

FIXED GEAR NEEDS A BIGGER SHARE

ALLOCATION - HISTORY

1. You took a large number of our fish and gave it to the trawl fleet. ("They needed it for by-catch".) The allocation was 52/48 prior to redistribution. I think that was in the early 1990's.

2. You bought back a bunch of trawl permits and didn't give back any poundage to the fixed gear fleet. ("Guess they still needed it".) That was in about 2005.

3. You have determined that the trawl fleet can catch their black cod in pots. (What happened to all the black cod by-catch they needed?")

4. What does happen when a trawler catches cod that has let its IFQ go to another vessel? ("Please don't tell me that now they need more for their by-catch".)

5. When the fixed gear fleet had to divide the pie, individual catch records were thrown out the window when the 3 tiers were made.

Sure, you had to catch a certain amount to make each tier but after you had that minimum to make the top tier, everything else was thrown out. ("I caught 5.1 million pounds of black cod from 1978 to 1991 and my top tier had the same amount of pounds as everyone else that made a top tier.")

THIS IS NOT WHAT IS HAPPENING TO THE TRAWL FLEET.

6. When the fixed gear fleet's pie got cut, shredded, and wedged, we were told (under rules) that no vessel, partnership, individual, or corporation collectively could have more than 3 permits. "What part of an IFQ isn't another permit?" It comes from NOAA, authorizes a certain amount of pounds, and, in all manners, is handled as a permit to catch more fish.

PROPOSAL

1. Put a cap on the maximum amount of cod any vessel could earn on its IFQ.

A. This number should be quite a bit less than the 'big guys' have coming now, but more than entry level. I don't know why it should be any bigger than what a top tier fixed gear gets now.

2. Put the extra fish that this creates back into the fixed gear fishery. That's what they are part of now. ("Hey, if a top tier goes up for us, it would go up for the IFQ people, too".)

A. This increase would affect the entire fixed gear and the open access folks.

3. Limit any vessel to 3 permits which would include the IFQ.

A. ("Hey, that's the law, don't weasel around it.")

4. Put a limit on all fleets, fixed and IFQ, on how long pots can stay in the water unattended.

A. You have VMS. Use it.

B. I recommend 10 days to 2 weeks.

C. I bring my pots in every time I can. I have had to leave sets for weather and break downs but have always returned to the pots sooner than 10 days.

5. And finally people, "wake up". A pot is the best way to catch black cod. It fishes clean, no hooks to remove, very little by-catch and fish that are returned stand a great chance of survival. Unless you soak them too long. Your rule about IFQ pot boats having to "keep everything" they catch is much more harmful to the fish/fishery than any releasing of small fish would be. How do IFQ's get around the "keep everything rule"? They soak them too long. Soak a pot 2 weeks with escape rings and all you have left are big fish and skeletons. Soak a pot 6 hours and you have nothing but live and excited fish. You throw them over and you know they are going to make it back and return when they get bigger. Support this fishery. Get rid of the "keep everything" rule for the IFQ's.

6. Getting rid of the "keep everything" rule would go a long way towards my proposal number 4: limiting the length of time pots can remain unattended.

Dear Mr. Mikell:

Thank you for your letter dated June 15, 2012 regarding safety concerns relating to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Fisheries Observer Program for nearshore fixed gear vessels in and around Gold Beach and Brookings, Oregon. We have worked with the National Observer Program and NOAA General Counsel to address your concerns. We very much appreciate you taking the time to provide feedback and suggestions. We are always seeking ways to improve the safety of this important program.

We recognize that the west coast commercial nearshore fixed gear fleet is composed of small vessels and that each west coast port has unique features, including but not limited to bar crossings and other potential safety concerns. The NOAA Fisheries Observer Program run through the Northwest Fisheries Science Center (NWFSC) has operated in this fleet since 2004. The priority of the NWFSC Observer Programs is to collect required catch and biological data in a manner that is safe for both the vessel operators and the NOAA-trained observers deployed on the vessels. For the NWFSC Observer Program, observers are deployed under the Pacific Coast Groundfish Fishery Management Plan (Groundfish FMP or Plan) and the Plan's implementing regulations, cited in regulation at 50 CFR 660.316, which can be found at: http://ecfr.gpoaccess.gov/cgi/t/text/text-idx?c=ecfr&sid=4df907436aeb7e75fadab50b879ebfc0&tpl=/ecfrbrowse/Title50/50cfr660_main_02.tpl.

