Abstract Norman A. McQuown (1914-2005) was an anthropologist and linguist best known for his efforts to document and study indigenous languages in Mexico and Central America and for his work in the field of non-verbal communication. He studied, conducted field and archival research, taught, and wrote on a wide range of languages, including Huastec, Quiche Maya, Yucatec Maya, Nahuatl, Totonac, Turkish, Russian, and Esperanto. He published in English, Spanish, and German, was comfortable writing and conversing in a large number of additional languages, and wrote frequently on the process of language teaching and learning. McQuown spent nearly his entire career at the University of Chicago, with the exception of numerous visiting appointments at institutions in Europe and the Americas. This collection documents his research, writing, teaching, and administrative work and contains a small amount of personal material. It ranges in date from 1850-2004, with the bulk dating from roughly 1945-1975.

Biographical Note

Norman A. McQuown was a linguist and anthropologist specializing in the indigenous languages of Mexico and Central America. He spent nearly his entire career at the University of Chicago, where he was a professor with a dual appointment in the departments of anthropology and linguistics. Over the course of his career he studied, conducted field and archival research, taught, and wrote on a wide range of languages, including Huastec, Quiche Maya, Yucatec Maya, Nahuatl, Totonac, Turkish, Russian, and Esperanto. He published in English, Spanish, and German, was comfortable writing and conversing in a large number of additional languages, and wrote frequently on the process of language teaching and learning.

Norman A. McQuown was born in Peoria, Illinois on January 30, 1914. Until roughly the time he received his doctorate his middle name generally appears as Anton on documents, but subsequently it consistently appears as Anthony. He received his AB in 1935 and MA in 1936, both in German, from the University of Illinois, where his MA thesis was "A Comparative Study of Esperanto from the Standpoint of Modern German." He briefly attended Brown University from 1936-1937 and then went on to earn his PhD in linguistics from Yale University in 1940, where he studied under Edward Sapir and Leonard Bloomfield and wrote his thesis on the Totonac language. From 1939-1942 he taught in Mexico, first at the Instituto Politécnico Nacional and then at the Mexican National School of Anthropology. During this time he also worked on a Turkish Language project for the American Council of Learned Societies. McQuown continued in this area during the World War II years, where he served as a Turkish specialist and editorial supervisor for the Language Section of the Army Service Forces and co-edited the book Spoken Turkish.

After teaching briefly at Hunter College in New York City from 1945-1946, McQuown came to the University of Chicago in 1946 and remained there for the rest of his career, spending time as chair of both the anthropology and linguistics departments. He held a number of visiting appointments at institutions such as the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences (1955-1956), Universidad Sevilla (1962-1963), Universidad Autónoma de México (1967-1968, 1982-1986), University of Buffalo (Summer 1971), and Universistät Hamburg (1971-1972).

Throughout his career, teaching and creating resources to help others learn remained important to McQuown. He edited, compiled, or translated a significant number of instructional texts for language learning, including Konusulan Ingilizce (English for Turks, 1954), El Tzeltal Hablado

(1957-1958), Spoken Yucatec Maya (1965), Spoken Quiché Maya (1966), and Introducción al Náhuatl Clásico (1976). He edited and contributed to the Handbook of Middle American Indians, Volume 5, Linguistics (1967). In 1981, Stanford University Press published Language, Culture, and Education, edited by Anwar S. Dil, a collection of eighteen essays written by McQuown over the course of his career.

As a researcher, McQuown was involved in several influential projects. The Man in Nature Project, funded by the National Science Foundation, took place from 1956-1959 in the southern Mexican state of Chiapas. It involved faculty from archaeology, anthropology, botany, linguistics, and geography and aimed to conduct a multidisciplinary study of the region and its people. This was followed by the Chiapas Project (1960-1964), another multidisciplinary study in Chiapas that took a narrower focus by investigating the language and culture of specific Tzeltal and Tzotzil communities. It aimed to shed light on their origins and changes over time. In addition to numerous trips to Mexico and Guatemala to conduct field research for these and other projects, McQuown conducted archival research at libraries in Europe and the Americas and compiled catalogs of sources available on indigenous languages at various institutions. He was also an early user of computers to document and study languages, and he wrote frequently on the process of language learning and teaching.

In addition to his work on indigenous languages, McQuown was a core contributor to The Natural History of an Interview, a project in which he and colleagues conducted an in-depth microanalysis of a personal interview and related family interactions, covering both verbal and nonverbal communication. The manuscript was never published in English, but project group members presented at conferences and made use of The Natural History of an Interview in their teaching, and their work in the area of nonverbal communication was considered particularly groundbreaking.

