CHIP targets child wellness

Manchin reveals new state program during meeting with paper

BY ERIC BOWEN The Dominion Post

Kids without health insurance will be able to get free wellness examinations when they enter kindergarten, through a new initiative at the West Virginia Children's Health Insurance Program, Gov. Joe Manchin said Thursday.

Manchin announced the initiative at a meeting with The Dominion Post editorial board in a discussion that touched on former coach Rich Rodriguez, the proposed Monongalia County service fee, Preston County schools and more.

Manchin said he had just gotten word a few hours earlier that the federal government would let West Virginia use its CHIP money for the wellness program. "We're the first state that I know of that is going to get a waiver to their CHIP's program," Manchin said. "We want to have the flexibility to use our CHIP money to prevent a child from getting ill."

Sharon Carte, executive director of West Virginia CHIP, said the new program will help about 1,100 uninsured kids get physical exams. Because the children covered under this program are not already covered under Medicaid or CHIP, the state needed the federal government's approval.

Carte said the exams will look for illnesses, vision difficulties, nutritional deficits and other common problems. Carte said the exams should help prevent problems down the line in a child's life.

"The intention is that it helps parents to become aware if there is any deficit that the child has, such as a vision problem, that without this there would be a missed opportunity to correct something that would go on and help that child with

State, most local offices are closed Christmas eve

The Dominion Post

With Christmas falling on a Tuesday this year, many offices are closing Monday to give employees a four-day holiday.

Gov. Joe Manchin decided that state agencies will be closed on the Mondays before Christmas and New Year's Day, giving employees the full day off. They had been getting half days off. For the past two years, there have been no additional days off because the holidays fell on Sundays and then Mondays.

Manchin spokeswoman Lara Ramsburg said the governor decided to give state employees the Mondays off this year because he believes the holidays are a time to spend with families. Manchin didn't want employees who are leaving over the weekend to visit family to have to come back to town early or

According to several WVU football players. Rich Rodriguez's departure to Michigan hasn't played into their thoughts of the future. But a number of WVU players addressed their intentions for next year Thursday afternoon. Senior defensive end Johnny Dingle decided to declare for the NFL though as an academic non-qualifier, he could have returned for another season if he graduated in May. Coming out of high school, Dingle did not qualify academically to play his first year of college football. But if the academic non-qualifiers come back to graduate from college in four years, they regain that lost year of eligibility. WVU safety Eric Wicks was able to return this season under that rule, though the Big East no longer allows schools to sign such athletes.

The Monongalia County Courthouse and all county offices will be closed Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve.

Morgantown city offices will be open until noon both Mondays. City garbage pickups will begin at 3 a.m. those days to accommodate early closing times for local landfills.

Allied Waste General Manager Jeff Harvey said all regular garbage pickups for the next two weeks will run a day late. Allied Waste employees will work Saturdays to cover Friday pickups.

As an extra stocking stuffer, Morgantown City Council and the Morgantown Utility Board approved a $50 bonus for employees. City Manager Dan Boroff said the bonus for all 220 city employees is included in the city's annual budget as a way to recognize their hard work.

"City council grants that to express their collective appreciation," Boroff said. "It's a special time of year. I know the city employees very much appreciate that sentiment."

The Monongalia County Commission did not discuss a bonus. "We don't do that," county Administrator Diane DeMedici said. "Legally, I don't think we're allowed. The money's budgeted July 1, and the salaries are set."

Post offices

Post offices in the region will close early Christmas Eve, but the time varies by area.

The downtown Morgantown,

Westover, Star City and Cheat Lake post offices will be open until noon. Terra Alta will close at 12:30 p.m. The Tunnelton Post Office

Man finds his birth mom is a co-worker

Associated Press

PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP, Mich.—Steve Flaig's long search for his birth mother ended at an incredible place: the checkout line of the home-improvement store where he works.

Flaig had met Christine Tallady after she started working at Lowe's several months ago, but it was only recently that the 22-year-old delivery driver figured out she was the woman who had given him up for adoption.

With support from his adoptive parents, Flaig had asked the agency, DA Blodgett for Children, for information on his birth mother when he turned 18. Tallady, who was single and not ready to be a mother when she gave birth to Flaig, in 1985, had left the adoption record open, figuring he would want to contact her one day.

IRS paid contractor $188,000 to provide $38,000 clerk

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service paid a contractor $188,000 to provide one person to do clerical work over 11 months.

The contract was included as one example of financial waste in a government report Thursday on the tax agency's involvement in a new program ordered by President Bush in 2004 to develop more secure ID cards for federal workers.

The Treasury Department's inspector general for tax administration said the IRS also needlessly spent almost $2 million on a computer security system that the tax agency doesn't plan to use at this time.

The IRS was responsible for developing and implementing the program for providing more secure identification cards to 150,000 employees at the Treasury Department. The projected cost of the Treasury program was put at $421 million over 14 years.

To provide one person for a clerical support job updating contact lists, assigning and tracking equipment and processing trip reports, the contractor was paid $128 an hour.

Auditors for the inspector general's office were told by IRS program managers that the work could have been done by an employee with a ranking of GS-7, eligible for a starting salary of around $38,000 plus benefits. The contractor and the temporary worker it provided were not identified.

Of the $30 million the IRS has committed so far for the project, about $3.5 million was spent on acquisitions that should have been avoided, the report said.

"The IRS accepted this responsibility for the Treasury Department," Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration J. Russell George said. "It must change its present course and proceed in an efficient, cost-effective and responsible manner."

Steve Ellis, vice president of Taxpayers for Common Sense, a private budget watchdog group, said it was "staggering" that more than 10 percent of initial spending for the project had been wasted.

"If any agency should be responsible for our taxpayer dollars, it should be the IRS," he said. "They are in the front lines of collecting revenue from our citizens, and you want them to be careful with every dime they spend."

Dingle said he sat down with his parents, and his mother "told me whatever I do, she'll support me. It has nothing to do with the coaching decisions. [I want to] go out there and finish on a great final note against Oklahoma and get ready for the next level."

Dingle, an All-Big East secondteam selection, led the Mountaineers with 18 tackles for loss. His eight sacks tie him with Marc Magro for the team lead.

"This is what I do. I love playing football," Dingle said. "I have a chance to do something I've wanted since I was a young teenager. I am just going to go out and grab the opportunity.'

Dingle's good friend and fellow senior defensive lineman, Keilen

Dykes, supports the decision. "Johnny is going to make the best decision for him, and if he thinks that's the best decision for him, then good for him. I am all for it," Dykes said. Slaton said he isn't even addressing NFL thoughts or the impact Rodriguez's departure will have on his decision. "As of right now, I can't say if it is or if it's not," said Slaton, who has rushed for 1,053 yards and 17 touchdowns this season. "The decision time is going to be after the bowl game. I don't need any other distractions."

At the same time, Slaton says he holds no ill feelings toward Rodriguez.

"I saw him yesterday. I speak for myself, [I have] a lot of respect,' Slaton said of the conversation between the two that ended with a hug. "The guy came in and gave me a shot at running back, so all the respect I have is going to be shown for him. I'm going to miss him."

After finishing sixth in the Heisman Trophy voting earlier this month, White said he didn't put in paperwork to get evaluated for his stock in the NFL.

Rodriguez lured Devine, a highly touted Fort Myers, Fla., native, to WVU. Devine still has three years of eligibility remaining, and he said the initial shock he felt Sunday has worn off.

"I started out here, so I am pretty much going to finish here," said Devine, who has rushed for 519 yards and four touchdowns in his first season. "When everything first happened, I had thoughts going through my mind, but everything's all right now."

WVU senior Darius Reynaud, also an academic non-qualifier, could return next year if he graduates in May, but the wide receiver did not speak to the media Thursday afternoon.

Reynaud is one touchdown reception away from tying Chris Henry's school season record of 12.

Asteroid could collide with Mars in late January

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Mars could be in for an asteroid hit.

A newly discovered hunk of space rock has a 1 in 75 chance of slamming into the Red Planet on Jan. 30. scientists said Thursday.

"These odds are extremely unusual. We frequently work with really long odds when we track ... threatening asteroids," said Steve Chesley, an astronomer with the Near Earth Object Program at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. The asteroid, known as 2007 WD5, was discovered in late November and is similar in size to an object that hit remote central Siberia in 1908, unleashing energy equivalent to a 15-megaton nuclear bomb and wiping out 60 million trees.

Scientists tracking the asteroid, currently halfway between Earth and Mars, initially put the odds of impact at 1 in 350 but increased the chances this week. Scientists expect the odds to diminish again early next month, after getting new observations of the asteroid's orbit, Chesley said.

'We know that it's going to fly by Mars and most likely going to miss, but there's a possibility of an impact." he said.

If the asteroid does smash into Mars, it will probably hit near the equator close to where the rover Opportunity has been exploring the Martian plains since 2004. The robot is not in danger because it lies outside the impact zone. Speeding at 8 miles a second, the asteroid would carve a hole the size of the famed Meteor Crater in Arizona.

In 2004, fragments of the comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 smacked into Jupiter, creating a series of overlapping fireballs in space. Astronomers have yet to witness an asteroid impact with another planet. "Unlike an Earth impact, we're not afraid, but we're excited," Chesley said.

Priest accused of jogging naked before dawn

The Rev. Robert Whipkey was arrested June 22, in Frederick, about 25 miles north of Denver. An officer saw him walking on a street naked at 4:35 a.m. Whipkey told police he jogged naked because he sweats profusely if he wears clothing, according an arrest report.

Teen may face murder charge in death of premature baby McClatchy-Tribune

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — A 15-year-old boy who threw a football at a pregnant girl could face charges in her baby's death, authorities said Thursday. The boy intentionally threw the football twice at the 15-year-old girl's stomach while they were at a Boys & Girls Club playground in November, according to a Broward Sheriff's Office report released Thursday. The impact caused her to give birth to a premature baby girl, who died hours later.

The Medical Examiner ruled the death a homicide, and prosecutors are reviewing the case to determine what charges, if any, to file against the boy. He is not in custody.

"This isn't an easy call," prosecutor Maria Schneider said Thursday. "When somebody shoots somebody in the head, it's very easy to say they wanted to kill the person. We're looking at a situation that's not that cut and dry. We need to look at all of the facts involved.'

Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Joshua Perper said the death was not an accident.

"He hit her twice," Perper said. "You don't have to be a brain surgeon to know that if you hit a woman who is pregnant in the belly, that you can cause an abortion."

ney in charge of the Juvenile Division, said she is reviewing statements and records and will likely make a decision on charges sometime in January.

"It is bizarre," she said. "When you first hear the circumstances, you say 'Oh, my God.'

The girl first told the boy she was pregnant two weeks earlier when he asked why her stomach was "sticking out," according to the sheriff's report. She told the boy, who was a friend, that that her baby would be born in a few months.

Schools and more

■ Manchin said the state School Building Authority is considering Preston County's proposal to build a replacement for Central Preston Middle School. Manchin has made a proposal for the next legislative session that the state sell $100 million in bonds to help pay for new schools.

Manchin applauded Monongalia County for proposing a $2 service fee to pay for new roads. He said the state has done its part to pay for new roads in the county, including the Mon-Fayette Expressway. But because the state can't meet the demand for new roads, counties and the state are going to have to find new sources of money to meet the need for more roads. ■ Manchin reiterated his stance against the Trans-Allegheny Interstate Line. The governor said he didn't see any benefit to customers in West Virginia, but they were among the people who would have to pay the cost of the line. He also said the power companies should look more closely at upgrading existing power lines before building new ones.

Two bombings in Iraq kill 19, including one US soldier

Associated Press

BAGHDAD — A suicide bombing northeast of the capital and a car bombing in Baghdad on Thursday shattered the calm of an otherwise unusually peaceful holiday period in Iraq. Authorities said 19 people were killed in the two attacks, including a U.S. soldier.

The suicide bomber struck in Kanaan, a Shiite-dominated town near the city of Baqouba in Diyala province, about 35 miles northeast of Baghdad. He detonated his explosives as a U.S. patrol was about to enter a building where a city council meeting was to be held, the U.S.

The U.S. military said one soldier and five civilians were killed, and that 10 more soldiers and one Iraqi were wounded. However, local police and the hospital morgue in Baqouba said 13 people were killed at the scene. An official with the morgue, who asked not to be identified as he was not authorized to release the information, said one more person later died of his injuries, bringing the total to 14.

The discrepancy could not immediately be reconciled. It was unclear how many Iraqis were wounded in the attack. The assistant police chief of Kanaan, Capt. Waleed Mitieb al-Karkhi, said they included three children and two women.

In Baghdad, a car bombing killed four people and wounded another nine outside a store selling liquor in the center of the city, police said.

Despite the bombings, this season has been markedly calmer than the same time last year, when at least 80 Iragis were killed on the first day of Eid al-Adha, one of the most important holidays of the Islamic calendar.

So far this month, 536 Iraqis have died in war-related violence - compared to 2,309 last December, according to an Associated Press count.

Violence across the country has fallen by about 60 percent in recent months. The drop has been attributed largely to a combination of this summer's increase in U.S. troops in Baghdad, a freeze on activities by the Mahdi Army militia and the appearance of "awakening councils" Sunni Arab tribesmen who have turned against al-Qaida in Iraq.

In Washington, President Bush said more work remains to be done in Iraq, especially in terms of political improvements in the country.

"Are we satisfied with progress in Baghdad? No, but to say nothing is happening is not the case," Bush said.

Much of the day's violence was centered in Diyala province, where turbulence has been slower to subside than in other parts of Iraq. There are areas of Diyala that the U.S. military has never controlled.

The top U.S. commander in northern Iraq — whose area includes Diyala — has warned that al-Qaida in Iraq is still capable of staging spectacular attacks there despite a 50 percent drop in violence in his region.

Army Maj. Gen. Mark P. Hertling said Wednesday that al-Qaida in Iraq was being pushed north by the increased number of U.S. troops that surged into Baghdad over the summer and fall. The U.S.-backed "awakening councils" have also been flushing insurgents out of the neighboring Anbar province.

Hidden rooms in Iraq reveal disturbing past: torture by extremists, silence in village

Associated Press

BAGHDAD - Blood-splotcheson walls, chains hanging from a ceiling and swords on the killing floor — the artifacts left a disturbing tale of brutalities inside a suspected al-Qaida in Iraq torture chamber. But there was yet another chilling fact outside the dirt-floor dungeon.

Villagers say they knew about the torment but were too intimidated by extremists to tell authorities until now.

Stories such as these — claims of insurgent abuses and the silence of frightened Iraqis - have emerged with increasing frequency and clarity recently as U.S.-led forces push deeper into former extremist fiefdoms and forge alliances with tribes seeking to reclaim their regions.

The reports and tips now pouring in build a harrowing portrait of rule under al-Qaida and its backers: mass graves, ruthless punishments, self-styled Islamic courts ordering summary executions.