While there are a myriad of possible vessel/observer interactions to deal with in any new and existing observer deployment program, NOAA recognizes the validity of your concerns, and has taken steps to address them. Observer program logistical coordinators interact with vessel owners to work out any potential issues, including safety concerns, prior to deploying an observer on all vessels. Some of the additional steps taken by the NWFSC Observer Program that should provide for data collection in a safe and effective manner are outlined below, in response to your concerns:

1. For the past 11 years the NWFSC Observer Program has been deploying observers in west coast fisheries, including nearshore fisheries in Oregon and California. Vessels observed by the program range in size from 18 feet to over 300 feet in length. Our program staff, in collaboration with the commercial fishing industry, has successfully addressed the limitations encountered on smaller vessels, including weather concerns, bar crossings, and sleep and bath facilities through observer training and pre-deployment meetings with vessel operators.

2. The current procedures used by the NWFSC Observer Program to evaluate a request for a waiver of observer coverage on a vessel has been modified and improved regularly as we have gained experience with small vessel fleets. The NWFSC Observer Program will review our waiver procedures to determine whether it is feasible, given current resources, to incorporate your suggestion to provide skippers with request forms and approval/denial letters.
3. It is at the agency's discretion to determine whether a vessel is safe and adequate for observer coverage. Each vessel must pass a U.S. Coast Guard safety examination and display a current Commercial Fishing Vessel Safety Decal in order for an observer to be deployed. Each vessel must also pass a pre-deployment safety check completed by the observer in order to be considered safe for observer deployment. NWFSC Observer Program logistical coordinators and observers evaluate vessels on a case-by-case basis and for small vessels, ensure weight limitations will not be exceeded due to an observer and that sufficient deck space exists for them to sample. When observers are assigned trips in the nearshore fisheries, they often evaluate many of the variables you mention, including current and forecasted weather and bar crossing conditions, on the dock immediately before a trip. Observers consult with their logistical coordinator when questions arise. The U.S. Coast Guard is consulted on an as needed basis.
4. The NOAA trained fisheries observers all have full insurance coverage with workers' compensation and medical/health insurance that covers them if an injury occurs while deployed on a trip. Please see attachment for information on the insurance coverage provided by Alaskan Observers, Inc. (AOI), the employer of observers in this fishery.
5. NOAA Fisheries requires observers to pass a safety training course according to specific guidelines outlined at:
http://www.st.nmfs.noaa.gov/st4/nop/documents/Procedural_Directive_04-110-01.pdf. The NWFSC Observer Program exceeds the national standards, as we require observers to pass a safety refresher course annually, rather than every 3 years. All of our safety trainers are Alaska Marine Safety Education Association (AMSEA) certified trainers. For more information on AMSEA certification, see: <http://amsea.org>.
6. Vessels that participate in the Oregon nearshore fishery are randomly selected for observer coverage from a pool of vessels that have Oregon black/blue rockfish nearshore and Oregon black/blue rockfish permits. Vessel selections are restricted to vessels greater than or equal to 18 feet. The NWFSC Observer Program annually evaluates vessel selection procedures. Any change in the process of determining observer coverage must be valid from a management, financial, regulatory, and scientific perspective. Observing vessels remotely, allowing all vessels to be waived from coverage, or covering a small number of volunteer vessels 100% of the time does not meet that standard. However your suggestion that we reduce the number of months of coverage may be feasible. Prior to the creation of 2013 selection lists, we will consider the feasibility of reducing the observation from two-months to one-month per calendar year in the west coast nearshore fisheries.

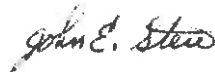

7. NOAA Fisheries requires observer candidates to meet minimum standards to be accepted into an observer training class. These standards can be found at: http://www.st.nmfs.noaa.gov/st4/nop/documents/Eligibility_Procedural_Directive.pdf. The NWFSC Observer Program complies with these standards for observer candidates. NOAA Fisheries observers are biologists and therefore, should not be involved in vessel operations, including navigation. While new observer candidates are not required to have at-sea experience, the majority of observers on the west coast have years of observer experience.

