RE: Agenda Item C.4 Process for Review of Reference Points for Monitored Stocks

Dear Chair Anderson and Council Members,

The Pew Charitable Trusts is submitting public comment on behalf of 31,888 ocean advocates in support of ecosystem-based fisheries management for northern anchovy.

The petition itself is included here, along with a compilation of the names, cities and states of individual signers that were submitted to the Council.

Thank you for your time and consideration. We appreciate the opportunity to work with you to maintain sustainable fisheries and healthy ocean ecosystems.

RE: Agenda Item C.4 Process for Review of Reference Points for Monitored Stocks
Please protect anchovies and the marine wildlife that depend on them

Dear Chair Anderson and Council Members:

I am writing to ask the Pacific Fishery Management Council to adopt an ecosystem-based approach to managing northern anchovy. As you know, northern anchovies are among the most important forage fish in the Pacific Ocean, but existing management of the stock is based on decades-old information. True ecosystem-based management of this fishery requires that catch limits and other measures are based on the best available science, and are responsive and adaptive to changing environmental conditions.

Northern anchovies are too important to other fisheries and the broader marine ecosystem to be managed passively. Only by ensuring that management of this essential forage fish is based on the best available science, and considers the broader marine ecosystem, can this Council help maintain both a healthy ocean and productive and sustainable fisheries. For these reasons, I encourage you to act.

Sincerely,

We the undersigned

Phil Anderson, Chair
Pacific Fishery Management Council
7700 NE Ambassador Place, Suite 101
Portland, Oregon 97220-1384

RE: Agenda Item C.4: Process for Review of Reference Points for Monitored Stocks

Dear Chair Anderson,

Coastal pelagic finfish, including jack mackerel and northern anchovy are important food sources in the California Current Ecosystem for a wide suite of marine predators. Responsible management of these species is a critical element of ecosystem-based fishery management, particularly for maintaining the resilience of our ocean ecosystem in the face of unprecedented threats such as climate change. We are deeply concerned that management of these species is woefully out of date and fails to meet the fundamental requirements of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act (MSA) to prevent overfishing, base management measures on the best scientific information available, and achieve optimum yield by accounting for ecosystem needs. By utilizing readily available information, the Council has the opportunity – and responsibility – to address these deficiencies and develop a state-of-the-art Coastal Pelagic Species (CPS) management regime.

We request the Council:

1. Immediately adopt updated overfishing limits (OFL), allowable biological catch (ABC), annual catch limits (ACL), and minimum stock size thresholds (MSST) for the central subpopulation of northern anchovy (CSNA), the northern subpopulation of northern anchovy (NSNA), and jack mackerel based on best available science;
2. Initiate a management strategy evaluation (MSE) process to develop harvest control rules for the CSNA and other CPS species that would facilitate updating the annual catch limit on an annual basis and account for the needs of marine predators; and
3. Develop an annual specification process for all CPS finfish.

Adopt New OFLs, ABCs, and ACLs

On January 9, 2018, the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) proposed a rule that would establish multi-year specifications for monitored stocks based on values adopted by the Council in Amendments 8 and 13 to the CPS FMP.<sup>1</sup> In that proposed rule, NMFS proposed to adopt the same “default” ACL, ABC, and OFL values for the CSNA that a federal court has determined are unlawful because they are not based on the best scientific information available and fail to prevent overfishing.<sup>2</sup> The recent court order in Oceana, Inc. v Ross (Attachment 1) makes it clear that NMFS may not simply rely on “default” values that lack a sound scientific basis, and must instead use recent data and base management on the actual size of the anchovy stock.

Oceana and Earthjustice submitted detailed comments (Attachment 2) on NMFS’s proposed rule requesting that the agency reject the outdated, unlawful management measures and immediately promulgate new regulations that comply with the Magnuson-Stevens Act. NMFS has yet to indicate how it intends to comply with the court order or bring its management regime into compliance with the law. We request that the Council do its part to advance the adoption of updated, lawful measures by immediately offering new recommendations for setting OFL, ABC, and ACL based on the best scientific information available now, with CSNA being the top priority. The rationale for this request is set forth in more detail in Attachment 2.

The Council has a wealth of recent scientific information available to estimate the abundance of the CSNA and other CPS stocks, and to develop management measures that reflect current abundance. This information includes data from the acoustic trawl method (ATM) survey and daily egg production method (DEPM) using data CalCOFI egg and larval surveys in the Southern California Bight. CSNA management has historically relied primarily on DEPM-based estimates from CalCOFI surveys in the Southern California Bight; these estimates formed the basis of the biomass estimates used in Conrad (1991) that, in turn, are the basis for the current (albeit outdated and legally invalidated) OFL, ABC, and ACL for the CSNA. The updated time series presented in MacCall et al. 2016 and Thayer et al. 2017 use these data and apply similar methods as were used to develop previous abundance estimate, while improving upon previous methods by incorporating more robust techniques to reduce uncertainty and potential bias.

In addition, recent ATM survey data and estimates based on it provide sound, valuable information to inform management. NMFS provided a preliminary estimate of CSNA biomass of ~180,000 mt for the summer 2017 survey at the ATM review, which represents the most recent available information on the status of the anchovy population:

NOAA FISHERIES

NMFS SWFSC Presentation. David A. Demer, Juan P. Zwolinski, Kevin L. Stierhoff, Josiah S. Renfree, Danial Palance, Scott A. Mau, David W. Murfin, and Thomas S. Sessions. January 2018. 2018 Methods: Review Acoustic-Trawl Survey. Slide 39.

ATM estimates and DEPM estimates measure abundance in different ways. ATM biomass estimates reflect all age classes of fish – young-of-the-year, juveniles, and spawning-age fish. DEPM estimates reflect only spawning-age fish (spawning stock biomass). CPS management is currently based on spawning stock biomass. This is primarily because spawning stock biomass is considered the most reliable indicator of current and future stock size, since the presence of young-of-the-year fish does not guarantee recruitment into the spawning stock. Without converting total estimates to SSB, the ATM survey estimates therefore may somewhat overestimate population size for management purposes relative to estimates that only include spawning stock biomass. We understand that new analyses have derived SSB estimates from total ATM survey estimates using size class data. Furthermore, the resulting SSB estimates are aligned with DEPM estimates of SSB in recent years, which provides greater confidence in the accuracy of the estimates. Both data sources constitute best scientific information available for use in management.

