

FACES OF CHANGE

Together We Make a Difference

“While working on my project, I have come to realize that noncitizen youth represent an invisible class of ‘at-risk youth’ – they go unnoticed and their needs go unaddressed by most mainstream intervention efforts. These kids require and deserve the assistance of every talented advocate who is willing to help.”

Mike Peters, 2009 Equal Justice Works Fellow

The mission of Equal Justice Works is to create a just society by mobilizing the next generation of lawyers committed to equal justice. For nearly 25 years, Equal Justice Works has collaborated with the nation’s leading law firms, corporate legal departments, bar foundations, law schools and nonprofit organizations to provide the training and opportunities that enable attorneys to provide effective representation to vulnerable populations.

- We help law schools establish and strengthen public interest programs.
- We provide public service work experience, professional development and training for students and lawyers.
- We build strong support in the legal profession for public service through pro bono work and financial support.
- We work to reduce the educational debt barriers to public service through outreach and advocacy.

Dear Friend of Equal Justice Works,

In 2010, the economy and high unemployment rates continued to present huge challenges across the nation, hitting hard those who were already struggling and vulnerable. We read story after story of a foreclosure crisis that continued to grow, while legal aid organizations faced reduced budgets and an increased demand for their services. The result was tens of thousands of people facing homelessness with no one to help them.

We responded to this crisis by putting 30 lawyers to work in areas that were hardest hit including Ohio, Michigan and Southern California. These Fellows helped 10,388 clients, including 2,834 who were in danger of losing their homes, and successfully prevented 39% of these foreclosures. Our Fellows continue this work to keep families in their homes.

As wars continued to be fought around the globe, we were saddened by the fact that more and more of those who served our country returned home only to be confronted with additional challenges. According to a report by the National Alliance to End Homelessness, veterans are twice as likely to be homeless than other groups. Moreover, veterans suffering from the effects of combat face higher levels of unemployment and incarceration, as well as mental and physical health issues.

To begin to address these issues, we placed 10 lawyers in the field to help homeless veterans secure housing as well as access the medical care and support services they need. This is the first step to improving the quality and availability of much needed legal services for this community. In the coming months we will explore ways to expand our program, place more Fellows in the field and raise awareness of the serious legal needs of those who have fought for our country.

We as a nation have also become increasingly aware of the broken promise to provide legal counsel to criminal defendants who are unable to afford it. Too often, particularly in the South and in rural communities, government does not provide minimally competent criminal defense representation, resulting in wrongful convictions or longer jail sentences than those who receive adequate representation.

In partnership with the Southern Public Defender Training Center, we have launched a new fellowship program that will begin to address the crisis in indigent defense. In its 2011 pilot year, Public Defender Corps will provide three-year fellowships to approximately 20 lawyers who will undergo rigorous “boot camp” training and then disperse to public defender offices in some of the most challenged areas. With ongoing support and mentoring, these Fellows will improve the quality of representation for accused persons who cannot afford counsel.

Looking ahead, 2011 is an exciting time as we will celebrate 25 years of working toward equal justice for all. While much has changed over the years, our resolve to create a just society by mobilizing the next generation of lawyers committed to justice remains the same.

On behalf of the Equal Justice Works Board of Directors and staff, we thank you for your continued interest and support.

Year in Review

Change is a versatile word that has many meanings. It is a signal of hope and new beginnings. It can mean a career transformation for a young law student who worked with a public defender over the summer. It can mean access to knowledge and tools that help remove the debt barriers that can deter a lawyer from a career in public service. Or it can mean a new life for a homeless veteran who once struggled to obtain the most basic of needs.

Change is at the core of Equal Justice Works' mission and without it, we will be unable to achieve equal justice for all. But we are not alone in this pursuit. Our partnership with law schools, law firms, corporations and other nonprofit organizations is essential for our success. There are many faces of change who have contributed to our success. Together we are making a difference.

Fellows attending the 2010 Awards Dinner catch a moment with special guest emcee David Gregory, moderator of NBC's Meet the Press.

Every fall, all Equal Justice Works Fellows convene in Washington, D.C. for an intense, three-day training and networking event.

Fellows not only receive essential skills training for their projects, they also have a chance to connect with other Fellows working on similar issues.

FELLOWSHIPS

Our Fellowship programs continue to thrive. In 2010, 144 Equal Justice Works Fellows worked on behalf of underserved populations and causes in 21 states. The Fellows served at 120 nonprofit organizations across the country, addressing critical issues such as access to services for disabled children, predatory lending in immigrant communities and domestic violence.