Such a lead brought soldiers earlier this month to the hidden room in Muqdadiyah, about 60 miles north of Baghdad, the U.S. military said Thursday. Graffiti on the building proclaimed "Long Live the Islamic State" — a reference to the Islamic governance, or caliphate, sought in Iraq by Sunni extremist groups that include al-Qaida.

Scrawled in white paint above a bed in the torture area was a Quranic phrase in Arabic normally used to welcome a guest. But the context suggested only sadistic mockery: "Come in, you are safe."

The floor was littered with food wrappers, plastic soda bottles and electric cables that snaked to a metal bed frame, presumably where detainees were shocked, according to the U.S. account of the discovery during a Dec. 8-11 mission.

The rooms "had chains, a bed - an iron bed that was still connected to a battery — knives and swords that were still covered in blood," said U.S. Army Maj. Gen. Mark P. Hertling, the top U.S. commander in northern Iraq.

Nearby were nine mass graves containing the remains of 26 people, he said.

ORANJESTAD, Aruba - One of three top suspects in the disappearance of Natalee Holloway wrote during an Internet chat session that the teenager was dead, Aruba's chief prosecutor said Thursday. Prosecutor Hans Mos refused to identify the person who wrote the message but said its discovery had contributed to the decision to re-arrest Joran van der Sloot and brothers Deepak and Satish Kalpoe last month.

The men were subsequently released after they refused to speak to authorities about newly uncovered evidence. The Aruba Public Prosecutor's Office said Tuesday it will not charge the three.

Strong quake rattles northern New Zealand

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — A strong earthquake struck New Zealand on Thursday night, collapsing at least three older buildings in one coastal city on North Island, sparking small fires and forcing authorities to declare a state of emergency there.

Only 10 minor injuries were reported in the port city of Gisborne, which was hit hardest by the quake and suffered the most property damage, although it was felt all over the country, officials said.

The magnitude 6.8 quake, which struck at 8:55 p.m., was centered in the Hikurangi undersea trench off North Island, 25 miles below the surface, and about 30 miles southeast of Gisborne, the GNS Science

Kyrgyzstan names mountain 'Mount Santa'

BISHKEK, Kyrgyzstan — This former Soviet republic has mountains honoring Communist and Russian leaders. Just in time for Christmas, authorities say they plan to name a snowy peak "Mount Santa Claus.'

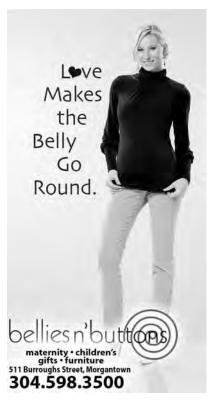

Three climbers set off Wednesday to scale the designated peak and bury a capsule containing the flag of Kyrgyzstan at the summit on Christmas Eve.

Why is a predominantly Muslim and former Soviet land honoring the jolly old elf?

"We want to develop tourism. and Santa Claus is an ideal brand to help us do this," said Nurhon Tadzhibayeva, an official with Kyrgyz tourist authorities.

Kyrgyzstan intends to hold annual games in which Santas from all over the world will test their chimney-climbing, sled-racing and tree-decorating skills.

Panel subpoenas ex-CIA official who ordered tapes' destruction

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House Intelligence Committee issued a subpoena Thursday for Jose Rodriguez, the former CIA official who directed that secret interrogation videotapes of two suspected terrorists be destroyed.

The panel ordered Rodriguez, the former head of the CIA's National Clandestine Service, to appear for a hearing on Jan. 16. Committee Chairman Silvestre Reyes, D-Texas, said Rodriguez "would like to tell his story but his counsel has advised us that a subpoena would be necessary."

The CIA cracked open its files to congressional investigators Thursday, inviting them to the agency's Virginia headquarters to begin reviewing documents and records related to the videotapes.

House Intelligence Committee staff members want to know who authorized the tapes' destruction; who in the CIA, Justice Department and White House knew about it and when, and why Congress was not fully informed. The committee, which had threatened to subpoena the records if they did not get access this week, also wants to know exactly what was shown on the tapes, which document the harsh interrogation of two al-Qaida suspects in 2002. The CIA destroyed the tapes in 2005.

"We learned we have a long way to go, that there are a number of people involved that we need to talk with," said a committee official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because the investigation of the tapes' destruction is ongoing. "Many in the executive branch will be called." The committee is still drawing up its list of witnesses to call.

President Bush declined to address the controversy, saying at a White House news conference Thursday he was confident that administration and congressional investigations "will end up enabling us all to find out what exactly happened." He repeated his assertion that his "first recollection" of being told about the tapes and their destruction was when CIA Director Michael Hayden briefed him on it earlier this month.

At the Justice Department, investigators were combing through CIA e-mails and other documents and planning to interview former agency officials. One official familiar with the investigation said the review so far indicates that Alberto Gonzales, who served as White House counsel and then attorney general, advised against destroying the videotapes as one of four senior Bush administration attorneys discussing how to handle them. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because of the ongoing investigation. Gonzales' attorney, George Terwilliger, declined comment.

U.S. astronaut mourns his mom from orbit

Associated Press

HOUSTON - Daniel M. Tani's 90year-old mother died in an auto accident this week, but he has no way of getting home until late January. He must grieve from more than 200 miles away — in orbit, aboard the international space station.

It's a heartbreaking situation no other American astronaut has experienced. And it's made all the more tragic by Tani's devotion to his mother, Rose, who raised him and his siblings alone in suburban Chicago after their father died when he was 4.

"He is obviously pretty sad," the astronaut's brother, Richard Tani, said in Thursday's Chicago Sun-Times. "He was pretty close to her. We are all close to her. She was loved by everyone.'

Tani's wife and a flight surgeon on the ground broke the news in a video conference call with the 46-year-old astronaut. But phone calls and e-mails from space are as close as Tani can get to the loving embrace of his family.

Tani has been on the space station since late October and had been scheduled to return to Earth as early as Monday of this week aboard space shuttle Atlantis, but fuel gauge problems delayed the Dec. 6 launch until January.

A Russian Soyuz spacecraft is docked at the space station but must be reserved in case the two Americans and one Russian aboard need to evacuate the outpost in an emergency.

Tani's mother was struck and killed by a train in Lombard, Ill., on Wednesday. Police said she was stopped behind a school bus at a railroad crossing and decided to drive around the vehicle and the Associated Press NEWARK, Del. — With a 6month-old at the controls, researchers at the University of Delaware are encouraging under-age driving. Their ultimate goal is to help immobile, disabled children move and explore.

The researchers are using robotics in an odd contraption that's sort of a cross between a bumper car and a robot. In a recent test, Aniya Harris, a normally developing 6-month-old, scooted across the floor in delight by pushing a joystick on the little vehicle. She's too young to steer it.

"I think she thinks, 'Joystick means go.' I'll take that right now,' said Cole Galloway, a physical therapy professor who heads the infant motor behavior lab.

He and the other researchers believe the robot, dubbed UD1, holds the promise of opening up new horizons for disabled infants, especially those with orthopedic problems or muscular dystrophy. Wheeled robots could enable them to move and explore the world around them, which studies suggest is critical to their development.

Researchers in the United Kingdom have been working for years on powered mobility for toddlers. However, Galloway said, conventional wisdom has held that because of safety issues, children aren't considered ready for that until age 4 or 5; the earliest age doctors might recommend powered mobility is age 3.

That means too many children are at risk of losing out on the important early link between mobility and their overall development, he said.

"As soon as you're reaching, as soon as you're walking, your

Sunil Agrawal, a professor of mechanical engineering at the university, has been working for years on wheeled robots with infrared and sonar sensors that can avoid obstacles. to return to the air despite writers strike

NEW YORK — Politicians beware: Parody is returning. "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" and "The Colbert Report" will resume production on Jan. 7 without their striking writers, the Comedy Central network announced Thursday.

Both late-night shows were shuttered after the Hollywood writers strike began seven weeks ago. The comedy duo are the latest late-night hosts to announce their return to the air while the ongoing writers strike continues to devastate much television and film production. Jay Leno, Conan O'Brien and Jimmy Kimmel have all recently said that they will resume their programs on Jan. 2 with or without their writing staffs.

But "The Daily Show" and "The Colbert Report" rely far more on scripted material than those shows, which are more centered around interviews and musical guests.

In a joint statement, Stewart and Colbert said: "We would like to return to work with our writers. If we cannot, we would like to express our ambivalence, but without our writers we are unable to express something as nuanced as ambivalence."

Tom Tancredo drops out of the presidential race

DES MOINES, Iowa — Rep. Tom Tancredo dropped out of the race for the Republican presidential nomination Thursday and endorsed rival Mitt Romney.

Tancredo, a five-term congressman from Colorado, had based his campaign on fighting illegal immigration and has run television ads that link lax border control to terrorist attacks, rape and other crimes. He has consistently polled at the bottom of the nine-person Republican field.

He announced his withdrawal two weeks before Iowa begins the presidential nominating process with the precinct caucuses.

When Tancredo entered the race last spring, he said he would not have done so if he had thought any of the leading candidates was sufficiently strong on fighting illegal immigration. Breast cancer patients not told of reconstruction options

Associated Press

Most doctors don't talk about breast reconstruction with women before cancer surgery, depriving them of key information that can sway their decision about whether to have the whole breast or just a lump removed, new research suggests.

Only one-third of the roughly 1,200 women in the study said surgeons discussed cosmetic remedies with them in advance. When the topic did come up, women were four times more likely to choose the more drastic operation, mastectomy.

That could be because they liked the breast reconstruction options, which include implants that are not available for fixing odd-shaped defects left after lumpectomies. But mastectomies can be a dubious choice because breast-conserving lumpectomies usually suffice.

"Our point is not to say that one decision is better than another, but that women need to know all their options," said Dr. Amy Alder-to both. We shouldn't be paternalistic and tell patients, 'This is what you need.'

Dr. H. Kim Lyerly, a breast surgeon and director of Duke University's Comprehensive Cancer Center, agreed.

"This is an important issue," he said. "We clearly need to be better at it."

The study was published online Friday by the journal Cancer and will be in the Feb. 1 issue.

It is the second report in recent days to call attention to the oftenneglected cosmetic consequences of cancer surgery. Studies at last week's San Antonio Breast Cancer Symposium highlighted some of these, including the limited options for millions of women left with dimpled or cratered breasts after lumpectomies.

Doctors say the latest study, done in more than 100 hospitals in the Detroit and Los Angeles areas, may overstate the doctorpatient communication problem, so obsessed with treatment that this quality-of-life issue is one that we just haven't focused on," said Dr. Otis Brawley, chief medical officer of the American Cancer Society.

Breast cancer is the most common major cancer in American women. More than 178,000 new cases are expected this year in the U.S., and more than 1 million worldwide.

For cancer that has not widely spread, most women have a lumpectomy, but some need or prefer a mastectomy. Alderman studied whether knowing about breast reconstruction swayed which treatment women chose.

Researchers surveyed 1,178 women three months after breast cancer surgery, from 2001 to 2003. One-third said reconstruction never came up in discussions with general surgeons before their operations.

Guantanamo judge: Bin laden driver no POW

Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico – AU.S. military judge has denied prisonerof-war status to a Guantanamo detainee, putting the former driver for Osama bin laden in line to be one of the first to face a war crimes tribunal at the base.

The judge, Navy Capt. Keith Allred, rejected defense arguments that Salim Ahmed Hamdan was a POW and thus beyond the jurisdiction of the Guantanamo tribunals under international law.

Allred said there is credible evidence the Yemeni prisoner was bin Laden's personal driver from 1997-2001, occasionally served as a bodyguard for the al-Qaida leader, and sometimes picked up and delivered weapons.

'The government has carried its burden of showing ... that the accused is an alien unlawful enemy combatant," Allred wrote in a ruling released

Unique

The ruling is a victory for the Pentagon, which has struggled to prosecute suspected terrorists imprisoned at Guantanamo amid repeated legal challenges. The decision clears the way for a trial that could start by spring or early summer.

"This is a sign that we will move forward," said Air Force Brig. Gen.

Thomas Hartmann, the legal adviser to the military tribunal system.

To underscore that point, Hartmann noted the military prepared charges Thursday against Ahmed Mohammed Ahmed Haza al-Darbi, a Saudi prisoner at Guantanamo accused of helping to organize an al-Qaida plot to attack a ship in the Strait of Hormuz or off the coast of Yemen.

Bush says he will reserve judgment on destruction of CIA tapes

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Thursday he will reserve judgment on his administration's destruction of CIA interrogation tapes until several inquiries are finished. "Let's wait and see what the facts are," Bush said.

The destruction in late 2005 of the tapes, showing harsh treatment of two terrorism suspects, is being investigated by the Justice Department, the CIA itself and by several congressional panels.

Bush stuck to the White House line that he personally did not know about either the existence of the tapes or their destruction until he was briefed earlier this month by CIA Director Michael Hayden.

"Sounds pretty clear to me when I say I have — the first recollection is when Mike Hayden briefed me. That's pretty clear," Bush said.

Congressional Democrats condemned the destruction of the tapes and a federal judge ordered Justice Department lawyers to appear before him Friday to discuss whether destroying the tapes violated his 2005 order to preserve evidence in a lawsuit brought on behalf of prisoners at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Bush said that he believed the ongoing investigations by his administration, "coupled with oversight provided by the Congress, will end up enabling us all to find out what has happened."

"Until these inquiries are complete, I will be rendering no opinion from the podium," he added.

Turning to domestic issues in a year-end news conference, Bush complained Congress had stuffed a spending bill with hundreds of projects he called wasteful and instructed his budget director to explore options for dealing with them.

Bush said that a $555 billion measure passed by Congress Wednesday night before breaking for the holidays contains some 9,800 so-called "earmarks," or projects usually benefiting only one state or congressional district.

"So I am instructing Budget Director Jim Nussle to review options for dealing with the wasteful spending in the omnibus bill," Bush said. However, without line-item veto powers, Bush's ability to block spending on specific projects appears limited. Presidential authority to strike, or veto, individual projects and other spending items from appropriations bills was overturned by the Supreme Court in 1998.

The president did praise Congress for sending him "a spending bill to fund the day-to-day operations of the federal government. They passed this bill without raising taxes." But he complained that the measure was done so late in the year that it could slow the processing of tax returns to millions of Americans.

He said his administration would "work hard to minimize" such a delay. Bush did not get specific when asked about proposals to stimulate the economy but said "we'll consider all options."

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that the economy sprinted ahead at its fastest pace in four years during the summer, although it is expected to limp through the final three months of this year as the housing and credit crises weigh on individuals and businesses alike.

Study: Foster care better for kids' brains than orphanages

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Toddlers rescued from orphanages and placed in good foster homes score dramatically higher on IQ tests years later than children who were left behind, concludes a one-of-a-kind project in Romania that has profound implications for child welfare around the globe.

