

Mythology Photography Fiction Fishing
Christianity Art Cooking Essays
Buddhism Freemasonry Medicine Biology
Music Ancient Egypt Evolution
Carpentry Physics Dance Geology
Mathematics Fitness Golf Squash
Science Yoga Marketing Confidence
Immortality Biographies Poetry
Psychology Witchcraft Electronics
Chemistry History Law Accounting
Philosophy Anthropology Alchemy Drama
Quantum Mechanics Atheism Sexuality
Personal Health Ancient History Criminal
Entomology Psychiatry Languages Sport
Paleontology News Network Islam
Metaphysics Investment Archaeology

Forgotten Books

— www.forgottenbooks.com —

Copyright © 2016 FB &c Ltd.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, distributed, or transmitted in any form or by any means, including photocopying, recording, or other electronic or mechanical methods, without the prior written permission of the publisher, except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical reviews and certain other noncommercial uses permitted by copyright law.

POETICAL REMAINS

OF

JAMES THE FIRST,

KING OF SCOTLAND.

I Decus, I nostrum, melioribus utere fatis.

VIRGIL.

———— Sine pondere terram,

Spirantesque crocos, et in urna perpetuum ver.

JUV.

EDINBURGH:

PRINTED FOR J. AND E. BALFOUR.

---

M,DCC,LXXXIII.

C O N T E N T S.

	Page
Dissertation on the Life and Writings of King James I.	I
— Of the Poem, Christ's Kirk of the Green	29
— Of the Poem called The King's Quair	45
The King's Quair, a poem in six canto's	55
Canto I.— The Design	55
Canto II.— The King's intended Voyage to     France, and Capture at Sea	65
Canto III.— Vision and Transportation to the     Sphere of Love	99
Canto IV.— Is conducted to the Palace of Mi-     nerva	125
Canto V.— His Journey in Quest of Fortune	139
Canto VI.— Conclusion and Epilogue	151
Christ's Kirk of the Green	165
Dissertation on Scottish Music	195

E R R A T A.

In the first Dissertation, page 6. line 16. for cantare read saltare.

In p. 43. l. 19. read half a century.

In p. 17. l. 5. for fate read fall.

In p. 83. last line in the notes, read orfevrerie.

In p. 140. in the notes, l. 4. for poets read poet.

In p. 142. l. 6. hortis probably is an error of the transcriber, in place of sportis, which is more applicable to the greyhound, for sport.

In p. 143. in the notes, for lesty read leste, an old French word for nimble, or active, which is an epithet very suitable to the nature of the beaver.

A

HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL

D I S S E R T A T I O N

O N T H E

L I F E A N D W R I T I N G S

O F

JAMES I. KING OF SCOTLAND.

HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL
 DISSERTATION, &c.

IN this age of curiosity, when whatever seems to throw light upon the history, literature, or manners of our country in ancient times, is anxiously sought after, the publication of the following Poems, the works of James I. King of Scotland, one of the most illustrious persons of the beginning of the fifteenth century, may be no unacceptable present to the Public.

The poem of Christ's Kirk of the Green has been published before this time, commonly as the production of King James V. though falsely, and without foundation, as I shall endeavour to prove.

The other poem, called the King's Quair, was never before published. Of the illustrious author, it may be agreeable to the reader to give a sketch of the life and character, so far as to be explanatory of the two following poems.

Men of active and superior parts have often soared to thrones; but how few of the scepter'd rank have distinguished themselves as men of genius! and rarer still, how few to rank and genius have joined the qualities of the heart, virtue and public spirit! So rare a phaenomenon, however, was James I. King of Scotland.

This Prince was the fourth in descent, from the great Robert Bruce, the restorer of the Scottish monarchy.

His father, Robert III. of a mild disposition, affected ease and retirement. Near the close of his reign, on the death of his beloved Queen Anabella, broken with age and infirmities, he devolved the cares of government upon his brother the Duke of Albany, a man of ability and parts, and of great ambition. James was the younger of King Robert's two sons. The elder, David Duke of Rothsay, a high spirited Prince, at an age rising to manhood, ungovernable often in his passions and pleasures, had given occasion for many complaints against him, which being no way palliated by his ambitious uncle, procured an order from the weak King for confining the young Prince to the castle of Falkland. There, under the custody of Albany, to whom that castle then belonged, he died within a few months, starved to death, according to all the Scottish historians. The Duke of Albany, accused as the author of the Prince's death, stood a trial, and was acquitted. As he had then the power of administration in his hands, no other issue was to be expected. The old infirm King was sensible too late of the effects of his weakness; and, from the death of the Duke of Rothsay, dreading that of his only remaining son James, the sole bar between his ambitious uncle Albany and the throne, to prevent the like fate, and confiding in the ancient alliance between the Scots and French, which had subsisted from the time of Charlemagne, he determined to send the young Prince, then about twelve years of age, to his ally the King of France.

The King trusted to a treaty which was then in force between him and King Henry IV. of England. Without regard, however, to the law of nations, nations, the ship on board of which was Prince James, with the Earl of Orkney and others, his attendants, was taken by an English vessel upon that coast, and carried to London. Considering the suspicious conduct of the Duke of Albany in the imprisonment and death of the Duke of Rothsay, it is no improbable conjecture that the capture of the Prince of Scotland, the only person between Albany and the throne, after the King, might have been owing to intelligence given by Albany to the English Monarch, of the Prince's voyage. In the time of peace between the two nations, it is scarcely to be presumed, that, without positive orders, such a breach of treaty would have been attempted by any private person. Be that, however, as it may, the shock of this new disaster, suddenly brought to his father's ears, so affected him, that he died in a few days (of pure grief) at his castle of Rothsay, in the isle of Bute*.

The young Prince was carried to the Tower of London, where, after two years confinement, he was sent to the castle of Nottingham, and after that to Windsor castle †, which seems, from that * 1404.

† Windsor castle was built by Edward III. and the place where he and his successors generally kept their court.

that time, to have been the chief place of his residence while he was captive in England. There, under the care of Sir John Pelham, appointed his governour; an accomplished gentleman of worth and literature, to compensate, in some degree, the confinement of his person, his mind was enriched with a most liberal and princely education. James was naturally endowed with great parts, and, under able masters, attained, as is said by the writers of that age, to a great degree of perfection in almost every branch of the learning of those times, and in every accomplishment of a gentleman. In all athletic exercises, particularly in the use of the sword and spear, he was eminently expert*. To his knowledge of the Greek and Roman languages, the last of which he wrote with ease, he joined the philosophy of that age †, poetry, and music. In the scientific, as well as in the practical parts of music, he greatly excelled.

* Ense cum altero dimicare, et hasta ad unguem certare sic callebat, ut si luctantem vidisses, athletam dixisses; Boetius, hist. lib. 13.

† Jam vero humaniores artes, grammaticam, oratoriam, poeticamque ut tum temporis eximie noverat.—In lingua vernacula, ornata faciebat carmina. Theologiam, et jus, sic habebat, ut nulli cederet; Boet.

led *. He is justly reckoned the first reformer, if not the inventor of the Scottish songs, or vocal music †. There was nothing, says Hauthornden, within the circle of the liberal arts, that he had not applied his mind unto, seeming rather born to letters than instructed.

The remark of Buchanan, upon King James's excellency in music, is unbecoming a son of Apollo, himself one of the train of the muses! 'In musicis curiosius, quam regem, vel deceat, vel expectat,' is the illiberal censure of the four reformer, - the declaimer against monarchy! The observation of Sallust, from whom the phrase is copied, when applied to the vicious Sempronia, 'Pfallere, et cantare, elegantius quam necesse est probae,' is just and proper, but is here misapplied by the Scottish historian.

In the age of James I. and long afterwards, music, not only in the practical, but in the theoretic parts, was esteemed a very important branch of princely education. Henry VIII. was so much master

* Musicam exacte tenebat, ac quicquid illi arti affinebatur peritissime; Boet. ibid.

† See dissertation on Scottish music.

master of the science of music, as to have composed several pieces of church-music, some of which are still remaining *. In King James, his skill in music was no abuse of time. A genius as he was, taught, or rather inspired, by Nature, arrives at perfection without labour. Besides, James had improved his mind with every branch of the learning of the age; and, whoever considers his long captivity of eighteen years, during many of which he was under strict confinement, will not blame him for relaxing from the severer studies of literature and philosophy, and sweetening his hours of solitude and confinement by such refined and rational amusement †.

James

* Erasmus, his contemporary, vouches this fact.—In a late collection of anthems, published by Dr. Boyce from the books of the Royal Chapel, there is an anthem for four voices, composed by King Henry, ‘O Lord, the maker of all things,’ which is allowed to be good; and Sir John Hawkins, in his history of music, vol. 2d, has published another anthem of King Henry’s, for three voices, superscribed thus, ‘Henricus Octavus;’ and at the end of the cantus, or upper part, are these words, ‘Quod Henricus Octavus.’

† The King, in the following plaintive verses, tells us how he passed part of his solitary hours in prison.

Whereas

James did not remain a recluse during all the time of his captivity; that martial Prince Henry V. having revived the claim of Edward III. to the crown of France, invaded that kingdom in August 1405, and gained the famous victory over the French at Azincourt. From the beginning of this war, King Henry saw the importance of having the

Quhare as in ward, full oft I wold bewaille

My deadly lyfe, full of peyne and penance;
Saing oft thus, quhat have I gilt to faille
My fredome in this world, and my plesance?

The long dayis and the nightis eke

I wold bewaille my fortune in this wise,
For quhich agains distresse, comfort to feik
My custum was, on mornis for to ryse,
Airly as day, O happy exercise!

It fell me to mynd, of many diverse thing

Of this and that, can I not say quharefore
Bot flepe, for craft, in erth might I no more
For quhich as tho' coude I no better wyle,
Bot toke a boke, to rede upon a while,

Of quhich the name is clepit properly

Boece—

Happy Prince, who could dispel the gloom of a prison by the manly and elegant exercises of philosophy, poetry, and music!

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

naturally turned their eyes to France, the rival of England, who, at all times, was ready to assist them, and to cultivate the ancient alliance which had subsisted between the two kingdoms from the time of Charlemagne. During King Henry's first expedition to France, the Scots had remained quiet, and given little or no aid to their allies. The rapid success, however, of the English Monarch in his second expedition, (which at length, by the famous treaty of Troye, settled the crown of France upon King Henry and his issue with Catherine of France), awakened at once the Scots to the impending ruin which threatened the independence of their country, by the weight of such an accession to the King of England. A choice body of 7000 Scots, commanded by John Stuart, Earl of Buchan, son to the Regent of Scotland, landed at Rochelle, to the assistance of the Dauphin, accompanied by many of the Scottish nobility. The French war was now the path to glory and greatness. Never did the Scots make a more conspicuous figure than at that period, nor any set of warriors ever acquire more distinguished honours and fame. The Earl of Buchan, the leader of the Scots, arose, by his valour, to the dignity of Constable of France, and led the van of the French army; Douglas, Earl of Wigton, was created Marischal of France;

France; the Earl of Douglas was created Duke, and invested in the Dukedom of Touraine; and Stuart, son to the Earl of Lennox, was created Viscount d'Aubigné.

The first check given to King Henry's career, was the signal victory obtained by the Scots at Baugé*, under the Earl of Buchan, in which the Duke of Clarence, King Henry's brother, was killed, and his kinsmen, the Earls of Somerset† and Dorset, were taken prisoners.

This event made King Henry sensible, that his detaining the young King of Scots a prisoner, prevented not his subjects from fighting for their allies. He changed his plan; James was carried to France, in order to detach the Scots from the Dauphin's army. An offer is said, by the Scottish historians, to have been made by King Henry to his prisoner, of restoring him to his liberty, on condition of drawing off his subjects, by summoning them, upon their allegiance, to attend his standard. In James's situation, the offer was trying and alluring. The young King's answer was remarkable: 'As a prisoner,' replied he, 'and * 1420.
' in

† Grandson to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and brother to the Lady Jane, afterwards James's Queen.

‘ in your hands, I have no power over my subjects ; nor are they under any allegiance to obey my command *.’

King Henry, though nowise pleased with the answer, is said, upon the King of Scots retiring, to have exclaimed, ‘ Happy shall be the subjects of a King, who, in such tender years, shews himself to be endowed with so much wisdom !’

This prevented not James from giving his personal assistance, and signalizing himself under the banner of that heroic and martial Prince, particularly at the siege of Dreux, where the King of Scots commanded, and whose surrender was chiefly owing to his valour and conduct †. James being of a firm and vigorous constitution, expert in athletic and warlike exercises, distinguished himself in several military exploits under that vigorous Prince, fighting at the head of a faithful and noble band of his countrymen, who voluntarily attended their sovereign, as a guard to his person ‡.

During

* Boet. lib. 16. Hauthornden, &c.

† Hauthornden.

‡ The most eminent of this loyal band of knights, were Seton Lord Gordon, with 40 launces and 100 horsemen ;

During the regency of Robert Duke of Albany, the King's uncle, that artful Prince's plan of keeping hold of the government of Scotland coinciding with King Henry's measure for detaining the King of Scots in his hands, every treaty set on foot for his liberty, and his return to his own kingdom, was evaded and disappointed while Robert lived.

Upon his death, his son Murdoch succeeded him in the regency*. Although the plan of the new regent was the same with that of his predecessor, yet his ability, mean in comparison of his father's, and other circumstances concurring, made him, in a few years, sensible of his being unequal to hold the reins of government of a bold and martial people. His weakness and bad administration had introduced universal licentiousness and disorder; anarchy prevailed over the whole kingdom. Above all, the vices and intolerable insolence of the regent's own sons, which he found himself unable to curb, drove him at length seriously to concur with the states of the kingdom to set on foot a treaty for the Lord Forbes, with the same number; John and Fergus Kennedies, ancestors of the Earls of Cassillis, and John Sinclair, each of these with 30 lances, and 6 horsemen; Rymer's foedera, tom. 10. p. 127.
the

* 1420.

the King's liberty. To this the English regency, Henry V. being now dead, and his son an infant, was not averse. At last the treaty for King James's liberty was finally settled; and, as a bond of union between the kingdoms, James espoused a Princess of the blood-royal of England, Jane, daughter to the Earl of Somerset, grandson to John of Gaunt, and granduncle to King Henry. Thus, after 18 years captivity*, King James set out with his young Queen for his own kingdom, and, to the universal joy of his subjects, they were crowned at Scone.

This Princess, who is the subject of one of the following poems, is celebrated by all the Scottish writers, not only as eminent for her beauty, but as a pattern of virtue and of conjugal affection.

James had an arduous task to perform upon his entry to government. The feudal system, early introduced into Scotland, made it no easy matter for the King to contend with a set of powerful nobles, possessed of great estates, extensive vassallages, and hereditary jurisdictions annexed to them. These vassals, ready to run to the standard of their chief in time of war, obeyed also his call in time of peace;

* 1424.

peace ; and, as his whole revenue was spent among them, according to the ancient hospitality of the times, his castle was always open to numbers of these retainers. They looked upon the chief as protector of the clan, and the vindicator of their feuds and quarrels ; and, as the principles of right and wrong were not always the directors of their actions, their quarrels often produced the most open violation of justice, equity, and law, in the attacks which they frequently made upon the persons and property of whoever they conceived had injured them. The chief, upon his part, particularly under the late weak government, as often interposed his power in protecting his guilty vassal from the punishment he had incurred. Thus, without having recourse to law and justice, the sword was the sole judge and decider of right and wrong.

A practice likewise, very expressive of the weakness of the regent's government, was then frequent among the great barons in Scotland ; this was, the forming of leagues * and bonds of association with each other, in defiance of government, to defend themselves from being brought to justice. Such was the state of his kingdom, at James's taking

* Act 30. parl. 1.

taking the reins of government into his hands ; and, to add to the difficulties he had to encounter, he found the property of the crown almost wholly alienated and given away by the late regents.

The conduct of James, in this situation, showed great resolution, as well as eminent political abilities. He convened the states of his kingdom in parliament, and, with their concurrence, he resumed the patrimony of the crown *. He pledged himself to maintain their just rights, and to have justice enforced, and a strict obedience to the laws of his kingdom preserved ; and he obliged them to renounce and abjure all unlawful leagues and associations †.

James has been censured for his severity, in bringing to trial his uncle, Murdoch Duke of Albany, and his two sons. It is certain, that, on the King's return to Scotland, his government had been frequently disturbed by insurrections, headed by the regent's sons, and their partizans, who had been pardoned, in hopes to bring them to their duty. Upon what species of treason Duke Murdoch and his sons were tried and condemned, is * Act. 9. of parl. 1.

† Act 30. parl. 2.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

draws, and established schools in different parts of the kingdom. According to his elegant biographer *, by his invitation, many learned men, from the most illustrious universities in Europe, came to Scotland, as to the Sanctuary of the Muses, where the King often graced in person their lessons, and was umpire in their learned disputes.

Sensible that religion is the surest foundation of good government, and the great curb to the passions and disorders of men, he bent his care to promote piety and learning in the church, by advancing men of that character only, to the dignified ecclesiastical offices. He established a fixed rule, that none should hold the office of a canon in the church, but regular bachelors of divinity.

Sensible, likewise, that the externals of religion, in the order, decency, and solemnity of its rites, have their effect upon the mind, he, from his skill in poetry and music, established regular choirs in the churches. He was the first who introduced organs into the cathedrals and abbeys in Scotland. He was no less studious to polish the rough manners of his people, by alluring his nobles to frequent his court, where polite entertainments, feasts, masks, masks, and, of course, splendid apparel came to be introduced, and a degree of refinement promoted, to which the Scots, in the preceding ages, had been entirely strangers.

* Hawthornden.

The most important aeras in the history of any nation, are those which mark the introduction of learning and the polite arts, and the consequent civilization of manners amongst a rude people.

The most distinguished of such epochs in the history of Scotland, are those of the reigns of Malcolm III. commonly called Caenmore, and of King James I. *.

In the age of Malcolm III. the Scots were, no doubt, a rude people. They had little intercourse with the nations on the Continent, not even with their neighbours of England, unless in their frequent hostilities with each other.

On the murder of King Duncan by Macbeth †, his eldest son Malcolm took refuge in England, in
the * King Malcolm III. began his reign Anno 1057. King James returned from England Anno 1424.

† 1040.

the court of King Edward the Confessor, by whose assistance, under Siward Earl of Northumberland, the grandfather of Malcolm, by his mother, the daughter of Earl Siward, he defeated the usurper, and established himself upon the throne of his ancestors *. It is remarkable, that Scotland hath owed its civilization to two of its greatest and most patriotic Princes, who both of them received their education at the English court.

Before the time of King Malcolm-Caenmore, the universal language over Scotland, to the north of the river Forth, was the Gaelic. Malcolm, while he resided at the court of King Edward, had made himself master of the Saxon, or English language. On his return to Scotland, he introduced that language into his kingdom. He was the first of the Scottish Princes who fixed his residence in the low country of Scotland. The more ancient Scottish Kings usually held their residences at their castles, in the northern and western parts of Scotland; at Kildrinnie in Marr; the castle of Inverness, in that county; Dunstaffnage, on the western coast of Argyleshire; the castle of Glamis, in Angus; and at Stirling and St Johnston, now Perth, the two last situated in the entries of the Grampian Mountains.

That

* 1057.

That noble edifice, the Abbey and royal palace of Dunfermline, on the north of the river Forth, built by King Malcolm, was his chief residence*.

A remarkable occurrence, soon after his restoration, greatly contributed to the cultivation of the English language in Scotland.

Edgar Atheling, the heir of the Saxon line to the English crown, together with his mother and sister, and many illustrious persons, the followers of their fortunes, having, upon the conquest of England by William the Norman, left that kingdom, were driven by a storm into the mouth of the river Forth. There they found an hospitable reception from the Scottish Prince. Malcolm espoused the Princess Margaret, and endowed with honours and lands their illustrious friends. From these last, are derived many of the present noble families in Scotland. By this intercourse, the Saxon, or English language, was established, and, in time, became the general language over the low country country of Scotland. With the language, it is not to be doubted that the more advanced and civilized manners, together with the arts and sciences then in England and on the Continent, came into Scotland, and were cherished and cultivated under the patronage and protection of King Malcolm, and his Queen Margaret, who, according to the Scottish historians, were two of the most illustrious characters that flourished in that age. To return to King James.

* The cathedral church of St Cuthberts at Durham was also built by King Malcolm. The counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, and Westmoreland, then belonged to the crown of Scotland, as feus holden of the Kings of England.

The luxury said to have been introduced into Scotland in his reign, was the natural attendant on the civilization of manners then established by him. A change in the mode of living among a rude people, from some degree of barbarity to simple convenience, will be dignified with the appellation of Luxury. Boetius, and other historians of these times, expatiate upon the luxury which was then introduced into Scotland, and, according to them, occasioned the enacting of sumptuary laws, particularly restraining the expence of the table, prohibiting baked meat, and such like dainties, to be used, except at the tables of the nobles, and there only upon holidays. Some modern critics treat this with great ridicule, and are very severe upon Boece, Hauthornden, &c. for pretend-

ing

ing absurdly and falsely, as they alledge, to represent the Scots, at that early period, as opulent, and addicted to luxurious entertainments. True, it is, indeed, that, amongst the printed acts of parliament of that reign, the sumptuary act alluded to by Boece is not to be found. The fact may, nevertheless, be true. To confute our old historians, the following record from Rymer's foedera*, is quoted with great triumph. In it we find a license granted by King Henry VI. for transporting by sea to Scotland the following articles, for the use of King James I. viz. ‘ *Uno cloath sack ; duodecim
 ‘ ulnis de scarlatto ; viginti ulnis de worsted, rubri
 ‘ coloris ; octo duodenis vasorum de peuter ; mille et ‘ ducentis ciphis ligneis ; tribus duodenis de Cover-
 ‘ liis,*’ &c.

With submission to our modern critics, I cannot think even this commission, plain and homely as it may seem at this day, sufficient to discredit the authority of Boetius, as to the introduction of what might be reckoned, at that time, luxury of the table and dress, into Scotland. A sack or bale of English broad cloth, 12 ells of scarlet, for the King's own use, and 20 butts of wine, which is also in the grant, was no such contemptible

* Tom. 10. p. 470.

tible commission ; nor was even eight dozen of pewter vessels, for the use of his table. Pewter was then a novelty even in England, and used in the houses of the great only, where plate likewise was used. By the household-book of the Duke of Northumberland, it appears, that, in King Henry VII.'s time, more than 1,00 years after the above aera, pewter was used in that family, then the most opulent in England ; but, what is remarkable, it also appears that it was lent out to them for hire*.

It may seem ridiculous, that, in that rude age, when the arts of industry were very little understood or practised, when not only most of the articles of dress, but of household-furniture, used by the great, must have been imported from foreign parts, a more pernicious species of luxury than that of the table should then have been introduced into Scotland. How absurd, (may a modern say), to imagine, that our rude ancestors, in the beginning of the fifteenth century, not only ate baked meat at Christmas, and other holidays, but to go a strain higher, wore silk clothes, pearls, and embroidery! The fact, however, is certainly so. The 118th act of James I. enacts, ‘ That na man fall ‘ wear

* Hume's hist. vol. 3. note at the end, 8vo edit.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

ding so many years in the two most polished courts in Europe; that the Earl of Buchan, constable of France; the Earl of Douglas, Duke of Touraine, and his son Lord Wigton, both marshals of France, and numbers of the Scottish nobility and gentry, endowed with ample revenues in France, and possessed of extended territorial estates at home, on returning to their own country, would import part of the French luxury, both in dress, and in the entertainment of the table? The stately remains of the old castles and venerable abbays, those august monuments of ancient grandeur, still extant; Borthwick Castle, Craigmiller, Roslin, the abbays of Holyrood, Aberbrothock, Dunfermline, &c. impress the mind, at this day, with a just idea of the splendour and hospitality of the nobles and dignified churchmen in ancient times, who held their residence in those stately edifices.

