IE INFORMATION NOTICE NO. 84-68: POTENTIAL DEFICIENCY IN IMPROPERLY RATED
FIELD WIRING TO SOLENOID VALVES

Addressees:

All holders of a nuclear power reactor operating license (OL) or construction permit (CP).

Purpose:

This notice is provided to inform recipients of a potential deficiency involving field installed electric cables with low temperature rated insulation that are terminated inside solenoid valves with high temperature valve body housing. A cable insulation breakdown may prevent safety-related solenoid valves from operating properly. It is expected that recipients will review the information for applicability to their facilities and consider actions, if appropriate, to preclude a similar problem occurring at their facilities. However, suggestions contained in this information notice do not constitute requirements and, therefore, no specific action or written response is required.

Description of Circumstances:

On March 19, 1984, Bechtel Power Corporation reported under 10 CFR 21 a design deficiency in field-run cables to Valcor solenoid valves at Callaway and Wolf Creek Nuclear Plants. A representative of the licensee, the Standardized Nuclear Unit Power Plant System (SNUPPS) Organization, investigated the problem as discussed above and issued a report on April 13, 1984, under the provisions of 10 CFR 50.55(e). The details of the report are summarized below.

The field-run cables are terminated inside a totally enclosed valve body, housing a large energized solenoid. The configuration is such that the terminal boards are located within the valve body above the solenoid. No means is provided to dissipate the heat generated by the solenoid.

Callaway documented the deficiency involving degraded insulation on field-run cables connected to Valcor solenoid valves. The valve qualification documents revealed that the ambient temperatures inside the valve body can approach a maximum of 250-280 °F when the valves are energized for an extended period of time. The field-run cable, used to connect the valve into the plant control system, has an insulation temperature rating of 90 °C (144 °F). Using this lower temperature insulation cable within a high ambient temperature valve body will cause the cable insulation to degrade prematurely and may result in cable insulation failure and ultimately compromise the safety function of the valve.

Notice 84-68

Wolf Creek and Callaway each have 37 Class 1E Valcor valves that are affected by this deficiency. An additional 6 non-Class 1E Valcor valves are also affected. The safety related valves are in the following systems:

Containment hydrogen control
Nuclear sampling
Steam generator blowdown
Residual heat removal
Containment purge
Fuel building HVAC

Other types and makes of valves may be affected at other nuclear sites.

A SNUPPS followup report dated May 10, 1984 indicated that further investigation identified valves other than Valcor solenoid valves that have similar deficiencies as described above. These are:

- 1) Twenty Target Rock solenoid valves furnished under the (NSSS) scope for use in safety-related systems
- 2) Two ASCO solenoid valves on each of 12 condenser dump valves (not safety-related)
- 3) One ASCO solenoid valve on each of two control room heating, ventilation, and air conditioning (HVAC) water control valves

Corrective Action:

SNUPPS implemented design changes to replace a portion of the field-run wiring with qualified high-temperature wiring with 200°C rated insulation. The high-temperature wire is used as a jumper from the terminal block inside the valve body to a splice box located approximately 5 to 10 feet from the valve. The field-run cable is spliced into the high-temperature wire in the splice box, thus, there is no low-temperature cable inside of the valve body.

No written response to this information notice is required. If you have any questions about this matter, please contact the Regional Administrator of the appropriate NRC regional office or this office.