While there is always risk with any vessel deployed at sea, NOAA Fisheries has determined that observers can be safely deployed on the vessels that operate in Oregon nearshore fisheries, including those operating in and near Gold Beach, Oregon. The agency will continue to place observers on these vessels, as observer coverage is required under the West Coast Groundfish FMP and the Plan's implementing regulations. Please be aware that NOAA Fisheries will operate the Oregon nearshore observer program only in a manner that is consistent with observer program regulations which include requirements for observer safety and requirements to ensure that vessels have adequate conditions for performance of observer duties. In operating the program, NOAA Fisheries will consider your concerns both at Regional level through the NWFSC and at the national level through the National Observer Program.

We appreciate the potential remedies you have listed for our consideration. Thank you for your consideration and cooperation in complying with the regulations and helping us to implement a successful observer program.

Groundfish Monitoring Program Manager: Dr. Patricia M. Burke

The mandatory NOAA observer program for the West Coast ground fishery was established by federal regulation and put into effect on May 24, 2001, 50C.F., Part 660 applies. Small offshore commercial boats are now being boarded by contracted observers for a period of two months each year. Nearshore boat owners, skippers, and crew members have growing concerns regarding this program and its' impact upon smaller nearshore boats. Today the safety of all crew members, the onboard observer, and the boat are being severely challenged on several fronts. Boarding an observer elevates risk of injury and navigation hazards. Encroachment on personal privacy and the negative financial impact to small businesses are also key points of concern. An independent in-depth review of the observer program, as it applies to small boats, is respectfully requested. It is also requested that this review evaluate the worth of data verses risks imposed by keeping small boats in this program. If observations are to continue the following issues need your attention :

a. Review observer program operational instruction to improve the process of qualifying boats that can safely host an observer. This must include consideration of specific port seasonal conditions and the availability of local rescue services.

b. Improve program standards and guidelines for evaluating skippers request for program exemption or temporary waiver. Requests should be made through a "Request Form" with denial or approval addressed by letter.

c. Review qualification and experience standards for personnel who manage exemptions and waivers.

d. Mandate on-site reviews by management as necessary to ensure awareness of all factors related to bar crossings at each port. Specific attention should be given to seasonal changes, river water conditions, and changes in the availability of rescue services. Visit the local USCG station and discuss findings.

e. Establish minimum deck space requirements as needed to ensure that safe working zones will be available for all personnel on deck, including the observers work station.

f. Conduct an internal review regarding personal privacy rights and lack of toilet accommodations on small boats. Discuss issue with appropriate state agency as necessary to find out if the current process is legal.

g. Fund sexual harassment training for skippers, crew, and observers,

h. Provide source and funds for boats liability insurance during observation period.

i. Review the financial impact of the observer program on small businesses.

j. Develop procedures to ensure observer assignments are fairly distributed throughout all ports and vessels.

k. Review contractors training program to ensure assigned observers have adequate seamanship and navigation training, including a significant level of underway sea experience.

l. Insure observers complete USCG survival training and carry proof of same.

GENERAL INPUT BY VESSEL OWNER/SKIPPER/CREW

SAFETY ISSUES

The nearshore fishery contains many small boats which range from 17 - 27' in length. In order to get to the fishing grounds they must often cross channel bars which can be extremely challenging and considerably dangerous at times. Changing weather conditions and poor weather forecasts frequently create unexpected sea state conditions which test the limits of every boats' seaworthiness, including the skippers'/crews knowledge and experience. Sometimes taking on an additional person, i.e., an observer, is highly inadvisable. Under the present observer program the opinion of the skipper, his assessment of his boats load capability, and the skipper's recommendations appears to have little bearing on a request for observer program exemption or daily observer waivers. Such requests are decided by program personnel who may have little knowledge of specific ports or condition of selected boat.

It is noted that each nearshore boat must carry 1000 to 2000 pounds of water to maintain its' catch. Adding up the weight of crew, gear, the days catch, and fuel puts the majority of small boats close to, or over, maximum load limit. Stability factors relative to design of the boat is an important factor know best by the skipper. Taking an observer compounds the overload problem, particularly where much of the deck load is above the waterline. An added observer on the deck can also create poor deck balance, particularly when observers lack long term sea experience on small boats.

Small nearshore boats have very limited deck space. The frequency of Injury, from hooks and spines, as fish are propelled onboard, is inversely related to the size of the deck working space. That is the larger the deck space the less accidents. Adequate space must be reserved to provide a safe zone for the crew and observer. Under current conditions the skipper, crew, and observer are at very close proximity which radically raises the risk of personnel injury. Presently little formal consideration is given to deck space limitations. Minimum space standards must be established.