Honest Hector Boece, indeed, seldom fails to dress his countrymen in their holiday clothes: Our modern critics, on the other extreme, in their overstrained zeal for truth, seem, with reluctance, to yield to their ancestors those blessings which benignant Nature had bestowed upon them. To speak of Scotland as wealthy and opulent, according to the common phrase, would be absurd. The wealth of Scotland consisted in her population, the certain criterion of plenty. She has been productive, at all times, of a hardy, vigorous, and brave race of men*, supplied at home with every necessary article of life, strenuous assertors of their liberty and independence against every foreign invader: Their mountains covered with sheep and beeves, their vallies fertile in grain, and their seas and rivers teeming with fish. Such was the opulence of Scotland, in ages of the earliest antiquity. At the above remarkable æra, the age of James I. from the virtue, spirit, and genius of that Prince, with the concurring circumstances of the time, it is beyond a doubt, that a remarkable change and reformation, in the manners, and mode of living of the Scots, must, of course, have taken place. To return to our subject.
of

Thus, while this worthy and patriot King was, by every exertion, promoting the good and happiness of his people, he was, on the 13th of February, 1436--7, basely murdered at the monastery of the Dominicans at Perth, by his detestable uncle the Earl of Athol; an event universally and deeply regreted; for James was beloved and honoured

by

* Witness the numbers drawn from the mountains of Scotland, in the late and present war, to fight the battles of Britain!

by his people; and his memory is still revered, as that of one of the best of Princes that ever reigned in Scotland.

To such worthies as have been eminent for similar virtues, the Mantuan poet, in those noble strains, has allotted the chief seats in Elysium. As a poet, patriot, and lawgiver, and the civilizer of the manners of his people, no Prince in history deserves more to be revered by his country than James I. King of Scotland.

*Hic manus ob patriam pugnando vulnera passi
Quique pii vates, et Phoebæ digna locuti, Inventas aut qui vitam excoluere per artes.*

It remains now to take notice of the works of King James I.

Joannes Major mentions some of his compositions, particularly a poem upon Jane, afterwards his Queen; and he gives the names of some of his musical pieces or Scottish songs (Cantilenæ Scotticæ) composed by him, which Major says were much esteemed in his time. Dempster mentions some other pieces of James I. Scriptit, says this author, Rythmos Latinos, et de musica.

Of all his works, those which now only remain, or at least can with certainty be distinguished as his, are the two following pieces, Christ's Kirk of the Green, and the poem on Queen Jane, called the King's Quair. Of his musical compositions, I have treated by themselves, in a dissertation on the Ancient Scottish Songs.

OF CHRIST'S KIRK OF THE GREEN.

THIS ancient poem has, by men of taste, always been esteemed a valuable relique of the old Scottish poetry. For the poetical language of the time, the ludicrous descriptions, and the free vein of genuine wit and humour which runs through it, it is, even at this day, read with pleasure. It must be valuable, were its only merit that of being descriptive of the humour and manners of the country 350 years ago.

I am aware, that the generality of late writers have attributed this poem to that gallant Prince James V. who was also a poet. I shall examine this point; and I hope I shall be able, notwithstanding many great authorities to the contrary, to make make it evident, that James I. was the author of Christ's Kirk of the Green.

I shall begin, by stating the authorities which give this poem to King James V.

The oldest of these, so far as I have been able to discover, is that of Bishop Edmund Gibson, who, Anno 1691, published an edition at Oxford of the poem of Christ's Kirk of the Green, with learned notes. The title which the Bishop gives his book, is 'CHRIST'S KIRK ON THE GREEN, composed, as is supposed, by King JAMES V.'—And, in an elegant Latin preface to this poem, he thus writes, 'Gratulor tibi lector, et Musis, regem in Parnasso, non infeliciter somniantem; de Jacobi, ejus nominis apud Scotos Quinti, familia, eruditione, scientia militari, consulendi sunt historicorum annales; principem autem hunc poesin deperiisse, nil mirum, commune id illi, cum augustissimis aliis viris, qui haud pauci carmen in deliciis habuere.'

The next authority is the editor of the last edition of Gavin Douglas's translation of Virgil's Æneis, published at Edinburgh Anno 1710, who, in his preface, thus mentions this poem; 'with notes published at Oxford some years ago, by a celebrated ‘ celebrated writer on the famous poem of King James V. entitled, Christ’s Kirk on the Green.’

On the same side is Tanner, Bishop of St Asaph, who, in his Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica, sub voce Jacobi Quinti, Regis Scotiae, mentions the poem of Christ’s Kirk of the Green as written by that Prince, and adds, ‘ Edidit, notisque illustravit cl. Edmond Gibson, Oxon. 1691.’ Tanner’s Bibliotheca was published so late as the year 1748.

These are the only ancient and positive authorities that I have seen, which attribute this poem to King James V. I shall sum up the whole arguments on that side of the question from an author of still greater weight than any of the above, that is, the learned Sir David Dalrymple, Lord Hailes, whose opinion, although he candidly does not decide, is on the same side with the above authors*.

Lord Hailes argues thus,

First, Major, in his life of King James I. mentions several pieces written by that Prince, but says nothing of Christ’s Kirk of the Green.

Secondly,

* Notes on the statutes of King James I. Act 12.

Secondly, The poem mentions 'Peebles at the Play,' which Lord Hailes is of opinion relates to a more modern aera than the age of King James I. ; And,

Lastly, Bishop Gibson and Bishop Tanner, and the editor of Gavin Douglas's Virgil, all agree in attributing the poem of Christ's Kirk of the Green to King James V.

I shall attempt to answer these arguments in their order ; and to the first,

That Major, who mentions two or three pieces, said to be composed by King James I. does not mention the poem of Christ's Kirk, is an argument entirely negative, and can infer no direct conclusion that King James I. might not have been the author of that poem, as well as of several other pieces not mentioned by Major, of which, for certain, he was the author, viz. Rythmi Latini, et de Musica, mentioned by Dempster *, and some other poems mentioned by other authors †. Major does not pretend * Dempster Hist. Ecc. cap. 713. See dissertation on Scottish songs.

† Godly and spiritual songs, published by Andro Hart ; some of which, though not distinguished in the book, are mentioned as written by King James I.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Green*. The plays were probably the golf, a game peculiar to the Scots, foot-ball, and shooting for prizes with bow and arrow. The shooting butts still remain. Archery, within the memory of man, was kept up at Peebles; and an ancient silver prize arrow, with several old medallions appended to it, as I am informed, is still preserved in the town-house of Peebles.

And to the last argument, to wit, the authorities of Bishops Gibson and Tanner, and the editor of Gavin Douglas's Virgil, all of whom attribute the above poem to King James V. All these writers are so modern, and so remote from the age of James I. or even of James V. that they can prove nothing. The oldest of these writers, Bishop Gibson, did not publish his book till the year 1691, that is, 149 years after the death of King James V. and 250 years after the death of King James I. Besides Gibson, upon whose bare assertion the other two later writers professedly rely, speaks but dubiously; his words, as on the title page of the poem, are, 'Composed, as it is supposed, by King James V.'

Having thus shown the insufficiency of the arguments and authorities which attribute this poem

to * Pratum regium.

to King James V. I now proceed to prove that it was undoubtedly the work of King James I.

The most ancient testimony for this opinion, is that of Mr George Banantyne; to whose taste and industry we owe a MS. collection of many fine old Scottish poems prior to the year 1568, which is the date of his manuscript.

In Banantyne's book, the first poem, in point of antiquity, is Christ's Kirk of the Green, which at the end of it, as was the fashion of the time, bears this signature, 'Quod King James I.'

Banantyne's manuscript was finished in 1568, within 26 years of the death of James V. * Banantyne may then be reckoned to have been contemporary with that Prince. His testimony, therefore, not only proves negatively that King James V. was not the author, but likewise, that universal tradition and report, in this last Prince's time, attributed this poem to his royal ancestor King James I.

Further, although it may not be easy to ascertain the age of any writing from its language, yet I apprehend there arises strong internal evidence from.

* 1542.

from the poem itself, that it belongs to an age more ancient than that of King James V.

King James I. was carried to England in the year 1404, and remained at the courts of King Henry IV. V. and VI. until the year 1423, when he returned to his own kingdom; some years after which, we may conjecture this poem to have been written. If it is compared with any of the poems of the age of King James V. that is, a century later, we shall find the language of the first much more antiquated and difficult to be understood than that of the latter. Let us make the comparison.

In the miscellany of ancient poems, called the Ever Green, collected chiefly from Banantyne's manuscript, the first in the book is, Christ's Kirk of the Green, and next to it are two poems, the Thistle and the Rose, and Virtue and Vice. The first made by Dunbar, upon the marriage of King James IV. and Margaret his Queen, on her coming to Scotland, and before James V. was born. The other poem is written by Bellenden, Dean of Murray, and addressed to King James V. then a youth. Let these two poems be compared with Christ's Kirk of the Green, and I apprehend that no person who is versant in the Scottish language will have

have any difficulty in pronouncing Christ's Kirk to be the most ancient of the three poems. To any Scotsman, who is tolerably acquainted with the orthography of the Scottish language about 200 years ago, there can be no difficulty in understanding every phrase, nay almost every word used in the two poems of Dunbar and Bellenden, written in King James IV. and V.'s time, while in the more ancient poem of Christ's Kirk, he must, in almost every stanza, meet with some phrase or word; the true meaning of which he must be at a loss to explain.

I am willing, at the same time, to allow, that, in a ludicrous poem, describing the humour of the country, several words used by the vulgar may affectedly have been introduced; yet, after all, this will not reconcile or make up for the apparent antiquity of phrase, as well as of words, which runs through the whole of the poem of Christ's Kirk of the Green*.

I

* A late argument I have heard urged, that James I. from his long captivity in England, could not be so well acquainted either with the language or manners of his country, as described in this poem. In answer to this, it must be considered, that James was twelve years of age when he was carried to England; that, while there, during his captivity,

I shall conclude with another argument that arises from the poem itself, which, in my apprehension, is decisive of the point in question.

Whoever reads the poem of Christ's Kirk, simply as a piece of wit and humour, comes very far short, I imagine, of the patriotic design and intention of its author. I shall endeavour to illustrate this.

In the time of James I. archery, as a military art, was practised over all Europe. The English archers were remarkably expert in the use of the bow and arrow: They were commonly stationed in the van of the army, and began the fight by a flight of arrows; and, when the enemy was thrown into disorder, they rushed in upon them with their battle axes. The celebrated victory gained by King Henry V: at Azin-court, was decided by the English archers.

King James, on his return to his own kingdom, tivity, he was constantly attended and surrounded with his countrymen, and, from the 1423, when he returned to Scotland, to the 1436, when he died, (13 years) in that, or half that space, he had time to have been well acquainted with both the language and manners of his people.

dom *, among many other abuses of the late weak government, under his uncles the Dukes of Albany, while he was a prisoner in England, found, that the practice of archery had been greatly neglected among his subjects. As this appeared to be an object of much importance to the state, James, in his very first parliament †, passes an act, ordaining ‘ Every person after 12 years of age
 ‘ to busk (i. e. equip) himself as an archer: That ‘ bow marks be maid near every paroch kirk,
 ‘ wharin, on holydays, men may cum and schutte
 ‘ at least thrice about, and have ufage of archerie;
 ‘ and wha sa uses not the said archerie, the laird
 ‘ of the land, or the sherriff, shall raise of him a
 ‘ wedder.’ We find another statute in the third parliament of the same Monarch, appointing wai-pon-schawing four times in the year, with bow and arrow.

James did not allow the matter to rest here; he knew that ridicule often has a stronger effect in exposing ignorance and correcting abuses, than penalties enjoined by law ‡.

His

* 1423.

† Parl. 1. act 18.

‡ Ridiculum acri

Fortius et melius magnas plerumque fecat res. HOR.

His poem of Christ's Kirk, is almost one continued ironical satire upon the awkward management of the bow, and the neglect into which archery had then fallen in Scotland. To make his subjects sensible of the disgrace they incurred by their shameful ignorance of the use of their arms, and to re-establish the discipline of the bow amongst them, was an object worthy the care of this wise and warlike Monarch. The continuator of Fordun's Scoti-Chronicon remarks, that, notwithstanding his attention to this, that, after his death, archery declined: Post cujus mortem (Jacobi Primi) lugubrem, omnes quasi indifferenter arcus et arcilia rejecerunt, et cum lanceis equitare se dederunt: Ita quod nunc in curia magnatis, ubi sunt centum homines, et octoginta lanceas, et vix sex reperies arcitenentes.

A remarkable discovery, made a little before this time, hastened the downfall of archery, I mean the invention of gun-powder, and the use of artillery.

The first siege of importance in which cannon seems to have been employed, was the famous siege of Orleans by the English, in which the Earl of Salisbury, the English general, was killed by a cannon-

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

From this it appears obvious, that the use of the bow in war was, in the reign of James V. quite laid aside. The fine irony then, so proper for ridiculing the shameful want of skill in archery, which runs through the poem of Christ's Kirk; is lost, if applied to any other aera than that of James I.; more particularly so, if applied to that of James V. when fire-arms were introduced and encouraged by the public laws of the kingdom. From the whole of this evidence, I think there can remain no difficulty in agreeing to the positive testimony of Banantyne, the contemporary of King James V. that his ancestor King James I. was the author of Christ's Kirk of the Green.

In the subsequent edition of this poem, I have followed Banantyne's MS. Whether or no, when he made his manuscript collection in 1568, there was any printed edition of this; or any of the other poems in his collection, I have not been able to learn.

In the following edition I have adhered scrupulously even to the orthography of Banantyne; and I have consulted, as to the meaning of obscure and obsolete words, of which many occur, several glossaries of the Scottish language, more particularly
that

that prefixed to the last folio edition of Gavin Douglas's translation of the Æneis of Virgil, which is said to be the work of the late learned Mr Thomas Ruddiman, though his modesty restrained him from putting his name to the most learned, copious, and best glossary of the Scottish language.

Bishop Edmond Gibson, as before observed, published, anno 1691, his edition of this poem, in the black or Saxon letter, printed at Oxford. Before this time, there were truly some Scottish editions of it printed. It appears, however, that the Bishop has followed none of them, but has taken his edition from some very incorrect copy printed in England, as it is materially different from the Scottish, not only in the orthography, but in the phrase and meaning of many passages, which it is obvious the editor has not understood.

We have already remarked, that the English and Scottish languages were derived from the same parent, the ancient Saxon. In the progress of time, however, frequent variations must of course have arisen in the same language, as spoken in the two separate kingdoms, so as to keep them distinct and separate, though radically the same language. Obsolete words from the ancient language revived;

new words started up; and different dialects prevailed in each kingdom. Bishop Gibson, by his Latin preface, appears to be an elegant writer in that language; and his learned notes on this poem shew that he was likewise skilled in the ancient Saxon and northern languages; yet he seems to have known little of the Scottish language, either in its phraseology or dialect, at the above æra. From a want of knowledge of the manners of that country, he palpably gives a wrong sense to many Scottish words. Many deviations from the original Scottish poem, as in Banantyne's MS. occur in his edition: Many words, even verses, are altered; and one whole stanza, the 8th in the original, is altogether omitted. There are three additional stanzas in the Bishop's edition which are not in Banantyne's MS. One of these, being the 12th of this edition, as it naturally connects with the preceding stanzas, I have taken into the text, as it seems to contain the same humour of the poem, although I hesitate to pronounce it genuine. The other two, following the 21st of the present, I take to be clearly spurious.

Of the POEM made by King JAMES I. on JANE, afterwards his Queen, while he was a prisoner in England.

THIS ancient poem; though mentioned by several writers of the life of James I. and well known in his time, yet has lain hid for these three centuries, and probably would have shared the same fate with most of his other compositions, now lost, but for the preservation of one single manuscript copy of it, which is now in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. The title which this manuscript bears is ‘The QUAIR, maid be King JAMES of Scotland the First, callit THE KING’S QUAIR. Maid qn. his Ma. was in England.’

By what accident this poem came into the editor’s hands, it may be proper to give some account. Although all the Scottish writers mention King James I. as the author of many poetical pieces, yet, as in the age of James, and for a century after, printing was not introduced into Britain, it is not to be wondered that most of his pieces should now be lost.

Joannes Major, in his History of Scotland, mentions this poem of King James I. thus: ‘Artificio- ‘sum

‘sum libellum de Rēgina dum captivus erat composuit, antequam eam in conjugem duxerat.’

Dempster also, in his Historia Ecclesiastica, mentions, amongst the works of James, this poem, Super Uxore futura. A later writer, Tanner Bishop of St. Asaph, in his Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica, mentions it still more particularly, under the article Jacobus Stuartus Primus Rex Scotiae, thus: ‘Lamentatio facta dum in Anglia fuit Rex.’ It appears that Bishop Tanner had both seen and read this poem, as he recites the first line of it,

‘Heigh in the Hevynis figure circolare.’

M. S. Bib. Bod. Selden. Archiv. B. 24. and ‘In fine poematis (says Tanner) Gowerum et Chaucerum mirificē laudat’—Rex.

The above authorities concurring in mentioning this poem, and the particular reference to its being amongst the Seldenian manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, excited the editor’s curiosity to search for it. After several fruitless attempts, on his applying to an ingenious young gentleman, a student of Oxford, he undertook the task, and found the MS. accordingly. From a very accurate copy made by him, the present publication is given.

From the title of the poem, it may be presumed that, in the age in which it was composed, it was held in estimation by the public. The word Quair, in the old English language, signifies a book; hence, by way of eminence, this poem was distinguished by the title of the King's book; and, in that age, it must have been considered as a great work.

As to its merit, the Public, after due consideration of the age in which it was written, just beginning to emerge from that darkness that had long obscured the western hemisphere, will judge. Thus far may, I think, be said, that, for the invention and fancy, the genuine simplicity of sentiment, and the descriptive poetry which runs through it, it is a remarkable work.

The design, or theme, is the Royal poet's love for his beautiful mistress Jane, with whom he became enamoured while a prisoner at the castle of Windsor. The recollection of the misfortunes of his youth; his early and long captivity, the incident which gave rise to his love, its purity, constancy, and happy issue, are all set forth by way of allegorical vision, according to the reigning taste of the age of King James I. as we find from the poems of Chaucer, Gower, and Lydgate, his contemporaries.

The

The taste for poetical allegory and vision was derived from the Provençal writers, which probably was introduced into England by Richard I. who ranks among the most eminent of the Troubadours. It was highly in fashion in the age of Lydgate, Gower, and Chaucer, and continued to be so down to the age of Spencer, and the end of Queen Elizabeth's reign. Every story had its moral, and was told in the way of allegory and vision. The machinery of these poems were fiery dragons, giants, and fairies; the scenery enchanted forests, castles, and lakes. The virtues, vices, and passions were personified, and the mythology was a mixture of the Greek, Roman, Arabian, and Christian. The advancement of learning has long banished this false taste; and it cannot be denied, that perhaps the meanest modern composition, even the flimsy flowers of a monthly miscellany, will better stand the test of criticism; yet how fleetly do these short-lived embryos vanish, never to appear again, at the approach of the great visionary figures, called up by our old bards! How is the imagination carried away, in their lofty flights into the regions of fancy, adorned with the glow of genuine poetry!

In pursuing the several parts of the allegorical vision in King James's poem, perhaps it may appear

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

with more tender delicacy, than the buxom Rosial of Chaucer.

The Seldenian manuscript, from which the present copy is taken, appears to be of an old date; in many places it was not easy to find out the proper sense of the passage, and in many passages it was obviously erroneous. The writer of the old MS. seems to have been but little acquainted with classical learning; hence it appears, that he has often erroneously substituted one name in place of another, of which many gross instances occur. Many other apparent inaccuracies run through it, which, however, ought not always to be placed to the account of the transcriber: The poet himself is answerable for many liberties which he takes in his poem, which the custom of that age gave a sanction to.

Great freedom is used in the orthography or spelling, which is often various in the same word. Not unfrequently words are omitted or understood, which the reader is left to supply, so as to make out the sense of the passage.

To such as are not versant in the old poets, Chaucer, Gower, &c. the numbers of the verses will will often appear to be unequal, as the apostrophe's, signs of contraction, elisions, and marks for the division of the syllables for the sake of the verse, which were used by the old poets, are now lost. For understanding of these, I cannot do better than recommend to the reader the excellent general rules prefixed to the learned glossary in Gavin Douglas's Virgil.

For the ease of the reader, I have divided the poem into canto's, according to the various episodes contained in it; and, throughout the whole, I have, by explanatory notes, endeavoured to render the sense, frequently obscure, as easy as was in my power. In many places I am afraid I have not been so successful as I could have wished.

It must be confessed, that many of the beauties of this ancient poem must escape us, from the mutability of the language in the space of near 400 years; an imperfection attendant on every living language. What Waller says, in his elegant verses on Chaucer, in the last century, may, with equal force, be applied to the poetical remains of King James I. of Scotland:

Poets, that lasting marble seek,
Must carve in Latin, or in Greek :
We write in sand ; our language grows ;
And, like the tide, our work o'erflows.
Chaucer his sense can only boast,
The glory of his numbers lost !
Years have defac'd his matchless strain,
And yet he did not write in vain.

Upon the whole : If the present publication, which has been the amusement of leisure hours, and a relief from more serious occupations, shall entertain the few who have a relish or esteem for the genuine poetical productions of their ancestors, it will sufficiently reward my pains, in the satisfaction I shall have of having rescued from oblivion this genuine remain of the works of a genius, one of the best, and wisest of Kings ! one of the most illustrious characters of his age !

THE

T H E

K I N G ' S Q U A I R .

M A I D B E

K I N G J A M E S O F S C O T L A N D ,

T H E F I R S T ,

2<sup>n</sup>. his Ma. was in England.

K I N G ' s Q U A I R .

C A N T O I .

I.

HE I G H in the hevynis figure circulare
 The rody sterres twynkling as the fyre:
 And in Aquary * Citherea the clere;

Rynfid hir tressis like the goldin wyre,
 That late tofore, in faire and fresche atyre,
 Thro' Capricorn heved hir hornis bright,
 North northward approchit the myd nyght.

II.

Quhen as I lay in bed allone waking,
 New partit out of flepe a lyte tofore,

Fell

* Citherea.] This must be an error of the transcriber of the Seldenian MS. The Royal Poet must have wrote Cynthia, which agrees with the descriptive words in the 6th line, 'Heved hir, hornis bright;' but could not be applicable to Citherea, the planet Venus in that age. Galileo, about the year 1608, near 200 years after James I. was the first who, by the new invention of the telescope, a little before that time, discovered that the planet Venus had phases as the moon. The description of the season in this stanza is extremely poetical.

Fell me to mynd of many diverse thing
 Of this and that, can I not say quharefore,
 Bot slepe for craft in erth myt I no more ;
 For quhich as tho' coude I no better wyle,
 Bot toke a boke to rede upon a quhile :

III.

Off quhich the name is clepit properly

* Boece, efter him that was the compiloure,

Schewing

* Boece.] Anicius Severinus Boethius, a senator, and of consular dignity, flourished at Rome in the reign of Theodoric King of the Ostrogoths, after Augustulus, the last of the Roman emperors, had resigned the empire. He was accused and banished to Ticinum, now Pavia, by Theodoric, for having designs of restoring the liberty of his country, and, three years after, was beheaded. His life and manners were those of a philosopher, through a long series of misfortunes, which he bore with remarkable patience and fortitude. While he was in banishment, he wrote his book De Consolatione Philosophiae. His tomb is still preserved in the church of St. Augustine at Pavia, on which is inscribed the following epitaph :

Maeonia et Latia lingua clarissimus, et qui

Consul eram hic permissus in exilium,

Et quod mors rapuit, Probitas me vexit ad auras,

Et nunc fama viget, maxima viget opus.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

And than how he in his b poetly report;
In philosophy c can him to confort.

V.

For quich thot I in purpose at my boke,
To borowe a slepe at thilk time began,
Or ever I d stent my best was more to loke
Upon the writing of this nobil man,
That in himself the full recover<sup>e</sup> wan
Of his infortune, poverti, and distresse,
And in tham set his verray f seckerneffe.

VI.

