlefield and to have your guts ripped open ... and there's nothing anyone can do."

What she's had to learn the hard way is that you can't give up. Either you conceive coping methods that work for you, or ... you

For her, painting has become her blissful balm for the soul. "You can lay there and feel your pain and really dissolve. It's a death spiral. I'm not going to kid you," she said. "Or, you can get up and get motivated and make your brain focus on something else. Everyone has something they can use to put focus and purpose and joy and fulfillment in their lives, so they don't have to feel pain all the time."

Instead, "so many people get tired and depressed and just give up," she said. "But getting depressed and giving up is a passive form of suicide — they wish for it all to be over. When you get depressed, you lose your focus and your discipline. You can't have that happen."

Each morning, Di Giacomo particular kind that doesn't hurt my mouth." She takes anti-inflammatories to address a chronic thyroid condition. She returns to bed to begin deep-breathing exercises, believing that oxygen is her greatest ally in the fight against cancer and pain. She massages her scalp and does yoga "to stimulate blood flow." At 9, she makes her way to the kitchen, where she takes more medication, downing it with a special kind of oxygenated water. She imbibes the first of her three cups of "rocket fuel coffee," made by husband Len, whom she describes as "the ultimate caregiver. She takes more anti-inflammatories after lunch and at 2, repairs to a studio, where her ritual of joy — painting — begins to take shape. She's an exquisite artist whose works include portraits of Dallas Cowboys great Emmitt Smith and the late Supreme Court Justice Warren Burger. Her medication wears off around 5, when she and Len eat a quiet dinner at home or venture out to a restaurant, where she can sit only in a booth or on a cushioned seat. They also go early, in hopes that her request to have the music turned down or off might actually be listened to. Music — noise — is torture to her nerves.

What she and cancer engage in all day long, she said, is a high-stakes game of control. "Cancer and pain are forever negotiating over my body and what happens to it," she said.

In 1998, she was told that patients with her level of cancer can expect to live three to five years. She's at eight years and counting. "So I've beaten the odds in my family and in my disease," she said. "In other words, I live life on a month-tomonth lease." And then she laughs.

So what does she fear? "I'm not afraid to die," she said. "I just desperately don't want to. The truth is, I'm not even supposed to be here. And in a way, that's very liberating. I feel like you can't hurt me — I have cancer!"

WVUH Hosts family medicine conference

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The WVU Department of Family Medicine and the WVU Office of Continuing Education will host the 32nd annual Hal Wanger Family Medicine Conference Oct. 12-14 at the Robert C. Byrd Health Sciences Center. The comprehensive three-day workshop will present an array of lectures on a variety of topics of interest to the family physician and other healthcare providers.

Lecturers will update attendees on topics such as joint surgery, dizziness, lymphedema, cross-cultural medicine, prostate cancer, surgical robotics, pediatric asthma and anorectic disorders.

Workshops will be conducted on nasopharyngoscopy and radiographic interpretation of sports medicine injuries.

Presenters include 22 faculty from various departments within the WVU School of Medicine, representing behavioral medicine and psychiatry, family medicine, hematology/oncology, medicine, neurology, orthopaedics, otolaryngology, pediatrics and surgery.

Visiting professor of medicine, Dr. Emil J. Bardana Jr., from Oregon Health and Science University, will make a Medicine Grand Rounds presentation, "Occupational Asthma and Vocal Cord Dysfunction" as part of the program.

Schedules for each day of the conference are available at ce.wvu.edu. Registration begins at 8 a.m. Oct 12.

The cost of the full conference is $225 for physicians and $175 for other healthcare professionals, if paid prior to Thursday. Those not wanting to participate in the full conference can attend select days for a lower cost. Course fees include conference materials, continental breakfasts and cafeteria passes.

Continuing education credit is available to physicians for a maximum of 17.5 credit hours and 21.1 contact hours for nurses. Info: Office of Continuing Education, 293-3937 or visit ce.wvu.edu.

Health Notes

Women's Breast Health

An estimated 211,240 new invasive cases of breast cancer are expected to occur among women in the United States during 2006. Simply being a woman and getting older puts you at risk for breast cancer.

The good news is that breast cancer can often be detected early in its most treatable stages. There are three methods of early detection: mammography, clinical breast exam, and breast self-exam.

A mammogram is a breast x-ray that can reveal breast tumors that are too small to be detected by breast self-exam or a clinical exam. It is recommended that women over the age of 40, and those with a strong family history of breast or ovarian cancer, have mammograms once a year.

During a clinical breast exam, a health care professional examines breasts for lumps or any other unusual changes. A clinical breast exam is also recommended every year after age 40.

The breast self-exam is a simple way for women to notice changes in their breasts. Self-exams help a woman understand her own body and what is normal for her. It is also useful for finding lumps, cysts, or other noncancerous problems.

These methods of early detection can help save lives by finding breast cancer as early as possible. When detected early enough, breast cancer can be removed without resorting to breast removal.

Help support the West Virginia Breast & Cervical Cancer Screening Program by purchasing a ribbon for the Trees of Awareness during National Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October. Your gift will help provide free mammograms to women who qualify.

Ribbons may be purchased at the Mon General Information Desk, Mammography Department, Wedgewood Imaging, and from participating physician offices.

California buyers are priced out

THIS COLUMN is being used with permission of the National Association of Realtors.

SALES MIGHT BE OFF, but continued price appreciation means that only 23 percent of potential first-time buyers in California can afford to purchase a home, compared with 30 percent for the same period a year ago, according to a newly developed index released by the California Association of Realtors.

A statewide median price of $567,650 leaves more than 75 percent of potential first-time buyers out of the market. Since first-time buyers typically purchase a home equal to 85 percent of the prevailing median price, first-time home buyers in California would need an income of $98,720 (assuming a 10 percent down payment) to make such a purchase.

Breaking bottlenecks

"Supply is so constrained that housing in California is unbelievably unaffordable," observes Alex Creel, CAR's government affairs director. "There's been a bottleneck at the local government level in the approval process (for new housing) and our intent with the legislation of the last five years has been to break up that bottleneck," he says, referring to the association's efforts to increase the supply of housing. Awaiting Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger's signature is a land-use housing bill, the Housing Accountability Act, giving developers additional incentives to create affordable housing by amending the current Permit Streamlining Act, which expedites the local approval process from 180 days to just 90 days if the entire subdivision is for lowincome households. Under amended law, developer applicants can obtain an expedited review if the subdivision has 49 percent of the units for low-and moderate-income households.

Long-term plans

The pending bill also requires each county and city to adopt a comprehensive, long-term development plan that would ensure they can create enough housing to accommodate their share of projected growth. To ensure the plans are implemented, local governments will be required to report their progress to the state annually.

The bill allows judicial relief for those who challenge local governments on non-compliance. "Developers should be able to rely on the standards through the local government review process and not have the rules arbitrarily changed during the process," observes CAR President Vince Malta.

More than 300 Realtors from around West Virginia gathered at the Waterfront Place Hotel in Morgantown last week to participate in seminars and network with other

This gathering marked the 88th annual West Virginia Association of Realtors convention.

The convention was sponsored by the Morgantown Board of Realtors and began with a grand opening ceremony speech by Mayor Ron Justice. Following the mayor's welcome, the Realtors were able to enjoy the music of the University High School Jazz ensemble and watch performances by magician John Slicer.

Glenna Swiger, broker at Century 21 At Your Service, state director of the WVAR and convention chair, said the ceremony on Sept. 24 served as an ice breaker for the convention and gave Realtors a chance to network.

"The main reason the event is held is to change officers of the WVAR and assign new directors," said Swiger, adding that Realtors were able to continue their education through seminars and network with other statewide Realtors throughout the three days.

The 2007 officers are: Dea Kennen, president; Jennifer Bunch, presidentelect; Kathy Martin, vice president; Susan Lawrence, secretary; and Cheryl Skiles, treasurer. The outgoing president for 2006 is Wilma Jones.

On Sept. 25, the guest speaker was Tom Hopkins, who is known as the nation's No. 1 "how-to" sales builder. Hopkins said more than 3 million salespeople have attended his seminars and he has set a Realtor record of closing one sale per day for 365 days.

At 8 a.m., the crowd of Realtors poured into the grand ballroom of the hotel to listen to Hopkins begin his seminar, "Building Real Estate Champions." The seminar served as part of the Realtors' continuing education hours required by West Virginia.

"You have to love real estate, you have to love what you do," Hopkins said to the audience before getting them to their feet to repeat after him, "I'm alive, I'm awake and I feel great." Hopkins told the Realtors to keep this saying in mind every morning when they wake up.

The real estate guru said he failed his real estate test three times before passing and that he teaches because enjoyed the seminar because Hopkins made it fun.

"He gave us a lot of instructions, phrases and information that would motivate," Powell said.

Powell, who served as the chair of the registration committee for the convention, said she thought the event turned out well, thanks to the hard work of those involved and the Waterfront Place Hotel.

"We tried very hard to make everything a first-class experience," Powell said.

played music from the '50s and '60s. Tuesday's events included more education with a look at real estate trends with John Tuccillo. Tuccillo is a real estate economist who has written the best seller, "The Eight New Rules of Real Estate," and according to his Web site, he has worked with companies such as Microsoft and Prudential Real Estate Associates.

The convention ended Sept. 26 after a banquet with Gov. Joe Manchin. The banquet served to induct new directors and officers into the WVAR.

What roofs are most durable, good for the environment?

DEAR JIM: My asphalt shingle roof leaks again. I want to install a longer-lasting roof this time even if it costs more. Other than metal, what types of roofs are available and which are best for the environment?

Dear Scott: There are many nonmetal roofing options which have a longer life than typical shingles and are made from recvcled and natural materials. Although old asphalt shingles can be used in other products, many of the 11 million tons removed from roofs each year still find their way to landfills.

When selecting the proper type of replacement roofing for your home, the weight of the roofing material is a factor. Most roofs designed to support standard asphalt shingles will not handle the weight of some of the most durable roofing materials such as tile and slate. These can weigh five to 10 times as much as thick, high-quality asphalt shingles.

To install these types of roofs, the supporting structure, rafters or trusses will have to be strengthened. This is not impossible to do, but it can be a significant expensive in addition to the higher cost of the roofing materials themselves. On the positive side, you will only have this expense once because these roofs should last a lifetime.

Since you seem to be concerned about the environment, consider using roofing materials made primarily from recycled plastics. These can be formed to simulate slate, tile or cedar shakes. They are in the same weight per square (one square is 100 sq. ft. of roof area) range as good quality asphalt shingles so no additional roofing support will be needed.

Unless you actually climb up on the roof and touch this plastic roofing, it is difficult to distinguish from real slate, tile or shakes. The plastic material can be nailed or sawed similarly to wood and is available in random widths for an authentic appearance when installed. These materials often carry a transferable 50-year warranty.

Fiber-cement roofing materials are another very durable option. Lightweight fiber-cement materials will not require additional roof support. These can be molded to simulate many other roofing styles. The pigments go throughout the fibercement material so they maintain they attractive appearance. The contoured tiles have a glossy top-coat for an authentic tile look. Cedar shakes are another attractive roofing option which does not require additional roof support. Good-quality cedar shakes can have warranties up to 50 years. Pressure-treated pine shakes have a similar appearance to cedar and they can be treated with a fireresistance chemicals. One of the most unique wood roofs uses bent cedar shingles. These are made from Western red cedar and are steamed and bent to create curves. The following companies offer alternative roofing materials:

Puppers existed in the 1300s, but the only record of them is from some illustrations and stories. By the 16th century, there were puppet shows similar to the later "Punch and Judy" shows. It was in the 18th century that puppets became wellknown. Some were made as caricatures of famous people and performed in shows with political messages. Paper and cardboard were used to make the puppets.

In the 19th century, puppet shows became very popular, especially the slapstick "Punch and Judy" shows. Glove puppets —simple gloves with heads — were sometimes used. By the 1900s, puppets were made that represented the characters from old stories like "Hansel and Gretel," as well as modern puppets made to look like the Three Stooges, the Howdy Doody gang or even presidents. One unusual pair of puppets were made to look like President John F. Kennedy and Premier Nikita Khrushchev. They probably date to 1962, when the American and Soviet leaders were exchanging notes about the Cuban Missile Crisis. These certainly are meant as toys for adults, not children.

Don't confuse marionettes and puppets. A puppet has a cloth body and a hollow head and is made to fit over a hand that moves it. A marionette is a type of puppet, but it is manipulated by strings.

Q: I can't seem to find out anything about the Northern Furniture Co. of Sheboygan, Wis. I have a chest of drawers that's marked with that name, the number 6826 and the year 1952.

A: Northern Furniture Co. manufactured upscale tables, bookcases, desks and other case furniture in Sheboygan from 1904 into the 1950s. The company's history dates back to 1881, when George B. Mattoon founded his Mattoon Manufacturing Co. in Sheboygan. The company's name was changed to Northern Furniture when Mattoon died, and it was purchased by an established Shebovgan family named Reiss in 1916. The company's name became R-Way Furniture (the "R" standing for which was in business from about 1926 to 1930. Boulevard is the name of the pattern. Coxon Pottery was owned by brothers Fred and Edward Coxon and Edward's son, Edward Jr. Coxon Belleek is a thin, high-fired porcelain with a rich ivory tone. Q: I'm getting married this winter. Into my house with two cats will come a man and his dog. Is there a trick for getting the pets to live together in peace? Neither one of us wants to give up our pets.

A: Start by talking with your veterinarians. They will know the breeds, ages and history of the animals and can give you specific advice on merging the households. Some general suggestions from animal care experts include:

■ Watch the animals carefully in the beginning for signs of aggression, such as a dog that won't take its eyes off the cats. The intensity of its attention is key. Is it "stalking"? Call the dog's name, clap your hands or stamp your foot. If you can't distract it, its predatory instinct is too great. Cats also can be the aggressors, making dogs miserable with biting and scratching.

■ Buy cages so the animals can feel safe while getting to know each other. If they lunge or get too upset, put the dog on a leash and the cats in a crate, or place them on either side of a closed door. That way they can sniff, listen and get used to each other.

■ Don't punish animals for getting after each other. Rather, separate and distance them immediately if they start to misbehave. Don't let the dog chase the cats. With the dog on a leash, sit a safe distance away while the cat plays with a toy so the dog can get used to the cat's movements.

■ Until they are comfortable with each other, and this is well tested, do not leave the pets alone together. Many animals will behave when people are present, but misbehave when left alone. Some pets have fought and even killed when left unsupervised.

Q: Is eggplant a fruit?

A: Yes. Technically, it's a berry. Eggplant is a member of the nightshade family, so it's related to tomato (also a fruit), tobacco and other plants, some of

Because foods such as eggplant and tomato are used in salads and main dishes rather than desserts, they're commonly thought of as vegetables.

Bee stings

A reader in Kensington, Minn., passed along a cure for bee-sting pain: honey. The bee makes the pain; an application of honey takes it away in less than a minute, he said. This won't work for wasp or hornet stings.

New 3M window film blocks UV rays

BY MARY BETH BRECKENRIDGE

3M has introduced a clear, UV-blocking window film that doesn't contain metal, so it won't erode or interfere with wireless and cellular signals.

Films in 3M's Prestige Series block up to 66 percent of the heat and up to 99.9 percent of the ultraviolet rays that come through a window, reducing cooling costs in summer and slowing the fading of upholstery fabrics and other surfaces. The films come in two clear and two slightly tinted versions.

The films are professionally installed and are available only from 3M Prestige dealers. The cost for residences ranges from about $10 to $15 per square foot, installed. To find a dealer, visit www.3m.com/prestige or call 866-499-8857.

Change home, and life

Most of us think a home should reflect who we are. But maybe it's the other way around.

Moll Anderson, an interior designer and TV host, believes redecorating a home can provide the nudge people need to get themselves out of a rut. It's the premise behind her new book, "Change Your Home, Change Your Life."

The book is as much self-help manual as decorating guide. Anderson leads readers through a series of self-discovery questions that help them focus their projects in the hopes that by doing so, they'll bring new focus to their lives. There are plenty of projects, tips and other purely practical information, too.

"Change Your Home, Change Your Life" is due out Sept. 26 from Cool Springs Press and will sell for $24.99 in

Patching drywall yourself

BY ALAN J. HEAVENS (MCT)

I cut out a couple of sections of our masterbedroom ceiling last spring to try to extricate some squirrel squatters. Not such a smart idea, as it turned out — plus, it left me with two sizable holes in the drywall.

Unless such repairs are part of a major remodeling project, the typical drywall contractor isn't likely to sign on. It's up to you to make the fixes.

Need to know: Which tools you'll need for the job. Some, you probably have around the house — a hammer, scissors, a tape measure, a metal straightedge, a dust mask, and a utility knife. Don't own a drill/driver for embedding screws? Models for nonprofessional use aren't that pricey but will allow you to get the drywall patch in place quickly and easily.

You'll also need something to sand the coats of drywall compound on the patch even with the surrounding wall. Some people use a sanding sponge, which is flexible and reusable. I've had better luck with a piece of 150-grit drywall sandpaper that I change when it clogs with dust. And don't forget a drywall saw, which is used to cut patches to fit the holes, or to clean around the holes to fit the patches.

Material world: To make your repairs, vou'll need scraps of drywall (you can get them free or at little cost at the home center), joint compound, joint tape, and drywall screws. Also available at home centers and hardware stores are drywall patches that stick or iron onto the wall, and some that will take paint without any further work. Mesh patches can handle holes up to 3 inches in diameter.

The most frequently used joint tapes are either paper or self-adhesive. Paper tape is first embedded in a coat of joint compound on the surface to be repaired; self-adhesive tape, often fiberglass, is perforated to accept joint compound after it is applied to the surface. Cut and paste: You'll need one or two taping knives to spread the joint compound. They come in various widths, and should be wider than the area you're repairing. When professionals finish a joint, the width of the knives they use increases to even out the coat of joint compound sufficiently to reduce the amount of sanding needed.

There are plastic knives and stainlesssteel knives. I use both, but the edge of a metal knife does a sharper job. A few small repairs:

To mend split joint tape, move the old tape without ripping the drywall by slipping a drywall knife underneath; apply new tape and spread a thin coat of drywall compound on it, eliminating any bubbles. Add a second coat while the first one is wet.

To fix popped nails or screws, replace them with new ones, embedding just below the surface of the drywall no more than breaking the paper, really. Fill the hole with drywall compound and let it dry (it will shrink), then keep adding compound until it is a little higher than the wall surface. That's what you will sand even.

Busting a myth on mold, mildew

HOME ENERGY Q&A

BY KEN SHEINKOPF

Q: No matter how well we clean our house, we keep finding some mold and mildew in the closets, under the sinks and elsewhere. I asked the guy at our hardware store about this and he said it was a common problem caused by energy-efficiency measures in today's homes. Is he right about that?

A: File this one under the urban legends category. I hear it every so often too, but having discussed the idea with many energy experts over the years, I'm convinced that this isn't the case at all. In fact, energy-efficient homes usually improve indoor air quality and cut down on the growth of mold and mildew.

However, this can be considered an energy issue because heat and damp conditions in a home can lead to mold and mildew problems. Maybe you're not setting the air conditioner in summer low enough to get rid of indoor humidity. Maybe you're not using exhaust fans in the bathroom that get rid of moisture after showering or bathing. Do you have good ventilation in the home to control the humidity level?

Rather than cause indoor air quality problems by plugging leaks and reducing unwanted airflow, energy-efficient homes help indoor air by keeping out uncontrolled airflow that can bring in moisture, pollutants and other unwanted outdoor air problems. A "tight" house with plugged leaks and controlled airflow usually results in better quality indoor air.

When making a home energy-efficient, your job is to stop the uncontrolled airflow and ventilate the air by good vacuum cleaning and strategies like cleaning up damp carpets, fixing deteriorated insulation and keeping paint cans and household cleaning products in the garage instead of the living space.

Natural ventilation is an important strategy to keeping indoor air healthy. When the weather allows it, open windows and doors. Use fans to circulate the air. Turn on the kitchen and bathroom exhaust fans to get rid of odors and

I've seen some studies recently that showed that many people aren't concerned about indoor air quality and don't even think of it as a problem. But if you'll think about the many things we do that affect indoor air — burning candles and incense, keeping pets indoors, not changing furnace filters, and other behavior patterns — you realize that ventilation is essential.

You ought to contact your local American Lung Association chapter and get some of their information on "healthy houses." There are many simple things you can do to keep your home's air healthy. Combine these strategies with energy efficiency to maximize the bene-

Q: You wrote a while ago about getting a home's ductwork check for leaks or holes, and we hired a local contractor to do this for us. He fixed a number of problems he found and our air conditioner worked better than ever afterward. How come you don't urge everyone to get their home's ducts cleaned and repaired?

A: Well, I do (sort of).

I've been writing about the importance of clean, well-sealed ducts for the past 20 years or so, and I'm a big believe in the importance of properly performing ducts. As I've said many times, you can do all the things you want to make your home more energy efficient, but if the ducts are leaking, you're going to wipe out all the savings from the other things you do.

The problem is that cleaning and repairing ducts is something to be done only by experienced professionals or you can end up with more problems than you started with. Take some of the register covers off the return ducts in your home and look inside. If you see that the ducts are really dirty or if there is light coming in through holes and tears, call a professional to come out and fix things. Holes in ductwork cause significant energy losses, and dirty ducts will bring in unwanted air pollution. You can often notice duct problems if your energy bills are suddenly going way up or if you find lots of dirt coming in through the registers. Check the walls and carpeting around air intakes for especially dirty spots.

However, poking around in ducts can cause rips and holes, and you need to be sure that you're hiring a contractor who knows how to fix and clean these systems. I always recommend you get the ducts inspected if you suspect there might be problems, but I have to add the caution that you don't just get them cleaned without an inspection revealing problems. And like I said, make sure you hire experienced people to do the work. This is no job for a do-it-yourselfer.

Marking territory in a 'manspace'

Book celebrates places guys make selves at home

BY EILS LOTOZO

Barrie Maguire is crazy about his garage. But not as a place to park his car. He uses the tiny structure, which he has transformed with a skylight, as a painting studio — minimally decorated with some of his portraits, his art equipment, and some garage-sale finds.

In an earlier incarnation, the garage was a home office/escape pad from the family hubbub, with decor that included a faux brick wall, a gas fireplace, and a lamp made from a tree trunk gnawed by a beaver.

"I was trying to make it feel like a cabin in Wyoming," he says.

But what Maguire's beloved sanctuary really is is a "manspace."

That's the tongue-in-cheek term coined by author Sam Martin in his new book, "Manspace: A Primal Guide to Marking Your Territory" (Taunton, $24.95), which celebrates the places guys stake out for themselves for hobbies, creative pursuits, displaying collections, or simply hanging out.

These are not the grubby basement and garage redoubts where men once went to build birdhouses, tinker with cars, watch the game, or hide from their wives. Forget beer-drinking, sports-watching stereotypes. The book, which is packed with photographs of more than 50 manspaces across the United States, features everything from a replica of a Japanese tea house to a room specially designed for a collection of vintage nautical paraphernalia.

A local musician's recording studio and rehearsal space in a lavishly renovated barn outside Philadelphia is pictured with Persian rugs and chandeliers. And there is an actual observatory built atop one guy's Colorado summer home, a modern fishing camp designed by another fellow's indulgent architect wife, a backyard artificial-turf bowling alley with an electric scoreboard, and a timber-frame barn built for a guy who carves duck

"Men aren't one-dimensional anymore, and no two manspaces are alike," says Martin, who got the idea for the book after he spent five months and $3,000 building a 165square-foot writing shed in his backyard in Austin, Texas.

Martin, whose previous book was "How to Mow the Lawn: The Lost Art of Being a Man," sees a real trend toward men claiming bigger and more well-appointed spaces for themselves and their interests.

"When we started doing research, we got tons of responses," he says.

Is it a generation of men steeped in HGTV home-makeover shows? The shift in roles and domestic dominion brought on by the women's movement? "Manspace" is short on data and analysis, but Martin, who is launching a Web site and blog called Manspacesite.com, says this:

'Men have been struggling with identity for a number of years. Manspaces are ways for guys to establish their identity and celebrate it. We've decided to take our pursuits out of the uninsulated garage, where we shared them with the car, and move them up front.

'Also, there are more men working at home now. Maybe that's why men's spaces are more accepted and needed."

David Ballinger, whose spiffy Met-ceived his modern, prefab building line (www.metroshed.com) as an easy way to erect a home office. But just as many customers are turning them into quirky manspaces, he says.