Regarding OFL for the CSNA, the Council's April 2017 motion directed the SSC to examine the following options and make a recommendation on a path forward:

- 1) the current OFL based on the MSY estimate from Conrad 1991;
- 2) a static OFL based on updated long-term average MSY; and
- 3) an annual OFL based on annual estimates of biomass and MSY fishing rate.

Option 1 is plainly not based on the best available science, as it is based on outdated data (1964-1990) See Oceana Inc. v Ross. In 2010, the CPS Management Team (MT) expressed doubts about continuing to set static values based on Conrad (1991) values: “As was noted by the SSC in March and June 2010, these [stock-specific MSY] proxies are based on dated information and the 75% reduction buffer in the ABC control rule may need to be reevaluated.”<sup>3</sup>

Basing anchovy management on any static OFL (Option 2) is not scientifically sound or sufficient to prevent overfishing, much less account for ecosystem needs. The CSNA population is known to fluctuate quickly and dramatically, resulting in declines of over 95% below long-term average levels as quickly as two years (MacCall et al. 2016, Thayer et al. 2017). Setting the ABC 75% below a long-term average OFL value does not reflect the basic biology of this species which can experience precipitous, rapid declines by over 95% within two years, or ensure that the stock will not be overfished or subject to overfishing. In fact, it is a well-established tenet of fishery management that setting a static catch limit over the long term, even if the limit is well below maximum sustainable yield, will severely deplete or even extirpate a fluctuating stock like the CSNA.<sup>4</sup> The only way to prevent overfishing under the long-term, static catch limit approach, therefore, is to set catch limits at extremely low levels, which would essentially prevent any significant commercial fishery (see Attachment 2 for more detail).

Setting an annual OFL (Option 3) is possible given the availability of annual estimates of biomass and MSY fishing rates. This real-time management approach has the benefit of being responsive to wide fluctuations in abundance, such that fishing rates can increase when stocks are abundant while preventing overfishing when stocks are low. Of the three options, a real-time approach of Option 3 would reflect the best available science regarding fluctuating abundance year to year, and would be most likely prevent overfishing while allowing fishing to occur at a level appropriate to the current abundance of the stock benefiting the ecosystem and fishing industry.

The Council should also initiate a process to conduct Management Strategy Evaluations for each the CSNA, NSNA, and jack mackerel, beginning with CSNA, to develop and refine ecosystem-based harvest control rules that prevent overfishing and achieve optimum yield.

Establish New Minimum Stock Size Thresholds

The MSA requires the Council and NMFS to establish minimum stock size thresholds (MSSTs) for all stocks in the FMP to provide clear criteria for determining whether a stock is overfished.<sup>5</sup> Establishing scientifically based MSSTs is fundamental to preventing overfishing and rebuilding overfished stocks. The National Standard One Guidelines<sup>6</sup> set clear bounds and criteria for setting MSSTs between  $\frac{1}{2}$  Bmsy and Bmsy.

Because the CPS FMP lacks valid MSSTs for the CSNA, NSNA, and jack mackerel, it lacks any available mechanism to determine whether these stocks are overfished and respond as required by the MSA. The Council and NMFS have not specified any MSSTs for jack mackerel and NSNA. The assumed MSST of 50,000 mt for CSNA is not specified anywhere in the CPS FMP and, like other management measures for the stock, is based on outdated data.

In 2016, NMFS produced updated estimates of MSST for CSNA and jack mackerel. Updated MSST estimates for CSNA calculations were 69,781 mt and 69,049 mt using two different methods; NMFS estimated an MSST for jack mackerel of 272,160 mt. NMFS did not offer any estimate of MSST for NSNA due to lack of data on abundance and productivity, however, the abundance and productivity data that were used to OFL, ABC, and ACL for this stock could be used to inform MSST for NSNA. We request the Council immediately establish an MSST for jack mackerel and a new MSST for CSNA based on best available scientific information. In addition, the Council should direct NMFS to collect and analyze information to inform MSST for NSNA.

Conclusion

In summary, the Council has the information before it to address numerous legal deficiencies in the management of so-called “monitored” finfish stocks in the CPS FMP. We encourage the Council to work closely with its SSC and NMFS to take advantage of the recent scientific advancements toward a modern management regime for northern anchovy and jack mackerel.

OCEANA, INC.,
Plaintiff,
v.
WILBUR ROSS, et al.,
Defendants.

Case No. 16-CV-06784-LHK

ORDER RE: MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Re: Dkt. Nos. 51, 52, 56, 57

Plaintiff Oceana, Inc. (“Plaintiff”) brings this action against Defendant Wilbur Ross, in his official capacity, Defendant National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (“NOAA”), and Defendant National Marine Fisheries Service (“the Service”) (collectively, “Defendants”). Before the Court are Plaintiff’s motion for summary judgment, and Defendants’ cross-motion for summary judgment. ECF No. 51; ECF No. 52. Having considered the parties’ submissions, the relevant law, and the record in this case, the Court GRANTS Plaintiff’s motion for summary judgment and DENIES Defendants’ cross-motion for summary judgment.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Regulatory Background

1                                   1. Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act

2                   In response to overfishing concerns, Congress enacted the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery
3 Conservation and Management Act of 1976 (“Magnuson-Stevens Act”) to promote the long-term
4 biological and economic sustainability of marine fisheries in U.S. federal waters. See 16 U.S.C. §
5 1801(a)–(b). The Magnuson-Stevens Act created eight Regional Fishery Management Councils
6 and requires the Councils to create fishery management plans (“FMPs”) aimed at preventing 7 overfishing, along with any amendments to the FMPs. Id. §§ 1852(h)(1), 1801(b)(4), 1854(a)(3).
8 Councils submit FMPs and amendments to the Secretary of Commerce (“Secretary”), who reviews
9 them to determine whether they are consistent with the Magnuson-Stevens Act and other
10 applicable law. Id. §§ 1851(a), 1854(a)(1)(A). The Secretary must publish notice of a Council’s
11 proposed FMP or amendment in the Federal Register and solicit public comment. Id. §
12 1854(a)(1)(B), 1854(a)(5). Within 30 days of the close of the public comment period, the 13 Secretary must either “approve, disapprove, or partially approve [the FMP] or amendment ... by 14 written notice to the Council.” Id. § 1854(a)(3). If the Secretary does not notify the Council of the 15 Secretary’s decision, the FMP or amendment takes effect as if approved. Id.