And so the vertew of his zouth before
Was in his age the ground of his delytis:
Fortune the bak him turnyt, and therefore
He makith joye and confort yt he quitis
Of their unsekir warldis appetitis,

And

b Poetly report.] This is exactly copied from the MS. As Boethius introduces every chapter of his book with a lyric ode, our author means by the above, his poetical report, or theme. Such licenses of making new words, for the sake of the verse, are not unfrequent with our poet, and others of that age.

c Can him to confort.] Was able to comfort himself.

d Stent.] Stopt or paused.

e Wan.] Won, gained.

f Seckerneffe.] Security, firmness, certainty.

And so g aworth he takith his penance,
And of his vertew maid it suffisance.

VII.

With mony a nobil reson as him likit
Enditing in his fair latyne tong,
So full of fruyte, and b rethorikly pykit,
Quhich to declare my i scole is over zong;
Therefore I lát him pas, and in my tong
Procede I will agayn to my k sentence
Of my mater, and leve all incidence.

VIII.

The long nyt beholding, as I faide,
Myn eyne gari to smert for studying;
My boke I schet, and at my hede it laide,
And doun I lay, bot ony tarying,
This mater new in my mynd rolling,
This is to feyne how yt eche estate,
As Fortune lykith, thame will translate.

IX.

g Aworth.] Worthily.

b Rethorickly pykit.] Rethorically chosen.

i My scole.] My learning.

k Sentence.] I will proceed with my theme, or subject.

IX.

For sothe it is, y<sup>t</sup>, on her <sup>l</sup>tolter quhele,
 Every wight <sup>m</sup>cleverith in his stage,
 And failyng foting oft quhen hir <sup>n</sup>lest rele
 Sum up, sum doun, is non estate nor age
 Ensured more, the Prynce than the page,
 So uncouthly hir <sup>o</sup>werdes she divideth,
 Namely in zouth, that seildum ought provideth.

X.

Among thir thoughtis rolling to and fro,
 Fell me to mynd of my fortune and <sup>p</sup>ure,
 In tender zouth how sche was first my fo,
 And eft my frende, and how I gat <sup>q</sup>recure

Of

<sup>l</sup> Tolter quhele.] Tottering wheel of Fortune.

<sup>m</sup> Clivereth.] Cliveth or, clings to—or, perhaps, clambereth, or climbs.

<sup>n</sup> Lest rele.] Least motion.—Lest signifies to will or incline, in old writings.—It may therefore read, 'When Fortune inclines to turn her wheel.

<sup>o</sup> Hir werdes.] Her gifts, destinies, or wierds.

<sup>p</sup> Ure.] Or Ere, trouble. ~ Hence urjesom, G. Doug. p. 450, l. 6. Hence also Irie, Irkie, Iresum; from the Gaelic Earadh, fear.

<sup>q</sup> Recure.] Recourse, relief.

Of my distresse, and all my r aventure
 I gan ourhayle, yt langer flepe ne rest
 Ne myt, I nat, sa were my wittis s wrest.

XI.

t For-wakit and u for-wallouit thus musing,
x Wery for-lyin, I lestnyt sodaynlye,
 And sone I herd the bell to matins ryng,
 And up I rase na langer wald I lye;
 Bot now y how trowe ze fuich a fantasye
 Fell me to my mynd, yt ay me thot the bell
 Said to me, z Tell on man, quhat the befell.

XII.

r Aventure.] All the incidents of my life I began to recollect.

s Wrest.] Wrested, or tortured.

t For-wakit.] Kept awake; or wakerise, according to the Scottish phrase.

u For-wallouit.] Wearied; tired; in ill plight, G. D.
 p. 201. l. 5.

x Wery For-lyin.] Weary of lying in bed, G. D. p. 330.
 l. 5.

y How trowe ye.] How think ye?

z Tell on, man.] Proceed to rehearse.

XII.

a Thot I tho' to myself, quhat may this be?

This is my awin ymaginacion,
This is no b lyf yt spekis unto me,

It is a bell or that impressioun
Of my thot causith this illusion,
That dooth me think so nycely in this wise.
And so befell as I schall zou c devise.

XIII.

Determyt furth therewt in myn' entent,

d Sen I thus have ymagynit of this foun,
And in my tyme more ink and paper spent

e To lyte effect, I tuke conclusioun
Sum new thing to write; I fet me doun,

And furth wt all my pen in hand I tuke,

f And maid a  $\dagger$  and thus begouth my buke.

XIV.

a Tho't I. Abbreviation for Thought I.

b It is no lyf.] It is no living person.—This figure is often used by our poet.

c Devise.] Advise, or explain.

d Sen.] Since.

e Lyte.] Little.—I tuke conclusioun, I concluded; determined.

f And maid' a  $\dagger$ .] Made the sign of the Holy Cross.—

XIV.

Though zouth of nature indegest,
 Unrypit fruyte wt windis variable,
 Like to the bird y<sup>t</sup> fed is on the nest,
 And can not fleē, of wit wayke and unſtable,
 To fortune both, and to infortune g hable,
 Wist thou thy paynē to cum and thy travaille,
 For forow and dredē wele my<sup>t</sup> thou wepe and waile.

XV.

James was a religious prince, and, as was the custom of the time, thought it becoming in him thus to call for the Divine aid, or a benediction upon his work.

g To infortune hable.] Liable to misfortune.

h Wist thou thy payne to cum.] Knewest thou thy pain to come—Well might'st thou weep and wail—Thus thy comfort stands in thy uncertainty or ignorance of the future. The reader will not be displeas'd to see this principle illustrated in the richest glow of poetry.

Heaven from all creatures-hides the book of fate,
 All but the page prescribed, their present state,
 From brutes, what men; from men, what spirits know,
 Or who would suffer being here below?
 The lamb thy riot dooms to bleed to-day;
 Had he thy reason, would he skip and play?
 Pleas'd to the last he crops the flowery food,
 And licks the hand just rais'd to shed his blood.
 Oh blindness! to the future kindly given,
 That each may fill the circle mark'd by heaven.

XV.

Thus stant thy confort in i unsekerneffe,
 And wantis it, y<sup>t</sup> fuld the reule and gye,
 Ry<sup>t</sup> as the schip that failith k sterelefs,
 Upon the rok most to harmes hye,
 For lak of it y<sup>t</sup> fuld bene her supplie;
 So standis thou here in this warldis rage,
 And wantis y<sup>t</sup> fuld gyde all thy viage.

XVI.

I mene this of myself, as in partye,
 / Though nature gave me suffisance in zouth,
 The rypenefs of reson lak I
 To governe with my will, so lyte I couth,
 Quhen sterelefs to travaille I begouth,
 Amang the wavis of this world to drive,
 And how the case anon I will describe.

XVII.

With doubtfull hert, amang the rokkis blake,
 My feble boté full fast to steré and rowe,

Helples

i Unsekerneffe.] Uncertainty.

k That saileth sterelefs.] Without a steersman at the helm.

/ Though nature gave me suffisance, or sufficient reason for my years, yet lack I the rypenefs of reason or experience to govern my will.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

XIX.

At my begyning first I clepe and call
r To zou Clio and to zou Polyme,
 With s Thesiphone goddis and sistris all,
 In nowmer IX. as bokis specifye,
 In this processe my wilsum wittis t gye,
 And with zour bry<sup>t</sup> lanternis wele convoye
 My pen to write my turment and my joye.

THE

r Polyme.] For Polymnia, the Muse of Harmony.—Our poet, with the old bards, use great freedom with proper names, for the sake of verse.

s Thesiphone.] The transcriber has here made a very gross blunder, in substituting Thesiphone, one of the Furies, in place of Terpsichore, one of the nine Muses, which our poet expressly here invokes.

t Gye.] Guide.

T H E
K I N G ' S Q U A I R .

C A N T O II.

His intended Voyage to France.

I.

IN vere y<sup>t</sup> full of v<sup>e</sup>rtu is and gude,
Quhen nature first begyneth hir <sup>u</sup> enprise,
That quhilum was be cruel frost and flude,
And schouris scharp opprest in mony wise,
And * Synthius gyneth to aryse
Heigh in the est, a morrowe soft and suete,
Upward his course to drive in Ariete.

II.

Passit bot myd-day foure greis evin
Of lenth and brede his angel wingis bryt,

He

i In vere.] In the spring.

u Enprise.] When nature begins to exert her powers.

\ And Synthius, &c.]* When the sun enters into the sign Aries, or the middle of March.—The description of the season, in these two stanzas, is very poetical.

He spred upon the ground doun fro the hevin,
 That for gladnesse and confort of the fight,
 And with the tiklyng of his hete and light,
 The tender flouris opynit thame and sprad,
 And in thair nature thankit him for glad.

III.

y Not far passit the state of innocence
 Bot nere about the nowmer of zeiris thre,
 Were it caufit throu hevinly influence
 Of Goddis will, or other casualtee,
 Can I not say, bot out of my contree,
 By thair avise yt had of me the cure
 Be see to pas, tuke I my aventure.

IV.

y Passit the state of innocence three years.] This is a vague manner of expressing his age. Bellenden, arch-dean of Murray, the translator of Boethius, by desire of King James V. says James I. was nine years old when he was taken prisoner in March 1404-5. This does not agree with our other historians, who say he was forty-four years old when he was killed Anno 1436. Supposing, by our Poet's own account, that he was three years past nine, or the age of innocence, he was at this time twelve years of age, which nearly agrees with the generality of the historians, none of whom, however, that I have seen, mention the year in which K. James was born.

IV.

z Purvait-of all y<sup>t</sup> was us. necessarye,

With wynd at will, up airely by the morowe,
Streight unto schip no longere wold we tarye,

The way we tuke the tyme I tald to forowe,
With mony fare wele, and a Sanct Johne to borowe
Of falowe and frende, and thus wt one assent,
We pullit up saile and furth our wayis went.

V.

Upon the wevis weltring to and fro,

So infortunate was we that b fremyt day,
That maugre plainly quethir we wold or no,
Wt strong hand by forse schortly to say,
Of inmyis taken and led away,

We weren all, and bro<sup>t</sup> in thaire contrée,
c Fortune it schupe non othir wayis to be.

VI.

z Purvait.] Provided.

a Sanct John to borowe.] Saint John be your protector, or cautioner. Borowe signifies a pledge.—It appears to have been an ordinary benediction.

b Fremyt day.] Strange, adverse day.

c Fortune it schupe.] Fortune shaped, or cut out.

VI.

d Quhare as in strayte ward, and in strong prison,
So fere forth of my lyf the hevy lyne,

W<sup>t</sup>out

d Our author here may be thought to use his poetical license, in exaggerating the strictness of his confinement during his captivity in England. The following mandates of Henry IV. and V. concerning James's confinement, sufficiently vindicate the King of Scots' complaint on that head :

Hollingshed says, that, on James's being captured on the coast of England, he and his attendants (the Earl of Orkney and others) were sent prisoners to the Tower of London. After this we have the following orders, concerning his confinement, from Rymer's Foedera :

“ De filio Regis Scotiae custodiendo. ”

“ Rex Constabulario Turris suae Londoniae. Salutem. ”

“ Mandamus vobis quod filium Regis Scotiae, et Grassinum ap Glendordy, in Turri praedicta sub custodia vestra existentes, dilecto et fideli nostro, Ricardo Domino de Grey deliberetis, usque castrum Nottinghamiae ducendos, ibidem quousque aliud pro ipsorum deliberatione duxerimus demandandum custodiendos. ”

“ Teste Rege apud Westmonasterium decimo die Junii 1407. ”

“ Per ipsum Regem. ”

Rymer, tom. 8. p. 484.

On the accession of K. Henry V. to the throne, we have the following order :

“ Henricus,

“ Henricus, Dei gratia, &c. Constabulario Turris suae Londoniae: Salutem.

“ Mandamus vobis, quod Jacobum Regem Scotiae, Mordok Comitem de Fife, et Willielmum Douglas de Dalketh, et Willielmum Giffard Armigerum, ab eo qui ipsos vobis ex parte nostra liberavit, recipiatis, et ipsos, in Turri praedicta salvó et securé, quousque aliud a nobis inde habueritis, in mandatis custodiri faciatis.

“ Teste meipso apud Westmonasterium vig. imo die Martii Anno regni imo 1413-4.”—Rymer, tom. 9. p. 2.

“ Henricus Rex, custodi Turris nostrae Londoniae. Salutem.

“ Mandamus vobis, quod Regem Scotiae, et Magistrum de Fitz de Scotia, in Turri praedicta, sub custodia vestra, de mandato nostro detentos, Constabulario castri nostri de Wyndesore, ibidem sine dilatione, liberetis, in castro praedicto salvó et securé, quousque pro eorum deliberatione aliter duxerimus, ordinandum custodiendos.

“ Teste Rege apud Westmonasterium tertio die Augusti 1414.”—Rymer, tom. 9. p. 44.

King Henry, from his accession to the throne, had meditated his invasion of France, which he accordingly put in execution in August 1415, while King James was prisoner at Windsor. Henry saw the advantage of having James in his hands, as a pledge for preventing the Scottish Regent from making incursions on the border while he was in France. In this view, the confinement of the Scottish Prince would no doubt be the closer, during Henry's absence in his first expedition to France; and, probably, it was at this period, that, on viewing the beautiful Jane, in the garden under the castle of

Wtout confort in sorowe, abandoune
 The e secund sistere, lukit hath to tuyne,
 Nere, by the space of zeris twice nyne,
 Till Jupiter his merci list advert,
 And send confort in relefche of my smert.

VII.

Quhare as in ward full oft I wold bewaille
 My dedely lyf, full of peyne and penance,
 Saing ry<sup>t</sup> thus, / quhat have I gilt to faille,
 My fredome in this warld and my plesance?
 Sen every wight has thereof suffifance,
 That I behold, and I a creature
 Put from all this, hard is myn aventure?

VIII.

The bird, the beste, the fisch eke in the see,
 They lyve in fredome everich in his kynd;

And

of Windsor, he first became enamoured with her. We may thus fix the aera of the commencement of this poem, which it is probable was written at different times, and often interrupted, as no doubt his amour and courtship was, by his being carried to France by King Henry, in his second and third

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

By the come I to joye out of turment,
 Bot now to purpose of my first entent k,

XI.

Bewailing in my chamber thus allone,
 Despeired of all joye and remedye,
 For-tirit of my thot and wo-begone,
 And to the wyndow gan I walk in hye,
 To see the world and folk yt went forbye,
 As for the tymē though I of mirthis fude,
 Myt have nō more, to luke it did me gude.

XII.

Now was there maid fast by the Touris wall
 A gardyn faire, and in the corneris fet,
 Ane herbere grene, with wandis long and small,
 Railit about, and so wt treis fet

Was

k A fine apostrophe in praise of early morning exercise!

[Herbere.] From Herbarium—a garden-plot set with plants and flowers—a grove with an arbour, railed with trellis-work, and close set about with trees. We have here a sketch of the mode or taste in gardening in the remote age of Henry V, in England. The royal garden, under the castle walls of Windsor, was laid out in flower-plots and alleys, or walks with arbours of lattice or trellis-work at the ends or corners of the walks; the whole surrounded with hawthorn hedges interspersed with juniper.

Was all the place, and hawthorn hegis knet,
 That lyf was non walkyng there forbye,
 That myt<sup>t</sup> w<sup>t</sup>in scarce any wight aspye.

XIII.

So thick the beuis and the leves grene
 Beschadit all the allyes y<sup>t</sup> there were,
 And myddis every herbere myt<sup>t</sup> be sene
 The scharp grene fuate jenepere,
 Growing so fair w<sup>t</sup> branchis here and there,
 That, as it semyt to a lyf w<sup>t</sup>out,
 The bewis spred the herbere all about.

XIV.

And on the small grene twistis fat
 The lytil fuate nyghtingale, and song
 So loud and clere, the <sup>m</sup> ympnis consecrat
 Of luvis use, now soft now lowd among,
 That all the gardynis and the wallis rong
 Ry<sup>t</sup> of thaire song, <sup>n</sup> and on the copill next
 Of thaire fuate armony, and lo the text.

XV.

m Ympnis.] Hymns consecrated to Love.—Ch. G. D.

n And on they copill next.] This seems to be obscure.—May it not be, “Anon they copill or pair together, and join in sweet harmony, and lo the text or burden of their song?”

Cantus XV.

Worſchippe ze yt loveris bene this May,

For of zour blifs the o kalendis are begonne,
And ſing w<sup>t</sup> us, away winter away,

Come ſomer come, the ſuete ſefon and ſonne,
Awake, for ſchame! yt have p zour hevynis wonne,
And amourouſly liſt up zour hedis all,
Thank luſe yt liſt zou to his merci call.

XVI.

Quhen thai this ſong had ſong a q littil thrawe,

Thai ſtent a quhile, and therew<sup>t</sup> unafraid,
As I beheld, and keſt myn eyen r a lawe,

From beugh to beugh, thay hippit and thai plaid,
And freſchly in thair birdis kynd araid,
Thaire fatheris new, and s fret thame in the ſonne,
And thankit luſe, yt had thair t makis wonne.

XVII.

o Kalends.] The beginning of your blifs, May, the month of love.

p Zour hevynis wonne.] Ye that have attained your higheſt blifs, by winning your mates.—See the laſt line of the next ſtanza.

q A-littill thrawe.] A ſhort ſpace.

r Keſt myn eyen a lawe.] Caſt mine eyes below.

s Fret thame.] Raiſed or ſpread them in the ſun. Thus fret work, or raiſed work.

t Thair makis.] Their mates.

XVII.

This was the plane ditie of thaire note,

And therew<sup>e</sup> all unto myself I thot,

“ Quhat lufe is this, that makis birdis dote?

Quhat may this be, how cummyth it of ought?

Quhat nedith it to be so dere ybought?

It is nothing, trowe I, bot * feynit chere,

ʒ And that one list to counterfeten chere.

XVIII.

Eft wold I think, O Lord, quhat may this be?

That lufe is of so noble myt and kynde,

Lufing his folk, and suich prosperitee

Is it of him, as we in bukis fynd,

May he oure hertis fetten and unbynd:

Hath he upon our hertis suich maistrye?

Or all this is bot feynit fantasye?

XIX.

u What lufe is this.] What love can this be?

x Feynit chere.] Feigned mirth or chearfulness.

y And that one list.] The sense here is obscure. I suspect there may be an error in the word one list, in place of me list, which list me, or inclines me to think it may be only counterfeited chere, or mirth.

The King's confinement, one would think, must have been very strict, and his time wholly engrossed by study, that, before this, he had never felt the flame of love.

XIX.

For giff he be of so grete excellence,

That he of every wight hath cure and charge,
 Quhat have I gilt to him, or doon offense?

That I am z thrall, and birdis gone at large,
 Sen him to serve he myt fet my corage,

And, gif he be not so, than may I feyne
 Quhat makis folk to jangill of him in veyne?

XX.

Can I not ellis fynd bot giff yt he

Be lord, and, as a god, may lyve and regne,
 To bynd, and louse, and maken thrallis free,

Than wold I pray his blisful grace benigne,
<sup>a</sup> To hable me unto his service digne,

And evermore for to be one of tho

Him trewly for to serve in wele and wo.

XXI.

And therewt kest I doun myn eye ageyne,

Quhare as I saw walkyng under the Toure,

Full

z That I am thrall-prisoner.

<sup>a</sup> To hable.] To enable me; make me fit.

Full secretely, new cumyn hir b to pleyne,
 The fairest or the freschest zoung floure
 That ever I sawe, methot, before that houre,
 For quhich sodayne c abate, anon d astert,
 The blude of all my body to my hert.

XXII.

And though I stood abaisit tho a lyte,
 No wonder was; for quhy? my wittis all
 Were so ouercome w<sup>t</sup> plesance and delyte,
 Only through latting of myn eyen fall,
 That sudaynly my hert become hir thrall,
 For ever of free wyll, for of e manace
 There was no takyn in hir suete face.

XXIII.

b Cumyn hir to pleyne.] Coming forth to make her morning oraisons. To pray, petition, playn, or complain; are used in the same sense. Thus G. Douglas, Pról. to 13. Æneid:

“ The lark descendis from the skyis hicht,
 “ Singand hir complene sang astir hir gise,
 “ To tak hir rest.”——

c Sodayne abate.] Suddenly I was cast down, and dejected. From the Fr. abbatu.—Abaisit, in the next stanza, is derived from the same original.

d Anon astert.] And then or immediately started the whole blood of my body to my heart.

e For of manace.] For, of forbidding pride or haughtiness.—She had nothing in her sweet countenance.—Manace, or minace, from the Lat. minare.

XXIII.

And in my hede I drew ryt hastily,
 And eft fones I lent it out ageyne,
 And faw hir walk that verray womanly,
 With no wight mo, bot only women tueyne,
 Than gan I studye in myself and feyne,
 Ah! fuate are ze a worldly creature,
 Or hevingly thing in likenesse of nature f?

XXIV.

Or ar ze god Cupidis owin princesse?

And cumyn are to louse me out of band,

Or

f In the Prince's situation, viewing from his window, in the Tower of Windsor, the beautiful Jane walking below in the palace-garden, he could not with propriety have given a minute description of her features; but it will be difficult for imagination to form a more lovely idea of beauty than what our poet has drawn, under the figurative description of

The fairest and the freshest young floure

That ever I saw.—

A picture expressive of beauty, health, and blooming youth! —With more propriety he describes the sweetness of her countenance, resulting from a view of the whole, without the least expression of pride or haughtiness, and the sudden passion with which her beauty inspired him. Her golden locks, and white enamelled neck, with her head-dress, attire, and ornaments, are particularly and most poetically painted in the following 27th, 28th, 29th, and 30th stanzas.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Unknawin how or quhat was best to done,
 So ferre I fallying into lufis dance,
 That sodeynly my wit, my contenānce,
 My hert, my will, my nature, and my mynd,
 Was changit clene ry<sup>t</sup> in ane other kind.

XXVII.

Of hir array the form gif I sal write,
 Toward her goldin haire; and rich atyre,
 In fretwise couchit w<sup>t</sup> perlis quhite,
 And grete<sup>k</sup> balas lemyng as the fyre,
 W<sup>t</sup> mony ane emerant and faire saphire,
 And on hir hede a chaplet fresch of hewe,
 Of plumys partit rede; and quhite, and blewe.

XXVIII.

i In fretwise couchit.] Hid or couchit with fretwork of pearls.

k Grete balas lemyng as the fyre.] Precious stones, sparkling as fire.—Balay is so called from the place whence this stone is brought, called Balassia in India, situated to the north of Bengal. Urry's Gloss. on Chaucer.

“No saphire of Inde; no rubie rich of price,”

“Nor emerand so grene, nor Balas.”——

CH. Palace of Love.

“And on her hede a chaplet fresche of hewe,

“Of plumys partit rede, and quhite, and blewe,

“Full of quaking spangis bright as gold.”——

It is pleasant to observe here the similarity of the Princess Jane's head-dress to the mode at present used by our modern ladies,

XXVIII.

Full of quaking spangis bryt as gold,
 Forgit of fchap like to the m amorettis,
 So new, so fresch, so pleasant to behold,
 The plumys eke like to the n floure jonettis;
 And other of fchap, like to the floure jonettis;
 And, above all this, there was, wele I wote,
 Beautee eneuch to mak a world to dote.

XXIX.

About hir neck, quhite as the o fyre amaille;
 A gudelic cheyne of small p orfeverye,

Quhare

ladies, in adorning their heads with flouers, plumes of various colours, spangles, and jewels set in shapen of flowers.

m Forgit of shape like to the amorettis.] Made in the form of a love-knot or garland.—Thus Chaucer's description of Cupid, in the Romaunt of the Rose:

“ This God of Love of his fascion——

“ ——Not yclad in silke was he,

“ But all in flouris and flourettis,

“ Ypainted all with amorettis.”

n Like to the floure jonettis:] What flower our poet here alludes to I do not know: By his repeating it, he seems to be fond of the name; perhaps the jonquil, a May flower. Or he might have dubbed some flower, then worn by her, with the name janetta, in honour of his mistress the Lady Jane.

o Her neck quhite as the fyre amaille.] I suspect the last two words to be erroneously transcribed. The original probably is, “ Quhite as the fayre anamaill, or enamell.”

p A cheyne of small orfeverye.] A chain of gold-work. From the Fr. orfeuveries

Quhare by there hang a ruby, q wtout faille
 Like to ane hert schapin verily,
 That, as a sperk of r lowe so wantonly
 Semyt birnyng upon hir quhite throte,
 Now gif there was gud pertye, God it wote.

