PREFACE.

THIS book contains the Caesar and Virgil required for pass University Matriculation, besides a considerable amount of prose Latin for practice in sight reading. It contains also a statement of the principles of Latin syntax, together with exercises in prose composition based on Caesar. This inclusion of selections from both prose and poetry in the same volume is attended with certain advantages, and is not altogether a new departure, as the plan has been followed in recent years in more than one excellent work published in England and the United States for pupils at this stage.

Since the character of the work required, in future, of pupils preparing for the examination in Latin for University Matriculation and Junior Teachers is materially changed, the book has been prepared mainly with a view to meeting the new requirements.

According to the new prescription, special importance is to be attached to the translation at sight of passages of average difficulty from Caesar. The prescribed portion of Caesar, while of an amount sufficient to prepare the pupil for the test of his knowledge of Latin Syntax and his power of idiomatic translation, is obviously too small to give sufficient practice in sight reading. Accordingly, the story of Caesar's Conquest of Gaul (Books I.-IV.) has been given in, as far as practicable, Caesar's own language. This has been reduced in amount to somewhat more than the length of an average book of Caesar, by the elimination of digressions, by the omission or modification of passages of more than average difficulty, and in the earlier sections by a certain measure of simplification. These simplified sections would also serve admirably for an easy transition from the introductory book to the reading of Caesar.

The prescribed text of Caesar has been annotated with a view to the accurate comprehension of the author, to syntactical study and idiomatic translation. The classified index of noteworthy points of syntax will, we trust, be found useful to both teacher and pupil, especially for purposes of review.

The statement of syntax contains, printed in large type, the more common rules, which should be carefully studied by all pupils, and upon which the exercises in composition are based. It deals also with many points which are not found in the ordinary introductory book, or necessary for the prescribed prose composition, but a knowledge of which, nevertheless, is often required for the intelligent reading of the prescribed authors, and the absence of which would necessitate the use of an additional book on Latin grammar. The portions dealing with these points are printed in smaller type.

Of the sections printed in smaller type the following should be carefully studied: sections 179 to 184 on the use of the tenses; and sections 201 to 205 on idiomatic translation.

An attempt has been made to give an accurate presentation of the rules and facts of Latin syntax, in the light derived from the standard authorities, including Gildersleeve and Lodge, Harkness, Bennett, Allen and Greenough, Lane, West, and Hale and Buck.

To illustrate the common rules of Latin syntax, a double series of exercises on prose composition is given, one series based on the Bellum Gallicum generally, the other on the prescribed chapters of Books IV. and V.

The notes on the prescribed Virgil are meant to promote the intelligent and appreciative reading of that author, in other words to help the pupil to understand the author's meaning, to feel the influence of his poetic charm, and to render the Latin lines with taste and sympathy into worthy idiomatic English prose. While it has been deemed undesirable to treat the Virgil, like the Caesar, as a subject of special grammatical study, yet every effort has been made to enable the pupil to cope with those difficulties in Virgilian syntax and Virgilian diction which so often prove a bar to the comprehension or the adequate expression of the poet's meaning.

INTRODUCTION.

CAIUS JULIUS CAESAR.

Rise to Eminence.

CAIUS JULIUS CAESAR was born at Rome on the 12th of July, 100 B.C. (or, as Mommsen holds, in 102 B.C.), of one of the oldest patrician families of that city. Although of aristocratic birth, he espoused the cause of the popular party, and after barely escaping with his life on the defeat of that party by Sulla in 82 B.C., he withdrew from active politics for several years. By 70 B.C., however, he had become a favorite of the people, and one of its most influential leaders. He rose rapidly through the various grades of office, being made in succession quaestor, aedile, pontifex maximus (a life-office), praetor, and finally consul in 59 B.C.

First Triumvirate.

The three leading men of Rome at this time were Pompey, representing the nobles ; Caesar, the leader of the popular party ; and Crassus, whose influence was largely due to his immense wealth. On Caesar's suggestion they formed a coalition (the so-called First Triumvirate), the result of which was to place the practical supremacy of the state in the hands of these three men. The powerful influence of this coalition secured for him, after his consulship, the administration for five years of the three provinces, Illyricum and Cisalpine and Transalpine Gaul.* In 55 B.C., by an agreement with Pompey and Crassus, this command was extended for another period of five years.

Conquest of Gaul and Expeditions to Britain.

From 58 to 51 B.C. Caesar was engaged in the conquest of Gaul. In the first three campaigns he made himself master of that country from the Province and the Pyrenees to the Rhine and the Ocean. In the fourth year (55 B.C.), after driving back across the Rhine certain invading German tribes, Caesar late in the summer undertook a reconnoitring expedition to Britain. He did not venture inland, and returned in a few weeks, but "he had learned where and how to land, and had noted the British method of fighting; above all he had accustomed his men to the sight of the sea and the painted barbarians." Caesar was not satisfied with this expedition, and in the next summer (54 B.C.), in spite of growing disaffection in Gaul, set sail for Britain with a much larger force, as if for a serious invasion. But though he subdued all the south-eastern districts, the Britons fought obstinately, and he had to withdraw at the end of the summer without being able to make any permanent impression upon this distant country, which was not again visited by a Roman army for nearly a century. The remaining three years (53 to 51 B.C.) were spent in completing the subjugation of Gaul, and especially in crushing the insurrections that from time to time broke out. Among the results of Caesar's conquest of Gaul were, first, that the boundaries of the Roman empire were now extended to the English Channel and the Rhine, and secondly, that the Roman language and civilization became so firmly implanted in Gaul that, even after nearly two thousand years, the language of that country (the French) is a modified Latin, and its laws and institutions show everywhere the influence of Rome. A more immediate result also was to furnish Caesar with an army of experienced and devoted veterans, such as the Roman world had never before seen.

* For the various senses in which the word Gaul is used, see the Vocabulary under Gallia.

Civil War and Death.

After the conquest of Gaul, civil war arose between Caesar and Pompey, now his sole remaining rival, Crassus having fallen in battle in the East. By the overthrow of the Pompeian party Caesar became practically supreme ruler of the Roman world. He showed unexpected clemency to his former opponents, and began a brilliant career as administrator and reformer. But the Roman aristocracy, alarmed at his great power and popularity and their own loss of prestige, formed a conspiracy to remove him, being actuated in some cases by jealousy, in others by an honest but short-sighted desire to bring back republican freedom; and on the Ides (the 15th) of March, 44 B.C., "the foremost man of all this world" fell beneath the daggers of the conspirators, at the base of Pompey's statue. Saddest of all, one of his many wounds was dealt by the hand of his intimate friend Brutus.

Personal Appearance.

We are told that in personal appearance Caesar was noble and commanding. He was tall of stature and of slender build, his complexion was pale, his nose prominent and decidedly "Roman," his eyes were black, keen and full of expression. In later life he had a tendency to baldness. His constitution was naturally delicate, and he was subject to attacks of epilepsy, but by constant exercise and temperate living he managed to acquire vigorous health, so that he could endure the most prolonged toil and most arduous exertions.

Versatile Genius.

The genius of Caesar was many-sided, and he excelled in everything he undertook. Not only was he one of the greatest generals of all time, but he was pre-eminent as a law-giver, a jurist and a statesman. Moreover, he has left behind him a reputation as an orator, a poet, a mathematician, an architect and engineer, while as an historian he will ever rank with the highest.

Extant Works.

Caesar was the author of numerous literary works, on many different subjects, but of these all that have come down to us are his Commentarii De Bello Gallico (from which the selections contained in this book are taken), and his Commentarii De Bello Civili (in three books), a history of the war between himself and Pompey. The Commentaries* of Caesar are memoirs written by himself, descriptive of his different campaigns. It is uncertain whether the work was written as the war went on, and issued book by book, or whether it was composed towards the end of the war. Each book of the Commentaries on the Gallic War contains the account of a single year's campaign. There are seven books in all, the history of the eighth year's operations having been composed after Caesar's death by Aulus Hirtius, one of his lieutenants.

Literary Style.

The Commentarii, by universal consent, are written in the purest Latin, in a style marked by great simplicity and conciseness, and, in spite of its condensation, by singular ease and elegance. The best judges among Caesar's contemporaries praise his literary style for its purity of diction, and its business-like directness of expression. Cicero, the best literary critic of his day, has this to say of the Commentaries: "I pronounce them to be, in fact, entirely commendable; for they are simple, straightforward, of a charming elegance, stripped of all rhetorical adornments." In the choice of words also Caesar is pure and classical, in accordance with the advice quoted from him by the Roman grammarian Gellius, "to shun an uncommon or out-of-the-way word as a ship would a rock."

* Commentarii, meaning sketches, jottings, is used as the title of a book on any subject, but especially an historical one, which is only sketched down or written without careful revision.

THE STORY OF CAESAR'S CONQUEST OF GAUL.

THE FIRST CAMPAIGN, 58 B.C.

Caesar, hearing of a threatened emigration of the Helvetian nation, hastens from Rome to Transalpine Gaul to prevent a movement so dangerous to the Roman Province.

1. Gallia est omnis¹ dīvisā in partēs trēs, quārum ūnam incolunt Belgae, aliam Aquitānī, tertiam Gallī, quī ipsōrum² linguā Celtae appellantur. Hōrum omnium fortissimī sunt Belgae, quī ā prōvinciā longissimē absunt, proximique sunt Germānis, quī trāns Rhēnum incolunt, quibuscum continenter bellum gerunt. Helvētiī quoque reliquōs Gallōs virtūte praecēdunt, quod ferē cotidiānis proeliis cum Germānis contendunt. Sed undique locī nātūrā continentur: ūnā ex parte est flūmen Rhēnus altissimus et lātissimus; alterā³ ex parte mōns Jūra altissimus; tertiā ex parte flūmen Rhodanus nostram prōvinciam⁴ ab Helvētiīs dīvidit. Hīs dē causīs Helvētiī nōn lātē vagārī poterant, nec facile finitimīs bellum inferre. Itaque, cum essent hominēs bellandī cupidī, angustōs sē finēs habēre arbitrābantur. Hīs rēbus adductī, oppida sua omnia vicōsque incendere et dē finibus suis cum omnibus cōpiīs exire cōstituērunt et optimam partem tōtius Galliae occupāre.

2. Itineribus omnīnō duōbus domō¹ exīre poterant; quōrum ūnum erat per Sēquanōs, angustum et difficile; alterum per prōvinciam nostram, multō facilius. Caesar, cui prōvincia Gallia eō annō dēcrēta erat, audivit Helvētiōs per prōvinciam nostram iter facere cōnārī. Statim ab urbe proficiscitur et in Galliam pervēnit. Ubi dē ējus adventū Helvētīi certiorēs factī sunt, lēgātōs ad eum mittunt; sed Caesar negat sē posse iter² ūllī per prōvinciam dare. Relinquēbātur ūna³ per Sēquanōs via. Mox Caesarī renūntiātur Helvētiōs per agrum Sēquanōrum iter in Santonum finēs facere, quī nōn longē ā prōvinciā nostrā absunt. Ob eās causās in Ītaliā contendit; duās ibi legiōnēs cōnscribit, et trēs ex hibernīs edūcit; cum hīs quīnque legiōnibus in Galliam per Alpēs ire contendit.

Caesar surprises the Helvetians at the river Arar, and soon after, near Bibracte, inflicts a crushing defeat on the remainder. The survivors are sent back to the homes they had abandoned.

3. Helvētīi jam per finēs Sēquanōrum suās cōpiās trādūxerant, et in Aeduōrum finēs pervēnerant, eōrumque agrōs populābantur. Itaque nē omnēs fortunae sociōrum cōsūmerentur, Caesar ē castris profectus ad Helvētiōs pervēnit⁶. Trēs jam partēs Helvētiōrum flūmen Ararim trānsierant; reliquōs aggressus, māgnam partem eōrum concīdit; reliquī sēsē in proximās silvās abdidērunt. Hōc proeliō factō, ut reliquās cōpiās cōsequī posset⁷, pontem facit, atque ita exercitum trādūcit. Tum per⁸ multōs diēs Caesar Helvētiōs īnsequitur, novissimumque agmen laccessit.

Deceived by false reports, the Roman soldiers are at first reluctant to advance, but Caesar calms their fears. On drawing near the Germans, Caesar has an interview with Ariovistus which the enemy's treachery renders fruitless.

Caesar sends Volusenus to reconnoitre. Meanwhile he receives offers of submission from several states of Britain. Volusenus returns with but little information.

1 21. Ad haec cōgnōscenda, priusquam perīculum faceret, idōneum esse arbitrātus C. Volusēnum cum nāvī longā
 2 praemittit. Huic mandat, ut explōrātīs omnibus rēbus
 3 ad sē quam primum revertātur. Ipse cum omnibus cōpiīs in Morinōs proficiscitur, quod inde erat brevissimus in 4 Britanniam trājectus. Hūc nāvēs undique ex fīnitimīs regiōnibus et quam superiōre aestāte ad Veneticum bellum 5 effēcerat classem jubet convenīre. Interim cōsiliō ējus cōgnitō et per mercātōrēs perlātō ad Britannōs, ā com-plūribus īnsulae cīvitātibus ad eum lēgātī veniunt, quī polliceantur obsidēs dare atque imperiō populī Rōmānī 6 obtemperāre. Quibus auditīs liberāliter pollicitus hor-tātusque, ut in eā sententiā permanērent, eōs domum 7 remittit, et cum iīs unā Commium, quem ipse Atrebatibus superātīs rēgem ibi cōstituerat, cūjus et virtūtem et cōsiliū probābat et quem sibi fidēlem esse arbitrābātur, cūjusque auctōritās in hīs regiōnibus māgnī habēbātur, 8 mittit. Huic imperat, quās possit, adeat cīvitātēs hortōturque, ut populī Rōmānī fidem sequantur, sēque celeriter 9 eō ventūrum nūntiet. Volusēnus perspectīs regiōnibus omnibus, quantum eī facultātis darī potuit, quī nāvī ēgredi ac sē barbarīs committere nōn audēret, quīntō diē ad Caesarem revertitur quaeque ibi perspexisset rēnūntiat.

After receiving the submission of certain of the Morini, Caesar collects his fleet and makes his final arrangements.

1 22. Dum in hīs locīs Caesar nāvium parandārum causā morātur, ex māgnā parte Morinōrum ad eum lēgātī venē-runt quī sē dē superiōris temporis cōnsiliō excūsārent, quod hominēs barbarī et nostrae cōnsuētūdinis imperitī bellum populō Rōmānō fēcissent, sēque ea, quae imperāset, factūrōs pollicērentur. Hōc sibi Caesar satis opportunē accidisse² arbitrātus, quod neque post tergum hostem relinquere volēbat neque bellī gerendī propter annī tempus facultātem habēbat neque hās tantulārum rērum occupātiōnēs Britanniae antepōnendās iūdicābat, māgnū iīs numerum obsidum imperat. Quibus adductīs eōs in fidem recēpit. Nāvibus circiter octōgintā onerāriīs coāctīs contrāctisque,³ quot satis esse ad duās trānsportandās legiōnēs existimābat, quod praetereā nāvium longārum habēbat, quaestōrī lēgātīs praefectisque distribuit. Hūc accēdēbant duodēvigintī⁴ onerāriae nāvēs, quae ex eō locō ab milibus passuum octōventō tenēbantur, quō minus in eundem portum venīre possent : hās equitibus distribuit. Reliquum exercitum⁵ Q. Titūriō Sabīnō et L. Aurunculēiō Cottae lēgātīs in Menapiōs atque in eōs pāgōs Morinōrum, ab quibus ad eum lēgātī nōn vēnerant, dūcendum dedit ; P. Sulpicium⁶ Rūfum lēgātum cum eō praesidiō, quod satis esse arbitrābatur, portum tenēre iussit.

He reaches Britain, but has difficulty in getting a suitable landing-place.

23. Hīs cōstitūtīs rēbus nactus idōneam ad nāvigan-¹dum tempestātem tertiā ferē vigiliā solvit equitēsque in ulteriōrem portum prōgredi et nāvēs cōscendere et sē sequī iussit. Ā quibus cum paulō tardius esset admini-²strātum, ipse hōrā diēi circiter quārtā cum primīs nāvibus Britanniam attigit atque ibi in omnibus collibus expositās

3 hostium cōpiās armātās cōspexit. Cūjus locī haec erat nātūra, atque ita montibus angustē mare continēbātur, utī 4 ex locīs superiōribus in lītus tēlum adigī posset. Hunc ad ēgrediendum nēquāquam idōneum locum arbitrātus, dum reliquae nāvēs eō convenīrent, ad hōram nōnam in ancorīs 5 expectāvit. Interim lēgātīs tribūnīsque mīlitum convocātīs et quae ex Volusēnō cōgnōvisset, et quae fierī vellet, ostendit monuitque, ut rei mīlitāris ratiō, māximē ut maritimae rēs postulārent, ut quae celerem atque instābilem mōtum habērent, ad nūtum et ad tempus omnēs rēs ab 6 iīs administrārentur. Hīs dīmissīs et ventum et aestum ūnō tempore nactus secundum, datō signō et sublātīs ancorīs circiter mīlia passuum septem ab eō locō prōgressus apertō ac plānō lītore nāvēs cōstituit.

The Britons, following along the shore, vigorously oppose the landing.

1 24. At barbarī cōsiliō Rōmānōrum cōgnitō praemissō equitātū et essedāriīs, quō plērumque genere in proeliīs utī cōsuērunt, reliquīs cōpiīs subsecūtī nostrōs nāvibus ēgredi 2 prohibēbant. Erat ob hās causās summa difficultās, quod nāvēs propter māgnitudinem nisi in altō cōstituī nōn poterant, mīlitibus autem ignōtīs locīs, impedītīs manibus, māgnō et gravī onere armōrum oppressīs simul et dē nāvibus dēsiliendum et in fluctibus cōsistendum et cum hostibus 3 erat pūgnandum, cum illī aut ex āridō aut paulum in aquam prōgressī omnibus membrīs expeditīs, nōtissimīs locīs audācter tēla conjicerent et equōs insuēfactōs in-4 citārent. Quibus rēbus nostrī perterritī atque hūjus omnīnō generis pūgnae imperitī nōn eādem alacritāte ac studiō, quō in pedestribus utī proeliīs cōsuērunt, utēbantur.

Caesar manoeuvres to dislodge the enemy, while a brave standard-bearer gallantly heads a rush towards the shore.

25. Quod ubi Caesar animadvertit, nāvēs longās quārum 1 et speciēs erat barbaris inūsitiōrior et mōtus ad ūsum expeditior, paulum removērī ab onerāriis nāvibus et rēmīs incitārī et ad latus apertum hostium cōstituī atque inde fundīs, sagittīs, tormentīs hostēs prōpellī ac submovērī jussit ; quae rēs māgnō ūsuī nostrīs fuit. Nam et nāvium 2 figurā et rēmōrum mōtū et inūsitiōtō genere tormentōrum permōtī, barbarī cōstitērunt ac paulum modo pedem retulērunt. Atque nostrīs militibus cunctantibus, māximē 3 propter altitudinem maris, quī decimae legiōnis aquilam ferēbat, contestātus deōs, ut ea rēs legiōnī fēliciter ēvenīret: “Dēsilīte,” inquit, “militēs, nisi vultis aquilam hostibus prōdere : ego certē meum reī pūblicaē atque imperātōrī officium praestiterō.” Hōc cum vōce māgnā dīxisset, sē ex 4 nāvī prōjēcit atque in hostēs aquilam ferre coepit. Tum 5 nostrī cohortātī inter sē, nē tantum dēdecus admitterētur, ūniversī ex nāvī dēsiluērunt. Hōs item ex proximīs nāvī- 6 bus cum cōspexissent subsecūtī hostibus appropinquārunt.

The Romans, after much fighting, gain the shore and put the Britons to flight.

26. Pūgnātum est ab utrīsque ācriter. Nostrī tamen, 1 quod neque ordinēs servāre neque firmiter īnsistere neque signa subsequī poterant atque alius aliā ex nāvī, quibuscumque signīs occurrerat, sē aggregābat, māgnopere perturbābantur ; hostēs vērō, nōtis omnibus vadīs, ubi ex 2 litore aliquōs singulārēs ex nāvī ēgredientēs cōspexerant, incitātīs equīs impedītōs adoriēbantur, plūrēs paucōs circumsistēbant, aliū ab latere apertō in ūniversōs tēla con-4 jiciēbant. Quod cum animadvertisset Caesar, scaphās longārum nāvium, item speculātōria nāvigia militibus com-plērī jussit et, quōs labōrantēs cōspexerat, hīs subsidia 5 submittēbat. Nostrī, simul in āridō cōstitērunt, suīs omnibus cōsecūtīs in hostēs impetum fēcērunt atque eōs in fugam dedērunt, neque longius prōsequī potuērunt, quod equitēs cursum tenēre atque īnsulam capere nōn potuerant. Hōc ūnum ad prīstinam fortūnam Caesarī dēfuit.

The Britons sue for peace.

1 27. [Hostēs proeliō superātī, simul atque sē ex fugā recēpērunt, statim ad Caesarem lēgātōs dē pāce mīsērunt ;

A portion of Caesar's ships crossing later is dispersed by a storm and driven back to the mainland.

28. Hīs rēbus pāce cōfīrmātā post diem quārtum, 1 quam est in Britanniam ventum, nāvēs duodēvīgintī, dē quibus suprā dēmōnstrātum est, quae equitēs sustulerant, ex superiōre portū lēnī ventō solvērunt. Quae cum appro- 2 pinquārent Britanniae et ex castrīs vidērentur, tanta tempestās subitō coorta est, ut nūlla eārum cursum tenēre posset, sed aliae eōdem, unde erant profectae, referrentur, aliae ad inferiōrem partem īnsulae, quae est propius sōlis occāsū, māgnō suī cum perīculō dējicerentur ; quae tamen 3 ancorīs jactīs cum fluctibus complērentur, necessāriō adversā nocte in altum profectae continentem petiērunt.

The same storm does great damage to the vessels which had crossed with Caesar, and causes much alarm in the camp.

29. Eādem nocte accidit, ut esset lūna plēna, quī diēs 1 maritimōs aestūs māximōs in Ōceanō efficere cōsuēvit, nostrisque id erat incōgnitum. Ita ūnō tempore et longās 2 nāvēs, quibus Caesar exercitum trānsportandum cūrāverat quāsque in āridum subdūxerat, aestus complēbat, et onerāriās, quae ad ancorās erant dēligātae, tempestās afflīctābat, neque ūlla nostrīs facultās aut administrandī aut auxiliandī dabātur. Complūribus nāvibus frāctīs reliquae cum essent 3 fūnibus, ancorīs reliquīsque armāmentīs āmissīs ad nāvigandum inūtilēs, māgna, id quod necesse erat accidere, tōtius exercitūs perturbātiō facta est. Neque enim nāvēs 4 erant aliae, quibus reportārī possent, et omnia deerant, quae ad reficiendās nāvēs erant ūsuī, et, quod omnibus cōnstābat hiemārī in Galliā oportēre, frūmentum hīs in locīs in hiemem prōvisum nōn erat.

Learning of these misfortunes, the Britons who had submitted decide to renew the war, and secretly gather forces.

1 30. Quibus rēbus cōgnitīs prīncipēs Britanniae, quī post proelium ad Caesarem convēnerant, inter sē collocūtī, cum equitēs et nāvēs et frūmentum Rōmānis deesse intellegerent et paucitātem mīlitum ex castrōrum exiguitāte cōgnōscerent, quae hōc erant etiam angustiōra, quod sine impedimentīs 2 Caesar legiōnēs trānsportāverat, optimum factū esse dūxē-runt rebelliōne factā frūmentō commeātūque nostrōs pro-hibēre et rem in hiemem prōducere, quod hīs superātīs aut reditū interclūsīs nēminem postea bellī inferendī causā in 3 Britanniam trānsitūrum cōfidēbant. Itaque rūrsus con-jūrātiōne factā paulātim ex castrīs discēdere et suōs clam ex agrīs dēducere coepērunt.

Caesar, becoming suspicious, collects provisions in the camp and repairs the shattered fleet.

1 31. At Caesar, etsī nōndum eōrum cōnsilia cōgnōverat, tamen et ex ēventū nāvium suārum et ex eō, quod obsidēs dare intermiserant, fore id, quod accidit, suspicābātur.
 2 Itaque ad omnēs cāsūs subsidia comparābat. Nam et frūmentum ex agrīs cotīdiē in castra cōferēbat et quae gravissimē afflictae erant nāvēs, eārum māteriā atque aere ad reliquās reficiendās utēbātur et quae ad eās rēs erant 3 ūsuī ex continentī comportārī jubēbat. Itaque, cum summō studiō ā mīlitibus administrārētur, duodecim nāvibus āmis-sīs, reliquīs ut nāvīgārī cōmodē posset, effēcit.

*A legion out foraging is surprised and surrounded by the Britons.
 Caesar goes to its relief.*

1 32. Dum ea geruntur, legiōne ex cōsuētūdine unā frūmentātum missā, quae appellābātur septima, neque ūllā per tēmōnem percurrere et in jugō īnsistere et sē inde in currūs citissimē recipere cōsuērunt.

On Caesar's approach the Britons withdraw, and spend the next few days in collecting larger forces.

1 34. Quibus rēbus perturbātis nostris novitāte pūgnae tempore opportūnissimō Caesar auxilium tulit: namque ējus adventū hostēs cōstitērunt, nostrī sē ex timōre re-2 cēpērunt. Quō factō ad laccessendum hostem et ad com-mittendum proelium aliēnum esse tempus arbitrātus suō sē locō continuit et brevī tempore intermissō in castra legiōnēs 3 redūxit. Dum haec geruntur, nostris omnibus occupātis, 4 quī erant in agrīs reliquī discessērunt. Secūtae sunt continuōs complūrēs diēs tempestātēs, quae et nostrōs in cas-5 trīs continērent et hostem ā pūgnā prohibērent. Interim barbarī nūntiōs in omnēs partēs dīmīsērunt paucitātemque nostrōrum mīlitum suis praedicāvērunt, et quanta praedae faciendae atque in perpetuum suī liberandī facultās darētur, 6 sī Rōmānōs castrīs expulissent, dēmōstrāvērunt. His rēbus celeriter māgnā multitūdine peditātūs equitātūsque coāctā ad castra vērunt.

When the Britons come against his camp, Caesar meets them and routs them with great slaughter.

1 35. Caesar etsī idem, quod superiōribus diēbus acciderat, fore vidēbat, ut, sī essent hostēs pulsī, celeritāte periculum effugerent, tamen nactus equitēs circiter trīgintā quōs Commius Atrebas, dē quō ante dictum est, sēcum trāns-2 portāverat, legiōnēs in aciē prō castrīs cōstituit. Commissō proeliō diūtius nostrōrum mīlitum impetum hostēs 3 ferre nōn potuērunt ac terga vertērunt. Quōs tantō spatiō secūtī, quantum cursū et vīribus efficere potuērunt, complūrēs ex iīs occīdērunt, deinde omnibus longē lātēque aedificiīs incēnsīs sē in castra recēpērunt.

Having received the enemy's submission, Caesar returns to Gaul, the summer being now over.

36. Eōdem diē lēgātī ab hostibus missī ad Caesarem dē 1 pāce vērunt. Hīs Caesar numerum obsidum, quem ante 2 imperāverat, duplicāvit eōsque in continentem addūcī jussit, quod propinquā diē aequinoctiī infirmīs nāvibus hiemī nāvigationem subjiciendam nōn existimābat. Ipse idōneam 3 tempestātem nactus paulō post mediam noctem nāvēs solvit; quae omnēs incolumēs ad continentem pervērunt; 4 sed ex iīs onerāriae duae eōsdem, quōs reliquī, portūs capere nōn potuērunt et paulō infrā delātae sunt.

A detachment of the Romans, after landing, is attacked by the Morini, but is rescued by Caesar.

37. Quibus ex nāvibus cum essent expositī militēs circiter 1 trecentī atque in castra contenderent, Morinī, quōs Caesar in Britanniam proficiscēns pācātōs reliquerat, spē praedae adductī primō nōn ita māgnō suōrum numerō circumsteterunt ac, sī sēsē interficī nōllent, arma pōnere jussērunt. Cum illī orbe factō sēsē dēfenderent, celeriter ad clāmōrem 2 hominum circiter mīlia sex convērunt. Quā rē nūntiātā Caesar omnem ex castris equitātum suīs auxiliō mīsīt. Interim nostrī militēs impetum hostium sustinuērunt atque 3 amplius hōris quattuor fortissimē pūgnāvērunt et paucīs vulneribus acceptīs complūrēs ex hīs occīdērunt. Postea 4 vērō quam equitātus noster in cōspectum vēnit, hostēs abjectīs armīs terga vertērunt māgnusque eōrum numerus est occīsus.

1 38. Caesar posterō diē T. Labiēnum lēgātum cum iīs
 2 legiōnibus; quās ex Britannia redūxerat, in Morinōs, quī
 3 rebelliōnem fēcerant, mīsit. Quī cum propter siccitatēs palūdum, quō sē reciperent, nōn habērent, quō superiōre annō perfugiō fuerant ūsī, omnēs ferē in potestātem La-4 biēnī pervēnērunt. At Q. Titūrius et L. Cotta lēgātī, quī in Menapiōrum finēs legiōnēs dūxerant, omnibus eōrum agrīs vāstātis, frūmentis succīs, aedificiīs incēnsīs, quod Menapii sē omnēs in dēnsissimās silvās abdiderant, sē ad
 5 Caesarem recēpērunt. Caesar in Belgīs omnium legiōnum hiberna cōstituit. Eō duae omninō civitatēs ex Britannia obsidēs mīserunt, reliquae neglēxērunt. Hīs rēbus gestis ex litteris Caesaris diērum vīgintī supplicatiō ā senātū dēcrēta est.

Legionary Soldier.

LIBER QUINTUS.

Caesar orders more vessels to be built ; he then spends the winter in attending to the affairs of his two other provinces.

1. L. Domitiō Ap. Claudiō cōsulibus, discēdēns ab 1 hibernīs Caesar in Ītaliā, ut quotannis facere cōsuērat, lēgātīs imperat, quōs legiōnibus praefēcerat, utī quam plūrimās possent hieme nāvēs aedificandās veterēsque re-ficiendās cūrārent. Eārum modum fōrmamque dēmōnstrat. 2 Ad celeritātem onerandī subductiōnēsque paulō facit hu-miliōrēs, quam quibus in nostrō marī utī cōsuēvimus, atque id eō magis, quod propter crēbrās commūtātiōnēs aestuum minus māgnōs ibi fluctūs fierī cōgnōverat ; ad onera ac multitudinem jūmentōrum trānsportandam paulō lātiōrēs, quam quibus in reliquīs ūtimur maribus. Hās 3 omnēs āctuāriās imperat fierī, quam ad rem humilitās multum adjuvat. Ea, quae sunt ūsuī ad armandās nāvēs, 4 ex Hispāniā apportārī jubet. Ipse, conventibus Galliae 5 citeriōris perāctīs in Īllyricum proficīscitur, quod ā Pīrūstīs finitimam partem prōvinciae incursiōnibus vāstārī audiēbat.
 Eō cum vēnisset, cīvitātibus milītēs imperat certumque in 6 locum convenīre jubet. Quā rē nūntiātā Pīrūstae lēgātōs 7 ad eum mittunt, quī doceant nihil eārum rērum publicō factum cōsiliō, sēsēque parātōs esse dēmōnstrant omnibus ratiōnibus dē injūriīs satisfacere. Perceptā ōrātiōne eōrum 8 Caesar obsidēs imperat eōsque ad certam diem addūcī jubet ; nisi ita fēcerint, sēsē bellō cīvitātem persecūtūrum dēmōnstrat. Iīs ad diem adductīs ut imperāverat, arbitrōs inter 9 cīvitātēs dat, quī litem aestiment poenamque cōstituant.

Returning in the spring he orders the fleet and army to assemble for another expedition to Britain, then goes to the country of the Treveri, whose loyalty was suspected.

1 2. His cōfectīs rēbus conventibusque perāctīs, in citeriōrem Galliam revertitur atque inde ad exercitum proficīs-2 citur. Eō cum vēnisset, circuitīs omnibus hibernīs singulārī militum studiō in summā omnium rērum inopiā circiter sescentās ējus generis, cūjus suprā dēmōstrāvimus, nāvēs et longās vīgintī octō, invenit instrūctās, neque multum 3 abesse ab eō, quīn paucīs diēbus dēdūcī possint. Collaudātīs militibus atque iīs quī negōtiō praefuerant, quid fierī velit ostendit, atque omnēs ad portum Itium convenire jubet, quō ex portū commodissimum in Britanniam trā-jectum esse cōgnōverāt, circiter mīlium passuum trīgintā ā continentī; huic rei quod satis esse vīsum est militum 4 reliquit. Ipse cum legiōnibus expeditīs quattuor et equitibus octingentīs in finēs Trēverōrum proficīscitur, quod hī neque ad concilia veniēbant, neque imperiō pārēbant, Germānōsque Trānsrhēnānōs sollicitāre dicēbantur.

Two rival chiefs of the Treveri appeal to Caesar.

1 3. Haec civitās longē plūrimū tōtīus Galliae equitātū valet māgnāsque habet cōpiās peditum, Rhēnumque, ut 2 suprā dēmōstrāvimus, tangit. In eā civitāte duo dē prīncipātū inter sē contendēbant, Indūtiomārus et Cinge-3 torix; ē quibus alter, simul atque dē Caesaris legiōnumque adventū cōgnitum est, ad eum vēnit; sē suōsque omnēs in officiō futūrōs, neque ab amīcitiā populī Rōmānī dēfectūrōs 4 cōfirmāvit, quaeque in Trēverīs gererentur, ostendit. At Indūtiomārus equitātum peditātumque cōgere, iīsque, quī per aetātem in armīs esse nōn poterant, in silvam Arduennam abditīs, quae ingentī māgnitūdine per mediōs finēs Trēverōrum ā flūmine Rhēnō ad initium Rēmōrum pertinet, bellum parāre instituit. Sed posteāquam nōnnūllī prīncipēs 5 ex eā cīvitāte et familiāritāte Cingetorīgis adductī et adventū nostrī exercitūs perterritī ad Caesarem vēnērunt, et dē suīs prīvātīm rēbus ab eō petere coepērunt, quoniam cīvitātī cōsulere nōn possent, veritus nē ab omnibus dēsererētur, Indūtiomārus lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittit : sēsē 6 idcirco ab suīs discēdere atque ad eum venīre nōluisse, quō facilius cīvitātem in officiō continēret, nē omnis nōbilitātis discessū plēbs propter imprūdentiam lāberētur ; itaque esse 7 cīvitātem in suā potestāte, sēsēque sī Caesar permitteret, ad eum in castra ventūrum, suās cīvitātisque fortūnās ējus fideī permissūrum.

Caesar decides in favor of Cingetorix, while requiring the submission of Indutiomarus.

4. Caesar, etsī intellegēbat quā dē causā ea dīcerentur, 1 quaēque eum rēs ab institūtō cōsiliō dēterrēret, tamen, nē aestātem in Trēverīs cōsūmere cōgerētur, omnibus ad Britannicum bellum rēbus comparātīs, Indūtiomārum ad sē cum ducentīs obsidibus venīre iussit. Hīs adductīs, in 2 iīs filiō propinquisque ējus omnibus, quōs nōminātīm ēvo-cāverat, cōsōlātus Indūtiomārum hortātusque est, utī in officiō manēret : nihilō tamen sēcīus prīncipibus Trēverōrum 3 ad sē convocātīs hōs singillātīm Cingetorīgī conciliāvit :
quod cum meritō ējus ā sē fierī intellegēbat, tum māgnī interesse arbitrābātur ējus auctōritātem inter suōs quam plūrimū valēre, cūjus tam ēgregiam in sē voluntātem

4 perspexisset. Id tulit factum graviter Indūtiomārus, suam grātiā inter suōs minui, et quī jam ante inimicō in nōs animō fuisset, multō gravius hōc dolōre exārsit.

Coming to the seaport Caesar finds the fleet and army ready.

1 5. Hīs rēbus cōstitutīs Caesar ad portum Itium cum 2 legiōnibus pervenit. Ibi cōgnōscit sexāgintā nāvēs, quae in Meldīs factae erant, tempestāte rējectās cursum tenēre nōn potuisse atque eōdem, unde erant profectae, revertisse ; reliquās parātās ad nāvigandum atque omnibus rēbus in-3 strūctās invenit. Eōdem equitātus tōtīus Galliae convenit numerō mīlium quattuor, prīcipēsque ex omnibus cīvitāti-4 bus ; ex quibus perpaucōs, quōrum in sē fidem perspexerat, relinquere in Galliā, reliquōs obsidum locō sēcum dūcere dēcrēverat, quod cum ipse abesset, mōtum Galliae verē-bātur.

Dumnorix, a disaffected and ambitious Gaul, causes trouble.

1 6. Erat unā cum cēterīs Dumnorīx Aeduus, dē quo ante ab nōbīs dictum est. Hunc sēcum habēre in primīs cōn-stituerat, quod eum cupidum rērum novārum, cupidum imperii, māgnī animī, māgnae inter Gallōs auctōritātis
2 cōgnōverat. Accēdēbat hūc, quod in conciliō Aeduōrum Dumnorīx dīxerat sibi ā Caesare rēgnum cīvitātis dēferri ; quod dictum Aeduī graviter ferēbant, neque recūsandī aut dēprecandī causā lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittere audēbant.
3 Id factum ex suīs hospitibus Caesar cōgnōverat. Ille omnibus primō precibus petere contendit, ut in Galliā relinquerētur ; partim quod insuētus nāvigandī mare timē-4 ret ; partim quod religiōnibus impediri sēsē diceret. Postea-quam id obstinātē sibi negārī vīdit, omnī spē impetrandī revocātus resistere ac sē manū dēfendere suōrumque fidem implōrāre coepit, saepe clāmitāns liberum sē liberaeque esse 9 cīvitatīs. Illī, ut erat imperātum, circumstant hominem atque interficiunt; at equitēs Aeduī ad Caesarem omnēs revertuntur.

Caesar crosses over to Britain and lands unopposed.

1 8. Hīs rēbus gestīs Labiēnō in continente cum tribus legiōnibus et equitum mīlibus duōbus relicto, ut portūs tuērētur et rem frūmentāriam prōvidēret, quaeque in Galliā gererentur cōgnōsceret, cōsiliūque prō tempore et prō 2 rē caperet, ipse cum quīnque legiōnibus et parī numerō equitum, quem in continentī reliquerat, ad sōlis occāsum nāvēs solvit, et lēnī Africō prōvectus mediā circiter nocte ventō intermissō cursum nōn tenuit, et longius dēlātus aestū, ortā lūce sub sinistrā Britanniam relictam cōspexit.
 3 Tum rūrsus aestūs commūtātiōnem secūtus rēmīs contendit, ut eam partem īnsulae caperet, quā optimum esse ēgressum 4 superiōre aestāte cōgnōverat. Quā in rē admodum fuit mīlitum virtūs laudanda, quī vectōriīs gravibusque nāvigiīs nōn intermissō rēmigandī labōre longārum nāvium cursum 5 adaequārunt. Accessum est ad Britanniam omnibus nāvibus merīdiānō ferē tempore, neque in eō locō hostis est 6 vīsus; sed, ut postea Caesar ex captīvīs cōgnōvit, cum māgnae manūs eō convēnissent, multitūdine nāvium perterritae, quae cum annōtinīs privātisque, quās suī quisque commodī fēcerat, amplius octingentae ūnō erant vīsae tempore, ā lītore discesserant ac sē in superiōra loca abdiderant.

Leaving a strong guard with the ships he advances into the interior and drives the enemy from one of their strongholds.

9. Caesar expositō exercitū et locō castrīs idōneō captō, 1 ubi ex captīvīs cōgnōvit quō in locō hostium cōpiae cōnsēdissent, cohortibus decem ad mare relīctīs et equitibus trecentīs, quī praesidiō nāvibus essent, dē tertiā vigiliā ad hostēs contendit, eō minus veritus nāvibus, quod in lītore mollī atque apertō dēligātās ad ancoram relinquēbat ; et praesidiō nāvibusque Q. Ātrium praefēcit. Ipse noctū 2 prōgressus mīlia passuum circiter duodecim hostium cōpiās cōspicātus est. Illī, equitātū atque essedīs ad flūmen 3 prōgressī, ex locō superiōre nostrōs prohibēre et proelium committere coepērunt. Repulsī ab equitātū sē in silvās 4 abdidērunt locum nactī ēgregiē et nātūrā et opere mūnitum, quem domesticī bellī, ut vidēbantur, causā jam ante prae-parāverant ; nam crēbrīs arboribus succīsīs omnēs introitūs 5 erant praeclūsī. Ipsī ex silvīs rārī prōpūgnābant nostrōsque 6 intrā mūnitiōnēs ingredi prohibēbant. At militēs legiōnis 7 septimae testūdine factā et aggere ad mūnitiōnēs adjectō locum cēpērunt eōsque ex silvīs expulērunt paucīs vulneribus acceptīs. Sed eōs fugientēs longius Caesar prōsequī 8 vetuit, et quod locī nātūrā ignōrābat, et quod māgnā parte diēi cōsūptā mūnitiōnī castrōrum tempus relinqui volēbat.

As troops are setting out in pursuit, news comes of serious damage caused to the fleet by a storm.

10. Postrīdiē ējus diēi māne tripertitō militēs equitēsque 1 in expeditiōnem mīsīt, ut eōs, quī fūgerant, persequerentur. Hīs aliquantum itineris prōgressīs, cum jam extrēmī essent 2 in prōspectū, equitēs ā Q. Ātriō ad Caesarem vērērunt, quī nūntiārent superiōre nocte māximā coortā tempestāte prope omnēs nāvēs afflīctās atque in lītore ējectās esse, quod neque ancorae fūnēsque subsisterent, neque nautae gubernātō-3 rēsque vim tempestātis patī possent ; itaque ex eō concursū nāvium māgnū esse incommodum acceptum.

Caesar returns, arranges for the repairing of these losses, and again sets out against the enemy, now under Cassivellaunus.