The boost meant the difference between borderline retardation and average intelligence for some youngsters.

Most importantly, children removed from orphanages before age 2 had the biggest improvement — key new evidence of a so-called sensitive period for brain development, according to the U.S. team that conducted the research.

"The longer they stay in the institution, the worse their IQ," said Dr. Charles Nelson III of Harvard Medical School, who led the study being published Friday in the journal Science.

"What we're really talking about is the importance of getting kids out of bad environments and put into good environments," Nelson said.

The research is already credited with influencing child-care reform in Romania, and UNICEF has begun using the data to push numerous countries that still depend on staterun orphanages to start shifting to foster care-like systems.

"The research provides concrete scientific evidence on the long-term impacts of the deprivation of quality care for children," UNICEF child protection specialist Aaron Greenberg said. "The interesting part about this is the one-on-one caring of a young child impacts ... cognitive and intellectual development."

That orphanages aren't optimal for child development comes as no surprise. Earlier studies have found that thousands of children adopted during the 1990s from squalid overseas orphanages in Eastern Europe, China and other nations continued to face serious developmental problems even after moving to affluent new homes with doting parents.

But some questions remain: Were those abandoned or orphaned children who spent more time in orphanages less healthy to begin with? Exactly how much damage does neglect and lack of stimulation in the early months of life do, and how long does that damage last?

Security screeners an unpopular face of government

AP-IPSOS POLL

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hand sanitizer makes it through security in one airport, then it's confiscated at another. Screening lines back up because only two of six lanes are open. And then there's the occasional all-too-intimate patdown.

Those complaints and other frustrations make the nation's airport security agency about as popular as the IRS.

Indeed, only the Federal Emergency Management Agency, still suffering from its mishandling of Hurricane Katrina, ranks below the Transportation Security Administration among the least-liked federal agencies, according to a new Associated Press-Ipsos poll.

TSA tied with the perennially unpopular tax collectors in a favorablity ranking of a dozen executive branch agencies.

"I am so frustrated with TSA that I am ready to stop flying," one traveler wrote in a Sept. 7 complaint filed with the agency. "I'm sure this doesn't matter to you because my tax dollars are already paying you."

The AP poll, conducted Monday through Wednesday, found that the

The inconvenience of security was the top complaint of air travelers, mentioned by 31 percent of those who had taken at least one trip in the past year. That figure rose to 40 percent for those who have taken five to 10 trips.

TSA's parent agency, the Department of Homeland Security, also ranked at the bottom of an index of consumer satisfaction released this week, supplanting the IRS as the prime subject of grumbling in that survey. The authoritative American Customer Satisfaction Index questioned 10,000 people about their experiences with the federal government. TSA officials say they understand the frustration and are working to minimize hassles. They say while it can be annoying, airport

A review of complaints the traveling public lodged with TSA in September helps explain the low standing. While passengers generally understand TSA's mission, they could do without certain parts of the pre-boarding experience.

Take, for example, a mother and daughter traveling out of the Dallas/Fort Worth airport on Sept. 4. In an e-mailed complaint to TSA, the mother said the TSA screener was rude and inconsiderate. While she was in secondary screening, the mother was made to face away from her daughter. "Someone could have taken my daughter," the woman wrote. "I understand you have to have security, but your people don't need to be rude!!!"

On Sept. 3, a man leaving Orlando, Fla., filed a lengthy complaint because he said a screener touched him "like no man ever has — not even my doctor." "This type of bodily inspection, privately or publicly, is undignified," he wrote. "Have terrorists succeeded in making us that scared of each other?"

Police, protesters scuffle in New Orleans as council OKs housing demolition

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Despite protests that at times erupted in violence, the City Council voted unanimously Thursday in favor of demolishing about 4,500 public housing units as the city rebuilds from Hurricane Katrina.

The vote to permit the federal government to tear down four public housing developments — a critical moment in a protracted fight between the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and residents, activists and preservationists — followed hours of debate and clashes in the street outside.

Police used chemical spray and stun guns as dozens of protesters tried to force their way into the packed City Council chamber. One woman was sprayed and dragged from the gates. Emergency workers took her away on a stretcher.

Another woman said she was stunned by officers, and still had what appeared to be a Taser wire hanging from her shirt.

"I was just standing, trying to get into my City Council meeting," said the woman, Kim Ellis, who was taken away in an ambulance. "Is this what democracy looks and dragged ency workers like?" Bill Quigley, a Loyola University law professor who opposes demolition, said as he held a strand of Taser wire he said had been shot into another of the protesters.

Quigley said he believed the crackdown violated public meetings laws.

Protesters said they pushed against the iron gates that kept them out of the building because the Housing Authority of New Orleans had disproportionately allowed supporters of the demolition to pack the chambers.

I had come down the chimney with presents to give, and to see just who in this home did live. I looked all about, a strange sight I did see, no tinsel, no presents, not even a tree. No stocking by mantle, just boots filled with sand, on the wall hung pictures of far distant lands. With medals and badges, awards of all kinds, a sober thought came through my mind. For this house was different, it was dark and dreary, I found the home of a soldier, once I could see clearly. The soldier lay sleeping, silent, alone, curled up on the floor in this one-bedroom home. The face was so gentle, the room in such disorder, not how I pictured a United States soldier. Was this the hero of whom I'd just read? Curled up on a poncho, the floor for a bed? I realized the families that I saw this night, owed their lives to these soldiers who were willing to fight. Soon round the world, the children would play. And grownups would celebrate a bright Christmas Day. They all enjoyed freedom each month of the year, because of the soldiers, like the one lying here. I couldn't help wonder how many lay alone. On a cold Christmas Eve in a land far from home. The very thought brought a tear to my eye, I dropped to my knees and started to cry. The soldier awakened and I heard a rough voice, "Santa don't cry, this life is my choice. I fight for freedom. I don't ask for more. My life belongs to God, my Country, my Corps." The soldier rolled over and drifted to sleep, I couldn't control it, I continued to weep. I kept watch for hours, so silent and still, and we both shivered from the cold night's chill. I didn't want to leave on that cold, dark night. This guardian of honor so willing to fight. Then the soldier rolled over, with a voice soft and pure, whispered "Carry on Santa, it's Christmas Day, all is Secure."

One look at my watch and I know he was right. "Merry Christmas My Friend, And to ALL A Good Night."

'Vishing' scams use phone to trick victims

McClatchy-Tribune

MILWAUKEE — Rick Larson, the chief operating officer of West Bend Savings Bank, was home watching television when the phone rang. A computerized voice on the line claimed to be from — of all places — West Bend Savings Bank. The voice urged him to call a toll-free number and verify his debit card information, including his secret personal identification number, or risk losing use of the card.

The irony of imposters posing as a local bank and then inadvertently calling one of the top executives of that bank might have been humorous except for the fact that Larson knew the trouble such schemes can cause.

"My wife goes, 'Who was it?' I said, 'Well, it said it was the bank.' She said, 'What did they want?' I said, 'Basically, they want our money. I'm going to call the IT guys right now because the scammers are back,' " Larson said.

Larson estimated that thousands of residents of West Bend, Wis., received calls this week and last week from crooks posing as the bank — the latest in a growing trend by scam artists to combine use of Internet technology and the telephone to try to trick people into turning over private data.

The technique is known as "vishing." It's similar to Internet "phishing" attacks in which thieves send out authentic-looking e-mails telling people there's been a problem with a financial account and that they should submit confidential information online to help resolve it.

The "v" in vishing stands for the word "voice." With vishing, consumers are told either by an automated phone message system or via e-mail to call a toll-free number and punch in their account information. That data then is used by scammers to tap bank accounts or make online purchases. The computersavvy thieves mask their identities and are very difficult to catch.

Vishing has been around for a couple of years, but there has been much more of it lately, said Paul Henry, a vice president with Secure Computing Corp. in San Jose, Calif.

"Many, many times people fall for it," Henry said.

On Thanksgiving weekend, a vishing campaign by thieves in Spain placed about 40,000 calls in Manitowoc County, Wis., and convinced some customers of Manitowoc-based Bank First National to give up private data that allowed their accounts to be cleaned out.

Larson said that as of Wednesday, a little more than $1,000 had been lost by customers to the latest attack money that will be reimbursed by the bank. Larson said his bank was hit by a similar scam last spring, and the good news is that people in the local area seem to be more suspicious. The bank received many inquiries this time asking whether the calls were legitimate, he said.

"I think what happened up in Manitowoc over Thanksgiving has certainly heightened people's awareness," Larson said.

Being aware of such fraud and checking out suspicious calls and emails is crucial to fighting the problem, said Ran Hoth, chief executive of the Better Business Bureau of Wisconsin, who praised West Bend Savings Bank for talking publicly about the issue. People always should check with the financial institution whose name is being used, he said.

"A bank never asks you for this information on the phone or via email," Hoth said. "That's just the basic rule.'

Rite Aid reports wider 3Q loss, expects bigger losses in 2008

Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Rite Aid Corp. shares fell to a 52-week low Thursday on sharply wider thirdquarter losses, with fewer customers making holiday purchases or buying the cold and flu remedies that typically boost sales this time of year.

The nation's third-largest drugstore chain lowered its 2008 profit outnoon, shares had recovered somewhat, but were still trading down $1.08, more than 26 percent, at $3.02.

Rite Aid's chairman, president and chief executive, Mary Sammons, said she was disappointed with the results, but that she was pleased with progress toward integrating more than 1,850 Brooks and Eckerd stores acquired in June.

Bottled water's impact on environment

Americans consumed 8.3B gallons last year

McClatchy-Tribune

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Drinking a bottle of water might seem innocent enough, but each bottle has a downside many people overlook a contribution to global warming.

That's because bottles create carbon dioxide, the most common greenhouse gas, when they are made, trucked to a store and disposed of in a landfill or recycled. Their impact can quickly add up.

"Bottled water is an energyintensive luxury for Americans," said Peter Gleick, president of the Pacific Institute, an environmental think tank in Oakland, Calif. "It's certainly much less necessary than the other things we use energy for."

Last year, Americans consumed 8.3 billion gallons of bottled water, or the equivalent of 27.6 gallons a person, according to the Beverage Mar-market research firm. Just making the bottles to hold all the water produced more than 2.5 million tons of CO, the Pacific Institute calculates.

According to an analysis by the San Jose Mercury News, the energy required to manufacture a single plastic liter bottle, fill it with water from a spring in the Sierra Nevada, truck it to San Jose and then bury it in a landfill creates 0.23 pounds of CO. That's about as much as an average car emits driving a quarter of a mile

A liter bottle shipped from France and taken by rail across the United States creates more than twice as much CO.

For the $11 billion bottled water industry, global warming has brought unwanted attention. Some cities are moving to restrict bottled water, and the industry is countering with efforts to become more environmentally friendly.

San Francisco made a widely publicized decision earlier this year keting Corp., a New York-based to ban bottled water in city offices, and communities such as Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and Ann Arbor, Mich., have taken steps to cut its use.

"Bottled water is a kind of cause du jour," said Stephen Kay, spokesman for the International Bottled Water Association, an Alexandria, Va., trade association. "It is the poster child."

But bottled water is just one of thousands of bottled and canned food and beverage products that are produced and transported to supermarkets and convenience stores. Many of those other products have a greater climate impact than bottled water because they require more processing or farming.

With water, "you're choosing a bottle with the least environmental footprint," said Jane Lazgin, a spokeswoman at Nestle Waters North America, the nation's largest bottled water supplier.

Some bottled water companies have taken steps to turn their products green.

Fiji Water, which ships water from the South Pacific Island of Fiji, promised last month to offset the carbon dioxide its products generate by becoming carbon "negative." The company says starting in January it will buy carbon offsets for 120 percent of the emissions it creates. Carbon offsets allow people to mitigate their environmental impact by paying to plant trees or support renewable energy.

"This was the right time for this message," said Thomas Mooney, Fiji Water's senior vice president of sustainable growth.

Nestle also has made efforts to reduce its environmental impact. The company introduced a thinner half-liter bottle this year that uses 15 percent less plastic. It claims it will save 65 million pounds of plastic in 2008.

The company's practice of making 98 percent of its bottles at its water plants also saves 6.6 million gallons of fuel a year, added Kevin Mathews, Nestle's director of health and environmental affairs.

"CHARLIE WILSON'S WAR" - 3 stars. A crisp, biting satire that confidently mixes sex and politics. Based on the true story of a congressman (Tom Hanks), a Houston socialite (Julia Roberts) and a CIA operative (Philip Seymour Hoffman) who conspired to arm Afghanistan's mujahedeen against Soviet invaders in the early 1980s. 1 hr. 37 min. R (strong language, nudity/sexual content and some drug use).

"P.S. I LOVE YOU" - 1 1/2 stars. "P.S. I Love You" is as treacly as the title would suggest. This totally contrived pile of uberschmaltz finds Hillary Swank's Holly Kennedy widowed at 29 when her husband dies of a brain tumor. But somehow in his waning state, Gerry (Gerard Butler) was lucid enough to construct for her an elaborate spiritual scavenger hunt, arranging to have letters sent to her for a year after his death, each signed — you guessed it — "P.S. I Love You." 2 hrs. 6 min. PG-13 (sexual references and brief nudity).

"SWEENEY TODD: THE DEMON BARBER OF FLEET STREET" — 3 stars. The quintessential Tim Burton movie, even though it springs from somebody else's celebrated mind. Everything about Stephen Sondheim's revered musical, which provided the inspiration for the film, seems tailor-made for the director's sensibilities. Truly, what other filmmaker could tell the story of a vengeful barber (Johnny Depp) who slits his customers' throats and the lovesick baker (Helena Bonham Carter) who grinds up the dead

"Walk Hard," a take off on the music biopic, hits all the familiar conventions we've seen in overly earnest movies like "Ray" and "Walk the Line." The marginally talented Dewey Cox (John C. "FRED CLAUS" — 2 stars. Sporadically funny tale of sibling rivalry with a few good jokes about cheery Santa (Paul Giamatti) and his grumpy elder brother (Vince Vaughn). 1 hr. 56 min. PG (mild profanity, rude humor).

"THE GOLDEN COMPASS" — 3 stars. A smartly realized adaptation of Philip Pullman's trilogy about a feisty girl with special powers (and a special compass), coping with evildoers, flying witches and talking bears in a 19th century steampunk parallel universe. Daniel Craig, Sam Elliott and Nicole Kidman. 1 hr. 58 min. PG-13 (violence, children in jeopardy, adult themes). "I AM LEGEND" — 2 stars. Will Smith is the last man in Manhattan in this viral sci-fi thriller. Smith's a genuine star, and there are long stretches where his military scientist dude prowls the streets, a creepy hush in the air, commanding our attention. 1 hr. 40 min. PG-13 (violence, profanity,

The Coen Brothers' taut, terrific adaptation of the Cormac McCarthy novel about a psycho killer, a Vietnam vet and a Lone Star sheriff, and the bag of money that brings them together on the stark borderlands of 1980 West Texas. With Tommy Lee Jones, Josh Brolin and Javier Bardem. 2 hrs. 2 R min. (violence, profanity, adult themes).