XXX:

And for to walk that fresche Mayes morowe,
 Ane huke she had upon her tiffew quhite,
 That gudeliare had not bene sene to forowe,
 As I suppose, and girt sche was alyte;
 Thus halflyng lowse for haste, to suich delyte,
 It was to see her zouth in gudelihed,
 That for rudenes to speke thereof I drede.

XXXI.

In hir was zouth, beautee, wt humble aport,
 Bountee, richeffe, and womanly faiture,

God

q A rubie without faille.] Without flaw.

r As a spark of lowe.] Bright as a spark of fire, seem'd burning upon her white neck.—A beautiful simlie!

s Thus halflyng loose.] This description of his mistress, in her loose morning attire, her robe fastened with a hook or clasp, in a negligent mode, and halflown loose, which gave her lover (unseen) the pleasure of spying some hidden beauties, which the poet with great delicacy only hints at, is finely and modestly expressed.

God better wote than my pen can report,
 Wifdome, largeffe eftate, and conyng fure
 In every point, fo guydit hir mefure,
 In word, in dede, in fchap, in contenance,
 That nature my<sup>t</sup> no more hir childe auance<sup>t</sup>,

XXXII.

As no doubt our poet must have feen, and had in his eye, Chaucer's Court of Love, when he wrote his own poem, for the entertainment of the reader, and by way of comparison with our poet's description of his mistress, in the foregoing stanzas, I shall transcribe, from Chaucer's Court of Love, the description which he there gives of the beauty of his mistress Rosiall:

Within ane herber and a gardein faire,
 Where flowris growe, and herbis vertuous,
 Of which the favour sweet was, and the eire—
 ———There was Rosiall, womanly to fe,
 Whose stremis fottill persyng of her eye:
 Mine hert gan thrill for beautie in the stounde,
 Alas! quoth I, Who has me gyve this wound?
 If I shall all fully her describe,
 Her hed was rounde, by compas of nature,
 Her here was golde she passit all on live,
 And lillie forehede had this creature,
 With livelish browis, flawe of colour pure,
 Betwene the which was mene disseveraunce
 From every browe, to shewin a distaunce.
 Her nose directid streight and even as line,
 With forme and shape thereto convenient,

XXXII.

Throw quhich anon I knew and understude

Wele yt sche was a wardly creature,

In which the godis milk-white path doth shine,

And eke her eyen ben bright and orient,

As is the * Smaragade unto my judgement,

Or yet these sterris hevenly small and bright,

Her visage is of lovely red and white.

Her mouthe is short, and shutte, in litil space

Flamyng † somedele, not over rid I mene,

With pregnaunt lips, and thik to kifs percace,

For lippis thin, not fat, but ovir lene,

They serve of naught, they be not worth a bene;

For if the base ‡ ben full, there is delite,

Maximian truly thus doth he write.

But,

---

* Smaragdus.] An emerald.—Eyes of emerald, or green colour, cannot be beautiful. Chaucer meant only to compare his mistress's eyes in brightness to the orient emerald. The simile, however, is not well chosen.

† Flamyng.] Or ruddy.

‡ Base, the kifs; from Maximianus's Basia Plena; ben, or be, full.—Chaucer, in the whole of this description, is not over delicate. In this last of his mistress's kissing lips, he had in view, as he tells us, the first Elegy of Maximianus:

“ Flammea dilexi, modicumque tumentia labra

“ Quae mihi gustanti, Basia plena darent.”

The Flammea labra modicum tumentia of Maximian are but coarsely turned into the pregnant, thick, fat lips of Chaucer's mistress.

On quhom to rest myn eye, so mich gude

It did my wofull hert, I zow assure

That

But, to my purpose, I saie as white as snow

Ben all her teeth, and in order they stande

Of one stature, and eke her breth I trowe

Surmounteth all odours that er I founde

In sуетeness; and her body, face, and honde

Ben sharply slender; so that from the hede

Unto the fote, all is but womanhedde.

I hold my peace, of other things hidde:

Here shall my soule, and not my tong, bewraie*.

But how she was arraied, if ye me bidde,

That shall I well discovir you and saie,

A bend of gold and silke full fresche and gaie,

With hir intresse ybrouderit full wele,

Right smothly kept, and shining every dele,

About her neck a flower of fresche devise,

With rubies fet, that lustie were to sene,

And she in goune was light and sommer wise,

Shapin full wele, the colour was of grene,

With aureat sent about her sidis clene,

With divers stonis precious and riche;

Thus was she raied, yet sawe I ne'er her liche.

---

* The modest awful passion of the Royal poet differs as much from Chaucer's, as the delicate ideal figure of his mistress Jane does from the buxom Rosal.

The reader, by comparing Chaucer's Court of Love with King James's Episode on the same subject, in the following Canto,

That it was to me joye w<sup>t</sup>out mēsure,
 And, at the last, my luke unto the hevin
 I threwe furthwith, and said thir versis sevin :

XXXIII.

O Venus clere ! of goddis stellifyit,
 To quhom I zelde homage and sacrifise,
 Fro this day forth zour grace be magnifyit,
 That me ressaunt have in such wise,
 To lyve under zour law and so seruise ;
 Now help me furth, and for zour merci lede
 My hert to rest, y<sup>t</sup> deis nere for drede.

XXXIV.

Quhen I w<sup>t</sup> gude entent this orison
 Thus endit had, I stynt a lytill stound,
 And est myn eye full pitously adoun
 I kest, behalding unto hir lytill hound,
 That w<sup>t</sup> his bellis playit on the ground,
 Than wold I say, and sigh therew<sup>t</sup> a lyte,
 Ah ! wele were him y<sup>t</sup> now were in thy <sup>u</sup> plyte !

XXXV.

Canto, which is quite original, will find the votaries of Venus, in the last, are altogether different personages from those of Chaucer.

<sup>u</sup> In thy pleyte.] Pleyte, according to Chaucer, is a wreath or collar.—“Happy he!” cries our poet, “that wears the “chains of such a mistress!”

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

That to thy sifter trewe and innocent,
 Was kythit by hir husband false and fell,
 Ffor quhois gilt, as it is worthy well,
 Chide thir husbandis y<sup>t</sup> are false, I say,
 And bid them mend in the <sup>z</sup> XX deuil way.

XXXVIII.

O lytill wreich, allace! maist thou not se
 Quho comyth zond? Is it now tyme to <sup>a</sup> wring?
 Quhat sory thot<sup>t</sup> is fallin upon the?
 Opyn thy throte; <sup>b</sup> hastow no left to sing?
 Allace! sen thou of reson had <sup>c</sup> felyng,
 Now, fwete bird say ones to me <sup>d</sup> pepe,
 I dee for wo; me think thou gynis flepe.

XXXIX.

Hastow no mynde of lufe? <sup>e</sup> quhare is thy make?
 Or artow feke, or smyt wt jelousye?

Or

<sup>z</sup> XX Dueil way.] The sence here is obscure. Perhaps it means thus: "Bid such cruel husbands mend or repent, " by mourning twenty fold for their crimes." From the Fr. deuil, sorrow.

<sup>a</sup> To wring.] To grieve, or be dull and melancholy.

<sup>b</sup> Hastow no left.] Hast thou no desire or inclination to sing?

<sup>c</sup> Had felyng.] Sense, or feeling.

<sup>d</sup> Say ones to me pepe.] Give me but one chirp.

<sup>e</sup> Quhare is thy make.] Thy mate, or marrow.

Or is sche dede, or hath sche the forfakē?

Quhat is the causē of thy melancołye,
That thou no more list maken melodye?

Sluggart, for schame! lo here thy golden houre
That worth were hale all thy lyvis laboure.

XL.

Gif thou suld sing wele ever in thy lyve,

Here is, in f fay, the time, and eke the space:

Quhat g wostow than? Sum bird may cum and stryve

In song w<sup>t</sup> the, the maistry to purchace.

Suld thou than cesse, it were great schame allace,

And here to b wyn gree happily for ever;

Here is the tyme to syng, or ellis never.

XLI.

I thot eke thus gif I my handis clap,

Or gif I cast, than will sche flee away;

And, gif I hald my pes, than will sche nap;

And, gif I crye, sche wate not quhat I say:

Thus quhat is best, wate I not be this day,

Bot

f In fay.] In faith.

g What wostow.] What wit'st, wotest, or knowest thou?

b To wyn gree.] To win the gree, or victory.—This is a Scottish phrase, still used with us, of which many occur in this poem.

Bot blawe wynd, blawe, and do the leuis fchake,
That fum tuig may wag, and make hir to wake.

XLII.

With that anon ryt fche toke up a fang,
Quhare com anon mo birdis and alight;
Bot than to here the mirth was thaim amaing,
i Ouer that to see the fweete ficht
Of hyr ymage, my fpirit was fo light,
Methot I flawe for joye w<sup>t</sup>out areft,
k So were my wittis bound in all to feft.

XLIII.

And to the nottis of the philomene,
Quhilkis fche fang the ditee there I maid
Direct to hir yt was my hertis quene,
Withoutin quhom no fongis may me glade,
And to that fanct walking in the fchade,
l My bedis thus with humble hert entere,
Deuotly I faid on this manere.

XLIV.

i Ouer that.] Moreover, to see the fweet fight of his miftrefs's image.

k So were all my wits or fenfes feafted.

l My bedis.] I devoutly faid my prayers, or pater-noster.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

And wt a voce said, Well is vs begone,
 That with our makis are togider here;
 We <sup>m</sup> proyne and play w<sup>t</sup>out dout and dangere,
 All clothit in a foyte full fresch and newe,
 In luffis service besy, glad, and trewe.

XLVI.

And ze fresch May, ay mercifull to bridis,
 Now welcum be, ze floure of monethis all,
 Ffor not onely zour grace upon us bydis,
 Bot all the warld to witnes this we call,
 That strowit hath so plainly over all,
 W<sup>t</sup> new fresch suete and tendè grene,
 Our lyf, our <sup>n</sup> lust, our governoure, our quene.

XLVII.

This was their sang, as femyt me full heye,
 W<sup>t</sup> full mony uncouth swete note and schill,
 And therew<sup>t</sup> all that faire vpward hir eye
 Wold cast amang, as it was Goddis will,
 Quhare I might se, standing alone full still,
 The faire faiture y<sup>t</sup> nature, for maistrye,
 In hir visage wrot had full lufingly.

XLVIII.

<sup>m</sup> We proyne.] Or prunye; prune, trim, or deck out ourselves.—From the Fr. brunir, to burnish or polish. G. D.

<sup>n</sup> Our lust,] Desire.

XLVIII.

And, quhen sche walkit, had a lytill thrawe
 Under the suete-grene bewis bent,
 Hir faire fresch face, as quhite as any snawe,
 Sche turnyt has, and furth her wayis went;
 Bot tho began myn o axis and turment,
 To sene hir part, and folowe I na myt,
 Methot the day was turnyt into nyt.

XLIX.

Than said I thus, Quharto lyve I langer?
 Wofullest wicht, and subject unto peyne:
 Of peyne? no: God wote ze, for thay no stranger
 May wirken ony wight, I dare wele seyne.
 How may this be, yt deth and lyf both tueyne?
 Sall bothe atonis, in a creature
 Togidder dwell, and turment thus nature?

L.

I may not ellis done, bot wepe and waile
 Within thir cald wallis thus p ylokin:
From

o Myn axis.] My fever.—Axis is still used by the country people in Scotland for the ague, or trembling fever.

p Ylokin.] Locked up within his prison-walls.

From hensfurth my rest is my travaile ;

My drye thirst with teris fall I flokin,

And on my self bene all my harmys wrokin :

Thus q bute is none ; bōt Venus, of hir grāce,

Will schape remede, or do my spirit r pace.

LI.

As Tantalus I travaile, ay buteles

That ever ylike hailith at the well

Water to draw, w<sup>t</sup> buket bottemless,

And may not spede, quhois penance is ane hell ;

So by myself this tale I may well telle,

For unto hir y<sup>t</sup> herith not I pleyne,

Thus like to him my travaile is in veyne.

LII.

So fore thus fight I w<sup>t</sup> myself allone,

That turnyt is my strength in febilnesse,

My wele in wo, my frendis all s in fone,

My lyf in deth, my ly<sup>t</sup> into dirkness,

My hope in feere, in dout my sekirnesse ;

Sen sche is gone, and God mōte hir conuoye,

That me māy gyde fro turment and to joye.

LIII.

q Bute is none.] Help or remedy there is none.

r Do my spirit pace.] Bring peace to, or calm my spirits.

s In fone.] My friends turned my foes.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

I laid, and lenit, amaifit verily!

Half-fleeping and half-fuoun, in fuch a wife,

And quhat I met I will zou now deuife.

“ Ouerfet fo with sorrow——

“ That to the cold ftone my hede on wrye

“ I laid and leanit amazed verily!

“ Half fleeping and half in fwoon.”——

A modern fentimental poet would, with a great deal of metaphyfical wit, have laboured, perhaps, through fifty lines, in defcribing the Prince's fituation on this occafion.

THE

T H E

K I N G ' s Q U A I R .

C A N T O III.

The Poet is transported to the Sphere of Love.

I.

METHO<sup>T</sup> yt thus all sodeynly a lyt,
In at the wyndow come quhare at I lent,
Of quhich the chambere wyndow schone full bryt,
And all my body so it hath ouerwent,
That of my sicht the vertew hale * I blent,
And that wt all a voce unto me said,
I bring the comfort and hele, be not affrayde.

II.

And furth anon it passit sodeynly,
Quhere it come in, the ry<sup>t</sup> way ageyne,

And

* My sicht-hale I blent.] Or Y blent; dazzled with the light.

And sone methot<sup>t</sup> furth at the dure in <sup>y</sup> hye

I went my weye, <sup>z</sup> was nathing me ageyne,
And hastily, by bothe the armes tueyne,

I was araisit up into the aire,

<sup>a</sup> Clippit in a cloude of crystall clere and faire.

III.

Afcending vpward ay fro spere to spere,

Through aire and watere and the hote fyre,
Till y<sup>t</sup> I come vnto the circle clere,

Off <sup>b</sup> signifere quhare fair bryt<sup>t</sup> and <sup>c</sup> schere,
The signis schone, and in the glad empire

Off blifsful Venus ane cryit now

Sò fudaynly, almost I wist not how.

IV.

Off quhich the place, quhen I com there nye,

Was all methot<sup>t</sup> of chrystal stonis wrot<sup>t</sup>,

And

<sup>y</sup> In hye.] In haste.

<sup>z</sup> Was nathing me ageyne.] Nothing opposing me.

<sup>a</sup> Clippit in a cloud.] Embraced, surrounded, held fast.
From the A. Saxon clyppan.

<sup>b</sup> Signifere.] The Zodiac, or Circle of the twelve signs.

<sup>c</sup> Bryt and schire.] Burning bright. G. D. p. 276 l. 43.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

VI.

The quhois aventure and grete laboure
 Abone their hedis writen there I fand,
 This is to feyne martris, and confessoure,
 Ech in his stage, and his make in his hand ;
 And therewt all thir peple sawe I stand,
 Wt mony a solempt contenance,
 After as lufe thame lykit to auance.

VII.

Off gude folkis yt faire in lufe befell,
 There saw I sitt in order by thame one
 Wt hedis bore, and wt thame stude gude will
 To talk and play, and after that anon
 Befyde thame, and next there saw I gone
Curage, amang the fresche folkis zong,
 And wt thame playit full merily, and song.

VIII.

nation, the devotees to love, whose stories are recorded in diverse books ;

§ VI. Each of whom has his make or mistress in his hand, and their story written above their heads.

§ VII. In the first class or groupe are those who were successful in love. Prudence, with his hoary head, accompanies them, and Benevolence and Courage join in chearful song with them.

VIII.

And in ane other stage, endlong the wall,
 There saw I stand in capis wyde and lang
 A full grete nowmer, but thaire hudis all
 Wist I not why, atoure thair eyen hang,
 And ay to thame come Repentance amang,
 And maid thame chere degyfit in his wede,
 And downward efter that zit I tuke hede.

IX.

Ryt ouer thwert the chamber was there drawe
 A trevesse thin and quhite, all of plesance,

The

§ VIII. False devôtees to love, with caps or hoods over their eyes. These were hypocrites, who, under the cloak of religion, as is further explained in § XV. and XVI. privately carried on their amours. Repentance accompanies them.

The sanctimonious lecher is painted with great humour by a modern poet :

Full oft by holy feet our ground was trod,
 Of clerks great plenty here you mote espy ;
 A little round, fat, oily man of God,
 Was one I chiefly markt among the fry :
 He had a roguish twinkle in his eye,
 And shone all glistening with ungodly dew ;
 If a tight damsel chanc'd to trippen by,
 Which, when observ'd, he shrunk into his mew,
 And strait would recollect his piety anew.

Castle of Indolence.

The quhich behynd standing there, I sawe
 A warld of folk, and by thaire contenance
 Thair hertis semyt full of displefance,
 W<sup>t</sup> billis in thaire handis of one assent,
 Vnto the judge thaire playntis to present.

X.

And there w<sup>t</sup> all apperit vnto me
 A vocé, and said; Tak hede, man, and behold:
 Zonder there thou feis the hiest stage and gree
 Of agit folk, w<sup>t</sup> hedis hore and olde;
 Zone were the folk y<sup>t</sup> never change wold
 In lufe, but trewly fervit him alway,
 In every age, vnto thaire ending day.

XI.

For fro the time y<sup>t</sup> thai coud vnderstand
 The exercife of lufis craft, the cure
 Was non on lyve y<sup>t</sup> toke so much on hand
 For lufis sake, nor langer did endure

In

§ IX. A groupe of unsuccessful lovers with mournful countenances, holding in their hands their ditties or complaints.—Traveffe, is a partition. Here it is a splendid transparent curtain.

§ X. The highest rank of lovers;—those who, through the whole of their lives, were invariable and constant in their loves, and hazarded all in its service.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

XIII.

And efter thame down' in the next stage,
 There, as thou feis, the zong folkis pleye;
 Lo! these were thay that, in thaire myddill age,
 Servandis were to lufe in mony weye,
 And diversely happenit for to deye,
 Sum sorrowfully for wanting of thaire makis,
 And sum in armes for thaire ladyes fakis.

XIV.

And other ekē by other diuerse chance,
 As happin folk all day, as ze may fe;
 Sum for dispaire, wtout recoverance;
 Sum for desyre, surmounting thaire degree;
 Sum for dispite, and other inmytee;
 Sum for vnkyndness, wtout a quhy;
 Sum for to mock, and sum for jelousye.

XV.

And efter this, vpon zone stage doun,
 Tho yt thou feis stand in capis wyde;
 Zone

ŷ XIII. Those of middle age, who were, unfortunate in their loves; "who died sorrowfully," as the poet expresses, "for wanting their makis;" or were slain in battle in their mistress's cause.

Zone were quhilum folk of religion,
 That from the world thaire governance did hide,
 And frely fervit lufe on every fyde,
 In secrete wt thaire bodyis and thaire gudis,
 And lo! quhy so, thai hingen doun thaire hudis.

XVI.

For though yt thai were hardy at assay,
 And did him service quhilum prively,
 Zit to the warldis eye it femyt nay,
 So was thaire service half cowardly,
 And for thay first forsuke him opynly,
 And efter that thereof had repenting,
 For schame thaire hudis oure thaire eyen they hyng.

XVII.

And feis thou now zone multitude on rawe,
 Standing behynd zone traveffe of delyte,
 Sum bene of thame yt haldin were full lawe,
 And take by frendis, nothng thay to wyte,
 In zouth from lufe, into the cloistere quite,
 And for that cause are cummyn recounfilit,
 On thame to pleyne yt so thame had begilit.

XVIII.

§ XV. and XVI. Those hypocrites already described under § VIII.

§ XVII. Those who in youth were by their friends sequestered from love and the world, and forced by them into cloisters.

XVIII.

And othir bene amongis thame also;

That cummyn are to court on lufe to pleyne,
For he thair bōdyes had bestouit so,

Quhare bothe thaire hertes gruch there ageyne,
For quhich in all thaire dayes soth to feyne,

Quhen other lyvit in joye and plesance,

Thaire lyf was not bot care and repentance.

XIX.

And quhare thaire hertis gevin were and fet,

Were copilt wt other yt could not accord;

Thus were thai wranged yt did no forget,

Departing thame yt never wold discord,

Off zong ladies faire, and mony lord,

That thus by maistry were fro thaire chose dryve,

Full ready were thaire playntis there to gyve.

XX.

And other also, I sawe compleynyng there

Vpon fortune and hir grete variance,

That

§ XVIII. and XIX. Other complainants on love, who had bestowed their bodies, when their hearts were otherwise disposed of; for which they passed their lives in sorrow and repentance.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

XXII.

And wt the first yt hedit is of gold,

He smytis soft; and that has esy cure;

The secund was of silver, mony fold,

Wers than the first, and harder aventure;

The third of stele is fshot wtout recure;

And on his long zallow f lokkis schene,

A chaplet had he all of levis grene.

XXIII.

being of youth and beauty, have hit upon the very same idea, of covering him with gorgeous wings.

“—————Six wings he wore, to shade

“ His lineaments divine; the pair that clad

“ Each shoulder broad, came mantling on his breast

“ With regal ornament: The middle pair

“ Girt like a starry zone his waist; and round

“ Skirted his loins and thighs with downy gold,

“ And colours dipt in heaven: The third, his feet

“ Shadowed from either heel with feather'd mail,

“ Sky-tinctur'd grain! Like Maia's son he stood,

“ And shook his plumes, that heavenly fragrance fill'd

“ The circuit wide.”——

PAR. LOST, lib. 5.

§ XXII. f. And on his long zallow lokkis schene.] Bright yellow locks. In our old writings, the form of the letter y resembles the modern form of the letter z. That, however, ought to be no good reason at this day for adhering to the old form in writing a z instead of y, as we do in some proper names,

XXIII.

And in a retrete lytill of compas,
 Depeyntit all w<sup>t</sup> fighis wonder fad,
 Not fuch fighis as hertis doith g manace,
 Bot fuch as dooth lufaris to be glad,
 Fond I Venus vpon hir bed, y<sup>t</sup> had
 A mantill cast ouer hir schuldris quhite:
 Thus clothit was the goddeffe of delyte.

XXIV.

Stude at the dure Fair calling hir v<sup>s</sup>chere,
 That coude his office doon in conyng wife,
 And Secrete hir thrifty chamberere,
 That besy was in tyme to do feruise,
 And othir moyt I cannot on avise;
 And on hir hede of rede rosis full fuete,
 A chapellet sche had, faire, fresch, and mete.

XXV.

names, as there can be no doubt that our ancestors pronounced the words zallow, zouth, zit, as we now do yallow, youth, yet. Throughout this poem I have kept invariably by the old orthography.

g Not such fighis as hertis doth manace.] That is, "as doth "alarm or make the heart fad;" but the amorous fighs of happy lovers.

XXV.

W<sup>t</sup> quaking hert astonate of that fight,
b Unethis wist I, quhat y<sup>t</sup> I fuld seyne, Bot at the last febily as I my<sup>t</sup>,
 W<sup>t</sup> my handis on bothe my kneis tueyne,
 There I begouth my caris to compleyne,
 W<sup>t</sup> ane humble and lamentable i-chere
 Thus salute I that goddes bry<sup>t</sup> and clere.

XXVI.

Hye Quene of Lufe! sterre of benevolence!
 Pitoufe princeffe; and planet merciabile!
 Appesare of malice and violence!
 By vertew pure of zour aspectis habile,
 Vnto zour grace lat now bene acceptable,
 My pure request; y<sup>t</sup> can no forthir gone
 To feken help, bot vnto zow allone!

XXVII.

