Nat'l HIV Prevention Conference

More than two-hundred scientists, doctors, researchers and activists were in Atlanta last week for the National HIV Prevention Conference. This is the first national conference to address the issues of monitoring and preventing the spread of HIV. In a time of complacency about HIV transmission, these researchers are investigating the importance of effective prevention efforts. Here's a brief report on some of the newest findings.

First, lets talk about complacency. All the newest data and research point to an ever growing false confidence. The fact is that there are powerful drug "cocktails" that are helping PWA's live longer and healthier. However, researchers fear that this is encouraging those most vulnerable to HIV to let down their guards, making them less likely to use a condom during anal sex. That and all the hype generated by the drug companies about these drugs, add to a human rationalization that it's kinda OK to have sex without a condom. Well fellas, it isn't OK! Sheila Murphy, a psychologist at the University of Southern California studied 410 gay men in Los Angeles. These guys said they were aware of the drugs called "protease inhibitors". Of the 346 that were negative, those who felt confident that the drugs could control AIDS used condoms 74% of the time during anal sex. Those who were less confident said they used condoms 85% of the time for anal sex. Of the 64 guys who were positive, those who were optimistic about the drugs controlling HIV, said they used condoms 66% of the time, compared to 85% of those who thought the drugs were less effective. "Clearly many Americans equate improved treatments with a cure, which they are not," said Dr. Ronald Valdiserri, deputy director of the center for HIV prevention at the CDC. Some criticized the study suggesting it did not represent a broad spectrum of those affected by HIV. Others pointed out that the drug combinations have dramatically changed the way people view HIV. Lets be real here, the disease used to mean rapid sickness and almost certain death. Now, people are surviving in relatively good health for longer periods. "There's sort of a complacency that's developed in the gay community," said CDC researcher Rich Wolitski. Wolitski cited a number of other studies that have shown other sexually transmitted diseases are on the rise among gay men. This tells me that we are putting ourselves at risk for contracting HIV.

The latest national data on HIV infection since the 1980's is that more than 300,000 have died of AIDS. The good news is that the number of new infections has dropped from 100,000 a year to 40,000. However, remember the complacency issue stated above? Women have become the fastest growing group to be newly infected and African Americans are nearly ten times more likely than whites to develop AIDS and to subsequently die from it.

In the mid 80's, blacks represented about 25% of new cases of AIDS reported. Hispanics about 14% and women 8%. By 1997-'98, blacks made up 45 % of the cases, Hispanics 23% and women 23%, explains U.S. Surgeon General David Satcher. It seems that the communities that get left out of the health care loop are the ones most effected by increasing transmission rates. "We need to find new ways to reach these communities," Satcher said. Data just released this week confirms these alarming figures. Blacks still lead in new transmissions of HIV. The worst case of transmission for blacks has been in the state of Georgia. Of the 8,776 Georgians living with HIV, 5686, or 65% are black according to the CDC. Nationally, African Americans represent 40% of the 271,327 (reported) people living with HIV.

Cornelius Baker, executive director of the National Association of People with AIDS, said this is... "one of the worst catastrophes since slavery" to affect blacks. Two major studies confirm that the increasing infection rates are due to bisexuality among black men. It's not intravenous drug use that is the major transmission pathway for black women, rather it's heterosexual sex when the black man has had sex with men before. "The heavy stigma, against homosexuality in the African American community leads to bisexuality," Baker said. Fortunately the CDC has earmarked $600 million dollars of which $1.37 million dollars will be used to educate the African American population for HIV prevention education. Besides condoms, there isn't any other possible proven way to prevent transmission of the HIV virus, or other sexually transmitted diseases, until now.

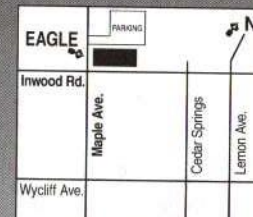

BufferGel, a vaginal gel is being tested by Dr. Kenneth H. Mayer and his research team at a hospital in Rhode Island. Additional studies are needed to test how well the gel works to prevent HIV infection in humans. Previous studies suggest that the topical gel can inhibit HIV replication by maintaining low vaginal pH. It is presumed the same can occur with men if the gel is used in the anus and rectum. This study evaluated the safety and tolerability of BufferGel. Side effects were mostly itching. The gel has been shown to be effective at inhibiting the transmission of other sexually transmitted diseases also. BufferGel has been used extensively in animal trials. "Monkey and rabbit studies have shown BufferGel prevents the infection of HIV, herpes and chlamydia infection," says Mayer. Although still in the development stages, we could see products like these on the pharmacy shelves in 3 to 5 years.