1 11. Hīs rēbus cōgnītīs Caesar legiōnēs equitātumque revocārī atque in itinere resistere jubet, ipse ad nāvēs 2 revertitur ; eadem ferē, quae ex nūntiīs litterīsque cōgnōverat, cōram perspicit, sic ut āmissīs circiter quadrāgintā nāvibus reliquae tamen reficī posse māgnō negōtiō vidēren-3 tur. Itaque ex legiōnibus fabrōs dēligit et ex continentī
 4 aliōs arcessī jubet ; Labiēnō scribit, ut, quam plūrimās posset, iīs legiōnibus, quae sunt apud eum, nāvēs instituat.
 5 Ipse, etsī rēs erat multae operae ac labōris, tamen commodissimum esse statuit, omnēs nāvēs subducī et cum 6 castrīs unā mūnitiōne conjungī. In hīs rēbus circiter diēs decem cōsūmit, nē nocturnīs quidem temporibus ad labō-7 rem militum intermissīs. Subductīs nāvibus castrīsque ēgregiē mūnītis eāsdem cōpiās, quās ante, praesidiō nāvibus 8 reliquit : ipse eōdem, unde redierat, proficīscitur. Eō cum vēnisset, mājōrēs jam undique in eum locum cōpiae Britan-nōrum convēnerant, summā imperiī bellique administrandī commūnī cōsiliō permissā Cassivellaunō, cūjus finēs ā maritimīs civitātibus flūmen dīvidit, quod appellātur Tame-9 sis, ā marī circiter mīlia passuum octōgintā. Huic superiōre tempore cum reliquīs civitātibus continentia bella interces-serant : sed nostrō adventū permōtī Britannī hunc tōtī bellō imperiōque praefēcerant.

A description of the people, products and climate of Britain.

12. Britanniae pars interior ab iis incolitur, quos natos 1 in insulā ipsī memoriā prōditum dīcunt ; maritima pars ab 2 iis, quī praedae ac bellī inferendī causā ex Belgiō trānsiērunt (quī omnēs ferē iis nōminibus cīvitātum appellantur, quibus ortī ex cīvitātibus eō pervēnērunt) et bellō illātō ibi remānsērunt atque agrōs colere coepērunt. Hominum est īfīnīta 3 multitūdō crēberrimaque aedificia ferē Gallicīs cōnsimilia, pecorum māgnus numerus. Ūtuntur [aut aere] aut nummō 4 aureō aut tāleīs ferreīs ad certum pondus exāminātis prō nummō. Nāscitur ibi plumbum album in mediterrāneīs 5 regiōnibus, in maritimīs ferrum, sed ējus exigua est cōpia ; aere ūtuntur importātō. Māteria cūjusque generis, ut in Galliā, est praeter fagum atque abietem. Leporem et gal- 6 līnam et ānserem gustāre fās nōn putant ; haec tamen alunt animī voluptātisque causā. Loca sūnt temperātiōra quam in Galliā, remissiōribus frīgōribus.

 5 reperiēbāmus, nisi certīs ex aquā mēnsūrīs breviōrēs esse 6 quam in continentī noctēs vidēbāmus. Hūjus est longitūdō lateris, ut fert illōrum opīniō, septingentōrum mīlium.
 7 Tertium est contrā septentriōnēs; cui partī nūlla est objecta terra, sed ējus angulus lateris māximē ad Germāniam spectat. Hōc mīlia passuum octingenta in longitūdinem esse exīstimātur. Ita omnis īnsula est in circuitū vīciēs centum mīlium passuum.

The manners and customs of the Britons.

1 14. Ex hīs omnibus longē sunt hūmānissimī, quī Cantium incolunt, quae regiō est maritima omnis, neque multum ā 2 Gallicā differunt cōnsuētūdine. Interiōrēs plērīque frūmenta nōn serunt, sed lacte et carne vīvunt pellibusque sunt vestītī. Omnēs vērō sē Britannī vitrō īficiunt, quod caeruleum efficit colōrem, atque hōc horridiōrēs sunt in 3 pūgnā aspectū; capillōque sunt prōmissō, atque omnī parte 4 corporis rāsā praeter caput et labrum superius. Uxōrēs habent dēnī duodēnīque inter sē commūnēs, et māximē 5 frātrēs cum frātribus parentēsque cum liberīs; sed, sī quī sunt ex hīs nātī, eōrum habentur liberī, quō primum virgō quaeque dēducta est.

The Romans are surprised while building a camp, but drive off the enemy.

1 15. Equitēs hostium essedāriīque ācriter proeliō cum equitātū nostrō in itinere cōflīxērunt, tamen ut nostrī omnibus partibus superiōrēs fuerint atque eōs in silvās
 2 collēsque compulerint; sed complūribus interfectīs cupidius
 3 īsecūtī nōnnūllōs ex suis āmīsērunt. At illī intermissō spatiō imprudentibus nostris atque occupatis in munitiōne castrōrum subitō sē ex silvis ējēcērunt, impetūque in eōs factō, quī erant in statione prō castris collocātī, ācritē pūgnāvērunt ; duābusque missis subsidiō cohortibus ā 4 Caesare, atque hīs primis legionum duārum, cum hae perexiguō intermissō locī spatiō inter sē cōstitissent, novō genere pūgnae perterritis nostris, per mediōs audācissimē perrūpērunt sēque inde incolumēs recēpērunt. Eō diē Q. 5 Laberius Dūrus, tribūnus militum, interficitur. Illī plūribus submissis cohortibus repelluntur.

Armor and Weapons.

The disadvantages under which the Romans lay in fighting with the Britons.

1 16. Tōtō hōc in genere pūgnae, cum sub oculīs omnium ac prō castrīs dīmīcārētur, intellēctum est nostrōs propter gravitātem armōrum, quod neque īnsequī cēdentēs possent neque ab sīgnīs discēdere audērent, minus aptōs esse ad 2 hūjus generis hostem ; equitēs autem māgnō cum perīculō proeliō dīmīcāre, proptereā quod illī etiam cōsultō plērum-que cēderent et, cum paulum ab legiōnibus nostrōs remōvissent, ex essedīs dēsīlīrent, et pedibus disparī proeliō con-3 tenderent. Equestris autem proeliī ratiō et cēdentibus et 4 īnsequentibus pār atque idem perīculum īnferēbat. Accēdē-bat hūc, ut numquam cōfertī, sed rārī māgnīsque intervāllīs proeliārentur statiōnēsque dispositās habērent, atque aliōs aliī deinceps exciperent, integrīque et recentēs dēfatī-gātīs succēderent.

The Romans are again attacked, but inflict such a defeat on the Britons that a large part of them disband.

1 17. Posterō diē procul ā castrīs hostēs in collibus cōnstitērunt, rārīque sē ostendere et lēnius quam prīdiē nostrōs 2 equitēs proeliō laccessere coepērunt. Sed merīdiē cum Caesar pābulandī causā trēs legiōnēs atque omnem equitātum cum C. Trebōniō lēgātō mīsisset, repente ex omnibus partibus ad pābulātōrēs advolāvērunt, sic utī ab sīgnīs legiōnibusque 3 nōn absisterent. Nostrī ācriter in eōs impetū factō rep-pulērunt, neque fīnem sequendī fēcērunt, quoad subsidiō cōnfīsī equitēs, cum post sē legiōnēs vidērent, praecipitēs 4 hostēs ēgērunt ; māgnōque eōrum numerō interfectō neque suī colligendī neque cōsistendī aut ex essedīs dēsīliendī

3 hōc metū lātius vagārī prohibēbat. Relinquēbātur, ut neque longius ab agmine legiōnum discēdī Caesar paterētur, et tantum in agrīs vāstandīs incendiīsque faciendīs hostibus nocērētur, quantum labōre atque itinere legiōnārīī mīlitēs efficere poterant.

The Trinobantes, a powerful British tribe, submit to Caesar.

1 20. Interim Trinobantēs, prope fīrmissima eārum regiōnum cīvitās, ex quā Mandubracius adulēscēns Caesaris fidem secūtus ad eum in continentem Galliam vēnerat, cūjus pater in eā cīvitāte rēgnum obtinuerat, interfectusque erat ā Cassivellaunō, ipse fugā mortem vitāverat, lēgātōs ad 2 Caesarem mittunt pollicenturque sēsē eī dēditūrōs atque 3 imperāta factūrōs ; petunt, ut Mandubracium ab injūriā Cassivellaunī dēfendat, atque in cīvitātem mittat quī prae- 4 sit imperiumque obtineat. Hīs Caesar imperat obsidēs quadrāgintā frūmentumque exercituī Mandubraciumque ad eōs mittit. Illī imperāta celeriter fēcērunt, obsidēs ad numerum frūmentumque mīsērunt.

Many other tribes now submit, and Caesar captures the 'town' of Cassivellaunus.

1 21. Trinobantibus dēfēnsīs atque ab omnī mīlitum injūriā prohibitīs, Cēnimāgnī, Segontiācī, Ancalitēs, Bibrocī, 2 Cassī lēgātiōnibus missīs sēsē Caesarī dēdunt. Ab hīs cōgnōscit nōn longē ex eō locō oppidum Cassivellaunī abesse silvīs palūdibusque mūnītum, quō satis māgnus hominum 3 pecorisque numerus convēnerit. Oppidum autem Britannī vocant, cum silvās impedītās vāllō atque fossā mūniērunt, quō incursiōnis hostium vitandae causā convenīre cōn- 4 suērunt. Eō proficīscitur cum legiōnibus ; locum reperit ēgregiē nātūrā atque opere mūnītum ; tamen hunc duābus ex partibus oppūgnāre contendit. Hostēs paulisper morātī 5 mīlitum nostrōrum impetum nōn tulērunt sēsēque aliā ex parte oppidī ējēcērunt. Māgnus ibi numerus pecoris re- 6 pertus, multīque in fugā sunt comprehēnsī atque interfectī.

A sudden attack on the camp by the sea is repulsed, and Cassivellaunus sues for peace.

22. Dum haec in hīs locīs geruntur Cassivellaunus ad 1 Cantium, quod esse ad mare suprā dēmōnstrāvimus, quibus regiōnibus quattuor rēgēs praeerant, Cingetorīx, Carvilius, Taximagulus, Segovax, nūntiōs mittit atque hīs imperat, utī coāctīs omnibus cōpiīs castra nāvālia dē imprōvisō adoriantur atque oppūgnent. Iī cum ad castra vēnissent, 2 nostrī ēruptione factā multīs eōrum interfectīs, captō etiam nōbilī duce Lugotorīge, suōs incolumēs redūxērunt. Cas- 3 sivellaunus hōc proeliō nūntiātō, tot dētrīmentīs acceptīs, vāstātīs fīnibus, māximē etiam permōtus dēfectiōne civitātum, lēgātōs per Atrebatem Commium dē dēditione ad Caesarem mittit. Caesar, cum cōstituisset hiemāre in 4 continentī propter repentīnōs Galliae mōtūs, neque multum aestātis superesset, atque id facile extrahī posse intellegeret, obsidēs imperat, et quid in annōs singulōs vectīgālis populō Rōmānō Britannia penderet cōstituit ; interdīcit atque 5 imperat Cassivellaunō, nē Mandubraciō neu Trinobantibus noceat.

Caesar returns to the mainland.

23. Obsidibus acceptīs exercitum redūcit ad mare, nāvēs 1 num numerum habēbat, et nōnnūllae tempestāte dēperierant nāvēs, duōbus commeātibus exercitum reportāre īstituit.

 3 Ac sic accidit, utī ex tantō nāvium numerō tot nāvigātiōnibus, neque hōc neque superiōre annō ūlla omnīnō nāvis, 4 quae mīlitēs portāret, dēsīderārētur; at ex iīs, quae inānēs ex continentī ad eum remitterentur, et priōris commeātūs expositīs mīlitibus, et quās postea Labiēnus faciendās cūrā-5 ferē omnēs rējicerentur. Quās cum aliquamdiū Caesar frūstrā exspectāset, nē annī tempore ā nāvigātiōne exclūderētur, quod aequinoctium suberat, necessāriō angustius 6 mīlitēs collocāvit, ac summā tranquillitāte cōsecūtā, secundā initā cum solvisset vigiliā, primā lūce terram attigit omnēsque incolumēs nāvēs perdūxit.

NOTES ON CAESAR, BOOK IV.

N.B.—The references are to the sections of the Syntax and Composition, beginning at page 169.

The following abbreviations are used: cf.=compare; ch., chap.=chapter; fn.=footnote; lit.=literally; sc.=supply, or understand; trans.=translate, translation.

CHAP. 20.

1. exigua: emphatic from position. parte reliqua: abl. absolute (49); equivalent to an etsi clause (48); trans. 'although only a small part . . . and although . . . yet Caesar made an effort.' omnis: 'as a whole.' ad septentriones vergit: 'lies towards the north.' bellis: for case see 130. hostibus subministrata: sc. esse (14); 'had been furnished to the enemy.' •

2. si: 'even if.' gerendum: see 119. deficeret: 'did not enable him,' lit. ? (175; 187, b). usui: see 81. fore: see 14; the subject is contained in the clauses si modo . . . cognovisset. adisset: for adiisset.* For the mood and tense see 187, b, i.; trans. 'approached,' lit. 'should have approached.' genus hominum: 'the character of the inhabitants.' quae omnia: 'all of which,' lit. ? (86, iv. a). fere: with omnia.

* Contracted forms in the perfect, pluperfect and future perfect tenses:

(a) Perfects in -āvī, -ēvī, and also mōvī and nōvī (from moveō and nōscō), often drop v before -is-, -er- or -ēr- and contract the two vowels thus brought together to ā, ē, ō respectively; e.g., nōrat for nōverat, cōnsuērunt for cōnsuēvērunt, imperāsse for imperāvisse.

(b) Perfects in -ivī also drop v before -is-, -er- or -ēr-, but the vowels thus brought together are contracted (to ī) only before -is-; e.g., adisset for adiisset. Before -er- and -ēr-, ī is shortened to i; e.g., audierat for audīverat.

But eō and its compounds, also petō and dēsīnō, drop v also in the first and third singular and first plural of the perfect indicative.

3. neque . . . quisquam : 'no . . . one,' lit. ? illo : adverb. iis ipsis : i.e., mercatoribus. Gallias : 'Gaul.' The plural has reference to the triple division of Gaul with which Caesar begins his Commentaries on the Gallic War : Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres (page 13).

4. vocatis : trans. by 'although' (48). quanta esset . . . portus : depending on reperire poterat (35). belli : 'in war' (85, ii.). uterentur : 'they had' (54). qui essent . . . portus : 'what harbors suitable for . . . existed.' majorum : 'larger than usual' (98, vi.); the war-galleys and transports being larger than the coasting vessels of those regions. poterat : for the imperfect see 180, b.

CHAP. 21.

1. Ad haec cognoscenda : with praemittit, not with idoneum (119). priusquam faceret : 'before making' (156, b). idoneum : 'a suitable person.' arbitratus : see 44, ii.

2. Huic : for the case see 52. ut exploratis . . . revertatur : for the subjunctive see 27 ; trans. 'to find out . . . and return' (47, c). quam primum : see 174, i.

3. in : trans. 'into the country of' (205, j). inde . . . trajectus : the straits of Dover are meant.

4. quam . . . classem : 'the fleet which' (173, c i.). ad : 'for.' Veneticum bellum : the year before (56 B.C.) the tribes on the north-west coast of Gaul, headed by the Veneti, combined to recover their liberty, but were defeated by the Romans in a sea-fight.

5. qui polliceantur : trans. 'to promise' ; see 26. dare : irregularly used for se daturos esse (17 ; 22, vi.). imperio : see 52.

6. Quibus, eos : both referring to legati (50, iii. and fn.) ; trans. quibus by 'these' (172). liberaliter pollicitus : '(and) having made liberal promises,' lit. ? (203, d). permanerent : see 27. domum : see 125.

7. una : adv. Commium : with mittit. superatis : referring to 'That day he overcame the Nervii' (57 B.C.), with which people the Atrebates were allied (see pages 24–30). constituerat: ‘had made.’ ibi: i.e., among the Atrebates. his: of Gaul, not Britain. magni habebatur: ‘was valued highly’; for magni see 88.

8. quas . . . civitates: ‘all the states he can,’ lit. ‘the states which he can’; sc. adire. possit: see 175. adeat: with the same force as ut adeat, ‘to visit’; so hortetur and nuntiet (186, 1, c, i.). ut fidem sequantur: ‘to embrace the alliance,’ depending on hortetur.

9. regionibus: ‘country.’ quantum, etc.: ‘so far as one could who,’ etc.; more lit. ‘so far as opportunity could be given to one who’; for tantum facultatis quantum (174, ii.), ‘according to such measure of opportunity as could be given.’ The whole clause has the value of an adverbial acc. modifying the abl. absol. auderet: for mood see 32. quaeque = et quae. perspexisset: see 36, i.

CHAP. 22.

1. parandarum: see 119. moratur: for the tense see 153. de . . . consilio: ‘for their previous conduct,’ lit. ‘with regard to the policy of previous time.’ They had joined the Belgian confederacy against Caesar two years before, and the next year had been in alliance with the Veneti. quod, etc.: ‘in that, being uncivilized,’ etc. consuetudinis: see 90. This ‘custom’ was, as the Roman poet Virgil expressed it:

‘The ways of peace to proclaim,

populo: trans. by ‘on’ (79). fecissent: for mood see 147. -que: joins excusarent and pollicerentur. ea quae: ‘whatever.’ imperasset: see on adisset, ch. 20, 2.

2. satis: ‘quite.’ post tergum: ‘behind him.’ has tantularum, etc.: ‘attention to such trifling matters,’ lit. ? (85, ii.). anteponendas: sc. esse. Britanniae: dat. (78, v. c); meaning the expedition against Britain. iis imperat: ‘requires (or demands) of them’ (55, iii.). Quibus: the hostages; trans. as in ch. 21, 6. eos: the Morini. in fidem: ‘under his protection.’

3. coactis contractisque : the former of impressing into service, the latter of gathering to one place. quot : 'the number which,' lit. 'as many as'; quot is subject of esse. quod, etc. : 'all the ships of war he had besides,' lit. ? (86, i.). This clause furnishes the object of distribuit.

4. Huc accedebant : 'besides this there were,' lit. 'to this were added.' ab : used adverbially = 'away'; or trans. 'at a distance of.' milibus : see 101. passuum : see 86. tenebantur quo minus, etc. : 'were detained . . . and prevented from being able.' Quo minus, lit. 'whereby the less,' may also be written as one word. possent : see 139, a.

5. ducendum : for the gerundive with do, here agreeing with exercitum, see 121.

CHAP. 23.

1. ad navigandum : see 114, c. tertia vigilia : the time from sunset to sunrise was divided into four equal watches (vigiliae), and the time from sunrise to sunset into twelve equal hours (horae), the length of each varying with the season. solvit : sc. naves. ulteriorem : 'farther,' i.e., up the coast. The exact localities are unknown.

2. A quibus . . . administratum : 'as these carried out their instructions,' lit. ? For the impersonal passive see 56. For tardius, 'too slowly,' see 98, vi. The result was that Caesar reached Britain cum primis (not cum omnibus) navibus. expositas copias armatas : 'the armed forces displayed.'

3. Cujus : 'this' (172). haec : 'as follows'; more fully explained by atque . . . continebatur. ita anguste, etc. : 'so closely bordered.' [Many editions read angustis (with montibus), meaning 'steep,' or 'close to the sea.'] uti : another form for ut; distinguish from ūtī. in : trans. 'to.' posset : for the mood see 29.

4. dum convenirent : depending on exspectavit; 'till . . . should assemble,' or more freely 'for . . . to assemble' (155, b). ad : 'until.'

5. quae fieri vellet : 'what he wished done' (21). monuit . . . administrarentur : 'instructed them to do everything (promptly)

'less familiar,' i.e., than that of the naves onerariae. et motus, etc.; 'and (whose) movements were quicker for service,' i.e., 'were more easily managed.' ad: 'on.' apertum latus: i.e., the right side, unprotected by shields. quae res: 'a manœuvre which,' lit.? usui: as in ch. 20, 2.

2. remorum motu: the Britons used only sails with their large vessels. paulum modo: 'but only a little.'

3. atque; 'and now.' cunctantibus: trans. by 'while' (41, a; 47, a). qui aquilam ferebat: 'the eagle-bearer.' For qui = is qui see 173, a. ut . . . eveniret: see 27. ea res: 'his (lit. that) undertaking.' legioni: see 79. inquit: 'cried'; for position and use see 18, vi. Desilite: the imperative. vultis: from volo. praestitero: trans. freely by future; for the force of the future perfect see 184, ii.

4. voce magna: 'in a loud voice' (103).

5. inter se: 'one another,' lit.? (164, ii.). ne . . . admitteretur: 'not to incur,' lit.? (27). dedecus; i.e., the loss of the eagle. universi: 'in a body'; section 6 shows that Caesar is speaking only of those on the same ship as the standard-bearer.

6. Hos item, etc.: 'when those in the nearest ships saw them, they also,' etc.; lit. 'when also from the nearest ships they saw these.' hostibus: see 52. appropinquarent: see ch. 20, 2, fn.

CHAP. 26.

1. Pugnatum est: see 56. alius alia ex navi: 'the men from the different ships,' lit. '[one man from one ship and] another from another ship.' For this idiom see 168, a. quibuscumque . . . occurrerat: 'to whatever . . . they fell in with.' For the dat. see 78, v. c. For the tense see 183, b. So conspexerant, section 2, and conspexerat, section 4.

2. vero: 'while.' ubi: 'whenever.' adoriebantur: trans. by 'would' (180, b). So circumsistebant and conjiciebant. plures: nominative; see Vocabulary.

3. in universos: 'at the main body'; opposed to singulares.

4. item: '(and) also.' quos . . . his: freely, 'to whomsoever,' transposing the clauses; or 'whenever . . . any . . . to them,' without transposing. jussit, submittebat: notice the change of tense; the perfect expresses a single command; for the imperfect see 180, b. his: see 79.

5. simul: = simul atque. suis consecutis: 'with their comrades following' (50, ii.). neque: 'but . . . : not.' longius: 'any distance' (98, vi.) ad pristinam, etc.: 'to complete Caesar's usual good fortune,' lit.? For dat. see 80, e.

CHAP. 27.

1. proelio: trans. by 'in' (99). de: trans. 'to treat for.' daturus: sc. se (18, x.). quaeque: as in ch. 21, 9. imperasset: cf. ch. 22, 1.

2. quem supra, etc.: 'who, as I stated before, was sent,' etc.; lit.? (18, vi.). demonstraveram a Caesare: notice that Caesar the writer (first person) is always distinguished from Caesar the commander (third person). For the tense see 183, a, i.

3. Hunc, illi: object and subject respectively of comprehenderant. egressum: modifying hunc; trans. 'on his landing' or 'when he landed.' cum deferret: 'although he was bearing' (65, a). modo: 'in the capacity of'; or freely, 'as' (103). tum: trans. by 'now.'

4. rei: 'act.' imprudentiam: i.e., their ignorance of the customs observed between nations. ut ignosceretur: 'that pardon be granted (them),' or 'to be pardoned' (27 and 57; see also 203, d).

5. quod . . . intulissent: see 147 and 198, b. cum . . . missis . . . petissent: 'although they had sent . . . and sought,' lit.? (65, a). petissent: see ch. 20, 2, fn. ignoscere: sc. se: notice the tense (15, a). imprudentiae: for dat. see 52.

6. illi: see 160, i. arcessitam . . . daturus: sc. esse; 'that they would send for . . . and give up,' lit.? The tense of arcessitam is relative to daturus, not to dixerunt (41, b). diebus: see 131.

7. suos: subject of remigrare. agros: 'their lands.'

CHAP. 28.

1. His rebus: 'by this means,' lit.? post diem . . . ventum: 'three days after he came' = die quarto postquam, etc.; post (the adverb) coming before die quarto was felt to have the force of a preposition, and made to govern the acc. quartum: the Romans in reckoning from one date to another counted in both extremes, where we include but one. est ventum: see 56. naves: subject of solverunt, a rare use. demonstratum est: 'mention has been made.' (203, d.) superiore: in ch. 23, 1, called ulteriore. vento: see 103.

2. viderentur: 'were in sight.' posset: see 29. So referrentur and dejicerentur. inferiorem: i.e., towards the S.W. propius occasum: see 70, i. sui: 'to themselves' (85, ii.); another reading is suo, with the same trans. (85, iv.).

3. quae tamen, etc.: 'and as (cum) these had nevertheless (i.e., in spite of the danger) cast anchor, and were filling,' etc.; or tamen may apply to the whole sentence, and be opposed to the words just preceding, 'however as these.' necessario . . . profectae . . . petierunt: 'they were compelled to put out . . . and make for,' lit.? adversa nocte: 'in spite of the darkness,' lit. 'the night facing them' (46).

CHAP. 29.

1. nocte: that of August 30-31, 55 B.C., according to astronomical calculations. esset: 'there was' (31). qui dies: 'a time which.' (173, c, ii.). maritimos aestus maximos: 'very high tides'; our spring-tides. consuevit: 'is wont,' or trans. by 'usually.' incognitum: the tides at the straits of Dover are 20 or 25 feet high, those in the Mediterranean insignificant.

2. uno: as in ch. 23, 6. naves . . . complebat: keep the Latin order and trans. by the passive voice. So onerarias . . . afflictabat. quibus: 'in (lit. with) which.' transportandum . . . curaverat: 'had had . . . brought over' (121). ad: 'at.' neque ulla: 'and no,' lit.? administrandi, auxiliandi: the former referring to those on board, the latter to those on shore. administrandi: sc. naves.

3. fractis: trans. both abl. absol. and cum by 'as.' amissis: trans. 'having lost' or 'through the loss of.' magna, etc.: 'great alarm inevitably (or as was inevitable) arose throughout,' etc.;

lit.? id quod: 'a thing which' (173, d); id is in apposition with the clause magna . . . facta est, and quod is subject of accidere (141, b). exercitus: for case see 85.

4. neque aliae: trans. by 'no other.' possent: see 32. omnibus constabat: 'it was generally agreed'; more lit. 'agreed among all'; for dat. see 80, b, ii. hiemari oportere: 'that they must winter' (56 and 140, b). in hiemem: 'for the winter.'

CHAP. 30.

1. This sentence may be conveniently broken into four in English, viz., after collocuti, transportaverat and producere (204); trans. as if the Latin read collocuti sunt; intellegebant et cognoscebant; itaque duxerunt; nam confidebant. principes: subject of duxerunt, section 2. inter se: see 164, ii. Romanis deesse: freely, 'that the Romans were without,' lit.? quae: referring to castrorum. hoc angustiora: 'all the smaller' or 'more contracted for this reason' (101, ii. c and fn.).

2. optimum factu: 'the best thing to do'; for the supine see 117. duxerunt: 'concluded.' rebellione facta: 'to renew the war and.' prohibere, producere: subjects of esse. frumento: see 93; so reditu. rem: 'the campaign.' superatis: trans. by 'if' (47, a; 48). So interclusis. confidebant: see 146.

3. rursus: not 'a second time,' but referring to the return to their former attitude. agris: as in ch. 27, 7. deducere: 'to bring down,' i.e., to the coast.

CHAP. 31.

1. ex eventu navium: 'from what had happened to his ships,' (85, ii.). ex eo, quod: 'from the fact that' (198). fore, etc.: 'suspected that that would happen which (actually) did occur.' accidit: for the mood see 175, i.

2. ad: 'for or to meet.' subsidia comparabat: 'he set about making provision' (180, d). quae . . . naves, earum: = earum navium quae, 'of the ships which' (173, c, i.). quae: 'whatever'; sc. ea as subject of comportari. res: 'purpose.' erant: for the mood see 175, i. continenti: see on V. ch. 8, i.

3. cum . . . administraretur : 'as the soldiers worked,' cf. ch. 23, 2. studio : see 103. amissis : trans. by 'although.' reliquis . . . effecit : 'he made it possible to sail satisfactorily with the rest,' lit. 'he brought it about (or managed) that the voyage could be made,' etc. navigari : see 56. posset : see 33, v. effecit : notice the tense as compared with that used in section 2 (180, c, iii.).

CHAP. 32.

1. geruntur : see 153. ex consuetudine : 'as usual' ; to be taken with una, not missa. frumentatum : the supine (116). ad : 'up to.' interposita : 'having arisen' i.e., between the time of the surrender and the present. cum : 'as' or 'for,' explaining the preceding words. hominum : 'of the people or natives.' ventitaret : 'kept coming' ; a frequentative verb.* quam consuetudo ferret : 'than usual,' 'than was customary,' lit. 'than custom brought' (175). in ea . . . partem : 'was visible in the direction in which' ; for partem see 173, b.

2. id, quod erat : 'what was actually the case.' Id is explained by the appositive clause aliquid . . . consilii. aliquid consilii : 'some plan' (86, i.). initum : sc. esse. in stationibus : 'on guard' ; the plural because of the four gates of a Roman camp. ex : 'of' (86, iii.). in stationem succedere : 'to take their place on guard' ; the singular of the general idea of guarding. reliquas : i.e., four of the ten cohorts in the legion. armari : 'to arm themselves' (164, iv.).

3. paulo longius : 'some little distance' (98, vi.). conferta : trans. by 'as,' giving the reason for ex omnibus partibus.

4. una erat reliqua : 'only one remained.'

5. dispersos : sc. nostros ; trans. by a 'when' clause ; so occupatos. incertis ordinibus ; giving the reason for perturbaverunt ;

* FREQUENTATIVES, INTENSIVES, OR ITERATIVES are verbs of the first conjugation, ending in -tō or -sō, which denote repeated or vigorous action ; as, jactō, brandish, from jaclō, hurl. They are formed generally from the supine stem of verbs, but when formed from the first conjugation end in -itō (not -ātō). Double frequentatives in -titō occur, based on other iteratives in -tō ; as ventitō, keep coming.

it was difficult to find their proper places in the cohorts. The pluperfects in sections 4 and 5 tell what had happened prior to Caesar's arrival in section 3.

CHAP. 33.

1. hoc : 'as follows.' ex essedis pugnae : 'of chariot fighting'; see 85, iv. fn. per omnes partes : 'in all directions.' ipso terrore equitum : 'by the very (or mere) terror caused by their horses'; for the gen. see 84. ordines : i.e., of their opponents. equitum : i.e., their own. Caesar had no cavalry with him. insinuaverunt : see 182, c.

2. ita : 'in such a way.' illi : i.e., those who had dismounted to fight on foot. premantur, habeant : trans. by the pres. indic., and for the mood see 177, i. and 29 respectively, and also 60; or trans. by 'should' and 'would' respectively, and for the mood see 63 (and 29).

3. tantum efficiunt : 'become so expert,' lit.? loco : 'ground.' per : 'along.' consuerint ; see ch. 20, 2, fn., and for the mood 29.

CHAP 34.

quibus rebus : abl. of means. perturbatis nostris : may be dative with auxilium tulit (79), or abl. absolute. novitate : trans. by 'because of' (96). adventu : see 130.

2. quo facto : 'in spite of this,' more lit., 'although this was done' (48). ad : 'for,' depending on alienum. suo loco : 'on his own ground' (127, ii.). brevi . . . intermisso : 'after a short interval,' lit.?

3. haec : referring to the whole incident. occupatis : trans. by 'while.' qui erant reliqui : 'those who remained,' i.e., the Britons spoken of in ch. 32, 1, pars . . . remaneret (173, a). discesserunt : i.e., from their homes to join their countrymen (see ch. 30, 3).

4. secutae sunt : 'there followed' (12, a, iv.). continherent, prohiberent : for the mood see 32.

5. quanta 'what' or 'how favorable.' faciendae : 'for obtaining' (119). sui liberandi : see 119, iv. expulissent : for the mood and tense see 187, b, i.

CHAP. 35.

1. idem . . . fore : ‘that the same thing would happen.’ ut . . . effugerent : ‘namely, that . . . would escape,’ in apposition with idem (197). si : ‘even if.’ essent pulsi : for the mood and tense cf. on expulissent, ch. 34, 5. dictum est : cf. on demonstratum est, ch. 28, 1.

2. diutius : ‘any longer,’ i.e., than the beginning of the battle. (98, vi.).

3. secuti . . . occiderunt : sc. nostris. tanto spatio : freely, ‘as far,’ lit. ‘by way of (i.e., over) as great a space’ (99, ii. a). quantum . . . efficere : ‘as their speed and strength allowed,’ or ‘as their running powers held out’ (a case of hendiadys), lit.? Cursus = rate of running, vires = powers of endurance.

CHAP. 36.

2. His numerum duplicavit : ‘from these he required double the number,’ lit., ‘for these he doubled,’ etc. die : ‘the time,’ or ‘the season’; dies is sometimes fem. in the sing., chiefly in the sense of a fixed time. propinqua . . . navibus : trans. by ‘as’ (49).

3. mediam noctem : ‘midnight’ (86. iv. b).

4. quae : ‘the ships.’ ex . . . duae : we should say ‘two of the transports,’ lit.? quos reliqui : ‘as the others,’ lit. ‘which the other (crews reached)’; reliqui, masc., by sense construction (13, N.B.). infra : i.e., towards the S.W.

CHAP. 37.

1. Quibus navibus : the two just mentioned. castra : that of Sulpicius Rufus, ch. 22, 6. proficiscens : ‘on setting out’ (41). primo : adverb. non ita magno : ‘with a not very large,’ lit.? si . . . nollent : ‘if they did not wish to be killed’ (175); for sese, see 22, v.

2. ad clamorem : ‘in answer to the shouting.’ hominum : as in ch. 32, 1 ; with milia (86). suis auxilio : ‘to aid his men’ (81).

3. amplius horis : ‘more than,’ etc. Horis may be the abl. of NOTES ON CAESAR, BOOK V.

CHAP. I.

1. consulibus : see 49. discedens ab : 'on leaving.' Italiam : the province of Cisalpine Gaul (Gallia Citerior), in which Caesar spent each winter, attending to its administration. ut : 'as,' in which sense it takes the indic. legionibus : see 78, v. c. quam plurimas possent : sc. aedificare ; 'as many as they could' (174, i.). For the mood of possent see 175. uti aedificandas curarent : 'to have built' (121). For the tense of curarent see 28, iv.

2. Ad : 'for.' onerandi : trans. by 'in.' subductiones : cf. on siccitates, IV., ch. 38, 2. facit humiliores : sc. eas. quam quibus : 'than those which' ; sc. eas (98, iii.). nostro mari : the name Mediterranean was not then in use. id eo magis : 'all the more so' ; with id sc. facit ('he does'), and cf. on hoc, IV., ch. 30, 1. minus magnos : 'smaller.' feri : 'are caused.' transportandam : for the agreement see 11, i. reliquis maribus : the various parts of the Mediterranean were given separate names by the Romans.

3. actuarias : pred. adj. ; nares actuariae were swift galleys, impelled by oars as well as by sails. feri : for the infin. pass. with impero see 22, vii. quam ad rem : 'to which end.'

4. Ea quae sunt : 'what is.' Hispania : Spain was rich in iron and material for ropes.

5. Ipse : in contrast with the legati of section 1, who were left to carry out his orders. conventibus : the governor of a province was also its supreme judge. Illyricum : another of Caesar's three provinces. finitimam : i.e., to the Pirustae. audiebat : 'he heard' ; the tense implies that the news came more than once.

6. imperat : cf. on IV., ch. 22, 2.

7. nihil : 'none,' lit. ? publico consilio : 'with the sanction of the community (or state)'; as opposed to the work of irresponsible individuals. demonstrant : coordinate with mittunt, not with doceant. omnibus rationibus : 'in every way.' de : 'for.'

8. ad : 'by.' diem : for the gender see on IV., ch. 36, 2. fecerint : 'they do.' For the mood and tense see 187, b.

9. ad diem : 'at the (appointed) day.' dat : 'he appoints.' aestiment : 'assess.'

CHAP. 2.

2. circuitis . . . invenit : 'he visits . . . and finds.' studio : with instructas. in summa inopia : '(although) amidst,' or freely 'in spite of,' or 'although there was,' etc. cujus : sc. generis naves; trans. freely 'which,' as though it were quod, the object of demonstravimus. longas : sc. naves. neque multum, etc. : 'and that they are almost ready to be launched'; lit. 'and that it is not far from this but that,' etc. (139, c). diebus : see 131.

3. Collaudatis : more emphatic than laudatis. negotio : see 78, v. c. quid fieri velit : cf. on IV., ch. 23, 5. omnes : sc. naves. portum Itium : the exact locality is unknown. milium : see 87; modifying trajectum. huic rei : 'for this purpose,' i.e., for bringing the fleet safely to its appointed place. satis militum : 'a sufficient force,' lit. ? (86, i.).

4. concilia : Caesar regularly established these councils or assemblies among the conquered tribes, whom he thus kept in official relations with himself. veniebant, parebant : see 180, b.

CHAP. 3.

1. plurimum : adverb. equitatu : see 102. supra : Book III. speaks of 'the Treveri, who are next to the river Rhine.' The last words of chap. 2 show why he here dwells on their position.

2. inter se : 'with each other' (164, ii.).

3. alter : here 'the latter,' lit. 'the one.' cognitum est : see 56. se . . . futuros : with confirmavit. in officio : 'true to their allegiance,' lit. ? populi : objective gen. (85, ii.); trans. by 'with,' not 'of.'

4. cogere : depending on instituit, and connected by (iis)que with parare. per : 'by reason of.' in armis esse : 'be under arms,' or 'bear arms.' ingenti magnitudine : see 105 ; modifying quae with the force of an appositive adj. ; freely 'which is of vast extent and,' etc. medios : see 86, iv. b.

5. Cingetorigis : cf. on populi, section 3. de suis privatim rebus petere : 'to seek their own private advantage,' lit. ? privatim : the position makes it almost equal to the adj. privatis. civitati : see 79 ; in contrast with suis privatim rebus. possent : for mood see 147. ne : 'lest' or 'that' ; for the subjunctive see 138.

6. sese noluisse : sc. 'saying' or 'who say,' implied in legatos mittit (191) ; sese refers to the subject of mittit. idcirco : explained by quo . . . laberetur. quo . . . contineret : see 28, iii. ne . . . laberetur : 'lest . . . should' (24). discessu : abl. of time, suggesting also the cause.

7. permitteret : see 192. in castra : see 127, iv. suas, civitatis : both modifying fortunas.

CHAP. 4.

1. qua de causa : 'why.' instituto : 'original,' lit. ? omnibus . . . comparatis : modifying the preceding words.

2. in : 'among.' filio : in apposition with his. evocaverat : sc. Caesar. consolatus : sc. est ; because of the enforced exile (as hostages) of himself and his kinsmen.

3. nihilo : see 101. principibus, hos : the same persons ; see 50, iii. fn. quod : conjunction. cum . . . tum : 'not only . . . but also.' (151, v.). merito . . . fieri : 'that he was treating him according to his desert,' for a se fieri = se facere, see 56. merito : see 103, iii. magni interesse : see 53, b, ii. ; the subject is the clause auctoritatem . . . valere. cujus . . . perspexisset : 'seeing that he had observed his,' etc. ; for subj. see 171. suos : referring to ejus (165, ii.). tam : omit in trans.

4. factum : noun. suam . . . minui : in apposition with id factum ; 'that . . . should be lessened.' qui fuisset : 'whereas (or while) he had been' (171). animo : see 105. hoc dolore : 'at this grievance' (96); more lit. 'through indignation at this' (205, c).

CHAP. 5.

2. factae erant, erant profectae : for the mood see 175, i. eodem : adverb. omnibus rebus : 'in all respects,' lit. 'with all things.'

3. numero : modifying milium ; for the abl. see 102. milium : modifying equitatus (87); trans. 'the cavalry, four thousand in number.'

4. obsidum loco : 'as hostages,' lit. ? (127, ii.). cum abesset : 'while he was absent,' or 'in his absence,' for the fut. ind. of the actual thought (187, b ; 178, ii.).

CHAP. 6.

1. ante . . . dictum est : 'we have spoken before.' Book I. tells how four years before Dumnorix had stirred up hostility to Caesar among the Aedui. Caesar had pardoned him, but had ever since carefully watched his conduct. eum : sc. esse. animi : 'pride' or 'ambition' ; for the case see 87.

2. Accedebat huc quod : 'besides this' ; more lit. 'to this was added the fact that' (198). deferri : notice the tense (15, a). quod dictum : 'a statement which.' neque : 'but yet . . . not.'

3. factum : sc. esse, or as in ch. 4, 4. Ille : 'Dumnorix.' omnibus : 'all manner of.' petere contendit : 'sought earnestly,' lit. ? quod . . . timeret : 'on the ground that he was unaccustomed . . . and dreaded' ; for the mood see 177. navigandi : see 90. diceret : for the mood see 177, ii.

4. id : the request to be left behind. sibi : 'him' ; indirect object.

5. territare : 'he kept alarming' ; historical infin. (112); for the form see IV., ch. 32, 1, fn. feri, esse : in trans. supply 'saying' from territare (191). ut . . . spoliaretur, ut . . . necaret : see 197, a, and 196, c. nobilitate : see 93. quos : trans. after its antecedent hos (5, i.). vereretur : see 175. ut . . . traductos necaret : 'to carry over . . . and kill' (43, c ; 50, iii.).

6. reliquis : i.e., the other principes than himself. interponere, poscere : cf. on territare, section 5. quod : 'whatever.' intellexissent : for the mood and tense see 187, b, i. ut . . . administrarent : giving the contents of the oath (196). communi consilio : 'by concerted action.' deferebantur : not once only, hence imperf.

CHAP. 7.

1. tantum dignitatis tribuebat : 'had such respect,' lit? (86, i). coercendum : sc. esse. quibuscumque . . . posset : 'by whatever means he could'; for the mood see 175.

2. longius : 'still farther,' i.e., than at present. prospiciendum : sc. esse statuebat (56 and 200, a). quid nocere : 'to do any harm'; for the acc. see 72. sibi : i.e., Caesar. ne . . . posset : see 28, i.

3. commoratus : 'while waiting,' or 'as he was waiting'; for the tense see 44, ii. omnis : omit in trans. ut . . . contineret : see 27 : so cognosceret.

4. milites : the infantry, belonging to the Roman legions, as opposed to the cavalry, who were native auxiliaries.

5. impeditis : 'while . . . were occupied.' insciente Caesare : 'without Caesar's knowledge' (49). domum : 'for home' (125).

6. omnibus rebus : 'everything (else).' retrahi : cf. on fieri, ch. 1, 3.

7. vim faciat : 'offers violence or makes resistance'; for fut. indic. of direct discourse (187, b). se absente : 'in his (i.e., Caesar's) absence.' qui . . . neglexisset : 'seeing that he,' etc.; for the mood cf. on perspexisset, ch. 4, 3. praesentis : 'in his presence'; lit. '(of him) while present.' imperium : 'authority.'

8. enim : 'in fact.' Another reading is autem. clamitans : see IV., ch. 32, 1, fn. liberum, liberae civitatis : both predicates of se esse; trans. 'a free man and a citizen of a free state' (86).

9. erat imperatum : see 57.

CHAP. 8.

1. continenté : elsewhere in Caesar, continenti, with the regular abl. ending of an I-stem. pro tempore et pro re : 'as time and circumstances suggested,' lit. 'in accordance with,' etc.

2. pari quem : 'the same as' (174). ad : 'about.' provectus, etc. : 'was carried forward . . . but as the wind fell . . . could not keep,' etc. longius : 'too far' (98, vi.). orta luce : 'at sunrise,' lit. ? (50, ii.). sub sinistra : 'on the left' ; the current had carried the vessels out of the Channel into the North Sea. relictam : 'behind him.'