Since 1993, the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS) has supported Equal Justice Works' postgraduate AmeriCorps Legal Fellowships and Summer Corps program for law students. In 2010, CNCS provided funding for 66 Equal Justice Works AmeriCorps Fellows and 541 Summer Corps members. Our AmeriCorps Fellows, with the help of 4,495 recruited pro bono lawyers and law students, provided help to 34,455 low-income clients in need of legal assistance.

Thanks to a $1.2 million American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) grant, we were also able to support 30 additional AmeriCorps Fellows who provided legal assistance to 10,388 clients who were facing foreclosure or were otherwise impacted by the economic downturn. The Joint Economic Committee of Congress estimates the cost of a foreclosure to a community to be $77,395. These 30 AmeriCorps Legal Fellows saved 1,086 homes from foreclosure last year – a return of $71 for every taxpayer dollar invested.

In 2010 we expanded our fellowship offerings with the launch of the pilot phase of the Public Defender Corps. Developed in partnership with the Southern Public Defender Training Center, Public Defender Corps is a three-year fellowship program that will begin to tackle the growing crisis in public defense by improving the quality of representation for adults and juveniles nationwide. More than 450 candidates applied for 18 fellowships. The Fellows will begin their service in August 2011 with an intensive two-week training program and then move to public defender offices in some of the areas that need it most.

LAW SCHOOLS ARE MEMBERS OF EQUAL JUSTICE WORKS.

LAW SCHOOLS

Equal Justice Works collaborates with law schools across the country to develop public interest programs and opportunities not only for students already committed to public interest careers, but for all students.

The annual Equal Justice Works Conference and Career Fair brought together more than 1,000 law students and lawyers pursuing public interest law careers. In addition to participating in skills development workshops, attendees took advantage of opportunities for résumé review and connecting with like-minded students and professionals. The event attracted 130 nonprofit and federal agency employers seeking to fill over 500 summer and permanent positions.

EDUCATIONAL DEBT

According to the American Bar Association, the average annual private law school tuition has more than tripled since 1985, growing from $7,500 per year to $34,000, with many top tier schools now exceeding $45,000. It is not uncommon for law school graduates to accumulate $150,000 in educational debt, a burden that has prevented many from considering public service jobs.

Equal Justice Works continues to take a leadership role in educating law students and graduates about available programs for reducing debt burdens, including loan repayment assistance programs and the College Cost Reduction and Access Act (CCRAA), which provides for income-based loan repayment and debt forgiveness for those who work for 10 years in the public sector. In 2010, we hosted 10 free webinars that were attended by more than 2,000 students, public service employees and civil legal aid attorneys. Our staff also conducted 17 regional trainings reaching an additional 2,100 law students, public interest lawyers and financial aid advisors.

Equal Justice Works Conference and Career Fair attendees were treated to a discussion of public service and the role of lawyers in society with Professor Laurence Tribe, First Senior Counselor for Access to Justice, and Judge David Tatel.

Michelle Parris, 2010 Equal Justice Works Fellow

Hosted by The Bronx Defenders

Sponsored by Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft LLP and Pfizer Inc

As a law student, Michelle Parris had a profound experience working at the Immigrants' Rights Clinic at Stanford University: she successfully represented a permanent resident with schizophrenia whose immigration status was in jeopardy because of criminal convictions he suffered years ago when he was unable to manage his illness. The result is a project with The Bronx Defenders to provide holistic civil representation to people with psychiatric disabilities who have been affected by the criminal justice system.

Corporation for National and Community Service

The Corporation for National and Community Service has supported Equal Justice Works programs for 17 years. The Equal Justice Works AmeriCorps Legal Fellowships program is one of the most productive and highly regarded national service programs in the country, and our Summer Corps program provides law students with the opportunity to dedicate their summer to a legal project at a qualifying nonprofit public interest organization. Both programs expand the delivery of critically needed legal assistance in low-income and underserved communities across the country. AmeriCorps Legal Fellows working in the field in 2010 included:

One of the legacies of the 2010 BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico is an economically depressed seafood and fishing industry. These hardships have been particularly felt by the local Vietnamese American community that depends on this industry to make a living. Many in the community do not know how and are reluctant to seek help because of the language barrier. However, as an AmeriCorps Legal Fellow and native Vietnamese speaker, Lan Diep is successfully reaching out to and educating the community about their rights and how to process claims.