18                   FMPs and amendments “do not themselves have any regulatory effect—implementing 19 regulations must also be enacted in order to effectuate them.” N. Carolina Fisheries Ass’n, Inc. v.
20 Gutierrez, 550 F.3d 16, 17 (D.C. Cir. 2008). The Magnuson-Stevens Act therefore requires 21 Councils to submit proposed regulations implementing a FMP or amendment to the Secretary for 22 approval. 16 U.S.C. § 1853(c)(1). The Secretary evaluates whether the proposed regulations are 23 consistent with the FMP, amendment, the Magnuson-Stevens Act, and any other applicable law.
24 Id. § 1854(b)(1). If the Secretary determines the proposed regulations are consistent, the Secretary
25 must “publish such regulations in the Federal Register ... for a public comment period of 15 to 60
26 days.” Id. § 1854(a)(1)(A)). The Secretary then “promulgate[s] final regulations within 30 days
27

1 after the end of the comment period.” Id. § 1854(b)(3). In practice, the Service carries out the
 2 Secretary’s duty to review FMPs, amendments, and regulations because the Secretary has 3 delegated his responsibilities under the Magnuson-Stevens Act to the Service. Pac. Dawn LLC v.
 4 Pritzker, 831 F.3d 1166, 1170 (9th Cir. 2016).<sup>1</sup>

5 Chief among the Magnuson-Stevens Act requirements that FMPs, amendments, and 6 regulations must satisfy are the Magnuson-Stevens Act’s ten “national standards for fishery
 7 conservation and management.” 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a) (setting out the ten National Standards). This 8 action centers on National Standard One and National Standard Two. Id. §§ 1851(a)(1) (National 9 Standard One), 1851(a)(2) (National Standard Two).

10 National Standard One requires that “[c]onservation and management measures shall
 11 prevent overfishing while achieving, on a continuing basis, the optimum yield from each fishery
 12 for the United States fishing industry.” 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(1). The term “overfishing” means “a 13 rate or level of fishing mortality that jeopardizes the capacity of a fishery to produce the maximum 14 sustainable yield on a continuing basis.” Id. § 1802(34). Maximum sustainable yield (“MSY”) is 15 “the largest long-term average catch or yield that can be taken from a stock or stock complex
 16 under prevailing ecological, environmental conditions and fishery technological characteristics ...
 17 .” 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(e)(1)(i)(A). Thus, overfishing is “a rate of fishing which would jeopardize
 18 the capacity of a fishery to produce the [MSY] on a continuing basis.” Oceana, Inc. v. Bryson, 940
 19 F. Supp. 2d 1029, 1036 (N.D. Cal. 2013).

20 Optimum yield is the yield from a fishery that “will provide the greatest overall benefit to 21 the Nation, particularly with respect to food production and recreational opportunities, and taking 22 into account the protection of marine ecosystems.” 16 U.S.C. § 1802(33)(A). In turn, because 23
 25

26
 27 <sup>1</sup> The Service is a subagency of NOAA, which is part of the Department of Commerce.
 28 Fishermen's Finest, Inc. v. Locke, 593 F.3d 886, 889 (9th Cir. 2010).

1 optimum yield accounts for more than just how much a fishery can yield for human consumption,
 2 it is calculated by using MSY as a starting point and then reducing MSY “by any relevant social,
 3 economic, or ecological factor.” Id. § 1802(33)(B); Bryson, 940 F. Supp. 2d at 1036 (optimum
 4 yield is “the maximum sustainable yield from the fishery as reduced by any relevant social,
 5 economic, or ecological factor”).

6 National Standard Two requires that “[c]onservation and management measures shall be
 7 based upon the best scientific information available.” 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(2). However, “[t]he fact
 8 that scientific information concerning a fishery is incomplete does not prevent [regulation].” 50
 9 C.F.R. § 600.315(b). On the contrary, “by specifying that decisions be based on the best scientific
 10 information available, the Magnuson–Stevens Act recognizes that such information may not be
 11 exact or totally complete.” Midwater Trawlers Coop. v. Dep’t of Commerce, 393 F.3d 994, 1003
 12 (9th Cir. 2004) (emphasis in original).

13 14 15 2. Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Reauthorization Act

16 The Magnuson–Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Reauthorization Act of 17 2006 (“MSRA”), “impose[s] additional requirements for fishery management plans intended to 18 strengthen the role of science and account for uncertainty in fishery management.” Bryson, 940 F.
 19 Supp. 2d at 1037. In relevant part, the MSRA requires that each FMP “establish a mechanism for 20 specifying annual catch limits in the plan ... at a level such that overfishing does not occur in the 21 fishery, including measures to ensure accountability.” 16 U.S.C. § 1853(a)(15). The annual catch 22 limits (“ACLs”) “may not exceed the fishing level recommendations of [the Council’s] scientific 23 and statistical committee ... .” Id. § 1852(h)(6).

24 ACLs are set with reference to the overfishing limit (“OFL”) and the acceptable biological 25 catch (“ABC”). The OFL is a quantifiable factor that is “used to determine if overfishing has 26

1 occurred, or if the stock or stock complex [of a fishery] is overfished.” 50 C.F.R. §
 2 600.310(e)(2)(i)(A). Determining when overfishing has occurred involves a degree of scientific
 3 uncertainty, so in the course of setting an OFL, Councils are also instructed to establish an ABC,
 4 which is “a level of a stock or stock complex’s annual catch that accounts for the scientific
 5 uncertainty in the estimate of OFL and any other scientific uncertainty.” Id. § 600.310(f)(2)(ii).
 6 Because the ABC is the OFL after the OFL has been reduced to account for scientific uncertainty,
 7 a fishery’s ABC is likely to be lower than the fishery’s OFL. Bryson, 940 F. Supp. 2d at 1037; 50
 8 C.F.R. § 600.310(f)(3) (“While the ABC is allowed to equal OFL, [the Service] expects that in
 9 most cases ABC will be reduced from OFL to reduce the probability that overfishing might occur
 10 in a year.”). In turn, the ACL “is a limit on the total annual catch of a stock or stock complex,”
 11 which may be equal to but “cannot exceed the ABC.” 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(f)(1)(iii); see also id. §
 12 600.310(f)(4)(i) (“If a Council recommends an ACL which equals ABC, and the ABC is equal to 13 OFL, the Secretary may presume that the proposal would not prevent overfishing, in the absence 14 of sufficient analysis and justification for the approach.”).