As ze y<sup>t</sup> bene the focoure and fuate k well
 Off remedye, of carefull hertes cure,
 And
b Unethis wist I.] Not easily, or scarce knowing what to say.—G. D. p. 74. v. 24.
i Lamentable chere.] Or countenance.
k Socoure and fuate well.] Sweet medicinal well, the cure of love-sick hearts.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Forgiue all this, and schapith remedye,
 To sauen me of zour benigne grace,
 Or do me o steruen furthwt in this place.

XXX.

And wt the stremes of zour Percyng lyt,
 Conuoy my hert, yt is so wo-begone,
 Ageyne vnto that fuede hevinly fight,
 That I, within thir wallis cald as stone
 So fuetly saw on morow walk, and gone,
 Law in the gardyn ryt tofore mine eye,
 Now, merci, Quene! and do me not to deye.

XXXI.

Thir wordis said, my spirit in dispaire
 A quhile I stynt, abiding efter grace,
 And therewt all hir cristall eyen faire
 She kest asyde, and efter that a space,
 Benignely sche turnyt has hir face
 Towardis me full plesantly conueide,
 And vnto me ryt in this uife sche feide :

XXXII.

o Or do me sterven furthwith.] Or kill me instantly.—Ster- ven from the Anglo-Saxon steorfan, to kill.—G. D. p. 391.

XXXII.

Zong man, the cause of all thyne inward forowe
 Is not vnknawin to my deite,
 And thy request bothe nowe and eke to forowe,
 Quhen thou first maid profession to me,
 Sen of my grace I have inspirit the
 To knawe my lawe, contynew furth, for oft,
 There as I mynt full fore, I smyte bot soft.

XXXIII.

Paciently thou tak thyne auenture,
 This p will my son Cupide, and so will I,
q He can the stroke, to me langis the cure
 Quhen I se tyme, and therefore-truely
 Abyde, and serue, and lat gude hope the r gye,
 Bot for I have thy forehede here pent,
 I will the schewe the more of myn entent.

XXXIV.

s This is to say, though it to me pertene
 In lufis lawe the septre to governe,

That

p This will.] This is the will of my son Cupid.

q He can.] Cupid gives the wound; to me belongs the cure.

r Gye.] Guide.

s This is to say.] Although it pertains to me to govern in love's law, yet the effects of the bright beams, and aspects
 of

That the effectis of my bemes schene
 Has thair aspectis by ordynance eterne,
 W<sup>t</sup> otheris bynd and mynes to discerne,
 Quhilum in thingis bothe to cum and gone,
 That langis not to me to writh, God allone.

XXXV.

‡ As in thyne awin case now may thou se,
 For quhy, lo y<sup>t</sup> otheris influence,
 Thy persone standis not in libertee ;
 Quharfore, though I geve the benevolence,
 It standis not zit in myn advertence,
 Till certeyne course endit be and ronne,
 Quhill of trew feruis thow have hir <sup>u</sup> I-wonne.

XXXVI.

And zit, considering the nakitnesse

Bothe of thy wit, thy persone, and thy myt,

It

of my planct, are directed by the eternal ordinance, which binds all things ; and although I can discern things to come, yet I have no power, by myself, to wrest or turn aside what is decreed : God alone is able to do that.

‡ As, in thy own case, you being at present under other influence, thy person is not at liberty ; therefore, although you have my good will, yet I can do no more, until you have run your course in the faithful service of your mistress.

<sup>u</sup> I-won, or Y-won.] Gained or conquered.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Vnlike the crow is to the papejay,
 Vnlike, in goldsmythis werk, a fischis eye
a To purcrefs wt peril, or maked be so heye.

XXXVIII.

As I have said, vnto me belangith
 Specially the cure of thy seknesse,
 Bot now thy matere so in balance hangith,
 That it requireth, to thy sekerneffe,
 The help of other mo than one goddesse,
 And have in thame the menes and the lore,
 In this mater to schorten wt thy fore.

XXXIX.

And for thou fall se wele yt I entend,
 Vnto thy help thy weelfare to preferue,
 The streight weye thy spirit will I fend
 To the goddesse yt clepit is Mynerve,

And

“ The tabard was the well-known sign of ane hostillrie in “ Southwark, in which (says Speght) was the lodging of “ the Abbot of Hyde, by Winchester, where Chaucer and
 “ the other pilgrims met together, and with Henry Baillie, “ their merry host, accorded about the manner of their “ journey to Canterbury.”

SPEGHT'S Glossary to Chaucer.

a To purcrefs wt perll.] The meaning is explained by what follows: “ A fish-eye, compared with a pearl.”—The word itself, or its etymology, I don't find in any glossary.

And se y<sup>t</sup> thou hir b heftis well conserve,
 For in this case sche may be thy supplye,
 And put thy hert in rest als well as I.

XL.

Bot for the way is vncouth vnto the,
 There as hir dwelling is, and hir sojurne,
 I will y<sup>t</sup> gud hope seruand to the be,
 Zoure c alleris frende, to d let the to murn,
 Be thy condyt and gyde till thou returne,
 And hir besech, y<sup>t</sup> sche will in thy nede
 Hir counselle geve to thy welefare and spede.

XLI.

And y<sup>t</sup> sche will, as e langith hir office,
 Be thy gude lady, help and counseiloure,

And

b Her heftis.] Her behests, commands, or directions.

c Zour alleris frende.] Your ally, associate, or confederate.

d To let the to murn.] To hinder or prevent thee from mourning.

e As langith.] As belongeth to her office.—The reader must have observed, that, throughout the whole of this poem, our poet uses many words according to the Scottish orthography and pronounciation, particularly in the use of the letter a, in place of o. Ex. gr. World, amang, belang, sang, wald, hald, Saul, knarwe, blarwe, &c.

And to the fchewe hir rype and gude auife,
 Throw quhich thou may be proceffe and laboure,
 Atteyne vnto that glad and goldyn floure,
 That thou wald have fo fayn w<sup>t</sup>all thy hart,
 And forthirmore fen thou hir fervand art.

XLII.

Quhen thou descendis doun to ground ageyne,
 Say to the men, y<sup>t</sup> there bene resident,
 How long think thay to stand in my difdeyne,
 That in my lawis bene fo negligent,
 From day to day, and list thame not repent,
 Bot breken loufe and walken at thaire large,
 Is none yt thereof gevis charge.

XLIII.

And for, q<sup>d</sup> fche, the angir and the smert
 Of thair vnkyndenefse dooth me constreyne
 My femynyne and wofull tender hert,
 That than I wepe, and to a token pleyne,
 As of f my teris cummyth all this reyne,
 That ze fe on the ground fo fast g yvete,
 Fro day to day, my turment is fo grete.

XLIV.

f My teris cummyth all this reyne.] This shower of tears which I shed.

g Yvete or y-wet with my tears.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

That fervis vnto loue, as ay is dewe,
 Most qmonly has ay his obseruance,
 And of thaire fleuth tofore have repentance.

XLVII.

Thus maist thou feyne y<sup>t</sup> myn effectis grete,
 Vnto the quich ze aught and maist weye,
 No lyte offense to fleuth is forget,
 And therefore in this wise to thame feye,
 As I the here have bid, and conueye
 The matere all the better tofore said,
 Thus fall on the my charge bene laid.

XLVIII.

i Say on than, Quhare is becummy n for schame
 The songis new, the fresch carolis and dance,

The

The following verses in this and the next stanza are very obscure.

i Say on than.] When you descend to earth again. “What “ is now become of the songs, carols, and dances, the tourna“ ments and feats of gallantry, that whilom were so frequent “ amongst you?”—This complaint of Venus leads to conjecture, that the time here mentioned might have been immediately on the death of King Henry V. whose wars in France, though glorious, had been disastrous both to France and England, and particularly to the nobility of both kingdoms.

The lusty lyf, the mony change of game,
 The fresche aray, the lusty contenance,
 The besy'awayte, the hertly obseruance
 That quhilum was amongis thame so ryf,
 Bid thame repent in tyme, and mend thaire lyf.

XLIX.

Or I fall, with my fader old Saturne,
 And wt alhale oure hevinly alliance,
 Oure glad aspectis from thame writhe and turne,
 That all the world fall waile thaire governance,
 Bid thame betyme, y<sup>t</sup> thai haue repentance,
 And thaire hertis hale renew my lawe,
 And I my hand fro beting fall w<sup>t</sup>drawe.

L.

This is to fay, contynew in my seruise,
 Worfchip my law, and my name magnifye,
That

doms. Few families but what had been thrown into mourning by those bloody wars. This was not, therefore, the aera of gallantry, or of the festivals of Venus.

Without such occasional allusion, the complaint of Venus seems to be unnatural, and rather an excrescence on the poem.

That am zour hevin and zour paradife,

And I zour confort here fall multiplie,

And, for zoure meryt here perpetualye,

Reffaue I fall zour faulis of my grace,

To lyve wt me as goddis in this place.

THE

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

k The said renewe, the state, the reuerence,
The strength, the beautee, and the ordour digne,
Off hir court-riall, noble and benigne.

III.

And straught vnto the presence sodeynly
Off dame Minerue, the pacient goddesse,
Gude Hope my gyde led me redily,
To quhom anon, wt dredefull humylnesse
Off my cummyng, the cause I gan expresse,
And all the processe hole, vnto the end,
Off Venus charge, as likit her to send.

IV.

Off quhich ryt thus hir anfuere was in bref:
My son, I have wele herd, and vnderstond,
Be thy reherse, the mater of thy gref,
And thy request to procure, and to / fond
Off thy penance sum confort at my hond,
Be counsele of thy lady Venus clere,
To be with hir thyne help in this matere.

V.

k The said renewe.] This must surely be an error in the copy, as it appears to be unintelligible.

l To fond.] To find of thy penance some comfort from me.

V.

Bot in this case thou fall well knawe and witt,
 Thou may thy hert ground on suich a wife,
 That thy laboure will be bot lytill quit,
 And thou may set it in otherwise,
 That wil be to the grete worschip and prife;
 And gif thou durst vnto that way enclyne,
 I will the geve my lore and discipline.

VI.

Lo, my gude son, this is als much to feyne,
 As gif thy lufe be set m alluterly
 Of nyce lust, thy travail is in veyne,
 And so the end fall turne of thy folye,
 To payne and repentance, lo wate thou quhy?
 Gif the ne list on lufe thy vertew set,
Vertu fall be the cause of thy forfet.

VII.

n Tak him before in all thy gouernance,
 That in his hand the stere has of zou all,

And

m Set alluterly.] If your heart is set altogether upon lust, and not upon virtuous love, thy travail is vain, and shall end in sorrow and repentance!

n Tak bim, &c.] The explanation of the foregoing stanza.—In the first place, take Virtue for thy guide, who holds

And pray vnto his hye purveyance,

Thy lufe to gye, and on him traist and call,
That corner-stone, and ground is of the wall,
That failis not, and trust, w<sup>t</sup>outin drede,
Vnto thy purpose sone he fall the lede.

VIII.

For lo, the werk y<sup>t</sup> first is foundit sure,

May better bere apace and hyare be,
Than otherwise and langere fall endure,

Be mony fald, this may thy reson see,
And stronger to defend aduersitee;

Ground thy werk, therefore, upon the stone,
And thy desire fall forthward w<sup>t</sup> the gone.

IX.

Be trewe, and meke, and stedfast in thy thot,

And diligent her merci to procure,

Not onely in thy word, for word is not,

Bot gif thy werk and all thy besy cure
Accord thereto, and <sup>o</sup> vtrid be mesure,

The

holds the helm that steers the vessel, and who will not fail you, but will conduct you to the completion of your wishes.

o Outrid be mesure.] Out-red, gone through, or regulated by measure and propriety, as to time and place.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

XII.

For as the foulere quhiffliſh in his throte,
 Diuerſely to counterfete the brid,
 And feynis mony a ſuete and ſtrange note,
 That in the buſk for his defate is hid,
 Till ſche be faſt lok in his net amyde,
 Ryt ſo the r fatoure, the falſe theif, I ſay,
 Wt ſuete treason oft wynith thus his pray.

XIII.

Fy on all ſuch! fy on thaire doubilneſſe!
 Fy on thaire luſt, and beſtly appetite!
 Thaire wolfiſh hertis, in lambis likneſſe;
 Thaire thoughtis blak, hid vnder wordis quhite:
 Fy on thaire labour! fy on thaire delyte!
 That feynen outward all to hir honour,
 And in thair hert her worship wold deuour.

XIV.

So hard it is to truſten now on dayes
 The warld, it is ſo double and inconstant,
 Off quhich the ſuth is hid be mony aſſayes;
 More pitee is; for quhich the remanant

That

That menen well, and are not variant,
 For otheris gilt are suspect of vntreuth,
 And hyndrit oft, and treuely that is reuth.

XV.

Bot, gif the hert be groundit ferm, and stable
 In Goddis law, thy purpose to atteyne,
 Thy labour is to me agreable,
 And my full help wt counsele trew and pleyne,
 I will the fchewe, and this is the certeyne ;
 Obyn thy hert, therefore, and lat me see
 Gif thy remede be pertynent to me.

XVI.

Madame, q<sup>d</sup> I, sen it is zour plesance
 That I declare the kynd of my loving,
 Treuely and gude, wtoutin variance,
I lufe that flour abuse all other thing,
 And wold, bene he, yt to hir worschipping
 Myt ought availe, be him s yt starf on rude,
 And nowthir spare for trauaile, lyf, nor gude.

XVII.

s Be him that starf on rude.] That died on the crosse.—I would spare neither travel, life, or estate, if I thought I could avail or succeed.

XVII.

And, forthirmore, as touching the nature
 Off my lusing, to worschip or to blame,
 I darre wele say, and therein me assure,
 For ony gold yt ony wight can name,
 Wald I be he yt fuld of hir gude fame
 Be blamischerè in ony point or wyse,
 For wele nor wo, quhill my lyf may suffise.

XVIII.

This is the effect trewly of myn entent,
 Touching the suete yt smertis me so fore,
 Giff this be faynt, I can it not repent,
 Although my lyf fuld forfaut be therefore:
 Blisfull princeffe! I can seye zou no more,
 Bot so desire, my wittis dooth compace
 More joy in erth, kepe I not bot zour grace.

XIX.

Desire, qd sche; I nyl it not deny,
 So thou it ground and fet in cristin wise;
 And therefore, son, opyn thy hert playnly.
 Madame, qd I, trew w<sup>t</sup>outin fantise,
 That day fall I neuer vp rise,
 For my delyte to couate the plesance
 That may hir worschip putten in balance.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Reffauen diuerfely * zour auenturis,

Off quhich the cure and principal melling

Apperit is wtoutin repellyng,

Onely to hir y<sup>t</sup> has the cuttis two

In hand, both of zour wele and of your wo.

XXIII.

And how fo be, y<sup>t</sup> fum clerkis trete,

y<sup>r</sup> That zour chance caufit is tofore,

Heigh in the hevin, by quhois effectis grete,

Ze movit are to wrething lefs or more,

Quhare in the world, thus calling y<sup>t</sup> therefore,

Fortune, and fo y<sup>t</sup> the diverfitee

Off thaire werking fuld cause neceffitee.

XXIV.

z Bot other clerkis halden that the man,

Has in himfelf the chofe and libertee

To

* Zour auenturis.] Your fortune or destiny, the controuling of which is beyond your power, and belongs only to the Fates.

y That all zour chance caufit is tofore.] Your life and fortune is preordained in heaven, by whose direction ye are moved to wreth, i. e. to wrest or move lefs or more in the affairs of the world: Thus what is called fortune, through the variety of her operations, is truly necessity.

z But other clerks hold the opposite doctrine of liberty in man's actions, and that he is under no necessity, but acts from choice, and according to his own purpose or will.

To cause his awin fortune, how, or quhan,
 That him best lest, and no necessitee
 Was in the hevin at his nativitee;
 Bot zit the thingis happin in qmune,
 Efter purpose, so cleping thame fortune.

XXV.

a And quhare a persone has tofore knawing
 Off it yt is to fall purpofely,
 Lo fortune is bot wayke in such a thing,
 Thou may wele wit, and here enfample quhy,
 To God it is the first cause onely
 Off euery thing, there may no fortune fall,
 And quhy? for he foreknawin is of all.

XXVI.

b And therefore thus I say to this sentence,
 Fortune is most and strangest euermore,

Quhare,

a Where one knows before hand what purpofely is to fall out, in that case chance or fortune is weak, or has little to do in the matter, as you may well know. Thus God, who is the first cause, and has foreknowledge of every thing, leaves nothing to be determined by chance.

b In human affairs, however, where man has no foreknowledge of what is to be the event, there fortune is ever strongest. “ So, my son, since thou art but weak both in “ wit

Quhare, lest foreknaung or intelligence.

Is in the man, and some of wit or lore,
Sen thou art wayke and feble, lo, therefore,
The more thou art in dangere, and qmune
Wt hir, y<sup>t</sup> clerkis clepen so fortune.

XXVII.

Bot for the sake, and at the reuerence
Off Venus clere, as I the said tofore,

“ wit and lore, (or experience) thou art more subjected to “ what clerks clepen (or call) fortune.”

From our poet's discussion of the question with regard to man's acting from his own free-will, or from necessity, he appears to have been sufficiently versant in the metaphysical learning of his age. Such intricate questions have been the ignis fatuus, or play of philosophers, in all ages down to the present.

Milton makes the subtle reasoning upon such abstruse points one of the entertainments of the fallen angels:

“ ———Others sat on a hill retir'd,

“ And reason'd high——

“ Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate,

“ Fixt fate, free-will, foreknowledge absolute,

“ And found no end, in wandering mazes lost!

“ ———Vain wisdom all, and false philosophy!”

Vain indeed! while every man, in defiance to the futile arguments of metaphysicians, ought to be convinced, from his own feelings, that he is a free agent, and, as such, accountable for his actions.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Within a beme, y<sup>t</sup> fro the contree dyvine,
Sche Percyng throw the firmament extendit,
To ground ageyne my spirit is descendit.

“ Imprefs the air, and shew the mariner
“ From what point of his compass to beware
“ Impetuous wind”————

THE

T H E

K I N G ' s Q U A I R.

C A N T O V.

His Journey in Quest of Fortune.

I.

Q U H A R E in a d lusty plane tuke I my way,
e Endlang a ryuer, pleſand to behold,
Enbroudin all wt freſche flouris gay,
Quhare throu the grauel, bry<sup>t</sup> as ony gold,
The criſtal water ran ſo clere and cold,
That in myn ere, maid contynualy,
f A maner ſoun mellit with armony.

II.

The ſcenery, or landſkip, as in the three firſt ſtanzas of this Canto, is painted in the richeſt colours of poetry. The verſe, too, is extremely harmonious.

d A luſty plane.] A pleaſant delightful plain.

e Endlang a ryuer.] Along the ſide of a river.

f Maner ſoun.] A pleaſant ſound, mixed with harmony.

II.

That full of lytill fischtis by the brym,

Now here now there, w<sup>t</sup> bakkis blewe as lede,
Lap and playit, and in a rout can fwym

So prattily, and dressit thame to sprede
Thaire curall fynis, as the ruby rede,

That in the fonne on thaire scalis bryt,

g As gesserant ay glitterit in my sight.

III.

And by this ilke ryuer syde alawe

Ane hyeway fand I like to bene,

On quich, on euery syde, a long rawe

Off trees saw I full of levis grene,

That full of fruyte delitable were to sene;

And also, as it come vnto my mynd,

Of bestis sawe I mony diuerse kynd.

IV.

g As gesserant glitterit.] Like some precious stone, sparkled in my eye.

The epithets, expressive of some distinguishing quality of the several beasts mentioned by the poets, seem to be according to the natural history of these animals in that age, though now, as to some of them, known to be erroneous and exploded. Some of these epithets, I own, I am at a loss to explain.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

V.

There sawe I p dresse him, new out of hant,
 The fere tigere full of felony,
 The dromydare, the q stander oliphant,
 The wyly fox, the wedouis inemye,
 The clymbare gayte, the s elk for alblastrye,
 The t herknere bore, the holsum grey for hortis,
 The u haire also, yt oft gooth to the hortis.

VI.

p Dresse him new out of hant.] The fierce tyger, issuing from his haunt or den, new prepared for fallying out upon his prey.

q The stander oliphant.] The elephant, that always stands. According to the vulgar, the elephant was erroneously said to have no knees.

r The wyly fox, the wedouis inemye.] That robs the poor widow of her poultry.

s The elk.] A species of deer.—Buffon classes it with the rein-deer. What the meaning of the quality expressed by alblastrye is, I cannot find out. The colour of this animal is dark grey.

t u The epithets of the herknere bore, and wholsum grey, or greyhound, for hortis, or the gardens, the reader's own ingenuity must supply. The last, perhaps, means the hound that protects the garden from the hare that frequents it.

The x bugill draware by his hornis grete,

The y martrik fable, the z foynzee, and mony mo,

a The chalk quhitè ermyn, tippit as the jete,

The riall hert, the conyng, and the ro,

The wolf, y<sup>t</sup> of the murthir not fay ho,

The b lesty beuer, and the c ravin bare,

For chamelot, the camel full of hare.

VII.

With many ane othir beste diverse and strange,

That cummyth not as now vnto my mynd;

Bot now to purpose straught furth the range,

I held away oure hailing in my mynd,

From quhens I come, and quhare y<sup>t</sup> I fuld fynd

Fortune, the goddesse unto quhom in hye

Gude hope, my gyde, has led me sodeynly.

VIII.

And at the last behalding thus asyde,

A round place wallit have I found,

In

x The bugill draware by his hornis grete.] The stag. Perhaps the buffalo, which is an animal that draws in the yoke.

y Martrick fable.] The fable martin.

z The foynzee.] The fawn. G. D. p. 220. 42.—In vulgar French fouine is the pole-cat.

a The chalk-white ermyn, tipt with spots black as jet.] The body of the ermyn is pure white. The tail only is tipt with black.

b Lesty bever.] If lesty means here lusty, or lustifull, this animal is not so. Perhaps it means, according to the Scottish, lusty, plump, or fat, which is applicable to the beaver.

c Ravin, or ravenous bear.

In myddis quhare eftfone I have fpide

Fortune, the goddeffe, d hufing on the ground,
And ryt befor hir fete, of compas round,

e A qubele, on quhich clevering I fye

A multitude of folk before myn eye.

IX.

And ane furcote fche werit long that tyde,

That femyt to me of diverfe hewis,

Quhilum thus, quhen fche wald turn afyde,

Stude this goddeffs of förtune f ,

A chapellet wt mony fresch g anewis

Sche had upon hir hede, and wt this hong

A mantill on hir fchuldries large and long.

X.

That furrit was wt ermyn full quhite,

Degontit wt the felf in spottis blake,

And

d The goddeffs Fortune hufing, i. e. dwelling or abiding on the ground. From the A. Saxon hufe, a house. Hence our word houff, or haunt.

e A qubele on which clevering.] A wheel, on which I faw a multitude clambering.

f Stude this goddeffs of fortune, ] The reader's own ingenuity must fupply this mark of abbreviation. Perhaps it may be for askew, or askewis.

g A chaplet with fresch anewis, or budding flowers.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

XIII.

And on the quhele was lytill void space,
k Wele nere oure straught fro lawe to hye,
 And they were ware y<sup>t</sup> long fat in place,
 So toltter quhilum did sche it to wreye,
 There was bot clymbe and ry<sup>t</sup> downward hye,
 And sum were eke y<sup>t</sup> fallyng had fore,
 There for to clymbe, thair corage was no more.

XIV.

I sawe also, y<sup>t</sup> quhere sum were flungin,
 Be quhirlyng of the quhele vnto the ground,
 Full sudaynly sche hath vp <sup>l</sup> ythrungin,
 And fet theme on agane full sauf and found,
 And ever I sawe a new swarm abound,
 That to clymbe vpward upon the quhele,
 Instede of thame y<sup>t</sup> my<sup>t</sup> no langer rele.

XV.

And at the last, in presence of thame all
 That stude about, sche clepit me be name,

And

k Nere-oure-straught.] Was almost streight.

l Up ythrungin.] Thrown up. From the A. Saxon thringan, or thryngan, thrown. G. D. 87. 52.