Although most gay men practice safe sex most of the time, there is an ever growing incidence of those who are no longer listening to traditional prevention messages. Across the country, more and more of us are having unprotected anal sex. Risky behavior isn't just risky, it could be deadly. All of this information is practically useless unless you take care of yourself and protect your life. There is no reason why an HIV negative individual cannot remain negative and enjoy a healthy sex life at the same time. A very simple, easy thing like opening up a condom and slipping it on your partner can save your life. I have friends who are HIV negative/positive couples. Some have been together for over ten years and have remained sexually active. Never have any of their HIV negative partners sero-converted. Why??? Because they use condoms each and every time. You should too. Take care of yourself and prevent the spread of AIDS, it's easy.

A while back we told you about the Lifetime Intimate Portrait audio series that Rhino is putting out. Next up is the Women With Soul compilation. And all I can say is...what a great listen! Last Friday, when I got into the office early I decided to pop the thing in and before you know it, I was up and out of my senses prancing around to "I've Got To Use My Imagination" by Gladys Knight and The Pips!

With this compilation, it's not about some new and ground-breaking material, it's filled with nothing but tried and true favorites like "Lady Marmalade" (LaBelle), "Day Dreaming" (Aretha Franklin), "Pillow Talk" (Sylvia), "Last Dance" (Donna Summer), "What Cha Gonna Do For Me" (Chaka Khan), "Let's Stay Together" (Tina Turner), and "Jump" (Pointer Sisters). But it's not just a spray of older titles. There's also "Dreamin'" (Vanessa Williams), "I Know" (Dionne Ferris), "U.N.I.T.Y." (Queen Latifah), "Gypsy Woman" (Crystal Waters), "Real Love" (Jody Watley), "All Around The World" (Lisa Stansfield) and "Back To Life" (Soul II Soul).

Rhino has certainly pulled out all the stops here without a doubt! And the best thing about this series is the list price of $11.98!!! If you can't find it at the store, pop online and cyber yourself one from <http://rhino.com> or <http://lifetimetv.com>. C'mon, you can tear yourself away from the chat rooms long enough!!

Another great compilation from Rhino comes this week in the form of a project done with Alternative Press entitled Industrial Strength Machine Music. This compilation traces the history of the industrial rock genre. Roughly chronological, this 16 track compilation begins with sonic experimentation of England's Throbbing Gristle ("Hamburger Lady") and continues through the punishing sound of Germany's Einsturzende Neunauten ("YuGung [Futter Mein Ego]"), and on to a North American contingent, including Skinny Puppy ("Dig It"), and Ministry ("Stigmata"). Other artists included are Cabaret Voltaire, Coil, Front 242, Meat Beat Manifesto and KMFDM.

The collection also features a pair of previously unreleased cuts: an energetic live version of "Gave Up" from the critically-acclaimed album Broken by Nine Inch Nails and a cover of Olivia Newton-John's pop hit "Physical" by The Revolving Cocks. Never a dull moment!!

Anyone who was wise enough to grab a copy of the new Austin Powers soundtrack would certainly be familiar with the single "Alright" by The Lucy Nation. Those even wiser have probably also discovered Lucy Nation's Maverick album ON. This group is a teaming of Swede Annans Trom and Brit Andy Cousin. Here, one will find a collection of elliptical, lilting synthesizer and rhythm-driven songs, wrapped up in Anna's sweet, sexy voice. While the tracks are full of 90's elements-sampling, trancy loops and clever keyboard programming-the way the songs are crafted clearly lifts them above the electronica brat pack. Filled with warmth throughout and overpouring with artistry from within, this album could be one of the year's best kept secrets.

Anna, who is a classically trained pianist, has performed in symphonies and orchestras, while Andy, a bass player whose career has included a variety of rock projects including Mission UK. They met in Sweden in 1996. They immediately clicked and decided to do a demo together. Within a year they formed The Lucy Nation (a word play on "hallucination"), had moved to London and had a Warner Publishing deal; Maverick then heard the demo and decided to sign them....what genius!! And that's music THIS WEEK IN TEXAS.