McQuown was dedicated to preserving research and fieldwork, both his own and that of others. Upon arrival at Chicago, he inherited and subsequently did significant work to organize and provide access to the papers of Manuel Andrade, a professor of anthropology and linguist who had also worked in Central America and passed away unexpectedly in 1941. McQuown was also the Founding Director of the University of Chicago's Language Laboratory and Archives, now the Digital Media Archive, which serves as a repository of language recordings that are used for both teaching and research. He also established and made numerous contributions to what is now known as the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology at the University of Chicago's Regenstein Library.

Norman McQuown married Dolores Elrine Milleville on November 7, 1942. They had two daughters, Kathryn Ann and Patricia Ellen. Patricia predeceased him. Norman McQuown died in Chicago on September 7, 2005.

Series I, Personal and Biographical, contains certificates, diplomas, curriculum vitae, faculty reports, biographical statements, project descriptions, correspondence, obituaries, notes, ephemera, clippings, and publications. It also includes information on the contents of Norman McQuown's personal library. It ranges in date from 1933-2000.

Series II, Subject files, Administrative files, and Correspondence, includes pamphlets, fliers, newsletters, and promotional material for journals, conferences, publishers, and professional organizations; correspondence; University of Chicago administrative files, including a significant number from the Department of Anthropology; committee working files and other material documenting McQuown's involvement with national and international professional organizations; notices and schedules for lectures and other UChicago campus events; and notes and clippings. There is a significant amount of material from bodies such as the National Endowment for the Humanities, National Institutes of Health, National Institute of Mental Health, and National Science Foundation, including information on grants McQuown received from these groups. The material ranges in date from 1928-2001.

Series III, Writing, contains formal and informal writings, translations, and notes by Norman McQuown as well as material that he edited or compiled. Included are typescripts and handwritten drafts of lectures, articles, reports, reviews, book chapters, and grammars; reprints and offprints of publications; bibliographies; charts and worksheets; and McQuown's MA and PhD theses. Also included are translations, both of McQuown's own writing and his translations of others' work, including Leonard Bloomfield's Language. A small amount of material in this series, particularly language notes, appear to have been written by people other than Norman McQuown but have been maintained in this series to keep his organizational system intact. Finally, the series contains instructional texts that McQuown edited, compiled, and/or translated, including "Introducción al Náhuatl Clásico," "Spoken Quiché Maya," "Spoken Turkish," "Spoken Yucatec Maya," and "El Tzeltal Hablado." The material ranges in date from 1916-1999.

Series IV, Research, documents the many forms of research that Norman McQuown engaged in over the course of his career, including linguistic field work, the use of computers to document and process linguistic material, and archival research. It includes notes, handwritten catalogs, and related material created by McQuown based on his archival research; computer processing guides, instructions, and punch cards; transcriptions, worksheets, research proposals, and linguistic surveys related to specific Central American languages; general resources and projects on the Mayan language family; and writings by other scholars. The series includes material from the University of Chicago's Macro Mayan Linguistic Research Project/Program and Mayan Studies Program as well as the American Council of Learned Societies Turkish Language Project. It also contains McQuown's extensive linguistic card files, which reflect his efforts to document the grammar and vocabulary of Central American indigenous languages. The material ranges in date from 1890-2000.

Series V, Chiapas Projects, contains material from projects in the Chiapas region of Mexico and nearby areas of Guatemala that Norman McQuown participated in or coordinated. The first took place from 1956-1959 and was formally known as the "Man in Nature Project." It was funded by the National Science Foundation and was a multidisciplinary investigation that explored many aspects of the Chiapas region. The next phase, known as the Chiapas Project, was a more focused approach by anthropologists and linguists to investigate the language and culture of the region's Tzotzil and Tzeltal communities and explore historical change over time in these areas. The series includes field work and research material, correspondence, writings from project participants, and material from a reunion conference held in 1982. It ranges in date from 1950-1987.

Series VI, Teaching, This series contains teaching material such as syllabi, course outlines, lecture notes, bibliographies, assignments, exams, worksheets, course rosters, and a small amount of correspondence with students. Most are from courses taught by Norman McQuown, but files for other University of Chicago anthropology and linguistics courses are also included. It ranges in date from circa 1930s-1999.