3. qua : 'where' ; adv. See IV., ch. 23, 6. egressum : a noun.

4. admodum laudanda : 'deserving of great praise' (118). vectoriis . . . navigiis : 'with transport ships, and those, too, heavily laden.' non intermisso : 'without relaxing,' or trans. by principal clause coordinate with adaequarunt, for which cf. IV., ch. 25, 6.

5. Accessum est navibus : 'the ships reached,' lit. ? (56). Navibus is abl. of means. neque hostis : 'but no enemy.'

6. cum : 'although' (65, a). quae cum annotinis, etc. : 'of which, including those of the previous year . . . eight hundred were in sight' ; for the nom. quae see 86, iv., a. quisque : probably confined to rich officers and Gallic nobles. sui commodi : 'for his own convenience' ; a predicate possessive gen. (83, i.), here expressing purpose. Some editions read sui commodi causa. amplius octingentae : for the case see 98, iv.

CHAP. 9.

1. castris : for the dat. see 78, ii., or 81. qui . . . essent : 'to protect the ships,' lit. ? (81). de tertia vigilia : 'early in the third watch' ; de suggests that a portion of the watch had passed. The third of the four night watches would begin at midnight. eo minus : cf. on eo magis, ch. 1, 2. navibus : see 79. relinquebat : notice the tense. et : omit in trans. ; another reading is Ei.

3. equitatu : see 103, ii. ex loco superiore : belonging to the whole clause, not to prohibere ; the north bank was higher than the south. nostros prohibere : 'to check the advance of our men.'

4. egregie munitum : 'well protected.' opere : 'by art,' lit. 'by fortification' ; explained by section 5. ut videbantur : 'as it seemed, or apparently,' lit. ? (18, vii.).

6. ingredi prohibebant : cf. on IV., ch. 24, 1.

7. testudine : a testudo was formed by the soldiers holding their shields over their heads so that they overlapped and formed a continuous cover, which received its name from its resemblance to a 'tortoise shell.' aggere : this was to put them on a level with those defending the walls. ad : 'against or close to.' paucis : as in IV., ch. 37, 3.

8. eos : i.e., milites, subject of prosequi. fugientes : object of prosequi ; see 44, i. a. longius : cf. on ch. 8, 2, or on IV., ch. 26, 5. munitioni : see 81.

Testudo (From Trajan's Column).

CHAP. 10.

1. postridie ejus diei : 'on the very next day,' lit. 'on the morrow of that day' (83, iv.). in : 'on,' lit. 'with a view to.' expeditionem : strictly, a rapid march of a flying column of expediti (ch. 2, 4).

2. aliquantum itineris : 'some distance,' lit? (86, i.). extremi : 'only the last (or rearguard),' i.e., of the troops sent out. in litore :

tradition, were born.' Another reading is ipsa, with insula memoria : abl. of means.

2. pars : sc. incolitur. qui omnes : 'all of whom' (86, iv., a). iis : 'the.' quibus . . . pervenerunt : freely 'from which they have sprung and have come there.' civitatibus : see 173, b.

3. aedificia : sc. sunt. consimilia : appositive, not predicative. Gallicis : sc. aedificiis ; 'those of the Gauls.'

4. aut . . . aut : 'partly . . . partly.' ad . . . examinatis : 'of a fixed weight,' lit. ? pro : 'as.'

5. mediterraneis : the tin mines of Cornwall are referred to, Caesar mistaking the distant west, of which he had heard, for an inland district. maritimis : iron was once mined in the south of England, now chiefly in the north. ejus : i.e., iron, which, being a hard metal to work, has generally been neglected by native tribes, even where it is abundant. importato : in emphatic position, 'the bronze they use is imported' (3, a). cujusque : 'every' (169, a). praeter, etc. : an error on Caesar's part.

6. fas : sc. esse. haec : neut. plur. referring to the animals just mentioned (13, ii.). animi : 'amusement,' lit. 'the feelings.' Loca : 'the climate,' lit. 'the country.' remissioribus : 'less severe' (44, i., b) ; for the case see 49.

1. natura : 'in shape' (102). triquetra : sc. est. cujus : 'of it.' alter : 'one,' corresponding to inferior. ad : 'at.' quo : adverb. appelluntur : 'put in.'

2. alterum : sc. latus ; 'the second side.' ad Hispaniam : as the ancients had no compasses, and seldom sailed out of sight of land, they easily fell into error as to the relative position of distant places. qua ex parte : see 127, v. dimidio minor : 'half as large,' lit. ? (101). pari spatio, etc. : freely 'at the same distance as the passage from Gaul to Britain' ; lit. 'of the same length of passage across as is (the passage across) from Gaul to Britain.' For the abl. spatio see 105 ; with est sc. transmissus ; for atque see 174.

3. hoc medio cursu : 'the middle of this passage,' i.e., to Ireland (86, iv. b). Mona : this name was afterwards given to Anglesea, but probably the Isle of Man is here meant. subjectae : sc. esse. insulae : the Hebrides or Orkney islands probably. nonnulli : though Caesar was the first Roman to land in Britain, it had been visited by Greeks. sub : 'at the time of.' bruma : for brevima = brevissima, sc. dies. esse : the subject is noctem.

4. Nos : contrasted with nonnulli. For the plural see 157, ii. ; cf. the use of demonstravimus in ch. 2, 2 and ch. 3, 1. reperiebamus : trans. by 'could' ; the tense implies frequent attempts during Caesar's stay. nisi : 'except that.' certis mensuris : 'by exact measurements.' ex aqua : 'by water,' i.e., with a water-clock or clepsydra, which worked on the principle of the hour-glass.

5. ut . . . opinio : 'as their belief goes' ; freely 'as they believe.' illorum : referring to nonnulli of section 3. milium : sc. passuum ; for the case see 87, iii.

6. Tertium : sc. latus. angulus : the same as alter angulus, section 1. milia : see 128 ; another reading is milium, as in section 5. in : 'in' ; the acc. because of the notion of extending over space.

7. vicies centum : 'two thousand.' milium : for the case cf. on section 5.

CHAP. 14.

1. qui : see 173, a. quae regio : see 173, c. ii. omnis : 'entirely.'

2. Interiores plerique : 'most of those in the interior' ; plerique, an adj. modifying interiores, which is used as a substantive. lacte, pellibus : see 99. sunt vestiti : see 164, iv., and 182, e. hoc : 'thus,' lit. ? (101, ii. c). aspectu : see 102.

3. sunt : freely 'they have.' capillo, parte ; see 105, ii. rasa : trans. freely by the active voice.

4. Uxores communes : acc. Caesar is probably in error on this point. deni duodenique : 'in groups of ten or twelve.' For -que, lit. 'and (in other cases),' cf. in English 'three and four times a day.' inter se : omit in trans.

5. si qui : sc. liberi ; 'if any' (166, a). habentur : 'they are regarded,' with pred. nom. liberi (12, c). quo : adv. = ad quos ; 'to whom.'

CHAP. 15.

1. tamen ut : 'yet so that.' omnibus partibus : 'everywhere.' fuerint, compulerint : for the tense see 33, iii.

2. compluribus : i.e., of the Britons. cupidius : see 98, vi.

3. illi : see 160, i. spatio : i.e., of time; cf. section 4. castrorum : a camp was made at the end of each day's march.

4. missis : trans. by 'when.' subsidio : 'to their aid' (81). atque his : 'and these too.' primis : apparently the first cohort of a legion was its best. cum : 'although.' intermisso loci spatio : 'leaving an interval.' inter se : with intermisso. perterritis : trans. by 'as.' per medios : 'between them,' i.e., through the perexiguum spatium. seque . . . receperunt : not meaning 'they got away,' as the last words of section 5 show, but that they charged back again through the open space to their original position.

CHAP. 16.

1. dimicaretur : see 56. nostros : the legionary soldiers, as contrasted with equites, section 2; subject of esse. cedentes : acc.; 'the retreating enemy' (44, i., a). possent : see 175. ab signis discedere : they had been trained to fight in solid ranks only. minus : 'not well.' ad : 'to face.'

2. autem : 'while.' proelio : see 99. illi : 'the enemy.' cederent : see 175. cum : 'whenever.' removissent : for the mood and tense see 149 and 187, b. nostros : here = equites.

3. Equestris : with proelii. autem : 'moreover.' ratio : 'regular method,' or 'ordinary style'; in opposition to the unfamiliar tactics described in the last line of section 2. cedentibus, insequentibus : either dat. of the participle, referring to the Romans, or perhaps abl. absolute with Britannis understood. In either case Caesar is thinking of the danger to his own native cavalry, due to the superiority of the British horsemen. inferebat : 'brought' (180, b).

4. Accedebat huc ut . . . proeliarentur : cf. on ch. 6, 2; see 197 and 200, c. intervallis : see 103. stationes : 'reserves or supports.' alios alii : 'one another' (168, a. ii.). exciperent : 'relieved.' -que : 'and thus.'

CHAP. 17.

1. rari: 'here and there' (205, h). lenius: 'with less vigor.'
2. tres: an unusually large force; cf. IV., ch. 32, 1. cum: 'under.' ad . . . advolaverunt: see 78, v. b. sic uti . . . absisterent: 'so as to attack even the standards,' etc.; lit.? They were not afraid to attack even the main body escorting the actual foragers.
3. subsidio: for abl. (= 'in') with confisi see 107, ii. praecipites: predicate acc. egerunt: see 155, a.
4. sui colligendi: see 119, iv.
5. Ex: 'after.' quae . . . auxilia: the majores copiae of ch. 11, 8. discesserunt: 'disbanded.' summis copiis: 'with their full force,' or 'in full force' (103, ii.).

CHAP. 18.

1. consilio: that, apparently, which is described in ch. 19. Tamesim: certain I-stems with nom. in -is (including names of rivers and towns) have the acc. in -im, and abl. in -i. in fines: see 127, iv. hoc: 'here,' 'at this'; sc. loco.
2. animum advertit: also written animadvertit, and with the same force. ad: 'on.'
3. praefixis: driven into the face of the bank. defixae: driven into the bed of the river.
5. ea, eo: 'such' (159, i.) cum . . . exstarent: 'although only their heads were above the water,' lit.? (101). -que: 'but.'

CHAP. 19.

1. ut demonstravimus: with deposita spe. supra: ch. 17, 5. amplioribus copiis: 'the greater part of his forces,' lit.? relictis: trans. freely by 'kept.' servabat: for the force of this and the succeeding imperfects see 180, b. quibus: 'where,' or 'through which.'
2. cum: 'whenever.' ejecerat: for the mood and tense see 149. liberius: with ejecerat; for the meaning see 98, vi.; so latius and longius, section 3. viis: see 99, ii. a. periculo equitum: 'danger to cavalry'; for the gen. see 85, ii. hoc metu: 'through fear of this,' lit.? (205, c). Cf. hoc dolore, ch. 4, 4.

3. Relinquebatur ut . . . pateretur : 'the only course left was for Caesar not to allow his men to leave,' etc. For ut pateretur as subject clause see 197, fn. ; for discedi see 56. tantum noceretur : freely 'to do as much harm' (72; 57). in : 'in the way of.' labore atque itinere : 'by laborious marching' (hendiadys), contrasted with the dashing cavalry raids.

CHAP. 20.

1. Trinobantes : with mittunt, section 2. ex qua . . . viderat : this parenthesis may be translated after legatos . . . mittunt, section 2, and broken at cujus pater, thus : 'The Trinobantes send, etc. ; from this state, etc. ; his father, etc. ; they promise, etc.' fidem secutus : 'attaching himself to,' lit. ? continentem Galliam : 'the mainland of Gaul' (89, i.). obtinuerat : obtineo does not mean 'obtain' (203, f, iii.). ipse : 'while he himself,' or 'but who himself' (170, iv.).

2. sese dedituros : sc. se as subject, sese being object.

3. Cassivellauni : 'on the part of C.' or 'at the hands of C.' (84). mittat qui praesit : 'to send (some one) to govern' (173, a).

4. exercitui : see 79. ad numerum : 'to the required number.' Note the asyndeton in the last sentence (as also with ipse in section 1). Note, too, his, eos and illi used of the same persons.

CHAP. 21.

1. defensis : i.e., against Cassivellaunus. militum : cf. on Cassivellauni, ch. 20, 3.

2. his : sc. legatis, from legationibus. quo : adverb. satis magnus : 'a considerable.' convenerit : for the mood and tense see 186, 2 ; 187, b.

3. oppidum vocant : 'call it a town' ; the object of vocant is found in the clause cum . . . munierunt. The Gauls, on the other hand, had regular towns in which they dwelt. silvas impeditas : 'a piece of woods difficult of access.' munierunt : see 149.

4. opere : cf. on ch. 9, 4. ex : 'on' (205, b). hunc : 'it' ; lit. 'this (place).'

5. morati : 'after holding out.' non tulerunt : 'could not withstand.'

6. repertus : sc. est. multi : 'many (of the enemy).'

CHAP. 22.

1. quibus regionibus praeerant : 'over which . . . ruled' (78, v. c). his : i.e., the kings. navalia castra : see ch. 11, 5.

2. incolumes : acc. with suos ; sui is here identical with nostris.

3. per : 'through the mediation of' (99, i.).

4. neque multum : 'and little.' id : = non multum aestatis, 'that little.' in annos singulos : 'yearly,' lit. 'for the years one by one.' vectigal's : see 86, i. penderet : 'should pay' ; for the mood see 186, 1, b, i., and 200, a.

5. interdicit atque imperat : emphatic repetition ; 'he absolutely forbids . . . to harm,' or 'he expressly orders . . . not to harm.' neu : 'or,' lit. ? (28, ii.).

CHAP. 23.

2. commeatibus : for the abl. see 103.

3. tanto numero : see IV., ch. 22, 3 and 4, and V., ch. 2, 2, and ch. 8, 6. tot navigationibus : 'although there were so many passages' (49). portaret : 'had on board' ; the subj. may be by attraction (177, i.) (so mitterentur, section 4, but not curaverat, which is not so essential a part of the sentence) or may perhaps be characteristic (32).

4. et . . . et : dividing these empty vessels into two classes, to the latter of which mitterentur, not remitterentur, would more strictly apply ; trans. 'both those which had made the first trip . . . and those which,' etc. prioris commeatus : sc. ex navibus (87). postea : i.e., after Caesar had set out for Britain with the fleet built during the winter. faciendas curaverat : cf. on ch. 1, 1. numero : for the abl. see 102. sexaginta : acc. agreeing with quas. locum caperent : 'reached their destination,' i.e., Britain. caperent, rejicerentur : with sic accidit uti.

5. quod : 'for.' necessario collocavit : cf. on IV., ch. 28, 3.

6. consecuta : see 50, ii. cum solvisset : freely 'he set sail . . . and.' inita vigilia : 'at the beginning of the watch,' abl. absol.

Transport Ship.

Attack on a Walled City.

RULES OF SYNTAX AND EXERCISES IN PROSE COMPOSITION.

INTRODUCTORY.¹

I. ORDER OF WORDS.

1. Because of its wealth of inflections, Latin admits much greater freedom of order than English does, without a corresponding loss of clearness.

The order of words in Latin is not, however, purely haphazard, although no invariable rules exist for their position in a sentence ; there are certain arrangements which are normal or usual, and which should be varied only for some definite purpose, such as to secure emphasis or to promote euphony.

2. In the normal arrangement of a simple sentence, the subject, followed by its attributes, comes first ; the verb comes last, preceded by its modifiers or objects ; as,

All these differ from one another in language : Hī omnēs linguā inter sē differunt.

3. This order is often changed, especially in the case of :

(a) EMPHASIS.—This is often secured by putting words other than the subject at the beginning of a sentence, or words other than the verb at the end ; as,

¹ As these introductory sections are intended chiefly for reference, and find their application in all the exercises that follow, no special exercise has been based upon them.

Greece was freed by the sagacity of one man: Ūnius virī prūdentīā Graecia liberāta est.

Other route had they none: Aliud iter habēbant nūllum.

i. Often, too, emphasis is secured by separating two words in agreement. Antithesis (or emphatic opposition) is frequently expressed by reversing in the second clause the order of the first (Chiasmus).

(b) CONNECTION OF SENTENCES.—At the beginning of a sentence are regularly placed words or phrases which refer to the previous sentence or some part of it, and which thus serve as a connecting link, leading from the known to the unknown;¹ as,

Within those woods (just mentioned) the enemy kept themselves in hiding: Intrā eās silvās hostēs in occultō sēsē continēbant.

The same day envoys came to Caesar: Eōdem diē lēgātī ad Caesarem vēnērunt.

4. (a) The modifiers of a noun.—i. Cardinal numerals, adjectives denoting size and weight, and pronominal adjectives (except possessives) commonly precede; as, Four days: Quattuor diēs. Large forces: Māgnae cōpiae. This part: Haec pars. Without any danger: Sine ūllō periculō.

ii. Ordinal numerals, other adjectives (unless emphatic), genitives and words in apposition commonly follow; as, The third year: Annus tertius. The Roman people: Populus Rōmānus. Part of the summer: Pars aestātis.

iii. Where a noun is modified both by an adjective and by a genitive, the preferred order is adjective, genitive, noun; as, Immense size of frame: Ingēns corporum māgnitūdō. This does not apply to the partitive genitive, however; as, A large part of Gaul: Māgna pars Galliae.

iv. When two adjectives or two genitives connected by a conjunction modify a noun, it is commonly placed either before both or after both.

When an adjective or a genitive modifies two nouns connected by a conjunction, it commonly precedes both.

¹ To mark this connection Latin constantly uses quī for hic or is; see section 172.

(h) Conjunctions.—i. These are the first words in their own clauses. But they are regularly preceded by a relative pronoun, sometimes by other emphatic or connecting words; as, If this were done: Id sī fieret.

ii. Autem, enim and vērō never, and igitur very seldom, come first in a sentence.

iii. The particles que, ne (interrogative), ve are enclitics;¹ as, The senate and people of Rome: Senātus populusque Rōmānus.

II. ORDER OF CLAUSES.

5. Noun and Adjective clauses are, as a rule, in the position a noun or adjective of similar value would have.

i. A relative clause, however, very frequently, especially when emphatic, precedes a general antecedent, such as is or hic; as, He spoils what he alters; Quae mūtāt, ea corrumpit.

ii. Indirect questions generally follow the verb on which they depend. So also does the accusative and infinitive construction when extended to any length.

6. Adverbial clauses are placed, as a rule, as corresponding adverbial phrases would be.

i. Adverbial clauses that are preparatory to the thought of the principal clause, or express some attending circumstance, regularly either precede the principal clause, or very frequently are inserted in it. Such are the temporal, conditional, causal and concessive clauses.

ii. Adverbial clauses that are explanatory of, or complementary to, the thought of the principal clause regularly follow. Such are the consecutive clauses, and causal sentences where the emphasis lies on the reason advanced.

Final or purpose clauses, on the whole, more frequently follow than precede, the general principle being to place last the clause on which the emphasis falls.

7. Participial clauses generally precede, or are inserted in, the principal sentence, and very seldom follow it as in English; as, After settling this affair he set sail, having met with suitable weather: Hīs cōstitātis rēbus, nactus idōneam tempestātem, solvit.

¹ Enclitics are unaccented words which are always appended to some other word.

8. In narrative prose the order of time is almost invariably observed in the arrangement of the various clauses of a sentence ; as,

The Germans threw away their arms when they saw that their comrades were being slain, and rushed out of the camp: Germānī, cum suōs interficī vidērent, armīs abjectīs sē ex castrīs ējēcērunt.

9. THE PERIODIC STRUCTURE is much commoner in Latin than in English. A period is a complex sentence, whose subordinate clauses are inserted in the principal clause in such a way that the sense and grammatical construction of the whole are incomplete without the final words, upon which also the chief emphasis rests. The example given in section 8 above is a period in the Latin, but not in the English.

i. In the Latin period, the subject of the principal and subordinate clauses should as far as possible be the same. In such cases it should be placed at the beginning of the period, and thus do duty for both clauses ; as, When Caesar learned that the Suebi had retired to the forest, he determined not to advance farther: Caesar postquam comperit Suēbōs sēsē in silvās recēpisse, cōstituit nōn prōgredi longius.

But where a subordinate clause is introduced by a relative with the force of a demonstrative (see section 3, b, footnote), this holds the first place ; as, When Caesar learned this, he withdrew to Gaul: Quod ubi Caesar comperit, sē in Galliam recēpit.

III. CONCORDS.

The following are the general rules of agreement :

10. APPOSITION.—A word placed in apposition with another agrees with it in case ; as,

He persuades Dumnorix, the brother of Divitiacus: Dumnorigī, frātrī Divitiācī, persuādet.

The city of Rome: Urbs Rōma.

i. The possessive may have an appositive in the genitive, especially with ipse ; as, My own fault : Mea ipsius culpa.

ii. The appositive word may agree with an unexpressed subject ; as, I, Themistocles, have come to you : Themistoclēs vēnī ad tē.

11. ATTRIBUTIVE WORDS.—An adjective (including the numerals), a pronoun or a participle agrees in gender, number and case with the word to which it belongs.

i. If it belongs to more than one word, it regularly agrees with the nearest ; as, It was a matter requiring great effort and labor ; Rēs erat multae operae ac labōris.

12. THE PREDICATE.—(a) The verb agrees with its subject in number and person.

i. Where compound or periphrastic forms of the verb are used, the participle follows the rules for predicate adjectives (see b).

ii. (a) Where there is more than one subject, the verb may be plural, or may be singular, agreeing with the nearest and being understood with the others ; as, The Matrona and Sequana separate the Gauls from the Belgians : Gallōs ā Belgis Mātrona et Sēquana dividit.¹

(b). The verb may also be singular when two singular subjects form but one notion ; as, A loud din and shouting arose : Clāmor fremitusque oriēbātur. (Cf. ‘The tumult and the shouting dies.’) So regularly with Senātus populusque Rōmānus.

iii. Where the subjects are of different persons and the plural is used, the first person takes precedence, then the second ; as, Cicero and I are well : Ego et Cicerō valēmus.

iv. For the unemphatic introductory word there, and also for it when used as an impersonal or representative subject, Latin has no equivalent ; as, And there were no other ships : Neque nāvēs erant aliae. It is dangerous to enter : Intrāre est periculōsum.

(b) A predicate adjective (or a participle in the compound tenses of the verb) agrees with the subject of the verb in gender, number and case ; as,

¹ In a somewhat similar way a singular noun may agree with the nearer of two adjectives and be understood with the other ; as, The soldiers of the ninth and tenth legions ; Legiōnis nōnae et decimae militēs.

*Fair usage policy applies

i. But these pronouns by preference agree with a predicate noun rather than with their antecedent; as, To Vesontio, which is the largest town: Ad Vesontiōnem, quod est oppidum m̄aximum.

ii. A pronoun referring to two or more antecedents in common follows the rules given for predicate adjectives in section 12, b, ii.

N.B.—By a sense construction, the number or the gender of predicates and relative pronouns is often determined by the meaning, not the form, of the words to which they refer; as, A great throng was hurling weapons: M̄agna multitudō tēla conjiciēbant. He sends forward the cavalry to see: Equitātum praemittit, quī videant. Six thousand men left the camp at nightfall: Hominum mīlia sex primā nocte ē castris ēgressī sunt.

THE ACCUSATIVE AND INFINITIVE.

14. After verbs meaning to say, think, believe, know, perceive, feel, and the like (verba sentiendī et dēclārandī), Latin uses the infinitive with a subject accusative, where in English we have a noun clause introduced by that; as,

They bring back word that the ascent is easy: Renūntiant facilem esse ascēsum.

They perceive that the strongest nations have been conquered: Intellegunt m̄ximās n̄tiōnēs superātās esse.

15. Rules for the USE OF TENSES are as follows:

(a) When the time of the infinitive is the same as that of its principal verb, use the present infinitive;

(b) When the time of the infinitive is prior to that of its principal verb, use the perfect infinitive;

(c) When the time of the infinitive is subsequent to that of its principal verb, use the future infinitive; as,

(a) He was informed that the legion was being hard pressed: Certior factus est legiōnem premi.

He will see that the legion is being hard pressed: Vidēbit legiōnem premi.

(b) They will think that the Helvetians have moved their camp: Existimābunt Helvētiōs castra mōvisse.

He learned that the Helvetians had moved their camp: Cōgnōvit Helvētiōs castra mōvisse.

(c) They think that Caesar will make peace: Existimant Caesarem pācem esse factūrum.

He answered that Caesar would make peace: Respondit Caesarem pācem esse factūrum.

Or, to put the rule in another way: let the student imagine himself using the very words uttered or thought, and then use the corresponding tense of the infinitive (the perfect infinitive doing duty for the imperfect,¹ perfect or pluperfect of the original words).

In the above examples, for instance, the words actually uttered or thought would be: (a) The legion is being hard pressed: Legiō premitur; (b) The Helvetians have moved their camp: Helvētīi castra mōvērunt; (c) Caesar will make peace: Caesar pācem faciet.

16. (a) As the infinitive is without personal endings, for I, we, you the subject accusatives mē, nōs, tē, vōs, should be expressed.

For he, she, they, when denoting the same person as the subject of the verb of saying, thinking, etc., sē will be used; but when denoting a different person, the accusative of is, or for greater emphasis ille;² as,

They answered that they would make peace with him: Respondērunt sēsē cum eō pācem esse factūrōs.

Caesar had decided to keep Dumnorix with him, because he had discovered that he was eager for power: Caesar Dumnorīgem sēcum habēre cōstituerat, quod eum cupidum esse imperīi cōgnōverat.

(b) In the compound forms of the infinitive containing esse, care must be taken to have agreement with the subject accusative in gender, number and case. (See superātās in section 14 above.)

¹ For instance, Dicō urbem obsessam esse, I tell you that the city was being besieged, for an original obsidēbātur.

² This distinction applies to all uses of the words him, them, etc.; for his and their, suus or ējus and eōrum, respectively, are used.

17. After verbs signifying to hope, promise, threaten, and the like, English generally uses the simple infinitive, instead of a noun clause introduced by that. In Latin the subject accusative with the future infinitive is used in accordance with the above rules (section 15, c); as,

These tribes promise to give hostages: Hae nātiōnēs sē obsidēs datūrās (esse) pollicentur.

18. i. In English that is often omitted; as, He says he will go.

ii. Not only single verbs, but also phrases, sentiendī et dēclārandī occur; as, certiōrem faciō, memoriā teneō, fāma est, spem habeō.

iii. Esse is very often omitted in the compound or periphrastic forms of the infinitive.

iv. Verbs of pretending are regularly followed by the accusative and infinitive, not, as often in English, by the simple infinitive; as, They pretend to return home: Domum revertī sē simulant.

v. Instead of dīcō followed by a negative, Latin prefers negō; as, He says he can grant no one the right of passing through the province: Negat sē posse iter ūllī per prōvinciam dare.

vi. Verbs of saying and thinking (except inquam and crēdō) are not used parenthetically in Latin as in English; as, You are, I maintain, mistaken: Errāre vōs dīcō. He sends messengers to Kent, which, we have already said, is on the sea: Ad Cantium, quod esse ad mare suprā dēmōnstrāvīmus, nūntiōs mittit. For the position of inquam see section 4, g, iii.

vii. With passive verbs of saying, thinking, etc., the personal construction is used in Latin (but chiefly with videor, and the third person of the present, imperfect and future of other verbs); as, It was said that the Germans had been invited: Germānī arcessītī esse dīcēbantur, not Germānōs arcessītōs esse dīcēbātur. In the perfect the impersonal construction is used.

viii. Would have is expressed by the future participle with fuisse; as, He answered that if there had been any need, he would have come to Caesar: Respondit, sī quid opus esset, sēsē ad Caesarem ventūrum fuisse.

ix. Instead of the future infinitive after verbs of hoping, posse with the present infinitive is common.

B. (Caesar B. G. IV., 20).

1. He had found out that the traders themselves did not visit this harbor. 2. They answered that the summers were early in all these islands. 3. He writes that almost all the tribes have these customs. 4. We ascertained that auxiliaries were being furnished to Caesar. 5. They promised not to furnish ships to Caesar. 6. I hoped to set out for Britain. 7. They bring back word that the larger harbor is not suitable. 8. He denied having summoned anyone. 9. He pointed out that a large part of the winter was left. 10. They believe that this is unknown to almost all. 11. He thought they had set out. 12. We had heard that our enemies had great experience (had had great experience). 13. He hopes to become acquainted with the country. 14. He said that the character of the inhabitants had not been ascertained.

 COMPLEMENTARY INFINITIVE.

19. The present infinitive (active or passive) is often used like the infinitive with to in English, to complete the meaning of certain verbs, whose reference would otherwise be incomplete. These verbs are often called modal verbs, and the infinitive when so used is termed the complementary infinitive.

20. (a) With modal verbs the present infinitive without a subject expressed is used to denote another action or condition of the same subject ; as,

They attempt to cross the river : Flūmen trānsire cōnantur.

The wind began to be violent : Saevire ventus coepit.

They are able to defend themselves : Sē dēfendere possunt.

The river can be crossed : Flūmen trānsiri potest.

He was unwilling to leave : Discēdere nōlēbat.

They were compelled to give hostages : Obsidēs dare coāctī sunt.

i. A predicate noun or adjective with the complementary infinitive agrees with the subject of the modal verb ; as,

We can be useful friends : Possumus ūtilēs esse amīcī.

21. (b) With modal verbs the present infinitive with a subject accusative is used to denote the action or condition of a different subject ; as,

They allow the Helvetians to go : Helvētiōs ire patiuntur.

He ordered the gates to be closed : Portās claudī jussit.

He wished the Germans to be alarmed : Germānōs timēre voluit.

He did not wish that place to be unoccupied : Nōluit eum locum vacāre.

22. i. Prohibeō takes the accusative and complementary infinitive ; as,

They prevent the Germans from crossing : Germānōs trānsire prohibent.

ii. Some verbs expressing emotion, such as doleō (grieve) and gaudeō (rejoice) often take the accusative and complementary infinitive. (See also section 147, ii.)

iii. Where the complementary infinitive is passive, coeptus sum is used in place of coepī, with the same force ; as, Javelins began to be hurled : Tēla conjicī coepta sunt.

iv. With jubeō the subject accusative is sometimes omitted, when obvious from the context ; as, He gives orders to fortify a camp : Castra mūnīre jubet.

v. Volō, nōlō and mālō often take the accusative and infinitive even when the subject is the same, chiefly with esse or a passive infinitive ; as, They did not wish to be put to death : Sēsē interficī nōlēbant.

vi. Polliceor and spērō are sometimes treated as modal verbs.

vii. Many of the verbs of will and desire are followed by ut and the subjunctive ; so regularly the verbs of ordering, except jubeō. Imperō also may be used with the passive infinitive ; as, He orders him to be brought back : Eum retrahī imperat. (See section 27.)

viii. This construction is more restricted in Latin than in English. (See especially sections 23 and 27.) But in poetry Latin more nearly approaches English usage, the complementary infinitive being used not only with verbs and phrases which do not ordinarily admit it, but also with nouns and adjectives. The poets also use the infinitive freely to express purpose.

VERBS WHICH TAKE THE COMPLEMENTARY INFINITIVE.

Allow, patior, sinō.Attempt, cōnor.Be able, can, possum.Be accustomed, be wont, cōnsuēvī, soleō.Be unwilling, nōlō.Be willing, volō.Begin, incipiō, instituō.Began, coepī.Cease, dēsinō, dēsistō.Compel, cōgō.Dare, audeō.Decide, determine, cōstituō, dēcernō, statuō.Desire, cupiō.Forbid, vetō.Hasten, contendō, mātūrō, pro-perō.Hesitate, dubitō.Order, jubeō.Ought, dēbeō.Permit, patior, sinō.Prefer, mālō.Prepare, parō.Prevent, prohibeō.Resolve, see decide.Strive, contendō, nitor.Try, cōnor.Venture, audeō.Wish, volō.

A.

1. The troops began to storm the town. 2. The Helvetians are accustomed to receive, not give, hostages. 3. Stones had begun (22, iii.) to be hurled from all sides against the rampart. 4. Outposts are stationed lest a sally be made: Statiōnēs pōnuntur nē ēruptiō fiat.

25. Rules for the SEQUENCE OF TENSES are as follows :

(a) Primary tenses—viz., present, future, and future perfect—are followed by the present subjunctive.

(b) Secondary (or historical) tenses—viz., imperfect, perfect¹, and pluperfect—are followed by the imperfect subjunctive.

Thus the present subjunctive is used where English could use that . . . may; the imperfect subjunctive where English could use that . . . might.

26. RELATIVE CLAUSES OF PURPOSE.—After certain verbs, especially those of sending and appointing, relative clauses of purpose are found, ut being replaced by quī; as, i. Purpose clauses may be introduced also by relative adverbs, such as ubi, unde, quō.

He sends scouts in advance to choose a suitable place for the camp: Explōrātōrēs praemittit, quī locum idōneum castris dēligant (literally who are to choose).

27. SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES OF PURPOSE.—After verbs of urging, asking, commanding, advising, persuading, striving (verbs of will and aim), Latin does not use the infinitive; it regards the following clause as expressive of the end desired, and therefore uses the subjunctive of purpose with ut (utī) and nē; as,

He urges them to take up arms: Hortātur ut arma capiant.

He induced Casticus to seize the chief power: Persuāsit Casticō ut rēgnum occupāret.

They begged of him not to do that: Ab eō petēbant nē id faceret.

¹ The perfect indicative, when translated by have, may take primary sequence, but as a rule it is followed by the imperfect subjunctive.

Jubeō and cōnor are important regular exceptions to this rule ; so also verbs of striving and resolving, when the subject of both verbs is the same (where English also has the infinitive).

28. i. In clauses of purpose ut is not followed by a negative, nē being used instead. Hence where not, no one, nothing, no (adjectival) and never occur, use nē, nē quis, nē quid, nē quī (or quis) and nē umquam ; as,

He ordered the gates to be closed that the townspeople might receive no hurt: Portās claudī jussit nē quam oppidānī injūriam acciperent.

He asked him to allow none to cross: Postulāvit nē quōs trānsire paterētur.

ii. A second final clause, if negative, is connected by nēve (or neu), not by neque ; as, He issues orders that they are to hurl their weapons from a distance, and not approach nearer: Prōnūntiat ut procul tēla conjiciant neu propius accēdant.

iii. When the clause of purpose contains a comparative, quō is commonly used in place of ut ; as, They ask for reinforcements, that they may more easily withstand the enemy: Subsidium rogant, quō facilius hostēs sustinēre possint.

iv. After the historical present either primary or secondary sequence may be used.

v. Certain verbs are used both in the construction given in section 27, and as verba dēclārāndī with the accusative and infinitive : as, He writes to Labienus to build the vessels: Labiēnō scribit ut nāvēs instituat. He writes that he has set out: Scribit sē profectum esse. So also moneō and persuādeō. (See section 200.)

vi. With verbs of asking and commanding the subjunctive sometimes occurs without ut. This should not be imitated by the beginner in prose.

vii. In poetry, verbs of urging and asking are found with the present infinitive. (See section 22, viii.)

viii. Sometimes ut nē is found for nē, but not in Caesar.

ix. Other modes of expressing purpose exist in Latin, the most important being by means of the gerund and gerundive. (See sections 114 and 119, and also 124.)

x. For verbs of causing, see section 33, v.

VERBS WHICH TAKE SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES OF PURPOSE.

Advise, moneō, admoneō.Ask, petō, rogō.Beg, beseech, ōrō, obsecrō.Command, imperō, praecipio, mandō.Commission, mandō.Determine, cōstituō, dēcernō, statuō.Exhort, hortor, adhortor, cohortor.Incite, instigate, impellō.Instruct, praecipio.Permit, concēdō, permittō.Persuade, suādeō, persuādeō.Prevail on, impetrō.Request, require, petō, rogō, postulō.Resolve, see determine.Strive, contendō, nitor; so id agō, operam dō.Urge, hortor, adhortor.Warn, moneō, admoneō.

A.

1. They sent Caesar into Gaul to carry on war with the Helvetians. 2. The Gauls had sent envoys to Caesar to ask for peace and to beg him not to storm their town. 3. He instructed the cavalry to take possession of the camp, and not (28, ii.) to pursue the enemy. 4. In order to defeat the Britons, he sent forward the cavalry and the slingers to attack them in the rear. 5. Caesar exhorted the soldiers to fight valiantly, lest they should allow the enemy to cross the river. 6. The Gauls sent a messenger to report to their allies that the Roman troops had built a bridge over the river in order to (28, iii.) pursue the enemy more easily. 7. He asked the Helvetians to go forth from these territories. 8. They ordered the bridge to be destroyed in order that no one might be able to cross the river. 9. He warned the soldiers (28, v.) that the Gauls were at hand; he advised us not to leave the camp. 10. He replied that Caesar had praised the soldiers that they might fight the more valiantly. 11. Caesar ordered (imperō) his soldiers to press forward and not to hurl any weapon whatever at the enemy.

*Fair use policy applies

however, is generally used for the English past (indefinite) tense, as in the first example in section 29.

31. SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES OF RESULT.—After certain verbs, chiefly those of happening and resulting, clauses introduced by that are rendered by Latin consecutive clauses with ut or ut nōn and the subjunctive ; as,

It happened that there was a full moon: Accidit ut esset lūna plēna.

The result was that the Germans were summoned: Factum est utī Germānī arcesserentur.

32. RELATIVE CLAUSES OF CHARACTERISTIC.—Clauses of characteristic are introduced by the relative pronoun or relative adverbs. In these clauses the antecedent is referred to as belonging (or not belonging) to a class characterized by a certain quality. The subjunctive (generally akin to the subjunctive of result,¹ but sometimes, as in the fourth example, to the potential subjunctive, see section 136) is regularly used in these clauses ; as,

Nor was there anyone who was intent on looting: Neque fuit quisquam quī praedae studēret.

But I am not the man to be frightened by danger: Neque is sum quī periculō terrear.

There were two roads by which they could leave home ; Erant itinera duo quibus domō exire possent.

Nor had they any place to which they could retreat: Neque quō sē recipere habēbant².

i. This subjunctive of characteristic is especially common after such general phrases of existence as sunt quī, nēmō est quī, ūnus est quī, sōlus est quī, quis est quī? nōn is est quī ; also after dīgnus, indīgnus and idōneus ; as, He will not be a fit person to be sent: Nōn erit idōneus quī mittātur.

ii. The relative clause of characteristic has sometimes a restrictive force ; as, So far as I know: Quod sciam.

¹ In such cases the relative may often be replaced by the phrase such as or such that.

² By some this is regarded as a relative clause of purpose (section 26, i).

33. i. As that not in clauses of result is ut nōn, so where no one, nothing, no (adjectival) and never occur, use ut nēmō, ut nihil, ut nūllus, ut numquam; as,

He put the enemy so speedily to flight that no one held his ground at all: Tam celeriter hostēs in fugam dedit utī omnīnō resisteret nēmō.

ii. Quīn is often found instead of quī nōn in relative clauses of characteristic after negative phrases; as, No one is so brave as not to be disturbed: Nēmō est tam fortis quīn perturbētur.

iii. Sometimes the perfect subjunctive instead of the imperfect is found corresponding to our past (indefinite) tense. In such cases either (1) the writer is calling attention to the independent fact rather than dwelling on the relation of cause and effect; or (2) the action is summed up as a single whole, and not regarded as continuing; as, Our men captured the vessels, so that very few reached land: Nostri nāvēs expūgnāvērunt, ut perpaucae ad terram pervēnerint.

iv. A common use of the consecutive clause is to form with a preceding fore (or futūrum esse) a substitute for the future infinitive passive, and sometimes also for the future infinitive active, especially with verbs that lack the supine stem; as, He hoped that Ariovistus would abandon his obstinacy: Spērābat fore utī Ariovistus pertināciā dēsisteret.

v. Verbs of causing are followed sometimes by a substantive clause of purpose, sometimes by one of result. Hence the negative is sometimes nē, sometimes ut nōn.

vi. Ita (or sīc) with ut and the subjunctive may express restriction or limitation.

1. So great a panic seized our soldiers that we did not dare to join battle with the enemy. 2. It happened that no ship reached its destination. 3. We are not so inexperienced as to believe that the Roman people can be conquered by our forces. 4. There is no one but (33, ii.) knows that the Helvetians are marching through our province. 5. Such was the valor of the soldiers that no one withdrew from the ramparts. 6. We have been so taught by our ancestors that we are accustomed to receive, not to give, hostages.

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV.; 23.)

1. So suitable was the place that he ordered the soldiers to disembark. 2. So great are the forces of the enemy that nothing can be done. 3. It happened that he met with favorable weather. 4. So swift were the foremost vessels that they reached Britain the fourth hour of the day. 5. So quickly (celeriter) do the soldiers embark that in the third watch he gives the signal and orders the anchors to be weighed. 6. It happens that the shore is clear and the tide favorable. 7. He pointed out that a weapon could be thrown to the shore from the ship. 8. He gave orders (imperō) that the cavalry should follow him and that the other troops should advance to the higher ground. 9. So slowly is everything done that no one is able to set sail. 10. So rapid is the movement of naval warfare that nothing is more uncertain.

QUESTIONS, DIRECT AND INDIRECT.

34. A DIRECT QUESTION is a principal clause introduced by

(a) An interrogative pronoun, pronominal adjective or adverb, or

(b) One of the interrogative particles, -ne, nōnne, or num¹; as,

¹ None of these particles, -ne, nōnne or num, should be used when the sentence contains some other interrogative word.

36. Rules for the USE OF TENSES are as follows :

In indirect questions as a rule the English tenses will be a sufficient guide.¹ The future is represented by the subjunctive of the active periphrastic conjugation (see section 123).

SEQUENCE OF TENSES IN INDIRECT QUESTIONS.

Primary Sequence.

He asks, learns,	}	Quaerit, cōgnōscit,	}
He will ask, learn,		Quaeret, cōgnōscet,
what they are doing :	}	quid faciant.	}
what they have done :		quid fēcerint.
what they did :		quid fēcerint.
what they will do :		quid factūrī sint.

Secondary Sequence.

He was asking, learning,	}	Quaerēbat, cōgnōscēbat,	}
He asked, learned,		Quaesīvit, cōgnōvit,
He had asked, learned,		Quaesīverat, cōgnōverat,
what they were doing :	}	quid facerent.	}
what they had done :		quid fēcissent.
what they did :		quid fēcissent.
what they would do :		quid factūrī essent.

i. The historical present may take either primary or secondary sequence.

37. After the verbs mentioned in section 35, English abstract nouns such as size, number, character, reason, time, place, and many verbal nouns such as opinion, intention, are best rendered into Latin by dependent interrogative clauses ; as,

¹ The chief exceptions are : (a) After a primary tense the perfect subjunctive takes the place of the imperfect ; as, I know what he was doing : Sciō quid fēcerit.

