Letter from the CEO

Todd Sherer, PhD

In 2011 at The Michael J. Fox Foundation (MJFF), it was clear our movement was growing: in the lab, in the clinic and in the Parkinson's community. More than 57,000 individuals, corporations and foundations demonstrated their belief in our mission to cure Parkinson's through their financial support. Thousands more reinforced this belief through other vital contributions — by building community and awareness through Team Fox, getting involved in clinical trials, and sharing our can-do message of hope and optimism.

As Michael J. Fox has said, we have worked tirelessly to understand the silos of activity for different ideas in different labs all over the world. We have tipped over those silos to create tunnels of opportunity — passages that enable the best ideas to move to the patients who are waiting. Along the way, we have proven that a different kind of player could de-risk drug development, capable of attracting buy-in from key stakeholders across Big Pharma, biotech and academia.

Helping to build momentum in 2011 was an extraordinary $50-million challenge, launched by longtime Foundation friends Sergey Brin, co-founder of Google, and his wife, Anne Wojcicki, co-founder of personal genetics company 23andMe. Still in effect through year-end 2012, the Brin Wojcicki Challenge is designed to inspire the Foundation's donors and to leverage our capacity-building funds through a dollar-for-dollar match. The Challenge has already encouraged acts of amazing generosity, and sparked unique and creative partnerships. Read more about the Challenge on page 5 and our remarkable partnership with Nike on 25.

As always, we take your investment in us seriously and put it straight to work — devoting over 88 cents of every dollar spent to the research effort. Thanks to the generosity of donors like you, MJFF funded more than $57 million in pathbreaking research in 2011, the most we've ever spent in a single year. Our in-house team of neuroscientists and business strategists reviewed over 900 grant applications, bringing our current portfolio up to 400 active grants.

Responding to patients' unmet needs remains our foremost concern. The complexities of Parkinson's disease mean there are many paths of scientific opportunity we must interrogate. We've developed over 100 drug targets to date, and in 2012 will surpass $300 million in research funded. We continue to pursue disease-modifying therapies, along with treatments for dyskinesia and other unaddressed symptoms, such as cognitive impairment, and improved dopamine-delivery methods. In 2005, we first funded the novel approach of Anders Björklund, MD, PhD, to treat dyskinesia. MJFF has since chaperoned this therapy into a human clinical trial — which announced positive initial results early this year. In 2011, in honor of his profound contributions to Parkinson's therapeutic development and exceptional commitment to mentoring the next generation of PD researchers, we recognized Björklund with the inaugural Robert A. Pritzker Prize for Leadership in Parkinson's Research.

Through our focus on biomarkers, we strive to pinpoint these necessary tools for testing disease-modifying therapies for Parkinson's. Now with 11 industry partners, the Parkinson's Progression Markers Initiative (PPMI) is yielding results. We have crossed the halfway point in our recruitment goals, for both patients and controls. With the study under way, researchers are actively tapping into the data from PPMI in real time. This is informing studies that could lead to new therapies, and initial findings are already being presented.

We now know genetics plays a larger role in PD than previously thought. By zeroing in on some of the most informative genetic contributors to PD, such as LRRK2 and alpha-synuclein, we're revealing new avenues to develop disease-modifying treatments that would benefit all patients.

None of this progress would be possible without your generous support. You are members of our most dedicated circle of donors. For everything you do, we are truly grateful.

We see our innovative model gaining traction, as several of the high-risk targets we supported years ago in their earlier stages are now in the clinic. Yet even as more therapies have approached the clinic, we have recognized new challenges in need of MJFF's attention — especially in clinical trial participation.

We have always known that dollars alone would not get us to a cure. That is why in 2011, we embarked on a crucial effort to inform patients about the critical role they can play in speeding results from clinical studies. Last July, we rolled out Fox Trial Finder, an online tool to connect patients with the trials that need them.

Reporting on the tool in April, the Wall Street Journal's Laura Landro noted, "A persistent shortage of volunteers has slowed trials of new treatments... Because the Fox Foundation and other groups pay for research and raise funds, they have ready access to the latest studies, and can get the word out." Today, we are closing in on our goal of 10,000 volunteers in 2012 — giving us great hope that Fox Trial Finder will accelerate the development of new treatments for all.

To no one's surprise, our Team Fox members were among the first to raise their hands for Fox Trial Finder, responding with their characteristic enthusiasm and energy. Whether hosting a Pancakes for Parkinson's birthday party or running thousands of miles, Team Fox members inspired us throughout the year. Together, 1,500 members raised almost $5 million in 2011, pushing them past the $15-million mark in dollars raised since the launch of Team Fox in 2006. They not only raise much-needed funds for research, they connect patients and families to each other in communities globally. They represent some of our most loyal and passionate supporters and are playing an essential role in sharing our message of urgency and opportunity.

Our movement is gaining speed and stakeholders. I am thankful to count you among them, and look forward to keeping you apprised of our progress in the coming year.

2011 Donor Listing

Thanks to more than 57,000 individuals, corporations and foundations, The Michael J. Fox Foundation funded over $57 million in research in 2011 — the most ever in a single year. The generosity represented in the following pages enables our efforts to develop breakthrough treatments and, ultimately, a cure.

This report lists those who honored the Foundation with significant gifts in 2011. Also listed are the many friends and family members to whom they paid tribute with their donations. Their names inspire us each day as we pursue our vision of a world free of Parkinson's disease.