Marion police have suspects in Baxter woman's murder

The Marion County Sheriff's Department has some suspects in the weekend murder of a Baxter woman, but police are not yet naming names.

Sheriff Junior Slaughter said Thursday that the investigation continues into the shooting death of Dorothy Hamrick, 47. Slaughter said there are some suspects, but he wouldn't identify any of them.

Hamrick was shot in the back sometime between Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, when police found her body at her Minsters Run home.

Hamrick worked as a licensed practical nurse at Fairmont General Hospital, hospital staff confirmed

Anyone who has information regarding Hamrick's murder is asked to contact the sheriff's department at 367-5300. Slaughter said the department can keep callers' identities confidential if they'd like.

Starcher confirms: Won't seek re-election in 2008

State Supreme Court Justice Larry Starcher will not seek a second, 12-year term next year. The court announced Starcher's decision Thursday.

The announcement confirmed a decision Starcher disclosed to The Dominion Post in July 2003. At that time, he said, "I am 60 years old, and at the end of my term [2008] I will be 65. I think it's safe to say I don't want to add 12 years onto the 65 to keep working.

Starcher said this week he has been in the state's judiciary for 32 vears and wants potential candidates to know his 2008 plans.

The Democrat was elected to West Virginia's highest court in 1996. He served as chief justice in 1999 and 2003.

Starcher had previously been a circuit judge in Monongalia

Robins faces 2-10 years for assault

BY BRANDY BRUBAKER The Dominion Post

An Ohio native pleaded guilty to malicious assault Thursday for pistol whipping a woman at a Morgantown restaurant in 2005.

Kirklond Lamonte Robins, who spent his 35th birthday in court Thursday, faces two to 10 years in prison.

He will be sentenced Thursday, after Monongalia County Circuit Court Judge Robert Stone reviews According to criminal complaints, on Feb. 27, 2005, Robins attacked a woman at Eat 'n Park with a handgun, aimed the gun at her and hit her in the head several times with it. He then knocked her to the ground and began kicking her while waving the gun in the air, police said.

Robins also was accused of attacking a male who tried to intervene.

As part of a plea agreement, the state said it would not pursue any additional charges against Robins in connection with the Eat 'n Park incident

The state also agreed not to oppose a defense request to run Robins' sentence in Monongalia County concurrently with a federal drug sentence handed down earlier this month. Robins pleaded guilty to distributing crack cocaine in Marion County this summer and got nine years in a federal penitentiary.

Man admits pistol-whipping

Stone has the final say on whether to run the sentences at the same time or one after the other.

Robins told Stone he was angry, drunk and on drugs when he assaulted the woman at Eat 'n Park.

He said he ran into the woman and a friend, whom Robins knew from Fairmont, at a bar earlier in the night. The woman told her friend not to talk to Robins and tried to pull her away.

Robins and the woman got into an argument about why she was pulling her friend away, he said.

Some of the woman's male friends came over and tried to beat up Robins to rob him, he said. The police came and instead took Robins to jail, he said. They let him go after about a half hour.

Robins said he was angry so he went looking for the men, but found the woman at Eat 'n Park instead.

She told him to get away from her because he had blood on him and they started arguing again, he said. "I just kind of lost it," Robins said. "I hit her and I kicked her a few times. Robins said there's no excuse for what he did, but said he was under the influence of drugs and alcohol.

"I wasn't in my right state of mind," he said. "I'm sorry for what happened. I really wanted to scare them, so I hit her and knocked her to the ground and I kicked her a couple times."

Stone asked Robins if the woman was injured in the assault.

"I didn't stay around, but I bet she got hurt," Robins said. "I really didn't want to hurt her. I just wanted to scare her."

Prosecuting Attorney Marcia Ashdown said the woman wasn't seriously injured, but is emotionally scarred by what happened.

The woman filed a victim impact statement but did not appear in court Thursday.

Robins remains at North Central Regional Jail. He awaits a transfer to a federal penitentiary pending the conclusion of the Monongalia County case

MEETING

Today MONONGALIA COUNTY SOLID WASTE AUTHORITY, 8:30 a.m., 140 Walnut St. office (under PRT).

Hospice Care decided to take it a step further. This Christmas, anyone who makes a donation in Efaw's memory will have his or her name placed on an ornament, which will be hung on the tree in the airport lobby. Donations for the tree will be taken through February; $300 has been donated so far.

Thursday, Hospice Care employees and Efaw's family hung the glass heart ornaments and sparkling lights on the tree. Nearly every branch on the small tree is adorned with a heart. Volunteer Services Coordinator Tracey Mascola said they'll probably have to get another tree on which to hang ornaments.

The family "wanted something very small and very simple, no ceremony. They just wanted people to remember," Mascola said.

All donations go to buy things such as medication, medical equipment and supplies for hospice patients in the Monongalia County area.

Daniel Efaw, Diane's son, said the tree is special for the family.

"It really means a lot to me. This was her dream to be a flight nurse, so it stands to reason the tree would be here rather than anywhere else," he said.

He said the past year has been difficult on him and his family. "We lost her the day after Christmas. I am thankful I got to spend Christmas with her last year.'

Sperringer said the number of reported burglaries typically increases around the holidays.

'Some months are higher than others," he said. "Around this time of year, [WVU] students leave for break and also there are Christmas presents around the house. A lot of the burglaries are done during the daytime.

Sperringer urges residents to keep their doors and windows locked, and take other precautions.

"If you see anyone in your neighborhood acting suspicious - looking in windows, walking around a house or knocking on doors - call the police," he said. "We're more than happy to respond and check it out. It could be someone getting ready to steal something."

Morgantown Police also offers a house watch program. Residents can call and sign up and officers will randomly perform extra patrols at the participant's home and neighborhood.

University creates online interactive 'BowlSpace'

Helps fans tap into spirit of Fiesta Bowl

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Mountaineers fans can support this year's Big East Championship team and get connected to the WVU experience before the Jan. 2 Tostitos Fiesta Bowl game, in Glendale, Ariz.

The university has created WVU BowlSpace, an online, interactive community at http://bowlgame. wvu.edu/.

The site combines blogs, message boards, videos, MSN programming and a one-stop source for the latest bowl information.

"WVU fans from around the world are invited to support our team by becoming part of this online community to show their Mountaineer pride," WVU President Michael Garrison said.

WVU BowlSpace is an interactive site for WVU fans to talk about why they are proud to be Mountaineers, show their support by sending the team a message, watch videos and more

Whether fans are going to the Fiesta Bowl or watching from home, they can gather at BowlSpace to get updated bowl information, video highlights from this season and past bowl trips, daily reports in Phoenix from students and alumni, and access to a special WVU Facebook group, "Proud to Be a Mountaineer," which allows fans to share photos and messages.

They also check out what student-athletes (including Alex Ruoff, men's basketball; Tito Gonzales, football; and Ashley Banks, women's soccer) have to say about life experiences off the playing field, share alumni stories about coming "home" to WVU and learn the latest about the WVU-Oklahoma matchup.

"We wanted to create a place where WVU's community of fans could go to build a personal connection with the team and the University," said Chris Martin, vice president for University Advancement and Marketing.

"Online social networking is a powerful tool in building conversation and dialogue with students, alumni, employees, friends, fans, donors and the entire Mountaineer nation.

"It has never been more important to support our team — the fine student-athletes who have worked so hard this year and achieved such success. Every fan, even those who can't travel to the game, can share support and express pride through WVU BowlSpace."

Updates on Alumni Association travel packages, fan activities and bowl tickets have been added to the site, along with student, alumni and band reports from bloggers Kathryn Gregory, a senior newseditorial major from Somers, N.Y.; Steve Douglas, president and chief executive officer of the WVU Alumni Association; and Chris Southard, the Web site manager and official photographer of "The Pride of West Virginia" Mountaineer Marching Band a few blog entries, is excited about sharing her bowl trip from a student's point of view.

Gregory, who has already logged

"I think it's important, especially for students who can't attend, to experience the game and fan activities from a student perspective," she said. "I'll be blogging at least twice a day from Arizona.³

One of those fan activities is Tostitos Fiesta Bowl's "World's Biggest Football Party" Jan. 2, at the Glendale Youth Sports Complex, at University of Phoenix Stadium. The event includes a pep rally featuring "The Pride of West Virginia," WVU cheerleaders and the Mountaineer mascot.

GUEST EDITORIAL 'The end of the beginning'

It's irresponsible for the U.S. to dodge the fight on global warming

Knowing the war's outcome lay in doubt, fearing his countrymen might make too much of an early victory, Winston Churchill offered his cautionary take on the battle of El Alamein: This "is not the end. It is not even the beginning of the end. But it is, perhaps, the end of the beginning.'

Anyone giddy about the outcome of the U.N.-led climate talks in Bali last week would do well to adopt a similar sensibility.

Yes, 190 countries met to discuss the alarming rise in greenhouse gases. And, despite their differences, they stitched together an agreement that many are calling a victory in the fight against global warming. But they didn't agree to a timetable for reducing carbon emissions that cause global warming. And they didn't agree to targets for reducing carbon emissions.

What they agreed to do was talk some more, and try to make "deep cuts" in global emissions.

Perhaps that marks the end of the beginning of an effort to draft a successor to the Kyoto protocol, which 37 nations signed, obligating them to modest greenhouse-gas emissions cuts by 2012. But, thanks to obstructionist countries including the United States, China, Canada, Japan and India, the real fighting — and any real hope for victory in the war against global warming - lies far ahead.

Conferees didn't agree to do more, like bringing emissions down 40 percent below 1990 levels by 2020 and by 50 percent by 2050, as the European Union suggested, because the United States wouldn't allow it. It led Japan and Canada in refusing a draft document requiring developed nations to meet important benchmarks.

Instead, the Bush administration stubbornly continues to advocate voluntary actions to stem global warming - an approach sure to turn down the planet's thermostat as much as an ice chip would a sauna's.

And the United States, the world's leading emitter of carbon, insists it and other industrialized nations shouldn't have to curb their reliance on fossil fuels unless certain developing states face similarly harsh restrictions. Why, after all, should China and India, whose economies continue to mushroom, escape similar mandates?

Point taken — but to a point. Those countries can't be expected to assume their responsibilities unless the United States, which has polluted the air to a far greater degree and for a lot longer than either country, shows responsibility and leadership. It's got to commit to renewable energy, conservation and mandatory emissions cuts.

It's immature posturing, saying the United States won't stick out its neck unless the other guy does. That won't fly. It wouldn't think of saying it'll hold off on championing human rights until China embraces them. The United States shouldn't wait on China, or any other country, before taking the lead on another moral imperative — ending global warming.

COMMENTARY ON RODRIGUEZ

I write this as a loyal West Virginian and WVU alumnus. Rich Rodriguez' departure is notable for the way in which he chose to leave: without the decency to postpone the decision or his exit until he had completed his last service to his team. The only hurt I feel is for his players.

Many people seem upset about the lack of loyalty to the university or the state that Rodriguez has shown. Why should we expect loyalty? College football is a big, ugly, greedy business, and loyalty seems to have been a notion long since trampled by the lure of million-dol lar coaching contracts and rich incentives. We all have played into this charade by condoning the overpaid salaries of big-time sports coaches. Rodriguez made his decision to leave based upon the financial and professional and personal gains of joining the University of Michigan. The next football coach WVU hires will be making decisions based upon those same factors, and we'll still be condoning inflated salaries and generous perks in order to attract and keep that person. When does the vicious circle end?

The bottom line is that universities have to keep upping the ante in order to attract and retain "big sport" coaches, sometimes at the expense of the financial wellbeing of the smaller sports programs at the same university. This expenditure also comes at the expense of the core mission of a university: to educate its citizens. What WVU department is as richly endowed as the football program? Why are the salaries of WVU faculty and staff perenially low compared to the national average, while the football coach is paid more money in a year than most West Virginians will ever see in their lifetime? Why does the School of Medicine (which so justly deserves all the financial support it can get from the state and from donors and alumni because it does such an outstanding job of meeting the medical needs of West Virginians) go wanting while big-name donors endow athletic edifices? Does the money WVU expends on its football program result in a significant influx of money to all aspects of the university, or does it just continue to enrich one program?

I don't know, but I sure hope that Mountaineers will ask themselves this question as they consider the costs of having WVU continue to operate in the monster business of college football coaching. I hope President Garrison will consider these issues carefully as he leads WVU in its next hiring foray. Amrit Singh, M.D.

South Barrington, III.

I have to say that I was not surprised that the liar is going to Michigan. I said this two days after [former coach Lloyd] Carr said he was leaving. Everybody says that they were surprised by this and that he has no integrity. You could see this because every year he wanted more money for himself. He would say that it was not the money but for the program to go to the next level, but he never said, hey, keep me at this pay and put it to the program.

I laughed last year when he gram for his true dream of NFL coaching, but after how well [Bobby] Petrino did in Atlanta he knew that no Big East coach was going to get a great shot at this.

He will have as much luck going to a national championship at Michigan as he did here. I say this because he will choke on important games in the season like he did here. The problem is, his focus is on himself and only himself. The two games that he lost here had national championship implications. He had money signs in his eyes and that is why he forgot about [Owen] Schmitt and [Steve] Slaton in the Pitt game.

He says that he is all about family and that his players are family, but when he was leaving, it was more important to call the new recruits first than to tell his family (players). Since he could not go through the right channels and get permission to talk to Michigan, and then two days later, make up his mind, Michigan should send a moving truck and we could load it up for him so he does not have to come back.

Please, WVU, do not let this selfish no-class person coach the Fiesta game. It would just upset too many people. See you, Rodriguez, please let the door hit you where the good Lord split you. Dan Rogers

Morgantown

Dear WVU fans and West Virginia residents, the vacancy left by the former WVU head football coach was made so by a very enough interest that those who make the decisions for the head coach's job became so scared he might leave, they almost doubled his salary! It's a sad state of affairs when a state-paid football coach makes more money than West Virginia's governor!

When I began going to the WVU football games, Jim Carlen was coach. Through all the coaches after Carlen, I was disappointed when a head coach left to take another position, but I am very irritated about this coach's decision to leave our team and announce it before a BCS bowl game. (Great timing, former coach!) Many fans and West Virginia residents have given much time, effort and literally millions of dollars to satisfy this individual, and he has the gall to up and leave a great football program. I am sure freshmen, such as Noel Devine, feel betrayed by this selfish decision.