PERSONAL RIGHTS

Privacy does not exist on small open boats. Even small boats which have a cabin only provide for limited privacy. Placing an observer onboard with a 5 gallon bucket for a toilet is unacceptable. There are cases where skipper, crew, or the observer may have special medical problems, e.g., permanent or temporary bouts of illness which create the immediate need for personal privacy. There are some husband/wife operations and having an observer with a 5 gallon bucket toilet is absolutely untenable. This legal aspect of the situation needs review. Enclosure (1) provides related Oregonian article.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Considering the culture of the fishing industry a sexual harassment charge is a real possibility. Most in the nearshore industry have little knowledge of what legally constitutes harassment and the enormous cost of legal fees which follow a formal charge. Currently there is no training or funds available as needed to improve awareness.

FINANCIAL IMPACT

Nearshore fishing produces a modest income partly due to the high cost of fuel and expensive maintenance expenditures. The majority of small boats work on a small profit margin and hence the purchase of expensive liability insurance is beyond reason. In reality, it is believed that liability insurance is unattainable for the majority of small boats currently in the nearshore fishery.

The standing feedback is that ODFW will suspend the permit where a skipper refuses to participate in the observer program. So, in order to work, boat owners are compelled to assume personal liability when hosting an observer.

Essentially, this places all personal property and valuables owned by the skipper/owner at risk. The mandated compliance to the observer program (without provision of liability) needs to be formally reviewed by the appropriate state authority.

There is also the negative impact of observers slowing productivity. Due to marginal profits this is a substantial problem. The primary mission of observers is to record discarded catch, i.e., to identify species/measure length/weight of same. Observers routinely conduct similar measurements on non-discarded catch and thus slow down processing practices. The observer's need to measure retained catch has little merit, and it is costly to the boat. These fish will be accurately measured by the buyer (specie, and weight) and then sampled by ODFW personnel. The mortality rate of fish retained can also be affected by unnecessary handling and thus creates even further loss of revenue. Observers should limit activity to the prime mission of recording statistics of discarded catch. The handling of certain by-catch, like starfish and minutia such as dead clam shells, should also be discontinued.

IN FINAL

The above issues are not frivolous complaints –resolution of the aforementioned is paramount to crew/observer safety, preservation of personal privacy rights, and the ability of many small businesses to remain financially solvent. The current process of placing observers on small boat operations and the burden it creates is unprecedented in American industry. There are alternate ways to conduct nearshore observations which would eliminate some, if not all, of the aforementioned problems. Some are:

- a. Contract private vessels for observer use.
- b. Hire nearshore vessels to carry observers as spotters (no fishing).
- c. Exempt all small vessels from the observer program.
- d. Observer program uses its' own vessel to observe nearshore bi-catch.
- e. Observer program use ODFW, state, or federal owned vessels for observation.

Visit www.kiskorg/201205/0observers-soon-start-work-on-se-gillnet-grounds/

- f. Reduce period of observation to one month (reduces risk 50%).

- g. Place observers on sport boats (they use same fishing techniques).
- h. Use data reported by fisherman. (ref logbook program)
- i. Pay local fisherman, who have seamanship and skill, to be observers.
- j. Change the program into a VOLUNTEER effort through incentives.
- h. Select 5 or 6 volunteer boats to host observers full time. (This is a good option considering that there are a very limited number of safe boats).

Your time and effort in helping us to overcome the problems above is truly appreciated. For further information I can be reached at (541) 469-1215 (home) or (541) 661-1242 (cell). Endorsements to this letter will be forwarded via separate correspondence.

Pacific Fishery Management Council

Portland, Oregon 97220-1384

Dear Chairman Wolford and Council Members:

We write today in support of forage fish conservation. Incorporated in 1884 as an association of Columbia River gillnetters in Astoria, Oregon, the Columbia River Fisherman's Protective Union (CRFPU) is one of the oldest conservation unions on the West Coast. As fishermen who make our living on the River, we know that an abundant supply of baitfish in the ocean is essential to maintain healthy and vibrant salmon runs. That is why we are asking the Council to immediately suspend the development of new fisheries on non-managed forage species until demonstrating it can be done in a way that leaves enough prey in the water to support other fisheries, such as our beloved Columbia River salmon.