CONJOIN ME FOR A HOT BATH!

Two films explore unique relationships in dramatically different ways

It isn't just Labor Day weekend that helps signal the end of summer, but also the transition from explosive, high-budget blockbusters to smaller artistic, character-driven films. Two recent entries in the latter category should be brought to your attention.

The first film is Steam: The Turkish Bath, a well-crafted, exotic foreign film with a disappointingly deceptive marketing strategy. The poster shows two men sitting close together in nothing but skimpy little wraps with the tagline: "What he inherited was a sexual awakening..." This is true, but not to the extent you would believe from the erotic imagery in the advertising.

Instead, the story is a rich tapestry of history, culture and familial bonds that lures Francesco (Alessandro Gassman) from Italy to Turkey where he has inherited a Turkish Bath from his recently deceased aunt. While staying with the family that took care of his aunt in her final years, Francesco meets Mehmet (Mehmet Gun-sur), a striking young man who introduces him to the homoerotic world of the Turkish bath. Of course, when Francesco's wife (Francesca D'Aloja) arrives in Istanbul to visit, things get rather complicated.

Adding a different sort of complication is the fact that there are also no subtitles during the film's first scene, which I assume is an intentional omission, but one that is also a source of frustration when a great deal of dialogue is thrown out without translation. So don't run for the exit—English appears on screen soon enough.

Preconceived notions and language barriers aside, Steam is mesmerizing and rich with emotion and visual style. The complexity of Francesco's sexual awakening and juggling of two relationships (with a man and a woman), has the types of universal themes that will always be compelling. However, the gay angle is so slight and understated, that it would be a much better movie if that had simply been a nuance delightfully left to be discovered by the viewers, rather than touted as the central theme.

I went in expecting a more overtly gay film, based on its press and ad campaign, so I felt rather duped.

But with all this in mind, one can enjoy Steam as a great glimpse into a culture so far removed from our own that it still manages to fascinate and hold the viewers attention on many levels. It's also interesting to see that the gay experience is different for everyone and can be portrayed in a less prominent fashion.

In drastic contrast, Twin Falls, Idaho also explores the relationship between two men who share a bed. Of course, in this case, it's a pair of conjoined twins (Siamese no longer being the PC term), who have no other choice but to sleep together, eat together, dress together, shower together, walk together...well, you get the idea. Where Steam falls short of details, Twin Falls goes far to depict the extremes to which an identity crisis can reach in a partnership that is inherently as dependent as this one under the circumstances.

The plot follows Penny (Michele Hicks), a prostitute who meets with Francis Falls (Michael Polish) in his hotel room, only to discover that brother Blake (Mark Polish) is along for the ride—in every possible sense of the word. Frightened, she flees at the first opportunity, leaving her purse behind. She later returns to retrieve it and becomes fascinated by the twin's unique situation. In the process of befriending them, she inadvertently becomes the object of Blake's affection.

The acting is understated and poignant, especially the performances of the Polish twins. Hicks makes the most of her feature film debut and rightfully deserves all the recognition that comes her way. Lesley Ann Warren also brings a sense of tenderness and heartbreak to her role as the mother who abandoned the twins as newborns. Even Greatest American Hero William Katt emerges long enough from obscurity to add dimension to this film's odd ensemble of characters.

Twin Falls is visually stunning and gently

haunting. Most of all, it is brilliant in the way that it allows both Francis and Blake to come across so level headed and well adjusted in a world populated by wackos, including nextdoor neighbor/evangelist Jesus (pronounced exactly the way you hear it church!) played wonderfully by Garrett Morris. Even in the strangest of scenarios, the brothers maintain their genuineness. The ordeals they face on a daily basis provide insight into our own lives and how we choose to interact with other people.

Both films deal with relationships that are extreme and difficult to manage by most.

Where Steam is overly subtle, Twin Falls is overtly symbolic and ultimately more effective. Both films however help convey the same message in their own ways: there is somebody out there who completes us, literally or figuratively and until we can be honest with who we are as individuals and learn to rise above our circumstances, true happiness can never be attained.

Grades: Steam: C+. Twin Falls Idaho: A+ Both films have opened at different times throughout the state. Check local listings for dates and locations in your city.