Series VII, Manuel Andrade Papers, contains material from Manuel Andrade, a linguist and anthropologist at the University of Chicago who studied Central American indigenous languages. Andrade passed away unexpectedly in 1941 and Norman McQuown inherited his papers when he arrived at Chicago a few years later. McQuown devoted a significant amount of time to organizing, annotating, transcribing, carrying out related research, and making use of computer processing tools to make Andrade's work accessible to future researchers.

Many of Andrade's papers contain notes from McQuown or his research assistants, either written directly on the material or clipped to it. Additionally, at times Andrade's work became integrated in to McQuown's own projects, so there are pieces of Andrade's work scattered throughout other series in this collection. Researchers should consider doing a search for "Andrade" over the entire collection to find these remaining pieces. The material in this series ranges in date from 1929-circa 1990s, with the bulk from the 1930s.

Series VIII, Writings by Others, contains writings by scholars other than Norman McQuown and brief notes by McQuown on others' work. It includes articles and reprints, typescripts, ditto copies, and handwritten notes. The material ranges in date from 1850-1999.

Series IX, Audiovisual, contains a very small number of audio and video recordings; microfilm and microfiche; negatives and photographs, including from the Chiapas project; a significant number of slides depicting McQuown's travels with his family and research trips in Central America; and magnetic computer tape and floppy disks. There are a substantial number of photographs and slides in this series, but researchers should note that the rest of the material generally appears to be small amounts of leftovers or odds and ends that remained after the majority of McQuown's audiovisual material was donated to the Language Laboratory and Archives. The series ranges in date from 1929-1993.

Series X, Oversize, contains material too large to fit in legal-size folders. This includes a significant number of clippings; computer print-outs; linguistic and geographic charts and maps; posters; handwritten texts, including from Manuel Andrade recordings and the Chiapas project; and newsletters, newspapers, and magazines. The material ranges in date from 1931-2000.

Series XI, Artifacts, contains a small number of mostly undated miscellaneous artifacts that were found with Norman McQuown's papers.

Series XII, Interview Analysis projects, documents Norman McQuown's work as a member of a project group that conducted groundbreaking linguistic and kinesic microanalysis of psychiatric interviews and related family interactions. The majority of the material relates to the largest and most influential of their projects, The Natural History of an Interview, which involved the microanalysis of a small number of filmed scenes of one family's interactions with each other, a member of the project team, and a therapist. McQuown's project group also worked on microanalysis of other families, and this material is included here as well. The series includes correspondence, materials for conference presentations, writings, transcripts and microanalyses, and drafts of the text of The Natural History of an Interview. It ranges in date from 1956-1981.

Series XIII, Restricted, contains material to which access is restricted. It ranges in date from 1939-2004. Subseries 1 contains departmental administrative records that are restricted for 30 years from the date of the record's creation. The series will be fully open in 2028. Subseries 2 contains University Senate Council minutes that are restricted for 30 years from the end of the respective University President's term. They will be fully open in 2023. Subseries 3 and 4 contain professional recommendations, financial records, and personnel material that is restricted for 50 years from the date of the record's creation. Subseries 3 will be fully open in 2054 and Subseries 4 will be fully open in 2026. Subseries 5 and 6 contain student records and personal information that is restricted for 80 years from the date of the record's creation. Subseries 5 will be fully open in 2080 and Subseries 6 will be fully open in 2079. Subseries 7 contains oversize restricted material that is restricted for 50 or 80 years from its date of creation and will be fully open in 2051.

In many of the series, in some cases Norman McQuown made notes on the original folders classifying the work by form and subject. These notes have been copied over to the current folders. He also noted when material was available in the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology (MCMCA), and this information has been included in the current folder titles.

Series II: Correspondence and Subject files

This series consists of Norman McQuown's subject files, administrative files, and correspondence. It ranges in date from 1928-2001. The organization of the folders, which includes subject files, administrative files, and correspondence filed together as one sequence, reflects McQuown's own organization and use of the files. It is how the majority of the folders were found prior to processing and appears to be how McQuown maintained them. In most cases, folder titles were also taken directly from McQuown's original folders. Most subjects and correspondents are given their own folders, but for each letter of the alphabet there is also one folder of infrequent or miscellaneous correspondence that McQuown did not place in individual folders. Researchers should check these if the name of a correspondent they are interested in does not appear on the inventory. Additionally, the Research, Chiapas Projects, and Interview Analysis series each contain correspondence related to specific projects.