15 B. Factual Background

16 1. Northern Anchovy

17 The northern anchovy (“anchovy”) is a small fish that is typically found in schools near the 18 ocean’s surface. AR 7:146, 174. Anchovy are relatively-short lived and their populations tend to 19 fluctuate significantly over time. AR 7:294; AR 29:831. Anchovy are valuable food sources to a 20 wide variety of predators, including fish, birds, and mammals. AR 7:146; AR 45:1161 (noting that 21 diet studies of 32 marine predators found anchovy was the most important forage fish in the 22 California Current Ecosystem). The anchovy is also fished commercially, with an average of 7,300
 23
 25
 26
 27
 28 metric tons (“mt”) harvested per year. 81 Fed. Reg. 74309, 74309 (Oct. 26, 2016).<sup>2</sup>

2. Coastal Pelagic Species Fisheries Management Plan

The Pacific Fishery Management Council (“Pacific Council”) is one of the eight Councils created by the Magnuson-Stevens Act. 16 U.S.C. § 1852(a)(1)(F). The Pacific Council is responsible for Pacific Ocean fisheries off the coasts of California, Oregon, and Washington. Id. The Pacific Council’s Coastal Pelagic Species Fishery Management Plan (“CPS FMP”) governs Pacific sardine, Pacific mackerel, anchovy, market squid, and krill. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74309.<sup>3</sup> The CPS FMP divides the anchovy into two subpopulations, the northern subpopulation and the central subpopulation. Id. This suit concerns the central subpopulation, so future references to “anchovy” refer to the central subpopulation unless otherwise noted.

Although the CPS FMP dates back to 1978, it has been amended a number of times over the ensuing years. Bryson, 940 F. Supp. 2d at 1038. Amendment 8 and Amendment 13 are particularly relevant to this case, as is a 2016 action establishing an ACL for the anchovy.

Amendment 8 was implemented on January 1, 2000. AR 30:890. Amendment 8 divided the fish stocks covered by the CPS FMP into two main categories: actively managed stocks, and monitored stocks. AR 30:892. The “active” category is for “stocks and fisheries with biologically <sup>2</sup> The final rule (“Catch Rule”) that gave rise to this case appears in the administrative record. AR 198:3223–3228. Unfortunately, some pages are missing. In APA cases like this one, judicial review is usually limited to the administrative record. San Luis & Delta-Mendota Water Auth. v. Locke, 776 F.3d 971, 992 (9th Cir. 2014). However, “a reviewing court may consider extra-record evidence where admission of that evidence (1) is necessary to determine ‘whether the agency has considered all relevant factors and has explained its decision,’ (2) is necessary to determine whether ‘the agency has relied on documents not in the record, (3) when supplementing the record is necessary to explain technical terms or complex subject matter, or (4) when plaintiffs make a showing of agency bad faith.’” Id. (quoting Lands Council v. Powell, 395 F.3d 1019, 1030 (9th Cir. 2005)). The missing pages of the Catch Rule are necessary to determine whether the Service considered all relevant factors and explained its decision, so the Court will consider the entire Catch Rule as published in the Federal Register. Subsequent citations to the Catch Rule will be to the Federal Register version.

<sup>3</sup> “Pelagic” species live in the water column as opposed to near the sea floor, and are generally found between the ocean’s surface and 1,000 meters below the surface. AR 29:831.

1 significant levels of catch, or biological or socioeconomic considerations requiring relatively
 2 intense harvest management procedures.” AR 30:892–93. Stocks that do not require intense 3 harvest management procedures, for instance because they are not heavily fished, fall in the 4 “monitored” category. Id. The anchovy is in the monitored category. AR 7:459. Amendment 8
 5 specified that the MSY for the anchovy was 100,000 mt and that the anchovy’s ABC was 25,000
 6 mt. AR 7:459–60. The anchovy’s ABC was set based on a default rule that set ABC as 25 percent
 7 of a stock’s MSY. AR 7:459.

 9 Amendment 13 was implemented on November 14, 2011. AR 31:933–35. Amendment 13
 10 was a response to the MSRA’s requirement that FMPs incorporate ACLs. AR 31:933; 16 U.S.C. §
 11 1853(a)(15) (requiring FMPs to establish mechanisms for specifying ACLs). Amendment 13
 12 implemented “a default management framework” for setting ACLs. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74309. The 13 default framework set a monitored stock’s OFL as equal to the stock’s MSY. Id. at 74310, AR
 14 31:933–34. The anchovy’s MSY was already set at 100,000 mt, so the anchovy’s OFL was 15 likewise set at 100,000 mt. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74310. The default framework also retained the 16 existing formula for setting a monitored stock’s ABC, such that “ABC equals 25 percent of 17 OFL/MSY.” AR 31:933. Consequently, the anchovy’s ABC remained set at 25,000 mt. 81 Fed.
 18 Reg. at 74311. Finally, by default ACLs were set equal to ABC. AR 30:891.

 20 On November 20, 2015, the Service published a proposed rule in the Federal Register to 21 set an ACL for the anchovy and other stocks managed by the CPS FMP. AR 88:1968. In line with 22 Amendment 13, the proposed rule would set the anchovy’s ACL equal to the anchovy’s 25,000 mt
 23 ABC. AR 88:1968–69. On October 26, 2016, the Service published a final rule in the Federal 24 Register (“Catch Rule”) that set the anchovy’s ACL at 25,000 mt, equal to the ABC. 81 Fed. Reg.
 25 at 74310.
 26

27 C. Procedural History

1 On November 11, 2016, Plaintiff filed the complaint challenging the Catch Rule. ECF No.
 2 1. On June 21, 2017, United States Magistrate Judge Susan van Keulen issued an order granting in 3 part and denying in part Plaintiff's motion to compel completion of the administrative record. ECF
 4 No. 39. On August 15, 2017, this Court issued an order denying Defendants' motion for relief
 5 from Judge van Keulen's order. ECF No. 48.

6 On September 1, 2017, Plaintiff filed a motion for summary judgment. ECF No. 51
 7 ("Plaintiff's MSJ"). On October 13, 2017, Defendants filed the combined cross-motion for 8 summary judgment and opposition to Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. ECF No. 52
 9 ("Defendants' MSJ"). On November 11, 2017, Plaintiff filed its combined opposition to 10 Defendants' motion for summary judgment and reply in support of Plaintiff's motion for summary
 11 judgment. ECF No. 56 ("Plaintiff's Reply"). On December 8, 2017, Defendants filed their reply 12 brief in support of Defendants' cross-motion for summary judgment. ECF No. 57 ("Defendants' 13 Reply").