(b) After the perfect tense secondary tenses are used, even where we should expect primary tenses ; as, I have shown what resources you have : Quae subsidia habērēs, exposuī. (This last peculiarity is found sometimes also in clauses of result.)

You see the extent of the danger : Vidētis quantum sit periculum.

He reported his discoveries : Quae cōgnōvisset renūntiāvit.

They had learned the situation of affairs : Quō in locō rēs esset, cōgnōverant.

He could not discover their intentions : Quae factūrī essent, cōgnōscere nōn poterat.

38. DISJUNCTIVE QUESTIONS.—Where two questions are connected by or, involving an alternative choice, we have a disjunctive, alternative or double question as opposed to a simple question. The first alternative is in Latin regularly introduced by utrum (whether) or -ne, the second by an (or). Such questions when dependent are of course in the subjunctive ; as,

Does duty or fear weigh more with them ? Utrum apud eōs officium an timor plūs valet ?

They were debating whether it was better to lead their forces against the enemy or to defend the camp. Dēliberābant cōpiāsne adversum hostem dūcere, an castra dēfendere praestāret.

39. i. Or not, in the direct disjunctive question, is annōn ; in the indirect, necne.

ii. Utrum is often omitted in disjunctive questions, in which case -ne is sometimes used for an in indirect questions. In simple direct questions also -ne is sometimes omitted, especially in impassioned interrogations.

iii. Yes and no in answers are usually expressed by repeating the verb of the question (with or without nōn), or by some other emphatic word, e.g., certē, certainly ; sānē, to be sure ; nōn, no ; minimē, by no means.

iv. In indirect questions, nōnne, whether .. not, is used only after quaerō.

v. It is of great importance, but not always easy, to distinguish the dependent interrogative clause from the dependent relative clause with the antecedent omitted, the latter being regularly in the indicative. For instance, in They could not prevent what had been done, and I can go where they can go, what and where are to be taken as relatives ; in They could not tell what had been done, and I can find out where they can go, as interrogatives. After the verbs mentioned in section 35, however, doubtful clauses will generally be interrogative ; after other verbs, generally relative.

A.

1. Who were leading the forces into our territories? 2. He asked what they wished to be done. 3. He told who had persuaded the soldiers to leave the camp. 4. Caesar had sent horsemen in advance to observe in what direction the enemy were marching. 5. Did you not know that he had asked whether (35, i.) the Roman people would make peace with the enemy? No (39, iii.). 6. Of whom did you ask the date of his return to the city? 7. He sent scouts across the river to ascertain what was going on in the enemy's camp. 8. Are you a Roman soldier or not (38; 39, i.)? What is your reason for coming into these territories? 9. Surely he will not ask whether (38) we have waged war with the Helvetians or not (39, i.)? 10. He could not find out what villages the Gauls had beyond the Rhone, or their size. 11. They wished to learn the strength and the position of the enemy's forces. 12. For what reason did the officers not lead the troops against the enemy to prevent their crossing the river? 13. He sent spies in order to learn with whom the leader of the Gauls had been holding communication.

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV., 24, 25.)

1. What kind of ship has been sent in advance? 2. With whom were they fighting? 3. Has the plan been discovered? 4. Are they not accustomed to use cavalry? 5. They had ascertained how great was the depth of the sea. 6. He asks where our men will land. 7. He perceives for what reasons we are unable to follow. 8. He observes what zeal the Romans are accustomed to display. 9. What keeps our men from leaping down into the waves? 10. He pointed out what was keeping our men from advancing. 11. Why do you hesitate? Surely you are not going to retreat? Are you not willing to leap down? 12. He pointed out how great a disgrace they were incurring (had incurred, would incur). 13. He was unable to ascertain the reason for the weapons being hurled. 14. All could see who was bearing the eagle; we cannot see in which hand he carries the eagle.

(a) Present Participle :—He is slain while fighting bravely : Fortissimē pūgnāns interficitur.

They slew Roscius while returning home : Domum redeuntem (or revertentem) Roscium occidērunt.

(b) Perfect Participle Passive :—Being repulsed by the cavalry, they hid in the woods : Repulsī ab equitātū, sē in silvās abdidērunt.

He brought aid to his brother, when hemmed in by the enemy : Frātrī interclūsō ab hostibus auxilium tulit.

Though thrown into confusion, still they did not retreat : Perturbātī, tamen pedem nōn rettulērunt.

He will come if asked : Rogātus veniet.

(c) Perfect Participle Deponent :—Having encouraged the soldiers, he leaped down : Cohortātus militēs, dēsiluit.

Fearing a scarcity of provisions, he returned : Inopiam frūmenti veritus, rediit.

Notice that although the English participle is frequently preceded by such words as while, when, if, though, the corresponding Latin words are not used.

43. It is generally advisable to render this Latin participle more freely into English, using either

(a) a dependent clause introduced by while, when, after, as, because, if, although ; or

(b) the prepositions on, after, with a verbal noun, especially the gerund in -ing ; or

(c) a coordinate sentence followed by and or but ; or

(d) a relative clause.

And conversely all such expressions are commonly best rendered into Latin (where possible) by the circumstantial participle. For instance, in place of the English sentences given in section 42, we may have, corresponding to the same Latin sentences :

They slew Roscius while (or as) he was returning home, or, They slew Roscius, who was returning home.

On being repulsed by the cavalry (or, After their repulse by the cavalry), they hid in the woods.

He brought aid to his brother when he had been hemmed in by the enemy, or, who had been hemmed in by the enemy.

Though they were thrown into confusion, still they did not retreat, or, They were thrown into confusion but still did not retreat.

He will come if he is asked.

After he had encouraged the soldiers (or, After encouraging the soldiers) he leaped down, or, He encouraged the soldiers and leaped down.

He returned, because he feared a scarcity of provisions, or, As he feared a scarcity of provisions, he returned.

44. i. Other uses of the Participle are :

(a) As a substantive, chiefly in the oblique cases and especially in the plural ; as, He followed up the fugitives : Fugientēs prōsecūtus est. Opportunity for resting is given to the wounded : Vulnerātis facultās quiētis datur.

Note that those fleeing, those wounded is not in Latin ī fugientēs or ī vulnerātī.

(b) As an adjective ; as, This state was large and flourishing : Haec civitās fuit ampla atque florēns. They thought they were ready : Sē parātōs esse arbitrātī sunt.

Parātus and many other participles are in fact compared like adjectives.

(c) As a predicative complement of certain verbs, especially (a) the present participle with videō, audiō, faciō, and other verbs of perceiving or representing ; as, He noticed a certain man writing : Animadvertit quendam scribentem ; and (b) the perfect participle passive with habeō, very like the English perfect with have ; as, He sends forward the cavalry which he had collected from the whole province : Equitātum, quem ex omni prōvinciā coāctum habēbat, praemittit. (See section 182, ii.)

ii. The perfect participle of many deponent verbs appears often to have the force of the present ; for instance, there is no appreciable difference between arbitrātus and existimāns. Other words so used are veritus, diffīsus, suspicātus, ūsus ; as, Suspecting that this would happen, Labienus was advancing, employing the same pretence : Quae fore suspicātus, Labiēnus eādē ūsus simulatiōne progrediēbātur. In most cases the perfect is defensible as specifying the cause which leads to subsequent action.

iii. The participle occasionally has its force defined more exactly by the use of nisi (except), ut or tamquam (as if), etsi or quamquam (although), utpote (inasmuch as).

iv. The lack of a present participle passive is supplied by a subordinate clause with dum, cum, or quī; that of the perfect participle active (where a deponent verb is not available) by a subordinate verb with cum, sī, etsī, etc., or by the ablative absolute construction (see section 46).

EXERCISE 6.

A.

1. They threw the ambassador into chains while he was attempting to speak. 2. The envoys, after being dismissed, returned home. 3. The cavalry made an attack upon the Gauls, who were scattered and in despair. 4. Thinking the ambassadors would not return, Caesar crossed the river. 5. After encouraging the cavalry the tribunes returned to Caesar. 6. He replied that the Germans would come if asked. 7. Our men attacked the enemy and slew a great number of them. 8. Promising to return in a short time, he followed up the fugitives. 9. He comes upon the soldiers, who are fighting bravely. 10. On his return he found the soldiers engaged in the work. 11. The cavalry, being ordered to cross the river, brought aid to our men, who were resisting with the utmost bravery. 12. He said that the cavalry, though thrown into confusion, still would not retreat.

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV., 25, 26.)

1. Alarmed by all these things, he began to retreat. 2. We saw the enemy approaching and the soldiers hurling missiles. 3. He will attack our men as they are disembarking (after they have landed). 4. He exhorts his men to follow and leaps into the sea. 5. The ships, after being removed a short distance, are urged forward. 6. Attacking the barbarians, who had been thrown into confusion, they put (them) to flight. 7. An attack was made on our men while they were hesitating. 8. They surrounded Caesar who was fighting vigorously. 9. The boats were filled with soldiers and stationed on the exposed flank. 10. If the troops are driven off and dislodged, they will incur disgrace. 11. While pursuing the enemy they could not keep their ranks. 12. As he leaps down he observes a soldier in difficulty. 13. Though hindered by the shoals, he was still able to reach the island.

47. There is a similar nominative absolute construction in English ; as, Their arms having been surrendered, he made peace. But the English construction is of comparatively rare occurrence, and seldom furnishes a suitable translation for the Latin ablative absolute, which should rather be rendered freely, for instance by a change of voice, or according to the methods suggested in section 43, viz. :

(a) a dependent clause introduced by while, when, after, as, because, if, although ;

(b) the prepositions on, after, with a verbal noun, especially the gerund in -ing ; or,

(c) a coordinate sentence followed by and or but.

48. In the cases described in section 45, we may also have in place of the ablative absolute, dependent clauses expressing time, cause, concession, or condition ; for instance, in place of the present participle, cum with the imperfect subjunctive or dum with the present indicative, and in place of the perfect participle, cum with the pluperfect subjunctive or ubi or postquam with the perfect indicative ; as, Having heard this, he departed : Cum haec audivisset (or ubi haec audivit), discessit. Although the defenders were but few, he could not take the town : Etsi pauci defendebant, oppidum expugnare non potuit.

i. Where also participles do not exist in Latin, these dependent clauses may replace an English participle ; as, Being unable to cross the river, they returned : Cum flumen transire non possent, revertērunt.

49. Instead of the participle in the absolute construction, we often find a predicate noun or adjective, without any copula, as the verb esse has no present or perfect participle ; as,

They attempt to cross against his will : Eō invitō transire cōnantur.

He formed a conspiracy in the consulship of Messala and Piso: Messālā atque Pisōne cōsulibus conjūratiōnem fēcit.¹

50. i. The ablative absolute construction is not used with the perfect participle passive of intransitive verbs, that is, of verbs which in the active do not govern an accusative ; as,

Having reached the Rhine, they plunged into the river: Cum ad Rhēnum pervēnissent, sē in flūmen praecipitāvērunt. (See sec. 56.)

ii. In the case of the perfect participle of deponent verbs with active force, the ablative absolute is somewhat sparingly used, and chiefly with intransitive verbs ; as, A great storm arose, and almost all the ships were wrecked: Māximā coortā tempestāte, prope omnēs nāvēs afflictāe sunt. So also mortuus, profectus, secūtus.

iii. It is contrary to Latin usage to have the substantive in the ablative absolute denote the same person or thing as is expressed in the principal clause : as, When Commius landed they seized him is not Commiō ē nāvī ēgressō, eum comprehendērunt, but Commiū ē nāvī ēgressum comprehendērunt.²

iv. Nisi, ut, etc. (section 44, iii.), may be used with the ablative absolute.

v. An ablative absolute with the negative is often equivalent to a phrase introduced by without ; as, Without losing any time he sets out: Nūllō tempore intermissō proficiscitur.

vi. One ablative absolute may define the circumstances of another ; as, As the ranks were in confusion from hearing the shouting, the rest took to flight: Reliquī, exauditō clāmōre perturbātis ordinibus, terga vertērunt. An ablative absolute may be connected by a conjunction (e.g., et, -que) with another ablative absolute, but not with any other (even an equivalent) construction.

EXERCISE 7.

A.

1. Having settled these matters, he returned. 2. After encouraging the soldiers and giving the signal, he ordered an attack to be made. 3. He set out against Caesar's will, after promising to return shortly. 4. As no enemy prevented (him), he led the legion back in safety. 5. On this being done, the Roman soldiers, drawing their swords, made an attack upon the enemy. 6. In the consulship of Marius many were put to death without a hearing. 7. After that assembly had been dismissed, the chief men returned to Caesar. 8. After he heard the prisoner he dismissed him (50, iii.). 9. When this battle was fought, the enemy, being impressed by the bravery of our soldiers, sent envoys to Caesar. 10. Having reached their territories, he set fire to all their villages and (then) returned to the camp.

² Yet Caesar has several instances of the ablative absolute in such cases, often apparently to secure emphasis ; e.g., B. G., III. 14, 4 ; IV. 12, 1 ; 21, 6 ; V. 4, 3 ; 44, 6 ; VI. 4, 4 ; 43, 1 ; VII. 4, 1 ; 27, 2 ; 29, 1 ; 76, 3. This should not be imitated.

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV., 26, 27.)

1. Making an attack, they surround the enemy. 2. After seizing the envoy and putting him in chains, they send for their chief men. 3. As our men were in distress, he ordered reinforcements to be sent. 4. They attack the enemy fiercely and put them to flight. 5. When the enemy were defeated he demanded hostages. 6. By hurling their weapons they throw the enemy into confusion. 7. Being unable to land (48, i.), they asked to be sent back. 8. We shall send Commius back and sue for peace. 9. As Commius is landing from the ship, they seize him (50, iii.). 10. On their promising to do this they were sent back. 11. After they have sued for peace and given hostages, they yet have begun to make war. 12. The leading men on assembling began to complain. 13. Sending the cavalry in advance, he orders the chief men to be seized. 14. They followed the standards and attacked the enemy.

VERBS COMPLETED BY THE DATIVE, GENITIVE OR ABLATIVE.

THE IMPERSONAL PASSIVE.

(b) Two impersonal verbs, interest and (rarely) rēfert, meaning it concerns, it interests (it is of importance to), take the genitive of the person interested; as, It concerns the state: Reī pūblicae interest.

i. But instead of the genitive of the personal and reflexive pronouns, the ablative feminine of the possessives is used, namely, meā, tuā, nostrā, vestrā, suā; as, This concerns me: Hōc meā interest (or rēfert). In this usage rēfert is common.

ii. The thing which is of importance is expressed by a neuter pronoun, an infinitive (with or without a subject accusative) or a clause. The degree of importance is expressed by an adverb or by the genitive of price (see section 88); as, Your safety is of great importance to me: Māgnī meā interest ut salvus sis.

54. VERBS WHICH TAKE THE ABLATIVE.

The following verbs (with their compounds) are followed by the ablative:

Use, ūtor. Enjoy, fruor. Eat, vescor.

Perform, fungor. Gain, obtain, potior.

Also verbs of lacking, egeō, careō.

55. i. That in the case of such verbs the irregularity is only apparent may be seen by observing the exact meaning of the verb; for instance, serviō, am a slave (to); persuādeō, make it acceptable (to); satisfaciō, do enough (for); pāreō, am at hand (for); resistō, stand in opposition (to); praesum, am at the head (with reference to); ūtor, benefit myself (by means of); potior, become powerful (by means of); careō, be cut off (from); oblivīscor, become dark (as regards) i.e., become forgetful (of).

ii. Accordingly it is not necessary that all verbs having the same English equivalent should take the same case. Thus jubeō (command, order) takes the accusative and infinitive, and jurō (aid), laedō (injure), dēlectō (please), offendō (displease), misereor (pity), and recordor (recollect), regularly take the accusative

iii. Some of the verbs given in sections 52-54 are sometimes followed by a different case, especially when used in a different sense. Thus imperō (command) takes the dative, but imperō (demand, require) takes the accusative, both being united in, He demands hostages of the enemy, Hostibus imperat obsidēs. Meminī, remember (of recalling a person one has known), takes the accusative. Potior, gain sovereignty over, takes the genitive, chiefly in the phrase rērum potīrī, to obtain control of affairs. And the verbs of remembering and forgetting regularly have the accusative in the case of neuter pronouns or neuter adjectives used substantively.

iv. Certain phrases having the value of verbs which take the dative have the same construction, e.g., fidem habeō = cōnfīdō.

v. Ūtor may take a second ablative used predicatively ; as, He used these men as guides : His ducibus ūtēbātur.

vi. Interdīcō, debar, takes a dative (or sometimes an accusative) of the person debarred, the ablative of the thing forbidden.

56. THE IMPERSONAL PASSIVE.—In English only the active voice of an intransitive verb may be used. But in Latin even with intransitive verbs (i.e., such as do not govern a direct object in the accusative), the passive may be used impersonally, that is, in the third person singular, and (in the compound tenses) in the neuter. The impersonal passive denotes merely the occurrence of an action without reference to the doer ; as, Pūgnātur : fighting takes place, or there is a fight. Ventum est : coming took place. The usual English equivalent is the active voice, the subject being obtained from the context ; as, Ventum est. He (or we or they, etc.) came. (See also 203, d.)

57. In Latin all intransitive verbs, if used in the passive, must be used impersonally, and this impersonal passive construction is used to render into Latin the passive of the verbs which take the dative¹ (section 52) ; as,

Caesar is obeyed : Caesari pārētur (i.e., obedience is rendered to Caesar).

They asked to be spared : Ōrābant ut sibi parcerētur (i.e., that mercy might be shown to them).

I had not been pardoned: Mihi nōn erat ignōtum (i.e., forgiveness had not been granted to me).

Thus where a verb takes the dative in the active voice, that dative must be retained in the passive, and cannot become the subject.

EXERCISE 8.

A.

1. Caesar besought the soldiers of the tenth legion to remember their former valor. 2. He answered that Dumnorix was always opposing Caesar's plans and assisting the enemy. 3. These resources he is using in order to gain the sovereign power. 4. He says that the senate distrusted the Gauls and ordered them to obey Caesar's commands. 5. Exercising his usual (suis) clemency, he promised to spare the Nervii. 6. To this embassy the answer was given that the Roman people could forget the old insult, but not the recent wrongs. 7. It is your interest (53, b) and the interest of all the citizens to obey the laws. 8. Word was brought that these tribes eat corn and flesh. 9. The soldiers whom Labienus commanded were persuaded not to injure the prisoners. 10. We are accustomed to pity those who obey our rule. 11. The states which oppose the Roman people cannot be pardoned. 12. All whom we met said that they lacked food. 13. He demanded (55, iii.) hostages from the other states.

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV., 27-29.)

1. They were approaching the upper harbor. 2. It happened that he commanded the whole army. 3. The enemy's indiscretion will not be forgiven. 4. Meanwhile he commands part of the cavalry to repair the vessel of which mention has been made. 5. All obey the commander in chief. 6. They are not accustomed to use grain. 7. We persuaded Caesar not to forgive the chief men. 8. He demanded ropes, anchors and other tackling from this state (55, iii.). 9. This storm damages the war vessels. 10. So great a storm arose that several vessels were damaged. 11. He commands our men to resist the cavalry. 12. The mainland was reached the same night. 13. They ask to be forgiven.

If he had said this (but he did not), he would have been mistaken: Sī hōc dīxisset, errāvisset.

Had my advice prevailed, we should to-day be free: Sī meum cōnsilium valuisset, hodiē liberī essēmus.

i. The imperfect subjunctive may also refer to continued or repeated action in past time.

62. III. In FUTURE conditions, one class corresponds exactly to that given in section 60, where the logical result is emphasized. The English has in the protasis generally the present indicative, in the apodosis the future indicative (sometimes the imperative); the Latin has in the protasis the future or future perfect indicative, in the apodosis the future indicative (or imperative).

The difference in tenses is due to the fact that Latin in dependent clauses is more exact than English in indicating both the point of time (present, past or future), and also priority of action in relation to the main verb.

If he thinks that, he will be mistaken: Sī hōc exīstimābit, errābit.

If he does that, he will receive a reward: Sī hōc fēcerit, prae-mium cōsequētur. (The doing must precede the receiving.)

If they cross the river, hold your ground: Si flūmen trānsierint, sustinēte.

63. IV. In the other class of FUTURE conditions, where a conceivable case is put less vividly,¹ the English has in both clauses should or would (or in the protasis it may have the past subjunctive or were to); the Latin has the present subjunctive in both clauses; as,

If he were to say this (or If he said this), he would be mistaken: Sī hōc dīcat, erret.

Time would fail me, if I should resolve to describe everything: Sī velim omnia dēscribere, diēs mē dēficiat.

¹ The two classes are often distinguished as the more vivid and the less vivid form of future conditions.

64. i. Many departures from these four forms are found, especially other combinations of tenses. Of the cases where the mood is varied, the most important is in conditions contrary to fact (section 61), where possum, dēbeō, oportet, and the periphrastic conjugations (sections 120 and 123) are regularly used in the indicative instead of in the subjunctive; as, If Caesar had set out, he could have crossed the river: Caesar, sī profectus esset, flūmen trānsire potuit.¹ ii. Alternative conditions are introduced by sive . . . sive (or seu . . . seu) whether . . . or, which follow the rules for sī as regards mood and tense; as, It will be an easy task, whether they remain or set out: Facilis erit rēs, seu manēbunt seu proficiscentur.

Whether . . . or in this sense should be carefully distinguished from whether . . . or represented by utrum . . . an (section 38). In the former case we can always add in either case, or change to no matter whether . . . or.

iii. For if not, sī nōn, sī minus and nisi are found. Nisi (unless) is used to mark an exception, or after negatives. Sī minus is used where the verb is to be supplied from the context.

iv. Two mutually exclusive conditions are introduced by sī . . . sīn, if . . . but if. For but if not, where the verb is omitted, sīn minus or sīn aliter is used.

v. An important special type of the present or past logical condition (section 60) is the so-called general condition, which states what is habitual in any one of a series of recurrent actions. For present time the *perfect*² indicative is usual in the protasis, the present indicative in the apodosis; for past time the *pluperfect*² indicative in the protasis and the imperfect indicative in the apodosis; as, If any crime is committed, the Druids fix the penalty: Sī quod est admissum facinus, Druidēs poenam cōstituunt. If ever they began to despair, they would betake themselves to the nearest towns: Sī quandō dēspērāre coeperant, sē in proxima oppida recipiēbant.

vi. For sī translated by in the hope that, to see whether, see section 177.

¹ In poetry and rhetorical prose the indicative of other verbs also is sometimes found in the apodosis of conditions contrary to fact.

² The perfect and pluperfect are used on the same principle as the future perfect in section 62.

vii. Participles and adjectives may be used in place of the regular protasis to express condition ; as, He will come, if asked: Rogātus veniet. If we keep together we shall be a match for them: Ūniversī parēs iīs erimus.

viii. Another favorite classification of the conditional clauses is threefold :

(a) Logical conditions (past, present or future) combining classes I. and III. above. Indicative in both clauses.

(b) Ideal or contingent conditions (future)—the same as class IV. above. Present subjunctive in both clauses.

(c) Unreal conditions (present or past)—the same as class II. above. Imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive in both clauses.

EXERCISE 9.

A.

1. If Casticus should seize the supreme power in his state, Caesar would wage war against him. 2. If our troops defeat the enemy, the Belgians will at once send ambassadors to Caesar. 3. If the Gauls had been conquered by Caesar, they would have immediately sent ambassadors to him concerning peace. 4. If a dispute arises among them (64, v.), the chief men decide (it). 5. The Germans would not now be carrying on war with the Gauls if Ariovistus had been defeated by the Roman troops. 6. If this is reported to Ariovistus, he will inflict the severest punishment on the hostages. 7. If the general had not sent forward three cohorts, the enemy would have gained the victory and our soldiers would now be in the greatest peril. 8. The Helvetians would return to their territories if the Roman people were to conclude peace with them. 9. Unless Caesar enrols two legions in that place, he will not be able to carry on the war successfully with the Gauls. 10. If the enemy had set fire to all their towns and villages and burnt up all their corn, they would not have been able (64, i.) to return. 11. If Caesar meets with favorable weather, he will weigh anchor ; but if not (64, iv.), he will return. 12. If the Germans had made an attempt to cross the Rhine, Caesar would have marched against them with two legions.

(b) Clauses introduced by even though, even if, even granting, are rendered into Latin by etsi or etiamsi with the indicative or subjunctive, according to the rules for the protasis of conditional sentences (sections 60-63), or by ut or nē with the subjunctive; as,

Even if he cannot show gratitude, he at least can feel it: Etiamsi referre gratiam nōn potest (section 60), habēre certē potest.

Even if my disposition did not bid me, necessity compels me to speak the truth: Vēra loquī, etsi meum ingenium nōn movēret (section 61), necessitās cōgit.

Even supposing everything should turn out contrary to expectation, we are very powerful in ships: Ut omnia contrā opiniōnem accidant, plūrimum nāvibus possumus.

(c) Clauses introduced by although, meaning however much, no matter how, are rendered into Latin by quamvis with the subjunctive (usually in the present tense); as, However great expectation may be (or Although expectation be great), yet you will surpass it: Quamvis sit māgna exspectātiō, tamen eam vincēs.

66. i. The impersonal verb licet and the subjunctive (see section 143, fn.) is often used with the force of even though.

ii. Quamvis is sometimes joined with a single word, the predicate of the subordinate clause being understood; as, However few they are, they venture to advance: Quamvis paucī (supply sint) adīre audent.

iii. Quamquam sometimes introduces an independent clause, and may then be rendered and yet.

iv. Only in class (α) is it always certain that what is conceded is a fact.

v. For the concessive ablative absolute see section 48, and for concessive relative clauses, section 171.

67. CLAUSES OF PROVISIO are subordinate clauses embodying some stipulation. They are introduced in English by provided, or if only, or so long as; in Latin commonly by dum, dummodo or modo with the subjunctive (usually in the present tense); as, Let them hate, provided (or so long as) they fear: Ōderint dum metuant.

i. The negative in clauses of proviso is nē.

68. CONDITIONAL CLAUSES OF COMPARISON are subordinate clauses containing a comparison to some imaginary state of affairs. Such clauses are introduced in English by as if; in Latin by quasi, tamquam sī, velut sī, ut sī, ac sī, or by tamquam or velut alone. These are followed by the subjunctive, the sequence of tenses being observed (i.e., present or perfect subjunctive after the primary tenses, imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive after the secondary tenses); as, We shudder at the cruelty of Ariovistus just as if he were present: Ariovistī crūdēlitātem, velut sī cōram adsit, horrēmus.¹

i. Quasi, tamquam, ut and velut are used with a similar force with participles; as, They halted as if bidden by a voice from heaven: Restitērunt tamquam caelestī vōce jussī.

EXERCISE 10.

1. Although he saw that the legions were being hard pressed, he was unwilling to order the soldiers to retreat. 2. Even if Caesar were in command of the army, he would not be able to defeat the enemy. 3. Provided that (67) the enemy do not learn our numbers, we shall attack them to-morrow. 4. Many remain in the camp, as if (68) they were unwilling to return to Gaul. 5. If Caesar comes up with the enemy, he will easily defeat them, no matter how (65, c) brave and numerous they may be. 6. In spite of their having taken up their position on the higher ground, the enemy could not withstand the attacks of our men. 7. Although he had now come in sight of the army, he did not cease from his flight. 8. The cavalry quickly crossed the river, just as if (68) they had been instructed (to do so). 9. Though you can persuade these men to send envoys, you cannot make them friends. 10. Even though he should have met with suitable weather, he would not have sailed for Britain. 11. Whereas they might return without danger, they are unwilling to set out. 12. The enemy sent hostages at once, as if (68, i.) afraid of Caesar's vengeance.

¹ In all such clauses, both English and Latin, the verb of the real apodosis has been suppressed; as, We shudder at the cruelty of Ariovistus as (we should shudder) if he were present: Ariovistī crūdēlitātem, velut (horreāmus) sī cōram adsit, horrēmus.

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV., 31, 32.)

1. Although the rest of the ships had been repaired, he had not yet set out. 2. Even if they had given hostages, he would not have set out. 3. Although they were reaping, they had not laid aside their arms. 4. Although he suspects that this has happened, he orders the ships to be repaired. 5. In spite of the fact that all the vessels had been lost, he did not suspect that the enemy would form this plan. 6. Even if we are hard pressed by the enemy, we shall not surrender. 7. Although the ships have been wrecked, we shall not use their timber. 8. The enemy were hurling weapons from every quarter, whereas our men, being crowded together, were with difficulty holding their own. 9. Even if a larger cloud of dust were to be seen, he would not learn our plan.

USES OF THE ACCUSATIVE.

69. The DIRECT OBJECT of a transitive verb (whether active or deponent) is put in the accusative ; as,

They slay the man : Hominem interficiunt.

He saw the forces of the enemy : Hostium cōpiās cōspicātus est.

He builds a bridge : Pontem facit.

i. The direct object is that which is (a) affected or apprehended, or (b) caused or produced, by the action of the verb.

ii. Some verbs (chiefly verbs of emotion) which are intransitive in English are represented by transitive verbs in Latin, such as horrēre (shudder at), dolēre (grieve over), rīdēre (laugh at), spērāre (hope for), exspectāre (wait for), tacēre (be silent about) ; as, They shudder at the cruelty of Ariovistus : Crudelitātem Ariovistī horrent.

iii. Many intransitive verbs (chiefly verbs of motion) become transitive when compounded with prepositions (especially circum, praeter and trāns) ; as, of; contrā, opposite to, against; ergā, towards; extrā, outside; infrā, below; inter, between, among; intrā, within; jūxtā, near; ob, on account of; penes, in the power of; per, through; pōne, post, behind, after; praeter, past, except; prope, near; propter, on account of; secundum, after, following; suprā, above; trāns, across; ūltrā, beyond; versus, towards.

They cross the river : Flūmen trānseunt.

The Helvetians meet Caesar : Helvētīi Caesarem conveniunt.

Compare in English such verbs as overrun, undergo. (See section 78, v. a.)

The accusative is also used with in, into or in, and sub, under, when they express motion towards, and usually with subter, beneath, and super, above. These four also take the ablative (section 108).

i. The adverbs propius and proximē, prīdiē and postrīdiē, and the adjectives propior and proximus sometimes take the accusative.

71. THE SUBJECT OF THE INFINITIVE (except the historical infinitive, section 112) is put in the accusative; as,

He answered that Caesar was doing wrong: Respondit Caesarem injūriam facere.

It is dangerous for the Germans to cross the Rhine: Germānōs Rhēnum trānsire est periculōsum.

72. COGNATE ACCUSATIVE.—Intransitive verbs often take an accusative to define more clearly their meaning. This is either a substantive (generally modified by an adjective) of kindred meaning and often of kindred derivation, or more frequently a neuter pronoun or adjective used substantively; as, We shall live a safer life: Tūtiōrem vītam vivēmus. He makes almost the same mistakes: Eadem ferē peccat.

This is the origin of the adverbial use of multum, nihil, quid, quantum, etc.; as, He has very great power: Plūrimum potest.

i. There are also a few isolated phrases (used adverbially) which are closely connected with the cognate accusative, such as māximam partem, for the most part.

73. ACCUSATIVE OF SPECIFICATION.—In poetry, largely through Greek influence,¹ the accusative is used to denote the part of the body affected; as, Tremat artūs: He trembles in his limbs. Ōs deō similis: In face like to a god.

74. The accusative is used in EXCLAMATIONS, with or without an interjection; as, Ah, wretched me: Mē miserum or Ō mē miserum.

75. For the use of the accusative to denote DURATION OF TIME, EXTENT OF SPACE, and LIMIT OF MOTION, see sections 125, 128, and 129.

A.

1. The Gauls had already led three-fourths of their troops across (69, iv.) that river. 2. He learned that they had all encamped within those forests and were there waiting for (69, ii.) the approach of the Romans. 3. It is very easy for our forces to march through these districts. 4. The ships were carried down towards (ad) the lower part of the island, which is nearer (70, i.) the west. 5. The tribes which dwell on this side the Rhine have been made tributary. 6. He crossed the river, and having attacked the enemy, he began to storm the city. 7. They are mistaken, if they hope for (69, ii.) aid from us. 8. Before his arrival they had seized the country (loca) around the forest which the Greeks call Orcynia. 9. Because of their fear, they concealed (69, vi.) everything from Caesar. 10. Perceiving how much (72) power he had, we determined to wait for reinforcements. 11. On being asked their opinion (69, vi.) they made no answer. 12. For (ob) the same reason, he did not trust the Gauls much (72).

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV., 32, 33.)

1. On account of the large number of the enemy they adopt this plan. 2. Up to that time they called this legion the seventh. 3. This will make the camp larger. 4. He observed that part of the legion had marched in that direction. 5. They suddenly attack the outposts. 6. They are leaving the field (lit. battle), and are betaking themselves to the camp. 7. He reports that this is the custom among all the barbarians. 8. He suspects that this will make the ranks uncertain. 9. They informed the enemy that the cavalry would surround the legion. 10. It is time for the rest of the cohorts to arm themselves. 11. Before the battle he had ordered a squadron of cavalry to fight among the infantry.

USES OF THE DATIVE.

76. The Dative case is used to express the indirect or remote connection of a person or thing with the action, feeling, or quality expressed by a verb or adjective. There are three main uses :¹ to express (1) the indirect object, (2) the person interested, (3) the purpose served. The dative may generally be rendered by to or for.

77. THE INDIRECT OBJECT, completing the meaning of a verb by denoting a person or thing indirectly affected, is put in the dative ; as,

They yield to Caesar : Caesari cēdunt.

They granted lands to the Germans : Germānis agrōs dedērunt.

78. i. The dative of the indirect object is found (a) with intransitive verbs, (b) with transitive verbs in connection with a direct object.²

ii. Closely allied to the use with verbs is the use of the DATIVE WITH ADJECTIVES, whose meaning it completes by denoting that to which the feeling or quality is directed ; as,

He was friendly to the Helvetians : Helvētiis erat amicus.

Such adjectives are those meaning near, friendly, like, useful, easy, agreeable, known, and their opposites. Many of these, however, admit other constructions, especially a preposition (ad or in) with the accusative. The dative is also found with adverbs of like meaning.

iii. Often in English, especially with verbs of giving, promising and telling, the preposition to is not used, and the indirect object is in form indistinguishable from the direct ; as, He gave the soldiers the signal : Militibus signum dedit. He told Cicero he would return : Cicerōni dixit sē reversūrum.

¹ This division is not fundamental, but is convenient for practical purposes.

² The direct object of course becomes the subject in the passive voice, the indirect object remaining.

cavalry). He inspired the soldiers with hope : Spem intulit militibus (more literally, He put hope into the soldiers). He put Brutus over the fleet : Brūtum classī praefecit.

vi. A few verbs, such as dōnō and circumdō, admit a double construction : (1) dative and accusative, (2) accusative and ablative ; as, He presented the plunder to the soldiers : Praedam militibus dōnāvit. They presented him with the citizenship : Eum civitāte dōnāvērunt.

vii. In the poets the dative of indirect object is extended to include the idea of motion towards¹ (see section 125), and is also used with verbs of nearness, union, difference and contention.

79. THE DATIVE OF INTEREST denotes the person or thing concerned (especially that benefited or harmed). It is really identical with the dative of the indirect object, but the connection is looser and the dative complement not so essential to the verb ; as,

He ordered each to take thought for himself : Sibi quemque cōsulere jussit.

I do not ask this for myself : Neque mihi haec quaerō.²

80. Besides this simple use (often called the dative of advantage or disadvantage), the dative of interest includes :

(a) The dative with verbs of taking away or warding off, with which it is translated by from ; as, They are taking from me my liberty : Mihi libertātem ēripiunt.

(b) The DATIVE OF REFERENCE, modifying the sentence as a whole and denoting a person indirectly interested rather than actually affected. This includes :

i. Many cases where English would use a possessive : as, Pulio's shield is pierced : Trānsfigitur scūtum Pulionī (more nearly, Pulio gets his shield pierced).

ii. The person in whose eyes : as, She is beautiful to many : Fōrmōsa est multis. They wished to be blameless in Caesar's eyes : Caesari pūrgāti esse volēbant.

² For, meaning in defence of, is expressed by prō with the ablative.

iii. Participles expressing the point of view: as, The first town as you come from Epirus: Oppidum primum venientibus ab Ēpirō.

iv. The dative with interjections; as, Woe to the conquered: Vae victis.

(c) The ETHICAL DATIVE, confined to personal pronouns, and indicating a person conceived to be interested in the statement. It is chiefly used in colloquial expressions of emotion, and often answers to the English pray or bless me. Here belongs the expression sibi velle; as, What does he mean? Quid sibi vult?

(d) THE DATIVE OF THE APPARENT AGENT with the gerundive, to indicate the person interested, and hence presumably the agent; as, i. This dative is sometimes found (especially in poetry) with other forms of the passive, chiefly the compound ones.

Everything had to be done by Caesar: Caesarī omnia erant agenda.

ii. To avoid ambiguity the gerundive may have ab and the ablative in place of the dative of agent; as, I must show him gratitude: Eī ā mē referenda est grātia.

(e) The DATIVE OF POSSESSOR, chiefly with the verbs sum and dēsum, to denote the person interested as owner; as, They state that they have nothing: Dēmōnstrant sibi nihil esse.

81. THE DATIVE OF PURPOSE is a predicative dative, denoting the purpose served (that which something tends or is intended to be), and is usually accompanied by another dative of the person interested (the so-called double dative construction); as,

They choose a place for the camp: Locum castris dēligunt.

It was a great hindrance to the Gauls: Gallis māgnō erat impedimentō.

They were coming to the aid of the Nervii: Auxiliō Nervius veniēbant.

He leaves five cohorts for the defence of the camp: Quinque cohortēs castris praesidiō relinquit.

i. This dative is especially common with the verb sum (after which it has almost the force of the ordinary predicate noun), and is found also with fīō, veniō, mittō, relinquō, dō. The nouns so used are generally of a semi-abstract nature, and are always in the singular, some of the commonest being auxiliō, praesidiō, subsidiō, ūsui, impedimentō, cūrae, salūtī, odiō.

EXERCISE 12.

A.

1. He consulted the welfare of the troops whom Labienus commanded. 2. He said all these matters would be an object of concern to him. 3. It is well known to all that the departure of the Belgians was like a rout. 4. The soldiers told Labienus that Caesar had always shown special indulgence to this legion. 5. Word was brought to the lieutenant that the general had left two cohorts as a protection to the ships. 6. They said they preferred death to slavery, and that they would oppose themselves to the enemy. 7. He found that traders have (80, e) no access to these tribes. 8. He asked what Caesar meant (80, c), and why he had demanded hostages of the Gauls. 9. To these envoys Caesar made answer that he could have (80, e) no friendship with the Germans. 10. A centurion, who had participated in many engagements, was in command of the troops. 11. He ordered (imperō) the soldiers not to surround the camp with a trench nor (28, ii.) to go to the assistance of Labienus. 12. Perceiving that they had become suspected in our eyes (80, b, ii.), they threw themselves at Caesar's (80, b, i.) feet.

B. (Caesar, B. G. IV., 33, 34.)

1. They point out to Caesar that an opportunity is given to all. 2. He sent the cavalry to the assistance of the infantry. 3. Messengers are sent out to all the barbarians. 4. The small number of the enemy was unknown to our men. 5. Time had not been left for these things. 6. For several days he had fears (timeō) for our soldiers. 7. They were drawing near (appropinquō) to the camp; they betake themselves to the camp. 8. He had thought this messenger most faithful to Caesar. 9. The noise of

i. In all such cases, if the action or feeling were expressed by a verb, the noun in the genitive would be its subject ; as, The Gauls fled : Gallī fūgērunt.

85. The OBJECTIVE GENITIVE is used with nouns denoting action or feeling, to denote that to which the action or feeling is directed ; as, i. In such cases, if the action or feeling were expressed by a verb, the noun in the genitive would be its object ; as, They storm the camp : Expūgnant castra.

The storming of the camp : Expūgnātiō castrōrum.

The fear of death : Metus mortis.

ii. This construction is often used when there would be no corresponding Latin verb with the accusative, but where we should expect a dative or ablative or prepositional phrase ; and in such cases it will constantly be found that the English equivalent is a phrase containing some other preposition than of, but one that, as a rule, is equivalent to as regards or as to ; as,

Confidence in (as regards) one's self : Suī fidūcia. Exemption from (as regards) military service : Militiae vacātiō. War with the Veneti : Bellum Venetōrum. Reputation for valor : Opiniō virtūtis. Danger to the cavalry : Periculum equitum.¹

iii. Both the objective and the subjective genitive may modify the same noun ; as, The wrongs done by the Helvetians to the Roman people : Helvētiōrum injūriae populī Rōmānī.

iv. Prepositional phrases² and possessive pronominal adjectives are sometimes used instead of the objective genitive ; as, Injuries to men : In hominēs injūriae. Danger to himself : Periculum suum (for suī).

² Nouns in Latin are, as a rule, joined to each other by prepositions only when the word on which the prepositional phrase depends is of verbal origin, and even then but very seldom.

86. The PARTITIVE GENITIVE is used to denote the whole of which a part is taken.

The genitive is used with nouns, pronouns, numerals (especially ordinals and mīlia), adjectives (especially comparatives and superlatives), and occasionally with a few adverbs ; as,

Part of the soldiers : Pars mīlitum.

Which of you? Quis vestrum?

Two of the states : Duae civitātum.

Three miles (lit. three thousands of paces) : Tria mīlia passuum.

The bravest of all these : Hōrum omnium fortissimī.

Least of all : Minimē omnium.

i. The partitive genitive often depends on neuter pronouns or adjectives used substantively (but only in the nominative or the accusative without a preposition); e.g., nihil, tantum, quantum, plūs, minus, quid, quod, aliquid, id, hōc, and also the adverbs satis and parum used substantively. In most of these cases the English equivalent omits of; as, No time : Nihil spatī. Less hesitation : Minus dubitātiōnis. They carried off what corn they could : Frūmentī quod potuērunt āvexērunt. This measure of consolation : Hōc sōlāciī. Sufficient protection : Satis praesidiī.¹ ii. In other cases an adjective used substantively regularly agrees in gender with the partitive genitive depending on it; as, Many of the ships : Multae nāvium.

iii. With adjectives and pronouns the partitive idea is often expressed by prepositions, chiefly ex or dē, but also inter, ante, apud and in. Especially is this the case with ūnus, paucī and quīdam; as, One of his sons : Ūnus ē filiūs. A few of our men : Paucī dē nostrīs.

iv. The partitive genitive should not be used in the following cases :

(a) When, though English uses of, not a part but the whole is taken ; as,

To all of us : Omnibus nōbīs. All of whom : Quī omnēs. Three hundred of us have conspired : Trecentī conjūrāvīmus.