In addition to correspondence, this series includes pamphlets, fliers, newsletters, and promotional material for journals, conferences, publishers, and professional organizations; University of Chicago administrative files, including a significant number from the Department of Anthropology; committee working files; notices and schedules for lectures and other campus events; and Norman McQuown's notes. The series also contains a significant amount of material, including Norman McQuown's grant files, from organizations such as the National Endowment for the Humanities, National Institutes of Health, National Institute of Mental Health, and National Science Foundation. There is also correspondence in Esperanto and related material discussing international language. A portion of this material is filed under "Esperanto," but researchers interested in this topic should also do a general search for "Esperanto."

Series III: Writing

Subseries 1, Writings, translations, and language notes, contains formal and informal writings by Norman McQuown as well as related documents. It ranges in date from 1916-1999. The material covers nearly all of the European and Native American languages that McQuown studied over the course of his career but also contains material on a wide range of languages that were not among his specialties. Included are typescripts and handwritten drafts of lectures, articles, reports, reviews, book chapters, and grammars; reprints and offprints of publications; bibliographies; notes; charts and worksheets; and McQuown's MA and PhD theses. Also included are translations, both of McQuown's own writing and his translations of others' work, including Leonard Bloomfield's Language. Many of the writings are accompanied by related material such as correspondence, clippings, or related notes or articles written by others. McQuown's alphabetical filing system and folder titles have generally been maintained in this subseries. This includes a small number of folders, mostly language notes, which appear to include material that was not written by Norman McQuown. To keep his organizational system intact, these folders have been maintained in this subseries.

In some cases, Norman McQuown made notes on the outside of the original folders classifying the work by form and subject, and these notes have been copied over to the current folders. He also noted when material was available in the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology (MCMCA), and this information has been included in the current folder titles.

Subseries 2, Instructional Texts, contains drafts, often multiple versions, and final copies of instructional texts that Norman McQuown edited, compiled, and/or translated. This includes "Introducción al Náhuatl Clásico," "Spoken Quiché Maya," "Spoken Turkish," "Spoken Yucatec Maya," and "El Tzeltal Hablado." They range in date from 1944-1996.

Series IV: Research

Subseries 1, Archival Research, consists largely of notes and handwritten catalogs created by Norman McQuown based on his archival research in Europe and the United States. Also included are related documents such as brochures, applications, and brief correspondence. The material ranges in date from 1960-1992.

Subseries 2, Computing, contains user guides and manuals, instructions, articles, notes, computer punch cards and print-outs, and other material related to Norman McQuown and his colleagues' use of computers to process linguistic material in the 1960s and 1970s. Also included here are memoranda, newsletters, notices, and other documents from the University of Chicago's Computation Center. Computer processing material that clearly corresponds to a particular language has been placed with that material in Subseries 3. The material ranges in date from 1953-1995. There is also a significant amount of computing material in the Oversize Series.

Subseries 3, Central American languages, contains notes, articles, computer processing material, surveys, transcriptions of texts, worksheets, research proposals, and other material on specific Central American languages. It is arranged alphabetically by language, or in one case (Huehuetenango) by location. There is a small amount of unlabeled material, for which the language is unidentified, at the end. The material ranges in date from 1890-2000.

Subseries 4, Mayan languages – general, contains project and grant files, reports, correspondence, newsletters, brochures, and other publications that cover the general Mayan language family or relate to multiple languages. It is arranged alphabetically. The files of the University of Chicago's Macro Mayan Linguistic Research Project/Program and Mayan Studies Program are included here. The material ranges in date from 1930-1997.

Subseries 5, Mayan languages – writings by others, contains articles, notes, conference papers, chapters and other writings on Mayan linguistics by scholars other than Norman McQuown. A significant portion of it relates to Maya writing. It is arranged alphabetically by author and ranges in date from 1935-1996. McQuown appears to have maintained this material separately, but the general Writings by Others series also contains writings on this subject.

Subseries 6, Turkish, contains material from the American Council of Learned Societies Turkish Language Project, including notes, articles, transcriptions of texts, and other linguistic material. It ranges in date from 1941-1958. There are also a number of Turkish publications in the Oversize Series.

Subseries 7, Card File Boxes, contains Norman McQuown's extensive linguistic card files. The majority of the cards reflect his efforts to document the grammar and vocabulary of Central American indigenous languages. A few sets of bibliographic cards and sets of cards on multiple languages have been placed at the beginning of the series. Following this, they are arranged alphabetically by language. Within each language, Norman McQuown's filing system, including his organization and labels, has been maintained whenever possible. Many of the boxes the cards were taken from included a description of the language as well as a letter / number identifier, and both have been included in the box title when available. There are a small number of unlabeled cards at the end of the series. Unless otherwise noted, the cards are generally undated.