15 II. LEGAL STANDARD

16 A. Administrative Procedure Act Review

17 The Magnuson-Stevens Act adopts the Administrative Procedure Act's ("APA") "standard 18 for judicial review of agency action set forth in 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A)." Or. Trollers Ass'n v.
 19 Gutierrez, 452 F.3d 1104, 1116 (9th Cir. 2006) (citing 16 U.S.C. § 1855(f)(1)).

21 Under the APA, courts must set aside an agency action where the action is "arbitrary, 22 capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law" or was taken "without 23 observance of procedure required by law." 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A), (D). This review is deferential.
 24 Sierra Club v. Bosworth, 510 F.3d 1016, 1022 (9th Cir. 2007). Courts should overturn agency
 25 action "only when the agency has relied on factors which Congress has not intended it to consider,
 26 entirely failed to consider an important aspect of the problem, offered an explanation for its 27

1 decision that runs counter to the evidence before the agency, or is so implausible that it could not
 2 be ascribed to a difference in view or the product of agency expertise.” Pac. Coast Fed’n of
 3 Fishermen’s Ass’ns, Inc. v. Nat’l Marine Fisheries Serv., 265 F.3d 1028, 1034 (9th Cir. 2001)
 4 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

5 Nonetheless, “to withstand review the agency must articulate a rational connection
 6 between the facts found and the conclusions reached.” Bosworth, 510 F.3d at 1023 (brackets and 7 internal quotation marks omitted). Courts “will defer to an agency’s decision only if it is ‘fully
 8 informed and well-considered.’” Id. (quoting Save the Yaak Comm. v. Block, 840 F.2d 714, 717
 9 (9th Cir. 1988)).

11 B. Summary Judgment

12 In general, summary judgment is appropriate if, viewing the evidence and drawing all 13 reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, there are no genuine
 14 disputes of material fact, and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P.
 15 56(a); see Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 321 (1986).

16 In an APA case, however, a district court’s function at summary judgment is not to resolve 17 disputed facts and make de novo factual determinations, but rather “to determine whether or not as 18 a matter of law the evidence in the administrative record permitted the agency to make the 19 decision it did.” Occidental Eng’g Co. v. INS, 753 F.2d 766, 769–70 (9th Cir. 1985); accord Nw.
 20 Motorcycle Ass’n v. U.S. Dep’t of Agric., 18 F.3d 1468, 1472 (9th Cir. 1994) (explaining that 21 because “this case involves review of a final agency determination under the Administrative 22 Procedure Act, ... resolution of this matter does not require fact finding on behalf of this court”). A
 23 court’s review is therefore limited to the administrative record in all but a few exceptional 24 circumstances. San Luis & Delta-Mendota Water Auth. v. Locke, 776 F.3d 971, 992 (9th Cir.
 25 2014).

1 III. DISCUSSION

2 Plaintiff claims that the Catch Rule violates the Magnuson-Stevens Act in three ways.
 3 First, Plaintiff claims the Catch Rule violates National Standard Two because it is not based on the 4 best scientific information available. Second, Plaintiff claims the Catch Rule violates National
 5 Standard One because it does not prevent overfishing. Third, Plaintiff claims the Catch Rule
 6 violates National Standard One by failing to account for the needs of anchovy predators.
 7 Defendants dispute all three of Plaintiff's claims, and argue as a threshold matter that Plaintiff
 8 cannot challenge the OFL and ABC values from which the ACL derives because any challenge to 9 the OFL and ABC is untimely. Defendants also contend that even if Plaintiff prevails on summary
 10 judgment, the Court should not vacate the Catch Rule because the anchovy population has recently 11 recovered.
 12

13 The Court first considers and rejects Defendants' threshold argument that Plaintiff cannot 14 challenge the OFL and ABC. The Court then turns to Plaintiff's merits arguments. The Court finds
 15 that Plaintiff prevails on the best scientific information available argument and the overfishing
 16 argument, and thus does not reach Plaintiff's claim that the Catch Rule does not account for the 17 needs of anchovy predators. Finally, the Court rejects Defendants' argument that the Court should 18 not vacate the Catch Rule because the anchovy population has recently recovered.
 19

20 A. Plaintiff Can Challenge the Overfishing Limit and Acceptable Biological 21 Catch

22 Defendants argue that Plaintiff cannot challenge the OFL and ABC because the OFL and 23 ABC were established years before the Catch Rule. Plaintiff has two responses. First, Plaintiff
 24 claims that the OFL and ABC were in fact set in the Catch Rule and that Plaintiff's challenge to 25 them is therefore timely. Second, Plaintiff claims that even if the OFL and ABC were set before 26 the Catch Rule, Plaintiff's timely challenge to the Catch Rule also allows Plaintiff to challenge the 27

1 OFL and ABC. The Court is unpersuaded by Plaintiff's first claim, but agrees that Plaintiff's
2 challenge to the Catch Rule allows Plaintiff to challenge the OFL and ABC.

3 Some background is necessary to understand the parties' dispute. In 2000, Amendment 8
4 set the anchovy's maximum sustainable yield ("MSY") at 100,000 metric tons ("mt"). AR 30:890.
5 MSY is the largest long term catch or yield a stock can produce. 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(e)(1)(i)(A).

6 In 2011, Amendment 13 set the anchovy's overfishing limit ("OFL") equal to the 7 Amendment 8 MSY value, meaning that OFL was likewise set at 100,000 mt. AR 29:827; AR
8 31:933–35. OFL is a catch level beyond which overfishing will occur. 50 C.F.R. §
9 600.310(e)(2)(i)(A). Amendment 13 also set the anchovy's acceptable biological catch ("ABC") at 10 25 percent of OFL, meaning that ABC was 25,000 mt. AR 31:933; see AR 30:924. The ABC is a 11 catch level that accounts for scientific uncertainty around the OFL estimate, and is therefore 12 usually a lower number. 50 C.F.R. §§ 600.310(f)(2)(ii), 600.310(f)(3); Bryson, 940 F. Supp. 2d at 13 1037. Amendment 13 also established a framework for setting annual catch limits ("ACLs"), 14 which the Catch Rule is implementing. AR 31:933 ("Amendment 13 modified this framework to 15 include new specification reference points such as annual catch limit").