And therew<sup>t</sup> upon kneis gan I fall

Full sodaynly <sup>m</sup> hailſing, abaist for ſchame ;
And, ſmylyng thus, ſche ſaid to me in game,

Quhat dois thou here ? quho has the hider ſent ?

Say on anon, and tell me thyne entent.

XVI.

I ſe wele, by thy chere and contenance,

There is ſum thing y<sup>t</sup> lyis the on hert,
It ſtant not w<sup>t</sup> the as thou wald perchance.

Madame, q<sup>d</sup> I, for luſe is all the ſmert
That euer I fele <sup>n</sup> endlang and ouerthwert ;
Help of zour grace me wofull wrechet wight,
Sen me to cure ze powere have and myt.

XVII.

Quhat help, q<sup>d</sup> ſche, wold thou y<sup>t</sup> I ordeyne,
To bring the vnto thy hertis deſire ?

Madame, q<sup>d</sup> I, <sup>o</sup> bot y<sup>t</sup> zour grace dedyne,
Of zour grete myt, my wittis to inſpire,
To win the well, yt ſlokin may the fyre

In

m Hailſing.] Saluting, or hailing. From the A. Saxon hail, or hal. G. D. p. 69. 23.

n Endlang and ouerthwert.] Through my whole frame,
in length and breadth.

o Bot that your grace.] Would your grace but deign.

In quhich I birn: Ah, goddeſs fortunate!
 Help now my game y<sup>t</sup> is in poynt to p mate.

XVIII.

Off mate q<sup>d</sup> ſche, a verray fely wretch
 I ſe wele, by thy dedely coloure pale,
 Thou art to feble of thyſelf to ſtreche
 Vpon my quhele, to clymbe or to hale,
 Wtoutin help, for thou haſ q fund in ſtale
 This mony day wtoutin werdis wele,
 And wantis now thy veray hertis hele.

XIX.

Wele maiſtow be a wretchit man callit,
 That wantis the confort y<sup>t</sup> ſuld thy hert glade,
 And haſ all thing within thy hert ſtallit,
 That may thy zouth oppreſſen or defade;
 Though

p That is in point to mate.] Mate, or mait, to be overcome; defeated. From the old Fr. mat, overcome. G. D. p. 417. 17.—Hence chec mate at cheſs.

q Fund in ſtale.] Been long in ward, and ſequeſtered from friends. G. D. 382. 37.

r That haſ all thing in thy hert ſtallit.] Kept all in your own mind, without the comfort of communication with your friends, which haſ depreſſed and faded your youth.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

For the nature of it is evermore

After ane hicht to vale, and geve a fall,

Thus quhen me likith vp or down to fall.

Farewele, q<sup>d</sup> fche, and by the ere me toke

So earnestly, yt therew<sup>t</sup> all I woke.

Fortune here concludes her advice, by telling the Prince, that his revolution on her wheel is one hour, of which one half is already run; therefore to make good use of his time still to run.

END OF THE VISION.

THE

K I N G ' s Q U A I R .

C A N T O VI.

I.

O BESY <sup>u</sup> goste, ay flikering to and fro,
 That never art in quiet nor in rest,
 Till thou cum to that place y<sup>t</sup> thou cam fro,
 Quhich is thy first and verray proper nest ;
 From day to day so fore here artow drest,
 That wt thy flesche ay walking art in trouble,
 And sleping eke of pyne, so has thou double.

II.

<sup>u</sup> O besy goste.] Busy, fluttering, restless spirit.—It may be conjectured, that the King might have had in his mind the dying address of the Emperor Adrian to his soul.

Animula vagula blandula, &c.

The anxious Quae nunc abibis in loca? so suitable in the mouth of the heathen philosopher, is finely turned by the answer of our enlightenèd moralist :

“ Thou never art in quiet, nor in rest,
 “ Till thou cum to that place that thou cam fro,
 “ Which is thy first and very proper nest.”

The whole apostrophe is solemn and striking.

II.

* Couert myself all this mene I to loke,
 Thought y<sup>t</sup> my spirit vexit was tofore;
 In y<sup>o</sup> fuenyng, asone as ever I woke;
 By XX fold it was in trouble more;
 Be thinking me wt fighting hert and fore;
 That nane other thingis bot dremes had;
 Nor sekernes my spirit w<sup>t</sup> to glad.

III.

And therew<sup>t</sup> sone I z dressit me to ryse,
 Fulild of thot, pyne, and aduersitee,
 And to myself I said in this wise,
 Quhat lyf is this? quhare hath my spirit be?
 A! merci; Lord! quhat will ze do w<sup>t</sup> me?
 Is this of my forethot impressiō?
 Or is it from the hevin a visiō?

IV.

And gif ze goddis of zoure <sup>a</sup> purviance
 Have schewit this for my reconforting,

In

* Couert myself.] Within myself; I mean to consider all this.

y In fuenyng.] Although my spirit was troubled in dream, yet as soon as I was awake, I was more in trouble by twenty fold in thinking that all was but a dream, and nothing certain to comfort me.

z I dressit me.] I prepared myself to rise.

a Purveiance.] Praescience

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

VI.

This fair bird ryt in hir bill gan hold
 Of red jeroffleris, with thair stalkis grene,
 A fair branche; quhare written was with gold,
 On euery lefe, wicht brànchis bryt and schene,
 In compas fair full plesandly to sene,
 A plane sentence, quhich, as I can deuise
 And have in mynd, faid ryt on this wife.

VII.

Awak! awake! I bring lufar, I bring
 The newis glad, that blisfull ben and sure
 Of thy confort; now lauch, and play, and sing,
 That art d besid so glad an auenture:
 Fore in the hevyn decretit is ye cure:
 And vnto me the flouris fair did present;
 With wyngis spred hir wayis furth sche went.

VIII.

Quhilk vp anon I take, and as I gesse,
 Ane hundreth tymes, or I forthir went,
 I have it red, with hertfull glaidnesse,
 And half with hope and half wt dred it e hent,
 And at my beddis hed, with gud entent,
 I have it fair pynit vp, and this
 First takyn was of all my help and blisse.

IX.

d That art beside.] That art so near to happiness.

e Hent.] Kept it.

IX.

The quhich treuly efter day be day,
 That all my wittis maistrit had tofore,
 Quhich he offerth, the paynis did away,
 And schorly so wele fortune has hir bore,
 To q<sup>m</sup>kin treuly day by day, f my lore
 To my larges, that I am cum agayn
 To blisse with hir that is my foverane.

E P I L O G U E.

X.

Bot for als moche as sum micht think or feyne,
 Quhat nedis me, apoun so lytill g evyn,
 To writt all this? I anfuere thus ageyne;
 Quho that from hell war b coppin onys in hevin,
i Wald efter thank for joy, mak VI. or VII.;

And

f My lore to my larges.] A proverbial phrase for “I will “exert my wit, to make a return or recompense.”

g So little evyn.] Upon so small an event.

b War coppin in heaven.] Were from hell raised to the top of blifs in heaven.—Thus Chaucer: “Let them build “en on the coppe of the mountaigne.” Boethius.

i Would, for joy, make some stanzas of six or seven verses.

And euery wicht his awin suete or fore,
 Has maist in mynde, I can say zou no more.

XI.

Eke quho may in this lyfe have more plesance,
 Than cum to largesse from thraldom and peyne?
 And by the mene of luffis ordinance,
 That has so mony in his golden cheyne,
 Quhich this to wyn his hertis fouereyne,
 Quho suld me k wite to write tharof, lat se;
 Now sufficiance is my felicitee.

XII.

Beseeching vnto fair Venus abuse,
 For all my brethir yt bene in this place,
 This is to feyne yat seruandis ar to lufe,
 And of his lady can no thank purchase,
 His pane relefch, and sone to stand in grace,
 Both to his worschip and to his first ese,
 So that it hir and refoun not displease.

XIII.

And eke for thame yat ar not entrit inne
 The dance of lyfe, bot thither-wart on way,

In

k Who suld me wite, or blame?

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Of my rancoure and wofull chance,
 It war to long, I lat it be tharefore,
 And thus this floure, I can feye no more,
 So hertly has vnto my help actendit,
<sup>m</sup> That from the deth hir man s<sup>c</sup>he has defendit.

XVI.

<sup>m</sup> That from the deth hir man s<sup>c</sup>he has defendit.] To one that looks for presages, this line will perhaps call his attention to a circumstance mentioned by the historians, of this virtuous and most affectionate princess's receiving two wounds, in attempting to defend the King from his inhuman murderers!

“ Having struck down the King, whom the Queen, by “ interposing her body, fought to save, being with difficulty “ pulled from him, she received two wounds, and he with “ twenty-eight was left dead !” — HAWTHORNDEN.

It was said by Æneas Sylvius, afterwards Pope Eugene IV. who was in Scotland as Legate, at the time, that he was at a loss which most to applaud, the universal grief which overspread the nation, on the death of the King, or the resentment to which it was roused, and the just vengeance with which his inhuman murderers were pursued; who being all of them traced, and dragged from their lurking retreats, were, by the most lingering tortures that human invention could suggest, put to death. The Earl of Athole, whose ambition had incited him to conspire the King's death, after suffering three days torture, crowned with a red-hot coronet of iron, with the inscription “ KING OF TRAITORS !” was beheaded, and his quarters sent to the chief cities of the kingdom.

XVI.

And eke the goddis mercifull virking,
 For my long pane, and trew service in lufe,
 That has me gevin' halely myne asking,
 Quhich has my hert for ever set abuse
 In perfyte joye, that never may remufe,
 Bot onely deth, of quhom in land and prife,
 With thankfull hert I say richt in this wise.

XVII.

Blissit mot be the goddis all,
 So fair that glateren in the firmament!
 And blissit be thaire myt' celestially,
 That have conuoyit hale with one assent,
 My lufe, and to glade a consequent!
 And thankit be fortunys exiltre,
 And quhele, that thus so wele has quhirlit me.

XVIII.

Thankit mot be, and fair and lufe befall
 The nyctingale, yat with so gud entent
 Sang thare of lufe, the notis suete and small,
 Quhair my fair hertis lady was present,
 Hir with to glad, or that sche forthir went;

And

And thou gerafloure, mot I thankit be
All other flouris for ye lufe of ye.

XIX.

And thankit be ye fair castell wall,
Quhare as I quhilom lukit furth and lent,
Thankit mot be the sanctis merciall,
That me first causit hath this accident:
Thankit mot be the grene bewis bent,
Throu quhom and vnder first fortunyt me,
My hertis hele and my confort to be.

XX.

For to the presençe suete and delitable,
Rycht of this flourè yat full is of plesancé,
By proceffe and by menys favourable,
First of ye blisful goddis purveyance,
And syne throu long and trewe contynance
Of veray faith in lufe and trew service,
I cum am, and forthir in this wise.

XXI.

Vnworthy lo bot onely of hir grace,
In lufis rok, that esy is and sure,
In guerdoun of all my lufis space
Sche hath me tak, hir humble creature,

And

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Of govirnance, by the magnificence

Of him that hiest in the hevin sitt.

* To quham we think that all oure hath writt,
 Quho coutht it red agone fyne mony a zere,
 Hich in the hevynis figure circulere.

XXV.

Vnto impnis of my maisteris dere,

Gowere and Chaucere, that on the steppis satt
 Of rethorike, quhill thai were lyvand here,

Superlatiue as poetis laureate,

In moralitee and eloquence ornate,

I recommend my buk in lynis seven,

And eke thair faulis vnto the blisse of hevin.

A M E N !

EXPLICIT, zic. zic.

Quod Jacobus Primus Scotorum Rex Illustrissimus.

* These three lines are very obscure. To make out their sense, we must take in the whole stanza. " Thus (sayeth
 " the poet) endith my story, causit by the governance of
 " the Almighty, who reigns in heaven; to whom we think
 " that all we have written was couthit or known in the heigh
 " heaven for ages before."—Couth signifies known; from the
 A. Sax. cuth, notus. Hence uncouth, strange or unknown.

CHRISTIS KIRK OF THE GRENE.

BY JAMES I.

KING OF SCOTLAND.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Nouthir at b Falkland on the Grene,
 Nor c Pebillis at the Play ;
 As wes of d wowaris, as I wene,
 At Christis Kirk on ane day :
 Thair came our e kitties, weshen clene,
 In thair new kirtillis of gray,
 Full gay,
 At Christis Kirk of the Grene that day.

II.

b Falkland.] One of the Royal houses, situated on the north side of the Lomond hills, in the county of Fife. The castle of Falkland, a noble edifice, was habitable in the beginning of the present century, though now in ruins.

c Pebillis, or Peebles.] The head town of the county of Tweeddale, situated on the banks of the river Tweed. The annual games of archery, and other pastimes, at Peebles, were of very ancient institution. Our poet King James I. is said to have often resorted to that annual festivity.

d Wowaris.] Wooers, suitors.

e Kitties.] Rustic, romping, country lasses, drest in their new apparel.—Bishop Gibson's edition has it,

“ For there came Kitty, washen clean

“ In her new gown of gray,” &c.

Which is substituting the proper name of one girl (Kitty, or Kattie) in place of the general epithet given to the whole country lasses that were assembled on this occasion.

II.

To dans thir damyfellis thame f dicht,
 Thir lasses g licht of laitis,
 Thair h gluvis war of the h raffel rycht,
 Thair i shune wer of the i straitis,
 Thair k kirtillis wer of Lynkome licht,
 Weil prest with mony plaitis,
 Thay wer sa nyfs quhen men thame l nicht,
 Thay m squelit lyke ony m gaitis,
 Sa loud,
 At Christis Kirk of the Grene that day.

III.

f Dicht.] Dressed, or prepared for the occasion, G. D.
 p. 233. 395.

g Licht of laits.] This probably has been a vulgar phrase.
Licht of manners, lightsome, frolicsome, or romping.

h Gluvis, gloves of the raffell rycht.] Probably from the Saxon ra, or rae, a roe-deer; and ffell, a skin.

i Shune wer of the straitis.] Their shoes were made of Turkey or Morôquin leather, from the Straits.

k Kirtills of Lynkome licht.] Gowns or petticoats of Lincoln manufacture.

l Men thame nicht.] When men came nigh or toyed with them.

m Squelit.] Shrieked like wild goats.

III.

Of all thir madynis, myld as meid,

Wes nane fa<sup>n</sup> jympt as Gillie,

As ony rose hir<sup>o</sup> rude wes reid,

Hir<sup>p</sup> lyre wes lyke the lillie :

Fow zellow zellow wes hir heid,

Bot scho of lufe wes<sup>q</sup> fillie ;

Thot all hir kin had<sup>r</sup> fworn hir deid,

Scho wald haif bot sweet Willie

Alane,

At Christis Kirk, &c.

IV.

Scho skornit Jok, and<sup>s</sup> skrapit at him,

And<sup>t</sup> murgeonit him with morkis,

He

n Jimp.] Neat, tight, slender.

o Hir rude wes reid.] Her colour or complexion was red.

G. D. 408.

p Hir lyre.] Her skin, bosom, or neck. The lyre, or lure, in vulgar speech, is the breast or bosom.

q Of lufe wes fillie.] Seile, sele, in our old language, signifies happy. G. D. Also simple, weak.—The reader may take it in either sense.

r Had fworn hir deid.] Should have doomed her to death.

s And skrapit at him.] Scropit, mocked, or scorned.—

John Knox's Hist. p. 93.

t Murgeonit him.] Made mouths at, or ridiculed him.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

He playit sa schill, and sang sa fweit,

Quhile Tousy tuké a d trans,
Auld Lightfute thair he did e forleit,

And f counterfuttet Frans ;

He used himself as man discreet,

And up tuke g Moreifs dans

Full loud,

At Christis Kirk, &c.

VI.

Then Steven cam steppand in with stendis,

Na b rynk mycht him i arreist ;

Platefute

d Tuke a trans.] A hop or skip.—From Lat. probably of transire, to go across.

e Forleit.] Forfake, or desert. G. D.—This applies to Tousy the dancer, who scorned to dance, like auld Lightfute, after the Scots fashion, or the reel, a well known measure.

f Counterfuttet Frans.] Aped to dance after the French mode.

g Moreifs dans.] Morrice or Moorish dances, rather of slow solemn movement, performed usually by gipsies after the Moorish manner.

b Rynk, or rinker.] A racer, or one swift of foot. G. D. 193.—Here it is used for a nimble person.

i Arreist.] Stay, or stop ; i. e. the most agile man of the company would not have stopt or outdone him in the dance.

Platefute he bobit up with bendis,
 For Mald he made requiest,
 He k lap quhill he lay on his lendis,
 But ryfand he wes priest,
 Quhill that he i oisted at bayth endis,
 For honour of the feist
 At Christis Kirk, &c.

That day.

VII.

Syne Robene Roy m begouth to m revell,
 And Downy till him n druggit;

Let

k He lap.] Leapt.—B. Gibson says gravely, that “the word lap signifies lapt, or supped, from the Cimbric word le-pia, lingua, i. e. lambendo bibere.” Nothing is more vague or fanciful than etymological derivations. No Scotsman but knows, that lap is the perfect of the verb to leap. The obvious sense of the passage is, “He lap and capered so high, that he fell at his length; and, in rising, was so pressed, that after the well known vulgar Scots phrase,—he

i Oisted.] Hosted, or coughed at baith ends, (i. e. broke wind) in honour of the feast.” A coarse, though most humorous picture!

m Revell.] Began to turn riotous.

n Druggit.] Dragged Downy towards him.

Let be, quo Jok, and o caw'd him javell,

*And be the taill him p-tuggit,*

*The kenfy q cleikit tò the cavell,*

*Bot, lord, than how thay r luggit!*

*Thay partit manly with a s nevell,*

God wait gif hair was ruggit

Betwix thame

At Christis Kirk, &c.

VIII.

*Ane bent a bow, sic t sturt coud u steir him,*

x* Grit skayth wes'd to haif skard him,*

He

o Caw'd him javell.] Javeller; probably a quarrelsome fellow.

p Tuggit.] Pulled him by the tail of his cloak.

q Cleikit.] Snatched up. A common Scots phrase.—
Cavell, or 'gavell, probably a cudgel or rung.

r Luggit.] Pulled each other by the ears.

s Nevell.] A blow with the fist.—Most of the above words, being vulgar, are now obsolete, and not to be found in any glossary. Their meaning, however, may easily be conjectured.

t Sturt.] Trouble, disturbance, vexation. G. D. p. 41.
219. 19.

u Steir him.] Move, or provoke him.

x Grit skayth wes'd.] It would have been dangerous, or attended with skaith, to have skar'd or hindered him.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Sa wes the will of God, trow I,
d For had the tre bene trew,
 Men said, that kend his archery,
 That he had e slane enow
That day,
 At Christis Kirk, &c.

X.

Ane haasty f hensure, callit Hary,
 Quha wes ane archer g heynd,
h Tilt up a taikle withouten tary,
i That torment sa him teynd;
 I wait not quhider his hand could vary,
 Or the man was his freynd,

For

d Had the tre.] Tree, or wood, been true; had the bow been proof.

e That he had slane.] i. e. That he would, or might have slain many a one. The old Scots frequently use the pluperfect of the indicative, in place of the imperfect of the subjunctive.

f Hensure.] We find no such Scots word. B. Gibson has it kinsman, without any authority. It seems to be a contemptuous epithet; perhaps a braggadochio.

g Heynd.] Expert, handy. G. D.

h Tilt up.] Fitted up without delay his tackle, his bow and arrow.

i That torment sa him teynd.] That torment or vexation so angered him; from the Anglo Saxon tene, or teen, anger, rage. G. D. p. 57. 10.—B. Gibson has it, “I trow the “men was tien.”

For he eschapit, & throw michts of Mary,
 As man that na ill meynd,
 But gude,
 At Christis Kirk, &c.

XI.

Then Lowry as ane lyon lap,
 And sone a / flane can feddir,

He

k Throw michts of Mary.] Through the power and assistance of St Mary.—A common saying.

The foregoing figures are introduced with great humour, and happily varied: Tousie's solemn Moresco; Steven's entry, or high dance; and Platefute's sandango with Mauld, his downfall, and misbehaviour, are all highly comic. Again, the awkwardness of the bowmen, showing that they had quite fallen out of the use of managing the bow, is satirised in the keenest strokes of irony. The serious affected gravity of the poet, particularly in his arch reflection, "Such was the will of Providence," &c. are fine ironical touches. The whole shows that the poet was master of every species of humour and ridicule,

Whether he takes Cervantes's serious air,
 Or laughs and shakes in Rabelais's easy chair.

These great masters of ridicule lived a century later than King James, whose genuine vein of humour flows full and entire from his own native genius. Genius is confined to no age nor clime.

/ And soon feathered an arrow.

He m hecht to perfs him at the pap,

n Theron to wed a weddir;

He hit him on the o-wamē a wap,

It bust lyk ony bledder;

But sua his fortune was and hap,

His doublit wes maid of ledder,

And faift him

At Chryftis Kirk, &c.

XII.

m Hecht.] Promised, meant to hit him on the pap.

n To wed, or wad.] To pledge.—To wad a wedder, seems to be to pledge or wager a wedder. Hence a wadset; or land given in pledge.

It may be conjectured, that, when archery was in vogue amongst the lairds or gentry, it would be a common pastime to shoot at butts for prizes; and that a sheep or wedder, or, in other words, a dinner, as at present, might be the common prize or wager. The 18th act of King James I. first parliament, alludes probably to such a custom. It enacts, “That wha uses not archery, on the appointed holy days for shooting, the laird of the land, or sheriff, fall raife of him a wedder.”

o A wap on the wamē.] A well known Scots phrase for a blow on the belly, a stroke not deadly, making a sound like that made on a blown-up bladder.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

XIII.

A <sup>x</sup> yaip young man, that stude him neist,

Lous'd aff a schott with yre,

He <sup>y</sup> ettlit the <sup>z</sup> bern in at the breist,

<sup>a</sup> The bolt flew ou'r the byre,

Ane cry'd fy! he had slane a <sup>b</sup> priest

A myle beyond ane myre;

Then bow and <sup>c</sup> bag fra him he keist,

And fled as ferfs as fyre

Of flint,

At Christis Kirk, &c.

XIV.

<sup>x</sup> Yaip.] Or yaip; eager, ready, alert. G. D. p. 409.
20.

<sup>y</sup> Ettled the bern.] He tried or aimed to shoot the lad in the breast.

<sup>z</sup> Bern.] Bairn, often for a young man, as in G. D. 439.
22.

<sup>a</sup> The bolt.] Shaft, or arrow.

<sup>b</sup> Fy! he has slane a priest.] The worst or most atrocious of all murders.

<sup>c</sup> Bag.] The quiver which held his arrows.

Since the introduction of fire-arms, the use of the bow in war is now quite laid aside, and even as an exercise of sport may probably be soon forgotten. There remains still one, and only one society in this kingdom, where archery is kept up,

XIV.

With forks and flails they lent grit flappis;
 And flang togidder lyk d friggis,
 With e bougars of barnis they best blew kappis,
 Quhyle thay of f bernis maid briggis;
 The g reird rais rudely with the rapps,
h Quhen rungis wer layd on riggis,
 The wyffis cam furth with cryis and clappis,
i Lo quhair my lyking ligs,
 Quo thay,
 At Chrystis Kirk, &c.

XV.

up, the Royal Company of Archers, which always did, and at present can boast of having the chief of the Scottish nobility and gentry inrolled amongst its members. Long may this ancient institution flourish! and the manly exercise of the bow, the care of so gallant a monarch as James I. be preserved, and transmitted down to latest posterity!

d Friggis.] i. e. They bickered or pelted each other with stones.

e Bougars of barnis.] Rafter's of barns dang aff blue caps.

f Of berns maid briggis.] Made bridges or stepping-stones (according to the Scots phrase) of the berns or lads that fell down.

g The reird, or noise.

h When rungis.] Were laid across their backs, or riggings.

i Lo where my love lies.

XV.