Along with creating poker rooms, or places to smoke cigars or play pool, says Ballinger, customers have used Metrosheds as welding shops and motorcycle

"And we've got one guy who sits in his and watches his llamas and alpacas in a field," he says.

The guys featured in "Manspace" seem to have had no problem convincing wives and girlfriends that building rock-climbing walls, devoting spare rooms to collections of fishing tackle, or erecting sizable outbuildings in which to commune with one's muse were a great use of space and the family budget.

Locally, though, if our own informal survey is a gauge, women are keeping a tighter rein on domestic space and the best the guys can hope for is the basement.

"My wife said I'm allowed to do whatever I want on a subterranean level," says Bruce Clark, whose manspace is the large walk-out basement he added to the house he and his wife built 17 years ago. Along with a home office, the space is a display room for more than 30 vintage pinball machines and video games.

'My wife had the rest of the house to work with — floral drapes, feminine design, whatever she wanted. The finished basement is mine," Glen Macnow, a WIP radio host, says of his classic subterranean manspace, whose decor features a Three Stooges poster, a pool table, a pinball machine, a table hockey game, and a 36-inch TV for sports viewing.

Gary Reighn, who created a basement like this.'

roshed is featured in the book, says he conmedia room designed to evoke the control rooms from the various "Star Trek" series, says he has no problem deferring to his wife's decorating preferences for their suburban Philadelphia home.

'The reason I could do such a far-out theme is it's in the basement, so it doesn't clash with the rest of the house, which is country Colonial," says Reighn, whose room, dubbed The Bridge, is featured in

Gordon Hart, a professor of counseling psychology at Temple University, wonders, though, whether some men's impulse to carve out a manspace is always a positive.

"I have seen too many couples in my practice where the man is in the other part of the house in his space and he doesn't come out," says Hart, author of "Power and Intimacy in Men's Development."

"If they are out building a clubhouse in the basement or a nook in the garage, then maybe they haven't negotiated adequately for the rest of the space in the house," Hart says. "For some men, it's a reluctance to engage in conflict with their spouse over that Elvis-on-black-velvet

Not for Barrie Maguire. Last year, he and his wife, a freelance editor who also works at home, completed a renovation and addition that gave him a handsome new second-floor office and created one for her on the ground floor.

But Maguire still loves his little garage, where he spends three hours every morning creating large-scale paintings of famous Irish writers. (You can see them at www.maguiregallery.com.)

"I have had so many guys come in here over the years — the propane-delivery man, the FedEx guy — and everyone of them says, 'Oh, man, I need a place

When is it OK to trim KO roses?

GARDENING Q&A

BY NANCY BRACHEY

Q: I have Knock Out roses that have grown rapidly and bloomed all summer. I pruned them in early spring, and then again in early June, but have not touched them since. I really want to trim them back so they don't stay so large over the winter. Is it safe to trim them now, while they still have a few more weeks to grow? Or do I have to wait until winter is over to keep from damaging them?

A: I try not to get too excited about new plants because it is the test of time in the flower bed at home that will prove their merit. But I cannot think of a new ornamental that has lived up to - even exceeded — expectations since it came out in 2000. One member of the new class of long-blooming landscape roses, Knock Outs have proved a winner for people who want a disease-resistant shrub with a very long blooming season. With sun, fertilizer and water to encourage new growth, Knock Out keeps blooming.

The season is far from over. Because you pruned your plants correctly, you got both excellent spring and summer bloom on the new growth the pruning generated. Knock Outs will continue to bloom on new growth until cold weather brings them to a halt. Over the years, when warmish weather lasts through a mild, sunny autumn, people have told me they have blooms in December. The new growth you see now should bear flowers this fall. The foliage is also good in fall, with some leaves turning an attractive burgundy.

So this is not the time to think about pruning your Knock Outs for their winter rest, which is still far away. Once winter sets in, you can do a bit of height reduction and reshaping. It would be better to do the major work of shortening and shaping in early March.

Q: I am having a major problem with my garden and hope you can help me. I have an area 3 feet wide beside a brick wall and concrete patio inside a courtyard at my home. I am currently having a new soil sample done but the last results were a pH of 4.5. I have a drip system in that area. I have lost a rhododendron, azalea, a gardenia and have a small cherry tree that was losing leaves very early.

Or could it be the leaching from the brick and concrete? Or the radiant heat from the concrete and brick? Could it be too warm for these broad-leaf evergreens and the tree?

A. Courtyard gardens are special places that can look lovely, but every plant must count and look good all the time. It must be a huge disappointment for those marvelous plants to perform so poorly. The pH reading you have is highly acidic, but that is not the result of leaching from brick or concrete. If components of those materials, such as the mortar, were leaching, that would make it more alkaline with a higher pH.

I think your problem is due to a combination of heat stress, insufficient root development. and possibly deep planting. Rhododendrons simply will not stand having their roots sunk into soil, especially soil that stays pretty wet thanks to your drip irrigation system. Azaleas are more tolerant, but they don't like it either. Planting with the root balls set high is essential to avoid root rot. The gardenia will take hot direct sun once established, but I bet its roots (and also the azaleas' were bound around the root ball when you took the plant out of the nursery pot. The cherry tree was losing leaves probably because it needed more water than the roots could bring up during the hot, dry days of summer.

A major reason new shrubs don't take off growing as fast as expected and wilt faster than they should is, the plants are reacting as if they are still in the pot and not sending roots into the surrounding soil. Cutting the roots away from the side of the root ball may seem like rough treatment but really helps the plant start to grow outward. Root-stimulating fertilizer also helps at this time.

If the area gets hot, direct summer sun, especially in the afternoon, consider some different choices such a dwarf loropetalum, dwarf forsythia (not evergreen but still good) or abelia. instead of rhododendron and azalea. I think the gardenia should work there.

Fall planting should also help because the roots will have more time to get going before the stress of summer.

Follow the soil test recommendations about fertilizer and the amount of lime needed to bring up the pH to a higher level that will suit more kinds of shrubs and trees.

Book review

"A Book of Blue Flowers" by Robert Geneve. Timber Press. 327 pages. $24.95.

People who love blue, and it's often said to be the favorite of many, should find this book so inspiring they may rip up their flower beds and replant. And there is plenty to choose from, thanks to salvias, veronicas, violas, torenias, whose blooms appear in a vast range of light to

But what is blue? Geneve ponders this question and comes up with a very agreeable definition that shows the great range of blues from palest blue green to a strong blue-purple called violet. In between are many beautiful colors.

Translating that to the garden is, of course, a measure of selecting plants for their suitability to local conditions. Blue flowers, he writes, are useful, creating great drifts of spring color. They appeal to the senses.

Geneve, a professor of horticulture at the University of Kentucky, offers a mini-encyclopedia of blue plants, from achimenes to wulfenia.

Pantone entering home paint market

ON THE WEB: pantonepaints.com

BY DAVID BRADLEY

Associated Press Pantone, whose influence over color spans virtually the entire spectrum of consumer products, has entered the home paint market. Pantone colors were once available mainly to design professionals who used the company's system to create color combinations that could be accurately repeated time and again. But now homeowners will have entrDee to nearly 3,000 custom paint choices inside and outside the

That news has Roger Merrill ready to paint the town red, or at least some shade of Rococco Red (Pantone 18-1652 TPX). He says consumers are finally ready to embrace color and break free from the neutrals that dominated interiors and exteriors for so long.

"What it tells me is consumers are loosening up on color because now every room in the house can be a different color," says the San Clemente, Calif., paint dealer, who will carry the line. "This represents a big movement to color."

And livelier colors could represent a real shift in an already huge paint market. Paint accounts for 57 percent of the $19.5 billion in annual coating sales in the U.S., according to the National Paint and Coatings Association. That's up more than 22 percent from 1995. Consumers slather on nearly 809 million gallons of paint each year.

"The color trends are toward more vibrant, vivid colors inside and outside the home," says Bent Mikkelsen of Paint Pro magazine, a paint industry trade publication.

But Mikkelsen says whites and other neutrals are still popular in new construction so as not to offend the sensibilities of potential buyers who might be turned off by strong colors. In his estimation, color reigns in custom paint jobs performed by more than half a million painting contractors in the U.S. Pantone is far from alone in promoting bold color palettes. Amy Larrabee of the Color Marketing Group, a consortium of 1,000 independent color experts who forecast color trends, says "Our forecast is for colors that are bolder and brighter, and that trend is going to keep on going.

Consumers are much more color-sophisticated and willing, Larrabee believes, to do color experimentation. Even tones once considered neutral are due for a shake up. She says neutrals will be influenced by spa tones of blues, greens "to make you feel comfortable. These will be calming colors yet they are still bold."

Pantone got its start as the yardstick by which color forecasts entered the production mainstream, and has made its reputation partly based on its ability to accurately replicate color. It makes the same promise with its paint line, identifying all its paints by number as well as name.

'What we're talking about is a professional color tool that designers have relied on for half a century to inspire colors for product development," says Lisa Herbert, executive vice president of Pantone. "Why not allow discerning homeowners and their decorators to use this? We thought 'why keep this a deep, dark secret?' We know color trends and we know what's hot."

The paint will be sold under the Pantone Paints label through the Fine Paints of Europe retail network as well as by phone or online. Interior and exterior paints are available. Homeowners and designers can go online for design tools and other design assistance. The 2007 Pantone Color Forecast is also available.

Pantone will sell two paint fan decks. The primary deck, with 1,925 colors, is $165. The second deck is a matching system used largely by printers, and it contains another 1,000 color possibilities.

Herbert describes today's color choices as a "more sophisticated urban palette," with deeper topes, blues, soft beiges and caramels. But she points out "It's not only the color that's hot, it's how you combine colors that makes the difference.'

At the grassroots level, paint dealers like Merrill see customers finally breaking out of their shell, color-wise, "It wasn't long ago every room was white in Southern California," says Merrill. "People would accessorize with color. Now they are really loosening up with color on every wall. People feel so good about their homes now that they've used color.'

Indeed, his best selling colors so far in 2006 are rich, dense shades such as burnt ochre and deep blues. That trend is likely to continue, at least it seems that way to Merrill. "Things will never go back to just white," he says. "That's my prediction. It just can't."

Cool-season favorites now have siblings

BY NORMAN WINTER

It took some time, but two of my favorite coolseason plants just got siblings: Frosty Rain pansy and Bouquet Rose Magic dianthus.

For years, everyone has adored Purple Rain pansy, the only mounding, cascading selection. Popular demand usually makes it hard for procrastinators to find them, yet for years this has been a series of one.

Pan American Seed is offering Frosty Rain as another option in what is now the Rain series. Depending on the temperature, Frosty Rain can have different looks throughout the season. It is white with light blue/purple picotee edge and purple blotch; the blotch can occasionally appear blue-purple.

In cooler conditions, flowers have more of an ocean color pattern with purple picotee; warmer conditions result in more white with ocean/purple picotee. Both the Purple Rain and Frosty Rain will have flowers that are about twice the size of hybrid-type violas.

As with almost any other flower, the key to success lies in bed preparation. Pansies do not perform well in tight, heavy soil. Amending the planting area is one of the best ways to have success over these conditions.

Add organic matter such as fine pine bark (pieces less than one-half inch), leaf mold, compost, peat and sand. Incorporate a 3- to 4-inch layer of organic matter with the native soil to build up the bed and provide excellent drainage.

This same organic matter will benefit gardens with an excessively sandy soil structure. Sandy soils dry quickly and allow for rapid leaching of nutrients. The organic matter will increase the soil's water-holding capacity greatly and will help hold in valuable nutrients.

In 2001, Bouquet Purple dianthus was chosen as an award winner. For all of these years, it too has been an only child, but now there is Bouquet Rose Magic. The blooms open white and mature to light pink, then a deep rose color. This means on one flower stalk, you will see all of these colors at once. Bouquet Rose Magic shows the most color variation in high light and cool temperatures in the landscape.

The Bouquet series is considered an interspecific hybrid. For a while it performs like the Telstar series, a Louisiana Select winner, but shortly you will see the big difference. The Bouquet series is a tall dianthus that is a good landscape performer with potential for cutflower growers.

The stalks reach 18 to 24 inches in height and produce an abundance of bouquets, ready for cutting. The flowers are bright and bold.

The Bouquet series has remarkable cold tolerance, as proven by the Bouquet Purple also being designated as a Minnesota Select Perennial Plant winner.

Electrical work can be safer than you think

FOR MORE HOME improvement tips, info: onthehouse.com or 1-800-737-2474 Ext. 59

BY MORRIS AND JAMES CAREY For AP Weekly Features

This article is not about workers' compensation insurance. But it's a good jumping-off point for our opinions on electrical work.

Workers' comp is based on the danger level of a given job: The more dangerous the job, the more expensive the insurance premium. Makes sense.

For example, an in-house salesperson or clerical worker is at low risk of being injured on the job compared to a carpenter or electrician. This is largely because their workplaces are so different; a construction site is usually far more dangerous than a business

We used to think electrical work was at the top of the list for expensive coverage. But what we discovered astounded us: Workers' comp for electricians is relatively low among construction workers.

That got us thinking about what the danger in electrical work is: electrocution. But what is it that most electricians do before they work on your electrical system? Of course, they simply turn off the power. No power, no electrocution. So that means the real danger is? Forgetting to turn off the power.

People often think it's safe to turn off a single breaker to work on a given circuit in the home. Nothing could be more foolish. As often as not, electricians will use a single junction box to connect wires from two or more circuits. In other words, you can turn off the breaker to a light or plug and still find an active hot lead in the electric box that you are working

When we decide to work on a circuit and don't want to turn the entire house off, we typically open the junction box in question and test every single wire to absolutely ensure that the power is off before we reach in to touch any-

By the way, turning the light off at the switch does not necessarily turn the power off to the wires in the light box in the ceiling. Yes, it may turn off power to the light, but that circuit could still be hot in the box. Always, always, always turn off the power to a given fixture at the power panel.

Oh, and by the way, you are doing yourself a favor by turning off all the power in the house at the main breaker if you can do it and still perform your task. Nothing is safer.

There are several other precautions to take when working with electrical circuits:

- Let everyone in the family know that you are working and that they should not touch the electrical panel.
- Once you have turned off a breaker, lay a piece of tape across

it saying "DO NOT TOUCH."

■ Close the power panel door and tape it closed. Tape a sign to the door that says you are working on an electrical circuit and that the panel should not be opened or disturbed.

Remember, when you disconnect a circuit in the living room, you could also be turning off the plug that operates your teenage daughter's hair curler. Imagine your surprise and discomfort when she goes to the panel and reactivates the circuit while you're holding onto the wires.

We do carpenter work, plumbing, electrical, tile, painting and more, and we love it all. But for us, electrical is the most fun. All it amounts to in a home is running fancy extension cords inside the walls. But there are many important safety codes that must be followed that go far beyond getting shocked.

For example:

■ The size of an electric junction box (in cubic inches) is determined by the number and size of the wires connected inside. Each wire in the box requires a certain number of cubic inches of heat dissipating space. One strand of 12-gauge wire requires 1 1/2 cubic inches of cooling area. Two 12gauge wires would require a total of 3 inches, and so on. Smaller wires require less space and larger ones more space.

- Any and every (Romex) wire coming out of a junction box must be snugly stapled within 3 inches of the box. These wires must then be securely stapled every 6 feet.
- Wires cannot be junctioned in a power panel. All junctions must be done in a separate junction box.
- No wire should be exposed. All wires should be covered with either a metal housing (electrical pipe) or in a wall cavity covered with wood or wall board. A wire in the ceiling of a garage can be a danger. Using wires in the ceiling to hang clothes to dry or as storage hooks is very dangerous.

Electrical work is one of the safest construction tasks because electricians know how to turn the power off and keep it off until their work is complete. You too can safely perform electrical tasks around the home if you remember that turning off the power is step one, and that if you're going to work on the wiring there is more to know than simply connecting

Ranch house 'time capsule' of 1950s living

BY ANNIE CALOVICH

WICHITA, Kan. — You can't always tell a house by its exterior. Unless you go in the door marked with the sign of The Jetsons in the Wichita, Kan., neighborhood of Benjamin Hills. And then the 1957 ranch unfolds in an interior true to its birth decade, room after room of pristine 1950s furniture, furnishings, builtins and architecture.

It's like riding a rocket back to the future.

"It's like a little time capsule," says its owner, Carter McEvoy, who feels at home in the '50s even though he wasn't born until 1960. He collected Mid-Century Modern stuff for 15 years before it was cool — and before he finally found the perfect ranch to house it all in.

That happened three years ago. This spring, his house was featured in Atomic Ranch magazine, introducing it to a national audience in a new feature of the magazine. The "Open House" feature tells the story of a ranch house in its owner's words and submitted photographs.

McEvoy thinks his house stands up to any other he's seen in the magazine. It has Frank Lloyd Wright tendencies, including right angles, geometric patterns, soaring ground-to-sky glass walls and a Brady Bunch staircase.

McEvoy rescued it from years of vacancy and "a bad '70s makeover, with the brown shag carpeting and flocked wallpaper' — the only way he was able to afford it, he says. He fixed it up with the help of carpenter-friend Jack Chase — the only way he was able to afford to, he says.

McEvoy has been at the right place at the right time to enable him to live amid the futuristic 1950s.

He was collecting his Mid-Century stuff — what most people refer to vaguely as "retro" — just ahead of its wave of popularity. It was cheap when he picked it up at garage and estate sales.

"This stuff was considered kitschy, goofy. Nobody wanted it. You went the last day and it was still there," McEvoy says.

He found one chair at a thrift store for $2, and another alongside his neighbor's trash cart. A covering of new upholstery later, and McEvoy's house is full of old furniture that looks new. There's no fade or rip in sight. The futuristic still looks like the future, not the past.

McEvoy thinks his ranch must have been a model "future house." The kitchen has the original folddown range. The den has a wet bar with original mirrored tile and a built-in, push-button automatic liquor dispenser that still pours after 49 years. In the bathroom (original tile still intact), a smooth wooden spa bench is apparently the '50s version of a tanning bed — pendant lights at varying heights are suspended above it.

McEvoy has taken the treasures and run with them.

He had Chase cover the cabinets in smooth ice-cream-colored Formica. On the shelves of the wet bar is a tropical collection of tiki mugs, and alongside the blender is a motion lamp that heats up to set water-skiers skimming blue waves. His bedroom furniture is the set his parents bought in 1964.

The house is actually a splitlevel, built into the side of a hill. You enter the front door, go up the "Brady Bunch" staircase, enter the master bedroom — and see that it's at ground level. Half of the two-car garage is underground.

McEvov is not sure who built the house, but he can't help but think it was an admirer if not a student of Frank Lloyd Wright. Two bedroom walls and the staircase and balcony railings have translucent laminate inserts encasing butterflies and leaves. They are framed in a geometric pattern reminiscent of Wright.

The exterior walls are almost all vaulting glass. When the vertical blinds are all open, "it's like looking inside a Barbie house," McEvoy says, creating a wonderful interaction between people inside and out when he has parties. His cats, with a sweeping view from their perch on the "Brady Bunch" stairs, could not be more content.

As far as McEvoy is concerned, the newness of his house and its contents has never worn off.

"It's so reflective of the time: Anything can happen. We can put a man on the moon. Cars started looking like airplanes. It's a break with tradition. There was just so much optimism, and everyone's imagination just started to flower."

As far as McEvoy is concerned, 2006 hasn't even caught up with Mid-Century Modern. "I think a lot of this is still ahead of its time. It doesn't look dated. It's futuristic."

To learn more

Here are some sources of information about ranch houses and all things Mid-Century Modern:

- Atomic Ranch is a 3-year-old quarterly magazine that sings the praises of "midcentury marvels." Find it on newsstands or at the Web site atomic-ranch.com.
- Carter McEvoy's favorite book on the subject is "Mid-Century Modern: Furniture of the 1950s" by Cara Greenberg.
- To see what merchandise is available for sale, McEvoy suggests going on eBay and typing in 'eames'' (for designer Charles Eames). "Sort it by highest price first, and you can see everything you could possibly imagine,' McEvoy says.

Finding the perfect floorboards

BY BARBARA BALLINGER

CHICAGO — Potential homebuyers often ask sellers what's underneath the carpeting, anxiously hoping the answer will be, "Hardwood floors." Preferably gleaming, of course, and in prime condition. If you're remodeling or building from scratch, you too might want hardwood floors and might wonder what's best. Brian Quinn of Birger Juell, a floor manufacturer and contractor with offices in the Merchandise Mart, tells all.

Going dark

If you want an almost black floor, opt for ebony, the darkest hue, but know that its rarity and price make it too expensive for most mortals. Better to use it as a border accent. Wenge is also very dark and pricey, but not as exorbitant. Walnut is not quite as dark but is more affordable. Mahogany's as dark as walnut and costs the same but has a slightly different look.

Bottom line: Look at samples and study grain patterns to decide what appeals most.

If you want to have wood boards stained dark, go with white oak, which accepts any color stain and isn't expensive.

Be prepared for the fact that dark floors reveal dirt and dust more than light floors do. How often you need to tidy up depends on your lifestyle — whether you have a dog, children or like to open your windows in the spring or fall to let air circulate. When you clean, use a dust mop or soft bristle brush.

Dark floors can make a room look larger if the room has lots of windows to reflect light. They also have a more modern look than light-colored floors, but they also can work well when paired with

If you choose almost black or very dark boards, their width won't matter since you won't be able to see where one board ends and another begins.

The best way to finish dark boards is to oil and wax them, which will allow scuff marks and imperfections to be buffed out. A polyurethane finish tends to scratch and be harder to repair, almost like trying to fix nail polish once it chips.

Going wide

Standard flooring is 2-inch strip oak boards; wider means 3 inches and up but usually no more than 13 inches.

Any wood can be used in wide planks, but the boards most commonly selected are walnut, maple, hickory and white oak. Avoid using hickory boards more than 8 inches wide because they're prone to expand and contract too much.

Wider boards tend to give a country look, which sometimes looks smarter with antiques, but for a twist, salvaged boards up to 12 inches wide or so can look great with modern furnishings. The most modern look is to mix and match boards in different widths, from between 4 inches and 6 inches to between 8 inches and 10 inches.

If you use boards more than 3 inches wide, be sure they're glued and nailed to adjacent boards, rather than just nailed, to avoid warping.

About embellishment

Paint or stain floor boards to add extra color or pattern. Paint creates an opaque look; stain reveals the wood's natural grain.

Use inlays sparingly when adding a border in a room or when dressing up the center of an entry foyer. Inlays or medallions in the center of a room tend to create a formal look. Beware: Too many inlays or medallions may make the setting look a tad ostentatious or pretentious.

Zigzag rather than go straight by laying boards in a pattern like bricks on a walk rather arranging them in straight rows.

Exotic woods such as Caribbean Koa, with an almost striped pattern and in a dark chocolate brown; or Bubinga, in a more solid design and mahogany hue, add interest and cachet to a room, but tend to be pricey, so use them judiciously.

When selecting an exotic wood, be sure your distributor knows the wood's history to ensure that you're helping rather than hurting the environment.

Odds and ends

If you don't want the same floors in every room, try to stay within the same family of colors rather than put together opposite ends of the spectrum, like a pale maple and a Brazilian cherry.

When installing radiant pads underneath wood boards, be sure the wood has acclimated in the house for at least a week before being installed, to help prevent warping.

To achieve the stain you'll be happiest with, have a large enough sample done — 2 feet by 2 feet rather than 1 foot by 1 foot or smaller. Examine the sample at various times of the day and evening before making your selection. Natural and artificial light will change the look.

Know that bamboo, a great renewable resource and a good floor choice, is a grass and not a wood, and it can dent.

In general, less care of wooden floorboards is better. Use water with a splash of vinegar to clean floors rather than scrub them aggressively. If the floor has been waxed and looks lifeless, strip the wax and reoil. If the floor has been polyurethaned, have it screened and recoated.

The biggest mistake most homeowners make is to not educate themselves sufficiently about different woods, stains, colors and finishes. Spend time looking, researching and talking to experts before any boards are put down.

Renaming files puts photos out of user's reach

Q. I did a very foolish thing by ignoring a warning message when moving personal data files using Windows Explorer to new folders. I had originally saved digital camera video clips in folders under My Videos. They have .mov extensions, and I use QuickTime to view them. I have attached an example file.