"A MUST SEE!"
Finally, a sweet and sensuous date movie for women in love with women."

FULL GALLOP Deeply Superficial

Well, for this one, we need to separate the world's population into two parts—those who know who Diana Vreeland was, and those who don't. I suppose there could be a third category—those who don't care, but those have stopped reading by now anyway.

Diana Vreeland was born in Paris in 1903, at the height of the Belle Epoch, a period when it wasn't so much what you department, a position she held until her death in 1989.

If Diana Vreeland had not existed, it would have been necessary to invent her. In fact, she invented herself. Could she exist today? Probably not. She's politically incorrect, and the '80's was the last decade of this century that could have accepted her. Superficial to the core, she was one of those people who lived flat-out, clear the runway, eat my dust. Mother Theresa she wasn't. Her mothering skills barely extended to her own children. Style was what mattered to her. "It's what gets you up in the morning. It's what gets you down the stairs."

Although these and other pronouncements have a distinctly hollow ring, when Diana said them, she meant them. She saw no contradiction between style and real life, and lived hers with a "let-them-eat-cake" abandon. During the height of the depression, she wrote, helpfully, "Why not shampoo your child's hair in last night's champagne?"

All this brings us to Stages Repertory Theatre's season opener, Full Gallop. Written by Mary Louise Wilson and Mark Hampton, and performed by Wilson off-Broadway, Full Gallop is essentially a one-woman show, and Diana is that one woman. For the Stages production, Diana is played by Sally Edmondson.

The scene is Vreeland's Park Avenue apartment. After being fired by Vogue, she has taken a trip to Europe, and now, back in New York, she is trying to move ahead. She does this by arranging a dinner party for a group of influential friends, hoping to attract some venture capital. At the moment, she has none. In fact, she doesn't have the price of a dinner, so she tries to finesse one by calling on old con-did, but how stylishly you did it. Even as a little girl, Diana lived by this precept, and as a woman she lived ON it. As editor of Harper's Bazaar from 1936 to 1962, and of Vogue from 1963 to 1971, she defined style. If she said it was in, it was in—period. Then, without warning, in 1971, Vogue let her go, and the vocation by which she was defined was gone. For a moment, anyway. Then she landed spectacularly on her feet as the curator of the Metropolitan Museum's costume tacts, with varying degrees of success. She finagles flowers by the basketful, and a cook, but no food. Soldiering on, she improvises madly, all the while talking non-stop in a sort of stream-of-consciousness memoir, peppered with gossip and philosophy. "When I married, I became a Japanese housewife, with nothing to do and not a thought in my head. I was so happy!" And on her passions—"I ADORE lettuce. Although I'm not quite sure it's a food." As a young wife she lived in London. "The best thing about living in London was Paris!"

The key to Vreeland, oddly enough, was her lack of pretense. She wasn't pretending. She was what she was, and it came as naturally to her as being female or gay or Hindu. She believed what she said. And that is also the key to playing the character of Vreeland. I remember seeing her on talk shows, and she always came off the same way—honest. She never tailored what she said to a particular audience, and betrayed not an iota of self-consciousness. What-ever she was, she was the real thing. That's not easy to act, because you can never seem to be acting. Edmundson does a good job, faltering only a few times—chalk it up to opening night jitters—and keeps the show afloat. Although she's too young for the role—Vreeland was 68 in 1971—she pulls it off in sheer energy.

Although Full Gallop is really a one-woman show, there is another character, Diana's French maid, Yvonne, who is never seen, but with whom Diana communicates via intercom. Yvonne, played by Nathalie Cunningham with Gallic sticism, provides a down-to-earth counterpoint. The only problem is with the intercom itself, which interrupts with a decidedly electronic buzz, a la Radio Shack, that didn't exist in 1971. Details, details.

Taken all in all, Full Gallop is entertaining—fun to watch. The set, by Dennis McNabb, transforms the arena stage into a passable rendition of a New York apartment circa 1970, replete with Vreeland touches. As she brings in vase after vase of fresh flowers, she asks, "Is it too much? or Not enough?" The answer in her case—obviously both!

Full Gallop runs through October 3 at Houston's Stages Repertory Theatre. Call (713)527-0220 for tickets and information.

FAITH HILL

September 21, 1967

Feisty Mercury ambles into graceful Libra this week, changing our minds like the wind and encouraging us to focus on new obsessions. Feeling particularly mouthy, comrade? Check your sign to see where you can shoot from the lip or where it's best to keep your mouth shut.