¹ This genitive may be an adjective of the first and second declensions used substantively, but not of the third; as, No evil : Nihil mali, but Nothing greater : Nihil mājus.

(b) To denote the whole, the remainder, or any local part of anything, as the top, middle, bottom, beginning. Here Latin idiom prefers an adjective in agreement, which regularly precedes the substantive ; as,

The whole of Gaul: Tōta Gallia. The rest of the struggle: Reliquum certāmen. The top of the hill: Summus collis. The middle of the river: Medium flūmen. At the beginning of spring: Primō vēre.

87. The GENITIVE OF QUALITY¹ is used to denote some character or quality of the noun modified, including value, measure, time, etc. ; as,

A man of great prudence: Vir cōsiliī māgnī.

Stones of great weight: Māgnī ponderis saxa.

A few days' march: Paucōrum diērum iter.

A six-foot wall: Mūrus sex pedum.

i. There must be some adjectival modifier of this genitive ; e.g., A man of bravery is not vir fortitudinis, but vir fortis.

ii. The modifiers most commonly used are numerals and such adjectives as māgnus, māximus, parvus, tantus, summus, pauci. The genitive of quality should not be used with pār, similis, dissimilis, aequus, or with pronouns except in such phrases as hūjusmodī, ējusmodī.

iii. The genitive of quality may be used as a predicate ; as, The depth of the river was three feet: Flūminis erat altitūdō trium pedum.

iv. For the relation to the ablative of quality see section 105, iii.

88. The GENITIVE OF PRICE denotes the value, but only in general, not definite, terms ; as, His influence was valued highly: Auctōritās ējus māgnī habēbātur.

i. With verbs of estimating are found tantī, quantī, māgnī, parvī, plūris, minōris, nihilī, and a few other words.

¹ Also called the Descriptive Genitive or Genitive of Characteristic.

(c) Verbs of accusing, convicting, condemning and acquitting take the genitive of the fault or crime charged ; as, You are accusing him of treason : Eum prōditionis insimulātis. He was found guilty of wrong-doing : Injūriæ condemnātus est.

(d) The impersonal verbs of emotion, miseret, pudet, piget, paenitet and taedet, take the accusative of the person who feels, and the genitive of that which causes the feeling ;¹ as, I am ashamed of my folly : Mē stultitiæ pudet.

(e) For the genitive with interest and rēfert see section 53, b.

(f) The genitive is sometimes found with verbs of plenty and want, with potior (see section 55, iii.), and in poetry (after the analogy of the Greek) with verbs denoting separation.

A.

1. He said that this circumstance had dispelled all doubt as to the arrival of the legions. 2. He was a man of consummate ability, and had very great experience in the art of war. 3. He believed that the soldiers of Ariovistus were wholly inexperienced in this mode of fighting. 4. In the middle of this course is the island of Mona (89, i.). 5. He reminds his men of their old disaster, and urges them not to forget the valor of the enemy. 6. He distributed three months' provisions among the soldiers. 7. It is a consul's duty (83, ii.) to be of service to the rest of the citizens. 8. The top of the hill was held by a few of our men (86, iii.). 9. Your influence is of great value (88), your friendship is of greater. 10. They acquitted him of treachery (91, c), but he was found guilty of carelessness. 11. They compelled the Ædui to give them part of their land and to undertake to form no project against the Sequani. 12. He says he is ashamed of his treachery (91, d), and sorry for having attempted to revolt.

B (Caesar, B. G. IV., 34-36.)

1. A large part of the country is unable to withstand the enemy's attack. 2. He had collected thirty-two ships of great speed. 3. So great was the barbarians' fear of the Romans that they turned and fled. 4. He orders the enemy's camp to be burned. 5. On account of the swiftness of Caesar's approach they could not escape. 6. Several of the ships (the rest of the ships) had reached the middle of the harbor. 7. It happened that all of us were inexperienced in sailing. 8. These transports were the weakest of all the vessels. 9. He pointed out how great was the peril of the legion. 10. He saw how great had been the peril of the previous day. 11. Mention has previously been made of the small number of harbors. 12. The cavalry were thought to be very eager (cupidus) for plunder.

USES OF THE ABLATIVE.

92. The Ablative case is an adverbial case, used to determine the circumstances attending upon some action. It is composite in its origin, representing three main ideas: the true ablative, meaning from; the instrumental and comitative, meaning with; and the locative, meaning in or at.

A. THE ABLATIVE PROPER.

93. The ABLATIVE OF SEPARATION denotes that from which something is removed or excluded; as,

They cut off Caesar from supplies: Commeātū Caesarem interclūdunt.

They are in need of assistance: Auxiliō egent.

i. The idea of separation is commonly expressed by the abl. with ā (ab), ex or dē, especially in the literal local sense. The simple ablative is used chiefly with verbs of relieving, depriving and lacking; with adjectives of freedom and want; and also with certain verbs of removing and excluding (such as excēdō, expellō, ēgredior, prohibeō, interclūdō, dējiciō and dēsistō), with which the preposition may either be used or be omitted.

ii. When the ablative denotes a person, the preposition should always be used.

iii. The fact that the verb expressing separation may be a compound of ab, ex or dē does not prevent the use of a preposition with the ablative. (See section 78, v. b.)

94. For the ABLATIVE OF THE PLACE FROM WHICH, with or without prepositions, see section 126.

95. The ABLATIVE OF SOURCE denotes that from which something is derived. It is found chiefly with participles denoting ancestry or rank ; as, i. A preposition is regularly used (a) in the case of finite verbs, (b) with pronouns, and (c) to denote remote origin.

Descended from a very old family : Antiquissimā familiā nātus.

ii. Here belongs the ablative denoting the material of which something is made ; with this ablative ex is commonly used in prose.

96. The ABLATIVE OF CAUSE¹ is used to denote the motive from which some act proceeds, more rarely the cause of something ; as,

In that hope he sought our friendship : Amicitiam eā spē petivit.

i. In place of this ablative we find more frequently prepositional phrases with ex, dē, ob, per, propter, prae, the genitive with causā or grātiā, or, especially to indicate the moving cause, an ablative of means with a participle such as adductus, permōtus.

97. The PERSONAL AGENT with passive verbs is denoted by the ablative with ā or ab ; as, i. For the dative of apparent agent see section 80, d.

Their lands are laid waste by the enemy : Agrī eōrum ab hostibus vāstantur.

ii. For the so-called secondary agent with per see section 99, i.

98. The ABLATIVE OF COMPARISON (translated by means of than) is used after comparatives to denote that with which something is compared ; as,

The Ubii are more civilized than the rest : Ubī cēteris hūmāniōrēs sunt.

¹ This use may also be classed under the Instrumental Ablative.

*Fair usage policy applies

It cannot be determined by the eyes : Oculis iudicari non potest.

They live on flesh and are clad in skins : Carne vivunt, pellibusque sunt vestiti.

i. A personal instrument is occasionally in the ablative, but is more often expressed by per and the accusative (sometimes called the secondary agent) ; as, He learns by means of scouts : Cognoscit per exploratores.

ii. The ablative of means is used (a) to denote the route or means of conveyance ; (b) with utor, fruor, etc. ; (c) with opus est and usus est ; (d) with verbs of filling and abounding and adjectives of plenty.

100. The ABLATIVE OF PRICE is used with verbs of buying, selling, exchanging and costing ; as,

It was purchased for a small price : Parvo pretio redemptum est.

They exchange war for agriculture : Bellum agriculturam commutant.

i. For the genitive of indefinite price see section 88.

101. The ABLATIVE OF MEASURE OF DIFFERENCE is used with comparatives and words implying comparison to denote the amount by which two persons or things differ ; as,

The other road is much easier : Alterum iter est multo facilius.

Ireland is considered a half smaller than Britain : Hibernia dimidio minor quam Britannia existimatur.

A few days after : Paucis post diebus.

Three years before : Tribus ante annis.

i. This ablative is used also in designations of distance, e.g., with disto and absum (where also the accusative may be used), and regularly in the case of the words spatium and intervallum ; as, He halts at a great distance : Magno intervallum consistit.

ii. To this usage belong (a) quo . . . eo (or quanto . . . tanto) with comparatives, as, The sooner the better : Quo citius eo melius ; (b) quo and quominus with the subjunctive (sections 28, iii. and 139) ; and (c) eo or hoc with a comparative.¹

¹ This last usage is, however, complicated with the ablative of cause, especially before quod clauses.

102. The ABLATIVE OF SPECIFICATION is used to denote in what respect a statement or term is to be taken as true ; as,

They excel the rest of the Gauls in valor : Reliquōs Gallōs virtūte praecēdunt.

103. The ABLATIVE OF MANNER AND ACCOMPANIMENT expresses manner or the attendant circumstances of an action ; as,

The news is carried with incredible speed : Incrēdibilī celeritāte fāma perfertur.

They began to mount the rampart with loud shouts : Māximō clāmōre vāllum ascendere coepērunt.

i. As a rule the ablative of manner and accompaniment requires the preposition cum when not modified by an adjective or a genitive, and even when so modified it often has cum ; as,

He is put to death with torture : Cum cruciātū necātur.

He did this with the greatest care : Summā (cum) dīligentiā hōc fēcit.

Some ablatives, however (e.g., vī, jūre, cāsū), never take cum, being used virtually as adverbs.

ii. Literal accompaniment is always expressed by cum and the ablative ; except that in certain military phrases (chiefly of the troops with which a march is made) cum may be omitted if the ablative has a modifier ; as, They hastened with all their forces : (Cum) omnibus cōpiīs contendērunt.

iii. The ablative of manner denotes that in accordance with which something is done ; as,

He did this in accordance with Caesar's instructions : Praeceptīs Caesaris hōc fēcit.¹

104. For the ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE, which is perhaps locative in origin, but which in use resembles the ablative of accompaniment in expressing the attendant circumstances of an action, see sections 46-50.

¹ This usage is also classed by some as specification, by others as arising in the idea of from.

105. The ABLATIVE OF QUALITY¹ is used to denote some character or quality of the noun modified ; as, i. As in the case of the genitive of quality (see section 87, i.), there must be some adjectival modifier of this ablative.

A young man of great valor : Māgnā virtūte adulēscēns.

ii. This ablative may be used not only attributively but also in the predicate ; as, They have long hair : Capillō sunt prōmissō (literally, They are [a people] with long hair).

iii. When the description refers to number the genitive of quality should be used. To denote physical characteristics or external appearance the ablative is used, while for other descriptions either case may be used, with a preference for the genitive to express permanent or inherent qualities.

C. THE LOCATIVE ABLATIVE.

106. For the ABLATIVE OF THE PLACE WHERE, see section 127, and for the ABLATIVE OF TIME WHEN OR WITHIN WHICH, see sections 130 and 131.

107. The ablative is used with many special verbs and adjectives, really belonging to the classes already mentioned but not always easy to classify.

i. For the ablative with ūtor, fruor, fungor, potior, vescor, and with verbs of lacking, see section 54.

ii. The ablative is used with glorior, laetor, gaudeō ; fīdō, cōnfīdō,² nītor, innītor ; assuēfaciō.

iii. The ablative is used with dīgnus, indīgnus ; contentus, laetus ; frētus.

108. The ablative is used with the following PREPOSITIONS :

Ā, ab (abs), from, by ; absque, without ; cōram, in the presence of ; cum, with ; dē, from, concerning ; ē, ex, out of, from ; prae, before, in comparison with, because of ; prō, before, for (= in behalf of), in place of, in accordance with ; sine, without ; tenus, as far as.

The ablative is also used with in, in and sub, under, expressing the place where, and sometimes with subter, beneath, and super, above, concerning. These four also take the accusative (section 70).

¹ Also called the Descriptive Ablative or Ablative of Characteristic.

² Fīdō and cōnfīdō regularly take the dative of persons (52).

quickly by Caesar than by the lieutenant Cotta. 10. Influenced by this hope, they surround the legion with great shouting. 11. After several had been slain, the rest betook themselves to a marsh of vast extent (ingēns māgnitūdō). 12. The soldiers on disembarking (use both expōnō and ēgredior) hastened to their winter quarters.

VERBAL NOUNS—INFINITIVE, GERUND, SUPINE.

A. THE INFINITIVE.

109. The Infinitive is a verbal noun. As a verb it is modified by an adverb, not by an adjective; it governs the same case as other parts of the verb; it has the distinction of tense, and it has a subject. As a noun it is used as a subject or object of verbs, or as an appositive, and is always neuter.¹

110. THE INFINITIVE AS SUBJECT.—The infinitive, with or without a subject accusative, may be used as the subject of a verb; as,

It is better to defend the camp: Castra dēfendere praestat.

It is not right for the Germans to cross over: Germānōs trānsire nōn aequum est.²

It was reported that the cavalry was approaching: Nūntiātum est equitēs accēdere.

He shows that carrying out their plans is an easy matter: Perfacile esse probat cōnāta perficere.

i. This usage is found chiefly with (a) certain (so-called) impersonal verbs, e.g., oportet, licet, juvat, placet; (b) est and neuter adjectives, such as aequum, turpe, ūtile, necesse; (c) passive verbs sentiendī et dēclārandī (section 14).

ii. Except with passive verbs sentiendī et dēclārandī, the tense of the infinitive used as subject is almost invariably the present, the perfect occurring but seldom, and the future never.

¹ In the case of the historical infinitive, however, the infinitive has the value of a verb only, not of a noun.

² Notice that neither the introductory for nor the representative subject it is expressed in Latin by any separate word.

111. THE INFINITIVE AS OBJECT.—The infinitive, with or without a subject accusative, is used as the object of a verb ; as,

He says Caesar has come : Dicit Caesarem vēnisse.

He wished to depart : Discēdere volēbat.

i. For the accusative and infinitive construction see section 14, for the complementary infinitive, sections 19-21. For the infinitive as an appositive see section 195.

112. THE HISTORICAL INFINITIVE.—In lively description the present infinitive, with its subject (when expressed) in the nomina-tive case, is often found instead of the imperfect indicative ; generally several such infinitives are found together ; as,

Every day Caesar dunned the Ædui ; day after day the Ædui kept putting him off : Cotidiē Caesar Aeduos flāgitāre ; diem ex diē dūcere Aeduī.

B. THE GERUND.

113. The Gerund is a verbal noun found only in the genitive, dative, accusative and ablative singular. Like the infinitive, it is modified by an adverb, and governs the same case as the other parts of the verb.

In use the gerund corresponds pretty closely to the English gerund in -ing, but often also, especially with ad, it may be translated by the English (gerundial) infinitive with to.¹

114. (a) The Genitive of the gerund is used chiefly with causā and as an objective genitive with nouns and adjectives ; as,

For the purpose of foraging : Frūmentandī causā.

Desirous of making war : Bellandī cupidus.

(b) The Dative of the gerund is rarely found, and is used chiefly with adjectives denoting fitness (for which ad and the accusative is more common), and in some official phrases ; as A wall sufficiently high for defence : Satis altus tuendō mūrus.

¹ Unlike the English usage, the gerund in Latin is not found as the subject or the object of a verb, the infinitive being used instead ; as, Doing this is easy : Facile est haec facere. They began fleeing in all directions : Passim fugere coepērunt.

(c) The Accusative of the gerund is used only with prepositions, chiefly ad; as,

Ready to fight (or Ready for fighting): Parātus ad dīmīcandum.

(d) The Ablative of the gerund is used to denote means and with prepositions, chiefly in, ab, dē and ex; as, Occupied in reaping: In metendō occupātī.

i. The use of the gerund with an accusative object is, on the whole, rare. See section 119.

ii. Ob and in are the only prepositions, other than ad, found with the accusative gerund in the best Latin.

C. THE SUPINE.

115. The Supine is a verbal noun found only in the accusative and ablative singular, in both cases with adverbial force. It is translated by the English infinitive with to.¹

116. The ACCUSATIVE SUPINE or supine in -um, is used to denote purpose, especially after verbs of motion, and if transitive may take an accusative object; as, i. The construction is not common in classical Latin, which prefers to express purpose by the final subjunctive, or by the gerund and gerundive with ad or causā. It is used most frequently with eō and veniō, and also in the phrase nūptum dare (or collocāre).

They send envoys to Caesar to ask aid: Lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittunt rogātum auxilium.

ii. The rare future infinitive passive is formed by means of īrī (present infinitive passive of eō used impersonally) and this supine; as, He says the city will be taken: Dīcit urbem captum īrī (literally, there is a going to take the city). Here urbem is really the object of captum, not the subject of captum īrī.

117. The ABLATIVE SUPINE, or supine in -ū, is used to define the application of certain adjectives and of the nouns fās and nefās; as,

This is difficult to do: Hōc est difficile factū.

Incredible to narrate: Incredibile dictū.

It is a sin to say so: Hōc nefas est dictū.

¹ The supine in -um corresponds to the English (gerundial) infinitive with to after verbs; the supine in -ū to this infinitive with adjectives and nouns.

9. All these things were of service for loading. 10. They are accustomed to display (ūtor) quickness in assembling. 11. It has been pointed out that they are accustomed to use lower vessels.

VERBAL ADJECTIVES—GERUNDIVE, PARTICIPLES.

A. THE GERUNDIVE.

118. The Gerundive (sometimes called the future participle passive) is a verbal adjective of the first and second declensions, and agrees with its substantive.

119. THE GERUNDIVE CONSTRUCTION.—Instead of the gerund governing a direct object in the accusative, we often find the substantive put in the case required by the context and the gerundive in agreement with it. This is the regular usage after prepositions and in the dative case, and is preferable in the genitive and in the ablative of means ; as,

He sets out to harass the enemy : Ad hostēs vexandōs proficiscitur (not ad vexandum hostēs).

They lose time in seeking their comrades : In quaerendis suis tempus dimittunt (not in quaerendō suōs).

An opportunity is afforded of marching through the province : Facultās datur per prōvinciam itineris faciendī (rather than iter faciendī).

He sets out for the purpose of bringing aid : Auxiliū ferendī causā proficiscitur (rather than auxilium ferendī).

i. The various cases are used in the same way in the gerundive construction as in the gerund. (See section 114.)

ii. The gerundive construction cannot be used with intransitive verbs ; as,

For the purpose of resisting the enemy : Hostibus resistendī causā (never Hostium resistendōrum causā).

But ūtor, fruor, fungor and potior, which governed the accusative in old Latin, regularly take the gerundive construction ; as,

The hope of taking the camp : Spēs potiundōrum castrōrum, iii. In the case of neuter pronouns and neuter adjectives used substantively the gerund with an object accusative is regular, even after prepositions ; as, For the purpose of doing something : Aliquid agendī causā.

iv. With meī, tuī, suī, nostrī, vestrī, the gerundive in -ndī is used, without regard to either gender or number ; as, For the purpose of clearing themselves (or himself or herself) : Suī pūrgandī causā (not suī pūrgandōrum or suī pūrgandae).¹

120. THE PASSIVE PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION. — The gerundive is used in the nominative and accusative as a predicate adjective with sum, to denote duty or necessity ; as, Everything had to be done by Caesar : Caesari omnia erant agenda.

He decided that the Rhine must be crossed : Statuit Rhēnum esse transeundum.

The leading men should (ought to) have been assembled : Principēs convocandī erant.

i. The expression is always passive, the agent being in the dative (see section 80, d). The English equivalent is, however, constantly in the active ; as,

Caesar had to do everything. He decided that he must cross the Rhine.

ii. In this construction intransitive verbs are used impersonally (see section 56), the gerundive taking the same case as the verb from which it is formed ; as, There must be no delay : Nōn est cunctandum. They had to fight : Erat pūgnandum. These things ought to be used : Hīs rēbus ūtendum est.

121. The accusative of the gerundive is used in predicative agreement with the object of certain verbs (chiefly verbs of giving, assigning, undertaking and caring for) to express purpose ; as, He hands them over to the Ædui to guard : Hōs Aeduīs custōdiendōs trādit. He provided for the transportation of the army : Exercitum trānsportandum cūrāvit.

¹ The usual explanation given is that pūrgandī is the gerundive agreeing with suī, which, like meī, nostrī, etc., was in its origin the genitive of the neuter singular possessive, suum=their (or his or her) personality.

B. THE PARTICIPLES.

122. For the grammatical value of the participle and the use of the present and perfect participles see sections 40-44.

The future participle denotes an action as about to happen at a time subsequent to that of its principal verb. Its chief uses are (a) to form (with esse) the future infinitive active in the accusative and infinitive construction, and (b) in the active periphrastic conjugation. It is but rarely used as an adjective or substantive (futūrus being the chief instance); in poetry and late prose writers it is used appositively to express intention or probability.

123. THE ACTIVE PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION. — The future participle is used as a predicate adjective with sum to express intention, likelihood, or imminence; as,

You are about to fight: Pūgnātūrī estis.

He said that he had been on the point of setting out: Dīxit sē profectūrum fuisse.

They are going to send hostages: Obsidēs missūrī sunt.

124. Various ways of expressing purpose are found in Latin. Thus the sentence Envoys were sent to seek peace may be translated:

(a) Lēgātī missī sunt ut pācem peterent (section 24).

(b) Lēgātī missī sunt quī pācem peterent (section 26).

(c) Lēgātī missī sunt ad pācem petendam (section 119).

Ad and the gerund of intransitive verbs is also used (section 114, c).

(d) Lēgātī missī sunt pācis petendae causā (section 119).

(e) Lēgātī missī sunt pācem petendī causā (section 114, a).

(f) Lēgātī missī sunt pācem petitum (section 116).

(g) Lēgātī missī sunt pācem petītūrī (section 122).

Of these the gerund and gerundive constructions are found in short expressions only, while the future participle should be avoided altogether in prose composition.

EXERCISE 16.

A.

1. Caesar is about to lead out his forces with the object of crushing the enemy. 2. He answered that the soldiers must not, in searching for their comrades, waste the time for fighting. 3. He caused two bridges to be built (121) for the purpose of follow-

He sets out for Rome: Rōmam proficiscitur.

They returned home: Domum rediērunt.

i. With names of towns ad is used (a) to denote into (or in) the neighborhood of, and (b) sometimes in contrast with ab in expressions of direction; as, He came into the neighborhood of Geneva: Ad Genāvam pervēnit. He pitched his camp near Alesia: Ad Alesiam castra fēcit.

ii. For the use of the dative in poetry to express the limit of motion see section 78, vii.

· 126. PLACE FROM WHICH is denoted by the ablative with ab, ex, or dē, except that with names of towns and small islands, and with domō (from home) and rūre (from the country), the preposition is omitted; as,

They withdrew from the shore: Ā litore discessērunt.

They crossed over from Belgium: Ex Belgiō trānsiērunt.

He fled from Corinth: Corinthō fūgit.

They had gone away from home: Domō discesserant.

i. With names of towns ab is used (a) to denote from the neighborhood of, (b) sometimes in contrast with ad in expressions of direction, and (c) with longē and verbs of distance; as, It is three hundred miles from Zama: Ā Zamā abest mīlia passuum trecenta.

127. PLACE WHERE is denoted by the ablative with in, except that with names of towns and small islands, and with a few common nouns the preposition is omitted; as,

He stood on the wall: In mūrō cōstitit.

They spend the winter in Gaul: In Galliā hiemant.

He died at Athens: Athēnis mortuus est.

i. In names of towns and islands of the first and second declensions in the singular, the locative (identical in form with the genitive) is used, not the ablative; as,

At Rome: Rōmae. At Corinth: Corinthī.

So occasionally in the third declension singular (as Carthāginī), and regularly in the words domī, rūrī, humī, bellī, militiae.

ii. The words locus and pars, and other nouns when modified by tōtus (and sometimes by medius, omnis or cūctus), may be used in the ablative without a preposition ; as, On suitable ground: Idōneō locō. Throughout the whole camp: Tōtis castris. In poetry the preposition is freely omitted with any noun.¹

iii. Often where English uses in, motion towards is implied, and Latin consequently uses the accusative ; as, They concealed themselves in the woods (that is, went into the woods and hid): In silvās sē abdidērunt.

Collocō and pōnō, however, take the ablative with in.

iv. For such expressions as He came to the senate at Rome (where at Rome is an adjectival phrase modifying senate), Latin has Rōmam ad senātum vēnit (where both expressions modify the verb). Similarly, He came from the senate at Rome is Rōmā ā senātū vēnit.²

v. With pars, latus, agmen, cornū, tergum, frōns, the direction in which or the side on which is expressed by the ablative with ab (and in the case of pars, also with ex) ; as, In front: Ā fronte. On one side: Ūnā ex parte.

vi. The locative animī (in heart) is used with verbs and adjectives of feeling to denote respect.

128. EXTENT OF SPACE is expressed by the accusative with verbs and with the adjectives longus, altus and lātus ; as,

He advances three miles: Tria mīlia passuum prōcēdit.

A trench five feet deep: Fossa quīnque pedēs alta.

i. With absum and distō either this accusative or the ablative of measure of difference may be used. (Section 101, i.)

129. DURATION OF TIME is expressed by the accusative ; as,

² On a somewhat similar principle, where English has a common noun (like town or city), modified by an adjective or its equivalent, in apposition with the name of a place, with the corresponding noun Latin generally uses a preposition to express motion towards, motion from or place where, instead of having urbs or oppidum in apposition with the proper name ; as, They halted at Alba, a convenient city: Albae cōstitērunt in urbe opportūnā. I came to Athens, a most famous city: Athēnās in urbem praeclārissimam vēnī. He set out from Cures, a town of the Sabines: Curibus ex oppidō Sabīnōrum profectus est.

He waits there a few days: Paucōs diēs ibi morātur.

He was twenty years old: Vigintī annōs nātus erat.¹

i. Per is sometimes added to the accusative to emphasize the idea of duration.

ii. How long ago is expressed by abhinc and the accusative; how long before and how long after, by ante and post with (a) the accusative, or (b) the ablative of measure of difference; as, A few days after: Post paucōs diēs or Paucīs post diēbus.

130. TIME WHEN is expressed by the ablative; as,

He returns on the fifth day: Quintō diē revertitur.

At sunset he led back his forces: Sōlis occāsū cōpiās redūxit.

In all the Gallic wars: Omnibus Gallicis bellis.

131. TIME WITHIN WHICH is expressed by the ablative; as,

He has been put to death within the last few days: Hīs paucīs diēbus interfectus est.

i. Occasionally, by inference, the ablative of the time within which, especially with tōtus, may be equivalent to the accusative of the time how long; as, They marched all that night: Eā tōtā nocte iērunt.

EXERCISE 17.

A.

1. After waiting in Italy three months he returned from Rome to Athens. 2. The enemy took up their position on wooded ground eight miles from Caesar's camp. 3. Four years ago (129, ii.) a battle was fought in the neighborhood (125, i. a) of Massilia. 4. This river, he replied (18, vi.), was sixty feet wide and about five feet deep. 5. Setting out from the army in Gaul (127, iv.), he came a few days later to the river Thames in the enemy's country (127, iv.). 6. They were ordered to leave home within three days and hide in (127, iii.) the nearest woods. 7. He set out for the country at the beginning of spring and returned home the next year. 8. The battle was begun on the right wing (127, v.). 9. He came from Geneva in the consulship of Crassus and Pompey (49), and lived for several years at Rome and Athens. 10. On the

133. PROHIBITIONS are usually expressed by nōlī, nōlīte (be unwilling) with the present infinitive ; as,

Do not suppose : Nōlīte exīstimāre.

i. Prohibitions are also expressed (a) by cavē, (or, less commonly, cavē nē, vidē nē, or fac nē), and the present subjunctive ; (b) by nē and the present or perfect subjunctive, but chiefly in familiar discourse ; (c) in poetry by nē and the present imperative.

134. The subjunctive is used independently to represent action as willed.¹ The following varieties exist :

(a) HORTATORY.—The first person of the present subjunctive is used to command, or, with nē, to forbid ; as, Let us consider Gaul : Galliam respiciāmus. Let us not despair : Nē dēspērēmus.

(b) JUSSIVE.—The third person of the present subjunctive is used to command, or, with nē, to forbid ; as, Let the consuls see to it : Videant cōsulēs.

i. So too the second person of the present or perfect subjunctive is used to express prohibition or command (sections 133, i. b and 132, i. c).

(c) CONCESSIVE.—The present and perfect subjunctive are used to concede for the sake of argument, the negative being nē ; as, Granting that pain is not the greatest evil, still it certainly is an evil : Nē sit summum malum dolor, malum certē est.

(d) DELIBERATIVE.—The Subjunctive is used to ask for direction (though without expecting an answer), and thus comes to express perplexity (commonly in the first person of the present or imperfect subjunctive) or again surprise and indignation ; as, What am I to do? Quid faciam? Are we to yield to him? Huic cēdāmus?²

135. The subjunctive is used independently to represent action as desired.

This is called the OPTATIVE subjunctive, or the subjunctive of DESIRE. The negative is nē. The present tense is used to express wishes viewed as practicable ; the imperfect and pluperfect to express wishes viewed as impossible of fulfilment in present and past time respectively. Such clauses are frequently introduced by utinam, regularly so in the case of the imperfect and pluperfect tenses ; as, May they be happy : Sint beātī. Would that he were present : Utinam adesset. Would that I had never been born : Utinam nē nātus essem.

² See further section 136, d. These various types of question are known as Rhetorical Questions or Questions of Appeal.

136. The subjunctive is used independently to represent action as conceivable.

This is the so-called POTENTIAL subjunctive, used of present and past time. It is generally to be translated by could, would or should, and takes the negative nōn. The following types exist :

(a) Modest expressions of wish or regret with velim or vellem and their compounds, followed often by another subjunctive (of desire) as object ; as, I should like to know : Velim scīre. I would rather he were present : Māllem adesset.

(b) With the indefinite second person singular ; as, You (= one) would have thought : Putārēs.¹

(c) In softened assertions or questions ; as, It would scarcely seem probable : Vix vērīsimile videātur. This usage is found chiefly in the protasis of conditional sentences (see sections 61 and 63).

(d) In questions virtually equivalent to a negative statement ; as, Who could doubt ? Quis dubitet ? Who would ever have thought ? Quis umquam arbitrārētur ?

i. Latin, however, often has the indicative where we might expect the potential subjunctive. So regularly with possum, dēbēō, etc., with the passive periphrastic conjugation, and with est and predicate adjectives such as aequum, melius, satis, facile, etc. ; as, I might have said more ; Plūra poteram dīcere. It would be tedious to tell everything : Longum est omnia nārrāre. (See section 64, i.)

137. Notice the values of would in the following sentences, and the different ways of translating it into Latin :

(a) I thought he would come : Arbitrābar eum ventūrum esse (15, c).

(b) I asked what they would do : Rogāvī quid factūrī essent (36).

(c) He would not do this : Nōluit haec facere or Negāvit sē haec factūrum.

¹The indefinite second person singular of the present subjunctive is also found in independent sentences to state a general fact ; as, One (often) looks for what is before one's eyes, Quod oculīs videās, dēsīderēs.

- (d) If he were alive he would be present : Sī vīveret, adesset (61).
 (e) If you should do this, he would come : Sī haec faciās, veniat (63).
 (f) Would that he would come! Utinam veniat! (135).
 (g) Would that he had come! Utinam vēnisset! (135).
 (h) It would be better to do this : Melius est haec facere (136, a, 1).
 (i) Who would venture to do this? Quis haec facere audeat? (136, b).
 (j) I was afraid he would come : Verēbar nē venīret (138).
 (k) Whenever they came, he would do this : Ubi vēnerant, haec faciēbat (180, b).

A.

1. Let the Gauls send envoys to Cæsar to seek peace. 2. Would that Caesar were not sending two legions to the assistance of Labienus. 3. Who can endure that his freedom should be taken away? 4. Remember the former valor of the Helvetians, soldiers. 5. Let us not fear the enemy, however numerous (66, ii.), nor return to the camp unless victorious (44, iii.). 6. Do not let slip this opportunity of waging war. 7. What was I to say? It would have been (136, a, i.) easy to make many promises; but who would have believed me? 8. I should like you to inform me at once of his departure. 9. Would that Caesar had allowed us to march through the province. 10. Advance towards the shore and do not betray the eagle to the enemy. 11. He would (137, c) not announce to the soldiers when he would set out. 12. One would have supposed that the envoys would not return the next day.

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 4-5.)

1. Remain loyal; do not be deterred from this plan. 2. Come to me with all your sons. 3. Let us return (134, a) to the point from which we set out. 4. Tell us, Caesar, why you are spending the summer there. 5. Caesar was aware that the rest would be annoyed. 6. If Caesar himself had been absent, the leading men would not have remained loyal. 7. Would that (135) Caesar were not absent. 8. Do not be of an unfriendly disposition towards quōminus or nē, according to the following rules ; the present subjunctive being used after the primary tenses, the imperfect subjunctive after the secondary tenses.¹

N. B.—Quīn is used only after negatives or virtual negatives.

(a) Verbs of hindering, e.g., dēterreō, impediō, retineō, and also recūsō, object (if negatived), take quōminus or quīn ; or (if not negatived) quōminus or nē ; as,

They did not object to coming : Nōn recūsābant quīn (or quōminus) venīrent.

They hinder the Aedui from bringing in corn : Aeduōs dēterrent quōminus (or nē) frūmentum cōferant.

i. Prohibeō regularly takes the accusative and infinitive (section 22, i.), while nōn recūsō also may take the infinitive.

(b) Negative verbs and phrases of doubting, e.g., nōn dubitō, nōn est dubium, take quīn ; as,

There was no doubt that they had (or of their having) very great power : Nōn erat dubium quīn plūrimum possent.

i. Dubitō, hesitate, regularly takes the infinitive.

(c) Negative verbs and phrases of failure or omission, such as nihil praetermittō (leave nothing undone), haud multum abest (be within a little), facere nōn possum (cannot but or cannot help), take quīn ; as,

And a suspicion is not wanting that he committed suicide : Neque abest suspiciō quīn ipse sibi mortem cōsciverit.

They let no time go by without stirring up the states : Nūllum tempus intermiserunt quīn civitatēs sollicitārent.

i. For quīn after such expressions as nēmō est, see section 33, ii.

EXERCISE 19.

A.

1. I fear the soldiers will not be able to take the city by storm.
2. Who could doubt (130, d) that (139, b) the Romans are going to take our freedom away?
3. They promised to raise no objections to being (139, a) under the sway of the enemy.
4. There was great danger of the enemy's crossing the river and making an attack upon the camp.
5. Caesar was afraid that they were about to renew the war.
6. They believed that Caesar by his influence could hinder (prohibeō) the Germans from being brought across the Rhine. 7. He feared that the soldiers would not be able to cross the bridge and attack the enemy in the rear. 8. There was no doubt that (139, b) the Aedui were hesitating to declare war. 9. Several vessels were prevented by the storms from (139, a) being able to reach the same port. 10. There is no one who (33, ii.) does not know that we feared to disembark (138, ii.). 11. We fear that the soldiers will be unwilling to defend the camp. 12. Not even at the conference could the Gauls be deterred from (139, a) hurling weapons at our men. 13. The soldiers did not object to repairing the old vessels. 14. There was no one but knew that Labienus was in charge of that legion.

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 6.)

1. They fear that they will be taken across to Britain. 2. They were afraid lest they should not gain their request. 3. I am hindered by religious scruples from (139, a) giving (dō) the oath that Caesar demands. 4. There is no doubt that (139, b) the Aedui are unaccustomed to sailing. 5. Several report to Caesar that the Aedui feel this keenly. 6. They are so (ita) unused to the sea that they do not venture to sail. 7. He begged that all hope should not be taken away. 8. The others objected to (139, a) the royal power being conferred on Dumnorix. 9. There is added the fact that the Gauls are eager for change. 10. He saw that Gaul was being robbed of her chief men. 11. It happens that Caesar fears to prevent (prohibeō, 139, a, i.) our remaining (113, fn.). 12. They were afraid that Caesar would confer the royal power on Dumnorix. 13. In order that they might not be killed, they urged that they be left on the mainland.

DUTY, NECESSITY, POSSIBILITY, PERMISSION.

140. DUTY or OBLIGATION is expressed most frequently by the gerundive with esse, also by dēbeō and oportet.

(a) For the gerundive with esse (the passive periphrastic conjugation) see section 120.

(b) Dēbeō takes the present infinitive as object, and the impersonal verb oportet takes the accusative and the present infinitive as subject¹; as,

Caesar ought to come to me: Caesar ad mē venīre dēbet, or Caesarem ad mē venīre oportet.

i. The infinitive remains in the present tense with all forms of these verbs, while the verbs themselves change according to the time of the action; as Caesar ought to have come: Caesar venīre dēbēbat, or Caesarem venīre oportuit. Caesar ought to come tomorrow: Caesar venīre crās dēbēbit, or Caesarem venīre crās oportēbit.

141. NECESSITY is expressed most frequently by the gerundive with esse, also by necesse est.

(a) For the gerundive with esse (the passive periphrastic conjugation) see section 120.

(b) Necesse est is used with the dative and the present infinitive to express what is inevitable rather than what is obligatory or binding;¹ as,

All men must die: Omnibus necesse est morī.

142. POSSIBILITY OR ABILITY is expressed by possum and the present infinitive; as,

The river can be crossed: Flūmen trānsirī potest.

They were unable to defend themselves: Sē dēfendere nōn poterant.

It is impossible for us to cross: Trānsire nōn possumus.

We could (or might) have been useful friends: Poterāmus esse ūtilēs amīcī. (For the tenses see section 140, b, i.)

143. PERMISSION is expressed by licet with the dative and the present infinitive;¹ as,

You may remain: Licet vōbīs remanēre.

They were not allowed to depart: Discēdere illīs nōn licēbat.

i. A predicate noun or adjective referring to the dative agrees with it in case; as, We may be free: Nōbīs licet esse liberīs.

¹ The impersonal verbs licet, necesse est and oportet may also take the subjunctive as subject; as, You ought to do this: Haec faciās oportet. With necesse est the subjunctive often has ut.

recalled. 3. If we should not get suitable weather, we should not embark. 4. He should have been brought back and put to death. 5. You are injuring the state by whatever means you can. 6. He feared (vereor) lest the wind should hinder his sailing. 7. Everything had to be disregarded. 8. He took care that this folly should not go farther. 9. I had announced that I should depart for home. 10. The cavalry must defend themselves. 11. May we offer violence? 12. You could have pursued him. 13. They decided that their departure should be postponed. 14. It is impossible to retain Dumnorix in Caesar's absence. 15. The cavalry are not allowed to return. 16. All ought to have returned.

CAUSAL SENTENCES. USES OF Cum.

145. Causal sentences are introduced by quod, or (less frequently) quia, because, for the reason that; quoniam, seeing that; cum, ut, since, as; and quī, since he.

i. For quī with the causal subjunctive see section 171.

ii. For quod, meaning the fact that, see section 198.

iii. Cum clauses (as giving attendant circumstances) regularly precede the principal clause; quod clauses (as emphasizing the reason) generally follow.

146. Quod, quia and quoniam take the indicative to express a reason advanced by the writer or speaker himself; as, i. Frequently a sort of antecedent (such as propterea, eō, hōc, eā dē causā) is found preparing the way for the quod clause.

He set out for Illyricum, because he wished to become acquainted with that district: In Īllyricum profectus est, quod eās regiōnēs cōgnōscere volēbat.

147. Quod, quia and quoniam take the subjunctive to quote some other person's reason;¹ as,

They begged him to lend them aid, because (as they said) they were hard pressed by the Suebi: Ōrābant ut sibi auxilium ferret, quod graviter ab Suēbīs premerentur.

¹ Or even to quote one's own previously expressed reason.

Aristides was banished from his country on the ground that he was unreasonably just : Aristīdēs expulsus est patriā quod praeter modum jūstus esset.

i. It should not be supposed that the subjunctive casts doubt upon the reason given, or refuses to vouch for its accuracy. It simply quotes without expressing any opinion, and is, in fact, identical with the subjunctive of virtual indirect discourse (section 177). Quod with the indicative tells why something was said or done ; quod with the subjunctive tells on what grounds something was said or done.

ii. Quod is very commonly used after verbs of accusation, praise, complaint, thanks, joy, anger, and the like ; the indicative or subjunctive being used according to the distinction just drawn ; as, I thank you for setting me free : Tibi gratiās agō, quod mē liberāvisti. Socrates was accused of corrupting the youth : Sōcratēs accūsātus est quod corrumperet juventūtem.

iii. Nōn quod or nōn quō is used with the subjunctive of a reason mentioned only to be rejected, = not because (as one might suppose). So also quam quod or quam quō after an actual or virtual comparative.

iv. For the illogical quod dīceret see section 177, ii.

148. Cum, with causal force, meaning since or as, takes the subjunctive ;¹ as,

Since they could not defend themselves, they sent envoys to Cæsar : Cum sē dēfendere nōn possent, lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittunt.

149. Cum, meaning whenever or when, in clauses denoting indefinitely recurring action, takes the indicative.

When, as is usually the case, the cum clause denotes an action preceding that of the main verb, the perfect and pluperfect tenses are used ; but when it denotes what is simultaneous, the present and imperfect (section 178, ii.). The main verb is regularly present or imperfect indicative.

Whenever our men attacked, the enemy fell back : Cum nostrī impetum fēcerant, hostēs pedem referēbant.

Whenever our men attack, the enemy fall back : Cum nostrī impetum fēcērunt, hostēs pedem referunt.

Whenever there is need, the enemy fall back : Cum ūsus est, hostēs pedem referunt.

i. With the same force and with the same construction are used also quotiēns, quotiēnscumque, ut, ubi, sī quandō.

150. Cum, meaning when, referring to present or future time, takes the indicative ; as, i. The future and future perfect are used with cum as with sī (section 62).

When I find out, I shall inform you : Cum cōgnōverō, faciam tē certiōrem.

151. Cum, meaning when (or while), referring to past time, regularly takes the subjunctive ; the imperfect of contemporaneous action, the pluperfect of antecedent action (section 178, ii.) ; as,

When they were approaching Britain, a storm arose : Cum Britanniae appropinquārent, tempestās coorta est.

When he perceived this, he sent reinforcements : Quod cum animadvertisset, subsidia submittit.