Also, it is sad that college football is all about money, such as the NFL. It used to be fun to go to the old Mountaineer Field for $1 (that's right, $1) and watch a game. Now it's all about ratings, coaches' salaries and high-ended egos. Who suffers the most? The students and the fans! We are asked to pay more for tickets, because coaches, like WVU's former one, want more and more. Finally, all of you adults, such as 'Cat Man," should stop crying on the local radio, because it appears to the general public that football is so important! Get over it! They were looking for a coach when they hired this last coach, and they will hire another one as soon as this guy leaves Morgantown! Bob Anderson Leesburg, Va.

said his famous statement: I want to stay here for my career as long as "WVU will have me," meaning as long as they give me what I want. Coach Rod knew that he had to go to another prosemish, sen-centered individual!

If you remember last year amidst a rumor, it was revealed that this former coach might be interested in the Alabama coaching position. This rumor caused

Would you rather live in Pottersville or Greenspan City?

Nowadays, it's impossible to watch the 1946 holiday movie "It's a Wonderful Life" and not feel a twinge of respect for Henry F. Potter, the villainous banker played by Lionel Barrymore. Potter was not above drawing the last drop of blood, but at least borrowers knew whom to hate. And if they were late paying, they knew where to crawl.

That's not necessarily the case today. Mortgage companies often ship the loans to Wall Street, which repackages them into securities sold around the globe.

So if you're a borrower in trouble, and your loan is diced up into some mortgage-backed security, you'd be hard-pressed to find a lender's ear. How's your Chinese?

In olden days, the bank that made mortgages kept them. The borrower's problem became the bank's problem, so it was in the interests of both to keep the loan afloat.

The movie shows a run on the Bailey Building & Loan, during which Jimmy Stewart's George Bailey says this to a panicked depositor: "Hey, Ed, do you remember last year when things weren't going so well and you couldn't make your payments? Well, you didn't lose your house, did you?'

Because old-fashioned bankers were stuck with the loans they made, they cared deeply about who got them. Bailey is nicer and more generous than the nasty Potter, but there's not a lot of difference between their lending standards.

Remember the scene where Potter chews out Bailey for giving a mortgage to Ernie the cab driver? He accuses Bailey of lending money to any pal he shoots pool with.

Bailey responds, "I can personally vouch for his character," but also notes that Potter had the papers documenting Ernie's salary and life insurance benefits. That established his friend as creditworthy.

In other words, Ernie did not have a "no-doc" loan, a modern invention that doesn't require borrowers to provide proof of their financials. Because applicants could put any income number they wanted on the forms, these mortgages soon became known as "liar loans." Last year, 40 percent of new home loans were made to people with fragile credit. And more than 37 percent of the subprime mortgages were of the notorious "no-doc" variety. That federal regulators didn't step in to stop the madness is astounding.

The name of the game for the mortgage originators — the guys who put the dancing figures on their Web sites — is collecting big upfront fees from borrowers and selling the loans to the investment houses who palm them off on unwitting investors

To deter a depressed Bailey from killing himself, the angel Clarence shows the hero what the world would have been like had he never been born. In that vision, Bedford Falls turns into Pottersville, an evil place full of bad people and good jazz.

Fewer residents owned a home in Pottersville, but that nightmare town had some things over today's Greenspan City. Pottersville didn't have block after block of boarded-up houses lost to foreclosure, as is currently seen in many American communities.

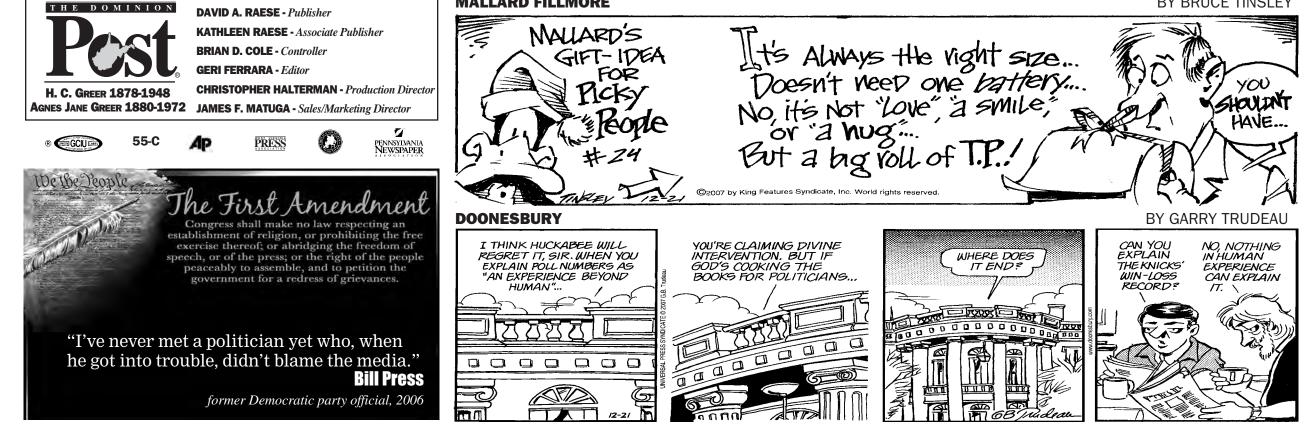

Former Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan had cheered on the housing bubble that raised home prices to ridiculous levels. And despite the warnings, he ignored the recklessness and downright cons that would inevitably push the mortgage market into crisis.

The weak borrowers who couldn't get a mortgage from the sourpuss Potter — and probably not Bailey, either — were better off than the moderns lured by the happy dancing figures. The latter were sucked into paying inflated house prices and fleeced by stiff fees and punishing interest rates. Then they lost their homes

Which is less attractive, Pottersville or Greenspan City? It's a real tossup.

A supermarket Santa keeps girl's hope alive

DEAR ABBY: While my daughter and I were at the supermarket, we ran into Santa at the deli! You can't imagine my daughter's surprise not to mention my own.

There he was, with his perfect bowling ball head and full white beard. He had a jolly big belly, rosy cheeks, even small square wireframed glasses. He wasn't dressed in his traditional holiday outfit; he was casually dressed.

My daughter, who is 9, had started having serious doubts about Santa last year, but she sure does believe now. She ran up to him and said, "I knew it! I knew you were real! Where's your sleigh? Where's your reindeer?"

The man winked at me, looked down at my daughter and said, "Swothcort they're at the North many wonderful things in my childhood.

Like many parents, I want my kids to have the childhood I didn't have. I studied hard, got a good education, met a wonderful man and married. We have two beautiful daughters, 9 and 11. We're not rich, but we're comfortable and don't want for much. Every Christmas, my children and I go to the local mall and visit the Orphan Tree. Each of them chooses an orphan and buys him or her whatever is on his/her list. I explained when they were younger that sometimes even Santa needs a helping hand. To you and your readers: Whether you choose to believe or not — I wish you happy holidays. - STILL A BELIEVER IN OHIO DEAR STILL A BELIEVER: It is a wise parent who not only enjoys the holiday season, but also uses it as a teachable moment to show children the true spirit of giving to others. Happy holidays to you, too - and to my readers as well.

Manchin, Nehlen give some advice

THE NATTILY ATTIRED VISITOR arrived near the end of West Virginia University's football practice Thursday afternoon

Bill Stewart, the Mountaineers' interim head coach, was only too happy to turn the players over to a man he calls "our No. 1 fan from the state capitol."

Yes, Gov. Joe Manchin III was in the house and eager to speak to the players after one of the most traumatic weeks in the history of Mountaineers football.

Manchin understood that the players' football world had been turned upside down after Rich Rodriguez's stunning announcement in a team meeting Sunday that he was leaving to take over at Michigan.

Suddenly, the players' head coach and leader was gone, and rumors of who would succeed him were flying all over the place at warp speed.

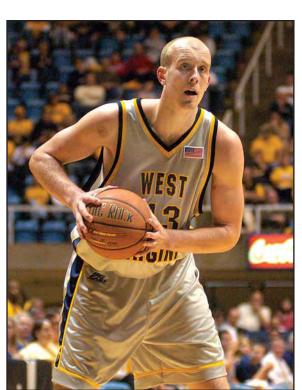

So, as the players knelt before Manchin on Thursday, he delivered a stirring speech in which he reminded them they are not alone during this most unsettling period in their young lives.

The state, Manchin proclaimed, is behind them as they prepare to face Oklahoma in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 2.

"It was very, very good," Stewart said of Manchin's talk. "He hit them right in the heart, where he was supposed to hit them. He talked about staying the course of steel in the midst of fire.

"Joe Manchin had us ready to go. I just need him to talk to the team the night of [Jan.] 2nd instead of [Dec.] 20th. Our players responded quite well.

"It was good to see our governor

Senior center knows where he stands on team

BY JUSTIN JACKSON

The Dominion Post As he has done since his early coaching days at Walsh College, Bob Huggins has developed a special relationship with his West Virginia University players. Including senior center Jamie Smalligan, who has had a rough go at it in recent games.

Prior to the Mountaineers' 82-68 victory last Saturday over the University of Maryland Baltimore County, Smalligan played a total of five minutes in games against Auburn and Duquesne.

He was pulled after two minutes against Auburn when Huggins thought a smaller lineup would be more effective, and then was ejected for a flagrant foul on Duquesne's Bill Clark just three minutes into the next game.

" The first exhibition game, Jamie had as many rebounds as a dead man.

"I've known it my whole life that the bigger guy is always going to get caught and so is the second guy," Smalligan said in a media conference following the UMBC game.

In the case of the Duquesne ejection, Smalligan was both.

'The ref has a real hard job out there. He missed the first one. In my opinion, he missed two, because as soon as [Bill Clark] checked in, he hit me in the face. I wasn't chasing after him, he just sort of got in my way.'

Smalligan lasted the entire game against UMBC, playing 12 minutes and knocking down a 3-pointer from the corner to start off the second half.

"I told Jamie before the game that we were going to try and double his production," Huggins said jokingly. "I told him we were going to get eight minutes out of him."

That, in a quote, explains the relationship Huggins has created with Smalligan. He works Smalligan hard in practice and wants him to play with emotion during the games, but can also find a way to joke around with the big 7-footer.

Can anyone ever forget Huggins' comment about Smalligan after the Mountaineers' exhibition game against Mountain State University?

"The first exhibition game, Jamie had as many rebounds as a dead man," Huggins said.

At the same time, when Smalligan

Players rally behind interim head coach

BY DREW RUBENSTEIN The Dominion Post

The West Virginia University football players won't criticize Rich Rodriguez for his decision to leave for Michigan during Fiesta Bowl preparations.

It's just not their style. Instead, terms like "he has to do what's best for his family" and "you can't worry about things you can't control," were tossed around quite a bit Thursday afternoon around Milan Puskar football complex.

But that doesn't mean the WVU players' minds haven't been racing the past couple days,

Rod cleans house at Michigan

Fires all assistants on Carr's coaching staff

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Rich Rodriguez fired Michigan's assistant coaches Thursday, his second day as an employee of the school.

Rodriguez met with the coaches one by one at Schembechler Hall, as retiring coach Lloyd Carr packed up his belongings in boxes, clearing space for his successor.

Rodriguez

"I can understand that he wants to bring in the people that have been with him for years,' defensive coordinator Ron English told The Associated Press after having dinner with the coaching staff. "But when you lose your job, it's hard." Michigan athletic director Bill Martin declined comment. Carr will coach the Wolverines on Jan. 1 against Florida in the Capital One Bowl, ending his 13th season as their head coach, then Rodriguez will take over. But the former West Virginia coach already put his mark on the program by firing each of Carr's assistants, all of whom were given two-year deals in March that will pay them through Feb. 28, 2009. Their firings are effective after the bowl game. English was fired along with Mike DeBord, offensive coordinator; Fred Jackson, wide receivers and associate head coach; Erik Campbell, wide receivers and assistant head coach; Vance Bedford, defensive backs; Scot Loeffler, quarterbacks; Andy Moeller, offensive line; Steve Stripling, defensive line; and Steve Szabo, linebackers. While helping Michigan prepare to play the Gators, the assistant coaches are free to pursue other jobs. If they don't land a job, they will still be paid by the school. Before news of the firings broke Thursday night, several players were made available for interviews about the Capital One Bowl and some seemed to have a good impression of their future coach after he watched them practice twice this week. "Rodriguez could come in and kind of be a distraction for us and want to talk about what he wants to do and talk about next year, but he really hasn't," cornerback Morgan Trent said. "He understands we're trying to win a game here." Rodriguez started his new job Wednesday by watching Michigan practice. He was introduced as Carr's replacement on Monday morning, then returned to West Virginia later that day. His resignation as the Mountaineers' coach was moved up from Jan. 3 to midnight Tuesday.

here to show support. He told them how proud he was of them. He told them to stay the course and bond together. It was really neat to have our governor take time out of his busy schedule to come up and visit with the football team."

WVU kicker Pat McAfee listened intently as Manchin spoke, absorbing the full impact of the governor's words.

"It was awesome," McAfee said. "I don't know if people were doubting the support of some people because of everything that's been happening. It's good to have the man in charge of your state reiterate the fact that everybody is behind us. It's a really good feeling.'

WVU wide receiver Tito Gonzales also appreciated Manchin's visit and his uplifting speech.

"It goes to show you how much the governor follows sports, particularly WVU sports," Gonzales said. "It was a real good thing for him to come out and give the guys a word of wisdom and a word of encouragement with all we've been through this week.'

The players had another unexpected visitor on Wednesday, when Hall of Fame ex-WVU coach Don Nehlen dropped by before practice. Nehlen spoke about the Mountaineers' 1989 national championship Fiesta Bowl game against Notre Dame.

To this day, Nehlen regrets the way he handled the whole Fiesta Bowl experience leading up to kickoff. He warned the players about the distractions that overwhelmed his players and coaches, everything from media to overzealous fans.

Linebacker Reed Williams couldn't believe his good fortune in having Manchin and Nehlen visit this week

"Those are two notable guys, people I can look up to as an in-state guy," said Williams, a Moorefield resident. "I've heard Don Nehlen's name for years. My brother [Justin] played under him for a couple of years, and Gov. Manchin is the leader of our state. It really means a lot to come out and try to give us that extra inspiration we may be missing right now without a head coach. It's great to get that."

attempting to put pieces together for why their head coach left while preparing for a BCS bowl against No. 3 Oklahoma (11-2). All the while, WVU officials continue to conduct their search for the next head coach.

"It seems like a whole different feeling over here, really," WVU defensive back Vaughn Rivers said. "As soon as he left — it didn't take a couple days — but almost immediately you felt the changes in things. We're just trying to get used to that."

Even WVU quarterback Patrick White anticipates the effects to linger.

"I think for a while it will be emotional, whether good or bad. Sometimes [it's] good and sometimes bad," White said.