With a booming global aquaculture industry that now accounts for significant portion of the seafood consumed by people worldwide, we are alarmed by the vast quantities of forage taken out of the ocean. CRFPU supports traditional West Coast fisheries targeting sardine, herring and anchovies for use as bait or for high-value human consumption. However, the spectacular growth of the fish-farming industry is increasingly driving the market for West Coast forage species toward high-volume, low-value products overseas. We are concerned that it is only a matter of time until currently unregulated forage species become the target of new industrial-scale fisheries that will degrade our fisheries here on the Pacific coast.

Many of us are 3rd, 4th or 5th generation fishermen who want to ensure that our children and grandchildren can continue to fish for generations to come. In the 1930s, CRFPU initiated the first significant legal actions against pollution in the Columbia River and lobbied heavily for clean water legislation, which eventually led to stricter water pollution controls throughout Oregon. But no matter how clean the water is or how many dams we remove, we will not see salmon returning to the River if there is not enough food in the ocean. Therefore, we urge the Council to consider the needs of fishermen and coastal communities that depend on healthy fisheries by ensuring enough bait is left in the ocean.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this important issue.

Chairman Wolford and Council Members

Dear and Council Members,

Thank you for establishing a clear objective to prohibit the development of new fisheries targeting forage species until you can ensure that it would not harm the marine ecosystem or undermine existing fisheries for bigger species such as salmon, tuna, and halibut. Now I ask you to make sure that your objective is accomplished in a reasonable period of time.

Forage species currently unmanaged won't be protected until they are incorporated into an appropriate Fishery Management Plan. The council agreed by consensus that it would begin that process by June 2013. But I am concerned that the groundwork required to enact protections could be delayed indefinitely by agency staff charged with carrying out the council's direction. I urge you to follow through on your commitment to initiate firm regulatory protections of forage fish upon completion of the council's Fishery Ecosystem Plan.

The council rightly concluded that a healthy ocean depends on an abundance of forage fish in the water. The best of intentions, however, mean very little without solid action to back them up. I urge you to carry out your vision as soon as possible.

Chairman Wolford and Executive Director McIssac,

A sincere thanks to each of you and the rest of the Council for your efforts to improve protection of forage fish. As we stated in our June 9th letter to the Council, the Wild Steelhead Coalition (WSC) is very dedicated to ensure abundant prey species in the Pacific to support a healthy marine ecosystem, including wild steelhead. An anadromous fish's survival in the ocean depends on many factors, and often the most critical is the presence and abundance of available forage.

You have made the commitment and now must deliver on it. We encourage you to be vigilant in guaranteeing no delays. With solid support from both recreational and commercial fisherman, momentum is building and now is the time to execute and solidify the protection for these invaluable forage species. Please continue this effort with no compromise.

PACIFIC FISH CONSERVATION CAMPAIGN

4189 S.E. Division St., Portland, Oregon 97202

Aug. 30, 2012

Dan Wolford, Chairman
Pacific Fishery Management Council
7700 N.E. Ambassador Place, Suite 101
Portland, OR 97220-1384

Dear Mr. Wolford,

The Pew Environment Group has collected 3,398 comments from West Coast residents thanking the Council for recognizing the importance of forage fish to our Pacific marine ecosystem and asking the Council to protect currently unmanaged forage species in a reasonable period of time.

The petition itself is included with all the names and addresses of individual signers. Please note that many of these individual petitions have been personalized or include additional comments.

Thank you,

Erik Robinson

Chairman Wolford and Council Members

Subject: Please Follow Through on Commitments to Forage Fish

Dear Chairman Wolford and Council Members,

Thank you for establishing a clear objective to prohibit the development of new fisheries targeting forage species until you can ensure that it would not harm the marine ecosystem or undermine existing fisheries for bigger species such as salmon, tuna, and halibut. Now I ask you to make sure that your objective is accomplished in a reasonable period of time.

Forage species currently unmanaged won't be protected until they are incorporated into an appropriate Fishery Management Plan. The council agreed by consensus that it would begin that process by June 2013. But I am concerned that the groundwork required to enact protections could be delayed indefinitely by agency staff charged with carrying out the council's direction. I urge you to follow through on your commitment to initiate firm regulatory protections of forage fish upon completion of the council's Fishery Ecosystem Plan.