In most cases cum with the subjunctive describes the circumstances or situation, very often, as in the last example, combining the causal with the temporal idea.¹

The following exceptions to this use of cum with the subjunctive regularly occur :

i. When, meaning whenever, is regularly expressed by cum and the indicative (section 149).

ii. Cum expressing identity of action or coincidence of time regularly takes the indicative, chiefly when the principal clause contains tum, or some equivalent expression ; as, When they remain quiet (or in remaining quiet), they approve : Cum quiēscunt, pro-

¹ Similarly combining the adversative with the temporal idea, cum (meaning while or whereas) is used with the subjunctive to contrast two situations ; as, The enemy numbered five thousand, while our men had no more than eight hundred cavalry : Hostium erat quinque millium numerus, cum nostrī nōn amplius octingentōs habērent.

they begged Caesar to return. 3. Caesar will keep the leading men with him because he is afraid to leave them in Gaul. 4. When (cum) this was reported, he perceived that all hope had vanished. 5. Since Dumnorix cannot be kept loyal, Caesar has determined to take him over to Britain. 6. Whenever Caesar is absent, they disregard his authority. 7. He keeps calling out that he must not be killed, because he is a free man. 8. When Caesar finds this out, he will be greatly annoyed. 9. He accused (accūsō) Dumnorix of being (147, ii.) eager for supreme power. 10. When they were coming in sight of the camp, he began to resist. 11. As orders had been given not to bring him back, they did not venture to pursue him. 12. When they surround him, they will put him to death.

TEMPORAL CLAUSES.

152. WHEN, AFTER, AS SOON AS,¹ introducing clauses of time, are translated by

(a) Cum or cum primum (sections 149-151).

(b) Postquam, posteaquam, ut, ubi, simul ac (or simul atque) with the indicative, in narrative chiefly the perfect indicative ; as,

After Caesar reached that place, he determined to cross the Rhine :
Eō postquam Caesar pervēnit, Rhēnum trānsire cōstituit.

When he heard that, he removed to Corinth : Id ut audīvit, Corinthum dēmigrāvit.

When they were informed of his approach, they sent envoys to him :
Ubi dē ējus adventū certiōrēs factī sunt, lēgātōs ad eum mittunt.

As soon as they perceived this, they began to take up arms : Quae simul atque cōspexērunt, arma capere coepērunt.

i. To indicate indefinitely recurring action the perfect and pluperfect tenses would be used as with cum (section 149).

¹ Clauses introduced by when, while, after, are also expressed in Latin by participial phrases, especially in the ablative absolute (see sections 43, 47, and 48).

ii. With postquam the pluperfect indicative is used when a definite interval is specified ; as, He was killed in the ninth year after he came to Spain : Nōnō annō postquam in Hispāniam vēnerat, occisus est.

iii. Postquam and posteaquam are often written as two words, in which case post is sometimes treated as a preposition ; sometimes quam is used for postquam.

153. WHILE, meaning within the time that, is expressed by dum with the present indicative, even when the reference is to past time ; as, i. This idea may also be expressed by cum and the imperfect subjunctive (section 151), especially if there be any idea of contrast (section 151, fn.).

While this was being done, the Treveri had gathered large forces : Dum haec geruntur, Trēverī māgnās cōpiās coēgerant.

154. WHILE, meaning as long as, is expressed by dum, quoad or *quamdiū*¹ with the indicative.

The tenses are used as in English, except that for future time Latin uses the future where English loosely uses the present ; as,

While their strength lasted they held their ground : Dum virēs suppetēbant sustinuērunt.

He resisted as long as he could : Quoad potuit, restitit.

You shall study as long as you wish : Discēs, quamdiū volēs.

i. For dum, meaning so long as, provided that, where the temporal force no longer appears, see section 67.

155. UNTIL, introducing clauses of time, is expressed by dum or quoad.²

(a) To denote mere limit of time the indicative is used, chiefly with quoad ; as,

He was in the senate that day until the senate adjourned : In senātū fuit eō diē quoad senātus est dimissus.

¹ Dōnec also is used in poetry and late prose, often with the subjunctive.

² Dōnec also is used, but not often in the best prose.

Until I learn that the winter camp has been fortified, I shall stay in Gaul: Quoad mūnita esse hiberna cōgnōverō, in Galliā morābor.

(b) To denote expectation, purpose or end in view, the present or imperfect subjunctive is used, generally with dum; as, i. For not until, meaning not before, see section 156, iii.

He waited until the other ships should assemble (or, more freely, he waited for the other ships to assemble): Dum reliquae nāvēs convenirent, exspectāvit.

ii. As a rule, actions referring to the future may be regarded as denoting either mere limit of time (with the indicative) or expectation (with the subjunctive).

156. BEFORE is expressed by antequam or priusquam.

(a) To denote mere priority or limit of time the indicative is used; as,

I was born the year before he died: Annō antequam est mortuus, nātus sum.

And they did not cease their flight before they reached the river Rhine: Neque prius fugere dēstitērunt quam ad flūmen Rhēnum pervēnērunt.

(b) To denote purpose or anticipation or prevention the present or imperfect subjunctive is used; as, i. Antequam and priusquam are often written as two words, especially after a negative.

Before they could recover from their panic, he led his army across: Priusquam sē ex terrōre reciperent, exercitum trānsdūxit.

ii. Priusquam is commoner than antequam, especially with the subjunctive.

iii. To express not before, meaning not until, both indicative and subjunctive are found, but after secondary tenses the perfect indicative is preferred.

iv. When the pluperfect subjunctive is found after priusquam or antequam, it is regularly either in indirect narration (actual or virtual) for the perfect or future perfect indicative of the direct, or it is due to attraction (see section 177, i.).

PERSONAL, DEMONSTRATIVE, REFLEXIVE AND POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.¹

157. As the pronominal subject is really contained in the personal ending of the finite verb, the nominative of the personal pronouns is not, as a rule, expressed except for emphasis or contrast ; as,

I drove out kings, you bring in tyrants : Ego rēgēs ējēcī, vōs tyrannōs intrōdūcītis.

i. The third personal pronoun is supplied by is, hīc or quī, or if emphatic by ille.

ii. Nōs is often used for ego (compare our 'editorial we'), but vōs should never be used for tū. So, too, noster is used for meus.

iii. In the partitive sense the genitives nostrum and vestrum are used ; in the objective sense, the genitives meī, tuī, suī, nostrī and vestrī ; in the possessive and subjective senses, the adjectives meus, tuus, suus, noster and vester.

158. Hīc, this (the demonstrative of the first person), denotes something near (in place, time or thought). Hence it is used of something just mentioned or something just about to be mentioned ; as,

This present war : Hōc bellum.

All these (the tribes just mentioned) differ from one another in language : Hī omnēs linguā inter sē differunt.

The character of the ground was as follows : Locī nātūra erat haec.

159. Is, that, this, the, refers without emphasis to something named in the preceding context, and also serves as the antecedent of the relative. It is thus also used as the unemphasized third personal pronoun ; as,

¹ N.B.—It will be understood that the words treated of in sections 157 to 174 are pronouns when they are substitutes for nouns, and pronominal adjectives when they modify nouns.

They order Lutetia to be burnt and the bridges of that town to be destroyed : Lutētiam incendi pontēsque ējus oppidī rescindī jubent.

The legion which he had with him : Ea legiō, quam sēcum habēbat.

The number of those who returned home : Eōrum, quī domum rediērunt, numerus.

They send envoys to him : Lēgātōs ad eum mittunt.

i. Is sometimes has the force of such (= tālis).

ii. Et is and neque is are used to emphasize, with the force of and that too ; as, One cohort, and that too a small one : Ūna cohors et ea parva.

iii. Where English uses that of or those of to avoid repeating a noun, Latin does not use a pronoun, but the noun is either repeated or understood (see section 83, iii.).

160. Ille, that (the demonstrative of the third person), denotes something remote in place, time or thought. It is frequently used as the emphatic third personal pronoun, in contrast with hic, and also to call special attention to some person or thing ; as,

Trained not in the customs of former days, but after our modern fashion : Nōn antiquō illō mōre, sed hōc nostrō ērudītus.

These are under arms ; those remain at home : Hī in armīs sunt, illī domī remanent.

The famous Alexander the Great : Māgnus ille Alexander.

Part of the cavalry he assigned to him, part he left for himself : Equitātūs partem illī attribuit, partem sibi reliquit.

i. A very common use of ille is to indicate a change of subject, where the new subject has been referred to in the preceding clause. In such cases it may be rendered by an emphatic he or they, or by the other, the enemy, the latter, or some similar phrase.

ii. Ille, often, especially in the neuter illud, is used to point forward with emphasis to a following clause.

iii. Hic is often opposed as the latter to ille, the former.

161. Iste, that (the demonstrative of the second person), denotes something near or belonging to the person addressed ; as, Those affairs of yours (or Those affairs you mention) : Istae rēs. It has also at times a contemptuous force.

162. Īdem, the same, expresses identity, and is often to be rendered by also or likewise; as,

The same day he moved his camp: Eōdem diē castra mōvit.

Whatever is honorable is also expedient: Quicquid est honestum, idem est ūtile.

i. For the same as see section 174.

ii. As īdem is a compound of is, that same is ille īdem, not is īdem.

163. Iipse, -self, is used for emphatic contrast, not as a reflexive pronoun. It may be used with nouns or with any of the personal pronouns, or may be used independently, meaning he himself; as,

They slew Dumnorix himself: Ipsūm Dumnorigem interfēcērunt.

Leaving Labienus on the mainland, he himself set sail: Labiēnō in continentī relictō, ipse nāvēs solvit.

i. The emphatic force of ipse is often best rendered by very or mere; as, They were fighting on the very banks of the river: In ipsīs flūminis rīpīs proeliābantur.

ii. The genitive of ipse with or without the possessive pronominal adjectives may be used as the equivalent of own; as, My own fault: Mea ipsius culpa. Their own tongue: Ipsōrum lingua.

iii. Iipse, when used to emphasize a reflexive pronoun, agrees with the subject, unless very strong emphasis is to lie on the reflexive; as, They kill themselves: Sē ipsī interficiunt.

iv. Occasionally in indirect narration ipse is used as a reflexive for the sake of emphatic contrast, or where sē might be ambiguous.

164. Sē, himself, him, the reflexive pronoun of the third person, refers back to the subject of the verb. It should be carefully distinguished from (a) the emphatic pronoun ipse, and (b) the third personal pronoun referring to others than the subject; as,

They cannot defend themselves: Sē dēfendere nōn possunt.

Commius took the cavalry over with him: Commius sēcum equitēs trānsportāvit.

EXERCISE 23.

A.

1. After these matters had been settled, a war suddenly broke out in the province itself. The cause of this war was as follows. 2. He himself placed you in charge of us. 3. The enemy had concealed their own forces in the same woods. 4. For the same reason he feared our men would inflict injury upon themselves. 5. I remained with you all that time, he returned to his own home. 6. Caesar had these two legions and those (159, iii.) of Crassus with him. 7. They slew themselves in the very gates of the camp. 8. He also thought this present war itself was dangerous to all of us (86, iv., a). 9. Our cavalry, after encouraging one another (164, ii.), joined battle with the enemy's horsemen. These latter (160, i.) at once betook themselves to their comrades. 10. He made this (160, ii.) promise, that he would give them a safe passage through your province. 11. After their usual (165, i.) custom, they put their wives and all their property in the woods. 12. The Nervii and the Aduatuci were waging war against us; the former (160, iii.) had taken up their position on the other side of the river Sabis; the latter were fortifying their own town.

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 9, 10.)

1. These same men had come from those who were pursuing our cavalry. 2. On the same night they found out that their own vessel had been wrecked. 3. These sailors reported to him that the nature of that place was as follows. 4. He himself forbade my advancing with him. 5. He does not fear for himself. They will prevent Caesar himself from advancing. 6. We repulsed the enemy, you fled. 7. He learned that they had hidden themselves (164, i.) and their possessions (165, iii.) in the woods. 8. I wished you to advance to that river with all your forces. 9. In that place our men caught sight of the enemy's camp. These latter (160, i.) had begun to blockade the very entrances. 10. The soldiers of this legion will encamp in the same place. 11. During all these days they were pursuing those who had been driven out of the fortifications. 12. He has left you (plur.) to guard us. 13. You (sing.) have been put in charge of us. 14. While these were fortifying the camp, those were felling trees.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

ANY.

166. (a) Quis (quī) means any, anyone, after sī, nē, num, and some, some one, after nisi; as,

If any one has heard anything he reports it to the magistrate: Sī quis quid accēpit, ad magistrātum dēfert.

He ordered the soldiers not to hurl back any weapon: Militibus imperāvit nē quod tēlum rejicerent.

i. For the tenses used in general conditions introduced by sī quis, see section 64, v.

(b) Quisquam (substantival) means any one, and ūllus (adjectival) means any, when all are excluded, that is, when any has the force of any, even one, suggesting the idea of no one or none. They are used in negative, or practically negative sentences;¹ as,

Nor was any one found: Neque repertus est quisquam.

The battle was without any danger: Sine ūllō periculō erat proelium.

i. Instead of nōn followed by quisquam or ūllus, Latin prefers nēmō, nihil and nūllus; but neque followed by quisquam or ūllus is preferred to et followed by nēmō, nihil or nūllus: as, They do not expect any disaster: Nūllum cāsum expectant. And nothing is considered more disgraceful: Neque turpius quicquam habētur.

(c) Quīvis, quilibet mean any, any one, when all are included, that is, when any has the force of any you please, suggesting the idea of every one, all; as, The vessels were built to withstand any violence: Nāvēs factae sunt ad quamvis vim perferendam.

SOME.

167. (a) Aliquis (aliquī) means some, some one (or other), wholly indefinite; as,

¹ For instance, rhetorical questions, comparative clauses, clauses with priusquam denoting prevention, and clauses containing such words as sine, vix, aegrē.

He bade them send some one : Jussit eōs aliquem mittere.

They are devising some new plan : Aliquid novī cōsiliī ineunt.

Even if some portion be surrounded, the rest can be saved : Si pars aliqua circumventa erit, reliquī servārī possunt.

i. Quispiam has the force of aliquis, but is much rarer.

(b) Nōnnūllī means some, some few, suggesting the idea of some, but not many; as,

They lost some (or a few) of their men : Nōnnūllōs ex suis āmisērunt.

(c) Nesciō quis means some one or other unknown to the speaker; often, through an affectation of ignorance, it implies contempt; as, He had raised some rumor or other (or some trifling rumor) : Rūmōris nesciō quid afflāverat.

i. Nesciō quis in this sense is treated as a simple word, and as such is not followed by the subjunctive of indirect question. Similarly nesciō quō modō or nesciō quō pactō, in some way or other.

(d) Sunt quī with the subjunctive (section 32) means some (emphatic) or there are some who; as, Some said : Erant quī dicerent.

(e) Quīdam means a certain one, a certain, of what one has in mind, but is not anxious or able to specify further. Hence it is often used in vague descriptions, meaning a sort of; as,

One of the soldiers said : Quīdam ex militibus dīxit.

The Romans have defeated us not by valor but by a sort of trick : Nōn virtūte vicērunt Rōmānī sed artificiō quōdam.

(f) For alius repeated, meaning some . . . others, see section 168, a. and for quis, meaning some, see section 166, a.

OTHER.

168. (a) Alius means other, another. When it is repeated in different clauses, the meaning in the singular is one . . . another, in the plural some . . . others; as,

They fled in another direction : Aliam in partem fūgērunt.

Some were filling the trenches, others were hurling weapons : Aliī fossās complēbant, aliū tēla conjiciēbant.

i. With superlatives and ordinal numerals quisque has the force of every (or all the); as, Every man of noble birth: Nōbilissimus quisque. Every tenth man: Decimus quisque. Prīmus quisque means the very first, the first possible.

(b) Uterque means each (of two), freely both; the plural utrīque means both sides or both parties; as,

On each bank (or on both banks) they had villages: Ad utramque ripam vicōs habēbant.

That day both armies keep within their own lines: Eō diē utrīque sēsē suō locō continent.

A.

1. They beheld certain of our men leaping down from the other vessel. 2. They used to inquire what each one had heard concerning each matter. 3. Before he could make any (166, b, fn.) answer, he ordered the others to be summoned to him. 4. Some thought they could gain the victory without a (= any) wound. 5. It would be better to suffer any (166, c) fate at the hands of the Romans. 6. They will not make peace on any other terms. 7. The enemy were advancing, some from one direction, others from another (168, a). 8. When he saw that the enemy were pressing him on each flank, he suspected some new design (86, i.) had been formed. 9. If any of the Gauls are captured, the rest will soon surrender. 10. He trusted both chiefs, the one because of his ancient loyalty, the other because of his recent services. 11. Scarcely any one perceives that another plan must be devised. 12. That the flight of the Gauls should not alarm any, he pointed out that the Germans had won by some trick or other.

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 11, 12.)

1. Labienus was unwilling to build any ships. 2. Some have said that there is timber in each part of the island. 3. If he summons any workmen, they will be ordered to repair the other vessels. 4. He put a certain Labienus in charge of the other legion. 5. Some had been born on the island, others had crossed over from the mainland. 6. Scarcely any one had learned that Caesar was leaving a garrison for both camps. 7. Some think that the cold is less intense in the interior, others, in the districts on the coast. 8. Others said that some place or other should be chosen. 9. Scarcely any ships have been lost, but some few must be repaired. 10. If any ship was lost (64, v.), he used to order another to be built. 11. He orders the one legion to remain there, the other to make war. 12. The ships should be drawn up, lest we lose any.

THE RELATIVE PRONOUN.

170. Quī, who, which, the relative or conjunctive pronoun, is regularly followed by the indicative;¹ as,

The bridge which was at Geneva he orders to be destroyed: Pontem, quī erat ad Genāvam, jubet rescindi.

i. The indicative is regularly found also after relative adverbs, such as unde, ubi, quō, ut, relative adjectives such as quālis, quantus, and indefinite relatives such as quisquis and quicumque.

ii. For the agreement of the relative with its antecedent see section 13.

iii. In Latin, unlike the English usage, the relative is always expressed; as, The liberty we have received from our forefathers: Ea libertās, quam ā mājōribus accēpimus.

iv. In the case of two relative clauses coordinate with each other, the second relative is generally omitted if the two relatives would have the same case; as, He prevails upon Dumnorix, who held the chief authority and was very popular with the common people: Dumnorigī, quī principātum obtinēbat ac mājimē plēbī acceptus erat, persuādet. When the two relatives would be in different cases, as a rule both are expressed; but sometimes the second is replaced by a demonstrative, or (if it would be in the nominative or accusative) is omitted; as, He has sent a man whom we neither fear nor obey: Hominem, quem neque timēmus neque eī pāremus, misit.

¹ This indicative becomes subjunctive in actual or virtual indirect discourse (see sections 175 and 177).

v. Where the same preposition would be used with both antecedent and relative, it is regularly omitted with the relative.

vi. The relative is often found in the ablative absolute construction.

171. The relative is used also with the subjunctive to introduce clauses of purpose (section 26), clauses of characteristic (section 32), and also clauses of concession (or adversative clauses) and clauses of cause or reason ;¹ as,

Though Cicero during all the previous days had kept the soldiers in the camp, on the seventh day he sent five cohorts to forage : Cicerō, quī omnēs superiōrēs diēs militēs in castris continuisset, septimō diē quīnque cohortēs frūmentātum mittit.

It is not without divine aid that the Romans carry on war, seeing that (or since) they are able to move forward such mighty engines : Nōn Rōmānī sine ope divīnā bellum gerunt, quī tantās māchinātiōnēs prōmovēre possint.

They upbraid the Belgians for surrendering : Increpitant Belgās quī sē dēdiderint.

172. THE COORDINATING RELATIVE.—Qui is often used at the beginning of a sentence to introduce, not a subordinate clause, but a new independent sentence, which it thus connects more clearly with the preceding words than a personal or demonstrative pronoun such as English uses, would do ; as,

For this reason the Helvetians surpass the other Gauls : Quā dē causā Helvētīī reliquōs Gallōs praecēdunt.

Having completed this business Caesar set out for Gaul : Quibus rēbus cōfectis Caesar in Galliam profectus est.

The relative may even take the place of a personal or demonstrative pronoun in a subordinate adverbial clause at the beginning of a new sentence ; as,

When they perceived this, they began to close the gates : Quod cum vīdissent, portās claudere coepērunt.

¹ The causal relative sentence is often introduced and emphasized by quippe, ut, or utpote.

They gather as many ships as possible: Nāvēs quam plūrimās (possunt)¹ cōgunt. As quickly as possible: Quam celerrimē.

ii. As with quī (section 173, a) the antecedent tālis, tantus, or tot is often omitted; as, They allot them as much land as seems best: Attribuunt quantum vīsum est agrī.

EXERCISE 25.

[In this exercise the relative should, where possible, be used as in section 172.]

A.

1. The ships which he had built in the previous summer, were ordered to assemble at once. 2. Nor could any vessels be found on which the cavalry could (32) be brought over. 3. Having made these preparations, they fixed a day on which all were to assemble (26) at the banks of the river. 4. When they heard this, they withdrew to the camp whence they had set out. 5. The same thing will happen as happened yesterday. 6. This legion he left to guard the camp, seeing that it (171) was wearied with marching. 7. The number of those who set out from the country of the Helvetians was three hundred and sixty-eight thousand. Of these, those who could bear arms were ninety-two thousand. 8. Dismayed by his advance, the enemy took to flight, although they (171) had gathered large forces. 9. These do not strive with as great eagerness as they are accustomed to exhibit in battles on land. 10. The enemy suddenly came in sight of the cavalry Caesar had sent to the assistance of the Aedui. 11. These are allowed to go in safety in whatever direction they wish. 12. He sent the bravest horsemen he had (173, c. iii.) with him to Vesontio, which (13, i.) is the largest town of the Sequani.

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 13, 14.)

1. This is the length of the side which is opposite Ireland. 2. There are three (trēs) sides, all of which (86, iv., a) are equal. 3. The distance is thought to be the shortest possible. 4. Those who inhabit the other district are more civilized. 5. Ireland is not considered to be as large as Britain. 6. This island the Britons inhabit. These, seeing that (171) they dye themselves with woad, are of a hideous appearance. 7. The region which is on the sea some call Kent. 8. The island is of the same circumference as Mona. 9. By these inquiries we have found that the custom is the same as in Britain. 10. They have (habeō) milk and flesh in the island of which I have written. 11. The woad with which the Britons used to dye themselves is thought to have produced a blue color. 12. When the ship was brought to land at this place, we saw that most of the people were clad in skins.

SUBORDINATE CLAUSES IN INDIRECT DISCOURSE.¹

175. In many of the preceding sections rules have been given for using, now the indicative, now the subjunctive, in subordinate clauses introduced by a relative or conjunction.

But all such subordinate clauses are put in the subjunctive when dependent on a clause in indirect discourse, that is, on a clause which is itself dependent on some verb of stating, thinking, fearing, perceiving, ordering or asking. The indicative should never be used to express any portion of the quoted words or thoughts of another ; as,

He answers that he has been silent as long as he has been able :
Respondet quamdiū potuerit sē tacuisse.

They thought they would recover the hostages that they had given to Crassus : Sē obsidēs quōs Crassō dedissent recipērātūrōs existimābant.

It was observed that our men were scarcely suited to an enemy of this sort, because they could not follow up a retreating force : Intellectum est nostrōs, quod insequi cēdentēs nōn possent, minus aptōs esse ad hūjus generis hostem.

He ordered them to await his arrival in the place where they then were : Eōs in eō locō quō tum essent suum adventum expectāre jussit.

¹ These clauses are sometimes called by the conveniently short term sub-oblique.

He asked why Caesar demanded this if he did not think it right :
Rogāvit cūr Caesar, sī nōn aequum existimāret hōc postulāret.

i. An apparent exception is found in the use of the indicative in subordinate clauses that really form no part of the quoted words or thoughts, but either are parenthetical or explanatory additions made by the writer himself, or are the writer's substitute for something actually said or thought ; as,

He ordered the cohorts which were on guard to set out with him :
Cohortēs quae in statiōnibus erant sēcum proficisci jussit.

Caesar suspected that that would happen which did occur : Caesar fore id, quod accidit, suspicābātur.

Here quae in statiōnibus erant formed no part of the order given, while no such clause as quod accidit could possibly have been in Caesar's mind.

176. The sequence of tenses is observed in these subjunctive clauses, primary tenses following primary and secondary following secondary. In narrative, secondary sequence is the rule, the present and future indicative becoming the imperfect subjunctive, the perfect and future perfect indicative becoming the pluperfect subjunctive (see section 187, b).

But sometimes for the sake of vividness the primary sequence is used in narrative, the present and future indicative becoming the present subjunctive, the perfect and future perfect indicative becoming the perfect subjunctive. (See also section 190, vi.)

177. VIRTUAL INDIRECT DISCOURSE.—The subjunctive is used in any subordinate clause which is conceived as expressing the words or thoughts of another, without any formal or explicit statement to that effect. This is called the subjunctive of virtual (informal or implied) indirect discourse ; as,

He offered great rewards if they succeeded in carrying the despatches through : Māgna prōposuit praemia sī litterās pertulissent. (Here prōposuit is equivalent to sē datūrum esse pollicitus est.)

EXERCISE 26.

A.

1. He promised to send all the cavalry he had with him. 2. He believes that if the Aedui are crushed, the rest of the Gauls will disperse to their homes. 3. Caesar feared that the same thing would happen as had occurred the previous day. 4. We were waiting in case (177) the Gauls should attempt to break down the bridge. 5. Having offered rewards to those who should (177) first mount the wall, he gave the signal. 6. He ordered Labienus, whom he had put (175, i.) in charge of the camp, to set out as soon as he could. 7. Caesar complains because the Aedui have not lent him aid. 8. The enemy swarmed around in hopes (177) of finding some means of approach. 9. Word was brought that Caesar would send the cavalry by the same road by which the enemy had gone. 10. He inquired how many miles the town in which they dwelt was distant from the camp. 11. Driven by hunger, they secretly went out from the camp to see whether (177) they could find any grain or cattle in the fields. 12. They gave many reasons which (they held) were perfectly valid.

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 15, 16.)

1. He observed that when our men were engaged in battle with the enemy, the cavalry never fought in close order. 2. He feared (vereor) that if the enemy were driven back our men would pursue them too eagerly. 3. The two cohorts which Caesar had sent to reinforce our men were ordered to drive back the charioteers who were boldly breaking through the cavalry. 4. They were waiting (expectō) to see whether (177) our men would follow those who designedly retreated. 5. He thinks (arbitror) that our men will not dare to make an attack on the charioteers, because they are not suited for this kind of fighting. 6. They asked (quaerō) what brought the same danger to the cavalry and to those who had leaped down from their chariots. 7. He had not posted guards, on the ground that all the soldiers were busy fortifying the camp. 8. He perceived that if our men left the standards, the enemy rushed out of the woods and slew them. 9. He urged (hortor) them to fight vigorously because those who had been placed on guard were in great danger.

TENSES OF THE INDICATIVE.¹

178. In the general use of the tenses Latin differs from English in two respects :

i. There is no distinction in form corresponding to the English Progressive, Indefinite and Emphatic tenses, except that the Latin imperfect and perfect nearly correspond to the English past progressive and past indefinite respectively.

[In the subjunctive the perfect usually is equivalent to the English true perfect, while the English simple past is represented as a rule by the imperfect or (to indicate priority of action) the pluperfect.]

ii. Especially in subordinate clauses Latin is more exact than English in indicating both the point of time (present, past or future)² and also priority of action in relation to the main verb ; as, When I find out, I shall inform you, if I can : Cum cōgnōverō, faciam tē certiōrem, sī poterō. (Literally, When I shall have found out, I shall inform you, if I shall be able.) [This holds true of the subjunctive also.]

¹ Although sections 179-184 are not printed in large type, they should be carefully studied.

² In letters the writer often transfers himself in thought to the time of the reader, and uses the imperfect and pluperfect instead of the present and perfect ; as, I have nothing to write : Nihil habēbam quod scriberem.

179. The PRESENT tense is used :

(a) Of what is going on now at the present moment ; as, They are preparing for war : Bellum parant.

(b) Of general truths, and of continued, repeated or habitual actions or states ; as, Fortune favors the brave : Fortūna fortēs adjuvat. Those in the interior do not sow grain : Interiōrēs frūmenta nōn serunt.

(c) As an historical present, in animated narrative ; as, When the news was brought, he makes haste to set out : Cum id nūntiātum esset, mātūrat proficīscī.

(d) To express an action attempted or intended in present time (the conative present) ; as, They are trying to avoid danger : Perīculum vitant.

(e) With jam and its compounds to express actions continued from the past into the present, where we should expect the perfect ; as, He has long been collecting troops : Jam diū cōpiās comparat.

(f) With dum (while), where we should expect the imperfect (see section 153).

180. The IMPERFECT tense is used :

(a) Of what was going on in past time ; as, He was wintering in Gaul : In Galliā hiemābat.

(b) Of continued, repeated, or habitual actions or states in past time, like the English past indefinite ; as, He used to lead (or would lead, or kept leading, or led) his troops out daily : Cotidiē prōdūcēbat cōpiās. He had the greatest confidence in this legion : Huic legiōnī cōfidēbat māximē. He could not discover anything : Nihil reperiēbat (suggesting repeated failures). They would not come to the councils : Ad concilia nōn veniēbant (implying repeated refusals).

(c) Hence appropriately where English would use the simple past :

i. To express one's usual way of thinking, or the thoughts or feelings which accompany consideration (while the perfect is used of coming to a decision).

ii. To explain the situation of affairs.

iii. To give the details of movements, or to describe the process as opposed to summing up the result.

iv. To mention the natural features of the scene of past operations.

i. The perfect tenses of the passive have sometimes fuī, fueram, fuerō, instead of sum, eram, erō. The form with fuī generally implies that the condition spoken of has ceased to exist.

ii. A sort of perfect is formed by habeō and the perfect participle passive,¹ emphasizing the continuance of the result of a past action; as, He has large forces collected: Māgnās cōpiās coāctās habet. Similarly for the pluperfect habēbam is used.

183. The PLUPERFECT tense is used :

(a) To mark an act as completed or taking place before some point in past time mentioned or implied: as, They had by this time reached the territories of the Aedui: Jam in Aeduōrum finēs pervēnerant.

i. Sometimes Caesar uses the pluperfect instead of the perfect in referring to previous passages in his Commentaries. (Compare section 178, ii. fn.)

ii. For the pluperfect formed by fueram and by habēbam see section 182, i. and ii. respectively.

(b) In subordinate clauses to denote an indefinitely repeated action, preceding that of the main verb, which is in the imperfect. (Section 149 and 64, v.)

(c) To denote a past state resulting from a previously completed action. (See section 182, e.)

184. The FUTURE PERFECT tense is used to express something completed or attained by some point in the future; as, Meanwhile he will have gone, or will be gone: Interim discesserit.

i. Where English has the present or present perfect in a subordinate clause referring to future time, Latin uses the future perfect when the action of the subordinate verb is prior to that of the principal verb (section 178, ii.). Sometimes where two future actions are regarded as identical, one involving the other, the future perfect is found in both clauses; as, He who crushes Antony will (thereby) finish the war: Quī Antōnium oppresserit, is bellum cōfēcerit.

ii. The future perfect is sometimes used to emphasize the completion of a future act; as, I at least shall have my duty done (or I at least shall be found to have done my duty): Ego certē meum officium praestiterō. It thus may come to give assurance of rapidity of action; as, The first attack will carry the camp forthwith: Prīmus impetus castra cēperit.

¹ Compare in English I have the letter written, as distinguished from I have written the letter.

EXERCISE 27.

A.

1. To this legion he always showed especial indulgence. 2. If you assist the enemy, I shall burn your villages. 3. The Druids are accustomed to hold aloof from war, and do not pay taxes. 4. After he had learned this, he thought he ought not to wait longer. 5. If Caesar is at the head of the army, we shall easily conquer the Gauls. 6. He marched through the forest of Ardennes, which extended from the Rhine to the Nervii. 7. By this means they sought (180, d) to terrify the others. 8. While this was going on, the enemy had already reached the territories of the Aedui, and were laying waste their lands. 9. On the following day they move their camp two miles. 10. Whenever he saw his men in distress, he would send reinforcements. 11. For the reasons which I have mentioned, Caesar wished to set out for Britain. 12. Before midnight the enemy will be gone (184).

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 17, 18.)

1. The enemy are rallying. 2. The enemy are repulsed and a large number slain. 3. When (cum) Caesar learns this he will send forward the legions. 4. They were accustomed (cōnsuēvī) to leap down from their chariots. 5. For a long time (diū) they had been contending with their full force. 6. Whenever they began to forage, the enemy would suddenly show themselves. 7. As soon as all the reinforcements had assembled he proceeded (180, d) to cross the river. 8. During all these years they were unable to learn his plans. 9. While the cavalry were foraging, the enemy had withdrawn. 10. They trusted (180, c, i.) in the speed of the chariots. 11. Whenever our men make an attack, the enemy betake themselves to flight. 12. When (ubi) they had crossed (182, d) the river, they halted. 13. When (cum) he perceived this, he immediately ordered the cavalry to halt. 14. The enemy's forces are drawn up on the other hill.

INDIRECT DISCOURSE—Ōrātiō Oblīqua.

185. Direct Discourse (Ōrātiō Rēcta) gives in their original form the words or thoughts of any person.

Indirect Discourse (Ōrātiō Oblīqua) gives (in dependence upon some verb of stating, thinking, perceiving, ordering or asking) the substance of the words or thoughts of another person, and even of the writer or speaker when quoting himself.

The rules for changing Direct into Indirect Discourse are as follows :

A. CHANGES IN MOOD.¹

186. 1. Principal Clauses.

(a) Clauses containing a statement (assertive or declarative sentences) have their verb in the infinitive with subject accusative (section 14).

(b) Clauses containing a question (interrogative sentences) have their verb in the subjunctive (section 35).

i. Indirect deliberative questions (section 134, d) retain the subjunctive.

(c) Clauses containing a command or request (imperative sentences) have their verb in the subjunctive.

i. This use of the subjunctive is closely related to the substantive final clause (section 27), both being developments of the independent jussive subjunctive (section 134, b). It is thus sometimes difficult, if not impossible, to distinguish the reported command and the substantive final clause, especially after nē or when ut is omitted (section 28, vi.) ; as for instance in the sentences, Nūntiī postulābant hōs sibi dēderent : The messengers demanded that they should surrender these men to them. Militibus imperātum est nē hostēs aggrederentur : The soldiers were given orders that they should not attack the enemy.

2. Subordinate Clauses.

All kinds of subordinate clauses (relative, temporal, conditional, causal, etc.) are put in the subjunctive mood (section 175 and fn.).

¹ In no case is the indicative retained.

C. CHANGES IN PRONOUNS.

188. When, as is generally the case,¹ the first and second persons of the original words are changed in indirect discourse to the third person :

ego, nōs, become sē (or if emphatic in the nominative, ipse, ipsī).

meus, noster, " suus.

tū, vōs, " illē, illī (or sometimes is, eī).

tuus, vester, " illīus, illōrum.

hīc, iste, " ille (or is.)

D. CHANGES IN ADVERBS.

189. Adverbs which are relative to the time or place of the speaker, are, as a rule, adapted to the time and place of the reporter. Thus nunc, hodiē, hīc, hīnc, herī, would become respectively tum or tunc, illō diē, ibi, inde, prīdiē.

190. The following real or apparent exceptions also are found :

i. Clauses introduced by the coordinating relative, which are only apparently subordinate, are put in the infinitive.

ii. Because of the tendency in Latin to use the same construction after quam (than) as before it, the accusative and infinitive sometimes occurs in quam clauses instead of the subjunctive.

iii. For the indicative in parenthetical clauses in indirect discourse see section 175, i.

iv. The hortatory subjunctive (section 134, a) is usually changed into the infinitive of the passive periphrastic conjugation.

v. Rhetorical questions which are virtual denials are often put in the accusative and infinitive.

vi. Instead of the regular secondary sequence the more vivid² primary is often found after historical tenses ; and sometimes also a passage may begin with secondary sequence and suddenly change to primary sequence. On the other hand, after the historical present (section 179, c) secondary sequence may be used.

vii. The pronoun hīc and the adverbs mentioned in section 189 are often retained unchanged in indirect discourse.

² More vivid because presenting more exactly the original tenses.

viii. The regular rules for the use of sē, ille and is in indirect discourse are not always rigidly followed, especially where no ambiguity arises. See particularly on the use of sē and suus sections 164, i. and 165, ii.

191. The verb of saying, thinking, etc., on which the indirect discourse depends, is not always expressed, being often sufficiently suggested by the context.

Further, where the indirect discourse includes more than one variety of reported utterance (statements, commands, questions, requests) it is not Latin usage to change the verb introducing the various indirect clauses, as English often does.

Ariovistus sends envoys to Caesar saying that he wished to treat with him about these matters and asking him to appoint a day for an interview: Ariovistus ad Caesarem lēgātōs mittit: velle sē dē his rēbus agere cum eō: colloquīō diem cōstitueret.

192. In indirect discourse conditional sentences assume the following forms :

Sī quid habeō dō,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habeat, dare.
		dīxit sē,	sī quid habēret, dare.
Sī quid habēbam dabam,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habēret, dedisse.
		dīxit sē,	sī quid habēret, dedisse.
Sī quid habuī dedī,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habuerit, dedisse.
		dīxit sē,	sī quid habuisset, dedisse.
Sī quid habēbō dabō,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habeat, datūrum esse.
		dīxit sē,	sī quid habēret, datūrum esse.
Sī quid habuerō dabō,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habuerit, datūrum esse.
		dīxit sē,	sī quid habuisset, datūrum esse.
Sī quid habeam dem,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habeat, datūrum esse.
		dīxit sē,	sī quid habēret, datūrum esse.
Sī quid habērem darem,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habēret, datūrum fuisse dīxit	(or esse).
Sī quid habuissem dedissem,	becomes {	dīcit sē,	sī quid habuisset, datūrum fuisse.
		dīxit

193. The following examples illustrate the rules for changing from direct to indirect discourse :

1. Direct. — We shall give hostages, and shall do whatever you command.

Indirect. — (They promised) that they would give hostages, and would do whatever he commanded.

Obsidēs dabimus, quaeque imperāveris faciēmus.

(Pollicitī sunt) obsidēs sē datūrōs, quaeque imperāvissent factūrōs.

2. Direct. — A larger cloud of dust than is customary is visible in the direction in which the legion has marched.

Indirect. — (They reported) that a larger cloud of dust was visible in the direction in which the legion had marched.

Pulvis māior quam cōsuētūdō fert in eā parte vidētur, quam in partem legiō iter fēcit.

(Renūntiāvērunt) pulverem māiōrem, quam cōsuētūdō ferret, in eā parte vidērī, quam in partem legiō iter fēcisset.

3. Direct. — Visit as many states as you can, and urge them to embrace the alliance of the Roman people, and announce that I shall quickly come thither. After examining everything, return to me as quickly as possible.

Indirect. — (He gives him orders) that he is to visit as many states as he can, and urge them to embrace the alliance of the Roman people, and announce that he will quickly come thither. After examining everything, he is to return to him as quickly as possible.

Quās poteris adī civitatēs, hortāreque ut populi Rōmānī fidem sequantur, mēque celeriter eō ventūrum nūntiā. Explōrātis omnibus rēbus, ad mē quam primum revertere.

(Huic imperat) quās possit adeat civitatēs, hortēturque ut populi Rōmānī fidem sequantur, sēque celeriter eō ventūrum nūntiet. Explōrātis omnibus rēbus ad sē quam primum revertātur.

6. Direct.—Even if time fails, yet it will be of great service to me, if I merely visit the island.

Indirect. — (He thought) that, even if time failed, yet it would be of great service to him, if he merely visited the island.

7. Direct.—If you think it wrong for the Germans to cross into Gaul against your wish, why do you claim that anything beyond the Rhine is under your sway or power?

Indirect.—If he thought it wrong for the Germans to cross into Gaul against his wish, why did he claim that anything beyond the Rhine was under his sway or power?

8. Direct.—Leap down, soldiers, unless you wish to betray the eagle to the enemy. I at least shall have done my duty.

Indirect.—Let the soldiers leap down, unless they wished to betray the eagle to the enemy. He at least should have done his duty.

9. Direct.—Do no harm to the Trinobantes, Cassivellaunus.

Indirect.—He ordered Cassivellaunus to do no harm to the Trinobantes.

Sī tempus dēficiet, tamen māgnō mihi ūsuī erit, sī modo īnsulam adierō.

Sī tē invitō Germānōs in Galliam trānsire nōn aequum existimās, cūr tuī quicquam esse imperiī aut potestātis trāns Rhēnum postulās?

Sī sē invitō Germānōs in Galliam trānsire nōn aequum existimāret, cūr suī quicquam esse imperiī aut potestātis trāns Rhēnum postulāret?

Dēsilite, militēs, nisi vultis aquilam hostibus prōdere. Ego certē meum officium praestiterō.

Dēsilirent militēs, nisi vellent aquilam hostibus prōdere. Sē certē suum officium praestitūrum fuisse.

Nōlī, Cassivellaune, Trinobantibus nocēre.

(Observe how the vocative may be represented in indirect discourse.)

EXERCISE 28.

[The passages quoted in direct form should be turned into indirect for translation.]

A.

1. To these ambassadors he replied : “ I will go with you, if you are ready to set out.” 2. They sent ambassadors to Caesar saying that they were ready to open the gates they had closed the day before. 3. He told them not to forget the former valor of the Helvetians, nor the wrongs done by them to the Roman people. 4. “ I,” answered he, “ have spared the citizens, you the Gauls.” 5. He began to urge them not to set out ; Caesar did not dare to leave them in Gaul ; but if they crossed over to Britain, he would kill them all. 6. “ Let them not,” he wrote, “ provoke the enemy to battle, but if they are being harassed themselves, let them hold out until (155, b) I come up.” 7. They replied that if these proceedings were reported to Ariovistus, they did not doubt that he would inflict the severest punishment on all the hostages who were in his power. 8. What were they to do ? he asked ; it was impossible to defend the camp any longer, and Caesar would have been annoyed if they had set out without his orders. 9. In his consulship (he said) the Germans had most eagerly sought the friendship of Rome. Why should anyone imagine that they would forsake their allegiance ? 10. Would they have sent Commius back, he asked (35, i.), if he had not led his army across ?

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 19-21.)

1. He points out that if the cavalry rush out, the legionary soldiers will not endure the onset. 2. He pointed out that if the cavalry wandered too widely, the Britons would rush out from the woods and seize them. 3. “ We shall send you all the corn we have (habeō),” they answered Caesar. “ Why (cūr) are you setting out with the legions ? Do not attack our town.” 4. He said that this young man would have held supreme power if he had not been slain by Cassivellaunus. 5. “ Let us cross (190, iv.) the river,” they answered. “ Who can harm us if we are able to conceal ourselves in the marshes ?” 6. The Trinobantes sent an embassy to Caesar (saying) that they had given up all hope and (promising) that they would surrender to him all the hostages he demanded and (begging him) not to suffer the soldiers to lay waste their lands. 7. They feared (vereor) that if Caesar allowed the legions to leave the line of march, the enemy would seize many of the soldiers. 8. They said they were accustomed to assemble in these towns, whenever the enemy made a raid. 9. They promised (him) the kingship, if he did not attach (177) himself to Caesar.

DIFFERENT FORMS OF THE NOUN CLAUSE.