VIRGO (August 24 - September 23) Queer Virgins have a way of keeping a beady little eye on their finances when Mercury enters Libra. This is not a bad thing. In fact, this can be especially profitable for those with a particular interest or goal. (like retirement??) Talk to a financial advisor or do your own homework. Gather all relevant facts and read the fine print. It's never too late to become the next Gay Paul Getty.

LIBRA (September 24 - October 23) Mercury in your own sign gives your thoughts and words powerful impact. Couple that good fortune with the ability to maneuver easily through any social circle and your mission is obviously clear; It is time to get the great gay word Out and about! You've been elected our community spokesperson (or is it mouth-piece...?) and there isn't anyone more appropriate or deserving.

SCORPIO (October 24 - November 22) Perceptive pink Scorps intensify their intuitive powers when contemplative Mercury traverses optimistic Libra. Gaze deeply into your crystal ball and see what the future can bring. If you don't like what you see, try to appease the goddesses by generously volunteering for one of our great gay causes (are there any others?). It's never too late to pile on the good karma or spread it around.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 - December 22) Amiable Archers feel an affirming surge when zesty Mercury ambles into sociable Libra. You ache to join a club or become a member of a new, interesting group. Thankfully, your ability to plan the perfect social event will help you open doors of opportunity everywhere. This is marvelous as long as you don't open the door to the Pat Robertson for President headquarters.

CAPRICORN (December 23 - January 20) Grab for the professional gold when clever Mercury crosses into easy going, diplomatic Libra. Strategic gay Caps make their corporate presence known in a non-threatening way; Be the iron fist in a velvet glove. Someone in authority is listening and looking out for you. Who knows? You may just receive the key to the corporate washroom and it won't be to scrub the floors, Cinderella.

AQUARIUS (January 21 - February 19) Aqueerians successfully plan an extraordinary vacation when Mercury enters Libra. You're hankering to expand your global Outreach. Use this astute time to tend to the nitty gritty details and all should go well. If money is tight, picture yourself embarking on explorations closer to home like an evening chock-a-block with exotic tidbits - food, music and folks. See what develops.

PISCES (February 20 - March 20) Zesty Mercury in sociable Libra pokes the smoldering embers of your passion into a raging fire. Steaming rainbow Fish can use this lucky turn of events to plan their line of attack on any intended target. Libra is a rather acrobatic placement and your thoughts are only limited by your ...ahem... creativity. What's this I hear about a jar of borscht, a feather boa and a soft boiled egg??

ARIES (March 21 - April 20) Mercury's movement into diplomatic Libra opens up the lines of communications with partners. Got a problem gay Rambo? Before you decide to butt heads and make demands, try to use this easy planetary transit to oil the wheels of accord and not skid the relationship. Negotiate, dear queer Aries, and don't dominate. (Unless, of course, partners prefer it that way...)

TAURUS (April 21 - May 21) If you've been examining yourself sideways in the mirror lately, chalk it up to perceptive Mercury in image conscious Libra. Proud Bulls have a way of piling on the pounds with their good food and fine wines. Concentrate on revamping your diet and exercise routine. The possibilities are endless even though swimsuit season appears to be waning. Perhaps Key West is the key?

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21) Queer Twins usually enjoy the occasional mind game and now you can play to your heart's content. Mercury in Libra inspires creative thinking to solve old intractable problems. Tickle your gay muse and see where it takes you. Get your grey matter thinking in rainbow colors. Don't waste this fabulousness on slothful practical jokes, cousin; Use it for practical purposes.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23) It's so easy for pink Crabs to hide in their shells and avoid frank discussions with homophobic relatives, but now is not the time to take the easy route, compadre. Demand respect; Mercury in Libra pours on the diplomacy, clear thinking and drive. What excuse is there to remain closeted from family? If they don't like it, that's just tough. Live your proud life. You gotta be you.

LEO (July 24 - August 23) If you are ready to let out a roar or five, thank sociable Mercury in Libra which directs your petty tantrums to more productive outlets. Proud Leos are not shy about expressing their opinions and at least now you get a couple of important folks to even listen to your whines. Hint: Allow the lines of communication to function in two directions. Seek feedback as well as give it.