16 In 2016, the Catch Rule set the anchovy's ACL based on the framework set in Amendment
17 13. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74309. The Catch Rule set the ACL at 25,000 mt, and justified this decision on 18 the grounds that the ABC set by Amendment 13 is also 25,000 mt. Id. at 74311 (stating ACL is 19 "set equal to its ABC value of 25,000 mt" and that it is "not necessary to further reduce the ACL
20 from the ABC" because ABC was "approved by [the Service] as best available science and 21 determined to appropriately account for uncertainty and protect the stock from overfishing."). The 22 ACL is an annual limit on the catch of a stock which can be equal to ABC, but cannot exceed 23 ABC. 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(f)(1)(iii). To sum up, OFL must be greater than or equal to ABC,
24 which must be greater than or equal to ACL.

1 The Magnuson-Stevens Act provides that challenges to regulations and actions must be
 2 filed within 30 days after “the date on which the regulations are promulgated or the action is 3 published in the Federal Register.” 16 U.S.C. § 1855(f)(1). The Catch Rule was published on 4 October 26, 2016. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74309. Plaintiff filed its complaint on November 11, 2016. ECF
 5 No. 1. Plaintiff’s challenge to the Catch Rule is therefore timely. By the same token, Plaintiff’s
 6 suit is untimely as to the 2000 Amendment 8 and the 2011 Amendment 13. AR 31:933; AR
 7 30:890. The Court now turns to Plaintiff’s two arguments as to why Plaintiff can still challenge
 8 Amendment 13.

 10 Plaintiff’s first argument is that Plaintiff can challenge the OFL and ABC because they 11 were in fact set by the Catch Rule. The Court disagrees. Amendment 8 set MSY at 100,000 mt,
 12 and Amendment 13 set OFL equal to MSY. Thus, Amendment 13 set OFL at 100,000 mt. In turn,
 13 because Amendment 13 set ABC as 25 percent of OFL, Amendment 13 set ABC at 25,000 mt.
 14 The Catch Rule expressly states that the OFL and ABC were previously set, and that the Catch 15 Rule does not revisit the OFL or ABC. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74310 (“OFL and ABC specifications ...
 16 are set in the FMP; [the Service] is not establishing or revising them by this action.”); id.
 17 (“[C]hanges to the OFL or ABC levels or revisiting these values or the default ABC control rule
 18 for monitored stocks was not being proposed in this rulemaking.”). The Court agrees with this 19 reading, especially given the deference owed to an agency’s interpretation of its own regulations.
 20 Turtle Island Restoration Network v. United States Dep’t of Commerce, 2017 WL 6598627, at *5
 21 (9th Cir. 2017); see Washington Crab Producers, Inc. v. Mosbacher, 924 F.2d 1438, 1447 (9th 22 Cir. 1990) (rejecting challenge to agency’s interpretation of FMP amendment). In turn, because 23 the OFL and ABC were set by Amendment 13 in 2011, this action falls well outside the 30 day
 24 window for challenging them.
 25

27 Plaintiff’s second argument is that even if the OFL and ABC were set by Amendment 13,

1 Plaintiff's timely challenge to the Catch Rule also permits Plaintiff to challenge the OFL and
 2 ABC. Although Amendment 8 established the underlying MSY figure, Amendment 13 reaffirmed
 3 it and established the OFL and ABC based on Amendment 8's MSY. AR 29:827; AR 31:933; AR
 4 30:924. Thus, the regulation at issue here is Amendment 13.

5 The key case on this issue is Oregon Trollers, 452 F.3d 1104. Oregon Trollers held that
 6 under section 1855(f)(1), "a petition filed within 30 days of the publication of an action may 7 challenge both the action and the regulation under which the action is taken." Or. Trollers, 452
 8 F.3d at 1113 (emphasis added); Gulf Fishermen's Ass'n v. Gutierrez, 529 F.3d 1321, 1323 (11th
 9 Cir. 2008) (adopting Oregon Trollers analysis); Bryson, 940 F. Supp. 2d at 1048 (noting that 10 under Oregon Trollers "plaintiffs [may] challenge regulations after the 30 day period through a 11 suit challenging an action taken under the regulation.").

12 "Actions" are defined as "actions that are taken by the Secretary under regulations which 13 implement a fishery management plan . . ." 16 U.S.C. § 1855(f)(2); see Or. Trollers, 452 F.3d at 14 1112–16 (discussing definition of "action"). Actions must also be published in the Federal 15 Register. Or. Trollers, 452 F.3d at 1112 (citing 16 U.S.C. § 1855(f)(1)).

16 The Catch Rule satisfies the definition of "Actions" because the Catch Rule implements
 17 ACLs pursuant to Amendment 13 and because the Catch Rule was published in the Federal 18 Register. AR 31:933 (final rule for Amendment 13 noting that it sets a process for establishing 19 ACLs); see also 81 Fed. Reg. at 74309–12 (repeatedly referring to the Catch Rule as "this 20 action"). Plaintiff therefore argues that Plaintiff's timely challenge to the Catch Rule (the action)
 21 also allows Plaintiff to challenge Amendment 13 (the regulation).
 22
 24

25 Oregon Trollers stemmed from a 1989 amendment to the FMP that managed Pacific
 26 salmon fisheries, including the Klamath River fall chinook. 452 F.3d at 1108–09. A 1989
 27 amendment to the FMP sought to address declining Klamath chinook numbers by establishing an 28

1 annual “escapement goal” that at least 35,000 spawning adults would survive so that they could
 2 reproduce. Id. at 1109. In 2005, the National Marine Fisheries Service (“the Service”) determined
 3 that allowing normal fishing during the upcoming fishing season would result in less than 35,000
 4 salmon surviving to reproduce. Id. at 1110–11. The Service therefore placed significant 5 restrictions on the salmon fishing season. Id.