194. A noun (or substantive) clause is one that takes the place and discharges the functions of a substantive, whether as subject or object of a verb or equivalent phrase, or as an *appositive*¹ to some other word in the sentence.

N. B.—The accusative and infinitive construction is here treated as a noun clause because it represents the English noun sentence introduced by the conjunction that. Similarly in substantive clauses of result, and in clauses with quān and quōminus, the adverbial notion of result or purpose has become so weakened that they may properly be treated as noun clauses like their English equivalents.

i. Clauses, like infinitive phrases, are always regarded as neuter.

195. After verbs of saying and thinking, many so-called impersonal verbs, and many expressions composed of a neuter adjective and est, English noun clauses with that are expressed by the accusative and infinitive.

(a) Subject.—It is not right that the Germans should cross the Rhine: Nōn aequum est Germānōs Rhēnum trānsire.

(b) Object.—They thought they possessed limited territories: Angustōs sē finēs habēre arbitrābantur.

(c) Appositive.—This report was brought to Caesar, that they were attempting to march through our province: Caesari id nūntiātum est, eōs per prōvinciam nostram iter facere cōnārī.

¹ A noun clause is occasionally used as a restrictive appositive to an accusative of anticipation; as, You know Marcellus how slow he is: Nōstī Mārcellum quam tardus sit. They feared that supplies could not be brought in: Rem frūmentāriam ut supportārī posset timent.

(d) Adverbial Accusative.—As to the fact that you threaten me you will not disregard the wrongs of the Aedui, no one has contended with me, except to his own destruction: Quod mihi dēnūntiās tē Aeduōrum injūriās nōn neglētūrum, nēmō mēcum sine suā perniciē contendit.

199. After verbs of asking, learning, knowing, telling, etc., English noun clauses introduced by an interrogative are expressed by an interrogative clause with the subjunctive of indirect question.

(a) Subject.—It cannot be determined with the eyes in which direction it flows: Oculis in utram partem fluat jūdicārī nōn potest.

(b) Object.—He found out what was being done: Cōgnōvit quid gererētur.

(c) Appositive.—This is the real question, whether he has returned: Illud quaeritur num redierit.

200. The same verb may have more than one construction, the difference of construction in most cases representing a difference of meaning.¹

(a) They determine that these should leave the town: Cōstituunt ut hī oppidō excēdant.

They determine that it is best to return: Cōstituunt optimum esse reverti.

He determined what tribute Britain should pay: Quid vectīgālis Britannia penderet, cōstituit.

(b) Word was brought that they were not to attack the enemy: Nūntiātum est nē hostēs laccesserentur. (Compare section 195, c.)

(c) There was also the fact that they fought in small groups: Accēdēbat hūc ut rārī proeliārentur. (Compare section 198, a.)

N.B.—It is important to distinguish carefully (a) between substantive clauses with that and the purely adverbial clauses of purpose and result also introduced by that, and (b) between substantive interrogative clauses and relative clauses with omitted antecedent (section 39, v.).

EXERCISE 29.

A.

1. It is best that we should announce to the soldiers that they are not to provoke the enemy to battle. 2. They made the complaint that the enemy were laying waste their lands. 3. The result was that it was quickly ascertained what tribes inhabited the island. 4. There was danger that it would be difficult to determine what should be done. 5. There was added the fact that (198, a) he had stated that Caesar had conferred the chief power upon him. 6. It happened that some of the soldiers were intercepted by the sudden approach of the cavalry. 7. It was reported that Caesar had given orders to the soldiers to storm the enemy's camp. 8. By means of messengers he informs Caesar what he thinks should be done. 9. He answered that he did not know why the soldiers had received orders that they were to attack the town. 10. There is no doubt that the Helvetians are the most powerful. 11. He was of the opinion that it would be dangerous to the province that the enemy should become accustomed to cross the Rhine. 12. This report had been brought, that the Germans had betaken themselves to the woods. 13. He sent messengers to announce that Caesar had determined that (200, a) Labienus should not return.

B. (Caesar, B. G. V., 22-23.)

1. There was added the fact that (198, a) some ships had been driven back. 2. This report had been brought (nūntiō) to Cassivellaunus that Caesar had determined to lead his forces back to the mainland. 3. When he had determined what should be done, he urged (hortor) that they should wait for the vessels. 4. There is danger (periculum) that Caesar will determine that all the legions shall winter in Gaul. 5. It happened that the ships in which he had ordered that the army should be sent back had been lost in the storm. 6. Caesar complained (queror) that they had not paid the tribute. 7. He announced that the best (optimus) thing was for the envoys to fritter away the rest of the summer. 8. The result of this was (quō factum est) that Caesar was not aware how many (quot) losses had been sustained. 9. It was announced that because it happened that the equinox was at hand, the army must be taken back at one trip. 10. He gave orders that they were not to harm the king. 11. They send messengers (stating) that their lands are being laid waste. 12. It was said (dīcō) that (18, vii.) four kings governed these states.

CONTINUOUS PROSE AND IDIOMATIC TRANSLATION.

201. Passages of continuous narrative set for translation into Latin prose may conveniently be arranged in three divisions of increasing complexity : first, those passages in which little more is required than in the detached sentences heretofore given for translation, namely proper choice of words, correct inflection and observance of the rules of Latin syntax ; second, those passages where, in addition, the phraseology requires alteration, either to adapt the passage to Latin idiom or to avoid difficulties arising from a limited vocabulary ; and third, those passages in which some alteration is necessary or desirable not merely in phraseology but also in the structure or relation of sentences.

N.B.—The same division holds of passages to be translated from Latin into English, and much of what follows may, with the necessary changes, be applied to the idiomatic translation of Latin into English.

The three following sections discuss the chief points to be observed in each of these divisions.

CONNECTION OF THOUGHT.

202. Even in the simplest kind of narrative passage it will not do to treat the component sentences as so many independent units. Latin differs very markedly from English in regard to the connection of sentences. If a modern book or newspaper be compared with such an author as Caesar, it will be found that in narrative English it is the exception rather than the rule to give formal expression to the connection of thought, while in narrative Latin the reverse holds true.

of expression preferred by each language. In our own language, as we know, the same thought may be expressed in many different ways, and of these some are sure to be more, some less, like the form of expression a Roman would choose. So it often happens that when at first it would seem impossible to turn an English sentence into Latin because it contains some words for which the student knows no Latin equivalent, the whole difficulty is easily solved by expressing the thought of the sentence in some other way. But again, even when the student does know a Latin equivalent for each individual word in an English sentence, he may yet fail to get a tolerable rendering, for the reason that Latin may put the whole thought into a form quite unlike the English.

To a certain extent differences of phraseology between Latin and English are matters of detail that the most complete vocabulary could not fully treat, but certain general rules may be given which have a very wide application. These rules are really illustrations of one great principle: that the genius of the Latin language is above all things direct, definite and concrete, like the Roman character itself, straightforward, business-like, practical and unimaginative.

Hence the general rule for narrative prose, first to see clearly what is the exact meaning of the English phrase, and then to express that meaning in the simplest and most direct manner. Some important special applications of this rule are as follows:—

(a) AVOID METAPHORICAL OR PICTURESQUE EXPRESSIONS.

Very little modern English prose is as simple and direct as Caesar's style; much even of our everyday language is in fact highly metaphorical. In narrative prose, the best plan is to avoid figurative language altogether ; translate the thoughts and not the words. So for example :

He took the field : Ad bellum profectus est.

He left no stone unturned : Nihil praetermisit.

He turned a deaf ear to this advice : Quod cōnsilium nōn probavit.

He sacrificed friendship on the altar of patriotism : Amicitiam rei pūblīcae posthabuit.

Where figurative language is used in Latin (as in Cicero's oratory and Livy's semi-poetical prose) we constantly find either that a simile is preferred to a metaphor or that the metaphor is quite different from the English one, and even then is apt to be toned down by tamquam, quasi, quīdam, etc.

(b) AVOID ABSTRACT FORMS OF EXPRESSION.

Latin has fewer abstract words than English, and those it does possess it uses much more sparingly than we do, many of them being found only in philosophical writings. The number of abstract words which can safely be ventured upon in narrative prose is very limited, such as amicitia, auctōritās, celeritās, māgnitūdō, studium. Almost invariably the English abstract expression should be turned by a concrete Latin phrase ; as,

On the conclusion of this war : Hōc bellō cōfectō.

On the receipt of this information : Quod cum nūntiātum esset.

They promised submission to his authority : Ea quae imperāssēt sē factūrōs pollicitī sunt.

In Caesar's consulship : Caesare cōsule.

His measures : Ea quae faciēbat.

In pursuance of his annual custom : Ut quotannis cōsuēverat.

So the indirect question furnishes an equivalent for many abstract words (see section 37), and the vague word rēs often affords a convenient translation for various kinds of circumstances, situations, measures, etc.

Similarly Latin is very deficient in class names which express the doer of an action, such as fugitive, defender, combatant, discoverer, believer. These can generally be expressed by the verb ; e.g., fugientēs or quī fugiēbant.

(c) AVOID THE PERSONIFICATION OF INANIMATE THINGS OR OF QUALITIES.

Latin seldom represents anything but a living thing as the doer of an action, while English so constantly makes inanimate objects or abstract nouns the subject of a verb of action that we scarcely notice the personification.

Caesar's sudden approach frightened them into submission : Caesaris repentīnō adventū commōtī, lēgātōs dē dēditiōne mittunt.

The darkness of the night hid us from the enemy : Propter tenebrās, hostēs nostrōs nōn cōspicātī sunt.

Speed alone will save us : Una est in celeritāte posita salūs.

His dying words : Ejus morientis verba.

(d) THE CHIEF WEIGHT OF THE SENTENCE FALLS IN LATIN UPON THE VERB.

In English there is a tendency to make the noun the significant word. So for English phrases consisting of some unemphatic verb, such as make, have, take, do, etc., followed by a verbal noun which is the really significant word, Latin often has a verb which contains the meaning of the English noun within itself ; as,

He made reply to me : Mihi respondit.

He has no hesitation : Nōn dubitat.

He took his departure : Discessit.

We have both the power and the daring to cross : Et possumus et audēmus trānsire.

This verb is often accompanied by a cognate accusative (see section 72) in the form of a neuter pronoun or adjective ; as,

They can do no harm to us : Nihil nōbīs nocēre possunt.

He made many promises : Multa pollicitus est.

They make the same attempt : Idem cōnantur.

This idiom is especially noticeable in the impersonal use of the passive voice of intransitive verbs (section 56) ; as,

Mention has been made of him : Dē illō dictum est.

There must be no delay : Nōn cunctandum est. (Compare also section 37.)

(g) OMIT UNNECESSARY AND MERELY ORNAMENTAL EPITHETS.

Some English writers are fond of heightening the effect by adding words or phrases that may adorn the style but add nothing to the meaning. These may safely be omitted; as, The enemy was awaiting the approach of our (gallant) leader. They aimed their weapons particularly at the horses (of the enemy's cavalry).

(h) BE PRECISE IN THE USE OF THE TENSES.

Attention has already been called to the precision shown in the Latin use of the tenses, especially i. in subordinate clauses referring to an action prior to that of the main verb (sections 178, ii. and 187, b, i.); ii. in the tenses of the participle (section 41); iii. after verbs of promising and hoping, etc. (section 17). In one important respect only is Latin less exact than English, namely, in the frequent use of primary sequence after secondary tenses (section 190, vi.).

STRUCTURE.

204. It may happen, however, that all the preceding rules about syntax, connection and phraseology have been carefully observed, and yet that the result is far from being good Latin prose. For it may be that the English passage is constructed in a way that is very unlike Latin usage.

Modern English narrative is apt to consist of a series of detached sentences, each comparatively simple in its structure, generally short, and containing very few verbs. Classical Latin narrative is more apt to group several of these crisp sentences into a longer and more complex sentence, making the verb which expresses the main idea the principal verb, and putting the others in various subordinate relations.

Again, even when English does have a long complex sentence, it is more loosely constructed than the Latin period (section 9). In the Latin period (as in the Latin short sentence) the main thought is, as a rule, not complete until the final words are given; the period is intended to be grasped as a whole; grammatically it may appear very involved, but the thoughts are marshalled in a perfectly logical order. But in the English long sentence (as often in the short sentence also) we seldom find the main thought left in suspense until the very end of the sentence; the final words are not the emphatic ones; the thought is intended to be grasped in detail.

Contrast the following passages :

Our men then marched back to camp. Not a man had been killed, and very few wounded. Yet they had expected a formidable campaign, for the enemy numbered four hundred and thirty thousand men. Nostri ad unum omnēs incolumēs perpaucis vulnerātis ex tantī bellī timōre, cum hostium numerus capitum quadringentōrum trīgintā mīlium fuisset, sē in castra recēperunt.

In the elementary stages of the writing of continuous Latin prose, it is not necessary to study very closely the formation of the Latin period, which, after all, is by no means invariably employed by even the most careful Latin prose authors; the following suggestions, however, will be found of importance for even the beginner.¹

(a) Arrange the various clauses of a sentence in the logical order of thought, which in narrative commonly means the order of time. Put all clauses or phrases expressing attendant circumstances before the main verb, and put last the clause on which the emphasis falls. This will generally be the principal clause, but see section 6, ii.

(b) Reduce the number of principal verbs by grouping short independent sentences that relate to a common topic into a complex sentence.

¹On the other hand, it is of the utmost importance that the pupil in turning Latin into English should become accustomed to translating Latin periods and complex sentences into the simpler and looser structure characteristic of English, and especially should he familiarize himself, by practice, with the various ways suggested in sections 43 and 47 of translating participial clauses. Good examples for such practice may be found in Caesar, B. G., IV. 23, 6; 24, 1; 30, 1 and 2; 32, 4 and 5; V. 7, 6; 8, 1 and 2; 9, 1; and 15, 3 and 4.

(c) Within this complex sentence or period, avoid as far as possible changes of subject. The subject of the main verb should, if expressed at all (section 202, b), appear early in the sentence and be made, where possible, the subject of the dependent clauses also.

(d) Latin is very fond of inserting a subordinate clause in the middle of a clause on which it depends, but the loosely joined parenthesis should be carefully avoided.

(e) Even where there is no need for grouping short sentences into a period, it may often be convenient to readjust some of the clauses or phrases in the passage for translation, shifting them from one part of the sentence to another or even transferring them to the preceding or the following sentence. For instance, in the passage: On receiving this news he led his forces against the enemy. His march, though rapid, was so conducted as to save the troops from all fatigue, the translation is simplified by transferring the idea of marching rapidly to the preceding clause: Quae cum audivisset, cōpiās adversus hostēs quam celerrimē dūxit; ita tamen ut milites labōre et itinere nōn defatigātī sint. Similarly, instead of representing one action as the result of some preceding action it may be more convenient to represent the latter as the cause of the former.

205. Some miscellaneous differences of idiom also deserve notice.

(a) English often expresses emphasis by means of the verb to be, generally followed by the relative pronoun or adverb; as, It was I who did it. Piso was the first to reach the camp. Latin has nothing corresponding to this, but expresses emphasis by other means; as, Ego feci. Primus ad castra pervēnit Pīsō.

(b) Latin constantly tends to look upon an action as proceeding from a certain source or quarter, where in English it is considered as happening in that quarter; as, He fought on horseback: They attack our troops on both flanks: Ex equō pugnābat. Nostrōs ab utrōque latere aggrediuntur. (See also section 127, v.)

(c) In Latin demonstrative and relative pronouns (especially hic) referring to some previous noun or the substance of a previous clause are put in agreement with a noun, instead of in the objective genitive depending on it. English has frequently this same condensed form of expression; as, Through fear of this circumstance (or through this fear): Hōc metū (= Hūjus rei metū).

(d) In such expressions as The shrewd Fabius, Your excellent father, So brave a man as you, Latin uses an appositive with the superlative in agreement; as, Fabius callidissimus imperātor, messengers to these kings, whom he orders to attack the naval camp :

reared by a shepherd. When he grew up he was very beautiful, though rather effeminate, and was at last recognized and reinstated in his rights as the king's son.

But before this last event, a very notable thing had happened. At a certain wedding feast, at which most of the gods and goddesses were present, one who had not been invited, the goddess of Discord, avenged the slight by sending a golden apple inscribed "To the Fairest." Three goddesses claimed it, Juno, Minerva and Venus. The decision was referred to Paris, then a shepherd on Mount Ida. To win his verdict, Juno promised him power, Minerva wisdom, and Venus the fairest woman in Greece as his wife. Paris awarded the apple to Venus and not long after went to Greece. There he fell in love with the most beautiful woman of those days, Helen, the wife of Menelaus, king of Sparta. Her beauty had caused many princes to sue for her hand in marriage, and before a choice was made they had all sworn to avenge any wrong that might ever be done to her. So now when Paris induced her to flee with him to Troy, Menelaus had no difficulty in getting a large number of kings with their warriors to assist him in recovering Helen and punishing Paris.

Under the leadership of Agamemnon, brother of Menelaus and king of Mycenae, a fleet of nearly twelve hundred ships gathered at Aulis to set sail against Troy. Here they were long detained by calms or contrary winds sent by the goddess Artemis, whom king Agamemnon had once displeased. The oracles declared that only by sacrificing Iphigenia, the maiden daughter of the king, to Artemis, could the Greeks obtain favoring winds, and reluctantly at length Agamemnon sent for his daughter. Now at last the great host could set sail from Greece. The most famous among the Greeks, besides Agamemnon and Menelaus, were Achilles, the grandest warrior of the age, Ulysses who, while a great warrior, was specially noted for his shrewdness, and Diomedes and Ajax.

For nine long years the siege went on. Many cities in Asia sent forces to Troy to aid Priam, whose best warriors were his son Hector and Aeneas, the latter being the son of Venus and a Trojan prince, Anchises. The Greeks did not surround the city, but encamped on the shore near their ships, and many battles took place on the plain before Troy. In these nine years the Greeks succeeded in driving the Trojans within the walls and in gaining the surrounding towns.

In the tenth year a notable quarrel arose between Agamemnon and Achilles, and for a time, while Achilles held aloof from fighting, the Trojans had the better of it. Emboldened by success they fought their way to the Grecian fleet drawn up on the shore, and had well-nigh set the ships on fire when Patroclus, the bosom friend of Achilles, begged him, if he would not fight himself, at least to lend his armor and his warriors to repel the enemy. Achilles consented, and Patroclus, driving back the Trojans, saved the ships but was himself slain by Hector and stripped of Achilles' armor. Impelled by rage and grief, Achilles now returned to the battle to avenge the death of his friend. At his approach the Trojans, with the one exception of Hector, fled back to their walls; and him Achilles soon slew. Then tying Hector's body by the feet to his chariot he dragged him to the Grecian camp. It was not long, however, before Achilles himself was slain by Paris, and then, in obedience to the oracles, his son Pyrrhus (or Neoptolemus) was brought to the scene of war.

But when nothing seemed to bring them success, the Greeks tried stratagem, and pretended to sail away homewards, leaving a huge wooden horse as an offering to Minerva. This the Trojans drew, rejoicing, within their walls, but within it were concealed many of the bravest Greeks, who issued from the horse by night, seized the gates and, aided by the other Greeks, who had returned in the fleet, took the city and destroyed it.

In this war the gods took part, some, like Juno, Neptune, Pallas and Apollo, favoring the Greeks, others, like Venus and Mars, aiding Troy, though the latter were unable to prevail over the destiny decreed by fate for Priam and his city.

Aeneas escaped from the burning town and with some followers sailed away under the special protection of his mother, Venus, to found a new city. After many disappointments and wonderful adventures he landed in Italy, and from the settlement he planted there grew the great city of Rome, that in Virgil's day had become the mistress of the whole civilized world. The adventures and experiences of Aeneas form the subject of the poem called the Aeneid.

II.—LIFE OF VIRGIL.

Publius Vergilius* Maro was born B.C. 70 at the little village of Andes near Mantua, in the great northern plain of Italy, watered by the river Padus, the modern Po. The people of this country were of Gallic descent and not close kinsmen of the Romans or southern Italians, and it was not till Virgil was twenty-one years of age that they were made full Roman citizens. Virgil's father lived on a small farm, but was able to give his son all the advantages of education to be obtained in those days, perhaps seeing early in his boy some signs of future greatness. Except that Virgil studied in Cremona and Milan and at sixteen was sent to Rome to the best teachers there, we know practically nothing of his youth. This period fell between the two great civil wars of Rome, and from what we know of Virgil's nature, the comparative peace of his boyhood and youth was more congenial to him than the civil wars that raged from his twenty-second to his fortieth year.

* There seems to be no doubt that the correct spelling is Vergilius, and scarcely less doubt that to the English reader the poet will always be Virgil.

IV.—THE AENEID OF VIRGIL.

The Aeneid belongs to the class of poetry called Epic, that is, it is a narrative poem, of an elevated character, describing the exploits of heroes.

The following, condensed from Sellar, gives a general account of Virgil's position and excellence as a poet.

There was before Virgil's time but one Roman Epic, the Annals of Ennius, written two hundred years before, stirring but rugged; about the time when Virgil first came to Rome the poems of Lucretius and Catullus appeared, which were the most artistic in form yet written in Rome. A Roman epic was wanted which would satisfy the national imagination as Ennius did, and also the new sense of art, and the great expansion of national life since Ennius' day. The emperor Augustus was anxious that his exploits should be commemorated by some great poet, and Virgil had long been ambitious to treat the traditions of Alba Longa in heroic verse.

These objects then had to be kept in view—a work of art that could rival the great epics of Homer; a revival of interest in the heroic legends concerning the founding of Rome; the expression of the national feeling of an imperial city; the expression of the deeper feelings and thoughts of his age about the ideals and the problems of life; and the celebration of Augustus. All these Virgil combined by selecting the story of Aeneas, which enabled him to treat of the origin of Rome, to parallel Homer's tales of war and sea-wanderings, and to glorify the family of the Cæsars, the Julii, who boasted of their descent from Iulus the son of Aeneas.

As regards Rome itself, Virgil develops the conception entertained by the Romans themselves, that their city was ordained by Heaven to achieve world-wide dominion. Thus Virgil represents Aeneas as guided continually by the gods until he founds the city, destined by the fates to be the greatest in the world. Aeneas in ancient times and Augustus in his own day are regarded as instruments in the hands of fate, which is a great inscrutable power working out its purposes in the world through the agency of Rome.

With this idea of universal empire is combined a reverence for antiquity, for old customs, for the religious faith of early Italy, and an attachment to all places connected with the history of the nation.

The Aeneid then, as an epic describing the great part Rome played in the history of the world, as determined by the divine decrees, is partly a national and partly a religious epic. It has only a secondary interest as an epic of human action, as a portrayal of manners and character, and it has always been objected to the Aeneid that its central character is a failure—that while Aeneas is blameless, pious, and patient, he is uninteresting, weak, lacking in energy, that he is a passive tool in the hands of fate, not a great hero relying upon his own resources and stirred by ordinary human passions. It may be that Virgil was determined in this largely by his weariness of the civil wars that had been raging so long, and by the desire felt everywhere in his days for the restoration of peace, law, order and piety. This desire was met by Augustus' policy, and in this lay the security of Augustus' position.

Dido stands out as the most life-like and interesting character Virgil has drawn, and even if she does represent to the Roman the hated race of Carthaginians, and even if her desertion by Aeneas calls forth no hint of condemnation from the poet, we cannot but feel that Virgil sympathetically entered into the tragic nature of Dido's story.

Apart from character the main sources of human interest developed in the Aeneid are: the nobility and dignity of the story itself, apart from its connection with the national sentiment; the interest of two romantic legends, the destruction of Troy, and the foundation of Carthage; the scenes familiar, yet full of great memories and associations; the characters prominent in legend, or else representative of some nation; the interweaving of the old and ever new themes of war and sea-adventures, with the passion of love.

Virgil's restoration of the legendary past is not exact in all its details, or sometimes even in its spirit. There is a mixture of primitive simplicity and luxurious pomp, of the fierceness and roughness of an uncultured age and the courtesy, dignity and kindness of more polished times. The most unreal of all his portrayals are the battle scenes of the later books, where the real interest lies generally, not in the stirring events of the combat, but in the pathetic death of some interesting character.

But if objection is taken to Virgil's character-drawing, the highest praise has always been given to the artistic excellence of his work, both in its arrangement and in the working out of details. Virgil (as Tennyson has it) 'could write ten lines, they say, at dawn, and lavish all the golden day to make them wealthier in his reader's eyes.' No poet surpasses him in finished execution, in stateliness and majesty of movement. His poetry shows a varied and continuous harmony, a rich, chastened and noble style nowhere else to be found in Latin.

Sellar regards Virgil as supreme among his countrymen in 'that subtle fusion of the music and the meaning of language which touches the deepest and most secret springs of emotion. He touches especially the emotions of reverence and of a yearning for a higher spiritual life, and the sense of nobleness in human affairs, in great institutions and great natures; the sense of the sanctity of human affections, of the imaginative spell exercised by the past, of the mystery of the unseen world.'

MacKail speaks of 'the majestic sadness, the serene and harmonious cadences, of poetry enriched with all the associations of art and learning, and wrought by patient labor into the most exquisite finish. But what Virgil has in a degree that no other poet has ever equalled is pity; the sense of "tears in things" to which in the most famous of his single verses

V.—THE METRE OF THE AENEID.

The principle upon which rhythm is based in English poetry is a regular succession of accented and unaccented syllables. In Latin, accent has nothing to do with scansion, which depends rather on the regular succession of long and short syllables.

LONG AND SHORT SYLLABLES.

A long syllable is one containing a long vowel, or a diphthong,* or even a short vowel before two consonants, or j, x, or z; e.g. the first syllable in each of the following words is long: primus, aedes, mentis, major, texo, gaza. Even if one of the two consonants be at the beginning of another word this rule holds, e.g. the syllable sub is short in sub ipsa, but long in sub montem. But the rule does not always hold when the two consonants are l or r preceded by some other letter; e.g. the first syllable of patris may be short or long.

A short syllable is one containing a short vowel (except in the cases mentioned in the preceding paragraph), including regularly all cases where a vowel is followed by another vowel or diphthong, e.g. the first syllable in tenet, deus, deae, is short. But genitives in ius have i sometimes short sometimes long, and many proper names, borrowed from the Greek (in which this rule does not hold) have a long vowel before another vowel or diphthong, e.g. the second syllable of Aeneas, Orion.

In scansion h is not considered, so that the first syllable of adhuc is not long, while in mihi the first syllable is short as certainly as if it were spelled mii.

Syllables then may be short or long either by nature or by position.

* The only diphthongs in Latin are ae, au, eu, ei, oe and ui, the two first being far the commonest.

RHYTHM.

Virgil uses in the Aeneid the metre known as Dactylic Hexameter, that is a line containing six dactyls, each dactyl consisting of one long syllable followed by two short syllables. Two irregularities however are to be noticed; first, the last foot has but two syllables (a long and a short, or two long); secondly, in any one, two, three or even four of the first four syllables a dactyl may be replaced by a spondee, that is a foot consisting of two long syllables.

This metre is generally represented thus

— ◡ ◡ | — ◡ ◡ | — ◡ ◡ | — ◡ ◡ | — ◡ ◡ | — —

Thus sixteen different arrangements of the line are possible (apart from the variation in the last foot), viz. one with the first four feet dactyls, four with one spondee in the line, six with two spondees in the line, four with three spondees in the line, and one with four spondees in the first four feet. For examples see the lines indicated on page xxix.

ELISION.

But in a majority of the lines a further difficulty arises. Where the last syllable of a word ends in a vowel, or in m. and the first syllable of the next word begins with a vowel or h, these two syllables are elided or taken together and counted as one. Such a case is called elision.* For example vera inquit, counts as three syllables in scansion, so also tegerem ut, divum humo, curru haeret.

SCANSION.

Probably the best way for beginners to get the scansion of Virgil is as follows: Mark first all cases of elision; then the two last feet, which uniformly consist of the last five syllables, may be marked off; then the quantity of syllables long or short by position, as determined by the preceding rules, can be marked; after which the first four feet can, in a large majority of cases, be easily settled. Finally (and this is all-important, if the student is ever to get beyond this rule of thumb and catch the rhythm of Virgil), the line when scanned should be read over according to the division made.

* Elision is usually marked thus: ver(a) inquit or vera~inquit.

CAESURA.

When a word ends within a foot, a caesura is said to occur, and in the dactylic hexameter, the caesura or caesural pause, when it coincides with a pause in the sense, constitutes much of the charm of the rhythm, the line thus falling into two unequal parts.

The favorite caesural pause occurs in the third foot, but sometimes it comes in the fourth foot, in which case there is often another pause in the second foot, the line thus being divided into three parts.

The pause is far more often after the long syllable of a dactylic foot than after the first short syllable.*

SPECIAL FEATURES AND IRREGULARITIES.

Because of the variety of rhythm possible, this metre affords great possibilities of imitative harmony; excited, or rapid action being often expressed in a line where dactyls abound, and solemn or gloomy ideas, stately or majestic movements, and slow or difficult actions brought out by a line abounding in spondees. It should be noticed, however, that the Latin language is naturally more spondaic than dactylic in its ordinary movement (stately and sonorous rather than lively), and a succession of spondees does not seem to be always

* The caesura is usually marked thus ||, and the following will show the completed scansion of a line, with the length of syllables, elisions, feet and caesura indicated:

 vestr(um) hoc | auguri | um || ves | troqu(e) in | numine | Troj(a) est

 Magna pererrato statues quae denique ponto.' 295
 Sic ait, et manibus vittas Vestamque potentem Aeternumque adytis effert penetralibus ignem.
 Diverso interea miscentur moenia luctu;
 Et magis atque magis (quamquam secreta parentis Anchisae domus, arboribusque obtecta recessit) 300
 Claescent sonitus, armorumque ingruit horror.
 Excitior somno, et summi fastigia tecti
 Ascensu supero, atque arrectis auribus asto.
 In segetem veluti cum flamma furentibus Austris
 Incidit; aut rapidus montano flumine torrens 305

Quo fremitus vocat, et sublatus ad aethera clamor.
 Addunt se socios Rhipeus et maximus armis
 Epytus, oblatus per lunam, Hypanisque, Dymasque, 340
 Et lateri agglomerant nostro, juvenisque Coroebus Mygdonides. Illis ad Trojam forte diebus Venerat, insano Cassandrae incensus amore, Et gener auxilium Priamo Phrygibusque ferebat :
 Infelix, qui non sponsae praecepta furentis 345 Audierit.

Quos ubi confertos audere in proelia vidi,
 Incipio super his : ‘ Juvenes, fortissima frustra
 Pectora, si vobis audentem extrema cupido Certa sequi, quae sit rebus fortuna videtis ; 350
 Excessere omnes adytis arisque relictis .

Di, quibus imperium hoc steterat : succurritis urbi Incensae : moriamur, et in media arma ruamus.
 Una salus victis, nullam sperare salutem.’
 Sic animis juvenum furor additus. Inde—lupi ceu 355
 Raptores, atra in nebula, quos improba ventris
 Exegit caecos rabies, catulique relictis
 Faucibus expectant siccis—per tela, per hostes
 Vadimus haud dubiam in mortem, mediaeque tenemus Urbis iter. Nox atra cava circumvolat umbra. 360

Quis cladem illius noctis, quis funera fando Explicet, aut possit lacrimis aequare labores ?
 Urbs antiqua ruit, multos dominata per annos ;
 Plurima perque vias sternuntur inertia passim
 Corpora, perque domos, et religiosa deorum 365
 Limina. Nec soli poenas dant sanguine Teucri :
 Quondam etiam victis redit in praecordia virtus, Victoresque cadunt Danaï. Crudelis ubique Luctus, ubique pavor, et plurima mortis imago.

Primus se, Danaum magna comitante caterva, 370
 Androgeos offert nobis, socia agmina credens
 Inscius, atque ultro verbis compellat amicis :
 ‘Festinate, viri ; nam quae tam sera moratur Segnities ? Alii rapiunt incensa feruntque Pergama : vos celsis nunc primum a navibus itis ?’ 375
 Dixit : et extemplo (neque enim responsa dabantur Fida satis) sensit medios delapsus in hostes.
 Obstipuit, retroque pedem cum voce repressit.
 Improvisum aspris veluti qui sentibus anguem
 Pressit humi nitens, trepidusque repente refugit 380
 Attollentem iras, et caerula colla tumentem ;
 Haud secus Androgeos visu tremefactus abibat.
 Irruimus, densis et circumfundimur armis ;
 Ignarosque loci passim et formidine captos
 Sternimus ; aspirat primo fortuna labori. 385
 Atque hic successu exsultans animisque Coroebus :
 ‘O socii, qua prima,’ inquit, ‘fortuna salutis Monstrat iter, quaque ostendit se dextra, sequamur.
 Mutemus clipeos, Danaumque insignia nobis
 Aptemus : dolus an virtus, quis in hoste requirat ? 390
 Arma dabunt ipsi.’ Sic fatus, deinde comantem Androgei galeam clipeique insigne decorum Induitur, laterique Argivum accommodat ensem.
 Hoc Rhipeus, hoc ipse Dymas, omnisque juvenus
 Laeta facit : spoliis se quisque recentibus armat. 395
 Vadimus immixti Danais, haud numine nostro ;
 Multaque per caecam congressi proelia noctem Conserimus, multos Danaum demittimus Orco.
 Diffugiunt alii ad naves, et litora cursu
 Fida petunt : pars ingentem formidine turpi 400
 Scandunt rursus equum, et nota conduntur in alvo.

Heu, nihil invitis fas quemquam fidere Divis !
 Ecce trahebatur passis Priameia virgo Crinibus a templo Cassandra adytisque Minervae, Ad caelum tendens ardentia lumina frustra : 405
 Lumina, nam teneras arcebant vincula palmas.
 Non tulit hanc speciem furiata mente Coroebus, Et sese medium iniecit periturus in agmen.
 Consequimur cuncti, et densis incurrimus armis.
 Hic primum ex alto delubri culmine telis 410
 Nostrorum obruimur, oriturque miserrima caedes, Armorum facie, et Graiarum errore jubarum.
 Tum Danaï gemitu atque ereptae virginis ira Undique collecti invadunt, acerrimus Ajax, Et gemini Atridae, Dolopumque exercitus omnis. 415
 Adversi rupto ceu quondam turbine venti
 Confligunt, Zephyrusque Notusque et laetus Eois
 Eurus equis : stridunt silvae, saevitque tridenti
 Spumeus atque imo Nereus ciet aequora fundo.
 Illi etiam, si quos obscura nocte per umbram 420
 Fudimus insidiis, totaque agitavimus urbe, Apparent : primi clipeos mentitaque tela
 Agnoscunt, atque ora sono discordia signant.
 Ilicet obruimur numero: primusque Coroebus Peneleï dextra Divae armipotentis ad aram 425
 Procumbit : cadit et Rhipeus, justissimus unus
 Qui fuit in Teucris, et servantissimus aequi ;
 Dis aliter visum. Pereunt Hypanisque Dymasque Confixi a sociis ; nec te tua plurima, Panthu, Labentem pietas, nec Apollinis infula texit. 430
 Iliaci cineres et flamma extrema meorum, Testor in occasu vestro nec tela nec ullas
 Vitavisse vices Danaum, et, si fata fuissent,

Cum sonitu trahit, et Danaum super agmina late Incidit. Ast alii subeunt; nec saxa nec ullum Telorum interea cessat genus.

Vestibulum ante ipsum primoque in limine Pyrrhus
 Exultat, telis et luce coruscus aëna; 470

Qualis ubi in lucem coluber, mala gramina pastus, Frigida sub terra tumidum quem bruma tegebat,
 Nunc positis novus exuviis nitidusque juvena,
 Lubrica convolvit sublato pectore terga,
 Arduus ad solem, et linguis micat ore trisulcis. 475

Una ingens Periphas, et equorum agitator Achillis Armiger Automedon, una omnis Scyria pubes Succedunt tecto, et flammæ ad culmina jactant.
 Ipse inter primos correpta dura bipenni
 Limina perumpit, postesque a cardine vellit 480

Aeratos; jamque excisa trabe firma cavavit Robora, et ingentem lato dedit ore fenestram.
 Apparet domus intus, et atria longa patescunt;
 Apparent Priami et veterum penetralia regum, Armatosque vident stantes in limine primo. 485

At domus interior gemitu miseroque tumultu
 Miscetur, penitusque cavæ plangoribus aedes Femineis ululant: ferit aurea sidera clamor.
 Tum pavidæ tectis matres ingentibus errant, Amplexæque tenent postes, atque oscula figunt. 490

Instat vi patria Pyrrhus: nec claustra neque ipsi
 Custodes sufferre valent: labat ariete crebro Janua, et emoti procumbunt cardine postes.
 Fit via vi: rumpunt aditus, primosque trucidant
 Immissi Danai, et late loca milite complent. 495

Non sic, aggeribus ruptis cum spumeus amnis
 Exiit oppositasque evicit gurgite moles,

Fertur in arva furens cumulo, camposque per omnes Cum stabulis armenta trahit. Vidi ipse furentem Caede Neoptoleum geminosque in limine Atridas: 500
Vidi Hecubam centumque nurus Priamumque per aras Sanguine foedantem, quos ipse sacraverat, ignes.
Quinquaginta illi thalami, spes tanta nepotum,
Barbarico postes auro spoliisque superbi, Procubuere : tenent Danai, qua deficit ignis. 505

“ O lamentable fall of famous towne,
Which raignd so many years victorious,
And of all Asie bore the soveraine crowne,
In one sad night consumd and throwen downe!
What stony hart, that heares thy haplesse fate,
Is not empierst with deep compassiowne,
And makes ensample of man’s wretched state,
That flowers so fresh at morne, and fades at evening late!”

for orsus est (from ordior). In prose esse is frequently omitted, especially in compound tenses; in poetry, est and sunt also (4, g).

3. Infandum: with predicative force; 'unutterable is the woe you bid me recall,' not 'you bid me recall an unutterable woe.' The subject accusative of the infin. with jubeo is often to be supplied from the context.

4. Trojanas: in sense belongs to regnum also. ut: 'how.' lamentabile: anticipates the effect of eruerint.

5. eruerint: subjunctive depending on the notion of telling, virtually implied in renovare dolorem (35; 191). quaeque: two words; -que = 'both,' better omitted in trans. Quae and quorum (l. 6) are relative not interrog. pronouns, hence the change of mood. The relative sentences are in loose apposition to the previous lines, whose meaning they extend; 'woes (lit. things) which are the most sorrowful I (ever) saw.' miserrima: emphatic, and placed in the relative sentence (173, c, iii.).

6. et quorum, etc.; 'and in which I bore no small part.' taliam: 'such a tale.' fando: 'in telling' (103).

7. Myrmidonum Dolopumve: with quis, which is also to be taken (adjectively) with miles. These tribes are chosen because their leader, Achilles, was the fiercest, as well as the most famous, of the Greeks. ve, aut: the former being used to couple Myrmidonum and Dolopum, which are the most closely related. Ulixi: Greek proper names in -es of the third declension have the genitive in both -is and -i.

8. temperet: 'could refrain.' (136, d.) et: 'also,' 'too.' humida: 'dewy,' it being near dawn. caelo: in poetry the preposition is often omitted in phrases of motion from.

9. praecipitat: Night, like the sun, was regarded as rising out of the ocean, traversing the sky, and then sinking beneath the western waves. cadentia: another indication of the lateness of the hour. somnos: Latin often, especially in poetry, uses the plural where English would have the singular.

10. amor : supply est ; cf. on l. 2. cognoscere : the infin. is used more freely in poetry than in prose, which here would have cognoscendi. (22, viii.) So audire in l. 11.

11. supremum : of time, not of degree.

12. meminisse : see 138, ii. ; 22, viii. refugit : the quantity (refūgit) shows that this is the perfect ; lit. 'has shrunk back,' freely 'recoils.' The act of recoiling is finished, hence the perfect in Latin ; English prefers the present, expressing the state of mind. luctu : 'in grief' (96).

13-20. The Greeks pretend to make preparations for departing and build a wooden horse, which is filled with warriors.

13. fatis : it was decreed by fate that Troy should not be taken for ten years.

14. Danaum : for Danaorum. In Virgil many nouns of the first or second declension have -um in the gen. plur. labentibus : abl. absolute ; 'were gliding by' ; picturesque for lapsis.

15. instar : an indeclinable noun, in apposition with equum, and taking the possessive genitive ; 'huge as a mountain,' 'of mountainous bulk.' Palladis : the gods took sides in the Trojan war, favoring and actively aiding, some the Greeks, others the Trojans.

16. aedificant : expressive of the size of the structure ; secta abiete : 'with sawn fir,' 'with planks of fir.'

17. pro reditu : 'for their return,' i.e., to ensure a favorable voyage, and perhaps as a thank-offering for getting safely away. ea : see 205, c.

18. huc : 'herein,' 'in this,' lit. 'hereinto,' 'to this,' motion towards being implied in includunt. caeco lateri : explains huc more fully. For the dative (here to be translated by 'in'), see 78, v., c. virum : for virorum ; see on Danaum, l. 14. corpora virum : a periphrasis seemingly expressive of the care taken to get the most stalwart men ; notice also the repetition of the idea of selection ; 'men of stalwart frame whom they have chosen.'

19. penitus : also suggests the immense size of the horse.

20. uterumque : -que here, as often, is used to give an explanation, not an additional detail. milite : 'soldiery' ; the sing. is used collectively.

21-39. After the Greeks have gone, the Trojans' hasten to their camp and find the wooden horse, but are undecided what to do with it.

21. Est : 'there is.' notissima : 'well-known' ; nom. case. fama : 'in fame,' 'in reputation' ; abl. case.

22. dives opum : 'rich of store,' 'rich in resources' (90, iii.). regna : see on somnos, l. 9. manebant : for the tense see 154.

23. tantum : an adverb. male fida : 'treacherous, untrustworthy' ; male negatives words denoting good qualities.

24. se : with condunt ; unnecessary in English (203, f, i.).

25. abiisse : from abeo ; its subject eos is not expressed ; for the forms abiisse and petiisse see page 67, fn. rati : for rati sumus (an unusual ellipsis), from reor. Mycenas : the city of the leader of the Greeks stands for Greece as a whole.

26. longo : intensifying the feeling of relief. luctu : see 93.

27. Dorica : 'Doric,' i.e., 'Grecian' ; Virgil uses the names of different prominent Greek tribes for the Greeks in general. The Dorians really became prominent only after the Trojan war.

28. locos : 'stations' ; prose Latin would have used loca. litusque : -que explanatory ; see on l. 20.

29. hic : an adverb in this line and the next, which represent the comments of the Trojans. Notice the corresponding shift of tense from the historic present. manus : subject of tendebat. tendebat : 'encamped.' The full phrase would be tentoria tendebat, 'stretched his tents.' According to Homer, huts not tents were used by the Greeks before Troy.