This file of a treasured video clip stopped working after I set up new folders and transferred them into those new folders (here is where I ignored the warning that they may not be playable). Now when I try to play them, I receive a message "the movie file Dec242004A.mov cannot be found. Without this file the movie cannot play properly."

The data appears to be intact, as a size is indicated. These are videos of my grandson's first Christmas, first time sitting up, etc., so I really hope that you can help.

- Bob Forman comcast.net A. This renaming the icon by giving it a right-click and picking Rename. Be sure to change only .avi to .mov. If that works and vou get that precious video clip back, hurrah. may be a tough problem to fix, Mr. F., but I can definitely show you how to find out if all is lost or if, as suspect, the icons that deliver that error message got misnamed and no longer point to the actual files they are supposed to represent. I don't know how this happened, but I can tell from the bad icon that you sent me that somehow your Apple QuickTime format .mov movies got renamed as Windows format AVIs and now end in .avi. Specifically, the icon on your Christmas Eve movie that you sent me is named Dec242004A.avi instead of DEC242004A.mov. It would be great if you can fix this by renaming the icons to change them back from .avi to the

.mov in which they were created.

So try renaming the icon by giving it a right-click and picking Rename. Be sure to change only .avi to .mov. If that works and you get that precious video clip back, hurrah. If not, read on. Actually I want you and the rest of the world to read on anyway.

Whenever a Windows user encounters problems with icons not pointing to the correct file or extension, the most effective fix is to use the Windows Search tool to find all of the files by that name no matter where they might be lost on the computer. So click on Start and then select the Search option. Usually this would be done by using as a search term *.mov.

The asterisk before the extension name is a wild-card command that will return a list of all of the .mov files on the computer. In your case, you could also type in Dec232004A, and the search engine will find both that bum icon and the correct .mov file wherever it got shunted.

Fairmont native Robert Tinnell, an lready well-established filmmaker and author, decided to take the independent publishing route for his West Virginia-centric graphic novel "Feast of the Seven Fishes," earning him a nomination for an Eisner Award in

"The funny thing about 'Feast of the Seven Fishes' was that no one wanted me to do it," Tinnell said. "My own manager was against it. Who wants to read a comic book about a bunch of West Virginia Italians cooking fish on Christmas Eve? As it turns out — a lot Though Tinnell is now adapting Anthony Bourdain's novel "Bobby At Work" for the big screen, he has also kept one foot in the page-and-panel world by recently producing two graphic novels, "The Wicked West" and "The Black Forest," for Image Comics. He also plans to release "The Wicked West 2" this fall and direct the movie adaptation of "Feast of the date the written word," Tinnell said. "Cave man artists were telling stories using sequential art. And I sometimes wonder if we might not be heading back in that direction. The thing that's great about comic storytelling is that it is acceptable to embrace the aside, to embrace getting into the characters mindset, and to be able to break free of the traditional three-act structure. It's the kind of medium that knows no bounds."

And, of course, that leads back into the popularity of comic book movies and television series. Do they draw more attention to comics as an art form and a form of literature, or does all the attention to the big, established companies further sweep indie comics under the rug just as the concept is reaching a peak?

"The danger is that if a couple comic book adaptations tank in a row, the whole industry might get tarred with that brush. But thankfully, that hasn't happened," Tinnell said. "Any time the indies can get a hit of big cash and raise the profile of their books and sell more books — that's obviously a good thing."

OFFICE COACH

Make it right after you've done wrong

BY MARIE G. McINTYRE, PH.D. McClatchy-Tribune News Service

Q. I have screwed up a lot in my job for the past two vears. Because of my mistakes and many complaints from others, my boss now has very little trust or confidence in my abilities. I really want to change his opinion of me, but I don't know how. To make things worse, a senior manager, who works very closely with my boss, seems determined to kick me out of my job. What can I do?

Cleaning Up My Act A. The good news is that perceptions can be changed. The bad news is that they seldom change quickly. After two years of poor performance, you will need more than a declaration of good intentions to alter your boss' opinion. But your willingness to accept personal responsibility for past screwups is definitely a big plus.

To begin the rehabilitation process, admit to your manager that you haven't done your best work for the past couple of years. Tell him that you regret those mistakes and want to be a better employee in the future.

After he recovers from the shock of such an honest admission, have your boss explain exactly what you must do to regain his trust. Then ask his advice about the hostile senior manager: "I've heard that Mr. Smith has a poor opinion of me, and I'd like to change that.

progress This will let you know whether your efforts are succeeding.

Because of your history, you will have no room for error in the future. You must consistently do the best job you can, work well with everyone, and never complain. If you keep this up, perceptions will begin to change. But don't expect an immediate shift. It will take at least six months of positive evidence to prove that your transformation is for real.

Q. The owner of the business where I work is a tyrant. Sometimes she blows up at us, then at other times she gives us the silent treatment. She constantly changes the way she wants to do things, then gets mad when we make those changes. She hires her relatives and lets them do whatever they want, while the rest of us have to work long hours for little pay. I am tired of being overworked and underpaid and given no respect. What can the employees do about this?

— Abused A: Unfortunately, the single relevant fact in this situation is summed up in one word: "owner." If your unstable and abusive boss owns the companv. she can do pretty much whatever she wants, as long as it's not illegal. And her relatives can do whatever she allows them to get away with.

You could confront her about these issues, but based on your description, I doubt it would do any good. Unless you can arrange for a lobotomy, her behavior isn't going to change. Since no one can tell her what to do, she's free to act any way she likes. And she apparently enjoys acting like a maniac.

So here's my question: If you are overworked, underpaid and treated with no respect, why on earth are you staying there? We outlawed slavery long ago, so you need to start looking for a more humane place to work. Although a job search is no fun, it's better than the living hell that you describe.

Caregiving firms lift load on families

Companies help seniors with an array of daily tasks

BY BOB MOOS

The Dallas Morning News (MCT)

f baby boomers want to know what to expect when it comes to caring for an aging parent, they can ask Janet Houston. The Dallas woman not only has been a caregiver, she has also launched a company that offers any service you can imagine related to caring for the elderly.

Her 2-month-old Dallas company, AssuraSource, can do everything from organizing a senior's bill-paying to finding a nursing home to developing a comprehensive care plan for a parent living

Her holistic approach provides a snapshot of the $158 billion-ayear home care and nursing home industry, which experts predict will become even larger as the number of older Americans doubles over the next 25 years.

Houston said she doesn't want others to go through what she did when she cared for her mother and her husband's father. Somehow she satisfied the competing demands of a full-time job, five children and two ailing parents for 10 years.

"I often didn't know where to turn for help," she said. "I just wanted somebody to step in and take charge.'

Uncompensated family members provide two-thirds of the caregiving in this country, but experts expect that more families will turn to geriatric care managers, home care agencies, home health care aides and other professionals.

"Family caregivers often work or they live far from their loved one," said Kathleen Kelly, executive director of the Family Caregiver Alliance. "Sooner or later, many reach their breaking point and realize they can't do it all themselves."

AssuraSource has installed a pill-dispensing machine that reminds seniors to take their medication. If they don't, the machine is linked to a phone so it can notify the company's nurse to call and check on them.

Deciding which companies to staff members plus caregivers, call for help can be nerve-racking.

"Many families end up piecing together a hodgepodge of businesses to solve their senior's problems — everything from home repairmen to nurses' aides," said Mary Jo Gibson, senior policy adviser with the AARP Public Policy Institute.

That's where Houston intends to gain a competitive advantage over other caregiving companies starting up.

"Families who come to us don't have to go any further," Houston said. "We help them determine what kinds of care they need, and then we provide it ourselves. Call it the soup-to-nuts approach to caregiving."

That could mean helping a frail senior get dressed, taking someone to a doctor's appointment, even finding pet care or fixing a leaky roof.

AssuraSource has served about two dozen families in its first two months. Houston said she projects her company, which is privately owned, will have a caseload of 200 Dallas-Fort Worth families by the end of its first year.

AssuraSource has five core registered nurses, social workers and others on contract.

The marketing team has been visiting with doctors, hospital social workers and senior organi-

Kelly said she expects Assura-Source's "one-stop shopping" will prove popular among harried boomers juggling jobs and other family responsibilities, and looking for quick solutions to the dayto-day crises of caregiving.

"You can't overstate the convenience factor with the boomer generation," she said. "Other businesses may offer one service or another, but this company is saying, 'We'll handle all of it for you.' That's smart.'

A single bill from a single company is also likely to be a big drawing card with consumers, said Doni Van Ryswyk, manager of aging programs for the North Central Texas Area Agency on

Steve Mathieson, of Weatherford, Texas, says he called Assura-Source because he had become concerned about his mother, who is in her late 80s and lives with him. She had fallen around the house and sometimes forgot to take her prescriptions.

The next day, a geriatric care manager visited Mathieson and his mother, Margaret, and inspected their home. She recommended handrails, physical therapy and weekly visits from a home care aide to help with chores.

The care manager worked with Mathieson's physician to arrange for the therapy, and she dispatched one of the company's care aides to the older woman's home for four hours every Wednesday.

"It's been a big relief," Mathieson said. "Mom's getting good

Not all clients require continuous care, Houston said. Some have one-time requests, such as the couple who had been transferred to North Texas from Florida and needed to find a nursing home in the area for a parent.

"We worked with the family and settled on a place that accepted Medicaid patients," she said.

The company can also help people in Dallas find care for elderly relatives who live outside the area, Houston said.

AssuraSource's fees vary widely, ranging from $75 for a simple consultation with a care manager to about $4,000 per month for eight hours of in-home care every day.

Medication monitoring and dispensing costs $149 per month, vital sign monitoring is $79 per month and a monthly visit by a care manager costs $79, according to a company fee schedule.

In-home caregivers cost $17 per

Like most families hiring caregivers, AssuraSource's clients pay for the company's services out of pocket. Medicare and Medicaid generally don't cover geriatric care management and in-

"That's the downside to this," said Kelly of the Family Caregiver Alliance. "Families with resources can turn to professional caregivers for a helping hand. Families strapped for cash don't have that option."

STROKES

Apparently, it hasn't stopped the creators in the Morgantown area.

Clark Perry, a member of the Emerging Writers Program at Universal Studios in Los Angeles and a former screenwriting and playwriting professor at WVU and Fairmont State University, offered some insight on how to get a comic or graphic novel published, independently or otherwise:

"I've met lots of comics writers and publishers over the past year. One recommended way into this business is hook up with a new artist and work together on a project," said Perry, who has been working to adapt a West Virginia-based monster movie screenplay entitled "Brood X" into a feature film or graphic novel for several years.

"There are lots of Web sites and online bulletin boards where writers and artists can meet each other. Once you've invested in the work, you want to market it to a publisher that lets creators maintain the rights to the stories and characters they create."

Kulina said it's not as difficult as you think to get your work in the public eye.

"I go to conventions to make connections and talk to people. It takes time, but if you can make a product that rises above the rest, it will surface and you will be noticed," Kulina said. "Evaluate your abilities and find out how you can you use them. Once you get started, be stubborn, and put everything else aside. It won't be an epiphany; it takes a long time to become who you want to be."

Oh deer

As the weather turns cooler, more deer are on the move near your back roads, main streets and crowded highways, increasing the possibility of a deer-car accident. Each year, deer cause more than 1.5 million vehicle collisions, resulting in 150 occupant deaths, tens of thousands of injuries and more than $1 billion in vehicle damage. The majority of these accidents occur during deer season, which

"As our wildlife habitat continues to shrink, accidents with deer and other animals are likely to increase," said Jeanne Salvatore, senior vice president at the Insurance Information Institute. "We need to be more vigilant in our driving.'

Salvatore offers the following tips:

- Deer facts: Deer are everywhere from rural roads to busy highways and they usually travel in groups. So if you see one near the road, keep your eye out for its cousins.
- Deer reflexes: Deer often dart into traffic when faced with headlights and horns. When you see one, brake firmly, but stay in your lane to avoid collisions with other cars.
- Bad timing: Deer usually come out from dusk to early morning. Use your high beams when possible to better illuminate deer eyes.

Fourth quarter an important time for planning

BY JOYCE M. ROSENBERG

NEW YORK — The fourth quarter is arguably the most important time of the year for small-business owners — it's when they should be doing year-end tax planning and looking ahead to 2007. Capital spending, hiring plans and employee compensation should all be items on the agenda.

Fourth-quarter planning, whether you do it yourself or with the help of a certified public accountant or tax professional, isn't something to put off or ignore. There can be a heavy price, and not just in taxes, to be paid early in the new year, if you haven't looked at your books and thought about how your company is likely to fare for the rest of 2006 and into early next year.

"As a CPA, I can do a lot to help you before the year ends. After Dec. 31, there's not a lot I can do," said Bob Doyle, president of Doyle Wealth Management Inc., in St. Petersburg, Fla. Moreover, by looking at your business over a longer period of time — accountants suggest six months - you can make better decisions not just about money, but about running your business.

Doyle said an accountant in particular will want to see a company's balance sheet as well as its income statement — not just for this year, but past years as well. Balance sheets are key because they reveal a company's cash flow, and income statements will help an owner determine whether the business is likely to turn a profit.

Dovle noted that it's critical to look at the information on these documents from a historical perspective. For example, a company might have a big profit by year's end, but if the first quarter has historically been a slow period—as cash flow will reveal—an owner shouldn't be gleefully spending. He or she should be putting money aside for those lean days.

Now is the time to be thinking about capital spending. Many owners are anxious to take advantage of what's known as the Section 179 deduction, which allows a small business to deduct up front rather than depreciate over time the cost of certain kinds of equipment bought and put into service during the tax year. For 2006, the deduction, named for a section of the Internal Revenue Code, is a maximum of $108,000.

Again, how much you spend will depend on your cash flow into early next year. If you have a lot of cash on hand now and will be flush in the first quarter of 2007, you might want to accelerate that computer or vehicle purchase into 2006, take the Section 179 deduction and save on this year's taxes. But if early 2007 looks to be cashpoor, you might be better off waiting.

This is also the time to be thinking about your retirement plan — Doyle said a realistic look at your financial statements will help you determine how much you can contribute for 2006. But you might also want to be thinking about changes in your plan; if you want to switch to a different kind of plan, you still have time to do so and get the benefits for 2006. A caveat: If the plan you're interested in is a SIM-PLE, or Savings Incentive Match Plans for Employees, you have only until Oct. 1 to create one.

If you need more information about retirement plans, look at IRS Publication 560, Retirement Plans for Small Business. Your accountant can help you get started, but you might also need the help of a human resources or benefits consultant to determine what kind of plan is best for your business.

Manufacturers' fourth-quarter planning should include taking stock of their inventory. If they have too much on hand, Doyle suggested, it might be time to sell it off, even at a

The family of Geneva Harvey would like to thank everyone who came to her service and shared in our grief at losing our Mom. Your presence and words of condolence helped so much. Thank you to all that sent flowers they were beautiful.

We would also like to thank her doctors, Dr. Alan Hess and Dr. Steven Maxwell. We knew the end was coming soon but with your words of kindness and the special care you gave our Mom we will be forever

To the doctors and staff at Mon. General Emergency room, you all treated her with such kindness and respect that you made her last hours peaceful and painless. You will never know how very much this means to us, to know Mom didn't suffer in her final hours.

To Pastor Meredith, for some-one that didn't really know our Mom, your words sounded as if you had known her forever, Thank you.

I "Vicky" would like to say a special thanks to Mom's siswords of comfort and your support I would have been lost. Thank you from the bottom of my heart. She loved you all so very much.

There are no words to described the service provided by McCulla's Funeral Home. Dy MCCUIIA'S FUNERAL HOME. Unbelieveable kindness, heart felt sorrow, and caring. In such a time of stress and confusion, you were the light at the end of a very dark tunnel. Thank you so much.

EMPLOYMENT & TECHNOLOGY

Facing a fork

BY JAN NORMAN

Sooner or later, every business owner faces a decision that will change the course of the business.

These aren't everyday choices about which phone system best suits the business or whether to dump a slow-paying customer. These are real fork-in-the-road choices that can lead to enormous growth or thrust the business into a different industry.

"A lot of business owners don't realize they're at a fork in the road," said Newport Beach management consultant Barri Carion of Carion Consulting.

''They're just stuck and facing the same problem over and over.' The topic is so common for business owners that Carion and Camille Jayne, president of the local chapter of the National Association of Women Business Owners, chose it for the group's September meeting at the Irvine Hyatt Regency Hotel. Three business executives explain how their own companies chose a path when faced with a fork in the road.

Building community

Sue Parks, WalkStyles Inc., Laguna Hills Parks started walking in order to cope with the stress of her top-level executive jobs at Kinko's and Gateway. When colleagues started asking how she managed to stay fit and trim in spite of long work hours and stress, Parks realized that helping others lead a healthier, walking lifestyle could be a business. Initially, the idea was to sell attractive, comfortable exercise clothing and a monitoring device called DashTrak. Those purchases would bring customers to Walk-Styles' Web site to track their progress and join the online community. That Internet interaction would market the company. As Parks visited stores around the country that carry WalkStyles clothing and talked to customers, she realized she had it backward. If WalkStyles had an informative, encouraging Web site for all people interested in walking for fitness, more people would come to the site, become part of the community and then buy WalkStyles products and services. It was WalkStyles' fork in the "People are forming online communities based on their interests," Parks said. "That's a big strategic change [for WalkStyles] and a big investment." Instead of spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on marketing, the company spent it on developing a useful Web site and community of walkers. Before taking this different path, Parks wrote a new business plan to validate the proposed business

"It's a great way to differentiate ourselves" from other companies that sell casual clothing and equipment to measure walking distance, calories burned and other information, she said.

Buy or make products Roger Clawson, Golden Spoon Yogurt Co., Mission Viejo

Jeff Barnes was an early entrant into the frozen yogurt craze of the 1980s, with a small shop in Tustin, said Business Development Manager Roger Clawson. When the second shop opened in what is now Lake Forest, he changed the named to Golden Spoon.

Instead of buying from one yogurt supplier, Barnes would buy what he considered the best vanilla yogurt from one company, the best chocolate from another and the best strawberry from a third. With that strategy, he couldn't take advantage of volume discounts, but he had a loyal clientele, Clawson

But as the frozen yogurt fad waned, and suppliers went out of business in the early 1990s, Barnes faced a fork in the road, Clawson said. Barnes could either buy what he thought was inferior product or cream quality to it," Clawson said. After working with a dairy in Chino, Barnes in 1996 introduced his proprietary base yogurt in vanilla, chocolate, strawberry and peanut butter. The transition to all proprietary Golden Spoon yogurt took four years. Now the company makes 51 flavors, offering 16 to 17 different

of any new Golden Spoon products. Always working on improvements, Barnes developed another chocolate yogurt that he thought was far superior to every chocolate on the market, Clawson said. "But when he put it into the stores next to the old chocolate, the customers greatly preferred the old. So he dropped the new chocolate." Golden Spoon has grown from about 12 stores in 1996 to 60 now and average annual sales per store are $450,000, 45 percent higher than the industry average, Clawson said. "There's no question the proprietary products are the reason for the company's growth," he said. "The product entrenched us deeper with our loyal customer base and they went to work on their friends and family to become customers too."

Employees or contractors Sherry Benjamins, S. Benjamins & Co., Seal Beach In 1997, Sherry Benjamins used her experience in human resources management at Baxter International, Lee Hecht Harrison and other companies to start her own recruitment strategy firm.

As more clients sought her services, not just with strategy but also to recruit executives and retain employees, Benjamins added independent consultants to help with the workload.

the more Benjamins built an infrastructure and standards for the work provided to clients. She stood at a fork in the road: either restrict the company's growth

The more demands clients had, or switch from independent consultants to employees. "We had certain expectations and standards. We had weekly reporting goals and had to hold people accountable, and that requires them to be employees," she explained. "First, I had to get very clear on what we wanted to be as a company. I had to focus on just a couple of specialties ... rather than do whatever of whom work from their homes.

a client wanted." Today she has 14 employees, all

High-tech jobs grow this year

BY RYAN BLITSTEIN

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The U.S. high-technology industry added more than 140,000 jobs during the first half of this year, nearly doubling the growth during the same period a year ago, according to a report released Tuesday.

The sector employed 5.8 million people as of the analysis by the American Electronics Association, an industry trade group. Much of the growth came from software services and engineering and tech services companies, which each added more than 40,000

this June, the largest number since 2002, said jobs between January and June. These broad categories include software makers such as Oracle and Internet companies

High-tech manufacturing companies such as Intel in aggregate gained about 23,000 jobs, and communications services companies added just 5,000 employees during the first half

The tech industry's 2.5 percent employment growth lags behind the 3.5 percent job growth of the private sector as a whole.