6 Plaintiffs, primarily fishermen and fishing-related businesses, brought a suit challenging
 7 the fishery restriction (the action) and the 1989 amendment (the regulation) in federal court. Id. at 8 1108, 1112. Plaintiffs’ suit was commenced within 30 days of the 2005 fishery restrictions’
 9 publication in the Federal Register. Id. at 1111. The Service therefore did not dispute that the 10 plaintiffs’ suit was timely as to the fishery restrictions. Instead, the Service argued that plaintiffs’
 11 suit was untimely as to the underlying 1989 amendment because “under § 1855(f)(1) plaintiffs 12 should have filed their challenge within thirty days of the promulgation of [the 1989 amendment],
 13 and ... their suit is therefore sixteen years too late.” Id. at 1112. The Ninth Circuit rejected this 14 argument, and held that section 1855(f)(1)’s plain language and legislative history demonstrated 15 that plaintiffs were entitled to challenge both the action and the underlying regulation. Id. at 1112–
 16 13.

 18
 19 This case mirrors Oregon Trollers. Amendment 13 created a process for setting ACLs. 81
 20 Fed. Reg. at 74309 (noting Amendment 13 “modified the framework process used to set and 21 adjust fishery specifications and for setting ACLs”). The Catch Rule complies with Amendment
 22 13 by setting ACLs for the anchovy, and does so in explicit reliance on the 100,000 mt and 25,000
 23 mt values for OFL and ABC that Amendment 13 established. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74310–11 (noting
 24 ACL is “derived from the default OFL specification and ABC”). In Oregon Trollers, the 2005
 25 fishery restrictions complied with the 1989 amendment’s instruction to meet the escapement goal,
 26 and does so in explicit reliance on the 1989 amendment’s 35,000 mt value for that escapement
 27

1 goal. See Gulf Fishermen's, 529 F.3d at 1322–23 (citing Oregon Trollers to hold plaintiff could
 2 challenge prior FMP amendment through a subsequent Service action setting deadline to comply
 3 with the FMP amendment); Glacier Fish Co. LLC v. Pritzker, 2015 WL 71084, at *2 (W.D. Wash.
 4 Jan. 6, 2015), rev'd on other grounds, 832 F.3d 1113 (9th Cir. 2016) (citing Oregon Trollers to
 5 allow plaintiff to use Service action setting rules for cost recovery program to challenge
 6 regulations establishing cost recovery program).

7 Oregon Trollers' applicability is underscored by the Catch Rule's reliance on Amendment
 8 13 to justify the ACL. The Catch Rule's explanation for why the ACL complies with National 9 Standard One's overfishing requirements and National Standard Two's science requirements is 10 that the Service previously found OFL and ABC complied with those requirements in approving 11 Amendment 13. Id. at 74311 (asserting it is "not necessary to further reduce the ACL from the 12 ABC" because the OFL and ABC were previously "approved by [the Service] as best available
 13 science and determined to appropriately account for uncertainty and protect the stock from 14 overfishing."). The ACL's direct descent from Amendment 13 indicates that the Catch Rule is an 15 action implementing Amendment 13, and thus that Plaintiff can challenge Amendment 13 through 16 Plaintiff's challenge to the Catch Rule.

 19 Defendants' response is that even if Plaintiff could challenge Amendment 13 through the 20 Catch Rule, Plaintiff has only challenged the Catch Rule in this suit and Oregon Trollers therefore 21 does not apply. Defendants "failed to raise the argument prior to [their] reply brief, [so] the Court
 22 declines to consider this argument." Rollins v. Dignity Health, 19 F. Supp. 3d 909, 918 (N.D. Cal.
 23 2013); Avendano-Ruiz v. City of Sebastopol, 2016 WL 3017534, at *9 (N.D. Cal. 2016) ("Parties 24 may not raise new arguments in reply briefs, and consideration of such arguments is improper.").

25
 26 Moreover, Defendants' argument would be unpersuasive even if the Court were to 27 consider it. Defendants maintain that Plaintiff's suit is a challenge to the OFL and ABC, and that

1 Plaintiff's suit therefore fails because the OFL and ABC were set in Amendment 13. Defendants'
 2 MSJ at 20 ("At bottom, Plaintiff is arguing that the OFL set in the FMP is not based on the 'best
 3 information available.'" (emphasis in original)); id. at 8 ("In the complaint, Plaintiff claims that 4 [the Service] unlawfully 'set' values for OFL, ABC, and ACL"). Defendants' position is therefore 5 that Plaintiff is challenging the OFL and ABC, but is not challenging the regulation that set them.
 6 This attempt to have it both ways is a stretch at best, and Defendants' strained reading of 7 Plaintiff's allegations is at odds with the flexible approach to section 1855(f)(1) adopted in 8 Oregon Trollers and its progeny. Or. Trollers, 452 F.3d at 1114 (considering section 1855(f)(1)
 9 argument even though plaintiffs only raised the issue during oral argument on summary
 10 judgment); Gulf Fishermen's, 529 F.3d at 1324 n. 1 (finding a challenge solely to the action also 11 qualified as a challenge to the underlying regulation).

 13 In sum, the Court finds that Plaintiff's timely challenge to the Catch Rule also allows
 14 Plaintiff to challenge Amendment 13, and in particular the OFL and ABC values that Amendment
 15 13 established.

16
 17 B. The Overfishing Limit, Acceptable Biological Catch, and Annual Catch Limit
 18 Are Not Based on the Best Scientific Information Available

19 Plaintiff and Defendants dispute whether the Catch Rule complies with National Standard
 20 Two's requirement that actions be "based upon the best scientific information available." 16
 21 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(2). Plaintiff argues that the Service failed to rely on the best scientific 22 information available because Plaintiff presented scientific information showing that OFL, ABC,
 23 and ACL were based on outdated information. Defendants advance three arguments in response.
 24 First, Defendants argue that section 1851(a)(2)'s best scientific information requirement does not
 25 require the Service to accept any particular piece of scientific information as fact. Second,
 26 Defendants argue that the scientific information Plaintiff presented was unreliable, and thus that it
 27

1 was reasonable for the Service to reject it. Third, and flowing from the second, Defendants argue
 2 that the Service reasonably relied on the existing OFL and ABC values because Plaintiff's more
 3 recent scientific evidence was unreliable. The Court agrees with Defendants' first argument, but 4 rejects Defendants' second and third arguments.

5 1. The Meaning of Best Scientific Information Available

6 Defendants interpret National Standard Two's science requirement as requiring that the 7 Service must consider scientific information, but that the Service is not required to accept any 8 particular piece of scientific information. Plaintiff replies that the Service is required to base its 9 decisions on the best scientific information available. The Court finds that both sides are correct.
 10

11 National Standard Two of the Magnuson-Stevens Act requires that "[c]onservation and 12 management measures shall be based upon the best scientific information available." 16 U.S.C. §
 13 1851(a)(2). Regulations defining National Standard Two further specify that fishery management 14 measures "must take into account the best scientific information available at the time of 15 preparation," 50 C.F.R. § 600.315(b)(2), which includes "biological, ecological, environmental,
 16 economic, and sociological scientific information," id. § 600.315(a)(1).