The Mountaineers will conduct their final practice in Morgantown this afternoon under interim head coach Bill Stewart before dispersing to their separate homes for a few days. Early next Phoenix for bowl preparations. Jason DeProspero/The Dominion Post file photo

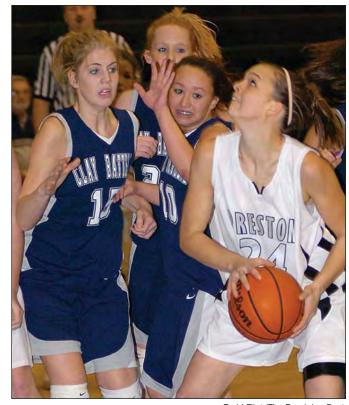

Bill Stewart walks the sidelines of a game earlier this year. The veteran coach has taken over practices for the Mountaineers in the absence of Rich Rodriguez.

"I am sure Oklahoma is sitting there thinking, 'they don't have a head coach and things week, the team will head to are going crazy,' and to some that could diminish WVU's full point they are," Rivers said. "But focus from being on the Soon-

Preston closes in on last year's victory total

Preston's girls' basketball team is just two wins shy of last year's total as it picked up its fourth win of the season by beating Clay-Battelle 62-35.

'Our defense and our transition game is just so much better than I thought it would be," Preston coach Brian Miller said. "I stil don't think our offense has come around.'

If the Knights (4-1) keep playing defense like they did on Thursday, they won't need too much offense.

Preston held the Cee-Bees to under 10 points in the first three quarters before surrendering 12 points in the fourth quarter.

"The main thing for us is, this past summer we really worked hard," Miller said. "I think our confidence is really high right now and I think we started to realize that we really aren't that bad.'

Caitlin Martin led the Knights with 20 points while Meredith Metheny added 11

GRAFTON — Josh Pearson scored a game-high 18 points but it wasn't enough to help Trinity on Thursday in the Grafton Holiday Tournament.

"We did a pretty good job most of the game but just got out-rebounded 41-27," TCS coach Herman Pierson said. "We just didn't do a very good job on the boards."

And the Warriors (1-1) also turned the ball over including four times in the last four minutes.

A Charleston disc jockey whose alligiance to the Michigan Wolverines ruffled a few listeners is back on the air. As part of his penance for playing the Michigan fight song too many times on his morning show on Electric 102.7 FM, Coach Kidd let upset West Virginia University fans pelt him with eggs. The Michigan native was yanked off the air Wednesday morning after listeners complained about his enthusiastic support for Rich Rodriguez's decision to leave West Virginia University to coach football in Ann Arbor. Program manager Wade Hill said listeners complained that Coach Kidd's actions were disrespectful. Coach Kidd returned to the airwaves Thursday morning and apologized to fans saying he took it a little too far.

■ Ohio State backup cornerback Eugene Clifford will not play in the BCS national championship game against LSU after being suspended Thursday for an undisclosed violation of team rules. Columbus station WCMH-TV and The Columbus Dispatch reported earlier that Clifford, a freshman, and starting cornerback Donald Washington had both been suspended for the game on Jan. 7 in New Orleans. The school released a statement later stating only Clifford would be suspended. Ohio State athletic director Gene Smith did not immediately return a message. Athletic department spokeswoman Shelly Poe said no further comment on the situation was expected.

Marshall has signed four junior college football recruits, three from California and one from Mississippi. The three Golden State players are wide receiver Charles Walker from Lanev College: cornerback Josh Miller of the College of Sequoias in Visalia and outside linebacker Andre Portis from the College of San Mateo. The fourth recruit is Jimmy Rogers, an offensive tackle from Mississippi Delta Community College. Marshall coach Mark Snyder says all four recruits have the potential to make a real impact.

Greg Cross, a junior college quarterback who passed for 2,564 yards this season, has signed with Pittsburgh and will begin school next month. Pitt coach Dave Wannstedt made it a recruiting priority to land an experienced quarterback after injuries forced him to start freshman quarterback Pat Bostick in all but three games. The 6-foot-2, 215-pound Cross started for two seasons at Fort Scott Community College in Kansas, throwing seven touchdown passes this season. Pitt also signed Butte College center Robb Houser, who is also eligible immediately. The 6-2, 285-pound Houser helped Butte rush for nearly 2,000 yards in 11 games this season.

■ Three people have been charged with robbery, sexual assault and kidnapping of three North Carolina football players. Police said the players were attacked early Sunday at their off-campus apartment. Police said they were bound with tape before they were assaulted, and one of those charged threatened the players with a knife. Authorities have charged Monique Jenice Taylor, Tnika Monta Washington, and Michael Troy Lewis with three counts of kidnapping, three counts of conspiracy to commit a felony and one count of resisting arrest.

Left-handed reliever Ron Mahay and the Kansas City Royals finalized an $8 million, two-year contract on Thursday. The 36-year-old, who will earn $4 million annually, was 3-0 with a 2.55 ERA in 67 innings last season with Texas and the Atlanta Braves, who acquired him on July 31 with first baseman Mark Teixeira. He will become the third lefty in Kansas City's bullpen, joining John Bale and Jimmy Gobble.

■ Dontrelle Willis agreed Thursday to a $29 million, three-year contract with the Detroit Tigers, two weeks after he was acquired from the Florida Marlins in the biggest trade of the offseason. Willis and All-Star third baseman Miguel Cabrera were obtained from the Florida Marlins for six prospects, including outfielder Cameron Maybin and left-handed pitcher Andrew Miller. The 2003 NL Rookie of the Year and a two-time All-Star, Willis is coming off a down season in which he went 10-15 with a 5.17 ERA. His deal allows him to make an additional $1.5 million in award bonuses. Willis joins a rotation that already included Justin Verlander, Kenny Rogers and Jeremy Bonderman as Detroit tries to reach the World Series again after losing to St. Louis in 2006.

Horse racing

The ownership of Preakness and Breeders' Cup Classic winner Curlin has changed again: Jess Jackson bought out another partner and now has an 80 percent interest in the 3-year-old colt. Jackson, the founder of the Kendall-Jackson Winery who owns Stonestreet Stables, bought out investment banker George Bolton in a private sale, it was announced Thursday. Jackson's spokesman Kevin McGee would not provide details of the sale, the latest shakeup in the ownership of the favorite for Horse of the Year. In November, Jackson and Bolton bought out the interest held by Satish Sanan's Padua Stables in a private sale. Earlier this year, Jackson, Bolton and Sanan purchased an 80 percent interest in Curlin for a reported $3.5 million from original owner Midnight Cry Stables, which bought the colt for $57,000 in 2005.

Didier Gailhaguet, one of the main players in the judging scandal at the Salt Lake City Olympics, has his old job back as president of the French skating federation. Gailhaguet was elected president of the French Ice Sport Federation on Saturday, receiving more than half of the votes and beating out, among others, disgraced judge Marie-Reine Le Gougne, Gailhaguet also was federation president from 1998 to 2004. Elena Berezhnaya and Anton Sikharulidze won the pairs title in Salt Lake City, but Le Gougne tearfully claimed afterward that Gailhaguet had pressured her to put the Russians ahead of Canada's Jamie Sale and David Pelletier. The Russians won the gold by a 5-4 margin.

Inks 4-year deal to lead operations

Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — A week ago, Wayne Huizenga seemed poised to sell his beloved Miami Dolphins and abandon his long quest for a Super Bowl title. Scratch those plans. Huizenga lost luster. Miami signed Parcells to a fourcontract vear Thursday as executive vice president of football opera-brought in Bill Parcells instead, giving him the task of restoring Miami's tions, a fancy title meaning he'll oversee "anything that has to do with football, directly or indirectly," said Huizenga, the Dolphins' owner.

Simply put: Parcells is in charge. "He's got the ultimate responsibility," Huizenga said.

The two-time Super Bowl champion coach will report directly to Huizenga, whose affinity for bigname help now has led him to a 66year-old former coach of four NFL clubs who owns a home in South Florida and now has a job there, too.

"I'm honored to join such an illustrious franchise as the Miami Dolphins and to work for one of the best owners in the league in Wayne Huizenga," Parcells said. "He shares my same commitment to winning, and I told him I would do everything I can to help turn around the team's fortunes.³

That will be a massive undertaking-much like when Parcells went to the Giants, the Jets, the Patriots and the Cowboys.

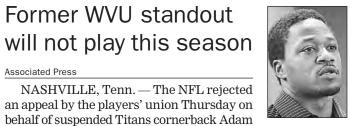

His coaching plan helped turn those teams around.

Miami hopes Parcells can do the same thing from the front office.

"He has a proven track record of success everywhere he has been in the National Football League," Huizenga said. "And his football acumen will help put the Miami Dolphins franchise back among the elite of the NFL.'

The team announced the hiring shortly after the locker room was phone Dec. 14. But Jones must serve the final two games of his seasonlong suspension.

[•]Commissioner Goodell notified Adam Jones today that his suspension for the 2007 season will not be modified," the league said in a statement.

"Once the Titans have concluded their 2007 season, Jones may begin limited activities at the club's facility and, assuming no further problems, will be eligible to participate fully in Tennessee's off-season workout program.'

Jones' attorney, Manny Arora, did not immediately return a message left on his cell phone. The players' union did not immediately return a message left by The Associated Press.

The Titans (8-6) are contending for their first playoff berth since 2003.

Goodell suspended the sixth pick overall in the 2005 draft for the season in April. Las Vegas police said Jones incited a strip club fight that led to a triple shooting Feb. 19, leaving one man paralyzed. He pleaded no contest in early December to a disorderly conduct charge, agreeing to a year probation, random drug testing, community service and anger management classes.

Jones has been arrested six times since being drafted, including two arrests in Georgia in 2006 that the Titans did not learn about until 2007.

Charges in two other cases are pending. A felony obstruction charge in Georgia from February 2006 is on a court docket for March, and public intoxication and disorderly conduct charges in Tennessee from August 2006 are on a court docket for Jan. 3.

closed for the day, and roughly 45 minutes after Dolphins coach Cam Cameron sidestepped at least a halfdozen questions about Parcells even refusing to say if he's ever met the coach.

"There will potentially be a time to have that discussion," Cameron said. "Today, I don't see it as being that day or this time."

Parcells' arrival has taken much attention off the Dolphins' Sunday game at New England.

"The guy's a legend," running back Lorenzo Booker said. "There's no doubt about it. He knows what he's doing. Obviously, his resume is a mile long. But I'm a new guy in this league, so I don't even know what a vice president does, to be honest with you."

On Wednesday, many believed Parcells would take over in Atlanta. By afternoon, that deal fell apart, and the Dolphins and Parcells closed in on a contract Huizenga started brokering before the Falcons contacted the former coach.

They met in upstate New York — the former coach has a home in Saratoga Springs — last week, around the time Huizenga was reportedly considering selling the team for $1.1 billion. But Parcells said he was assured the owner would remain in control of the franchise, whether he takes on minority shareholders or not.

"That was a very, very big factor because I did not want to go work for somebody I didn't know," Parcells told ESPN, where he is employed as an analyst.

So now, he's taking on a very, very big job.

Miami started 0-13 before beating Baltimore last weekend. The roster already seemed certain for an offseason overhaul. The Dolphins likely will have the No. 1 pick in next year's draft, and the franchise is in the midst of its longest postseason drought, now six years and counting.

Parcells insisted that he will not coach in Miami — but could see himself helping the coach, whomever it is.

"It's a young man's game in terms of coaching, and I know it's time for someone else to be doing those things," Parcells said. "If I can assist that person in any manner of speaking with my experience or even in the technical aspect and he would seek out that, then I'm happy to contribute.'

Mechanix Wear has had a hand in the development of work mitts for pit crews

BY TONY FABRIZIO

LapbyLap

You often hear the NASCAR world referred to as an industry, and there's good reason: Stock-car racing is much bigger than what takes place on the track for three hours most Sundays.

In North Carolina, where almost all the big teams are located, motor sports contribute $5 billion a year to the economy, including $3.9 billion and nearly 18,000 jobs to the Charlotte area alone, according to NASCAR figures.

Not all the activity is tied directly to NASCAR. The sport's prowess has spawned opportunities for hundreds, if not thousands, of vendors and suppliers.

One of those is Mechanix Wear, a company that found a niche making activity-specific gloves and other items for the people who work on the cars in the garages and on pit road.

A private company owned by Californian Jim Hale, Mechanix Wear has parlayed its success in racing into selling millions of "high-performance" work gloves to consumers through auto parts and home improvement stores and to the military.

It all began in 1992 when a then-small outfit that made motocross apparel branched into NASCAR.

"We had a sponsored rider whose mechanic asked us to make a glove for him to work on the motorcycle with," said Ted Abdon, Mechanix Wear's traveling director of racing. "Because of what we were doing with motocross apparel, we were using a lot of synthetic and newer high-tech products that were breathable, washable, etc., and we used them to make this 'mechanic's' glove."

The motorcycle mechanic had friends who worked in NASCAR and Indy car and let them try the gloves. They wanted their own. Mechanix Wear made 200 pairs of the gloves, took them to the

Franchising is Pettys' best hope

BY TONY FABRIZIO LapbyLap

It has been eight years since the team of Richard and Lee Petty and their 10 NASCAR championships and 268 victories won their last race.

John Andretti won for Petty Enterprises at Martinsville,Va. on April 18, 1999. Since then, the Pettys have gone 0-for-623 with cars they've entered for 12 drivers.

There's certainly reason to think the Pettys won't go another 0-for-593. Robbie Loomis is running the operation, and he's a former championship crew chief and a pro. Bobby Labonte is a 21-race winner with other teams (and the 2000 champion), and even as he approaches his 43rd birthday, he has plenty left.

But as for catching up to Hendrick Motorsports, Joe Gibbs Racing and Roush Racing and competing for championships, that won't happen under the current free enterprise system. The Pettys, even with their loose alliance with more powerful Evernham Motorsports, don't have the resources.

That's one reason Richard Petty this year was pushing the franchising of established teams, a formula that has been talked about for 10 or 12 years.

Franchising would limit the number of teams competing in Nextel Cup, guarantee starting berths and give owners equity. Any new entity wanting to come in — say Honda, with three or four new team owners would have to buy existing franchises.

It's a system NASCAR has resisted, presumably because the privately held racing organization would cede some of its authority to the franchise owners. Franchising would indirectly put some money in team owners' pockets that's now going into that big vault in Daytona Beach.

"I think the only thing in my mind that keeps NASCAR from being completely legitimate, major league with golf or football or baseball or whatever, is franchising," Petty said in April at Martinsville. "All the other entities are basically franchised. As they are franchised, you get a lot of people's ideas thrown in the middle of the thing, and in the long run it winds up better for everybody.' In other major sports, even the lowliest teams can dream of a championship. Economic factors still put teams such as baseball's Tampa Bay Devil Rays at a disadvantage, but there are at least equalization formulas, such as salary caps and higher draft picks for losing teams, that don't exist in racing. Because franchises would have equity, owners such as the Pettys would have an easier time attracting investors needed to bolster their resources to make a run at the elite teams.