Thay gyrnit and k lait gird with grainis,
l Ilk goffip uder grievit,
 Sum strak with stings, sum gatherit stainis,
 Sum fled and m ill mischevit;
 The menstral wan within twa wainis,
 That day full weil n he previt,
 For he cam hame with o unbirst bainis,
 Quhair p fechtaris wer mischievit.
 For evir,
 At Christis Kirk, &c.

XVI.

Heich Hutchon with a q hissil ryfs,
 To r red can throw thame rûmmill,

He

k Lait gird.] Let drive, or gave a stroke. G. D. From the A. Saxon gerd, to strike with a rod or stick.

l Ilk goffip.] Companion, grieved or hurt his neighbour.

m Ill mischiev'd.] Sore hurt, or bruised.

n He previt.] i. e. Proved himself a cautious man, that kept himself out of the fray.

o Unbirst bairns.] Unbruised bones.

p Fechtaris.] Fighters.

q Hissil ryfs.] A hazel rung or sapling. Ryce signifies young, or branch-wood.

r To red.] To separate or part the combatants, he rumbled or rushed through them.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

He <sup>a</sup> gart his feit defend his heid,
 The far fairer it set him,
 Quhyle he wes past out of all <sup>b</sup> pleid,
 He fuld bene swift that gat him
 Throw speid,
 At Christis Kirk, &c.

XVIII.

The town soutar in grief wes <sup>d</sup> bowdin,
 His wyfe <sup>e</sup> hang in his waift,
 His body wes with blud all <sup>f</sup> browdin,
 He grainit lyk ony gairt;
 Hir glitterand hair that wes full gowdin,
 Sa hard in lufe him <sup>g</sup> laift,

That

<sup>a</sup> "He gart his feit defend his heid,

"The far fairer it set him." — It set or became him better to take to his heels than to fight.—The humour here is extremely arch.

<sup>b</sup> Past all pleid.] Out of all challenge or opposition. G. D. III.

<sup>c</sup> He would have been swift of foot that could lay hold of him.

<sup>d</sup> Bowdin, or bodyn.] Full of, or swelled with rage. G. D. voce Bodin.

<sup>e</sup> Hung at, or clung to his waift.

<sup>f</sup> Browden.] Besmeared or embroidered.

<sup>g</sup> Laift.] Laced.]

That for hir sake he wes na b yowdin
 Seven myle that he wes chaist,

And mair,

At Christis Kirk, &c.

XIX.

The millar wes of manly mak,
 To meit him wes na i mowis;
 Thai durst not ten cum him to tak,
 Sa k nowitit he thair powis ;
 The l buschment hail about him brak,
 And bickert him with bows,
 Syn traytourly behind his back
 They hewit him on the m howis Behind,

At Christis Kirk, &c.

XX.

b Yowden.] Probably tired.

i Na mowis.] No sport, or jest.

k Sa nowitit, or noytit thair powis.] From noy, to hurt.
 G. D.

l The buschment hail.] The whole body lay in ambush, and broke forth on him. G. D.

m On the howis, or houghs.

XX.

Twa that wer herdsmen of the herd,
 Ran upon udderis lyk ramnis,
 Than followit n feymen richt unaffeird,
 Bet on with barrow trammis,
 But quhair thair o gobbis wer ungeird,
 Thay gat upon the p. gammis,
 Quhyle bludy berkit wes thair baird,
 As thay had worriet lammis
 Maist lyk,
 At Christis Kirk, &c.

XXI.

The wyves kest up a hideous yell,
 When all thir younkeris yokkit,
 Als ferfs as ony q fyre flaughts fell;
r Freiks to the field thay flokit;

The

n Feymen.] Unhappy, mischievous. G. D.—Foolish.
Skene.

o Gobbis, or gabbis were ungeird.] Where their cheeks or gabs were bare or undefended.

p They got upon the gammis, or gums.

q Fyre flaughts.] Flashes of lightning.

r Freiks.] Light-headed, freakish, forward fellows, G.
 D.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

XXII.

Quhyn thay had x berit lyk baitit bullis,
 And y branewod z brynt in bails,

Thay

in the seventh line here; nor would he have used the word ground, both in the sixth and seventh line, besides the absurdity of Tom Tabor's first falling to the ground, and then his wife hitting him to the ground, and, lastly, felling him!

The bridegroom brought a pint of aile,

And bade the pyper drink it;

Drink it, quoth he, and it so staile,

Ashrew me if I think it.

The bride her maidens stood near by,

And said it was not blinked,

And Bartagafie, the bride so gay,

Upon him fast she winked

Full soon that day.

The nonsense and awkward absurdity of this spurious stanza is so obvious, that it is to be wondered how Gibson could adopt it as genuine!

---

x Berit.] Perhaps bearded or baited each other, like bulls.

y Branewod.] Or distempered in their brains.

z Brynt, or burnt in bails, or in flame.] The phrase seems now quite obsolete.

Thay wer als meik as ony mulis
a That mangit wer with mailis;
b For faintness tha forfochtin fulis
 Fell doun lyk c flauchtir failis,
 And fresch men cam in and d hail'd the dulis,
 And e dang tham doun in dailis'
f Bedene,
 At Christis Kirk, &c.

XXIII:

Quhen all wes done, Dik with ane aix
 Cam furth to fell a g fuddir,

Quod

a Meik as mules, that are tired, and manged or galled with mails or heavy burdens.

b Forfochtin fulis.] These fools that had tired themselves with fighting.

c Fell lyk flauchtir fails.] Or turfs, cast with a spade well known in Scotland, called the flaughter spade.

d Hail'd the dulis.] A well-known phrase at foot-ball. When the ball touches the goal or mark, the winner calls out, Hail! or it has hailed the dule, or dail.

e Dang them down in heaps.

f Bedene, or bedeen, instantly; out of hand.

g Fudir, or futhir.] A load or heap.—Perhaps from fouth, a vulgar Scots word for plenty, or many in number.

Quod he, quhair ar yon h hangit fmaix,
 Rycht now wald flane my bruder:
 His wyf bad him ga hame, i Gib glaiks,
 And sa did Meg his muder,
 He turnit and gaif them bayth thair k paikis,
 For he durst ding nane udir,
 For feir,
 At Christis Kirk of the Grene that day.

h This epithet is now obsolete.

i Gibby glaiks.] Light-headed, foolish braggadochio.

k For which he gave the women their paiks, or a drubbing, as he durst not ding or encounter any others.

F I N I S.

Quod King James I.

The foregoing notes were written prior to the publication of Mr Callender's edition of the poem of Christ's Kirk, with which work the present scarcely interferes. The learned etymological researches of that gentleman tend to open a more important object to view, by endeavouring to trace our old Scottish language, and its parent the Anglo-Saxon, up to the radical and universal language of mankind, before their dispersion from the plains of Shinaar. A very ample field, it must be confessed, for etymological learning.—The present humble essay aims only at the illustration of the sense and design of King James's Poem.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

and of great pleasantry, it is with peculiar satisfaction I seize this opportunity of doing justice to his memory, in giving testimony to his being the author of the Gentle Shepherd, which, for the natural ease of the dialogue, the propriety of the characters, perfectly similar to the pastoral life in Scotland, the picturesque scenery, and, above all, the simplicity and beauty of the fable, may justly rank amongst the most eminent pastoral dramas that our own or any other nation can boast of. Merit will ever be followed by detraction. The envious tale, that the Gentle Shepherd was the joint composition of some wits with whom Ramsay conversed, is without truth. It might be sufficient to say, that none of these gentlemen have left the smallest fragment behind them that can give countenance to such a claim. While I passed my infancy at Newhall, near Pentland Hills, where the scenes of this pastoral poem are laid, the seat of Mr Forbes, and the resort of many of the literati at that time, I well remember to have heard Ramsay recite, as his own production, different scenes of the Gentle Shepherd, particularly the two first, before it was printed. I believe my honourable friend Sir James Clerk of Pennycuik, where Ramsay frequently resided, and who I know is possessed of several original poems composed by him, can give the same testimony.

P. S. The above note was shown to Sir James Clerk, and had his approbation. By the late death of that gentleman, not his friends only, but the Public, have lost a valuable member of society. To an innate goodness of heart, and simplicity of manners, was joined in him a superior taste in the fine arts; in architecture, sculpture, painting, and music. Pennycook House, built from a plan designed by himself, is an illustration of the simplex munditiis, the plain and elegant style in architecture. The disposition of the grounds, the woods, lawns, water, and ornaments, are the result of a chaste and elegant taste, formed on the justest rules.

— Servare modum, finemque tueri, Naturamque sequi.

— This small tribute is due to his memory, from one whom he long honoured with his intimate friendship.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

DISTRICT

IN COURT

OF THE

STATE

D I S S E R T A T I O N

O N T H E

S C O T T I S H M U S I C.

—Nugaeque Canbrae:

Nostras nec erubuit Silvas habitare Thalia.

VIRG.

TH E genius of the Scots has, in every age, shone conspicuous in Poetry and Music. Of the first, the Poems of Ossian, composed in an age of rude antiquity, are sufficient proof. The peevish doubt entertained by some of their authenticity, appears to be the utmost refinement of scepticism. As genuine remains of Celtic Poetry, the Poems of Ossian will continue to be admired as long as there shall remain a taste for the sublime and beautiful.

The Scottish Music does no less honour to the genius of the country. The old Scottish songs have always been admired for the wild, pathetic sweetness which distinguishes them from the music of every other country. I mean, in this Essay, to try to fix the æra of our most ancient melodies, and to trace the history of our music down to modern times. In a path so untrodden, where scarce a track is to be seen to lead the way, the surest guide I have to follow is the music itself, and a few authorities which our old historians afford us. After all, the utmost I aim at is probability; and, perhaps, by some hints, I may lead others to a more direct road.

From their artless simplicity, it is evident, that the Scottish melodies are derived from very remote antiquity. The vulgar conjecture, that David Rizio was either the composer or reformer of the Scottish songs, has of late been so fully exposed, that I need say very little to confute it. That the science of music was well understood, and that we had great masters, both theorists and performers, above a century before Rizio came to Scotland, I shall immediately show. He is by no contemporary writer said to have been a composer. He is not even extolled as a great performer; nor does tradition

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

the use of any musical instrument beyond that of a very limited scale of a few natural notes, and prior to the knowledge of any rules of artificial music. This conjecture, if solid, must carry them up to a high period of antiquity.

The most ancient of the Scottish songs, still preserved, are extremely simple, and void of all art. They consist of one measure only, and have no second part, as the later or more modern airs have. They must, therefore, have been composed for a very simple instrument, such as the shepherd's reed or pipe, of few notes, and of the plain diatonic scale, without using the semitones, or sharps and flats. The distinguishing strain of our old melodies is plaintive and melancholy; and what makes them soothing and affecting, to a great degree, is the constant use of the concordant tones, the third and fifth of the scale, often ending upon the fifth, and some of them on the sixth of the scale. By this artless standard some of our old Scottish melodies may be traced; such as Gil Morice—There cam a ghost to Marg'et's door—O laddie, I man loo' thee—Hap me wi' thy pettycoat—I mean the old sets of these airs, as the last air, which I take to be one of our oldest songs, is so modernized as scarce to have a trace of its ancient simplicity. The simple original original air is still sung by nurses in the country, as a lullaby to still their babes to sleep. It may be said, that the words of some of these songs denote them to be of no very ancient date: But it is well known, that many of our old songs have changed their original names, by being adapted to more modern words. Some old tunes have a second part; but it is only a repetition of the first part on the higher octave; and these additions are probably of more modern date than the tunes themselves.

That the science of Music, and the rules of composition, were known amongst us before the 15th century, is certain. King James the First of Scotland is celebrated by all the Scottish historians, not only as an excellent performer, but as a great theorist in Music, and a composer of airs to his own verses. ‘Hic etenim in musica (says Fordun) in artis perfectione, in tympano et choro, in psalterio et organo, ad summæ perfectionis magisterium, natura creatrix, ultra humanam aestimationem, ipsum vivaciter decoravit.’ Scotichron, vol. 2. lib. 16. cap. 28.—Fordun has a whole chapter, the 29th of his history, on King James’s learning and knowledge in the ancient Greek, as well as in the more modern scales of music, which, for its curiosity, sity, is worthy to be read by the modern theorists in music.

The next authority is John Major, who celebrates King James I. as a poet, a composer, and admirable performer of music. Major affirms, that, in his time, the verses and songs of that Prince were esteemed amongst the first of the Scottish melodies. I shall give the whole passage :

‘ In vernacula lingua artificiosissimus compositor; cujus codices plurimi, et cantilena, memoriter adhuc apud Scotos inter primos habentur.—Artificiosam cantilenam (composuit) Yias, sen, &c. et. juncundum artificiosumque illum cantum; at Beltayn, quem alii, de Dalketh et Gargeil mutare studuerunt, quia in arce, aut camera, clausus servabatur, in qua mulier cum matre habitabat.’

It is a pity that neither the words nor the music of these celebrated ballads have come down to us. According to the historian, the last must have been full of humour; and extremely popular; his words may imply, that several parodies or imitations of the subject had been made, which time has likewise deprived us of.

Amongst

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies wife) a poem of Sir Richard Maitland of Lethington, father to the famous Secretary Maitland, are entitled, 'To be sung to the tune of the Banks of Helicon.' This must have been a well-known tune 200 years ago, as it was sung to such popular words; but it is now lost. It cannot exist under other words, as the metrical stanza of the Cherry and the Slae is so particular, that I know no air at this day that could be adapted to it. We find also, in old books, many names of songs, yet neither of the verses or tunes do we know any thing at this day. Gavin Douglas, in his prologue to the 12th Æneid, recites the beginning words of three well-known songs in his time, 1480, thus:

‘ The schip sailis over the salt fame,
 ‘ Will bring thir merchandis and my leman hame.’
 ——— ‘ I will be blyith and licht,
 ‘ My hert is lent upon sa gudly wicht.’
 ——— ‘ I come hidder to wow.’

And, in the prologue to 13th Æneid,

——— ‘ The jolly day now dawis.’

In the same way a great many of King James I.'s poetical pieces are now lost; or, perhaps, as his

his poem of Christ's Kirk of the Green, may erroneously be ascribed to others.

It may be suspected; from the above high-strained authorities, that his countrymen have rather allowed themselves to be carried too far in displaying the qualifications of their King. I shall, however, produce the testimony of a foreigner, a celebrated author, who does James still more honour than the writers of his own country; and, singular as the proposition may appear, I shall endeavour to prove, that the Scottish melodies, so far from being either invented or improved by an Italian master, were made the models of imitation in the finest vocal compositions of one of the greatest masters of composition in Italy.

The celebrated Carlo Gesualdo, Prince of Venosa, formerly Venusium; famous as the place of birth of Horace, flourished about the middle or towards the end of the 16th century, and died in 1614. Blancanus, in his Chronologia-Mathematicorum, thus distinguishes him: ‘ The most noble Carolus
 ‘ Gesualdus, Prince of Venusium, was the prince ‘ of musicians of our age; he having recalled the ‘ Rythme into music, introduced such a stile of ‘ modulation,

‘ modulation, that other musicians yielded the pre‘ ference to him; and all fingers and players on ‘ stringed instruments, laying aside that of others, ‘ every where eagerly embraced his music *.’—He is also celebrated by Merfennus, Kircher, and almost all the writers of that age, as one of the most learned and greatest composers of vocal music in his time.

To apply this account of the Prince of Venosa to the present subject.—Alessandro Tassoni, in his Pensieri Diversi, lib. 10. thus expresses himself:

‘ We may reckon among us moderns James King
 ‘ of Scotland, who not only composed many sacred
 ‘ pieces of vocal music, but also, of himself, invent‘ ed a new kind of music, plaintive and melancholy, ‘ different from all other; in which he has been ‘ imitated by Carlo Gesualdo, Prince of Venosa, ‘ who in our age has improved music with new
 ‘ and admirable inventions †.’

How

* Sir J. Hawkins, vol. 3. p. 212.

†. ‘ Noi ancora possiamo connumerar, tra nostri, Jacopo
 ‘ Re di Scozia, che non pur cose sacre campose in canto, ma
 ‘ trova da se stesso, una nuova musica, lamentevole e mesta,
 ‘ differente da tutte l’altre. Nel che poi è stato imitato da ‘ Carlo

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

Italian music itself before the Prince of Venosa's time, as I shall attempt to illustrate.

It is at this day no longer a question, that the art of composition in parts, or what is called harmony, is the invention of the moderns; but by whom invented, or at what particular aera, is not so clear. As the cultivation of modern music was chiefly among the ecclesiastics, on account of the church services daily in use to be sung by them, the rules of harmony undoubtedly took their rise, and were improved among them. Guido d'Arezzo, a Benedictine monk, about the beginning of the eleventh century, is, by many authors, said to have reformed the scale, by introducing the lines and the notation on them by points, instead of the letters of the alphabet, formerly in use; from which the name of counterpoint, for the art of composition in parts, is derived. From that period, it was by degrees improved, until it was brought to perfection in the golden age of the restoration of other polite arts and sciences in Italy, the Pontificate of Leo X. At this time flourished the venerable Palestrina, stiled the father of harmony; and in the same century, though later, the Prince of Venosa, mentioned above. As the productions of a harmonist and thorough master of the art of counterpoint, counterpoint; the compositions of Palestrina, even at this day, strike us with admiration by their artful fugues, and the full and sublime harmony of their parts. Nothing in the church stile, except the grandeur and loftiness of the choruses of the late great Handel, can exceed them: Yet, in one great point, the music of Palestrina is deficient. We may be entertained with the artful contrivance and learning of a well wrought fugue, or elevated by the harmony of a full choir of voices, yet still melody or air is wanting in the music of the venerable Palestrina. To any person versant in the compositions of the great masters of harmony in Palestrina's time, there will appear the same stile, artful contrivance, and learning, running through every species of their compositions; their massa's, motetti, madrigals, and canons. The harmony is full, but they are deficient in melody*.

* Although Palestrina is with propriety stiled the Father of Harmony in Italy, as, by the solemn grandeur of his harmony, and fine contrivances, he certainly carried the art of counterpoint far beyond any thing known before the age of Leo X. yet it is but justice to say, that harmonic composition flourished in several parts of Europe besides Italy, and that there existed several eminent masters, even before the time of Palestrina. Lewis Guicciardin, (nephew of Francis,

I do not remember to have seen any cantata, or song for a single voice, of the age of Palestrina.

The Francis, the historian) who was contemporary with Palestrina, and died before him in 1589, as cited by Abbé de Bos, in his Critical Reflections, gives a list of several eminent Flemish composers; and adds, that, in his time, it was the practice in the Netherlands, and had been a custom there of long standing, to furnish Europe with musicians. The old church services, that had long been in use both in England and Scotland, several of which still exist, are solid proofs of the profound knowledge of our old composers in counterpoint, before the time of Palestrina. The church services of Marbeck, and of Tallis, who was organist to Henry VIII. are original and learned, and abound in fine harmony. Geminiani, that great musical genius, on hearing Tallis's anthem, ' I call and cry,' is said to have exclaimed, in rapture, ' The man who made this must have been inspired!' No less eminent was Birde, the scholar of Tallis, and several others mentioned by Morley, in his Introduction to Practical Music, in the number of which Morley himself may be ranked. From that time a continued succession of very eminent composers in the church stile, through the reigns of Queen Elisabeth, King James, and Charles I. have flourished.—To digress a little on the subject of the English music. The science of music, from the earliest ages, appears to have been patronised by the Kings of England; hence the study of music became a branch of education, through every rank, from the Prince downwards, insomuch that the gentleman who had not been taught music was judged

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies composed for some favourite stanza or love verses of Petrarcha, Ariosto, or Tasso, commonly in the

fugue

‘ married his cittern, that’s common to all men.’ His editors Upton and Whaley, not understanding the manners of the time when Ben Johnson wrote, read the above, ‘ his cittern or reservoir.’—The music cultivated for private entertainment, at that time, was the Madrigal and Glee, in three or more parts, many of which still continue to be sung in several societies of vocal music. Their harmony is good, though generally languid and deficient in air.—The time was now at hand, when the triumph of harmony was to cease in England. The purity of the times would not admit of so superstitious an appendage to devotion, as music: When the Book of Common Prayer, of Thanksgivings, and Praises to God, was condemned by the meeting of Westminster Divines, as ‘ a great hindrance to the preaching of the word *,’ the choral church service, of course, was expelled. The Psalms of David made a narrow escape: To strip them, however, of any pretence to music, it was enjoined the minister or clerk, ‘ to read the psalm, line by line, before the singing thereof.’ In conformity with these ordinances, the Parliament, 4th January 1644-5, repealed the statutes of Edward VI. and Queen Elisabeth, for uniformity in the Common Prayer, and ordained the same to be abolished and disused in every church and chapel throughout England and Wales. To follow out these ordinances, the organs were removed from the churches; and to put an end to the study as * Neal’s Hist. of the Puritans.—Nov. 1644.

fugue stile, and of three or four parts. The madrigal, when sung by proper voices, is soothing and as well as practice of church music and harmony, the choral service-books were zealously collected together and destroyed. The painted glass windows, as favouring of idolatry, were broken down. It was well the churches themselves escaped demolition. The cathedral of St Paul's and other churches were converted into barracks and horse-quarters, and the porticoes were leased out for shops. Where had the muse of Milton now taken flight, who thus exclaims?

O! let my due feet never fail
 To walk the studious cloysters pale,
 And love the high embowed roof,
 With antique pillars massy proof,
 And storied windows richly dight,
 Casting a dim religious light;
 There let the pealing organ blow
 To the full-voic'd choir below,
 In service high and anthems clear,
 As may with sweetness through mine ear
 Dissolve me into extasies,
 And bring all heaven before mine eyes.

Il Penseroso.

Happily the reign of fanaticism was short. The year 1660 restored the liturgy, and with it re-established the choral church service, with the organs and choristers. The Italian opera had been established from the beginning of the century in Italy, and had now found its way into France.

Melody,

and pleasant; but, wanting air, soon becomes languid and dull : A certain proof, this, that the music

Melody, in the songs for a single voice, with the recitative and chorus, attended with instrumental accompaniments, were novelties which began to be adopted by the English composers. On the Restoration, by the opening of the theatres, with music as their attendant, the national taste became much improved. Into the solemn, rigid, harmonic stile, a mixture of air and melody was introduced. The canon, the madrigal, and glee gave way to airs for a single voice, duets, and catches, more suited to the convivial taste of the English. In the number of the old organists and chapel-masters, several fine composers appeared. Musical interludes were introduced into the old plays of Shakespear, and Beaumont and Fletcher. Matthew Lock, a chorister originally, and the composer of some fine anthems; set to music recitatives and songs for the incantation scenes of the witches in Macbeth, which for the expression of the words, particularly in the first recitative, ‘ Speak, sister! speak & and the solemnity and sweetness of the songs, and fullness of the chorus, may at this day be esteemed fine compositions.—Michael Wise, besides his anthems, which are excellent, composed some good duets and catches : His two-part song, Old Chiron, is well known.—Purcell next appeared ; one of the greatest musical geniuses that England or any nation, either before or since his time, can boast of. Purcell was fond of the Italian music ; and in that which he composed for the théâtre, he certainly formed his taste on it. In his songs there is a mixture of recitative ; but the recitative of Purcell (as Lock’s before him)

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

music, was not then regarded or cultivated. Harmony, and the art of composition in parts, it must be confessed, is one of the noblest of the modern inventions: That a fondness, however, for that only, to almost the total neglect or exclusion of air and melody in music, should have universally prevailed at ‘arms!’ and ‘Britons, strike home!’ is one of many which might be mentioned. He was the first who introduced the trumpet as an accompaniment to his songs. I have been told by a person, who was well acquainted with Handel, that, on hearing one of Purcell’s songs, accompanied by Grano on the trumpet, that great master was so fond of it, that, in his opera of Rinaldo, the first which he composed in England, he made the song ‘Hor la tromba’ for Grano, one of the finest trumpet songs that ever was composed, or perhaps ever will be composed, as that noble, martial instrument is now neglected and laid aside, as too manly for the soft manners of the age! Indeed, the whole opera of Rinaldo is excellent, notwithstanding the ridicule of the Spectator, which, by the bye, does not affect the music.—To conclude: If we are to look for a good national taste in music, at any time, in England, I imagine it must be in the compositions of Purcell, and his contemporaries Lock, Wise, Blow, &c. To speak of the merit of the present theatrical music in England, would be rash: I shall, therefore, here conclude this digression, which, in an essay on so desultory a subject as music, will, I hope, be excused.

at this time in Italy, is a remarkable fact*. We shall further illustrate this from another historical fact in the annals of music.