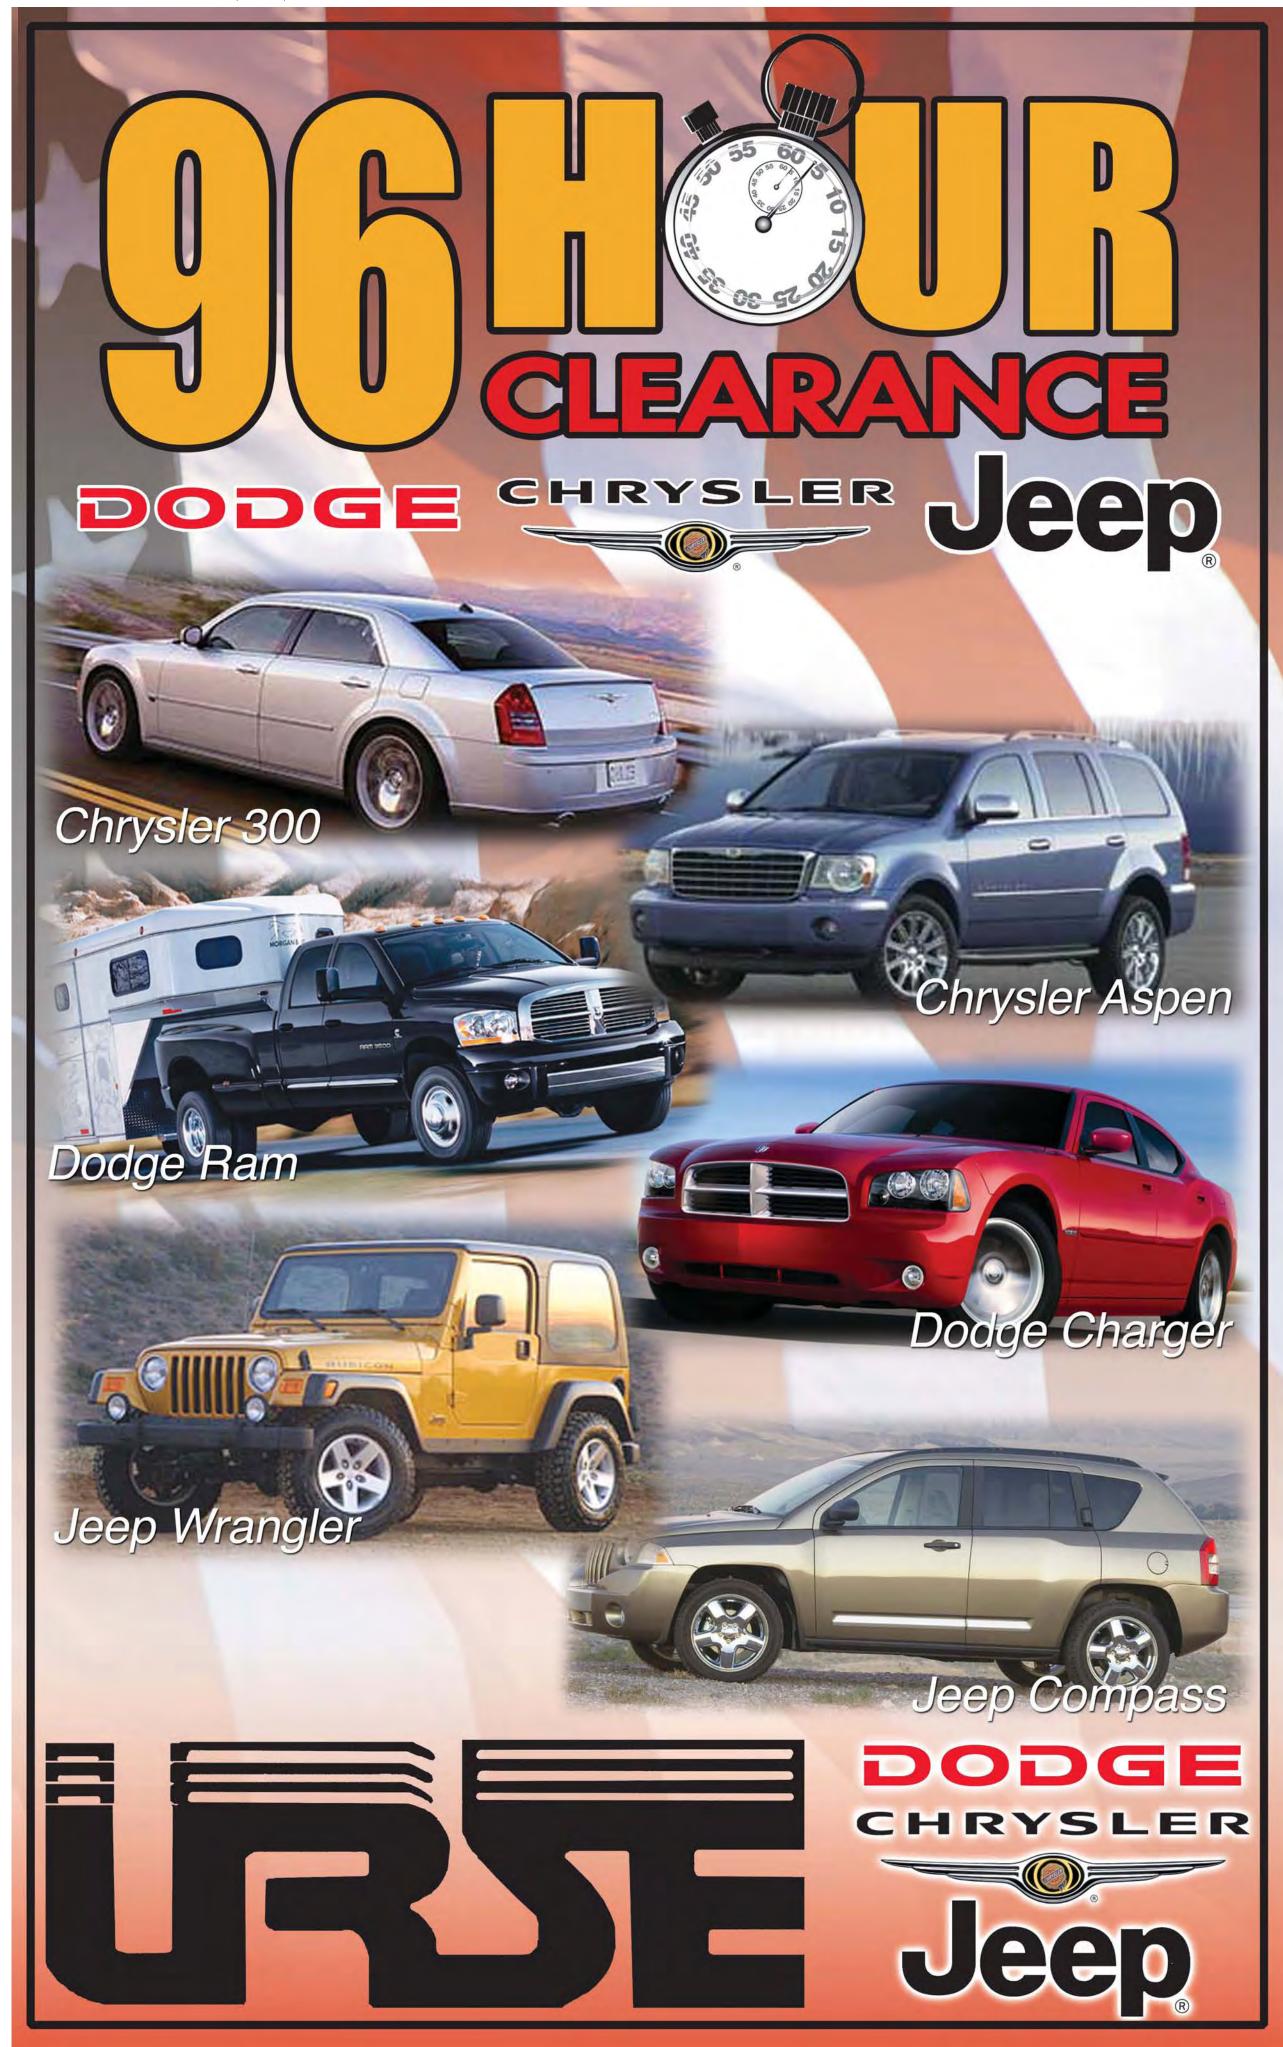

"We think the growth could be much higher," said Josh James, AeA senior manager, research and industry analysis, who contributed to the report. "Numerous tech companies are having a difficult time finding qualified workers, both because fewer U.S. kids are coming out of universities with science and engineering backgrounds and companies are having a more difficult time hiring foreign nationals because of the visa process.'

The AeA compiled the data from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, a federal agency, and data for Silicon Valley tech employees is not yet available. The AeA data only take into account employees in the high-tech industry, but not technical employees at other businesses. That means an accountant at Cisco Systems would be counted, but a software engineer at Wells Fargo would not be.

Ford steps up with a new Expedition

BY FRANK A. AUKOFER

Scripps Howard News Service It took more than 70 years, but Ford finally has a competitor for the venerable Chevrolet Suburban.

The Suburban, first introduced in 1935, had the giant-sized sport utility market virtually to itself over the vears

Surprisingly, with all of its expertise in trucks, Ford never saw fit to directly challenge the Suburban. A few years back, it went the oneupmanship route with the bigger Excursion. But it was too much — too heavy-duty, mostly — and it never caught on.

Ford was somewhat of a contender in the class with its full-size Expedition. But despite the fact that it had three rows of seats, it did not have the Suburban's cargo capacity and competed mainly against the Chevrolet Tahoe and its siblings.

For 2007, the competitive set changes. There now are two new Expedition models: the standard size, which still butts up against the Tahoe, and the new Expedition EL, which for the first time gives Ford a bumper-to-bumper alternative to the Suburban.

The EL is almost 15 inches longer than the standard Expedition, with a wheelbase — the distance between the front and rear axles — that is a full foot longer.

Most of that stretching has gone into increased cargo space. The EL has 43 cubic feet of space behind the third row of seats, or 24 cubic feet more than the standard model's 19 cubic feet.

That means you can carry eight people, with a luggage area that exceeds the capacity of two Lincoln Town Cars. If you fold the EL's second and third row seats, the cargo area expands to a cavernous 131 cubic feet. The area also can accommodate the time-honored 4X8-foot sheet of plywood.

Ford makes the whole configuration user-friendly as well. The third-row seats — as either standard equipment or an option - are motorized and fold flat at the touch of a button. The manual second-row seats easily flip forward and "kneel down" to provide a flat cargo floor from the tailgate to the backs of the front-row seats.

Moreover, for hauling or tailgate parties, the rear section of the cargo area has a solid shelf that can be used to partition the area vertically or horizontally.

The front seats are the biggest and most comfortable in the vehicle, but nobody gets short-changed. With a nearly flat floor, the second row accommodates three adults with plenty of knee and head room, and the third row seat does almost as well, although it is narrower and is best used by two adults or three children.

It also is reasonably easy to climb into the third row, thanks to second-row seats that, in addition to kneeling down, flip forward out of the ■ Base price: $32,995.

Acura RDX

■ Price as tested: $37,165.

■ EPA rating: 19 miles per gallon city driving, 23 mpg on the highway.

■ Details: Front-engine, all-wheel-drive SUV with a 2.3-liter, turbocharged 4cylinder engine with 240 horsepower and a 5-speed automatic transmission.

A good SUV, but is RDX a good value?

BY STEVEN COLE SMITH

First impression of the 2007 Acura RDX: "Hey, I like this little SUV!"

Second impression of the 2007 Acura RDX, after looking at the sticker price: "But not that much." Honda in general, Acura in particular, has never offered a genuinely sporty sport ute until its all-new 2007 RDX, which the company calls an "entry premium SUV." Acura targets the BMW X3 as the RDX's central competition; the X3 is another vehicle I liked better until I saw the

There is, however, a lot to like in the RDX. The vehicle's 2.3-liter four-cylinder engine is the first Honda or Acura powerplant in the U.S. to use a turbocharger, which is essentially a fan, driven by exhaust gases, that blows air and fuel into the engine under pressure. The idea with the RDX is to provide the fuel economy of a four-cylinder engine, and the power of a V-6. There's adequate power, all right — 240 horses and 260 foot-pounds of torque — but fuel mileage is nothing special at an EPA-rated 19 mpg city, 23 mpg highway. And like most turbocharged engines, premium gas is preferred. This spunky engine is nicely matched to a fivespeed automatic transmission that can be manually shifted via little paddles on the steering wheel. Power is delivered smoothly, with little of the "turbo lag" from which turbocharged engines sometimes suffer — turbo lag is a pause after you press the accelerator, before the rush of power arrives.

The RDX's all-wheel-drive system also eliminates torque steer, which is when a powerful front-wheel-drive vehicle tries to steer slightly left or right because of engine torque. The vehicle's sophisticated AWD system shifts power from wheel to wheel to maximize traction; this is, however, a pavement SUV, lacking the necessary gearing and underbody hardware to work well off-road.

Outside, the RDX is handsome enough, but there are a lot of handsome midsize SUVs. This is how Acura describes the styling: "Befitting its agenda as an urban sports vehicle for young professional singles or couples, the RDX body design is powerful and athletic with muscular bodylines that impart a sense of command and control. The exterior styling theme was an 'urban running back' fitted with 'athletic armor." I have no idea what that means.

Inside, the RDX and its occupants benefit from Acura's typical quality and attention to detail. The test vehicle had the only real option, a $3,500 "technology package" that included an upgraded 10-speaker sound system with six-disc CD changer, a navigation system, a rearview camera and several other features, which make this perhaps the most sophisticated smaller SUV on the market. Front seats are comfortable and roomy; rear seats are fine for two, suitable for three. There is no third row. Overall length is 180.7 inches, 2 inches longer than the 2007 Honda CR-V.

On the road, the RDX handles very well, thanks in part to its big 18-inch tires and wheels. The ride on the highway, though, was a little rougher than expected. I would give up a little cornering prowess for a better ride, because despite its pretensions, this is, after all, an SUV. There's a long list of safety features, including stability control, side and side-curtain air bags and traction control.

Mercedes-Benz ML63 packs power and quality

BY STEVEN COLE SMITH

The Orlando Sentinel (MCT) e could be here all day debating the logic of an ultra-high-performance sport utility vehicle. Even enthusiasts who love fast vehicles wonder why anyone would need a super-powerful SUV.

Listen: I don't build 'em. I just write about 'em. I've written about the 420-horsepower Jeep Grand Cherokee SRT-8 and the 450-horsepower Porsche Cayenne Turbo.

But now comes — depending on your perspective — perhaps the most compelling, or the most absurd, SUV of them all: the 2007 Mercedes-Benz ML63 AMG, with a 6.3-liter, 503-horsepower V-8 engine.

How Mercedes — or more accurately, its in-house hot-rod shop, AMG — accomplished this is pretty simple: It took a 6.3-liter V-8 used in other products, such as the E63 AMG station wagon or the CLS63 AMG sedan, and jammed it under the hood of Mercedes' Alabama-built M-Class sport ute, which was redesigned in 2005. The M-Class sport ute came with either a 3.5-liter, 268horsepower V-6 or a 5.0-liter V-8 with 302 horsepower.

Mercedes-Benz added a beefedup seven-speed automatic transmission, big P295/40ZR-20 performance tires on alloy wheels and a specially tuned suspension that make you forget the ML63 AMG weighs a whopping 5,093 pounds and is 73.3 inches tall. That suspension, plus every electronic bell and whistle you can imagine, lets the ML63 AMG corner like a sports car, but still, the ride is more than acceptably smooth.

And to make this whole proposition even stranger, Mercedes-Benz insists that the ML63 AMG can be taken off-road, though that thought never occurred to me. Specifications list a transmission that, when you drive off-road, adapts its shift patterns to your requirements. Performance listings include a "maximum lowspeed water fording depth," but that depth is "to be determined," presumably waiting for a report from the first customer who tries it. But there just isn't much ground clearance, and there are a lot of expensive-looking aluminum suspension pieces under there, so let's just keep it on the pavement, OK?

Mercedes does, however, rate the ML63 AMG to tow 5,000 pounds, which isn't bad for a vehicle that, the company says, can go from 0 to 60 mph in 4.8 seconds.

Inside, the ML63 AMG has some of the nicest leather upholstery and burled walnut trim you have ever seen. Instruments and controls are typically meansbusiness German, though they aren't hard to figure out. After all, this is a vehicle that was developed for an American market, and it shows in the nice cupholders, a big, illuminated two-tier glove box and zillionwatt Harmon Kardon stereo with "digital surround-sound."

For what it is, I can't fault the ML63 AMG, except for its penchant to visit gas stations, 91octane premium, please. The quality and fit is impeccable, and the performance astounding, especially because it is accomplished without turbochargers and superchargers. BMW used to be the dominant German premium manufacturer for high-performance vehicles, but man, these past few years AMG has tweaked most every Mercedes product into a roster of superb hot rods.

You already know it doesn't come cheap, right? With shipping, the ML63 AMG costs $86,275, about double the cost of the Jeep Grand Cherokee SRT-8, which isn't quite as fast, but is every bit as compelling — or Your call. Your money.

Shelby GT is sure to turn heads

BY MATT NAUMAN

General Motors stole some of the nostalgic-mojo momentum from Ford's Mustang by first showing a Chevy Camaro concept in Detroit earlier this year, and then saying it will build the car. Dodge is doing the same with its Challenger.

But that new Challenger won't go on sale until 2008, and the new Camaro won't arrive until early 2009, and Ford knows it'll sell a couple of hundred thousand more Mustangs between now and then.

To make sure that the Mustang, revised and substantially improved in 2005, stays hot, Ford Motor has started making special versions for enthusiasts and collectors.

We've seen all this before, of course, when that original '64 Mustang spawned all manner of GT, Boss, Mach1, Shelby and Cobra models over the next several years.

So, if everything old is new again as we enter a second muscle-car era — even if this one is fueled by nostalgia and not cheap gas — then No. 1 on the charts is the 2007 Shelby GT500, just now reaching deal-

Coming next year is a Shelby GT (non-500) version of the Mustang. You also can rent a Shelby Mustang GT-H at Hertz locations in 25 cities. There's even a rumor that Ford will produce a new Mustang Boss in 2007.

After a few days holding the keys to a bright red Shelby GT500 convertible, I can testify that this car draws a crowd.

A pair of delivery drivers outside my favorite Chinese restaurant made me pop the hood. They peppered me with questions after I ate peppered shrimp. (OK, it was orange chicken, but I couldn't resist that parallel construction.) Two moms at our swim club coyly said they wanted to see the car, borrowed the keys and took a ride without asking permission.

AUTOMOTIVE REVIEWS

BY JIM MATEJA

Chicago Tribune 1(MCT)

Base price: $56,405; Engine: 6.2-liter, 403-h.p. V-8; Fuel economy: 13 mpg city/19 highway. Generation III. AWD standard; a lower priced 2WD version arrives later. Borrows some styling cues from the Sixteen concept sedan. Potent V-8 so there's no problem towing. But mileage is paltry. But, in 2008, that V-8 will shut off 4 cylinders to conserve fuel. Sedan-like ride thanks to Road Sensing Suspension that responds in milliseconds to changes in the surface. Stability control with all-speed traction control and roll mitigation control is standard. Nice touches:

Remote start, power adjustable pedals and power liftgate. CHEVROLET AVALANCHE LT:

Base price: $32,295; Engine: 5.3-liter, 320-h.p. V-8; Fuel economy: 15 mpg city/21 highway. Short cargo bed that makes it easier to motor around in traffic and especially in the parking lot. Rear cabin wall folds down to extend bed into the cabin. Lockable compartments built into the sidewalls for tools or, thanks to the plastic lining and drain holes, to hold ice and pop. New for 2007, key fob locks the tailgate with no need for a key. Rearview camera shows what's behind on the navigation screen to spot the boat and/or trailer to hitch up, but $195 camera requires $2,145 navi system. V-8 comes with active fuel management to shut off 4 cylinders. Will also burn E85. Very good ride and handling with stability control and four-wheel ABS as standard.

CHEVROLET SUBURBAN AWD

LT: Base: $39,665; Engine: 5.3liter, 310-h.p. V-8 with cylinder deactivation; Fuel economy: 15 mpg city/20 highway. Total remake — inside and out, front to rear. Three rows of generously sized and well-cushioned seats with power fold and flip option in the second row. The 5.3-liter has active fuel management to shut down 4 cylinders when cruising. Mileage low, but better than previous model. Smaller Tahoe gets a hybrid next year. Though big and heavy, ride is very smooth thanks to standard premium suspension. Handling decent but a 5,800-pound vehicle doesn't have the grace of a ballerina.

CHEVROLET TAHOE LT 4WD: Base price: $37,665; Engine: 5.3-liter, 320-h.p. V-8; Fuel economy: 15 mpg city/21 highway. The long-awaited redesign of Chevy's full-size SUV sports rounded body panels, a more powerful yet more fuel efficient V-8 that shuts off 4 cylinders when not needed (and a hybrid coming next year), smooth ride, unusually quiet cabin and such nice touches as power pedals. remote start and power liftgate. though at extra cost. But 5 inches has been added to overall length, and it still handles like a big SUV. Stability control with roll mitigation control is standard. Three rows of seats; second row is power operated, third

price: $15,425; Engine: 2-liter, 158-h.p. 4-cylinder; Fuel economy: 26 mpg city/30 mpg highway. Crossover replacement for Neon with FWD and AWD versions. Far better looks, room, comfort, performance and innovation than Neon, though about the same size. Spirited 2-liter. Crisp steering and good handling with its 17-inch radials that will be even better when electronic stability control is added this year. Neat features include pull-down speakers in the hatchlid, beverage cooler in the dash, removable flashlight in the cargo hold headliner and 115-volt outlet for laptop computer. Gripes include manual seats and figuring out which options you can get on which trim level and at what price.

GMC YUKON DENALI AWD: Base price: $47,115; Engine: 6.2-liter, 380-h.p. V-8; Fuel economy: 13 mpg city/19 highway. A major remake in size, shape, looks, power and features. Wider front and rear tracking and lower center of gravity for better ride and handling. New amenities include power liftgate, power and tumble second-row seats, heated front and second-row seats, remote vehicle start, rain-sensing wipers and larger DVD screen. But mileage makes environmentalists cringe, third-row seat makes occupants other than kids scrunch up and cringe, and sticker makes anyone cringe.

HONDA CR-V EX-L 2WD: Base price: $21,500 (estimated); Engine: 2.4-liter, 166-h.p. 4cylinder; Fuel economy: 23 mpg city/30 highway. Latest version corrects the faults of the old one. The gear shift lever is now low in the instrument panel below the radio not near the top of the dash; the emergency brake is no longer a vertical lever stuck in the dash, but a pedal to press along the floor; and the spare tire hanging from the swing-out rear door is now under the vehicle, which allows an easier-to-open hatch lid. Larger radials, lower vehicle height and a refined suspension contribute to better handling. And width was increased for more cabin stretch room.

HONDA FIT SPORT: Base price: $15,170; Engine: 1.5-liter, 109h.p. 4-cylinder; Fuel economy: 33 mpg city/38 highway. New low-priced, high-mileage, entrylevel mini as an alternative to more costly hybrid. Mini refers to size, not amenities, with ABS, side-curtain air bags, power windows, mirrors, door locks and air conditioning standard. But no power seats/sunroof. Ride and handling is econocar-like since it's 19.2 inches shorter and almost 3 inches narrower than a Civic. Though it looks small on the outside, headroom inside unusually spacious.

JAGUAR XK convertible: Base price: $80,835; Engine: 4.2-liter, 300-h.p. V-8; Fuel economy: 18 mpg city/27 highway. Attraction is that it offers top-down driving in 18 seconds or less. Push-button-start of potent V-8 that cranks out the power quickly and takes flight in earnest. The zeroto 60-mph claim is 6 seconds. A little exhaust rumble adds to the pleasure. A 6-speed automatic offers steering wheel-mounted paddles for manual shifting. Suspension controls any unnecessary movement regardless of road conditions. Stability control with traction control standard. Ouch on the price, however. And with top down, trunk space disappears.

JEEP COMPASS LIMITED 4x4: Base price: $21,180; Engine: 2.4-liter, 172-h.p. 4-cylinder; Fuel economy: 23 mpg city/26 highway. New entry-level Jeep, though not for long because Patriot will fill that role this fall.

A Jeep that looks like a crossover, the marriage of sedan with wagon. Boasts the same enjoyable ride, handling, comfort, performance and cargo and people-carrying features that have kept the compact Dodge Caliber, from which it is derived, in short supply. 4WD available, but this is the first Jeep not trail rated for off-roading. Nice touches include standard 18-inch all-season performance tires and electronic stability control with traction and roll mitigation control. LEXUS GS450H: Base price: $54,900; Engine: 3.5-liter, 340h.p. V-6 with electric motor; Fuel economy: 25 mpg city/28 highway. Not all hybrids are created equal. This one is for those who want to conserve fuel but not the ability to power away from the light or dart into the passing lane ahead of the pack. The gas engine/battery combo packs a wallop, with the battery pack acting like an electronic supercharger. So quiet in battery mode at start, however, you forget the batteries are draining as you idle. Can reach 30 mph in battery mode — with the accompanying drain. But gas mode replenishes the energy. Hefty base price.

LEXUS RX350 AWD: Base price: $38,800; Engine: 3.5-liter, 270h.p., 24-valve V-6; Fuel economy: 19 mpg city/24 highway. Crossover now offers more potent r V-6 that responds to pedal pressure like a V-8 — but so does the fuel gauge. Smooth ride and decent handling with optional 18-inch all-season radials, but some body lean in corners. Full-time AWD doesn't come with a low setting for offroading. Goodies include standard stability control, traction control, side-curtain air bags, power liftgate and cargo floor stowage bins. Optional navigation system allows routes to be programmed through voice-activation rather than manually calling up street addresses.

MAZDA CX-7 GRAND TOURING AWD crossover: Base price:

$28,000; Engine: 2.3-liter, 244h.p., turbocharged 4-cylinder; Fuel economy: 18 mpg city/24 highway. A crossover that does everything a wagon does in far better style. Two rows of seats to handle five folks, a larger three-row companion arrives next year. Family friendly with lots of people and package room — room with zoom thanks to the turbocharged 4 cylinder. Mileage does disappoint. Good road manners along with ondemand AWD. But why do you have to buy a CD changer to get a power moonroof? NISSAN VERSA: Base price:

$12,450; Engine: 1.8-liter, 122h.p. 4-cylinder; Fuel economy: 30 mpg city/36 highway. The most-spirited 4-cylinder, mostnimble handling and by far the most spacious, roomy and comfortable cabin of the recent crop of high-mileage, low-priced Japanese minis. Very good road manners and very responsive 4cylinder. Gripes: the silly name and ride that's a tad stiff. Oddity: one of those magic key fobs so you don't need an ignition key, just twist the lever on the steering column to start. Lots of stowage.

SATURN SKY: Base price: $23,115; Engine: 2.4-liter, 177h.p. 4; Fuel economy: 20 mpg city/28 highway. Looks even better than the Pontiac Solstice roadster with which it shares platforms. Looks like a cross between a Chevy Corvette and Cadillac XLR. Wide stance and wheels moved out to the corners for a solid, stable look as well as good road manners. The 2.4liter is a bit sedate and not a tire burner. Have to wait for the turbo 4 this fall. Suspension and tires tuned for smooth ride with no road jitters. Ideal open-top motoring, but with top hidden in trunk, you'll have to send your vacation luggage via UPS. Gripe: seeing the fuel gauge.

SATURN VUE GREEN LINE: Base price: $22,370; Engine: 2.4liter, 170-h.p. 4-cylinder with nickel-metal-hydride battery pack; Fuel economy: 27 mpg city/32 highway. A lower-cost alternative to hybrids that gets 5 mpg better mileage than the gas-only SUV and has a driving range of about 500 miles. Starts in gas mode and gets brief push to get going and a shot of electric energy when passing, but it never runs on batteries alone. Gas engine shuts off at stoplight or when coasting down hill. Available only on the 2WD version. Same hybrid system will be offered in the Saturn Aura sedan next spring.

price: $25,900; Engine: 2.4liter, 147-h.p. 4-cylinder and 244-volt, 40-h.p. nickel-metalhydride battery pack; Fuel economy: 40 mpg city/38 highway. Major and most stylish redesign and, for the first time, a hybrid version of the top-selling car in the industry joins the lineup. Mileage of an economy mini for Smurfs in a well equipped midsize family sedan with scads more room and comfort for real people. Battery pack teamed with 4-cylinder gas engine so you won't smoke the tires on takeoffs. Starts and gets going in battery mode; gas engine kicks in as battery power drains. Stability control, ABS and sidecurtain air bags standard. But all this costs about $5,000 more than a gas only Camry.