1992 Daytona 500 and found that there was not only a market for the gloves, but also for other gear.

"We were an off-road motorcycle apparel company that knew nothing about automobile racing or pit stops or working on cars, so all of our input into building the original product came from the actual people that used them," Abdon said. "Like, we ended up making a knee pad because they were using volleyball knee pads. We have a radio belt because they said, 'We need a belt to hold the radio with our fire suits.'"

Nowadays, Mechanix Wear has sponsorship and research and development deals with 170 racing organizations and teams. That includes every team in Nextel Cup with gloves except for Penske Racing, and almost every team in the Busch and Craftsman Truck series. Abdon jokes that not having a monopoly gives him "somebody to root against."

The company makes 20 types of gloves engineered for either a multitude of tasks or a specific duty. For example, a pair of gloves made specifically for tire changers wraps snugly around an air gun and has a composite carbon fiber Kevlar knuckle to compensate for the punishment a changer's knuckles take.

A glove for tire handlers has leather material in the palms for wear and an easy on-off cuff to account for the fact handlers constantly take their gloves on and off to roll tires and remove valve cores.

At Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Ted Abdon, traveling director of racing for Mechanix Wear, shows a pair of research and development gloves to Mark Armstrong, a tire changer for Paul Menard.

Once during a NASCAR telecast, Mechanix Wear's people noticed that some crewmen were wearing ultra-grippy NFL receivers' gloves.

"So we went out and bought 20 different pair of NFL receiver gloves from sporting- good stores, took them to our research and development and said, 'We need a glove that has this type of material on it,' "Abdon said. "That's the glove being used on pit road right now by some jack men and tire carriers."

Making a pit road shoe might sound easy until you consider all the things it has to do. It has to provide grip not only on asphalt and concrete, but also when coated with fluid. It has to have ankle support like a basketball shoe but bend in the center and have an opening for the Achilles' tendon because tire changers kneel. It has to be lightweight, yet have extra protection in the toe area. A second-generation Mechanix Wear shoe will meet those requirements, have no shoelaces to get snagged on anything and will be made of fire-retardant material like drivers' shoes.

These days, Mechanix Wear uses motor sports for marketing and research and development, and generates most of its revenue selling work gloves to auto mechanics, heating and ductwork specialists, construction workers, and women who work with their hands.

But it was through finding a niche in the NASCAR industry that the company made its mark.

"We feel like a lot of our success is attributable to the fact we focused on mechanics, and no one else did," Abdon said.

CHARLESTON — George Washington junior Rodney Hudson makes his living in the trenches

Forget about playing out in space at a linebacker position, or comfortably tucked deep at free safety.

The 6-foot-4, 257-pound defensive tackle earned his keep up front against some of the best offensive lines in the Mountain State Athletic Conference.

Hudson, who helped the Patriots' defense spearhead GW's push to No. 1 in the state, was named the winner of the Sam Huff Award, given to the state's top defensive player and voted on by the West Virginia Sports Writers Association.

Running a close second was Wheeling Central rush linebacker Josh Contraguerro, who lettered on four consecutive Class A state championship teams.

Other players receiving votes were Zach Mann of James Monroe, Ryan Watts of University and Andy Thomas of Parkersburg.

"It's nice to see a lineman win it, not just me, because I don't think they get the recognition they deserve sometimes," Hudson said. 'When I found out my name was brought up, I was honored, but I was really surprised to find out I won it.'

What set Hudson apart from the competition, however, were his responsibilities where the games are won and lost — up front. It didn't hurt that Hudson had 17 tackles in GW's 19-14 victory over eventual Class AAA champion Parkersburg, the only time that the Big Reds — who averaged 35.7 points per game — were held to fewer than 20.

He battled two-time Hunt Award winner Josh Jenkins one-on-one several times in that game, but doesn't remember "because I was so hyped up.

didn't think I would play as well against him as I did, but never underestimate yourself or your opponent."

"Teams have a tough time blocking him," said his coach, Steve Edwards Jr., whose team finished on top of the Secondary School Activities Commission computer ratings, but fell to East Fairmont in the quarterfinals. "Rodney's not only a big kid, but he can run.

"He's not just a big body leaning on people." A defensive tackle who sometimes doubled as a defensive end, Hudson finished with 142 tackles, which included 16 tackles for losses and 12 sacks while navigating through some of the state's top lines.

"As long as I'm on the defensive line, somewhere up front, I'm happy," Hudson said.

Hudson is the first underclassman and defensive lineman to win the award since its inception in 1994 when DuPont senior linebacker Bobbie Howard — who played in the NFL for the Chicago Bears — won the first one. Since then, the Huff Award was won by 11

"I think I played well," Hudson said. "I linebackers and two defensive backs, the most recent being last year's winner, Xavier Peters of Martinsburg. Hudson is also the second player from GW to win the Huff, which was awarded to the Patriots' Joey Spano in 2001.

For Hudson's part, he was the best defensive player on a team that allowed only 10.3 points per game and only once surrendered more than 20 — a one-point loss to Riverside. He was also double-teamed a lot, but learned to deal with it by splitting the blockers, because 'if you take a side on a double-team, it's easier for them to push you to the side.

Surprisingly, Hudson — who wears a size 13 shoe — has some work to do in and out of the classroom, including serious weight-training. That's something he spends little time with in the summer while installing rubber roofing with his grandfather. That's going to change.

Hudson is taking it easy from the weight lifting while overcoming some bumps and bruises suffered during the season, but plans to hit the weights hard when he's healthy.

"I know how important it is now," Hudson said.

WVU's Cicchini named to Soccer America MVP squad

Submitted to the Dominion Post

West Virginia University midfielder Amanda Cicchini was named a Soccer America MVP Thursday. Cicchini was one of 11 players named to the College Women's MVP first team, its version of an All-America team.

Cicchini, an Oakville, Ontario, native, finished with eight points on four assists and two goals this season. The central midfielder was outstanding in controlling the tempo of play while working end line to end line. A two-time NSCAA all-region selection, Cicchini was a first team all-Big East pick this season.

WVU ROUNDUP

"What a great honor for Amanda," head coach Nikki Izzo-Brown said. "What she does on and off the ball for us is so important. She has the rare ability to get the offensive attack started and connect our offense with our defense. The All-America recognition is well deserved.'

Named to the 2007 Hermann Trophy Watch List, Cicchini scored goals in the season opener against Bowling Green and at Big East foe Pitt. Great on the ball, she served assists against Penn State, Villanova and Wake Forest. The three-time all-league midfielder was also named to the all-tournament team at the 2007 Big East Championship.

Cicchini, a second-team NSCAA All-American this year as a junior, is the first Mountaineer since Chrissie Abbott (2002) to be named a Soccer America MVP.

Belichick praises . Shula

Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Bill Belichick remembers the 1972 Miami Dolphins as "an awesome team." He was "a big fan" of their coach, Don Shula.

And the only team to go undefeated in NFL history was "fun to watch.

So any expectations the Patriots coach who is trying to match that perfect record would be his usual unenlightening self were dashed Thursday, three days before Miami (1-13) visits New England (14-0).

Belichick was unusually talkative — and complimentary — about that accomplishment, even though Shula has suggested an asterisk be placed next to the Patriots' record.

The reason: Belichick and the Patriots were punished by the NFL for spying on New York Jets coaches with a sideline videocamera during the season opener. Shula later softened his tone, but contended that New England's success is diminished by Spygate.

"We had dinner in the offseason," Belichick said. "I don't think I've talked to him since then.'

He hasn't responded to Shula's remarks, but the links between Belichick and the Shula family don't appear to contain any animosity.

They started in Ohio between Belichick's father, who attended Western Reserve in Cleveland, and Shula, who went to John Carroll in a suburb of that city.

Belichick was studying for his bachelor's degree in economics at Wesleyan in Middletown, Conn., when the 1972 Dolphins went 17-0, beating Washington in the Super Bowl. In 1975, Belichick got his start in the NFL as a special assistant for Ted Marchibroda with the Baltimore Colts, the team Shula coached from 1963-69.

"The first time I really remember spending time with him was in '75, when I was with the Colts and he was the head coach of the Dolphins," Belichick said. "Pregame warm up and stuff like that, just bumping into him.'

From 1992-95, Belichick and Shula's son, David, coached in the same division: Belichick with Cleveland and Shula with Cincinnati. He also knows Shula's son Mike, who spent four seasons as coach at Alabama before becoming quarterbacks coach this season for Jacksonville, a team New England could face in the playoffs. "There's sort of an interrelationship there with David and Mike, as well as Don," Belichick said. Having grown up in Annapolis, Md., outside of Baltimore, Belichick rooted for the Colts.

"I was a big fan of Coach Shula from when he was at Baltimore," he said.

Shula left for Miami in 1970 and coached there through the 1995 season. The Dolphins' perfect record was built on a powerful running game that included two 1,000-yard rushers, Larry Csonka and Mercury Morris, and a dangerous receiver, Paul Warfield, who led the team with just 29 catches.

Their biggest win that season: 52-0 over the Patriots in Miami.

"The team they had was an awesome team, and they were fun to watch," Belichick said. "They had a great style of play that I think we all remember.'

Today, some members of that team are obsessed with their place in history. They have been known to pop bottles of champagne-style beverages when teams close to going unbeaten lost their first game. To some Patriots, that possessiveness is understandable.

"You need to be," said linebacker Junior Seau, a Dolphin from 2003-05. "That's a prideful thing, especially when you're the only team that's been able to do something special."

Brown, said Rodriguez previous comment, "The lawyers are working on it," still stands and declined Wednesday to say whether the buyout clause would be contested.

Michigan and Rodriguez have agreed to the structure of a contract, but Brown deferred comment on a timetable for completing the deal to Martin, who did not respond to a question about the deal via email on Thursday. A message seeking comment was left with Martin.

art. Many players said the practices weren't all that much different than they were under Rodriguez.

"[The media is] going to continue to talk to us about coach Rodriguez for the next month or so — and it's not a distraction for many — but for the people who are distraught by the situation, it feels like, 'I can't talk about it,'" WVU wide receiver Dorrell Jalloh said. "But if you view everything in a positive light, that things are going to get better, things are going to improve — then it's ok."

For underclassmen, part of that means finding out who their head coach will be following the Fiesta Bowl. Former Auburn coach Terry Bowden, Florida assistant coach Doc Holliday and Central Michigan coach Butch Jones all interviewed for that position, though WVU's search continues.

On Thursday afternoon, Governor Joe Manchin confirmed that he had conversations with Florida State head coach Bobby Bowden, the father of Terry Bowden, the day before.

"I talk to Bobby quite a bit. Bobby is a dear friend of mine," Manchin said. "I would expect a father to call, and I said, 'Coach, I gotta be honest, I'm not involved. I'm having a hard enough time to get the budget done and get the State of the State done. They'll go through the process."

At the end of WVU's practice on Thursday, Manchin spoke to the team and gave his support. On Wednesday, former WVU coach Don Nehlen addressed the team about how to overcome distractions.

"Everything seems more relaxed than I thought it would be," WVU kicker/punter Pat McAfee said. "I'm really excited to see how our team does in the bowl game. It's really been a bonding experience."

Stewart took control of the team's practices as soon as Rodriguez announced his intentions to leave on Sunday, gaining the confidence of the WVU players through this time of transition.

"Coach Stewart is a great coach. You can't help but to like coach Stew," White said. "He's a player's coach, so we're definitely having a good time."

Crosby fights in Pens victory

Captain drops the gloves for first time

Associated Press

BOSTON — Sidney Crosby punched his way to his first NHL "Gordie Howe hat trick."

Crosby scored a goal, assisted on two by Evgeni Malkin, and dropped the gloves for the first time in the NHL to spur the Pittsburgh Penguins to a 5-4 shootout victory over the Boston Bruins on Thursday night.

The 20-year-old Penguins captain helped set up Malkin's first of the game 55 seconds in, scored his 16th of the season at 8:26, and then assisted on Malkin's 13th as Pittsburgh jumped to a 3-0 lead.

Crosby fought Andrew Ference in the second period.

Colby Armstrong had three assists in helping the Penguins take a 4-0 lead they couldn't hold. Journeyman goalie Ty Conklin, making his first start for Pittsburgh, stopped both shots in the shootout and helped his new club win for the second time in five games.

Ryan Christensen and rookie

Chris Letang also scored for Pittsburgh. Conklin made 41 saves through overtime, then turned aside Phil Kessel and Marco Sturm in the tiebreaker.

PENGUINS 5, BRUINS 4

The Bruins rallied on late second-period goals by Sturm and P.J. Axelsson, and got even when Petteri Nokelainen and Dennis Wideman scored in the third.

Crosby, playing in his 194th NHL game, fought Ference to at least a draw 5:09 into the second period. Ference, given an extra two minutes for starting the fight, had a cut over his left eye but it wasn't clear if that was caused by a Crosby punch or Ference's helmet.

The Bruins managed to remain the only team not to lose consecutive games in regulation, but they fell to 1-2-1 on their 1-2-1 homestand.

Sturm netted a power-play goal, and Axelsson scored during a power play. Nokelainen made it 4-3 with 6:46 left in regulation, and Wideman's man-advantage goal with 2:55 remaining tied it.

Conklin signed with Pittsburgh as a free agent in July and was recalled from the minors Dec. 6 when Marc-Andre Fleury sustained an ankle injury. He faced 41 shots in his second game with the Penguins.

Thomas, returning from a sevengame absence due to a groin strain, was beaten by the first shot he saw. Armstrong kept puck in the Boston zone and moved it to Crosby, who fed Malkin alone in front. Crosby then tipped home Armstrong's pass less than eight minutes later. Malkin's slap shot made it 3-0 at 11:53.

Christensen tipped in Ryan Whitney's shot to push the advantage to 4-0 at 11:09 of the second, bringing boos to the Bruins from the fans.

Notes: The Penguins finished a stretch of playing 8 of 10 on the road. Their next away game will be outside against Buffalo on New Year's Day. ... Pittsburgh has won three straight from Boston, dating to last season, but this marked the Penguins' 20th victory in 85 games played in Boston.

... Bruins D Andrew Alberts missed his second game with post concussion syndrome. Veteran forward Glen Murray left the game with a middle body injury and didn't return. ... Pittsburgh D Adam Eaton was forced out late with what appeared to be a shoulder injury.

Davenport leads Steelers to win over Rams, 41-24

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Najeh Davenport is a career backup running back with typical non-descript statistics. Except when he's playing the St. Louis Rams.

The Pittsburgh Steelers' top-rated defense was porous again in a 41-24 victory over the St. Louis Rams on Thursday night.

But Davenport's three touchdowns and 123 yards rushing on 24 carries in relief of injured Willie Parker allowed them to break out of a late-season swoon and move one step closer to a playoff berth.