BRIN WOJCICKI CHALLENGE

for THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION FOR PARKINSON'S RESEARCH

Help Us Make Parkinson's Disease History

In 2011, Sergey Brin, co-founder of Google, and his wife, Anne Wojcicki, co-founder of personal genetics company 23andMe, challenged The Michael J. Fox Foundation to raise $50 million by December 31, 2012, which they will match dollar for dollar. Over 25,000 individuals, corporations and foundations became part of the Brin Wojcicki Challenge — contributing more than $27 million, and bringing us that much closer to a cure for Parkinson's.

The response the Challenge has evoked in acts of generosity and enthusiasm throughout the Parkinson's community — and beyond — is truly astonishing. We are deeply grateful to everyone who contributed in 2011.

Hailing from across the globe, supporters joined the Challenge through gifts of all sizes. Many came as new donors, or returned to the Foundation to give for the first time since 2009 or earlier. Others were already MJFF donors, inspired to stretch their giving and maximize their impact.

It's not too late to join this incredible movement. Working together, we can make Parkinson's a thing of the past. Every gift is a chance to help speed research and better treatments for millions of Parkinson's patients worldwide. With less than six months to go, we need your help to raise more than $20 million in 2012.

The Challenge comes at a unique moment in our Foundation's history, and in millions of patients' futures. MJFF is using Challenge donations to fund research that otherwise would go unfunded and to tackle key challenges that prohibit real progress toward better outcomes for patients. Our strategy to de-risk drug development has enabled many more potential therapies to make their way into clinical testing. But as these treatments get closer to pharmacy shelves, the research comes with exponentially steeper price tags. So there has never been a better time to leverage your support.

Be part of this opportunity to transform the future of Parkinson's research. Learn more today at www.michaeljfox.org/challenge.

The MJFF Legacy Circle

The Legacy Circle honors friends who support the Foundation's work through bequests or other planned gifts. While MJFF's mission has always been to put itself out of business by curing PD, planned gifts provide a major, long-term funding source that we can both plan around and leverage immediately to accelerate high-impact research.

Back For The Future: The 2011 Nike MAG Auction

In September 2011, Nike announced the limited-edition release of the 2011 Nike MAG sneakers to benefit MJFF. An exact replica of the Back to the Future II shoes worn by Michael J. Fox as Marty McFly, 1,500 pairs were auctioned on eBay over 10 days, with net proceeds totaling over $4.7 million — doubled to more than $9.4 million by the Brin Wojcicki Challenge. We are truly grateful to Nike for its remarkable generosity, and to the almost 1,000 individuals listed here who participated in the auction. This unique partnership sparked excitement worldwide, and generated critical funds and awareness for Parkinson's research.

We have made a concerted effort to accurately list all donors of significant contributions in 2011.

If your name is misspelled or missing from this report, please accept our apology and email the correct information to donations@ michaeljfox.org.

2011 Financial Highlights

At The Michael J. Fox Foundation, we know donors have choices when it comes to their charitable giving. We are grateful you choose to place your financial support — and hope — in our Foundation. Because we take that responsibility seriously, two of our core values are efficiency and accountability.

But we believe what we do with the dollars raised is equally important. Obsessed with producing results, we are dedicated to driving impact for patients across the board. We operate with a focused sense of urgency to find a cure for Parkinson's and to ensure the development of improved therapies for people living with Parkinson's today. We are optimistic and won't stop until better treatments are found.

“MJFF is tightly focused and able to clearly state its objectives and show results — something organizations of every size and mission can aspire to.”

Fundraising Success magazine

- We constantly monitor costs to maximize the value of donations. Since inception, 88 cents of every dollar we've spent has gone straight to our research programs effort.
- We are outcomes-focused. Tying grant payments to the achievement of specific milestones, we stand ready to quickly supplement ideas that are showing progress, troubleshoot challenges if they arise and halt funding if the science stalls. And we hold ourselves to the same rigorous standards we ask of our awardees.
- We are invested in getting it right. Through our intellectual leadership and strategic problem-solving, we do whatever it takes to accelerate Parkinson's drug development.
- We deliberately have no endowment. We believe that to speed a cure for Parkinson's disease, our capital must be nimble — getting into scientists' hands as quickly as possible, not sitting in an endowment or reserve.

MJFF ended 2011 closing in on the $300 million mark in research funded since inception. Ultimately, though, we measure our success not in terms of dollars spent, but in terms of scientific solutions patients can feel in their everyday lives.

As our longstanding friends and supporters, you help make this possible. Thank you for all you do.

2011 financial highlights follow. Full audited financials and our most recent IRS Form 990s are available at www.michaeljfox.org.

2011 Financial Highlights — Canada

Since our launch in 2000, The Michael J. Fox Foundation has received a steady outpouring of Canadian support. Canadian researchers have been actively involved in our scientific agenda since the earliest days and individuals from all over the country have stepped up to promote Parkinson's disease awareness by investing in our research or joining Team Fox. MJFF officially registered as a Canadian charity in 2009.

Afterword by Michael J. Fox and Deborah W. Brooks

Dear Friend,

The names contained within this book, and the radical acts of generosity they represent, are both inspiring and humbling. We are so grateful for the dedication of you, our friends and supporters.

The answer to Parkinson's disease is bigger than any single individual or organization. It is truly in all of us. Thank you for being a part of our movement.

We'll keep counting on you to support, amaze and inspire us — right up to the day we find a cure.

With gratitude,

Michael J. Fox
Founder