TOYOTA FJ CRUISER: Base price: $23,300; Engine: 4-liter, 239-h.p., 24-valve V-6; Fuel economy: 17 mpg city/21 highway. Toyota goes retro with an update of its '60s utility vehicle popular for safaris and expeditions. This 4WD machine won't win any fashion contests, particularly not with the silly white roof cap. And it won't win any mileage derbies. And those side access doors don't allow you easy entry from outside. And with options, this entry-level SUV nearly hits $30,000. But this machine will take on the toughest, most rugged trails — or make its own. When the going gets tough, it keeps going — in whatever direction you point the nose. How many other off-roaders offer water-bottle and cell phone holders. TOYOTA YARIS sedan: Base price: $12,550; Engine: 1.5-liter, 106-h.p. 4; Fuel economy: 34 mpg city/39 highway. Small, lowpriced, high-mileage mini with a weird name but a mileage rating that makes it a viable alternative to gas/electrics. What it lacks in mileage (and size, 8 inches shorter than a Corolla) versus hybrids, it makes up for in price — about $9,000 cheaper than a Prius. But you have to accept a mild-mannered 4-cylinder, lessthan-cushy econocar ride and less-than-pinpoint handling. Point A to B commuter that doesn't need frequent and costly stops for gas. No power seats or power sunroof offered.

Some top Ford executives offered bonus to stay on

BY SARAH A. WEBSTER

Detroit Free Press (MCT)

Ford Motor Co., trying to get its restructuring plan off the ground, is giving a small number of higher-level employees bonuses to stick around at the ailing compa-

On Friday, the automaker announced changes to its restructuring plan that will cut 10,000 more salaried jobs by 2008, on top of 4,000 white-collar cuts made earlier this year.

On Tuesday, Ford sent employees the first outlines of the whitecollar buyout proposals. The outline explained three voluntary severance packages and a summary of what the workers might get if they are laid off. The programs will have some salaried workers leaving Ford by the end of the year and others by February.

The buyouts are a key component of Ford's revised Way Forward turnaround plan, which also includes buyout offers to all of Ford's 75,500 UAW hourly work-

At the same time, the Dearborn, Mich.-based automaker, which lost $1.4 billion in the first half of the year, is giving retention bonuses to a small number of high-level employees it doesn't want to lose during this critical time, people familiar with the program said.

The first Way Forward restructuring announced in January also included bonuses.

The second round coincides with the revamped plan released last week. It is unclear whether the bonuses were given to the same people twice or whether different employees were given incentives to stay this time.

Spokesman Tom Hoyt would not detail the amounts or who is receiving them.

The bonuses were confirmed on the same day Ford provided more information about how its employee and plant reductions would affect manufacturing oper-

As reported in the Sunday Detroit Free Press, the cuts would bring Ford's work force in line with demand first, followed by its plants in 2010. By 2008, Ford would be using only 84 percent of its plant capacity. Automakers aim to use 100 percent to be the most cost-efficient.

In an e-mail to employees Wednesday, Mark Fields, Ford's president of the Americas, said Ford would work to make sure employees have all the information to make sound decisions.

"During this difficult time, nothing is more important than frequent communication and absolute candor," he wrote. "I promise to continue the open lines of communication and to provide information when we have it available."

He added that Felicia Fields, vice president of human resources, would join him in his Webcast this week to provide details about how Ford will go about cutting jobs.

In October, workers also will be invited to a meeting that he called "a functional cascade," where information would be provided on how the Way Forward acceleration affects their organization.

This is Ford's third attempt at restructuring since 2002.

On Jan. 15 of that year, then-CEO Bill Ford announced a plan that aimed to cut 35,000 jobs and promised $7 billion in pretax profits by this year. That plan fell off course last year.

Profits tumbled to $2 billion in 2005, down from $3.5 billion in 2004. But Ford's worldwide automotive operations showed the real depth of the problem. Ford posted a $3.9 billion loss in its automotive operations last year — nearly 20 times worse than the $200 million loss in 2004.

The solution to that bad performance was to be the Way Forward plan, announced Jan. 23. High fuel prices and plummeting truck sales, especially of the mainstay F-Series pickup, threw that plan off course, prompting Ford to announce its retooled plan last week.

New diesel cars forging environmentally friendly path

BY DAISUKE SEGAWA

The Yomiuri Shimbun (MCT)

TOKYO — Japan, Europe and the United States plan to implement by 2010 drastically toughened restrictions on automobile emissions, with vehicles that fail to clear the standards banned from sale. European carmakers are set to launch more models in Japan using advanced engines, which are less polluting, while some domestic automakers, including Toyota Motor Corp., will introduce more hybrid

Developments in environmentally sound technologies are becoming more and more important for automakers competing in the world market.

On Aug. 28, DaimlerChrysler Japan Co. released a diesel-powered Mercedes-Benz E-class model.

Though having the same appearance as gasoline-powered E-class models, they have advanced dieselpowered engines, which significantly reduce emissions of both nitrogen oxide (NOx) and particulate matter (PM).

Similar diesel-powered Mercedes-Benz models, using what is known as the common rail diesel engine, have been sold in Europe since 1997 and pass Japan's current car emission regulations.

The sale of these diesel-powered models in Japan has been slow going until recently due to negative impressions consumers have about dieselpowered cars.

A new diesel-powered Mercedes-Benz E-class model is displayed in Chiyoda Ward, Tokyo.

A major difference between gasoline-powered engines and those fueled by diesel is that diesel contains more sulfur, which means diesel engines emit more PM when fuel is burned incompletely at low temperatures, and they discharge large amounts of NOx when the fuel is burned completely at high temper-

A great challenge presented to makers of diesel-powered cars has been to develop technologies to reduce emissions both of NOx and PM, which has led to the common rail engine design.

The common rail diesel engine stores fuel in a central chamber called a rail at high pressure and then injects the fuel into the engine's pistons at levels that depend on the car's running condition.

With electronic devices to precisely control the frequency and quantity of fuel being injected to keep the balance between high- and low-temperature combustion, the common rail engine has succeeded in reducing emissions of both NOx

NOx and PM are typical of harmful substances contained in car exhaust. NOx is the cause of photochemical smog and acid rain. PM, or black soot, causes respiratory prob-

Since 1992, Japan has strengthened regulations on such emissions by gradually revising the safety standards under the Road Trucking Vehicle Law.

The current regulation is a longterm one implemented in 2005 that imposes different maximum allowable quantities on each of the harmful substances for gasoline- and diesel-powered cars.

The most strict standard is for diesel-powered vehicles weighing 3.5 tons or more, with the maximum allowable quantity being 2 grams of NOx and 0.027 gram of PM per kilowatt-hour of engine output.

In 2009, a stricter regulation to replace the 2005 one will be implemented, with the maximum allowable emissions to be cut by - twothirds of today's standards.

of passenger cars sold by Japanese makers in Europe are diesel-powered. Japan's current maximum allowable quantity of NOx in car emissions is, in the case of passenger cars, 0.05 g/kWh. In the 2009 new regulation, the maximum figure for PMs will be newly imposed on some mod-

Rule would require electronic stability control on all autos

BY JUSTIN HYDE Detroit Free Press (MCT)

WASHINGTON — Calling it an auto safety technology on par with seat belts and air bags, federal regulators Thursday proposed a rule requiring electronic stability control on all vehicles sold in the United States by the 2012 model

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said ESC systems could save between 5,300 and 10,300 lives annually if installed on every vehicle on the road while preventing up to 252,000 injuries and sharply cutting rollovers. NHTSA estimates that its mandate would save 1,536 to 2,211 lives by speeding the rollout of ESC faster than automakers had otherwise planned.

"No other safety technology since the seat belt holds the potential to save as many lives and prevent as many injuries as electronic stability control," NHTSA Administrator Nicole Nason said.

Automakers applauded the move, which has long been expected, and some large automakers, including General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Toyota Motor Corp., pledged to beat the 2012 deadline for their lineups. About 29 percent of vehicles sold today have standard or optional ESC systems, and NHTSA estimates that automakers had planned to put ESC in 71 percent of their vehicles by the 2010 model year.

NHTSA estimates its rule will cost the industry $985 million, at an average cost of $58 per vehicle over what automakers already had planned to build. The agency will take comments on the proposed rule for 60 days and expects to issue a final rule early next First developed by European automakers in the early 1990s, stability control uses a series of sensors and a vehicle's anti lock braking system to sense when a driver is about to lose control. It keeps the vehicle pointed in the right direction by modulating power or brakes at each wheel.

The technology was designed to help stop rollover crashes, which have been growing in recent years and killed 10,285 people in the United States last year. Research showed that most rollover crashes are caused when drivers lose control and leave the road, and NHTSA estimates that ESC has the potential to prevent 71 percent of passenger car rollovers and 84 percent of SUV rollovers. NHTSA's proposed rule includes a dynamic test for ESC systems, designed to mimic a vehicle that swerves quickly in and out of a traffic lane at 50 miles per hour. Nason said all automakers' current systems could pass the test.

A new water pump can avert other problems

BY BRAD BERGHOLDT

Q: I just had my car in for its 90,000-mile service and was told I needed to replace the water pump. I trust my mechanic's judgment but would like to know more about what the water pump does and why mine needed replacement. The bill came to an additional $178 beyond the normal service. - Karen Porter, San Gregorio, Calif.

A: A water pump, attached to the front of the engine, circulates coolant through the engine and the cabin heater. Water pumps are typically belt-driven either by the timing (camshaft drive) belt, a serpentine belt (a wide belt that snakes around many pulleys) or an individual V-belt. Transverse (sideways-mounted) engines used on most front-wheel-drive vehicles typically tuck the water pump up very close to the engine, under a plastic cover. It's driven by the timing belt to save space. Longitudinal (in-line) engines are more likely to have a visible water pump, driven by a serpentine or V-belt.

There are basically two things that go wrong with water pumps: leakage or bearing failure. Since the pump is driven by a shaft and pulley, a seal is needed to keep the coolant in, relative to the rotating shaft. Seal failure typically results in a small to moderate rate of coolant leakage to the ground, often with little visible symptoms (dripping, spray or steam) under the hood. A puddle of orange, red or green fluid under the front of the engine and a declining level in the radiator overflow container might be caused by a leaking pump or pump-to-radiator hose. It's important to notice these symptoms promptly, to prevent engine overheating and serious damage.

The water pump's shaft and drive pulley are supported by a bearing located just in front of the seal. Excessive belt tension, normal long-term wear or seal failure can cause the bearing to become loose and noisy. Bearing looseness can be checked on a longitudinal engine by wiggling the fan blades (engine off, of course). Unfortunately, bearing looseness is not detectable on a timing beltdriven pump. A deep growling/ grating noise also might occur when the bearing goes bad, and should be investigated right away. A severely failed bearing on a longitudinal engine can result in the fan assembly wobbling badly enough to carve fatal grooves in the radiator.

A timing-belt-driven water pump that seizes up due to bearing failure can throw or break the timing belt, crashing the engine's valves into the pistons, and that's a very expensive repair. For this reason, many shops recommend renewing the water pump along with the timing belt as a precaution.

The moderate cost of your water pump replacement leads me to believe it might have been replaced as a preventive measure in conjunction with a 90,000-mile timing belt renewal. When the covers and belt are removed, it's far easier to renew the pump, compared with going in for the pump alone. Periodic coolant renewal, perhaps every three years or 36,000 miles, will help ensure the new pump lives a long and happy life.

Nissan's new small hatchback big on versatility and uplevel features

is a perfect example that consumers don't have to appreciably downsize their lives to buy a downsized car.

Just 14 feet long, the five-door Versa hatchback has a wagon-like 50.4 cubic feet of cargo room with rear seats folded and more headroom and rear-seat legroom than traditional small sedans like the Honda Civic, Toyota Corolla and Nissan's own Sentra.

Better yet, with a starting manufacturer's suggested retail price, including destination charge, of $13,055, the Versa hatchback is priced at least $1,700 less than the Corolla and Civic and is $750 less than the 2006 Sentra.

Introduced in summer as an early 2007 model, the Versa five door is Nissan's new, smallest car in the United States and is among several new, small hatchbacks on the market this year that include the Toyota Yaris and Honda Fit. The Versa is shorter in exterior length and narrower by a few inches than the current Sentra, which is Nissan's previous smallest car here.

But the Versa is big on versatility — part of the reason Nissan gave it its name — and on uplevel fea-

These features are typically found on luxury cars.

For fuel economy, the top-level Versa comes with a continuously variable transmission (CVT) that helps boost fuel economy to 30 miles a gallon in city driving and Nissanleading 36 mpg on the highway.

And all Versas have six air bags, including head curtain air bags, as standard equipment.

In U.S. government testing, the front-wheel drive Versa earned the top five out of five stars for front- and rear-seat occupant protection in a side crash. It received four out of five stars for protecting front-seat occu-

I enjoyed sitting up a bit from the pavement, not low to the floor. The Versa's separate front seats

While engine noise was unobtrusive in gentle driving around town in the test vehicle, it became obnoxious in pedal-to-the-metal accelerations when the four-cylinder buzz was incessant and wasn't accompanied by any immediate, assertive torque.

Maximum torque is 127 footpounds at 4,800 rpm.

The base Versa transmission is a six-speed manual. A four-speed automatic also is available. But also note that the Versa is one of the few nonhybrid cars on the U.S. market offering a CVT, too.

CVTs don't have set gears to manage engine power and send it to a vehicle's wheels. Rather, CVTs seek to operate continuously in an optimal, unlimited gear range to be as efficient with fuel as possible.

Nissan officials say the CVT provides an 8 percent to 10 percent fuel economy improvement over a conventional, four-speed automatic.

Unfortunately, though, the CVT is only in the top-of-the-line Versa SL, which has a high starting price of $16,055.

Meantime, three other small cars that are lighter in weight than the Versa by at least 290 pounds — the Toyota Yaris, Honda Fit and Hyundai Accent — get higher fuel economy ratings from the government than does the Versa with CVT. So budget-conscious buyers might consider saving thousands of dollars and getting a Versa with standard six-speed manual, instead, since it has the same 30-mpg government rating for city driving.

Only the highway rating is less than a CVT-equipped Versa hatchback — 34 mpg instead of 36.

Electricross leaves noise, fumes in dust

BY MATT NAUMAN

SAN JOSE, Calif. — As Neal Saiki explains it, his career progression makes perfect sense.

He designed a human-powered helicopter in college, then worked at NASA and then helped develop a high-altitude airplane (to be used to confirm global warming and as a spy plane) for another employer. Next, he became a famous mountain-bike designer, and now he's making electric motorcycles.

The common themes? Innovation. The use of lightweight, highstrength materials. And, of course, Saiki, 40, whose Electricross opened in a small Scotts Valley shopping center in July.

In September, one of his bikes, the Drift, competed against gasoline-powered motorcycles in a race near Sacramento.

He's convinced of the inevitability of electric transportation, and knows that dirt-bike riders face growing pressure from people who don't like the pollution (noise and smoke) they produce.

The Drift is hand-built. Saiki designed it and uses shops in Soquel, San Jose and Santa Cruz to make the parts. He starts with aircraft-grade aluminum and does final assembly in his 1,140-square-foot workshop in back of the store's display area. Two models exist. The all-terrain version sells for $5,500. The motocross-ready one, complete with shocks from Fox Racing, now based in Watsonville, is $6,300. He's talked to potential investors, and knows he'll need their help to turn his small enterprise into a successful business.

But, he said, he wants to do more than make money.

"Electric vehicles have a horrible image problem — that they're slow, they're not powerful and they're not fun," he said. "I'm really trying to change that image."

Many young people love offroad bikes, especially those built for motocross activities. Events such as the X Games and the recent Dew Action Sports Tour in San Jose have become popular. His store is right next to Scotts Valley's middle school, and every other kid he sees is wearing a Fox Racing T-shirt, Saiki said.

"The kids these days love to see all the motorcycles jumping, doing flips," he said.

That's why the electricross.com Web site has videos that show the Drift flying through the air, and taking hard turns. He said it shows the bike is rugged, capable and comparable to gasoline models.

It weighs 140 pounds, including the 60-pound battery. A motocross bike such as the Honda CRF250R weighs 215 pounds and sells for $6,199. Similar models from Kawasaki and Yamaha are just a bit cheaper.

"It weighs a lot more than a mountain bike, but weighs about half the weight of a motorcycle," said Saiki. To preserve that combination of lightness and strength he had to design most of the parts, including the frame, wheel, rim and spokes, rather than buy off-the-shelf parts.

The secret is in the Drift's electric motor, made in China by Briggs and Stratton. It's lined with strong, rare-earth neodymium magnets. They're strong and efficient, Saiki said.

"If you set one on a table, you almost have to use a screwdriver to pry it off a table," he said.

They allow the bike to go about 20 miles on a charge using about a dime's worth of electricity, Saiki said. Top speed is 45 to 50 mph.

The bike comes with a choice of three powerpacks, ranging from one that costs $210 to $2,200 for one with a lithium-ion battery. "It's half the weight. It doubles the run time, and it's very expensive," Saiki said.

Two charging units also are offered — one takes 30 minutes, the other takes two hours. But, Saiki said, the bike is designed for a fast change of batteries so riders can ride one and charge another at the same time.

As a student at California Polytechnic State University-San Luis Obispo in 1989, Saiki headed a group that created the Da Vinci IV. a 97-pound helicopter that took a short ride into history. With a world-class bicyclist pedaling, it left the ground for a few seconds.

That fascination with transportation — he has a master's degree in aeronautical engineering - eventually led him to design work as a consultant for championship mountain-bike teams. And advances in electric-motor technology convinced him of the potential for a powerful, efficient electric motorcycle.

The Drift competed in American Motorcyclist Association Formula 100 race on Sept. 16, but a problem with the drive sprocket prevented it from finishing, according to the company's Web site.

Although intended for off-road use, the Drift comes with a toggle switch that reduces the power and allows it to be driven on roads as an electric bicycle.

Tony Watson, and his 10-year-old son, Andrew, are happy to be among the first owners of a Drift from Electricross.

Watson, who lives in the woods in Scotts Valley, noticed that new neighbors can be more sensitive to noise. "Before, the kids could go putt-putting down the street and nobody made a fuss. People moved in, and that changed."

He saw a newspaper advertisement for Electricross, and went to check it out. Impressed with the quality and engineering of Saiki's bike, he bought one.

It's for Andrew — he has five dirt bikes in the garage. But when 280pound Watson brought it home in his truck, he was tempted to try it out.

"Two and a half hours later, I finally retired it to the garage for the night," said Watson, who sells recreational vehicles. "It's the biggest spectacle around."

How to make the most of your car-insurance claims

BY MARSHALL LOEB

NEW YORK — A car accident can be devastating physically, emotionally and financially. And while auto insurance is supposed to cover you, you may not get what you need if you can't prove your losses. Money magazine offers the following tips on how you can make the most of your Pay attention to your policy before anything actually happens. Find out what is not covered — this is usually outlined in the exclusions sec-

When you get in an accident, try to keep good records. You may be rattled, but take the names and license numbers of all the drivers involved, identify any witnesses, write down your version of events and try to get photos. Be sure to request the police report as well.

Call your insurance company as soon as you can and take good notes on any conversations you have regarding the claim.

Be careful when using your insurer's network of preferred providers to get your car fixed. These auto shops might offer faster turnaround because you can bypass an insurance adjuster but they may compromise quality because the insurance companies pressure them to keep costs down. So go with an auto shop you trust — it might be worth the extra time.

Request that the auto shop use original equipment manufacturer (or OEM) parts in your repair. When you look at your repair order, scan it for generic parts — they will be labeled with an "LKQ" (like kind and quality). If you insist on OEM parts, which are less likely to rust and will fit better, you have a good chance of getting your way without a fight.

If your insurance company tells vou vour car is totaled, they mean that the car's market value after the deductible is less than the cost of repair. Thus, the company will pay you the value of the car rather than

Lexus RX 350 born with a silver engine in mouth

BY STEVEN COLE SMITH

Customers for the Lexus RX series have a reason to feel a little confused: Early in 2006, the company began selling the 2007 RX350, while many dealers still had a healthy supply of 2006 RX330s. Add to that the availability of the RX400h, which is the gas-electric hybrid version of the vehicle.

What's the difference between the RX330 and the RX350? Mainly the engine, as signified by the name: The 2006 RX330 has a 3.3-liter V-6, while the 2007 RX350 has a 3.5-liter V-6. The engine size isn't that different, but the performance is: The 3.3-liter has 223 horsepower, and the 3.5-liter has 270. Just as impressive, the more powerful engine actually has better fuel mileage: The all-wheel-drive RX330 is EPA-rated at 18 mpg city, 24 mpg on the highway, and the allwheel-drive RX350 is rated at 19 mpg in the city, 24 mpg on the highway.

- Details: Front-engine, allwheel-drive luxury SUV with a 3.5-liter, 270-horsepower V-6, with a 5-speed automatic transmission.

Otherwise, in terms of looks and overall utility, the 2007 RX350 isn't that different from the 2006 RX330, which — truth be told — really isn't that different from the original RX300 introduced in 1998. That first RX300, loosely based on a Toyota Camry platform, was one of the first premium-label SUVs that defined the burgeoning "crossover" segment — a car that has sort of crossed over into truck territory. The Lexus RX is, and always has been, far more car than truck: Though offered in allwheel drive, it lacks the tires, lowrange gearing and beefed-up underbelly hardware that makes an SUV off-road capable.

If you want to go off-road, or if you want substantial trailer-towing capacity, Lexus and Toyota have other truck-based SUVs that can handle that task. The all-wheel-drive option on the RX350 is a genuine safety factor for slick pavement, but don't expect it to perform on anything more rugged than a rutted dirt road.

That said, the one minor complaint I have always had about the Lexus RX is a slightly cramped interior, and the 2007 RX350 is still a bit lacking in the elbow-room department. The '07 model is mostly an evolution on the 2006 model, but one difference is added sound deadening, including a new windshield that reduces the intrusion of outside noise, plus increased sound insulation in the doors and dashboard.

The rest of the RX350's interior is of typical Lexus quality. This is a fivepassenger SUV, and although there is ample room in the rear for two adults, three will be cramped.

Though the RX350 is pretty much loaded in base form, there are lots of options, including Lexus' fifth-generation navigation system with voice recognition, and an 11-speaker Mark Levinson sound system that replaces the already-impressive eight-speaker system. You can also get the dynamic laser cruise control system, which measures and maintains a set distance from vehicles traveling ahead.

On the road, the RX350 strikes a very appealing balance between a smooth ride and nimble handling, given its weight and center of gravity. There's a long list of standard safety equipment, including stability control, side and side-curtain air bags, and a driver's knee air bag, and there's an option I like a lot: the adaptive front-lighting system, which automatically levels the headlight beams and can turn the beams independently, left or right depending on how the vehicle is turning.

The midsize, midlevel luxury SUV market has grown dramatically since the introduction of the original RX300, but having had an early start, the 2007 RX350 remains at the head of the pack. As always, it isn't cheap, but it remains at the head of this class.

VW's Chameleon started with a 1964 Volkswagen 21-Window Microbus Deluxe once used as a surfer van or family camper.

VW concept vehicle brings new technology to classic Microbus

SAN JOSE, Calif.

he hippie van has gone high-tech. Volkswagen's Silicon Valley research lab has used the iconic symbol of the '60s as a platform to display new technologies such as lithium-polymer batteries, surfboards lined with solar panels and even an electronic bumper sticker.

Called Chameleon by Vickie Chiang and the 20 other engineers who worked on it at Volkswagen's Electronics Research Laboratory in Palo Alto, Calif., the concept VW bus debuted this past month at the AltWheels Alternative Transportation Festival in

"It says a lot about how we want to maintain the spirit of VW. which has a unique, fun-to-drive image, especially in the U.S.," said Chiang, the engineer in charge of the project.