Isaac Bruce caught a 12-yard touchdown pass and moved into third place on the career yards receiving list, moving ahead of James Lofton, for the Rams. Marc Bulger threw three touchdown passes but was intercepted twice, and Ike Taylor's 51-yard return on an overthrown ball on fourth-and-10 with 3:46 to go put the game out of reach. Pittsburgh had taken a 10-point lead on a 29-yard field goal by Jeff Reed only seven plays earlier.

Besides the Bruce milestone, the only other highlight for the Rams (3-12) was retiring Marshall Faulk's No. 28 jersey at halftime of the Rams home finale.

St. Louis finished 1-7 at home and had three games blacked out because it didn't sell out, and in each of the last two weeks there have been nearly as many visitors as home fans in the Edward Jones Dome.

Parker, who leads the NFL with 1,316 yards rushing, limped off the field with a broken bone in his lower right leg in the first quarter after only one carry for minus-1 yard. Davenport eased any worries with a game that rivaled his 178-yard effort for the Green Bay Packers against the Rams, in a 45-17 Monday Night victory in 2004. He was filling in for Ahman Green at the time.

NEW YORK — Levance Fields hit a 3-pointer with 4.7 seconds left in overtime to give No. 11 Pittsburgh a 65-64 victory over No. 6 Duke in a matchup of unbeatens Thursday night.

Duke's Jon Scheyer took a running 3 and was able to grab the rebound and get off a final shot but it was another miss for the Blue Devils (10-1).

Fields, who finished with 21 points for the Panthers (11-0), hit all three of Pittsburgh's 3-pointers in the game. The second one he made was part of a 12-0 run that gave the Panthers a 50-49 lead with 5:27 to play in regulation, their first since 2-0.

Duke had the final two shots of regulation, too.

Gerald Henderson of Duke tied the game at 58 on a jumper with 56 seconds left in regulation.

Pitt's Michael Cook missed a 3 with 23 seconds left and the Blue Devils worked for a last shot. Henderson's driving miss in the lane, but Kyle Singler got the rebound and his putback went off the rim.

GUAYNABO, Puerto Rico — The Clemson Tigers needed a little time to get warmed up after a twoweek break for final exams.

K.C. Rivers had 21 points and 11 rebounds to help No. 15 Clemson beat Division II Puerto Rico-Mayaguez 90-73 on Thursday in the San Juan Shootout.

"We decided to establish ourselves in the second half and try to put the game away," Rivers said. "We had a sense that if we didn't come out with a hard edge, they were going to come out pretty hard."

Rivers, 9-for-12 from the floor, scored eight consecutive points in the second half to give the Tigers their biggest lead of the game, 78-51.

Steven Ramirez led Puerto Rico-Mayaguez (1-11) with 21 points and seven assists.

The Tigers led by only two points, 25-23, with less than 7 minutes to play in the first half, but pulled away for a 46-37 halftime advantage.

"We started setting goals to stop them four times in a row, five time a row. That was kind of our battle cry on the bench," coach Oliver Purnell said. "It was kind of natural that we would have trouble finding our sea legs," he said.

The Tigers put the game out of reach in the second half with a 13-0 run that included two 3-pointers and a layup from Rivers that put them ahead 78-51 with 9:20 remaining.

Bulldogs coach Fernando Toro said his Division II team surprised even him with its ability to stay competitive with a ranked Division I opponent.

"I am really surprised that we were able to fight with them," Toro said.

Duquesne game, Huggins didn't blow up in his face.

"Nothing," Smalligan said. "He's not going to condone it. He wasn't happy about it, but he didn't get on me too much about it. He'd rather I play with some emotion and energy than getting pushed around out there."

So far, Smalligan is averaging just 12.8 minutes per game. Part of that is from the early ejection, while some of it has come from Huggins feeling more comfortable using a smaller and quicker lineup by inserting both Joe Mazzulla and Wellington Smith.

For most fifth-year seniors, that would be an unacceptable statistic, but not for Smalligan.

"I don't really care how many minutes I play," Smalligan said. "I just want to be able to help the young guys. I just want to win. My only regret on the season so far is that we're [9-1] and not [10-0]."

There has been some frustration on Smalligan's part, though, but only in his own personal play. He's averaging 3.8 points and 1.9 rebounds per game.

"Personally, I've been very disappointed in myself the last few days," Smalligan said. "I got frustrated with what happened in the Duquesne game. I felt like I left my teammates out to dry. It's been tough.

"Coach Huggins has been telling us the basketball season is a marathon and not a sprint. A couple of times this season, I've treated it like a sprint. If one game didn't go the way I wanted it to, I let it bother me and it carried to the next game."

And while Huggins can be quick to crack a joke, he's been just as quick to show support for his players.

"Coach Huggins keeps telling me how he needs me," Smalligan said. "I'm working. It's been a lot different. This is my fifth year. After a while, you kind of get certain things drilled into your head. It's a little easier for the younger guys."

I could not enjoy any of my regular activities such as tennis or bridge. I began applying JointFlex on my back and knee twice a day. Within a week, I was feeling much better. Within two weeks, I was completely pain free, and now use the product only once a day. To say that this is nothing short of a miracle is the under-statement of the year!"*

The gradual and continual improvement in long-term pain relief observed in the JointFlex clinical study was found to be consistent with previous studies conducted with orally administered Glucosamine and Chondroitin Sulfate. JointFlex will be further studied to determine the mechanism of the dramatic results and to verify that they are not due to random chance alone. Highlights of the study are available by calling the toll free number or can be viewed online at www.jointflex.com.

Which Symptoms Do You Want to Relieve?

JointFlex is a nonprescription pain relieving cream that is available in retail outlets everywhere. The JointFlex formula utilizes exclusive FUSOME Skin Delivery Technology and contains Camphor plus Glucosamine and Chondroitin Sulfate for skin conditioning. This technology enables the beneficial ingredients to be delivered quickly and safely to your skin. JointFlex is applied directly to painful areas and can be used daily since, unlike other pain relief creams, there is no burning sensation, no lingering medicine smell and no greasy residue.

Just How Effective Is JointFlex?

JointFlex is SO effective, its pain relief performance is guaranteed. That's right, if you're not completely amazed with the level of pain relief you receive from JointFlex, you'll get your money back. No questions asked!

Economical

One large 4 oz. JointFlex tube provides up to 50 applications or more compared to only 3 to 6 applications for most pain patch products. With JointFlex, you get guaranteed pain relief and save money.

Now Available at Retail Stores!

Canny students make art of food drive

The Dominion Post

Students at Trinity Christian School spent Thursday morning constructing sculptures from canned goods in a new twist on a typical food drive.

The students stacked cans to build a Christmas tree, a Christmas package, a traffic light, the Empire State Building, a group of candles, several hands breaking free from chains, and Moses parting the Red Sea.

The school participated in Canstruction, a food charity program founded in 1992 by architects in the Society for Design Administration.

As part of the Canstruction project, students collected various canned foods and designed a sculpture, using the colors on the can labels.

Debbie Palmer, an art teacher who organized the event, said students in kindergarten through fifth grade teamed with students in grades 6-12 to make the structures possible.

The students in the higher grade levels designed the structures, while collected cans for them. "It was great to see them all the students in the lower grades working together and solving problems," Palmer said. Matt Breakery, an architect with Alpha Associates, of Morgantown, judged the structures.

The group of candles won first place, and was designed and built by the senior class.

Palmer said merit awards went to the eighth-grade class for creativity, for using canned goods and Ramen noodle packages to depict Moses parting the Red Sea, the junior class for its use of color, for designing and building a traffic light sculpture.

It took 800 cans to make the traffic light, Palmer said, more than for any other structure.

The students collected a total of 3,700 cans during the drive, Palmer said a regular collection — brought in 850 cans, Palmer said.

"We bumped up the number of cans we collected and we generated interest for next year," Palmer said. "I'd definitely like to keep doing it.'

The school is donating all the canned goods the students collected to the Rock Forge food pantry.

WHEELING — Two Northern Panhandle racetracks could launch roulette and other table games this week, but Kanawha County's track hit a snag and delayed starting poker games until next year. Wheeling Island Hotel-Casino-Racetrack and Mountaineer Casino, Racetrack & Resort, in Chester, conducted test runs for charity Monday and were to hold charity games again

Tuesday. Officials at both tracks said they plan to launch the games if they receive the Lottery Commission's approval. Both tracks began offering poker in October.

Center officials had hoped to begin offering poker games at the first of the year. But officials at the Nitro track said there have been problems with getting classes for poker dealers up and running.

Reedsville VFD fires up party for 60 families

Names 3 coloring contest winners from Valley school

BY KATHY PLUM The Dominion Post

REEDSVILLE — About 60 families went to the town's fire hall for the Reedsville Volunteer Fire Department's second annual community Christmas party.

Spectrum Photography took photos of children with Santa and the department's 1928 Model A fire truck. More than 90 children attended the party and each received a goody bag. Many also paid to have their photo taken on the truck with Santa.

The Model A is the first truck the department owned.

"They finally bought another truck in 1948. They bought a La France truck in 1948," VFD Vice President Ron Smith said.

The 1928 truck, which has never been restored beyond a paint job years ago, always wins trophies in parades, Smith said, and it's a hit at events like Santa's visit.

Valley Elementary kindergartener Owen Deal, first-grader Joey Galusky and second-grader Olivia Jean Liston won free 8-by-10 photos with Santa for their entries in the department's fire safety coloring contest. RVFD President Bo Ward, Smith and firefighter Brittany Titus picked the winners from among the school's 205 entries

the winners," Ward said. "It was tough.'

"The pictures were awesome," Titus told the winners at Wednesday's party.

Galusky and Liston said they have some knowledge of fire departments.

"I know every fireman because my dad tows, and he goes to all the bad ones," said Galusky, whose father drives a tow truck and goes to "bad" accidents. Liston said her friend's father is a firefighter.

Each child who entered the coloring contest received a certificate noting the entry.

The department's next community event will be a Fiesta Bowl party Jan. 2. Admission to the fire hall will be $10 a person. Hot dogs, fries, nachos, chips, salsa donated by La Casa, ice and soda will be provided. Other food and beverages can be brought.

Attendees will be able to watch the game on two big-screen televisions and help smash pinatas in the shape of Michigan and Oklahoma football helmets. Donations of nonperishable food and cash to Food for Preston will also be accepted and given to local food pantries.

New officers will also take over in the department after the first of the year. Ward and Smith will remain as president and vice president, while Clint Atkins will be treasurer, Bobby Bragg secretary, and Rob Liston will become the new fire chief. Current Chief Scott Spiker will become assistant chief. William Wotring will be the county

Jeff Hostetler talks to the families at the Ronald McDonald House before distributing gifts Thursday night. The Hoss Foundation, created by Hostetler, along with WVU athletes and members of the Chestnut Ridge Community Church distributed the presents.

'Hoss' ponies up gifts to 16 families at McDonald House

The Dominion Post

Families staying at the Ronald McDonald House received Christmas cheer from a group of WVU students, athletes and church youth groups Thursday.

The Hoss Foundation - founded by Jeff Hostetler, a former NFL and WVU quarterback — gave gifts to 16 families staying in the house while their children receive care at WVU Hospitals.

Kim George, executive director of the Ronald McDonald House, said this is the second year the foundation has come to the house. While other organizations have brought gifts, George said the Hoss Foundation asked for individual family requests to meet their specific needs.

According to The Hoss Foundation Web site, Thursday's giving was part of The Gift Project. In coordination with local churches, the foundation selected families in need, shopped for presents, wrapped them and distributed them.

Givers, families, the Chic-fil-A cow and Hostetler assembled in the large house living room — decorated with stockings by the fireplace — and called out names and numbers of families to distribute gifts.

Hostetler said he started the foundation to help families in need, just like those staying at the Ronald McDonald House, because his children spent time in the hospital and he empathizes with the parents.

"Christmas is about Christ," Hostetler said. "We just want you to feel Christ's love through us.'

DEAR DR. GOTT: Have you ever heard of a calcified, benign, fibroid tumor attached to the outside of the uterus? I have one the size of a grapefruit. Because I am 91 years old, my doctors do not want to do surgery. Please let me know your opinion.

DEAR READER: A fibroid is a noncancerous tumor of the lining of the uterus. Those that grow outward are referred to as subperitoneal. As a general rule, a fibroid is harmless and can be left alone unless abdominal pain, discomfort or other symptoms are experienced. I agree with your doctors. Major surgery in a 91-year-old carries definite risks that should be avoided if possible. First, exhaust all your options. A gynecologist can help you. Next, hold off the surgery unless your quality of life becomes compromised. At that point, you will have to accept the risks of an operation. Perhaps the surgeon would consider laparoscopy — removal of the uterine tumor through a tube inserted into the pelvic area.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I hope you can help me. I'm 89 years old and in good health. Lately, I've been passing out without any warning.

DR. PETER GOTT

My doctor can't give me an answer, nor can anyone at the hospital where they take me fairly regularly. I sure would like to know the cause. This has happened four times in the past six months. Do you have an answer?

DEAR READER: In my experience, age-related fainting (syncope) is frequently the result of a cardiac problem, such as a rapid pulse, a slow heartbeat or some abnormality in the brain.

You are at significant risk of harming yourself if you faint in the street or on the stairs in your home. I urge you to persist in your efforts to find a diagnosis. You need a diagnostic specialist (internist) who will check you thoroughly, order appropriate testing, such as a 24-hour Holter monitor, and refer you to a specialist if needed.

Frankly, I'm surprised that your current doctors and hospital have failed to be more aggressive.

Also, I would involve family members who can monitor the situation. This involvement requires a legal form known as a health care proxy. In this way, the medical staff can follow along with them in a time of emergency and keep you informed, as well.

Anticipating success predicated on practical foundations is an excellent way to fulfill your ambitions in the year ahead. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

— You will take much personal pride in completing some tasks or assignments that require a great deal of concentration and perseverance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) - Your organizational and managerial skills will be crying out for active expression or fulfillment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — When you go into events with a positive attitude, it will help you to do all the right things to make good things happen.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Because you already know all about what you have to say, be more of a listener than a talker so you can hear lots of new information from others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Conditions will afford an opportunity to significantly adjust your material means in ways that would better them considerably. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) -Your probabilities for achieving personal success look good. All you have to do is stick to endeavors that are traditional and pragmatic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Privacy will substantially help you get things resolved when it is necessary to discuss a serious problem with another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — This is an excellent time to do what you can to strengthen relationships with several friends who are quite influential in furthering your interests.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) - Knowing where you want to go, and with your targets clearly defined, will give you a heads-up. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) - If you want desirable results, it is to your advantage to approach all situations philosophically as well as pragmatically.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Your chances for turning a profit are likely to be far better in a joint endeavor rather than operating independently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Don't tune your mate out thinking you have the answers. He or she will be the one who has the better suggestions to offer in regards to a critical matter that affects you both.