In many of the subseries, in some cases Norman McQuown made notes on the original folders classifying the work by form and subject, and these notes have been copied over to the current folders. He also noted when material was available in the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology (MCMCA), and this information has been included in the current folder titles.

Series V: Chiapas Projects

Subseries 1, Field work and research, contains linguistic and sociocultural data collected by Chiapas project field workers and related documents used to support this data collection and analysis. It ranges in date from 1956-1965. The subseries begins with linguistic questionnaires, arranged by informant number. These are followed by sociocultural censuses, also arranged by informant number. It appears that these two sets of questionnaires make use of the same informants and numbers.

Following this material are lexicostatistical counts and analyses, again arranged by informant number, which appear to have been part of a smaller pilot project carried out in 1959. Next, there is a small amount of sociocultural and linguistic data from speakers of the Pocomchi language in Guatemala.

Finally, the subseries contains notes, vocabularies, codes, maps, forms, cards, instructions, a roster of informants, and other miscellaneous material associated with Chiapas project research and data analysis. This material is arranged alphabetically.

Subseries 2, Correspondence, contains letters that Norman McQuown appears to have labeled as or filed with Chiapas project material. It is arranged alphabetically by the last name of McQuown's correspondent, followed by general (infrequent) correspondence, budget correspondence, letters to the project group, and unidentified correspondence. The series ranges in date from 1950-1966. Researchers interested in a particular correspondent should also check the general correspondence and subject files series.

Subseries 3, Writing, contains papers, reports, field notes, seminar and roundtable papers, research proposals, drafts, summaries, articles, and notes. It begins with more general project-wide bibliographies, collections of papers, reports, and research proposals, which are arranged alphabetically by title. Following this are individual writings arranged alphabetically by the last name of the author, including Norman McQuown. At the end of the subseries are collections of indigenous stories, Textos Tzeltales and Textos Tzotziles. The writings range in date from 1952-1977, with the majority dating from 1957-1962. Researchers interested in writings by a particular author should also check the Writings by Others series.

Subseries 4, Cuarenta años de investigaciones antropológicas en Chiapas conference, contains planning materials, correspondence, and papers from a conference and reunion that Norman McQuown organized in 1982 to commemorate forty years of anthropological research in Chiapas. It ranges in date from 1979-1987.

In many of the subseries, in some cases Norman McQuown made notes on the original folders classifying the work by form and subject, and these notes have been copied over to the current folders. He also noted when material was available in the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology (MCMCA), and this information has been included in the current folder titles.

There is also a significant amount Chiapas Projects material in the Oversize Series.

Series VII: Manuel Andrade Papers

Subseries 1, Correspondence, contains Manuel Andrade's professional correspondence and is arranged alphabetically. Andrade was a University of Chicago anthropologist and linguist who studied Central American indigenous languages and passed away unexpectedly in 1941. Norman McQuown inherited his papers when he arrived at Chicago a few years later. Andrade's letters range in date from 1929-1942. McQuown devoted a significant amount of time to organizing Andrade's work, and many folders also contain brief notes from him or his research assistants.

Subseries 2, Writings, contains articles, reports and a significant number of handwritten, unpublished notes. It includes material on both general linguistic analysis and specific languages. Andrade's material ranges in date from 1931-1940, with many undated items. Most folders also contain brief, undated notes from Norman McQuown that describe the material. McQuown's notes are the source of most of the folder titles.

Subseries 3, Research and texts, contains linguistic survey forms, notebooks, vocabularies, transcriptions and translations of indigenous texts, letters, and other research material documenting Andrade's work on Central American indigenous languages. It is arranged alphabetically by language. In most cases, the transcriptions and translations appear to have been created by Norman McQuown and his research assistants from texts gathered or recorded by Andrade. There are also notes and material building on Andrade's work from McQuown and his assistants, and in many cases McQuown's notes have been used to create the current folder titles. The material ranges in date from 1932-circa 1990s and also contains a significant amount of undated material.

In many of the subseries, in some cases Norman McQuown made notes on the original folders classifying the work by form and subject, and these notes have been copied over to the current folders. He also noted when material was available in the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology (MCMCA), and this information has been included in the current folder titles.

Series VIII: Writings by Others

This series contains writings by scholars other than Norman McQuown as well as brief notes by McQuown on others' work. It includes articles and reprints, typescripts, ditto copies, and handwritten notes. McQuown's alphabetical filing system and folder titles have generally been maintained, with writings organized alphabetically by author and generally filed alphabetically by title within each author. At the end of the series, there is a set of papers that were labeled "Collected Linguistics Papers," and these have been kept together and organized alphabetically by author. The material ranges in date from 1850-1999.