The year-old project started with a 1964 Volkswagen 21-Window Microbus Deluxe, a vehicle once used as a surfer van or family camper and now considered a "highly sought-after" classic by collectors, said Gary LaVere, who restored the vehicle for VW.

From a distance, the Chameleon looks like a typical VW bus, complete with round headlights, maroon-and-white paint job, Safari-style front windows that open outward and upward, canvas roof and even two longboards stored on wooden

"We decided the theme of the bus should be hidden technologies because you didn't want the technologies to overshadow the look of the bus," said Chiang, a 24-yearold Stanford University graduate.

A closer look reveals that this indeed is a modern machine. It's crammed full of high-tech items.

■ Beneath the gas-tank door. there's a palm-vein recognition sensor from Fujitsu. More exact than a fingerprint reader, Chiang said, it is used to unlock the doors — or to lock them if the vein print isn't recognized. Since the Chameleon is an electric vehicle, the gas tank has been removed.

■ Where the horn used to be, there's now a touchpad sensor from Synaptics. With it, a user can negotiate the vehicle's music, navigation and parking-assistance systems.

■ Behind the front seats is a 60inch projection screen from Sony. Using home-theater technology, the screen's polymers absorb and reject certain wavelengths of light to produce a brighter, higher-contrast image. "It's very good for situations where there's a lot of ambient light," Chiang said.

■ In the middle of the van's rear bumper is an electronic device from SiPix that allows personalized bumper-sticker messages. It looks like glass, but it's plastic. VW engineers have typed in about a dozen greetings, including "I love my bus" and a peace symbol, "Hi Mom!" or "Yes, I just passed you."

■ Other neat bits include lightemitting diode front and rear lights from Osram Sylvania, a digital voice-enhancement system from Applied Signal Processing and solar cells applied to surfboards from Hybrid Technologies.

The project was first headed by Philippe Alessandrini, who has since left the VW lab to study at Harvard's Business School. Alessandrini found the van in fall 2005 on eBay, Chiang said.

The van was shipped to Hybrid Technologies in Mooresville, N.C., where its lithium-polymer batteries were installed. The 10 30-volt batteries, located under the van's floor, are enough to allow about 100 miles of driving, Chiang said. Charging, which takes about six hours, is done with a cord that attaches to where the van's tailpipe used to be.

Once it was electrified, the van went to LaVere's VW Restorations in Concord, Calif. It was taken apart, restored and modified where needed, painted and reassembled. A job that would usually take six months was done in six weeks.

"It was 'Pimp My Ride' fashion, which we'd never done before," LaVere said.

Then, California Concepts hooked up all the electronic bits, and finally the lab's engineers did a bit of testing and troubleshooting.

In May, it was shipped to Germany for display at a twice-yearly internal Volkswagen Group technology show.

Volkswagen's Silicon Valley research lab opened in Sunnyvale in 1998, and moved to its current facility near the Department of Veterans Affairs hospital and Gunn High School in Palo Alto in

The lab's mission is to scout for suitable technologies from Bay Area companies and universities and to create its own projects that might end up in future VW, Audi, Bentley and Lamborghini models.

It gained fame last year when Stanley, the robotic sport utility vehicle it created with Stanford University, won a $2 million prize for winning a driverless race in the desert.

The lab won't say how much the Chameleon is worth. A classic VW bus without the high-tech treatment sold for $45,000 last month in a Monterey auction.

In a stroke of good fortune, the van came with its own California vanity plate: 64 DLX.

"We thought the Deluxe Microbus was great because it has such an emotional feel to it," said Chiang. "It has such a nostalgic following, and it does really symbolize California and the U.S., which is something we like to bring back to Germany every so often.'

CX-7 helps Mazda stand tall in wagon, er, crossover game

BY JIM MATEJA

CHICAGO — Have to say the arrival of crossovers brings mixed emotions after twice losing out to the bottle blond and being forced to bypass the store offering fine spirits to visiting the facility pedaling automobiles to get a station wagon.

Sure, most crossovers are merely wagons with an odd name meant to fool prospective buyers into thinking they are getting something other than the vehicle we knew variously as the portable crib, diaper bag and potty-chair carrier of the '70s and '80s.

However, the crossover does everything a wagon does in far better style. The wagon was a frump, while the crossover is high

We tested the new 2007 Mazda CX-7 crossover, with jewel-like designer headlamps rather than round dull beams. It stands tall so you can see down the road, not long and low like wagons of old that made it easier to slip 2x4s between the kids.

The CX-7 comes with two rows of seats to handle five folks. It will be complemented by a larger CX-9 early next year with three rows to hold seven.

Other than different seating patterns, the CX-7 offers a 2.3-liter, 244-horsepower, turbocharged 4cylinder, the CX-9 a 3.5-liter, 254-h.p. V-6. That's the same engine arriving with the Ford Edge crossover this fall. The 7 and 9 sport a new 6speed automatic transmission.

Still, the CX-7 fuel-economy rating disappoints at 18 mpg city/24 mpg highway.

The 7 and 9 share some components with Edge, but the CX-9 is longer and wider than the Ford.

To make way for the CXes, the Mazda MPV minivan departs. Mazda is one of the automakers

Ford acquired; Volvo, Jaguar, Aston Martin and Land Rover being others. Unlike Jaguar and Aston, however, don't expect it to be available at Ford's garage sale. Sales are going strong and, unlike Jaguar, at least, it makes money. And, thanks to platform sharing with Mazda, Ford was able to create the Ford Fusion, Mercury Milan and Lincoln MKZ sedans.

Mazda likes to call the CX-7 a "family friendly" vehicle. Can't argue. There's spacious leg, head and arm room front and rear; cozy; well-cushioned seats with aboveaverage long distance support; and a large cargo hold.

And that cargo area grows. Push $\,$ the button on the top of the seats and the backs fold, or pull either of the levers along the wall in back and the seat backs fold to provide

And the CX-7 is room with zoom. With the turbo boost, we found the 4-cylinder climbs steep hills without chugging, pulls out to pass without hesitating, and handles any call for a burst of energy when encountering all obstacles in its path on a run along Interstate 94 without losing its breath.

Station wagons never had that vitality, and certainly never provided the soft but solid ride and nimble handling of the CX-7 when piloting into and out of the twists in the road.

Wagons tended to wander on the pavement, in large part due to their length and loads.

The wide-profile, 18-inch, allseason radial tires contribute to the feeling of control in the CX-7. The test car also came with full-time allwheel-drive, an on-demand system that operates in front-wheeldrive until sensors detect wheel slippage and send more torque to the rear wheels. As added insurance, stability control to monitor and prevent unnecessary lateral movement, side-curtain air bags and anti-lock brakes are standard. Another reason to call it family friendly.

Nice touches include a small cubby space alongside the spare tire under the rear floor to hide a few items, a power plug in the dash and good storage space under the center console armrest.

But there are flaws. Though the instrument cluster lights up in an easy-to-see orange with blue background at night, it is difficult to see in daylight, especially the fuel needle.

And to get a power moonroof, you have to buy a package that includes a CD changer and Bose audio system. Why?

The CX-7 comes in base, Touring and Grand Touring versions. Air conditioning, power windows and locks are standard in all. Touring adds to that power driver's seat and heated front seats with leather trim. Grand Touring throws in fog lamps, body-colored mirrors and automatic climate control.

The Grand Touring with AWD starts at $28,000.

Toyota, GM to jointly invest in U.S. plant

TOKYO — Toyota Motor Corp. and General Motors Corp. are each set to invest billions of dollars in a plant they jointly own in California that will enable them to build new production lines in the next few years, sources said Friday.

In bolstering its ties with GM, Toyota may be aiming to apply the brakes to talks between its rivals Nissan Motor Co. and GM on a potential alliance.

The joint venture plant, New United Motor Manufacturing Inc. in Fremont, Calif., started operating in 1984 — with Toyota and GM each providing half the capital — and manufactures 410,000 cars annually, including Toyota's Corolla and GM's Pontiac Vibe for the North American market.

NUMMI laid the foundation for Toyota's presence in North America, and is seen as the symbol of its alliance with GM — a partnership that has lasted more than 20 years. However, in recent years, its facilities have become outdated.

The factory will implement its first renovation before April. These will include the introduction of a new line of paint that limits damage to the environment, and which creates a minimum level of hazardous waste.

By the end of the next fiscal year, the factory will incorporate an assembly line that can be altered to add new models to its production repertoire in a short period of time, allowing it to quickly adjust to changes in market demands.

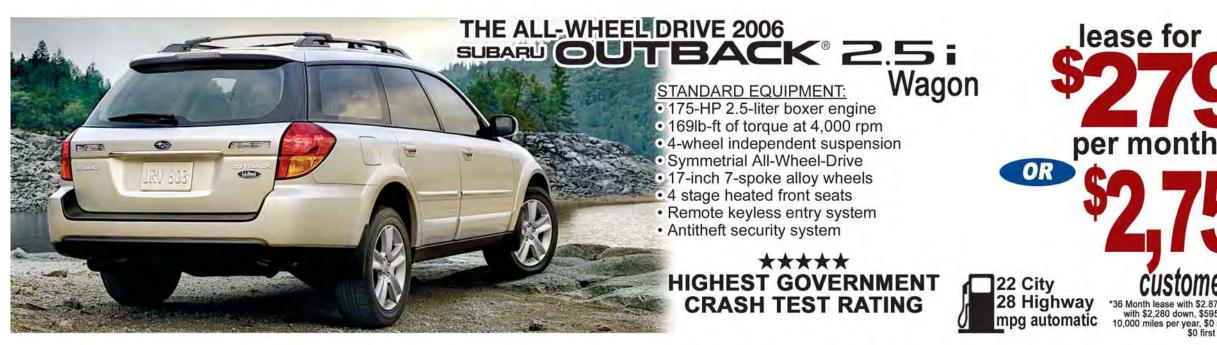

The new assembly line is the fruit of years of kaizen (improvement), a systemized cost-cutting technique for which Toyota is known, and is capable of operating at half the cost of the current system employed at the plant, sources said. Toyota has so far been cautious in deploying its leading-edge system at facilities outside its core production circle, fearing the technology may leak to rivals. However, in a bid to bolster GM's operations and to prevent negative sentiment from building against Japanese cars in the U.S., Toyota has decided to take the plunge and install the system in the joint venture plant.

Negotiations have yet to be held over who will pay for the renovation, but it is likely that Toyota will bear the largest part of the burden.

THE NINE Wednesday at 10:01 p.m.

Sort of like "Lost," but with a hostage situation instead of a plane crash as the unifying event, this new drama series follows nine people caught in the 52-hour standoff inside a bank. Flashbacks offer tidbits of what went down during the crisis and reveal, little by little, how these people continue to be affected and their lives connected by it. Also like "Lost," this one has a "Party of Five" alum in the cast: Scott Wolf.

WALK THE LINE

Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on (HBO)

Joaquin Phoenix and Reese Witherspoon were nominated for Oscars — Witherspoon won — for their performances as Johnny Cash and June Carter in director James Mangold's superb biog raphy of the revered country music couple. Like Sissy Spacek in "Coal Miner's Daughter," both actors did their own singing for the roles, and they ideally capture the essence of their true-life alter egos whether they're crooning or not.

FRIDAY NIGHT LIGHTS Tuesday at 8 p.m. on (1)

Television series based on movies don't have a great track record; for every "M*A*S*H," there's a "Delta House" or "Baby Boom." But this new drama based on the 2004 movie starring Billy Bob Thornton may break the curse — if it can withstand the competition from "House" and "Dancing With the Stars." Kyle Chandler ("Early Edition") leads the cast as the high-school football coach in a small Texas town where football is everything.

REMAKING AMERICAN MEDICINE ...HEALTHCARE FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

Thursday at 4 a.m. on 22

We have access to the best medicine and medical technology in history. So why are so many people still dying from preventable illnesses? That's the question at the heart of this new four-part series, which looks at quality deficiencies in health care and ways to stop them — from medical errors to overtaxed resources Stories include that of a parent who became an activist for patient safety after her daughter's death in a hospital.

A FEW GOOD MEN

Friday at 8 p.m. on BRAVO

You want the truth? Here it is: This is one great movie. A fine cast fuels director Rob Reiner's 1992 screen version of Aaron Sorkin's play. Tom Cruise and Demi Moore star as military attorneys probing the mysterious death of a Marine allegedly caused by two of his peers. The subsequent trial pits the lawyers against an extreme high-ranked Marine, superbly played by Jack Nicholson. Kevin Pollak, Kiefer Sutherland and Kevin Bacon also appear.

PULP FICTION

Saturday at 8 p.m. on (AMC)

Director Quentin Tarantino's violent, much-praised drama was one of the most controversial movies of 1994. It boasts first-rate performances by John Travolta — whose career was resuscitated by the movie — and Samuel L. Jackson as hired killers who often debate life's larger issues. A parallel plot involves Bruce Willis as a corrupt boxer in trouble. Uma Thurman, Harvey Keitel, Tim Roth and Amanda Plummer co-star.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF OLD CHRISTINE

Dating a grandpa? That's a quantum leap Christine's (Julia Louis-Dreyfus) mind can't take. In this new episode, her folks can't go to Ritchie's (Trevor Gagnon) school for grandparents day so Christine asks her new guy, Jeff (Scott Bakula), to go instead. Then the truth comes out: Jeff really is a grandfather, and Christine's not sure she can deal with that. C'mon, Chris; he may be a grandpa, but he's a foxy grandpa! Don't go all Elaine Benes on us.

"X-MEN: THE LAST STAND"

It isn't the final round for all the heroes, since Hugh Jackman is spinning off his Wolverine character, but the group as a whole gets an exciting last hurrah as Brett Ratner picks up the directing reins. An apparent cure for the characters' mutant state sets up another high-pitched battle between the good guys under Prof. Xavier (Patrick Stewart) and the villains led by Magneto (Ian McKellen); Halle Berry, Famke Janssen, James Marsden, Anna Paquin and Rebecca Romijn also return, and Kelsey Grammer and Ellen Page are notable additions. Although this is billed as a sequel to the 2001 thriller, this made-for-video effort is pretty much the same story revisited. It may be a little surreal to find a show called "Friday Night Lights" airing on Tuesdays, but everything else about this beautifully crafted new NBC drama seems just about perfect.

Set in a rural Texas town where the locals take a frenzied interest in their high-school football team, "Lights" is less a spinoff than an expansion of the 2004 feature film of the same title, says executive producer Peter Berg, who directed both the movie and the NBC series pilot.

"(Buzz) Bissinger was able, in his book 'Friday Night Lights,' to take a really deep, comprehensive look at the culture of athletics," says Berg, who happens to be Bissinger's cousin, "and he was able to hit upon pretty complex issues: racism, education, parent-child relationships, celebrity, all these different issues.

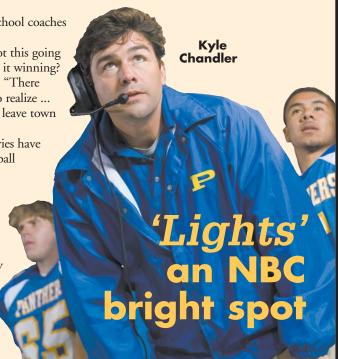

"(After the movie came out), I sat down with Brian Grazer, the producer, and Buzz and said, 'Wouldn't it be kind of neat to be able to go deeper and explore these issues?' That's what brought me back one more time, because (on) a TV series, if we're lucky, we'll have the opportunity to go deep.'

Premiering Oct. 3, the hourlong series stars Kyle Chandler ("Early Edition") as newly appointed head coach Eric Taylor, who is painfully aware of the mounting pressure he is under to deliver a winning season, pressure that is shared by his star quarterback, Jason Street (newcomer Scott Porter). Gaius Charles plays star running back Brian "Smash" Williams.

Chandler says he spoke with several high-school coaches as he was preparing for his role. "I said to one coach, 'Look, when you've got this going on, what's the most important factor here? Is it winning? Is it the welfare of the kids?' " Chandler says. "There was a long pause, and that's when I started to realize ... if these guys win, great. If they lose, (it's) 'I'll leave town later tonight around 1 in the morning.

Apart from "Coach," sports-themed TV series have a spotty track record, but Berg says the football setting is merely a jumping-off point.

"Clearly football is not something that is divisible from the core of what the television series is about," he concedes, "but it is a springboard. For the pilot, the decision was made to have a big game, and I thought it was critical to do so. But ... something very character-driven happens within that football game that hopefully will give us a chance to spring into (other) themes and issues.'

Can we blame MTV for this? Or maybe "Sesame Street"? Or the microwave oven?

By "this," I mean the short-attention-span, instantgratification mentality that has pervaded our culture and, sadly, is spreading into the offices of programming honchos.

At this writing, none of the new fall shows had gone to an early grave at the hands of programmers unwilling to let an audience build slowly. But I still have a bitter taste in my mouth from the premature demises of "Love Monkey" and "Emily's Reasons Why Not." Remember that one? Probably not; ABC yanked the Heather Graham midseason sitcom after only one airing.

BY BEVERLY FOSTER SEINBERG

Is it too much to ask that a new show be given a chance to grow on viewers? With apologies to the late Johnnie Cochran, it seems that the philosophy these days is "If it's not an instant hit, it's not gonna fit.'

Who knows? Some of those who watched "Emily's Reasons" liked it and told their friends. These friends might have decided to TiVo "Two and a Half Men" the following week and check "Emily" out. But they never got the chance.

This is yet another area in which cable does it better than the over-the-air networks. Cable channels are willing to let a show's audience build as slowly as it needs to and let word of mouth do its magic.

Amazin' postseason ahead team's chances.

"I think the Mets have to be the odds-on favorite in the National League to go to the World Series," Phillips, New York's general manager from 1997 to 2003, says. "You know, the National League is a collection of pretty flawed teams, and the Mets are probably the most well-balanced team of everybody in the National League."

ith the baseball playoffs beginning this week, ESPN's Steve Phillips likes his old

The postseason gets under way with the best-of-five Division Series, which Fox and ESPN will cover beginning Tuesday, Oct. 3. The winners of those four series advance to the best-of-seven League Championship Series, which begins Oct. 10. The teams that survive that round get to represent their respective leagues in the best-ofseven World Series, starting Oct. 21, in the home park of the American League champion.

Teams that figure to be in the mix are the Mets and the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League, and the Oakland A's and New York Yankees in the AL. Other division races were too close to call at this writing.

The Mets, who seemingly locked up the NL East by the All-Star break, boast a brawny lineup composed of MVP candidates Carlos Beltran, David Wright and Jose Reyes, competent starting pitching led by three-time Cy Young Award winner Pedro Martinez, and a lights-out bullpen headed by Billy Wagner.

"The one real advantage the Mets have," Phillips says, "is they do have the best bullpen in the National League. It's been a real strength of theirs all season long. And when you start to look at the offense, they have the deepest lineup of everybody in the National League. I mean, if your No. 6, 7 and 8 hitters are Cliff Floyd, Shawn Green and Jose Valentin, you're pretty deep."

FULL NAME:

Matthew Michael Hasselbeck

BIRTHPLACE:

Westwood, Mass.

BIRTH DATE: Sept. 25, 1975

POSITION: Quarterback

HEIGHT: 6 feet 4 inches WEIGHT: 223

ROAD TO STARDOM: Hasselbeck was a two-year starter at Xaverian Brothers High School in Westwood before moving on to Boston College, where he also started in his final two seasons and finished fifth on the Eagles' career passing list. The Green Bay Packers, under the reign of current Seahawks coach Mike Holmgren, chose Hasselbeck in the sixth round of the 1998 draft.

PERSONAL:

Married college sweetheart Sarah and has two daughters, Annabelle and Mallory. His brother Tim is a reserve QB for the New York Giants. Tim's wife, Elisabeth, is a former "Survivor" contestant and current co-host of ABC's "The View."

Matt Hasselbeck is a big softie. Well, off the football field, that is.

The Seattle Seahawks' quarterback spent a few days this summer with a family from North Pole, Alaska, who were getting a new home built by the crew from ABC's "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition." Along with teammates

Shaun Alexander and Lofa Tatupu, Hasselbeck kept the 13-member

Rogers clan occupied with a game of touch football in a segment that was part of the show's season-premiere episode last Sunday. The pairing of the star QB with Ty Pennington's popular program was a natural one, it turns out, as Hasselbeck watches every episode, and he's man enough to admit he often ends up in tears afterward.

While constructing a designer dwelling from the ground up in one week is no easy task, building a Super Bowl champion is even harder. For most players, being part of one never happens; for Hasselbeck, it took him only five seasons in Seattle to get to the big game, and perhaps just one more to win it. The Seahawks, though, must avoid a Super letdown like the one that has afflicted the last five Super Bowl losers, each of which has failed to make the playoffs the ren't cartoons great? You can make them do anything, you can put words in their mouths, and they never demand pay raises or star treatment.

So it was a stroke of genius when Comedy Central decided to do its own version of "Big Brother," calling it "Drawn Together" and populating it with cartoon characters from assorted animation genres. The show, which returns with new episodes Thursday, Oct. 5, is admittedly raunchy and not for everyone. But it got us thinking: Some of the other long-in-the-tooth shows out there might benefit from a trip to Toon Town. How about:

"TRADING SPOUSES": CIA man Stan Smith of "American Dad" swaps homes with Peter Griffin of "Family Guy." Their wives and kids have no trouble at all adjusting, since, both being creations of (and voiced by) Seth MacFarlane, there's virtually no difference between the two.

"EXTREME MAKEOVER": Remember that classic Daffy Duck cartoon where he kept getting redrawn, erased and redrawn again? Here, the unseen cartoonist overhauls the appearances of assorted other characters. Homer Simpson loses the beer gut. Charlie Brown's head gets a little less round, while Arnold's (of "Hey Arnold!") gets a little more so.

"30 MINUTE MEALS WITH WILE E. AND BUGS": Our favorite cartoon coyote demonstrates delicious recipes for road runner stew, road runner fricassee, road runner under glass ... you get the idea. Bugs prepares yummy carrot-based side dishes to complement the birdie bits. Chef from "South Park" is a frequent guest, so this show carries a "Parental Advisory: Explicit Lyrics" warning.

"THE APPRENTICE": Monty Burns from "The Simpsons" auditions new employees. Candidate challenges include creating a new ad campaign for Spacely Sprockets, launching a new Krusty Krab menu item and designing a new Acme catalog. The biggest challenge, however, will be to avoid being sabotaged by Smithers, who's terrified of losing his position as Burns' lover — er, lackey.

"AMERICAN IDOL": 'Toons and tunes! Fred Flintstone's favorite singer, Ann-Margrock, takes Paula's place on the judges panel as two-dimensional Clay and Carrie wannabes compete. But Simon, who's been known to tell people with funny voices they sound like cartoon characters, will need to find a new put-down.

"DANCING WITH THE STARS":

Humans and 'toons pair up in a ballroom dance competition like no other. Watch the fun as the flesh-and-blood contestants try to keep up with their animated partners, who can dance on walls, on ceilings and in midair — at least until they look down. Paula Abdul, who boogied with a cartoon cat in the "Opposites Attract" video, is a natural choice to judge this one.

"THE AMAZING RACE":

"Drawn Together" on the road. Teams could include Fred and Wilma, Pinky and the Brain, Bart and Milhouse, Slappy and Skippy Squirrel, Tom and Jerry, and Cartman and Kyle, for starters.

ALL MY CHILDREN After JR confided in Babe about why he behaves so badly, she felt guilty having had sex with Josh. Colby decided to play "dead" for a while. Tad caught David snooping in his place but didn't realize that David had stolen his toothbrush. Jack apologized to Jonathan. Coming: A decision is made regarding Zach and Dixie's future.

AS THE WORLD TURNS Emily refused to let Meg deliver her baby when she went into early labor, but realized she had no choice. Paul and Emily feared the worst when the newborn didn't cry. With Dusty caught in a storm, he didn't get the message that Johnny is sick. Coming: Katie has to handle a crisis concerning Mike.

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL Thorne was ready to tell the world about his and Taylor's relationship and wanted them to make love, but she stopped him. Nick was stunned to learn that Bridget is pregnant, but looked forward to the blessed event despite its potentially ruinous effect on his and Brooke's marriage. Coming: Taylor fears the loss of her freedom - and her new love.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES Lucas, horrified to see Austin and Carrie kissing, lashed out at her, as did Sami. Sami and Will both seemed upbeat over Lucas' suggestion that he move in with them. Shawn was floored to overhear that Mimi knew all along about Claire being his child. Max and Stephanie got very close. Coming: Steve sees Billie in his future, not Kayla.