The council rightly concluded that a healthy ocean depends on an abundance of forage fish in the water. The best of intentions, however, mean very little without solid action to back them up. I urge you to carry out your vision as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

The complete list of signers is available in electronic format on the Council web page at:

Too often, I have seen good intentions for scientific evaluation prior to action be subverted by a rush to act despite the lack of adequate understanding. Once we lose these forage species, recovery efforts will be difficult, costly, and lengthy. Conversely, postponing action results in a lack of management criteria for species and can result in losses similar to poor management. I urge you to find the “sweet spot” in this dilemma and ensure protections that support the health of marine fisheries environments.

S. Greene	PO Box 34	Cazadero	CA	With changing weather patterns from burning fossil fuels, the oceans currents are disrupted also. Although we think of our position as permanent on the planet, our food chains rely on many factors, and we need to preserve not only the little fish, but the ocean that they inhabit--protecting these little fish is a start, but a start that needs to be made now; with weather patterns changing so drastically, we may not have much time to preserve the ecosystems that sustain our food chains... start by protecting the little fish, so we can continue to eat what eats them. Every little protection makes a big difference--our food and ability to feed ourselves in the future depends on lots of little protections for forage fish. But we need to hurry--please make every effort to institute protections rapidly--starting with forage fish.

This is too often the case, if it ain't on the table, it ain't worth saving. Forage fish play the same role as the Delta smelt. If larger food and game-fish are to survive, we must protect their prey base. It ain't rocket science.

			"the greatness of a nation & its moral progress can be judged by the way its animals are treated." Mahatma gandhi america was beautiful, animals thrived, the air was clear, the water clean....Then, "man discovered" the continent. Since that time, we have placed our environment in jeopardy. We have fouled the air & dirtied the waters. We have caused the extinction of species, in the air, on the land, & in the sea! Please, i beg you, protect the little fish who feed the bigger fish, seabirds, & marine mammals! This is the oceans circle of life! This is the circle which will nourish and enrich all life. When you initiate measures to protect forage species, you protect & recognize the importance of all sea life, ultimately, you protect human life! Envision the restoration of clear air, clean water, the importance of all, no matter the size, then, life which will flourish! Now turn that vision to reality! Thank you, for reading my plea.

Please do not delay in any way, in fact, please expedite in every way possible, the preservation of the forage fish, upon which the whole web of ocean life depends. I am sure the biologists in the group can see that you cannot pull the underpinnings of a tower without upsetting the entire structure. The thought is just crazy, and more than a little scary.

Without adequate protection for forage fish there will be no recovery of the diminishing supplies of salmon, tuna and halibut. All of these fish stocks are in decline, especially here in the Salish sea region. Immediate protection is necessary.

Small fry are a very big deal

It is essential to protect unregulated forage fish

EDITORIAL

Bison and antelope can't live without grass, and salmon and tuna can't live without forage fish.

Forage fish – uncountable schools of sardines, smelt and even more anonymous species – are a key building block in the world's food pyramid. They convert plankton into nice, oily flesh — a moveable feast for bigger species.

The foundational nature of forage fish recently produced rare a sense of near-unanimity within the Pacific Fisheries Management Council. Thanks to leadership from Michelle Culver of the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife, the PFMC is contemplating protecting now-unregulated forage species until their populations are better understood.

Feeding increasing billions of humans has moved our harvests lower and lower down the food chain, with untold consequences for the entire web of ocean life. It is impossible for large ocean fish to thrive – or for the economy dependent on them to prosper – if the little fish they eat are seriously depleted. When biologists speak of “ocean conditions” playing a huge role in the success of salmon runs, they are largely referring to the abundance of forage fish.

The PFMC is moving toward a decision on this matter next June. It deserves strong support in this effort, as does the Pew Environment Group in Portland, which understands the vital importance of fishing. Watching out for these small fry is a big deal.

SERVING SALEM, KEIZER

AND THE MID-VALLEY

Effort to protect small fish is the right move

OPINION

Big fish eat little fish. That's the law of the sea. So if the little fish disappear, so too will the big fish — salmon, halibut, tuna and others.

The Pacific Fishery Management Council took an important step this summer toward preserving those little fish — collectively called forage fish — so there will be plenty for the larger, predator fish and seabirds to dine on.