30. classibus : plur. of the different detachments. hic locus : supply erat.

31. pars : freely 'some.' stupet donum : see 69, ii. exitiale : as was afterwards found, not as was suspected at the time. Minervae : objective genitive ; translate 'to Minerva.'

43. avectos : sc. esse.

44. Danaum : with dona. sic notus : sc. est.

45. ligno : see on arce, l. 33. Achivi : see on Dorica, l. 27.

46. in : 'against,' of hostile intent.

47. inspectura, ventura : fut. part. denoting purpose (122); translate 'to look down,' etc. urbi : 'on the city,' see on pelago, l. 36. Virgil has in his mind the towers used by the Romans in sieges.

48. ne credite : 'do not trust.' (133, i. c.)

49. quidquid : from quisquis. et ferentes : 'even when bearing.'

50. validis ingentem : gain force from being placed close together.

51. curvam compagibus : 'with its curved frame-work,' lit. 'curved with its frame-work (or joints)'; abl. of manner or means. inque . . . alvum : is an emphatic extension of in latus. Note the gender of alvus.

52. illa : as is common in Latin, marks the change of subject. (160, i.) utero recusso : 'with the jarring (or re-echoing) of the womb'; an abl. absol.

53. cavae : belongs to the predicate; 'sounded hollow.' insonuere, dedere; see on l. 1.

54. deum : see on Danaum, l. 14. si fata deum : is incomplete. Supply non laeva fuissent, making laeva mean 'unpropitious' with fata, and 'infatuated' with mens. [Others supply non fuissent, 'if it had not been the will of the gods.'] fuisset : see 61.

55. impulerat : more vivid than the regular impulisset (64, i. fn.); he had done his part to urge them. The regular construction is resumed in the subjunctives of l. 56.

56. maneres : 'wouldst (still) remain (or abide).' The change to the second person marks Aeneas' deep emotion. alta : in contrast with its present downfall. For the tense see 61.

57-76. A Greek is brought in, who had allowed himself to be taken in order to deceive the Trojans.

57. manus revinctum : 'with his hands bound,' more lit. 'having his hands bound.' (69, vii.)

59. Dardanidae : masc. gender though of the first declension, as are many words borrowed from the Greek. qui : subject of obtulerat, l. 61. ultra : with obtulerat, not with venientibus, for which latter see 205, g.

60. hoc ipsum : explained by Trojamque aperiret Achivis ; see on -que, l. 28. Others make hoc ipsum refer to his being brought before the king.

61. animi : 'in heart,' 'of soul' ; really a locative (127, vi.). in utrumque : 'for either fate' ; explained by the infinitives of the next line (109).

62. versare dolos : much trickery might be needed to induce the Trojans first to spare him, then to introduce the horse into the city ; hence the frequentative verb (p. 76, fn.) and the plural noun. certae : 'certain,' if his trickery did not succeed, for he was a Greek. morti : see 78, v. c.

63. visendi studio : 'in their eagerness to see.'

64. ruit certantque : the sing. ruit, because they rush as one mass, the plural certant, because they are regarded as acting individually. illudere : 'in jeering at' (22, viii.). capto : see 78, v. c.

65. Accipe nunc : Dido had said 'a prima dic, hospes, origine nobis insidias Danaum,' 'tell us, O guest, from the beginning the treachery of the Greeks.' crimine ab uno : with much the same force as if it were ab crimine unius.

66. omnes : crimina must not be understood ; it is masc. and refers to the Greeks. For the broken line see page 335.

67. ut : 'as' (152, b). conspectu in medio : 'in the midst of our gaze.' (86, iv. b.)

68. agmina : suggesting a contrast with inermis of l. 67. circumspexit : for the spondaic ending see page 335. It seems to be used here purposely for graphic effect.

70. jam denique : 'now at last,' 'finally now.' nunc of l. 69 = 'at this present moment.'

71. cui: supply est, 'for whom there is,' or 'who have' (80, e).
super: adverb, 'besides.' ipsi: they might have been expected to welcome a deserter (for he had given himself up voluntarily).

72. poenas cum sanguine: 'punishment along with my blood,' 'the forfeit of my life'; in fact, his death was itself to be the punishment, not something additional.

73. quo: 'at this'; the coordinating use of the relative (172).
conversi, compressus: sc. sunt and est. et: notice the unusual position.

74. fari: see on l. 33. sanguine: see 95. cretus: sc. sit (subj. of indirect question).

75. quidve ferat: 'or what (news) he brings.' memoret: 'to tell us;' the subj. representing the imperative of the actual words (186, 1, c). quae sit fiducia capto: 'what ground of confidence he has, now that he is a captive,' lit. 'what ground of confidence there is to (him) a captive.' He had voluntarily given himself up (l. 59), and had just spoken as though the Trojans might have been expected to shelter him (l. 71, 72); he is now asked on what hope of being spared he had been depending.

76. ille: see on illa, l. 52. haec: 'thus.' This line is not considered genuine, one reason being that it is inconsistent with l. 107.

77-104. To win their sympathy, he tells how he is a victim of Ulysses' hate.

77. equidem: to strengthen the assertion; notice too that cuncta is made emphatic by its position. fuerit quodcumque: 'happen what may,' 'come what will,' fut. perf. indic.

78. vera: 'truly, truthfully,' literally 'true,' predicative with cuncta. me: supply esse.

79. hoc primum: sc. fateor. miserum: see 69, v.

80. improba: emphatic, 'with all her malice,' 'malicious (or wanton) though she be,' not to be taken with the clause si miserum . . . finxit.

88. dum stabat : 'so long as he remained'; for the tense cf. l. 22. regno : local abl.; so consiliis, l. 89. regum : the princes or leaders of contingents banded against Troy.

89. et nos : 'we also'; nos really refers to the narrator only (157, ii.). nomenque : -que is 'both,' but is better omitted in trans.

90. invidia : the abl. case. pellacis : suggests the means by which Ulysses brought about his death; see on l. 82.

91. haud ignota : 'what is well known'; litotes. superis concessit ab oris : a euphemism for 'he met his death.'

93. mecum : 'alone,' 'by myself.' insontis : gives the reason for the indignation.

94. nec tacui : referring to the previous line and implying 'nor was I contented with giving vent by myself to my indignation.' Notice the change of tense from trahebam and indignabar to tacui. demens : 'in my madness,' 'fool that I was.' me : with promisi, l. 96. tulisset : cf. sic fata ferebant, l. 34; trans. by 'should' or by Eng. past. For the mood and tense see 187, b, i.

95. remeassem : for remeavissem; see page 67, fn.

96. promisi me ultorem : 'I vowed I would avenge him,' 'I vowed myself his avenger.' odia : for the plur. see on l. 9.

97. hinc : supply erat; 'from this (came).'

98. terrere : the historical infinitive, translated as though it were the indicative (112.) So spargere and quaerere.

99. vulgum : usually vulgus is neuter, here masc. for metrical convenience. in : 'among.' consciis : 'conscious of guilt,' or, according to some, 'confederate (conspiring) with others.' quaerere arma : in order to prevent his own accusation and punishment.

100. nec enim : 'and indeed. . . not,' referring back in thought to prima labe, l. 97. Calchante ministro : 'with Calchas as his accomplice (tool),' the abl. absol. (49.)

101. Sinon artfully breaks off just when he has roused their interest and curiosity. sed autem : 'but yet,' a colloquial usage. quid : 'why?'

102. moror : transitive ; supply ' vos ' as object. uno ordine habetis : local ablative ; ' regard as of one class,' ' regard as alike.'

103. id : viz. that I am a Greek ; see l. 78. jamdudum : ' at once,' lit. ' long since,' implying that it should have been done before this.

104. velit : ' would wish ' (136, c) ; so mercentur. magno : ' at a great price ' (100). Atridae : i.e., Agamemnon and Menelaus ; for the form cf. on l. 82.

105-144. Having roused the interest of the Trojans, Sinon tells how, being condemned to death, he has escaped from the Greeks, and appeals to Priam for pity and mercy.

105. vero : emphasizing tum ; Sinon's plan of rousing his hearers' curiosity has succeeded. scitari : see 22, viii.

106. tantorum : ' so great,' as those of Sinon.

107. ficto pectore : ' with false heart.'

108. relicta : abl. absol. ; trans. by infin. coordinate with moliri.

109. longo fessi : the juxtaposition lends force to the words.

110. fecissentque utinam! ' would that they had!' a parenthetic wish (135). saepe : ' (but as) often,' echoing saepe of l. 108.

111. euntes : ' as they were (just) departing.'

112. acernis : Virgil speaks of different woods in connection with the timbers of the horse, cf. l. 16, l. 185 and l. 258. The particular kind of wood is unimportant, the idea of ' wooden' being chiefly aimed at.

113. toto aethere : place where, ' throughout.' See on l. 33 ; the omission of the prep. is very common with totus in prose also.

114. scitantem : here practically equal to the future part., ' to consult.' [Some editors read scitatum, the supine.] oracula Phoebi : the oracle of Phoebus or Apollo at Delphi was, in post-Homeric times, the most famous and influential in Greece.

115. adytis : see on l. 33.

116. sanguine et virgine : practically the same as sanguine virginis ; a case of hendiadys (see on l. 319). For the sacrifice of Iphigenia, see page 324. placastis : = placavistis (page 67, fn.).

117. quaerendi : sc. sunt ; so with litandum, est. Trans. by the active voice, 'you must,' etc. ; for litandum, see 57 and 203, d.

119. quae vox ut : 'when this utterance' (172).

121. parent, poscat : subj. of indirect question after the idea of wondering implied in the fear of l. 120. We may supply 'as they wondered (or asked),' or 'in doubt.' fata : probably the subject of parent ; what they are making ready is too dreadful to be made definite. •

122. hic : 'hereupon.' magno tumultu : to hide the fact that it was all arranged beforehand with Calchas. Calchanta : words of the third declension borrowed from the Greek have often the accus. sing. in -a.

123. quae sint ea numina divum : 'what is the will of heaven,' 'what mean those revelations of the gods.' Ulysses cautiously avoids asking explicitly 'who is the man?'

125. taciti : 'in silence,' referring to other persons than those who canebant scelus. English would use 'or,' not 'and,' in such a case. ventura : 'what was to come' (205, g).

126. bis quinos : the distributive numerals are used in multiplication. tectus : either 'hidden (in his tent)' or 'hiding his thoughts.'

128. vix tandem : this delay also was to avoid suspicion of collusion with Ulysses.

129. rumpit vocem : 'he breaks forth,' 'he breaks into speech.'

130. quae : 'what.' sibi : see 79.

131. unius : in an emphatic position. conversa tulere : 'they endured when turned' ; conversa with ea, the unexpressed antecedent of quae.

132. dies : see on Caesar, B. G. IV., 36, 2. parari : historical inf. ; cf. l. 98.

133. salsae fruges : a sacrificial cake of coarse meal and salt was crumbled and sprinkled over the victim's head. vittae : white fillets or bands were bound round the heads both of the victims and of those sacrificing. As usual, Virgil refers to Roman, not to Greek, customs.

148. amissos hinc obliviscere: 'henceforth give up and forget' (50, iii.); obliviscor regularly takes the gen. of persons (53, a).

149. mihique, etc: freely, 'explain this truthfully that I ask.'

150. quo: 'for what purpose,' lit. 'whither,' 'to what end.'
hanc: trans. as if hujus. quis auctor: sc. est.; 'on whose advice?'

151. religio: 'vow,' 'propitiation'; see l. 17.

154. vos: object of testor. ignes: i.e., the sun, moon, and stars. non violabile: 'inviolable,' i.e., which may not be sworn falsely by with impunity.

156. deum: = deorum; cf. on l. 14. The fillets were sacred to the god in honor of whom the offering was made. hostia: 'as a victim'; hence this was an oath especially sacred to him.

157. fas: sc. est. sacrata jura: 'the vows I have sworn to,' 'my solemn oaths'; Virgil has in mind probably the sacramentum or oath of allegiance of the Roman soldier. Sinon is thus to be no longer a Greek soldier, a friend or confidant of the Greeks, or a citizen of Greece.

158. odisse: a defective verb, used in the perfect system with the meaning of the present. viros: 'them,' emphatic; the men themselves are contrasted with their plans.

159. qua: neut. plur. acc. of indefinite pron. quis; si qua freely 'whatever.' nec ullis: = nullis. patriae: gen.; 'of country.'

160. tu: i.e., Troja. maneas, serves: trans. by the imperative (134, i.); promissis manere = to abide by promises; local ablative. servata: 'when saved.'

161. si: 'as surely as'; lit. 'if.' feram: fut. indic. (62.)
magna: acc. plur. (72); trans. freely, 'greatly.'

162-194. The horse, he states, is a substitute for the Palladium stolen from Troy, but is purposely made too huge to enter the city, lest the Trojans be benefited by its protection.

162. coepti belli fiducia; 'their confidence in beginning the war' or 'the confidence in which the war began.' coepti: lit. 'begun.'

163. auxiliis : 'in the aid' ; local or instrumental abl. ex quo : supply tempore ; 'from the time when,' 'after.' impius : a constant epithet, but used with special reference to this act of sacrilege, so scelerum inventor.

164. sed enim : unusually late in the sentence ; sed implies that this hope had come to an end ; enim gives the reason why. Trans. simply 'but.'

165. fatale . . Palladium : the Palladium was a small statue of Pallas which had fallen from heaven in the early days of Troy. So long as the Trojans kept it safe, their city was secure, hence fatale, 'fateful.' avellere : with aggressi ; see 22, viii.

166. summae : increasing our appreciation of their daring.

168. virgineas : indicating what an insult and desecration their touch was. ausi : sc. sunt ; so with fractae, l. 170.

169. ex illo : referring to ex quo, l. 163. fluere, etc. : the figure seems to be that of an ebbing tide. For the historical infin. cf. on l. 98.

170. mens : on the monosyllabic ending see page 335. aversa : sc. est ; so with positum, l. 172.

171. ea signa : 'signs of this,' lit. 'those signs.' (205, c.)

172. arsere : English would insert 'when' before this clause.

173. arrectis : 'staring,' lit. 'upraised,' out of indignation. salsus : merely a constant epithet of sudor. per : 'over.'

174. ipsa : 'she (i.e., the goddess) herself,' as distinguished from the local indications of her anger just mentioned. mirabile : appositive adj. (acc.) modifying the sentence. dictu : 'to tell.' (117).

175. ferens : 'with,' lit. 'bearing.' trementem : i.e., in her wrath.

176. tentanda : sc. esse.

178. omina ni repetant : 'unless they seek fresh omens,' referring to the Roman custom of returning to Rome to repeat the auspices in case of ill-success ; for the mood (representing an original fut. ind.) see 187, b. numen reducant quod avexere : two interpretations are given, (1) to bring back the deity (i.e., the Palladium) they had carried away (to Greece); (2) to bring back the divine favor which (when they first came) they bore with them (from Greece). The first forces the meaning of numen, while it is unlikely if not impossible that the Palladium should have been already sent to Greece. The second makes both the mood and the tense of avexere hard to account for, as the indicative avexere cannot be a part of Calchas' prophecy, but is a parenthetical statement of Sinon's. (175, i.) It is possible that l. 179 is an interpolation. Argis: see on l. 193.

180. quod petiere: 'as to their making for' (198, d). My-cenas: see on l. 25.

181. arma: here with the force of armatos. parant: the principal verb; 'securing gods to attend them,' means 'winning the favor of the gods again.' remenso: with passive force, although deponent.

182. improvisi: see 205, h.

183. pro: lit. 'in behalf of,' i.e., 'in place of' the Palladium, and 'in propitiation of' the offended deity.

184. triste: of its results. quae piaret: trans. by infin. (26).

185. tamen: implies that although a substitute was to be built, it was not to be taken into the city where the Palladium had been. immensam: has special emphasis.

186. caelo: see on l. 36.

187. portis: 'by (or at) the gates' (99, ii. a). aut: couples two similar ideas; neu, l. 188, introduces a new thought (28, ii.). in: 'within.'

188. religione: 'faith,' 'worship,' 'sanctity.' Sinon means that the substitute for the Palladium, if received within the city and honored by the Trojans, would protect them as the Palladium itself had.

189. violasset: for the form see p. 67, fn.; for the mood and tense see on tulisset, l. 94. Sinon is now quoting Calchas' prophecy; the idea of saying is involved in jussit, l. 186 (191). Minervae: see on l. 31.

209. fit: 'rises'; the nature of the sound is indicated by the repetition of s. salō: abl. absolute. tenebant: 'they were gaining.'

210. ardentes: acc. case. oculos suffecti: 'their eyes suffused with blood and fire,' more freely, 'with eyes blood-shot and blazing with fire.' For the accusative oculos, see on l. 57.

211. ora: accusative.

212. visu: abl. of cause (96). agmine: suggesting the movement of a long column.

213. Laocoonta: see on l. 122.

215. morsu depascitur: 'biting, feeds upon'; as though the abl. of manner were a present participle. miseros: a transferred epithet.

216. post: an adverb. auxilio: 'to their aid'; dative (81).

218. bis: probably once each. medium: 'about the waist'; masc. with Laocoonta (86, iv. b). collo circum terga dati: 'encircling his neck with their bodies'; more literally, 'twining their bodies about his neck.' collo: dative (78, v. c). circum dati: = circumdati, a middle use (69, vii.).

219. capite: referring to both; the plural could not occur in this metre; for the case see 101. altis: having much the force of an adverb with superant.

220. simul: corresponding to simul, l. 222.

221. perfusus vittas: see on l. 57 and compare l. 210. The priestly office of Laocoon¹ is no protection.

¹A cut of the celebrated Laocoon group by the Rhodian sculptors Agesander, Polydorus and Athenodorus, is given on page 353. Virgil's description should be compared with the sculptural treatment of the same subject.

"Now that we know the group of Laocoön to have been made some fifty years before Virgil's description of the same subject was written, our comparison of the literary and the sculptural treatment of the same theme is freed from a good deal of vain speculation. The group cannot be intended as an illustration of Virgil's description; and although both are doubtless derived from a common tradition, what we know of Virgil's method in other cases will warn us against assuming any very close imitation of the original from which he copied, especially in the pictorial 223. quales mugitus cum : 'such bellowings as when,' for tales mugitus tollit quales tollit taurus. [Another reading is qualis mugitus, sc. est.] fugit : perfect (182, c).

224. securim : accusative ; see note on Caesar, B. G. V., 18, 1.

225. lapsu : 'gliding' ; cf. on l. 215. summa : the shrine was on the citadel ; cf. l. 41.

227. sub pedibus : 'at the feet.' deae : evidently the Palladium was not the only statue of the goddess in the citadel. teguntur : 'find shelter' (164, iv.).

228. tum vero : cf. on l. 105. novus : 'new' [or according to some, 'strange']. In l. 212 the Trojans' fear is at the dreadful appearance of the serpents, now their fear is caused by the thought that the serpents are the instruments of the goddess. cunctis : dative, freely 'of all' (80, b, i.).

229. merentem : 'deservedly,' 'duly' (205, h).

230. ferunt : 'they say,' 'men say,' the subject being indefinite.

231. qui . . . laeserit : 'for having struck,' 'in that he pierced' ; for the subj. see 171. tergo : dative, trans. by 'at.'

232. ducendum : sc. esse.

233. numina : for the plur. see on l. 9. For the broken line cf. l. 66.

realization of the scene which must have been in his mind. On the other hand, the description of Virgil does not appear to be derived directly from the group made by Agesander and his colleagues. It is by the succession of the narrative, as Lessing points out, that the poet attains his effect, not by an elaborate description of the pose of his subjects at any dramatic moment. The awful approach of the serpents across the sea, their first attack on the two children, and their turning to Laocöon himself, when he rushes to the aid of his sons, cannot find any expression in sculpture, though on these things the pathos and terror of the poetical description mainly depend. But when we turn to the group itself, we cannot help feeling that the object of the sculptor was not so much to express in marble the story of Laocöon as to make use of the theme as a pretext for a group of figures struggling in the agony of a cruel death."

234-249. Believing this portent to indicate the goddess' will, we draw the horse within the walls with blind rejoicings.

234. dividimus : the gates of ancient cities were narrow and low, so that the Trojans had to make a breach in the walls. muros, moenia : the former 'the walls,' the latter more general, 'the fortifications,' 'the fortified parts.'

235. accingunt ; usually transitive, here 'gird themselves,' 'set to,' as if se were added.

236. rotarum lapsus : an abstract expression for 'gliding wheels.' collo intendunt : 'stretch on (i.e., fasten to) its neck.' For the datives pedibus and collo see 78, v. c.

239. contingere : here 'to lay hold of' ; see 22, viii.

240. illa : i.e., machina. urbi : with illabitur (78, v. c, and vii.).

241. This outburst is natural and effective at such a crisis. divum ; see on Danaum, l. 14. divum domus : 'home of our gods' ; to the ancients the gods of a city were local, rather than all-powerful, deities ; Aeneas was now seeking a new home for the gods of his city, who were homeless like himself.

242. Dardanidum : for Dardanidarum ; see on l. 14.

243. substitit : such a stoppage was ominous, according to ancient superstition. utero : 'from' not 'in.' dedere : see on l. 1.

244. immemores : here 'heedless' rather than 'forgetful.'

245. arce : see on l. 33.

246. etiam : 'too,' i.e., in addition to the warnings just mentioned. fatis : either dat. 'for,' i.e., to give utterance to, or abl. of manner 'with.' Cassandra : gifted with prophetic power by the god Apollo, who loved her. His love being unrequited, he ordained that her prophecies should never be believed.

247. credita : may be taken equally well with Cassandra or ora. The passive participle is irregularly used as if credo were transitive (57). Teucris : 'by the Trojans' ; dat. not abl. (80, d, i.).

248. deum : see on l. 14. quibus esset : the subjunctive may be explained in two ways, (a) as causal, explaining miseri, 'in that this was our last day,' (b) as concessive, opposed to fasta velamus fronde, 'although that was our last day' (171).

268-297. The spirit of Hector appears in a vision to Aeneas, tells him that Troy is doomed, and bids him flee, taking with him the gods of Troy, and seek a new home.

268. prima : the first sleep is the deepest, hence the sweetest (gratissima). mortalibus aegris : Virgil has always a deep sense of the mystery and sadness of human life, which is here brought into relation with the graciousness of the gods. The phrase also heightens our sympathy for the Trojans.

269. dono : ablative (103).

270. maestissimus : 'in the deepest grief' ; used appositively. It is rarely, even in poetry, that Latin joins an attributive adjective to a proper name (205, d).

272. ut quondam : belongs to all the details of this line and the next ; hence to be rendered before raptatus bigis. The words imply that his present appearance was exactly that presented by him when dragged at Achilles' chariot. For the events referred to in lines 272-278 see page 325.

273. trajectus lora : trans. freely, 'his feet pierced with the thongs,' see 69, vii. tumentes : indicating that he was still alive, as the limbs of a dead body would not swell from violence.

274. mihi : dat. (80, b, iv.). qualis : 'in what guise.' illo : 'that' or 'the,' with much the force of 'that other' or 'the one we knew.'

275. redit : historical pres. ; the scene comes vividly before him. indutus : 'clad in,' literally 'having put on himself' (69, vii.). Achilli : for the genitive ending, see on Ulixi, l. 7.

276. puppibus : dat., see on l. 36. Vessels in ancient times, when not in active use, were hauled up on shore, with the prows towards the sea ; the sterns would thus be the part first attacked from land.

277. barbam, crines : with gerens, to be translated 'with.'

278. vulnera : those received when he was dragged around the walls by Achilles. Homer says of the Greeks who crowded round the dead body : "Nor did any stand by but wounded him." plurima : 'many' ; trans. with vulnera ; see 173, c, iii.

279. ultra : with compellare ; 'first,' i.e., of his own motion, without waiting to be addressed. flens ipse : with reference to l. 271.

280. expromere : implying that the words came with difficulty.

281. lux : a common metaphor, here meaning 'defence' or 'safety' rather than 'glory.' Teucrum : see on l. 14.

282. tantae : 'long' (205, e). tenuere : understand te as its object. Aeneas seems in his dream to have forgotten Hector's death, and to think of him as merely long absent.

283. expectate : to be taken closely with venis, but attracted by Hector from nom. to voc. ut : 'how,' 'with what feelings,' with aspicimus, not with defessi.

285. serenos : of his usual appearance. For the plur. see on l. 9.

287. ille nihil : sc. respondit ; see on l. 42. me . . moratur : 'heeds my idle questions,' lit. 'lingers over me,' etc. (203, b).

288. imo : see 86, iv. b.

289. nate dea : 'goddess-born' ; see p. 325 ; for dea, abl. see 95. his : indicating them ; for the case cf. on l. 134.

290. muros : more forcible than urbem. alta : with Troja ; another reading is alto, with culmine.

291. sat datum : sc. est ; a legal term, used of giving security for a debt ; freely 'have had their due.' dextra : abl.

292. possent, defensa fuissent : for subj. see 61. The difference in tense is caused by the former verb implying at any time (past or present). For fuissent in place of essent see 182, i. etiam : 'also,' i.e., as well as by yours ; or perhaps 'even.'

293. Penates : the guardian spirits of Troy, conceived as protectors of the national hearth ; hence associated with Vesta (l. 297), whose 'undying fire' ensured the safety of the city.

294. comites : predicative (69, v.) ; 'as companions' ; freely 'to share thy destiny.'

295. magna : trans. either 'the mighty city thou shalt build' (173, c., iii.), or 'which thou shalt build in might' (69, v.).

296. vittas Vestamque : by hendiadys for 'Vesta with her fillets.'

297. effert : it would seem that Hector actually gives these sacred things to Aeneas, and does not merely appear in the dream to do so. The appearance was thus more than a dream.

298-317. Aeneas awakes, and, finding the city in flames, rushes forth to gather his comrades.

298. diverso luctu : either 'various sounds of grief,' or 'sounds of grief from various parts of the city.'

299. secretata : in the predicate ; so obtectata.

302. excitior : 'I rouse myself' ; pass. used reflexively (164, iv.).

303. ascensu supero : 'climb to,' lit. 'gain by climbing.'

304. veluti cum : the comparison instituted is between the bewilderment of Aeneas and of the shepherd, but a further comparison is implied between the din of battle and the sounds of destruction heard by the shepherd.

305. montano flumine : 'with its mountain flood (or stream)' ; the genitive might have been expected.

306. laeta : 'glad,' i.e., 'luxuriant.' boum labores : a phrase taken from Homer and meaning 'the ploughed fields' ; boum is the regular form of the gen. plur. of bos.

307. stupet : with veluti, l. 304. inscius : 'bewildered,' 'dazed,' i.e., not comprehending it all. alto vertice : to harmonize with Aeneas' position, see l. 302.

309. manifesta fides : 'the truth (or proof) is clear,' i.e., of what was told him in the dream. [Another interpretation supplies Danaum with fides, meaning 'bad faith.']

310. dedit ruinam : 'fell crashing,' lit. 'gave a fall.' Notice how the position of ampla heightens the effect of dedit ruinam. Deiphobus had married Helen after Paris' death, and his house was the first attacked.

311. Vulcano superante : 'as the flames gained the mastery' ; a case of metonymy, like Ucalegon, l. 312.

we seizing,' a remonstrance more lively than 'are we to seize,' implying that if the citadel is being given up, no stand can be made elsewhere against the enemy. [A less likely explanation is to take the line as an inquiry where the Trojans are rallying, 'where is the chief contest? what stronghold are we seizing?']

323. talia reddit: 'answered thus'; for the indic. cf. on l. 256.

324. summa: 'the crowning,' i.e., 'the last.' dies: cf. on l.

132. ineluctabile tempus: 'the inevitable hour.'

325. fuimus: the verb is emphatic, 'have been,' i.e., 'have had our day,' 'are no more.' Troes: is not predicate (10, ii.).

326. ferus: emphatic, giving the reason for the action. omnia: 'all power.' Argos: 'to Argos,' see on l. 193; for the acc. see 125.

327. incensa: 'burning': lit. 'fired, or set on fire'; its position would warrant our making it a separate clause in translating.

328. arduus: predicate with astans.

329. miscet: 'spreads,' 'scatters.'

330. portis: 'at the gates' (78, v. c).

331. milia quot: for tot milia quot (174, ii.); the exaggeration is natural in Panthus' excitement. magnis: heightens the effect of quot milia. Mycenis: see 126.

332. angusta viarum: 'the narrow streets,' lit. 'the narrows of the streets'; a peculiar extension of the partitive gen.

333. ferri acies: 'keen edge of the sword,' 'the sharp steel.'

334. neci: 'for slaughter,' actively not passively (81). primi: 'the foremost,' who at least might be expected to offer resistance.

335. caeco Marte: 'in the blind fight' (103), i.e. 'fighting blindly'; because of the surprise and the absence of any prospect of success.

336. talibus dictis: 'at these words.' numine: as revealed in Panthus' words. The news of the loss of the citadel has changed the purpose of Aeneas (l. 315).

338. aethera: see on Calchanta, l. 122.

339. maximus: 'most mighty.'

340. per lunam : 'in the moonlight.' oblatis ; see 164, iv.
341. agglomerant : understand se from l. 339.
342. illis diebus : 'during those last days' (131). forte : 'as it happened.'
343. insano : of its disastrous effect.
344. gener : anticipating the relationship he sought.
345. qui non audierit : 'in that he did not heed' ; cf. on l. 231.
347. quos : 'these' (172). audere in proelia : '(be) bold for battle.'
348. super : adv., 'further ;' they had courage already, but Aeneas still further incites them. his : sc. dictis ; 'with these words,' 'thus'.
349. si vobis, etc. : 'if your desire is fixed to follow one who dares the utmost.' With vobis (dat. of possessor) sc. est.
350. sequi : cf. on l. 10. sit : see 35. rebus : 'of affairs' ; for the dat. see 80, e.
351. excessere : alluding to the belief that its gods abandoned a city on the point of capture. See on l. 241.
352. di : cf. on l. 190. quibus : 'by means of whom.' steterat : notice the tense.
353. incensae : gains emphasis from being the first word of the line, before a pause ; see on l. 327. moriamur, ruamus : moriamur is put first (although second in order of time), because it gives the general idea, which is made more definite by in . . . ruamus.
354. una : 'only,' 'one only' ; sc. est.
355. animis : they were filled with courage already, see l. 347 ; Aeneas' words rouse them to fury.
357. caecos : 'blindly,' 'recklessly' ; cf. l. 335.
358. siccis : i.e., thirsting for blood.
359. in : 'to meet' or 'to.' mediaeque, etc. : 'hold our course through the midst of the city,' seemingly to the citadel. For the gen. see 87.
360. cava : 'encircling,' 'enfolding,' abl. with umbra. The darkness that, in spite of the moonlight, prevails through the city, increases the horror of the struggle and seems to intensify the sadness of the Trojans' position.

361. fando : 'in words'; cf. on l. 6.

362. explicet, possit : for the subj. see on temperet, l. 8.

364. plurima : 'thick,' lit. 'abundant.' inertia : 'lifeless'; though many prefer to take it as meaning 'helpless,' with reference to the women and children.

365. religiosa : emphasizing the fact that nowhere was refuge found from the slaughter.

366. dant : 'pay.' To the Romans a punishment inflicted or suffered is a penalty exacted or paid.

367. quondam : 'at times.' victis : for the dat. see 80, b, i.

369. luctus : sc. est. plurima imago : the sing., like our 'many a sight' ; more freely 'the sight of death at every turn.'

370-401. Meeting a body of Greeks, Aeneas' followers cut them down, and dressing themselves in the Grecian armor, advance spreading destruction among their enemies.

371. Androgeos : cf. on l. 264. credens inscius : 'believing us, in his ignorance,' 'ignorantly deeming us' ; sc. nos esse. Inscius is emphatic ; see on l. 353.

372. ultra : as in l. 279.

373. nam : 'why,' remonstrating. sera : 'sluggish,' 'laggard,' the effect ascribed to the cause. tam : omit in trans. ; cf. l. 282.

374. rapiunt feruntque : 'pillage and plunder' ; an echo of the common phrase ferre et agere, denoting complete spoliation.

375. celsis : a stock epithet without special force here. Others read this line without an interrogation.

376. dabantur : note the tense, indicating a suspicious hesitation where an immediate answer was expected.

377. sensit delapsus : 'perceived that he had fallen.' If this be the literal translation, then delapsus is for se delapsus esse ; the omission of se and esse is common, but the attraction of case rather rare and probably due to Greek influence. [Some take sensit absolutely, and delapsus as a participle used quite regularly, lit. 'having fallen, he was aware (of it).']

378. retro : unnecessary to the sense but adding emphasis. cum voce : equivalent to 'and his voice as well.'

Greek armor they seemed to be enjoying the protection of alien gods, but only for a time (l. 402).

398. Orco : 'to Pluto,' i.e., 'to death' ; for the dat. see on l. 36.

399. alii : followed by pars = alii. cursum : 'in haste.'

401. scandunt : for the plural verb with the sing. subject (pars) compare l. 32 (p. 176, N.B.). nota : suggesting that it is from unknown evils and the uncertainty of the night they are fleeing. conduntur : see 164, iv.

402-437. At last, while attempting to rescue Cassandra, Aeneas' band is overwhelmed by the Greeks ; Aeneas himself escapes and goes to Priam's palace.

402. Heu . . divis : 'Alas, none may trust at all to the gods against their will.' See on l. 396. nihil : adverbial (72). fas fidere : sc. est (110). divis : dative (52).

403. Priameia : 'daughter of Priam.'

404. templo adytisque : the latter is the inner sanctuary. Aeneas evidently had now reached the citadel.

405. tendens : 'straining' ; common in the strength of stretching out the hands, and here put in place of tollens because looking forward to palmas, l. 406. ardentia ; in indignant protest.

406. arcebant : so that she could not raise them ; hence 'confined, or restrained,' rather than 'bound.'

407. non tulit : 'could not brook (or bear).' Coroebus was betrothed to her, see lines 342-344. furiata specie : abl. absol. ; 'his mind in a frenzy.'

408. periturus : 'to die' (122) ; cf. l. 47. in : see 78, v. b.

409. densis armis : abl. ; compare l. 383. [According to some, dat., 'into the thick of the fight' (78, v. c).]

410. hic primum : implying that this was the beginning of their reverses ; notice tum, l. 413, and etiam, l. 420, answering to primum. delubri : the same as the templo of l. 404.

411. nostrorum : 'of our own people (or friends).' miserrima : because caused by their own countrymen.

412. facie : 'because of,' etc. (96). errore jubarum : 'the mistake caused by,' etc.

413. gemitu . . . ira : 'with a cry of rage at the loss of the maiden'; another case of hendiadys. For the partic. suggesting an abstract idea see 205, i. For the gen. see 85, ii.

414. acerrimus : 'fiercest (of all)'; it was he who was seeking to carry off Cassandra as his prize.

416. adversi : in the predicate with confligunt. quondam : as in l. 367. rupto : 'when . . . bursts forth,' the middle use.

418. equis : with laetus 'exulting in' (107, iii.); the winds are often spoken of fancifully as borne by horses or in chariots.

420. si quos : 'all whom,' 'whomsoever,' lit. 'if any.'

421. tota urbe : trans. by 'throughout' (127, ii.).

422. primi : see 205, a. The Greeks with Ajax and the Atridae seemingly had taken Aeneas' followers for another band of plundering Greeks, disputing with them for the spoils.

423. ora . . . signant : 'mark the different accent on our lips'; lit. 'the lips differing in tone.' A different dialect rather than a different language seems to be meant.

425. Divae : that is, Pallas or Minerva; compare l. 404.

426. unus : intensive, with the superlative, like our 'very' or 'by far.'

428. dis aliter visum : sc. est, 'the gods willed otherwise' than one would expect from his uprightness. Compare 'Heaven's ways are not as our ways.' This is another instance of that quality of Virgil spoken of on l. 268.

429. sociis : the nostrorum of l. 411. plurima pietas : 'all thy goodness.'

430. labentem texit : 'protect in thy fall,' meaning 'save from falling'; cf. euntes, l. 110. infula : cf. on l. 221.

431. extrema flamma : 'death flames'; the burning city is to his friends a funeral pyre. This appeal by Aeneas is far more impressive than one to the Trojans now listening to his story would have been.

433. vitavisse : the subject, me, left to be gathered from the context, as often in poetry (18, x.). vices : ‘encounters’ (i.e., changing blows), or ‘chances of war,’ are both possible renderings. Danaum : with both tela and vices (84).

434. ut caderem : better taken with si fata fuissent (equivalent to a verb of determining) than with meruisse (196, b). divellimur : ‘we tear ourselves,’ middle or reflexive use.

436. gravior : ‘burdened,’ the comparative having really an intensive force (98, vi.). tardus : ‘stiff,’ ‘crippled.’ Ulixi : subjective genitive, ‘dealt by.’

437. vocati : agreeing with the subject of divellimur. clamore : ‘by the shouting’ not ‘with shouts.’

438-452. At Priam's palace Aeneas finds a fierce struggle going on, the Greeks trying to scale the battlements and to force the doors, the Trojans resisting.

438. vero : indicating that something important is to be told, that some crisis has been reached ; cf. ll. 105 and 309. pugnam : depending on cernimus, l. 441. nusquam : ‘no where else,’ that is, the struggle here is so intense that it seems impossible there should be any left to fight elsewhere.

439. forent : the imperf. subj. of sum has also forem, fores, foret and forent for essem, etc. For the mood see 68. nulli : ‘no others.’

440. sic : looking back to ceu . . . urbe ; omit in trans. Martem indomitum : ‘a stubborn fight,’ repeating the idea of ingentem pugnam, after the parenthesis.

441. acta testudine : ‘under cover of a roof of shields,’ lit. ‘the testudo being advanced.’ For the testudo see on Caesar, B. G. V., 9, 7, page 86. Tennyson probably had this passage in mind when he wrote :

“Heroes tall,
Dislodging pinnacle and parapet,
Upon the tortoise creeping to the wall.”

The assault is two-fold : an attempt to scale the walls, 442-449, 458-468 ; and an attempt to force the gates, 449-450, 469-485. The former is referred to in the words ad tecta ruentes, the latter in the words obsessum . . . limen.

a Virgilian way of saying 'an accustomed thoroughfare.' [Relicti is also taken as 'left at the time of building,' or 'overlooked by the enemy.']

455. infelix: she was the widow of Hector. dum regna manebant: as in l. 22.

456. saepius: 'often and often,' 'time and again,' stronger than saepe. incomitata: it would not have been proper for her to go forth without her attendants; had not this secret passage made Priam's and Hector's palaces practically one.

457. soceros: Hector's parents, Priam and Hecuba. avo: cf. on l. 36. trahebat: he was too small to take equal steps with her.

460. turrim: depending on aggressi, l. 463. The tower stood flush with the front of the wall, not back from it. summis tectis: 'from the top of the roof,' or perhaps 'with its lofty roof.'

461. eductam: 'rising.'

462. solitae: sc. sunt, a semi-deponent; it agrees with the nearest of its three subjects, Troja, naves, castra.

463. ferro: here meaning 'iron bars or levers.' qua: etc.,— 'where the high floor afforded feeble joinings,' referring probably to the place where the tower was built into the roof of the palace.

464. convellimus: present tense of a labored action, taking time.

465. impulimus: perfect tense of a single sudden act. ruinam trahit: 'comes crashing down'; cf. ruinam dedit, l. 310.

469-505. Pyrrhus at last cuts his way through the doors into the palace, where all is confusion, and where the Greeks rushing in have at their mercy Priam and his household.

469. vestibulum: the space before the door. primo: freely 'very' (86, iv. b). Pyrrhus: Achilles' son, who, on his father's death, was brought to Troy from Scyros, his mother's home.

470. exsultat: probably referring to both his actions and his state of mind. telis et luce aena: hendiadys (see on l. 319) for 'weapons of gleaming bronze.'

471. in lucem: grammatically with convolvit, l. 474, but so far from this word that it practically is independent, 'coming to the light.' pastus: from pasco; 'that has fed upon,' middle use (69, vii.). Virgil's idea is that the poison of the serpent is derived from noxious plants it eats, and that in spring it is most venomous.

472. frigida: with bruma not terra. tumidum: 'swollen,' apparently with the poison accumulated during its torpor.

473. juventa: 'with youth (renewed).'

475. arduus ad solem: 'uprising to the sun.' This is not the same as in lucem, l. 471, which refers to its coming out from beneath the earth. linguis micat trisulcis: cf. Tennyson,

"Nor cared the serpent at thy side To flicker with his double (first edition, treble) tongue."

ore: 'in his mouth' (127, ii.).

477. Scyria: see on l. 469.

478. succedunt tecto: 'they climb to the roof.'

479. dura: emphasizing the resistance to be overcome.

480. limina: here the doors themselves. perrumpit, vellit: present of an action in progress, i.e., an attempted action (179, d). cavavit: l. 481, the perf. of the finished act, the act succeeded in. cardine: the ancient door swung on a post inserted in sockets in the lintel and threshold.

481. aeratos: notice the emphatic position (see on l. 353); so robora, l. 482.

482. dedit fenestram: 'has made an opening.' lato ore: 'wide-mouthed' (105).

483. atria longa: the usual plan of the ancient Greek or Roman house was a succession of large courts or halls with smaller rooms lying on each side.

484. veterum penetralia: the pathos is heightened by the suggestion that this privacy, now ruthlessly violated, had been respected by a loyal people for so many generations.

485. armatos: the guards of the palace; see ll. 449, 450.

487. miscetur: 'is all in confusion with.' cavae aedes: the inner chambers where the women of the household lived.

488. aurea : if this is not a constant epithet, its force must lie in the contrast between the distracted house of Priam and the bright stars where dwelt the ever-blessed gods.

490. oscula figunt : by way of farewell.

491. vi patria : 'with his father's might.' Achilles was the greatest warrior of the Greeks. claustra : the bars that still remained after an opening had been cut in the door.

492. ariete crebro : 'with incessant blows of the ram. As a matter of fact the battering ram belongs to a later age.

494. fit via vi : 'force makes a way.' aditus : the object of rumpunt. (69, i. b).

496. non sic : 'not so (furiously),' implying that the simile is not quite adequate.

497. exiit, evicit : for the tense cf. fugit, l. 223.

498. cumulo : 'in a towering mass' (103). in : 'over.'

501. nurus : must here include the fifty daughters of Priam; see on l. 503. per : 'among.'

502. foedantem : of Priam alone. That these were the altars of Priam's own hearth makes his death more pitiful.

503. illi : Homer tells of the fifty chambers in Priam's house for his fifty sons and their wives, and fifty for his fifty daughters and their husbands. spes tanta : 'that large hope' ; cf. 205, e.

504. barbarico : to the Greeks (whom the Roman writers imitated) all not Greek were barbarians, and Aeneas here is made to speak from Virgil's point of view. postes : in restrictive apposition to thalami.