The Opera, that noble and elegant species of the musical drama, now so much improved and established in most of the theatres in Europe, and which chiefly consists in airs for a single voice, with instrumental accompaniments, was not known in Palèstrina's or the Prince of Venosa's time. It was first introduced in the beginning of the seventeenth century. The dramatic poem of Euridice, made by Ottavio Rinuccini, a Florentine poet, was set to music by Jacopo Peri, who, on that occasion, invented the recitativo, or musical discourse. The opera of Euridice was first represented on the theatre at Florence in the year 1600, on occasion of the marriage of Mary of Medicis with King Henry IV. of France. What appears most remarkable, so much was harmonic composition universally fully established, that, in the above opera, there is not one air or song for a single voice: The whole opera consists of duetti, terzetti, cori, and recitativo. —To return to my subject:

* It is curious to observe, that the state of music in England, at the same period, appears to have been precisely similar to that in Italy, that is, purely harmonic, as may be seen from the compositions of Marbeck, Tallis, Birde, &c.; and, after them, of Henry Lawes, Lanere, and Campion, down to the Restoration.

In the above state of music in Italy, we may suppose the Scottish melodies of King James I. had found their way into that country. Is it, then, to be wondered at, that such a genius as the Prince of Venosa should be struck with the genuine simplicity of strains which spoke directly to the heart, and that he should imitate and adopt such new and affecting melodies, which he found wanting in the music of his own country? The sweet, natural, and plaintive strains of the old song Waly waly up the bank—Will ye go to the ewe-bughts, Marion—Be constant ay—and many other of our old songs about that age, must touch the heart of every genius, of whatever country, and might enrich the compositions of the greatest foreign master.

Purpureus late qui splendeat unus et alter

Adfuitur pannus.

HOR.

I hope we shall no longer hear the absurd tale, that the Scottish music was either invented or improved

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

who, at that time, were thought to excel all other nations in church music.

King James is said to have been a fine performer on the lute and harp, with which he accompanied his own songs *. Playing on these instruments must, by the Prince's example, have become fashionable; and, of course, a more regular and refined modulation in the Scottish songs must have been introduced. The simple scale of the pipe, by the introduction of the stringed instruments, became, in consequence, much enlarged, not only by a greater extent of notes, but by the division of them into semitones.

The

in ea peritissimos alebat. Insuper quae vocant organa qualia nunc sunt, antea enim veteribus et nescio an fatis, ad sacram harmoniam, accommodis cantibus utebantur, tum primum per eum in Scotiam sunt adducta. Tantum vero quidam nostrates ea in re brevi proficere, ut Anglos (quos aiunt reliquis nationibus hac in arte anteferri) haudquaquam deinceps inferiores haberentur. Boeth. Hist. lib. 17.—A noble and irrefragable testimony, this, of the establishment and excellency of church music in England and Scotland, in the time of King Henry VI. and James I.; that is, a century before Palestrina.

* In sono vocis, et in tactu Citharae (natura) dulciter et dilectabiliter illum praedotavit. Fordun, vol. 2. c. 28.

The great æra of poetry, as of music, in Scotland, I imagine to have been from the beginning of the reign of King James I. down to the end of King James V's.* The old cathedrals and abbeys, those venerable monuments of Gothic grandeur, with the choristers belonging to them, according to the splendour of their ritual church service, were so many schools or seminaries for the cultivation of music. It must be owned, however, that, altho' the science of harmonic music was cultivated by the church composers, yet as the merit of the church music, at that time, consisted in its harmony only, the fine flights and pathetic expression of our songs could borrow nothing from thence.

This was likewise the æra of chivalry: The feudal system was then in its full vigour.

The Scottish nobility, possessed of great estates, hereditary jurisdictions, and a numerous vassalage, maintained, in their remote castles, a state and splendour

* Within this æra flourished Gavin Douglas, Bishop of Dunkeld, whose excellent translation of Virgil's Æneis may compare with Chaucer, the first poet of that age; Bellenden, arch-dean of Murray; Dunbar, Henryson, Scott, Montgomery, Sir D. Lindsay, and many others, whose fine poems have been preserved in Banatyne's excellent collection, of which several have been published by Allan Ramsay, in his Evergreen.

dour little inferior to the court of their kings. Upon solemn occasions, tilts and tournaments were proclaimed, and festivals held with all the Gothic grandeur and magnificence of chivalry, which drew numbers of knights and dames to these solemnities.—Thus the poetic, the sublime Warton!

    Illumining the vaulted roof,
    A thousand torches flam'd aloof,
    From massy cups, with golden gleam;
    Sparkled the red Metheglin's stream :
    To grace the gorgeous festival,
    Along the lofty windowed hall,
    The storied tapestry was hung,
    With minstrelsy the rafters rung ;
    Of harps, that, with reflected light,
    From the proud gallery glittered bright.
    To crown the banquet's solemn close,
    Themes of British glory rose ;
    And, to the strings of various chime,
    Attempered the heroic rime.

ODE on the Grave of King Arthur.

James IV. and V. were both of them magnificent Princes : They kept splendid courts, and were great promoters of those heroic entertainments*.

In

* Pitscottie's History of James IV. Leslie, &c.

We have two fine pictures of these Princes by two very eminent masters, which I cannot resist the pleasure of exhibiting in this place.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

‘Scoti, qui in illa arte præcipui sunt.’—To these sylvan minstrels, I imagine we are indebted for many fine, old songs, which are more varied in their melody, and more regular in their composition, as they approach nearer to modern times, though still retaining ‘their wood-notes wild.’*

To

* To frame an idea of the heaven-born genius of the ancient minstrel or wandering harper, in a rude age, see Dr Beattie’s fine poem, the Minstrel, Part I.

—Song was his favourite, and first pursuit,
 The wild harp rang to his adventurous hand,
 And languish’d to his breath the plaintive flute;
 His infant muse, though artless, was not mute.—

Meanwhile, whate’er of beautiful, or new,
Sublime, or dreadful, in earth, sea, or sky,
 By chance or search, was offered to his view,
 He scanned with curious and romantic eye,
 Whate’er of lore tradition could supply,
 From Gothic tale, or song, or fable old,
 Rous’d him, still keen to listen, and to pry;
 At last, though long by penury controll’d,
 And solitude, his soul her graces ’gan unfold.

Minstrel, Part I.

The last of these strolling harpers [was Rory or Roderick
Dall, who, about fifty years ago, was well known and much caressed by the Highland gentry, whose houses he frequented. His chief residence was about Blair in Athole and Dunkeld.

To the wandering harpers we are certainly indebted for that species of music, which is now scarcely known; I mean the Port. Almost every great family had a Port that went by the name of the family. Of the few that are still preserved are, Port Lennox, Port Gordon, Port Seton, and Port Athole, which are all of them excellent in their kind. The Port is not of the martial strain of the march, as some have conjectured; those above named being all in the plaintive strain, and modulated for the harp.

The Pibrach, the march or battle-tune of the Highland Clans, with the different strains introduced of the coronich, &c. is fitted for the bagpipe only: Its measure, in the pas grave of the Highland piper, equipped with his flag and military ensigns, when marching up to battle, is stately and animating, rising often to a degree of fury.

To class the old Scottish songs, according to the several aeras in which we may suppose them to have been made, is an attempt which can arise to conjecture only, except as to such of them as carry more certain marks, to be afterwards taken notice of.

Of

Dunkeld. He was esteemed a good composer, and a fine performer on the harp, to which he sung in a pathetic manner. Many of his songs are preserved in that country.

Of our most ancient melodies, I have, in the beginning of this essay, given a few, such as Gil Morrice, &c. with what I imagine to be the signatures of their antiquity. To what aera these can be referred, I do not pretend to say: My conjecture, however, is, that, from their artless simplicity, they belong to an age prior to James I. The investigation of other pieces of our oldest music, by the same standard, may be an agreeable amusement to the curious.

From the genius of King James, his profound skill in the principles of music, and great performance on the harp, we may esteem him the inventor and reformer of the Scottish vocal music. Of his age (some of them very probably of his composition) may be reckoned the following simple, plaintive, and antient melodies: Jocky and Sandie—Waly waly up the bank—Ay waking Oh!—Be constant ay—Will ye go to the ewe-bughts, Marion.

From these, by an insensible gradation, we are led to what I conjecture may be called the second epoch of our songs, that is, from the beginning of the reign of King James IV. James V. and to the end of that of Queen Mary, within which period may be reckoned the following songs, the old tragic ballads

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

first invented and introduced into our old music by that Prince.

In the third aera; which comprehends the space of time from Queen Mary to the Restoration, may be classed the following songs, Through the lang muir I followed my Willie—Pinky House—Etrick Banks—I'll never leave thee—The Broom of Coudenknows—Down the burn Davie—Auld Rob Morris—Where Helen lies—Fie on the wars—Thro' the wood, laddie—Fie let us a' to the wedding—Muirland Willie.

From these we are led to the last aera, that is, from the Restoration, to the Union. Within this period, from their more regular measure and more modern air, we may almost, with certainty, pronounce the following fine songs to have been made, An' thou wert mine ain thing—O dear minnie, what sal I do—The bush-aboon Traquair—The last time I came o'er the moor—Mary Scot, the flower of Yarrow—The bonny boatman—Sae merry as we ha' been—My dearie an' thou die—She rose and let me in—My apron, dearie—Love is the cause of my mourning—Allan water—There's my thumb I'll ne'er beguile thee—The Highland laddie—Bonny Jean of Aberdeen—The lass of Patie's mill—The yellow-hair'd laddie—John Hay's bonny lassie—Tweed-side—Lochaber.

We are not, however, to imagine, that, from this last period, the genius of Scottish music had taken flight: That is not the case. Indeed, the number of Scottish songs has of late not much increased; it, nevertheless, is true, that, since that last period, several fine songs have been made, which will stand the test of time. Amongst these are, The birks of Invermay—The banks of Forth—Roslin Castle—The braes of Ballendine. The two last were composed by Oswald, whose genius in composition, joined to his taste in the performance of the Scottish music, was natural and pathetic.

In thus classing the songs, as above, it is obvious, that no fixed or certain rules can be prescribed. Some of these old songs, it is true, ascertain of themselves the precise æra to which they belong; such as, The flowers of the Forest, composed on the fatal battle of Flowden, where the gallant James IV. and the flower of the Scottish nobility and gentry fell;—The Souters of Selkirk, composed * on the same occasion;—Gilderoy, made on the

* This ballad is founded on the following incident:—Previous to the battle of Flowden, the town-clerk of Selkirk conducted a band of eighty souters, or shoemakers, of that town, who joined the royal army; and the town-clerk, in reward

the death of a famous outlaw-hanged by James V.; — Queen Mary's Lament; — The bonny Erle of Murray, slain by Huntlie in 1592. In general, however, in making those arrangements, besides the characters which I have mentioned, as I know of no other distinguishing marks for a fixed standard, the only rule I could follow was to select a few of the most undoubted ancient melodies; such as may be supposed to be the production of the simplest instrument, of the most limited scale, as the shepherd's reed; and thence to trace them gradually downward; to more varied, artful, and regular modulations, the compositions of more polished manners and times, and suitable to instruments of a more extended scale.

If, in following this plan, I have been successful, it will afford entertainment to a musical genius, to trace the simple strains of our rude ancestors through reward of his loyalty, was created a Knight-banneret by that Prince. They fought gallantly, and were most of them cut off. A few who escaped, found on their return, in the forest of Lady-wood edge, the wife of one of their brethren lying dead, and her child sucking her breast. Thence the town of Selkirk obtained, for their arms, a woman sitting upon a sarcophagus, holding a child in her arms; in the background a wood; and on the sarcophagus the arms of Scotland.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

escaped the rage of the Reformers, we find their music to have consisted entirely of harmonic compositions, of four, five, often of six, seven, and eight parts, all in strict counterpoint. Such were perfectly suitable to the solemnity of religious worship; and, when performed by a full choir of voices, accompanied by the organ, must undoubtedly have had a solemn and awful effect upon a mind disposed to devotion. Church-music has nothing to do with the passions. The stile of such composition is to calm the mind, and inspire devotion, suitable to the majesty of that Being to whom it is addressed. Nothing, however, can be more opposite than such harmonic compositions to the genius of love-songs, which consist in the simple melody of one single part.

It is a common tradition, that, in ridicule of the cathedral-service, several of their hymns were, by the wits among the Reformed, burlesqued, and sung as profane ballads. Of this there is some remaining evidence. The well-known tunes of *John come kiss me now—Kind Robin lo'es me—and John Anderson my jo—*are said to be of that number.

At the establishment of the Reformation, one of the first pious works of the Reformed clergy was, to translate, into Scottish metre, the Psalms of David, and to introduce them into the kirks, to be sung to the old church-tunes. John Knox's book of psalms, called The Common Tunes, is still extant, and sung in the churches, and consists of four parts; a treble, tenor, counter-alt, and bass. The harmony of these tunes is learned and full; and proves them to be the work of very able masters in the counterpoint.
to

In order, however, to enlarge the psalmody, the clergy soon after were at pains to translate, into Scottish metre, several parts of scripture, and some old Latin hymns, and other pieces. At the same time, as they had no objections to the old music, they made an effort to reclaim some of those tunes from the profane ballads into which they had been burlesqued, and sung by the vulgar.

A collection of these pieces was printed at Edinburgh about the 1590, by Andro Hart, in old Saxon, or black letter, under the title of, A compendious book of godly and spirituall songs, collectit out of sundry parts of the scripture, with sundrie of other ballats, changed out of prophaine sanges, for avoiding of sinne and harlotrie, &c.

Amongst

Amongst these ballads, John come kifs me now makes his appearance; stripped indeed of his prophanè dress, which had promoted sinne and barlot-rie; but, in exchange, so strangely equipped in his pénitential habit, as to make a more ridiculous figure than his brother Jack, in the Tale of a Tub. As a curiosity, I shall give two or three of the stanzas of this new-converted godly ballad.

John come kifs me now,
 John come kifs me now,
 John come kifs me by and by,
 And mak na mair adow.

The Lord thy God I am,
 That (John) does thee call
 John, represents man,
 By grace celestial.

My prophets call, my preachers cry,
 John come kifs me now,
 John come kifs me by and by,
 And mak na mair adow.

‘ To laugh were want of godliness and grace,
 ‘ And to be grave exceeds all power of face.’

POPE.

What a strange medley of canting absurdity and nonsense! Such shocking indecent familiarity, under the name of Devotion! This was the leven, which,

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

mer; Timotheus played and fung his own lyrical poems; and the poet Simonides his own elegies:

‘ Quid moëstius lacrymis Simonidis !’

exclaims Catullus; and, inspired with the genius of music, in this fine apostrophe, cries out our great poet!

And, O sad Virgin, could thy power,
But raise Museus from his bower!
Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing,
Such notes as warbled on the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek,
And made hell grant what love did seek.

Let us acknowledge the excellency of the Greek music; yet as the principles of harmony, or composition in parts, seem not to have been known to them, at least as far as has yet been discovered, this excellency of their music must have resulted from the natural melody of their airs, expressive of the words to which they were adapted. In this light, therefore, we may run a parallel between the ancient Greek music and our Scottish melodies; and, in spite of the prejudiced fondness which we are apt to conceive in favour of the ancients, it is probable that we do the best of their music no hurt in classing it with our own.

What person of taste can be insensible to the fine airs of, I'll never leave thee—Allan Water—An' thou wer't mine ain thing—The braes of Ballendine, &c. when sung with taste and feeling!

Love, in its various situations of hope, success, disappointment, and despair, are finely expressed in the natural melody of the old Scottish songs. How naturally does the air correspond with the following description of the restless languor of a maid in love!

Ay wa'king oh!
 Wa'king ay and wearie;
 Sleep I canna get,
 For thinking o' my dearie.

When I sleep, I dream;
 When I wake, I'm irie*:
 Rest I canna get,
 For thinking o' my dearie.

The simple melody of the old song Waly! Waly! is the pathetic complaint of a forsaken maid, bemoaning

* Irie is a Scottish word that has no correspondent term in English. It implies that sort of fear which is conceived by a person apprehensive of apparitions.

moaning herself along the late-frequented haunts of her and her lover. The old Scottish word waly signifies wail, or heavy sorrow, and lamentation.

Waly! waly! up the bank,

And waly! waly! down the brae;

And waly! waly! on yon burn side,

Where I and my true love did gae:

Thus Petrarch, in one of his beautiful sonnets;

Valle, che de lamenti miei fe' piena,

Fiume, che spesso del mio pianger cresci.—

Colle che mi piacesti, hor mi rincresci,

Ov' ancor per usanza amor mi mena—

Quinci vedea' l mio bene!—&c.

How soothing and plaintive is the lullaby of a forsaken mistress over her child, expressed in Lady Anne Bothwell's lament! How romantic the melody of the old love-ballad of Hero and Leander! What a melancholy love-story is told in the old song of Jocky and Sandy! and what frantic grief expressed in I wish I were where Helen lies!

It were endless to run through the many fine airs expressive of sentiment, and passion, in the number of our Scottish songs, which, when sung in the genuine natural manner, must affect the heart of every

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

It is a common defect in some who pretend to sing, to affect to smother the words, by not articulating them, so as we scarce can find out either the subject or language of their song. This is always a sign of want of feeling, and the mark of a bad singer; particularly of Scottish songs, where there is generally so intimate a correspondence between the air and subject. Indeed, there can be no good vocal music without it.

The proper accompaniment of a Scottish song, is a plain, thin, dropping bass, on the harpsichord or guitar. The fine breathings, those heart-felt touches, which genius alone can express, in our songs, are lost in a noisy accompaniment of instruments. The full chords of a thorough-bass should be used sparingly, and with judgment, not to overpower, but to support and raise the voice at proper pauses.

Where, with a fine voice, is joined some skill and execution on either of those instruments, the air, by way of symphony, or introduction to the song, should always be first played over; and, at the close of every stanza, the last part of the air should be repeated, as a relief for the voice, which it gracefully sets off. In this symphonic part, the performer performer may shew his taste and fancy on the instrument, by varying it ad libitum.

A Scottish song admits of no cadence; I mean, by this, no fanciful or capricious descant upon the close of the tune. There is one embellishment, however, which a fine singer may easily acquire, that is, an easy shake. This, while the organs are flexible in a young voice, may, with practice, be easily attained.

A Scottish song, thus performed, is among the highest of entertainments to a musical genius. But is this genius to be acquired either in the performer or hearer? It cannot. Genius in music, as in poetry, is the gift of Heaven. It is born with us; it is not to be learned.

An artist on the violin may display the magic of his fingers, in running from the top to the bottom of the finger-board, in various intricate capricio's, which, at most, will only excite surprise; while a very middling performer, of taste and feeling, in a subject that admits of the pathos, will touch the heart in its finest sensations. The finest of the Italian composers, and many of their fingers, possess this to an amazing degree. The opera-airs of these

these great masters, Pergolese, Tomelli, Galuppi, Perez, and many others of the present age, are astonishingly pathetic and moving. Genius, however, and feeling, are not confined to country or climate. A maid, at her spinning-wheel, who knew not a note in music, with a sweet voice, and the force of a native genius, has oft drawn tears from my eyes. That gift of Heaven, in short, is not to be defined: It can only be felt.

I cannot better conclude this essay, than in the words of one who possessed it in the most exalted degree. Addressing himself to a young composer, he speaks thus: ‘ Seek not to know what is genius. If thou hast it, thy feelings will tell thee what it is. If thou hast it not, thou never wilt know it. The genius of the musician subjects the universe to its power. It draws its pictures by sounds. It expresses ideas by feelings, and feelings by accents. We feel in our hearts the force of the passions which it excites. Through the medium of genius, pleasure assumes additional charms, and the grief which it excites breaks forth into cries. But, alas! to those who feel not in themselves the spring of genius, its expressions convey no idea. Its prodigies are unknown to those who cannot imitate them. Wouldst thou

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

FORGOTTEN BOOKS

FULL

MEMBERSHIP

797,885 Books!

All you can read

for only

$8.99/month

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

reading this poem, which is said by the editor to be taken from a MS. of Dr Percy's, the learned and ingenious publisher of the Reliques of Ancient Poetry, and discovered by him in an ancient MS. collection of old Scottish songs, preserved in the Pepysian Library. Although at present I will not take upon me to determine with precision, yet I incline to think that this may be the poem mentioned in the quotation from Major, p. 200, of this Dissertation, as a popular ballad composed by King James I. and, taking it as such, I think the Public is greatly indebted to Dr Percy for the discovery of one of the desiderata of the poetical works of that Prince; and likewise to the ingenious editor of the Scottish Ballads, for giving it to the Public. The editor has added a short note, as the remark of Dr Percy on this poem, which is as follows: 'This song, written by King James I. is a proof that Christ's Kirk on the Green was written by his descendant James V. being evidently a more modern composition.'

High as my opinion is of Dr Percy's judgment, I can by no means submit to his decision on this point. I have read both the poems in question with attention, the result of which, in my humble opinion, is, that they appear to be compositions of the same age. It must be confessed, that, in judging of ancient writings, it is no easy matter, to fix, with precision, the true aera to which poems written even within a century of one another may belong. To give one example: No body will doubt that the poem called The King's Quair was written by King James I. As little doubt is there of the authenticity of the Æneis of Virgil, by Gavin Douglas; and, although there has elapsed near a century between the first and the last of these poems, to one who was to judge only from the language, without knowing the precise age in which these poems were written, it would be difficult to ascertain which of them is most modern. To give another instance: Chaucer, at this day, appears to be as modern, and fully as intelligible in his language, as Gavin Douglas's Æneis, written above a hundred years after.
ing

Language, like manners, varies in its progression. At different periods it is sometimes rapid, sometimes slow, and often stationary, according to the influence of contingent circumstances. Who would judge, from the language of Boccaccio, or Petrarcha, and that of Metastasio, that near four centuries had elapsed between them? The truth is, that, from Chaucer to near a century after, the English language appears to have advanced very little, that is, during the bloody wars between the houses of York and Lancaster; so that, of writings falling within that period, it is no easy matter to discern any discrepancy of language. But, to come to a closer examination, there appears in both poems a similarity of phrase and of words, of which several instances might be given, sufficient to show that they are coeval, and probably the works of the same hand. Indeed, to give judgment between them, or to say that the one is of an age older than the other, appears to me to be so nice; that, were I not convinced, from their internal marks, that they have been written in the same age, one might be induced to think, from sundry stanzas in the poem of Peblis, that it is much more modern than Christ's Kirk. The following stanzas, by changing only the orthography in a few of the final syllables, might pass for the language of the present century, so inconclusive are the arguments that may be used on this head.

See the 1st, 2d, and 4th stanzas.—The following 9th stanza, in the modern Scottish orthography, might pass as the production of the present day:

‘ Then they came to the town’s end,

‘ Withouten more delay,

‘ He

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

DELVE INTO FANTASY, MAGIC, MYTHOLOGY & FOLKLORE

Forgotten Books'
Full Membership gives
access to 797,885 ancient
and modern, fiction and
non-fiction books.

Continue

*Fair usage policy applies

King James I. Let me ask the gentlemen on the other side of the question, Have they ever heard of any testimony, coeval with Banantyne, that contradicts him? No; it will not be alledged; nor is there is any such assertion for more than a hundred years after. Bishop Gibson is the first who, in anno 1691, says, in his edition of Christ's Kirk, that it is supposed to have been written by James V. and, upon his bare supposition, later writers have followed him. Thus far I think it necessary to add to what I have already said on this point, in answer to the opinion of Dr Percy, taking it, upon the credit of the editor of the Select Scottish Ballads, that the foregoing remark is his.

F I N. I S.