The council agreed to block any new fishing of forage fish pending a scientific review of how many such fish could be caught by humans without harming the overall Pacific Coast fisheries. Fishing will continue for species that already are being caught for commerce or sport, such as sardines or the kind of smelt netted on the Sandy and Cowlitz rivers.

Proactive protection of unfished species makes sense, so as to prevent overfishing of forage fish, which could lead to decimated fisheries in the 317,000 square miles of ocean that the council manages off the West Coast.

Major organizations of commercial fishermen and of recreational anglers recognize the need for that protection, and they support the council's action. The challenge, however, is to keep the momentum instead of letting the work fall victim to inertia or being sidelined amid other priorities.

Forage fish are small, eat primarily plankton, have short lifespans, and travel in schools throughout their lives. Although an essential part of the ocean ecosystem, many forage fish — such as saury and sand lance — are not well known to the public. A few types, such as sardines and anchovies, are harvested for human consumption but most forage fish caught by humans are used for bait in Asian fisheries, as food for pen-raised fish or as animal feed.

Preserving adequate numbers of forage fish is something politicians across the political spectrum generally agree on. In fact, Alaska, a politically conservative state, began limiting forage fisheries more than 15 years ago.

These are little fish. But they should not be overlooked in preserving the Pacific fisheries.

Chairman Dan Wolford -- danwolford@earthlink.net
Executive Director Don McIsaac -- Donald.mcisaac@noaa.gov

Thank you for recognizing the importance of forage fish as the cornerstone of a vibrant marine ecosystem on the Pacific coast. The Washington Wildlife Federation is pleased that the Council has set an objective to protect forage helping to ensure a healthy and balanced ocean ecosystem.

Now we look forward to the Council following through on the objective you established in June, to prohibit new fisheries on forage species until you have a chance to review the science and assess potential impacts to other fisheries. We urge you to enact those protections in a timely fashion.

We're concerned that the Council may be forced to delay firm protections of vulnerable forage species if its advisory bodies do not complete the tasks assigned to them in the June motion by next summer.

Numerous Pacific forage species are not currently covered by any existing Fishery Management Plan. The council's own Ecosystem Plan Development Team pointed out that these unmanaged forage species are vulnerable to growing global demand for secondary purposes such as feeding farmed fish, livestock and poultry. For these reasons, we believe these species should be incorporated into an appropriate Fishery Management Plan as soon as possible.

The council rightly concluded that a healthy ocean depends on an abundance of forage fish in the water. The best of intentions mean little without solid action to back them up. We urge you to carry out your vision as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

Ronni McGlenn, Chair
Washington Wildlife Federation

Dan Wolford, Chairman
Pacific Fishery Management Council
7700 N.E. Ambassador Place, Suite 101
Portland, Oregon 97220-1384

Dear Chairman Wolford and Council Members,

On behalf of Ocean Conservancy and Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), please accept the following comments with respect to the Pacific Fishery Management Council's (Council) action at your June 2012 meeting recognizing the importance of forage fish to the marine ecosystem and of providing adequate protection of forage fish. Our organizations view the Council's adoption of an explicit objective to prohibit new directed fisheries on forage species until you have a chance to review the science and assess potential impacts to other fisheries as a significant step forward and commend you for this important action.

As you may know, the state of California is also working to advance forage fishery management and protection and is currently pursuing policy action consistent with that taken by the Council in June. At the August 2012 meeting of the California Fish and Game Commission's Marine Resources Committee, that committee worked closely with conservation and fishing industry representatives to develop a draft state forage fisheries policy. The draft California forage fisheries policy is expected to go before the full Fish and Game Commission for potential adoption at their October 2012 meeting in Sacramento.

Giving the importance of protecting the forage base both to the ecosystem and to existing fisheries and coastal communities, Ocean Conservancy and NRDC appreciate both the Council and the state of California's leadership on this issue. We remain concerned that numerous Pacific forage species are not currently covered by any existing management and could be subject to new fisheries. We urge that these species be incorporated into an appropriate Fishery Management Plan as soon as possible and that the preliminary steps laid out by the Council in June - including finalizing the Fishery Ecosystem Plan and revising the List of Allowable Fisheries - be completed as soon as possible.

Finally, we urge the Council to work closely with its state representatives to facilitate a consistent, effective and precautionary approach to the management of forage species along the West Coast.

Thank you for your consideration of our comments.

Sincerely,

Kaitilin Gaffney
Pacific Program Director