GENERAL HOSPITAL Maxie lied to Mac that she overdosed after Lucky used her, which caused her arrhythmia, but confessed the truth to Georgie. Believing that he is the father of Elizabeth's unborn child, Lucky vowed to turn his life around and left for rehab. Jax saw a close moment between Sonny and Carly. Coming: Sam and Jason make a painful decision.

GUIDING LIGHT Blaming Ava for Buzz's decision that he and Olivia need a break, and after seeing Ava with Emma, Olivia decided to go ahead with the hit. Reva shared a last kiss with Josh before returning to Billy, who proposed, news that they shared with a surprised Josh and Cassie. Coming: Reva's secret comes closer to being exposed.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE Following a multi-car crash on the highway, a badly burned body was found wearing John's badge, leaving everyone to assume the worst. Nora started her own investigation to clear Paige in Thomas murder. Coming: Jessica's behavioral quirks trouble her.

PASSIONS Jared rescued Theresa, who called out for Ethan. As Whitney confided to Theresa her fear that Chad is having an affair, he waited at a seedy motel for a mystery person. Kay informed Miguel she'll never leave Fox for him. Coming: Fox can't shake his doubts about Kay.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS Devon was hospitalized with meningitis and suffered cardiac arrest. Victoria admitted to Brad she's been taking birth control pills because she can't see them having a baby until he opens up to her about his life. Coming: Devon faces a difficult recovery.

"People do horrendous things, and they've got to be behind bars, but it's shows like this that show the inner workings of the mind and what's going on with these people. You want to know, why does a human being go to that place?'

William Fichtner of Fox's "Prison Break.

"There's hard news, but there's also a lot of fun stuff. You have the opportunity to reveal your personality, so to a large extent, people see you as part of their family. They get up in the morning, they're still in their pajamas, and they're watching you in the bedroom or the kitchen." - Meredith Vieira of NBC's "Today."

"They were like, 'Mum's the word,' and that was hard. (Once the word was out,) everyone was really positive. They were like, 'You'd better get on there and drop it like it's hot, girl! And those costumes had better be happening!' " – Vivica A. Fox of ABC's "Dancing With the Stars" on signing up to be a celebrity contestant

Emily Harper is a dancing queen

Paula Abdul ("American Idol") isn't the only former Laker Girl who found fame once her cheering days were over. Emily Harper ("Passions"), a Laker Girl from 2000-03, put down her pompoms in favor of acting and within two years landed the plum role of Fancy Crane.

"I have studied performing arts my whole life," says Harper, who graduated with a degree in dance from Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles. "My parents allowed me to do that at a young age because the interest was there."

BY PAULETTE COHN

Now that she is acting full time, Harper misses dancing. "Isn't that the way artists are? We're always unsatisfied," she admits. "As a matter of fact, my publicist tried to put in a good word on 'Dancing With the Stars,' but they wouldn't have it."

Even though her years of dance experience are keeping her off the hit series, her zest hasn't diminished.

"I have to dance every day," Harper says. "When I say that to people, they think I am a freak. But I come home, blast the stereo and dance like a crazy woman. I do it until I break a sweat, my heart rate is up and I am out of breath, so it is a good cardio workout."

Dear Paulette: I was curious to know if Jonathan Frid, who played Barnabas Collins on "Dark Shadows" back in the late 1960s, is still living. -Eric J. M., Trenton, Ga.

Dear Reader: Frid, who was born Dec. 2, 1924, in Hamilton, Ontario, is alive and residing in his native Canada.

Dear Paulette: On "The Bold and the Beautiful," did the girl who played Darla really die or go to another soap opera? And on "Guiding Light," is Riva (Kim Zimmer) really sick with cancer, or is she leaving the show? -Barbara A., Carbondale, Ill.

Dear Reader: Schae Harrison, who played Darla, is alive and well, and to date, she has not joined another soap opera. Zimmer does not have cancer in real life. She renewed her "GL" contract earlier this summer, so she is not leaving the show, at least not immediately.

NFL Football 8:15 p.m. on (9) (1) (2)

When the Chicago Bears host the Seattle Seahawks tonight, a classic confrontation will unfold pitting the immovable object of the Bears' defense vs. the unstoppable force that is the Seahawks' offense. Led by NFL Defensive Player of the Year Brian Urlacher, the Bears "D" ranked second in the league last season, and it may be even stronger now. With the recent addition of WR Deion Branch, Matt Hasselbeck and Seattle's offense might be, too.

Cold Case 9 p.m. on 2 5 7

War is hell, but the home front can be treacherous, too. The discovery of a prosthetic arm leads Rush (Kathryn Morris) and her team to reinvestigate the disappearance of its owner, a female veteran of the war in Iraq. The widow of a fellow soldier is the strongest suspect, as she apparently blames the missing woman for her husband's death; he was killed in the same attack that cost her an arm. Danny Pino also stars in the new episode "The War at Home."

Mystery! 9 p.m. on 🚯 🕰

A frozen body in a meat truck, a forged passport and a page from a rare old religious book weave a tangled web for Lynley and Havers (Nathaniel Parker, Sharon Small) to unravel in "The Inspector Lynley Mysteries V: The Word of God." A dealer in stolen artifacts agrees to try getting the book for them but is killed in the process. And the brother of the original victim is somehow involved ... or is he?

Discovery Atlas: China Revealed 9 p.m. on (DISC)

Discovery Channel is immensely proud of this new series, and rightly so. More than a simple travelogue, it combines easy-to-swallow lessons in anthropology, history and geography with killer camerawork; if you have Discovery's high-definition channel, go there to watch it. James Spader narrates the first installment, which visits with Chinese farmers, monks, a young Olympic hopeful and a developer.

Without a Trace 10 p.m. on 2 5 7

It's in the job description under "other duties as assigned." In the new episode "Candy," a stripper goes missing from a club that lost another dancer to murder. Jack (Anthony La-Paglia) has Elena go under cover as a stripper at the club in search of leads. She's not alone; Danny (Enrique Murciano) is also on the detail, posing as a customer. Back at the office, Jack and Anne (Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio) try to sort out the implications of her pregnancy.

Save Water

Saving Water is simple and smart. 4)

1) Be smart when irrigating your

Water the lawn or garden during the coolest part of the day. Early morning

• Water plants according to their water needs; you'll have healthier plants and a lower water bill

 Set sprinklers to water lawns and gardens only – not the street or sidewalk.

• Use soaker hoses or trickle irrigation systems for trees and shrubs

2) Use your appliances wisely.

• Wash only full loads or set small loads to the appropriate water level.

 Scrape rather than rinse dishes before loading them into the dishwasher.

 Replace old clothes washers with Energy Star qualified appliances that use less water.

3) Don't flush your money down the drain/Toilets

 A leaky toilet can waste 200 gallons of water per day. Check your toilet for leaks by adding food coloring to the tank. If the toilet is leaking, color will appear in the bowl within 15 minutes. Look for worn out, corroded or bent parts in the leaky toilet. Most replacement parts are inexpensive, readily available and easily installed (Flush as soon as test is done, since food coloring may stain the tank.)

 When replacing your toilet, look for high-efficiency models that use less than 1.3 gallons per flush.

Conserve around the house. Keep drinking water in the refrigerator instead of letting the faucet run until cool. A running tap can use about 2 gallons of water per minute.

• Try not to leave the tap running while you brush your teeth or shave

• Don't pour water down the drain if you can use it for other projects such as watering a plant or cleaning.
5) Stop those leaks.

· Verify that your home is leak-free. Many homes have hidden water leaks that can waste more than 10 percent, costing both you and the environment. Read your water meter before and after a twohour period where no water is being used. If the meter does not read exactly the same, you probably have a leak.

• Repair dripping faucets and showers. If your faucet is dripping at the rate of one drop per second, you can expect to waste 2,700 gallons per year. This waste will add to the cost of water and sewer utilities or strain your septic system.

The Class 8 p.m. on 2 5 7

Is it too soon after Katrina to play hurricanes for laughs? This show's hurricanes for laughs? This show's writers don't think so, as they have Kyle and Aaron (Sean Maguire, Cristian de la Fuente) enjoying the heck out of watching Holly (Lucy Punch) report on one from the field. As the storm threatens the city, Richie (Jesse Tyler Ferguson) vows to take care of Lina (Heather Goldenhersh), with disastrous — no pun intended — results in the new episode "The Class Learns About Hurricanes.

Private Screenings: Child Stars 8 p.m. on TCM

Don't tune out this new special because you think you've seen enough shows about former kid stars. This one is a cut above. Host Robert Osborne chats with four ex-child stars from Hollywood's golden age: Margaret O'Brien ("Meet Me in St. Louis"), Darryl Hickman ("The Grapes of Wrath"), Dick Moore ("Sergeant York") and Jane Withers, who played had in the Children Translate and the bad girl to Shirley Temple's goody-two-shoes in "Bright Eyes" and grew up to be TV's Josephine the plumber.

Two and a Half Men 9 p.m. on 2 5 7

Sounds like a job for the Ghost Whisperer. Charlie (Charlie Sheen) tries his hand at surfing to impress a lady — of course — and almost drowns. He tells Alan (Jon Cryer) that his near-death experience brought him a visitor: their late father, who has a request. And it's not an easy one like quest. And it's not an easy one like "put fresh flowers on my grave" either. Holland Taylor also stars in the new episode "The Sea Is a Harsh Mis-

The Bachelor: Rome 9 p.m. on 4

Sing it, ladies: "Someday my prince will come." If you're a contestant on this season of the dating show, he's already here. Yup, this year's bachelor is Prince Lorenzo Borghese — born in the U.S. but descended from Italian nobility. Of course, he gets to choose only one lucky lady as a potential "princess," and if past seasons are any indication, there's no guarantee of happily ever after.

Heroes 9 p.m. on 😉 🛍 😢

There's a new hero in town, and he hears everything you say! The new episode "Don't Look Back" introduces Los Angeles cop Matt Parkman (Greg Grunberg, "Alias"), who turns out to have awesome hearing; he's the only one who can detect the cries of a missing girl at a nasty crime scene. Speaking of crime scenes, Niki (Ali Larter) has some dead thugs in her garage and a social services worker inquiring into her son's (Noah Gray-Cabey) welfare.

Nova 8 p.m. on 🚯 🕰

Now don't be turned off by the S word — science. This show's "scienceNOW" episodes are more entertaining than you might think. The new season is even more so, thanks to the charisma and storytelling skills of the new host, astrophysicist Neil de-Grasse Tyson. The season premiere has reports on the likelihood of an asteroid hitting Earth, new findings on the biology of obesity, and a robot scientist who's also an accomplished fiction writer.

MLB Baseball 8 p.m. on 413 53

Six months after its first one, Major League Baseball celebrates another opening day to begin the postseason. Tonight's wild-card game is actually the third one of the day; ESPN aired two Division Series openers in the afternoon. Following the best-of-five first round, Fox has exclusive coverage of the League Championship Series (beginning Oct. 10) and the World Series, which is scheduled to start Oct.

Private Benjamin 8 p.m. on (AMC)

A young widow (Goldie Hawn) joins the Army on a lark, believing the recruiting brochures. She soon finds out that as the old song says, there are "no private rooms or telephones" or any other amenities. Basic training is a near-disaster, but eventually she acquires not only the skills of a soldier, but the confidence to become her own woman. Hawn and Eileen Brennan were both nominated for Oscars for this delightful 1980 comedy.

Annie Hall 8 p.m. on TCM

Loosely inspired by his love affair with Diane Keaton, Woody Allen's bitter-sweet 1977 chronicle of comic Alvy Singer's bumpy romance with ditsy WASP singer Annie Hall was a big hit with audiences and critics. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences also loved it: It awarded the film Oscars for best actress (Keaton), best director, best original screenplay (Allen and Marshall Brickman) and best picture.

Law & Order: Criminal Intent 9 p.m. on 9 11 12

Being married to Brooke Shields wasn't enough? Sheesh. The former child model guest stars in the new episode "Siren Call" as a supermodel whose husband is implicated in the death of a cop's teenage stepdaughter. The girl liked to party, so Goren and Eames (Vincent D'Onofrio, Kathryn Erbe) start their investigation with the party scene. But cell phone records and an ex-boyfriend's testimony point to an affair with the older guy. Eric Bogosian also stars.

Jericho 8 p.m. on 2 5 7

At least the TV still works. In this new episode, a satellite broadcast from Asia, seen on the tube in the local bar, gives the folks in Jericho a little more information — but raises a lot more questions — about the extent of the attacks. Jake (Skeet Ulrich) suggests four search parties head out of town in different directions to find concrete answers. Heather (Sprague Grayden) is suspicious about the death of a resident who sought shelter in the mine.

Criminal Minds 9 p.m. on 2 5 7

Is there a dastardly duo at work here? The profilers look for whoever's committing a string of murders, recording them and sending out the DVDs to torture the victims' loved ones. They soon come to strongly suspect that they're dealing not with one killer but with two working together. But the solution to this whodunit is as much of a surprise to them as it will be to you. Mandy Patinkin and Thomas Gibson star in the new episode "The Perfect Storm."

Lost 9 p.m. on 4

What will become of Michael and Walt (Harold Perrineau, Malcolm David Kelley)? What will the Others do to Jack, Kate and Sawyer (Matthew Fox, Evangeline Lilly, Josh Holloway)? Is Sun's (Yunjin Kim) baby going to be OK? And is Jin (Daniel Dae Kim) really the father? Don't expect answers to all your questions from last spring in the season premiere, but we can tell you the Others will play a more prominent role. And keep an eye out for new

Moyers on America 9 p.m. on 🚯 🕰

If anyone can untangle a complicated news story and make it understandable, it's Bill Moyers. So if you're still trying to figure out the Jack Abramoff lobbying scandal, he explains it all in "Capitol Crimes," the first of three documentaries devoted to complex current affairs. The Abramoff affair culminated in the lobbyist pleading guilty to three felony counts in January, but as Moyers reveals, it didn't end there.

South Park 10 p.m. on COM

If this show weren't so darned entertaining, the long lulls between new episodes would be harder to take. The good news is, it's still funny in reruns. The better news: The wait for new episodes is over! Season 10 has been a hoot so far, poking fun at the Muhammad cartoon controversy, the series "Family Guy," the James Frey memoir scandal, the Dog Whisperer phenomenon, and the smugness that comes with being green. Can't wait to see what's next!

College Football 7:30 p.m. on ESPN

Perhaps the highlight of North Carolina State's 2005 season was its upset of ninth ranked Florida State on the road. Tonight they'll be backed by their home crowd at Carter-Finley Stadium as they try to upend another ranked Seminoles team bent on revenge. The Wolfpack will need a similar performance from running back Andre Brown to do it, though. He ran for 179 yards in last year's clash, but he'll be running into a stingier FSU defense this time.

My Name Is Earl 8 p.m. on 9 11 12

She's got the cutest little fuzzy face In the new episode "Sticks & Stones," Earl (Jason Lee) sets out to right the 91st wrong on his list: making fun of a girl with a mustache. He and Randy (Ethan Suplee) discover she's got more than a 'stache these days; she's working as a carnival bearded lady but would like to find something more main-stream. Joy's (Jaime Pressly) lawbreaking brings some bad karma to her and Darnell (Eddie Steeples).

CSI: Crime Scene Investigation 9 p.m. on 2 5 7

"I hear dead people!" Sure, this episode is gimmicky, but gimmicks are cool when they work. As Grissom (William Petersen) gives students a tour of the CSI facilities, the victims narrate their own stories from beyond the grave. They include a casino security guard, a hiker who plunged to her death from a cliff, a murdered veteran who had just come home from the war and a pair of neighbors done in by a chain saw. Jorja Fox also stars in the new episode "Toe Tags."

A Haunting 9 p.m. on DISC

Amityville's got nothing on this place. The new episode "Fear House" tells the story of a family driven from its rented house in Union, Mo. The father and three kids flee after the strange noises and visions they experience develop a violent component. But moving out doesn't end the ordeal. Dad starts having nightmares, which he interprets as a sign that he should go back and help the home's new occupants. Be careful out there!

George Lopez: Why You Crying? 9 p.m. on (SHOW)

Some viewers may know him solely from his ABC sitcom, but Lopez made his mark in the world of stand-up humor before Hollywood came calling. He gets back to his roots — not just in terms of his career, but also his family - in this special from 2004. Lopez introduces many of his relatives in the course of explaining how he became who he is today. You may have caught this show on Comedy Central, but it's much more fun here - look, ma, no

Ghost Whisperer 8 p.m. on 2 5 7

Everybody out of the pool; that means you, ghost kid. In the new episode "Drowned Lives," Melinda and Jim's (Jennifer Love Hewitt, David Conrad) new friends have the ghost of a 6-year-old girl causing havoc in their house. The child drowned in the swimming pool and is refusing to cross over. And they're threatening to move out — which isn't sitting well with Delia (Camryn Manheim), who sold them the place. Tamala Jones guest stars.

Close to Home 9 p.m. on 2 5 7

Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of your neighbors? Annabeth (Jennifer Finnigan) is about to find out when she prosecutes a man for drugging, binding and raping a teenage girl who lives nearby. She persuades the man's wife to testify and starts to suspect that this seemingly normal couple has a big, bad secret. Ray and Ed (Jon Seda, Cress Williams) learn more about each other during a stakeout in the new episode "Truly, Madly, Deeply."

Men in Trees 9 p.m. on 4

Things heat up in Elmo in the new episode "Talk for Tat." As record high temperatures grip the town, Marin (Anne Heche) realizes the raccoon in her closet is getting sick from the energy bars she's been giving him. She seeks help from Jack (James Tupper), and romantic sparks fly. And they aren't the only ones. Ben and Sara (Abraham Benrubi, Suleka Mathew) are growing attracted to each other, and so are Patrick and Annie (Derek Richardson, Emily Bergl).

Trading Spouses: Meet Your New Mommy 9 p.m. on 🕾 🕏

It's been almost a year since Marguerite Perrin raised the drama bar on this unscripted series with her "Daaarksiiiderrrs!" tantrum, so maybe the less-dramatic swaps in this new season won't pale in comparison. This show doesn't need high drama to be enjoyable; last season had some memorable moments that were more heartwarming than histrionic. And either way, it's always good water-cooler fodder.

Battlestar Galactica 9 p.m. on SCIFI

The Cylons have found New Caprica, and there's gonna be trouble! Some of the planet's human residents try to make the best of life under Cylon rule, but others are fighting back. Aboard Galactica, Adama (Edward James Olmos) is trying to mount a rescue mission but has trouble motivating the crew. And his selection for liaison to the resistance movement raises some eyebrows in the two-hour season premiere, "Occupation/Precipice."

The Music in Me: Children's Recitals From Classical to Latin, Jazz to Zydeco 7 p.m. on (HBO)

Anyone who's ever gotten weary of nagging a child to practice the piano or violin will be inspired by this new documentary, which profiles six youngsters who are passionate about their music. They include an 11-year old cellist who speaks eloquently about "feeling" the music and 7-year-old zydeco accordionist who gets lessons from Grandpa in his dreams. Who knows; your reluctant kid might develop a renewed interest in picking up that instrument.

How Stella Got Her Groove Back 7:30 p.m. on WE

An engaging wish-fulfillment fantasy for female moviegoers, this 1998 adaptation of Terry McMillan's best-selling novel benefits hugely from Angela Bassett's charismatic presence in the title role, a frazzled stock trader and single mom whose life is rejuvenated thanks to a hot 20-year-old (Taye Diggs) she meets during a Jamaica vacation. Whoopi Goldberg co-stars.

College Football 8 p.m. on 4

Is there another team to watch for nationally besides the USC Trojans in the Pac-10? Fans in Eugene, Ore., think it's their team especially after the Ducks win over No. 15 Oklahoma recently. Quarterback Dennis Dixon and tailback Jonathan Stewart performed big in that one, and they'll be in the spotlight once again when Oregon goes on the road to face conference rival Cal tonight. The Bears have a tal-ented QB of their own in Nate Long-

Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan

8 p.m. on SPIKE

Ricardo Montalban reprises his role as Khan, from an episode of the television series "Star Trek," in this 1982 movie. It's been years since Capt. Kirk (William Shatner) left Khan stranded after the events in the classic TV story "Space Seed." Now Khan is back, and he hijacks U.S.S. Reliant as part of a mad revenge plan. Leonard Nimoy, De-Forest Kelley and Kirstie Alley also

Cast Away 9 p.m. on (TNT)

Tom Hanks earned yet another welldeserved Academy Award nomination for his portrayal of Chuck Noland, a courier company executive who finds himself trapped on a deserted island for four years. Hanks earned it by keeping the audience engaged all by himself for the better part of the 140-plus minutes of the film. Robert Zemeckis directed the 2000 box office hit.

Welcome to the festival

I HAVE LONG THOUGHT that the Balloon Festival is one of the many events that cause Morgantown to be a different sort of community than other towns of its size. It is not just the spectacle and majesty of the balloons themselves, or the joy that spectators and fliers derive from them; it is also the cooperation and work that so many different people put into making the festival happen. This is what makes Morgantown truly different and we see that same spirit throughout the year in so many events, charities and functions.

With last year's rain we are overdue for a really great weekend of ballooning and we certainly hope that the weather cooperates this year. We have put together what we feel is a terrific line-up of bands and entertainment to backdrop the balloons and

During the weekend 16 bands will perform at Mylan Park including Queen City Funk and Soul on Friday night. On Friday, the WCLG&RE/MAX Kid's Day, will feature many educational and fun events, and children under 12 will have free admission to the grounds until 4 p.m.

We have a new carnival this year that will be open on Wednesday at 4 p.m. (no grounds admission), as a preview night, while we continue to set up the festival. There will be lots to do throughout the weekend.

The festival itself starts on Thursday with the FCX Systems/WVAQ Night Glow — grounds and carnival open at 4 p.m., and the balloons, entertainment and fun carry on from then till Sunday evening.

On Friday morning the balloons will take off from locations throughout Morgantown, as the Garfield's Launch takes to the air.

The balloon festival represents the work of a whole group of people and organizations. Mylan Park hosts the event, BOPARC puts up tents, signs and electrical systems, and Argyle Sheets and his crew from MPE Rentals provides tents, tables, stages, chairs, lights and many other things. Oliverio's Ristorante provides the food for the Pilots and Sponsors banquet, and Garfield's does the same for the pilots' get together after Night Glow. Sign Factory does all the wonderful signs, and The Dominion Post, WBOY, WCLG, WVAQ and the Morgantown CVB work together to advertise and market the festival. Amerigas provides the propane that powers the balloons, while Pepsi Cola, Glenmark Holdings and Toyota provide additional race sponsorship.

This is by no means a complete list and, additionally, there are some 25 volunteers who have worked tirelessly throughout the past few months to bring this festival to you.

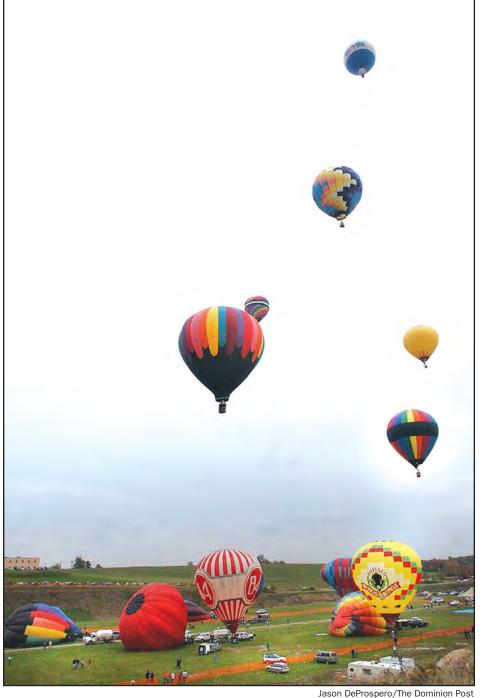

We hope that you enjoy the festival. Come out to Mylan Park and get close to the balloons as they prepare to jostle for their position in the skies and race after the hare balloon.

Perhaps you'll take a tethered ride, or treat yourself to a ride in a race.

Perhaps you'll watch the balloons from your home or work, or chase after them as they progress somewhat ponderously over the hills and valleys of Mountaineer country.

Whatever your involvement whether you fly them, watch them, chase them or photograph them — I hope that you enjoy the spectacle delight that the balloons bring to Morgantown, and I hope that they make the weekend fun for vou.

All about races and rides

Five of the festival's races are hare and hound races.

In this race, a single balloon, the hare, will inflate and take off.

