Madeleine Albright, Desmond Tutu and Christiane Amanpour at NDI's 2008 Democracy Awards Luncheon

“Democracy must deliver because nothing else can.”

NDI Chairman Madeleine K. Albright

The National Democratic Institute (NDI) is a global leader that for the last quarter century has worked to support and strengthen democratic institutions and practices in more than 100 countries in every region of the world.

NDI believes that democracy anywhere benefits freedom everywhere. Its political development work can often lead to long-term economic and social changes that advance peace and improve quality of life. This, in turn, helps to create stable societies that are more likely to be partners, rather than adversaries.

Corporate Partners of NDI include:

AH&T
Baker & Hostetler
The Boeing Company
BP
CH2M Hill
Chevron
Citigroup
Crabtree & Company

Daimler
DeBeers
Discovery Communications
Eli Lilly & Company
ExxonMobil
Global Health Progress
HarperCollins Publishers
Johnson & Johnson
Lockheed Martin Corporation

Microsoft Corporation
Pal-Tech, Inc.
Paladin Capital Group
Perkins Coie, LLP
PhRMA
Reebok
Shell
SunTrust Bank

Efforts to support democracy reflect the highest moral values of the United States. But advancing democracy also serves strategic interests by building a world that is secure, stable, humane and safe, and where the risk of war is minimal.

The areas of the world most likely to erupt into violence are those that are nondemocratic or where governments are anti-democratic. Democracies remain viable by resolving conflicts peacefully and by improving the quality of life for their citizens. Not only are democracies inherently more stable, but they are also better trading partners.

Democracies also promote economic growth more consistently and equitably than non-democratic political systems. It is no coincidence that most of the world's wealthiest and most peaceful nations are also the most democratic. Corrupt practices can exist in every society, but when officials cannot be held accountable for their actions, a culture of corruption takes root.

A nonpartisan, nongovernmental organization, NDI works with democrats around the world to advance citizen engagement, strengthen accountable governments and promote peaceful political reform.

Good governance and political accountability are in the interest of everyone, including the private sector. NDI can help corporations develop a greater understanding of global political challenges and provide an opportunity to join the discussion on how the private sector can contribute to advancing democracy and human rights around the globe.

Benefits of NDI's Corporate Partnership Group

NDI provides corporations with unique political analysis and news and, in the over 70 countries where it works, opportunities to partner with civic and community groups, and direct contact and dialogue with NDI staff. Benefits include:

NGOs and the Private Sector Help Address Transparency Issues

In many resource-rich countries, corruption is a national problem. In response to this challenge, NDI has partnered with NGOs and companies to assist the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI), an international effort to improve public information about natural resource wealth. With the assistance of the World Bank, Revenue Watch and Shell, NDI produced a practical handbook for legislators to help stem the frequent misuse and mismanagement of revenues from oil, gas and mining: the EITI Guide for Legislators: How to Support and Strengthen Resource Transparency.

Liz Claiborne Partners with NDI to Train Women in Indonesia

Recognizing the need to advance political opportunities for Indonesian women, the Liz Claiborne Foundation supported NDI to help fund a leadership and campaign management training program for women running in Indonesia's April 2004 legislative elections. The Foundation's contribution supported training workshops for 155 women party members and activists in the provinces of Central Java, East Kalimantan and Papua.

DeBeers and Coca-Cola Work with NDI to Combat HIV/AIDS in Africa

Across Africa, the HIV/AIDS pandemic has ravaged societies. NDI is working to support the efforts of national legislatures to serve as advocates for constituents who are heavily affected by HIV and AIDS. To increase the lawmakers' understanding of the issues and solutions, NDI partnered with NAMDEB (Namibia/DeBeers Joint Partnership) and Coca Cola – each of which has extensive HIV/AIDS workplace programs - to hold a series of roundtable discussions on the disease. The companies explained their health care programs and invited parliamentarians to visit their work sites to learn more about the prevention and treatment of HIV/AIDS.

Microsoft Helps Increase Efficiency and Constituency Outreach of South Africa's Parliament

In response to South Africa's request for assistance in streamlining the legislative and communications processes of its newly created second chamber of parliament, the National Council of Provinces (NCOP), NDI worked with Microsoft to develop a unique information and communications tool. This new system linked the nine provincial councils of South Africa with parliamentarians in the national legislature and provided constituents with opportunities to communicate online with their elected officials about proposed legislation.

Citigroup Works with NDI to Build Civil Society in Indonesia

In Indonesia, Citigroup partnered with NDI and the University of Indonesia to help non-profit organizations improve their organizational and management skills. These civil society organizations, which are promoting good governance and advocating for the rights of citizens, received support in financial, programmatic, human resources and governance issues. Thus far, over 300 mid-level non-profit organization managers have received training through this program.