In some cases, Norman McQuown made notes on the original folders classifying the work by form and subject, and these notes have been copied over to the current folders. He also noted when material was available in the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology (MCMCA), and this information has been included in the current folder titles.

There are additional writings by others, which McQuown appears to have maintained separately, in the Mayan Languages – Writings by Others subseries of the Research Series and the Writing subseries of the Chiapas Projects series.

Series IX: Audiovisual

Subseries 1, Audio and Video Recordings, contains three audio tapes, two phonographic records, a film, and a miscellaneous video recording from a student project. It includes the "Doris film" from the Natural History of an Interview project. In most cases access copies are not included, so researchers should consult with staff before requesting this material.

Subseries 2, Microfilm and Microfiche, contains miscellaneous microfilm reels and microfiche sheets, including material from the Chiapas project and Norman McQuown's Spoken Turkish book. Access copies are not included, so researchers should consult with staff before requesting this material.

Subseries 3, Negatives and Photographs, contains several sets of images. First are a few miscellaneous negatives. These are followed by photographs depicting varied activities such as academic conferences and McQuown family gatherings, which are arranged chronologically with undated material placed at the end. Next are images from the Chiapas project. A group of photographs identified as having been taken by Eva Verbitsky Hunt are placed first, arranged according to the photograph number that they were labeled with prior to arriving at the archives. Following these are Chiapas project images for which the photographer is unknown, including a set of aerial photographs. Finally, the series contains a box of blank postcards depicting Norman McQuown's varied travel destinations.

Subseries 4, Slides, mostly depict Norman McQuown's travels with his family, research trips, and life in Chicago. They include images of Mexico, Central America, the United States, and Europe. In general, the slides appear to be more personal, rather than professional, although there are a wide range of images. McQuown individually labeled almost all of the slides and in some cases also numbered them, and his labels were used as the basis for folder titles whenever possible. His notes and inventories for the slides are also included here. Many of the slides were originally stored in large metal drawers, and in these cases the drawer they were taken from is noted on the folder.

The first set of slides are a mix of glass and plastic from the late 1950s and mostly depict locations in Central America, particularly Chiapas, where McQuown conducted research. Also included are a few images of Buffalo, New York. Following these are a few folders of undated slides that appear to be from relatively early in Norman McQuown's career, depicting research locations and colleagues. Next is the largest set of slides, which appear to be of a more personal nature and are arranged chronologically. They include many images of Central America but also feature the McQuown family, their friends, and travels in Europe. Finally, the series includes a small number of commercial slides that may have been used for teaching and/or acquired as souvenirs.

Subseries 5 contains magnetic computer tape used for linguistics projects and digital material from two floppy disks. Access copies are not included, so researchers should consult with staff before requesting this material.

Series XII: Interview Analysis projects

Subseries 1, Correspondence, documents Norman McQuown's work as a member of a project group that conducted linguistic and kinesic microanalysis of family interactions and psychiatric interviews. It includes discussions of The Natural History of an Interview project as well as analyses of films of other families that were not featured in Natural History of an Interview. The series ranges in date from 1956-1981 and is arranged alphabetically by correspondent, with a folder for infrequent correspondents at the end. Correspondence between members of the project team other than Norman McQuown is generally filed according to the letter's author.

Subseries 2, General files, contains working files from The Natural History of an Interview and other interview analysis projects. It includes material for conference presentations, articles by and about McQuown's interview analysis collaborators, grant applications, and miscellaneous material such as transcriptions, charts, and worksheets. It is arranged alphabetically and ranges in date from 1956-1985.

Subseries 3, Text, contains the unpublished text of The Natural History of an Interview, including multiple edited versions of drafts of many chapters. It is arranged by chapter and ranges in date from 1956-1971.

Subseries 4, Transcripts, contains annotated transcripts of interviews by Gregory Bateson and related family interactions. All but one of the transcripts are from The Natural History of an Interview project. Most of the transcripts depict the same scenes but contain different notes and edits. The series ranges in date from 1956-1963.

In many of the subseries, in some cases Norman McQuown made notes on the original folders classifying the work by form and subject, and these notes have been copied over to the current folders. He also noted when material was available in the Microfilm Collection of Manuscripts on Cultural Anthropology (MCMCA), and this information has been included in the current folder titles.