Once it has taken off, all of the other balloons are allowed to start inflating and then to take off. The hare will travel for awhile and then land.

Wherever it lands, the hare places a large red X on the ground. The hound balloons have to try and get as close to the X as they can. The pilots all have labeled bean bags that they try to throw at the X. The beanbag that lands closest to the center of the X will award the pilot that threw it the most points.

Pilots are awarded prizes at each race, and at the end of the weekend, points are added up and the weekend's Grand Champion is decided.

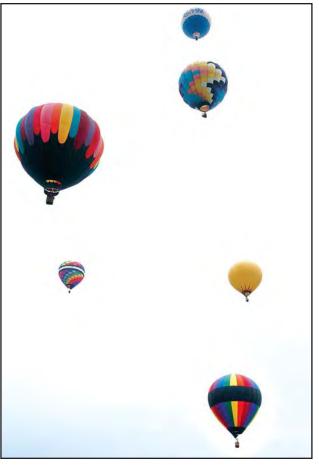

Tethered rides

Tethered rides will be available on Thursday night at no cost and periodically throughout the day on Oct. 1 and 2 for $5 a person.

Tethered rides are first come, first served and no advanced tickets will be sold. Also, while we hope for good weather, if it's rainy on any of these days, the balloons will not be able to inflate.

Ride coupons

If you're interested in riding in a hot air balloon, ride coupons can be purchased for any of the six races being held over the weekend.

Coupons are $200 per person and can be purchased at the festival or by calling Tara or Molly at University Motors: 296-4401 or (866) 313-4771

As with tethered rides, the balloon races are weather dependent. If there is bad weather and the balloons are unable to fly, you will be reimbursed for your ride coupon.

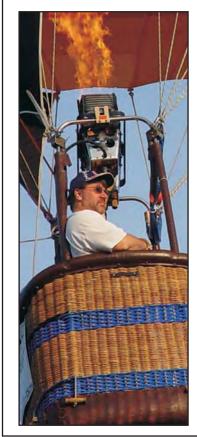

If weather seems good though, we suggest you arrive early before the race you are schedule to fly in. It is required for passengers to attend the pilot briefing, normally 30 minutes before the start of each race.

Passengers will need to participate in a short safety briefing before flying. The safety procedures will be explained to you by your pilot at the briefing.

For any additional questions about your ride, please contact University Motors or visit the information tent at the festival grounds.

The history of hot-air ballooning

On Sept. 19, 1783, Pilatre De Rozier, a scientist, launched the first hot-air balloon called "Aerostat Reveillon." The passengers were a sheep, a duck and a rooster, and the balloon stayed in the air for a grand total of 15 minutes before crashing back to the ground.

The first manned attempt came about two months later on Nov. 21, with a balloon made by two French brothers, Joseph and Etienne Montgolfier. The balloon was launched from the center of Paris and flew for a period of 20 minutes.

Just two years later, in 1785, a French balloonist. Jean Pierre Blanchard, and his American co-pilot, John Jefferies, became the first to fly across the English Channel. In these early days of ballooning, the English Channel was considered the first step to long distance ballooning, so this was a large benchmark in ballooning year Pilatre de Rozier (the world's first balloonist) was killed in his attempt at crossing the channel. His balloon exploded half an hour after takeoff due to the experimental design of using a hydrogen balloon and hot-air balloon tied togeth-

The next major pivotal point in balloon history was on Jan. 7, 1793. Jean Pierre Blanchard became the first to fly a hot-air balloon in North America. George Washington was present to see the balloon launch.

In August 1932. Swiss scientist Auguste Piccard was the first to achieve a manned flight to the Stratosphere. He reached a height of 52,498 feet, setting the new altitude record. For the next couple of years, altitude records continued to be set and broken every couple of months — the race was on to see who could reach the highest point.

In 1935, a new altitude record was set, and it remained at this level for the next 20 years. The balloon Explorer 2, a gas helium model reached an altitude of 72,395 feet (13.7 miles). For the first time in history, it was proven that humans could survive in a pressurized chamber at extremely high altitudes. This flight set a milestone for aviation and helped pave the way for future space travel.

The altitude record was set again in 1960 when Captain Joe Kittinger parachute jumped from a balloon that was at a height of 102,000 feet. The balloon broke the altitude record and Captain Kittinger, the high altitude parachute jump record. He broke the sound barrier with his body.

The Atlantic challenge

In 1978, the Double Eagle II became the first balloon to cross the Atlantic, another major benchmark in the history of ballooning. After many unsuccessful attempts, this mighty ocean had finally been cracked. It was a helium-filled model, carrying three passengers, Ben Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman. They set a new flight duration time at 137 hours.

The Pacific challenge

The first Pacific crossing was achieved three years later in 1981. The Double Eagle V launched from Japan on Nov. 10 and landed 84 hours later in Mendocino National Forest, Calif. The four pilots set a new distance record at 5.678 miles. Three years later, Captain Joe Kittinger flew 3,535 miles on the first solo transatlantic balloon flight, setting yet another record.

In 1987, Richard Branson and Per Lindstrand were the first to cross the Atlantic in a hot-air balloon, rather than a helium/gas-filled balloon. They flew a distance of 2,900 miles in a record-breaking time of 33 hours. At the time, the envelope they used was the largest ever flown, at 2.3 million cubic feet of capacity. A year later, Per Lindstrand set vet another record, this time for highest solo flight ever recorded in a hot-air balloon 65,000 feet.

The team of Richard Branson and Per Lindstrand paired up again in 1991 and became the first to cross the Pacific in a hot-air balloon. They traveled 6,700 miles in 47 hours, from Japan to Canada breaking the world distance record, travelling at speeds of up to 245 mph. Four years later, Steve Fossett became the first to complete the Transpacific balloon route by himself, travelling from Korea and landing in Canada four days later.

Finally, in 1999 the first around-the-world flight was completed by Bertrand Piccard and Brian Jones. Leaving from Switzerland and landing in Africa, they smashed all previous distance records, flying for 19 days, 21 hours and 55 min-

Bryant to appear several times at festival

Mime Chip Bryant bills himself as a "Vaudevillian Silent Clown."

Bryant used to live in Morgantown, but his work has since taken him to New York City, where his act is much in demand.

Bryant's apprenticeship included a stint with the Ringling Brothers Circus, and he also studied with the great mime, Marcel Marceau.

His spontaneity and timing are incredible and he is extraordinarily funny.

Van Anderson to serve as balloonmeister

Balloon festivals have a person who serves as the flight director for the event. This person is called the balloonmeister.

Anderson

It is the responsibility of the balloonmeister to make sure that all of the balloonists are aware of the topographical features and other hazards in the area of the flight, and to ensure that a proper weather briefing is given prior to launch.

The balloonmeister is also responsible for safe flight operations. At festivals involving competition, the Federal Aviation Administration requires a waiver, and this document indicates who will be the balloonmeister. At these competitive events, in addition to the previously mentioned duties, the Balloonmeister is also responsible for ensuring that all pilots comply with all Federal Aviation Administration Regulations. provisions of the waiver and rules of the event.

The term "balloonmeister" was first used more than 200 years ago in Germany. At that time, it was a name created to describe the person who inflated the gas balloons with hydrogen. Although few modern-day balloonists fly gas balloons and even fewer fly hydrogen filled balloons (helium is most popular today), both persons to serve as balloonmeister at the Mountaineer Balloon Festival are experienced gas balloon pilots, and FAA Pilot Examiners for both gas balloons as well as hot air balloons.

In 1984, Bob Sparks of Bethlehem, Pa., was the balloonmeister for the first Mountaineer Balloon Festival. Sparks' ballooning history includes setting nine world aviation records in different sizes and types of balloons-five of which he designed and built himself.

In 1973, Sparks attempted to cross the Atlantic in the Yankee Zephyr from Bar Harbor, Maine, but severe weather forced him down near Newfoundland where he was rescued by a Canadian icebreaker. Two years later, he launched from Mashpee, Mass., in Odyssey, but bad luck was again on board. He was rescued by a helicopter after a gas leak forced him to ditch in the Atlantic. Sparks was the Mountaineer Balloon Festival's Balloonmeister for five years.

In 1989, Van F. Anderson became the balloonmeister for the Morgantown festival, and has continued in that role since that time. Anderson was the founder of the Mountaineer Balloon Festival, and was Sparks' student. In addition to learning how to fly balloons from Sparks, Anderson also adopted the Sparks philosophy of ballooning. This included a firm rule to make every flight enjoyable, and to avoid flying in hazardous weather.

Jason DeProspero/The Dominion Post

Van Anderson's balloon, Fun One II, is inflated during Nite Glow.

Anderson founded first balloon festival in Morgantown

Balloonmeister Van Anderson first visited the Adirondack Balloon Festival in New York State in 1983.

Impressed with what he saw, he quickly realized that the West Virginia landscape would make a spectacular backdrop for a similar event. He also realized that, as the director of BOPARC, he was in a unique position to make it happen.

During 1984, he talked with

Walt Grishkot, who started the Adirondack festival and between the two of them, they turned this vision into reality.

In September 1984, the first Mountaineer Balloon Festival took place at the Morgantown Municipal Airport. Jeff Berryman, assistant to Anderson at BOPARC, worked with Anderson and Grishkot on the project.

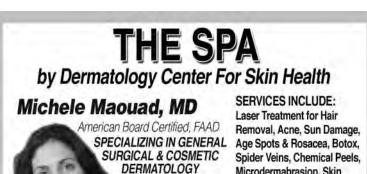

When Anderson eventually left BOPARC to pursue other career objectives, Berryman became director. Anderson has always maintained his commitment to the festival by acting as balloonmeister; he is always the lead balloon, and is the liaison with the Federal Aviation Authority for the event.

University Motors began its involvement in 1993, when it became the title sponsor, and has been involved in this role ever since. The Toyota Gold Purse, held Sunday afternoon, offers the biggest race prize — $1,000.

The festival is run and organized this year by Andy Claydon, Berryman, Anderson and a huge committee of enthusiastic people who want to make this festival one of the best.

The 2005 festival will be the 21st Mountaineer Balloon Festival. One year — 2003 — was missed due to earth-moving and landscaping operations at Mylan Park.

NAME: Michael C. Emich HOMETOWN: Akron, Ohio BALLOON: Second Wind

Michael C. Emich, 50, holds commercial aviation ratings for single-engine land, multiengine land, instrument and unlimited free balloon.

As a skydiver who holds class "D" Expert Jumper, USPA Jumpmaster and Jump Pilot ratings, he has logged more than 1,200 jumps. His most interesting jump was from a Boeing

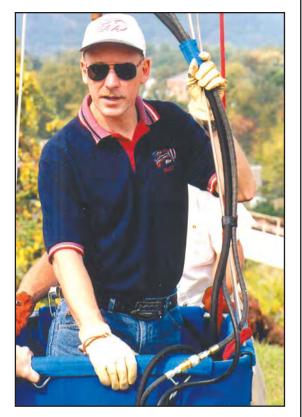

727 jet airliner over Quincey, Ill., in 1998 and his highest jump to date was from 21,000

In addition, he set the U.S. National Distance Record for category AA-4 gas balloons in a 17-hour, overnight flight in 1985 that covered 515 miles in a 19,000 cubic foot Navy surplus gas balloon filled with hydrogen. For this flight, Emich and co-captain William G. Armstrong Jr. were awarded the Balloon Federation of America's Shields-Trauger Award, the highest award in American ballooning. On Jan. 10, 1998, Emich set a new world distance record for category AX-5 hot-air balloons in a 270-mile flight using a balloon of his own design and construction. Not content with one world record, Emich designed and built a category AX-4 hot air balloon for an assault on the distance record for that size balloon. On Feb. 13, 1999, Emich established a new world distance record with a 184-mile flight.

Besides having extensive flying experience, he has designed and constructed 12 experimental hot-air balloons and restored to flying status two WWII U.S. Navy gas balloons.

Starting in October 1991, he had extensive involvement in the Earthwinds Transglobal Balloon Flight, serving in a number of assignments ranging from NAA directing official to assistant launch master and finally being selected as co-captain of the first 1993 launch attempt.

In professional life, he is a lieutenant for the Akron Ohio Fire Department. His current assignment includes fire prevention and suppression as a company officer and all phases of EMS. He is also a member of the Akron Fire Department Dive Rescue Team and the Summit County Special Operations Response Previously, Emich worked for 11 years in a series of progressively responsible research and engineering assignments in the tire and polymer industry.

Besides sport aviation, his hobbies include scuba diving and sailing. (He earned a Bareboat Charter Captains Certificate at the Annapolis Sailing School in Annapolis, Md.)

How do hot-air balloons fly?

Balloons are a very safe aircraft, and this is because they are relatively simple in both design and in conformance to the laws of physical science. With very few moving parts, the likelihood of mechanical malfunctioning is remote. In essence, balloons utilize the law of gravity and the tendency of lighter, less dense air to rise from the earth.

An average balloon system, comprised of full fuel tanks, basket, burners and the colorful envelope, generally weighs about 600 pounds. If you add to that the weight of three to four adult passengers, the combined weight doubles to around 1,200 pounds. Gravity would then tend to keep this amount of weight on the ground.

Competing with gravity is air that is less dense than the environment around it. You can experience this phenomenon when you place your head under the water in the swimming pool and blow out air. The air forms into bubbles, and because it is less dense than the water around it, tends to rise upward and out of the dense water.

In the case of a balloon, the nylon or polyester envelope captures this less dense air, and uses it to "lift" or overcome gravity to the degree that it lifts the balloon system and its passengers as it rises around the more dense air of the atmosphere (ambient air) around it. This is the simple way that balloons work.

In ballooning, there are two kinds of "lifting air." Gas balloons use elements that are designated as "lighter-than-air," such as hydrogen and helium. When captured in a rubber envelope, they lift the balloon system and passengers to a height that creates a balance between "lift" and gravity, known as "equilibrium" to balloonists.

In a hot air balloon, the lifting is caused by heating the air inside the nylon or polyester envelope by powerful propane burners so it becomes less dense than the colder ambient air outside.

In hot air balloons, the amount of lift can be increased by making the air hotter inside the envelope. Generally, balloons fly at temperatures of about 180 to 240 degrees. On a cool day, when outside temperatures are 40-50 degrees, a balloon would not have to be heated as hot to be able to carry the same amount of weight as it would on an 80-degree day.

Increased temperature is not the only way to increase lifting capacity in balloons. By flying a balloon with a larger envelope, lift can be increased by the volume, rather than temperature of the air.

Because the air inside the envelope of a hot air balloon is always changing in temperature — either from heating it with the powerful propane burner or by natural cooling without such burner induced heating - flying a balloon involves a constant competition between gravity and "lift." However, balloons always return to earth, so gravity is the eventual winner of this competition. Yet the thrill and excitement of ballooning that is provided by the lifting gas tends to also provide an "emotional lift" to all of those lucky enough to be in the basket.

Unique festival finds home in Morgantown

BY VAN F. ANDERSON

Founder and Balloonmeiste

FOR MORE THAN two decades, the Mountaineer Balloon Festival has been a popular event in Morgantown's busy fall schedule, bringing a variety of color to the sky to augment the seasonal coloring of the foliage.

From the first balloon ascension of 20 balloons, witnessed by hundreds of spectators from the Morgantown Municipal Airport back in 1984, the event has grown to include more than 40 balloons and thousands of spectators in recent years

In addition to many local residents looking forward to this event, most of the balloonists also view participation in the Mountaineer Balloon Festival as an essential part of their personal balloon season schedule.

The majority of those balloonists attending this event are "regulars" from West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania, with others from more distant states. For most of them, the trip to Morgantown represents the close of another season of ballooning.

Although the initial site of the festival was the Morgantown Municipal Airport, the terrorist attacks of 2001 caused the FAA to close airports, and then to open them to only those aircraft with Mode C (altitude emitting) transponders-equipment that is not common to balloons. Hence, it was obvious that using an airport for balloon festivals would be subject to random acts resulting in FAA restrictions that could result in a festival being cancelled just days before it was scheduled to start. So, the festival was moved to Mylan Park.

In so doing, many benefits were realized. First of all, the balloon launch area is in a bowl. or protected area, allowing for easier inflations than were generally experienced at the windy airport location. Secondly, the inherent danger of having spectators drive across the runway of an operating airport was no longer a factor. Third, because the launch area is more than five miles from the Morgantown Air Traffic Control Tower, it is outside Morgantown airspace, and launching of balloons can take place when visibility is less than would be required at the airport.

The success of the festival has evolved due to the intense investment of human and other resources from BOPARC, sponsors and volunteers through the years, as well as the financial support of local businesses. Without this broad community support, the festival would not have survived.

In reflecting on the years, I find a great amount of satisfaction when people relate to me their joy of watching balloons float over the blue Monongalia County sky, or even better — when they express their excitement involved with their first balloon flight.

As a result, ballooning has found a home in Morgantown, to the delight of thousands who might have otherwise never had the opportunity to experience the uniqueness of ballooning.

In a hot air balloon, the lifting is caused by heating the air inside the nylon or polyester envelope by powerful propane burners. The air becomes less dense than the colder ambient air outside.

Getting a chance to go above the world

BY LINDA DUVAL

The Gazette (Colorado Springs) (MCT)

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS. Colo. — We're not aware of leaving the ground until we begin to drift, like a puff of thistledown, on the gentle morning currents.

Below us, it looks like an artist's rendering of a perfect landscape. Above us, a silky sack of black and lime checkered nylon blocks out the sky. The sounds of the crowd fade and the dawn's perfect stillness is broken only by the occasional blast of the propane burner that heats the air keeping the balloon afloat.

Soon, we're 1,000 feet above Steamboat Springs, participants in the town's annual Balloon Rodeo.

This annual event, one of many such in Colorado and the West each summer and fall, draws an invitation-only field of about 50 competitors.

But you don't have to be a pilot, or even a passenger, to enjoy this and dozens of other hot-air balloon festivals. Amateur (and professional) photographers, senior travelers or families looking for an inexpensive show, not to mention diehard balloon buffs, all get a kick out of these lighter-than-air affairs. Many people plan their vacations around them.

Pilot Phil Campbell, 34, counts himself lucky to be among those competing in the Steamboat Springs event. Campbell, from Aurora, Colo., has been ballooning since his father, Calvin Campbell, took it up nearly 30 years ago.

"I grew up around balloons," says Phil Campbell. "We started chasing them when I was about 5. By the time I was 12, I was acting as crew chief for my dad. Then I got my pilot's license when I was maybe 20.'

Ditch The Boring Brown Bag...

A few years ago, he bought his own balloon and basket, named it Who's Your Daddy? and began flying with his wife and crew chief. Dine.

The silence of the morning is broken by the crackle of his hand-held radio.

"Who's Your Daddy?" he responds.

The chase crew asks him which road he's over, so they can make the correct turn to help catch him when he lands. He checks his map and gives them directions.

Hot-air balloon pilots have to learn navigation techniques as well as how to inflate, fly and land these colorful aircraft.

"And they are registered aircraft, just like planes," he explains.

Suddenly, a less-experienced balloonist begins to rise right beneath our basket.

Campbell leans his sizable bulk over the top of the basket and yells "ABOVE YOU!" several times before the other balloonist realizes he doesn't have an unobstructed path for ascent.

But this is the only blemish on the otherwise gentle ride. Even the landing, which he picks out carefully from the approved landing sites, is gentle. He brings the basket to about a foot above the ground, where his ground crew grabs it and deftly lowers it to the Earth.

Not all landings are this gentle, he says. It depends on a number of factors, but the crew always faces in the direction of the landing with knees flexed, ready to bounce if necessary.

Caution is the key word in ballooning, Campbell says.

Before the ride, he goes over the prescribed safety practices with his ground crew in a friendly but no-nonsense way.

'No smoking," he says. "You smoke, I go boom."

No stepping on or over the balloon envelope (the balloon itself).

And anyone on board the balloon does exactly what the pilot says — duck! move over! — and does it now, he says, adding with a grin, "unless it's morally suspect."

Weekdays, Campbell works for the department of public safety for the city of Aurora.

But on weekends, he flies.

"I've never been part of a sport in my life, but this is something even non-athletic guys like me can do. "We get all ages, from little kids to 90-year-old great-grandmothers," riding in balloons. And there's a camaraderie in

"If you're a balloonist. you're a member of a community," he says.

His sentiments are echoed by Colorado Springs balloonist Dewey Reinhard, who also flies often in the annual Steamboat Springs Balloon Rodeo.

"We've been coming here for years," he says of his family and crew. "We just love the scenery."

'The flying conditions are usually good, and it isn't so crowded here as some (events) I've been to," says Reinhard, flying his gold and orange Free Spirit II.

He's been to the biggest hotair balloon festival of them all in Albuquerque but doesn't go any more because it's too crowded, he says.

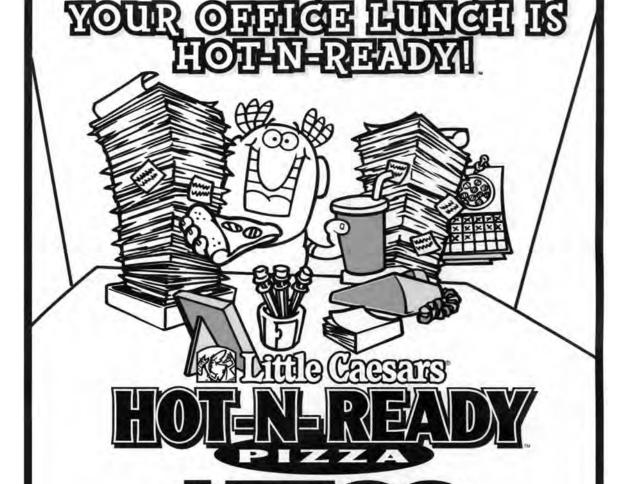

"This one is more informal, too," and many of the same pilots come year after year, so it's as much a reunion as a competition.

Balloonists set up the barbecue grill by their campers and invite other balloonists for a cookout. They share coffee and doughnuts in the mornings.

They respect each other, help each other, compete in a friendly fashion.

This is their passion, a way to relax and unwind, even though it means getting up before dawn and doing lots of physical work before and after a flight.

"A day of ballooning is tiring," Campbell says. "But it quiets the soul."

Parts of a balloon

The basket

The basket is the bottom part of the balloon which carries the passengers, pilot and propane gas cylinders. Baskets come in a variety of different shapes and sizes, some smaller for the more intimate flights for two to three people, right through to the larger sizes (20 plus) used for public flights.

These days most baskets are woven from Kooboo and Palambang cane as these materials are extremely sturdy, flexible and relatively lightweight. The cane has proven to be the most hardwearing and durable material. even more so than aluminum or some composite plastics. The basket needs to be extremely strong as it is constantly on the move, being shifted from place to place. When the balloon actually lands, there is a large amount of force exerted on it as it hits and comes grinding to a halt. The flexibility of the cane helps with the landing as wicker material flexes a little, absorbing some of the energy.

The burner

The burner is like the engine of the hot air balloon. It is what propels the hot air up into the envelope to make the balloon move upwards into the air. There are many different types of burner available single, double, up to quad sysballoon baskets come in all sizes. Some hold two to three people, while others can hold 20 or more.

tems, depending on the size of the balloon flying. These days, due to the advancement in balloon technology, it is also possible to get the burner designed to your own specific requirements. For example, if you required an ultra quiet flame system or a burner frame made from a specific type of material, this could all be easily arranged.

The envelope

The actual balloon is referred to as the envelope, which is constructed from long nylon sections called gores. The gores extend from the base of the envelope to the crown and are made up of many smaller panels. The main part of the envelope (the bottom two thirds) is normally made from a combination of nylon or polyester, the same type of material that parachutes are made of. It is tightly woven and is coated with a material that makes it extremely airtight and durable. Nylon works well in balloons because it is lightweight, but it is also fairly sturdy and has a high melting temperature.

The bottom part of the envelope, referred to as the skirt (nearest to the burner) is made from a material called Nomex. Nomex is an industry standard flame-resistant material used in Formula 1 Racing and also in the suits of firefighters. It is used near the mouth (base) of the envelope as this is the area most prone to the heat from the burner.

The material used nearer the top of the envelope is known as Hyperlast. It has been around for many years and is used just in this top third of the envelope.

What makes Hyperlast desirable to use is that the nylon base fabric is woven from a heavier yarn, which increases the strength a great deal. Also Hyperlast has a silicone coating added to both sides, which helps protect the envelope from the growth of mould or fungi.