18 Defendants are correct that the Service need not accept any particular item of scientific 19 information as fact. National Standard Two instead requires the Service to review the evidence
 20 and determine what constitutes the best available science. Guindon v. Pritzker, 31 F. Supp. 3d 169, 21 195 (D.D.C. 2014) (noting National Standard Two requires a "a thorough review of all the
 22 relevant information available at the time."); 50 C.F.R. § 600.315(a)(1) ("Successful fishery
 23 management depends, in part, on the thorough analysis of this [scientific] information."); id. §
 24 600.315(a)(2) ("Scientific information that is used to inform decision making should include an 25 evaluation of its uncertainty and identify gaps in the information.").
 26

27 However, Plaintiff is correct that the Magnuson-Stevens Act requires, as it expressly states, 28

1 that “[c]onservation and management measures shall be based upon the best scientific information
2 available.” 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(2). Compare Midwater Trawlers Co-operative v. Dep’t of
3 Commerce, 282 F.3d 710, 720 (9th Cir. 2002) (overturning Service rule as it was not based on the
4 best scientific information available) with Or. Trollers, 452 F.3d at 1120 (upholding Service’s
5 fishery restrictions because plaintiffs had pointed to no scientific information better than the 6 information on which the Service relied). Accordingly, “[the Service] may not disregard superior
7 data” and section 1851(a)(2) challenges may prevail if “there is some indication that superior or 8 contrary data was available and that the agency ignored such information.” Guindon, 31 F. Supp.
9 3d at 195 (internal quotations and citation omitted). Nor is it enough for the Service to simply note
10 contrary scientific evidence’s existence without providing a reason for rejecting it. The Service
11 “cannot rely on reminders that its scientific determinations are entitled to deference in the absence
12 of reasoned analysis to cogently explain why its ... measures satisfied” the Magnuson-Stevens
13 Act. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc. v. Daley, 209 F.3d 747, 755–56 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (rejecting 14 Service action under Magnuson-Stevens Act); see WildEarth Guardians v. U.S. E.P.A., 759 F.3d 15 1064, 1073 (9th Cir. 2014) (“Stating that a factor was considered ... is not a substitute for 16 considering it.”)

18 19 2. Defendants Were Not Permitted to Disregard the Scientific
20 Information Plaintiff Highlights

21 Defendants’ next argument is that Plaintiff’s scientific evidence is so flawed that the 22 Service could disregard it in favor of relying on the OFL and ABC set by Amendment 13. Some 23 background is necessary to understand the parties’ dispute, so the Court first describes the 24 scientific underpinnings of the OFL, ABC, and ACL, and then turns to Defendants’ criticisms of 25 Plaintiff’s scientific evidence.

26
27 a. The Overfishing Limit, Acceptable Biological Catch, and 28 Annual Catch Limit Derive From the Conrad Study

1 The Catch Rule’s 25,000 metric ton (“mt”) annual catch limit (“ACL”) is based on the
 2 overfishing limit (“OFL”) and the acceptable biological catch (“ABC”). 81 Fed. Reg. at 74311.
 3 (“The ACL ... is currently set equal to its ABC value of 25,000 mt, which is 75,000 mt lower than
 4 its OFL.”). Reflecting this, the Catch Rule states that because “the existing OFL and ABC values
 5 ... [were] approved by [the National Marine Fisheries Service (“the Service”)] as the best
 6 available science. ... [I]t is not necessary to further reduce the ACL from the ABC for 7 precautionary reasons regarding scientific uncertainty in the level of catch intended to prevent
 8 overfishing.” Id. Necessarily then, the ACL is only based on the best scientific information
 9 available if the OFL and ABC are based on the best scientific information available.
 10

11 The OFL and ABC are based on a 1991 study by Jon Conrad (“Conrad Study”). AR 5:40–
 12 79 (Jon Conrad, A Bioeconomic Analysis of the Northern Anchovy (1991)). The Conrad Study
 13 estimated that the anchovy’s long-term average biomass was 733,410 mt and that the anchovy’s
 14 maximum sustainable yield (“MSY”) was 123,336 mt. AR 5:54; AR 7:148. The Conrad Study 15 relied on data collected from 1964 to 1990, a period during which anchovy biomass reached as 16 high as 1,611,800 mt and never fell below 299,410 mt. AR 5:71.<sup>4</sup>
 17

18 In 2000, Amendment 8 relied on the Conrad Study’s MSY estimate to set the anchovy’s
 19 MSY at 100,000 and the anchovy’s ABC at 25,000, i.e. 25 percent of MSY. AR 7:345 (“[MSY]
 20 for northern anchovy in the central subpopulation is estimated to be 123,000 mt per year at a total 21 biomass level of about 733,000 mt (Conrad 1991).”); Defendants’ Reply at 6 (noting MSY was 22
 23

---

24 <sup>4</sup> Defendants briefly argue that the Conrad Study is not the sole basis for the MSY, citing 25 background discussion preceding the MSY in Amendment 8. AR 7:148. This is wholly 26 unpersuasive. The Conrad Study’s MSY estimate is 123,336 mt, and its biomass estimate is 27 733,410 mt. AR 5:54. Amendment 8 expressly cites the Conrad Study as the basis for establishing 28 an MSY of 123,000 mt and a biomass estimate of 733,000 mt. AR 7:148. Moreover, the alternative assessment prepared in advance of Amendment 13 lists the only “Source” for the anchovy’s OFL, ABC, and ACL as “Conrad (1991) 123,000 FMSY [fishing rate expected to produce MSY over the long term] at biomass of 733,000 mt.” AR 11:680.

1 “obtained from Conrad (1991) and adopted in Amendment 8 to the FMP.”). Amendment 8
 2 reached the 100,000 mt MSY by pro-rating the Conrad Study’s 123,336 mt estimate for the entire
 3 anchovy stock by the portion of the anchovy stock (82 percent) that resided in U.S. waters. AR
 4 7:345; AR 5:54.

5 In 2011, Amendment 13 set the anchovy’s OFL equal to Amendment 8’s Conrad Study-
 6 based MSY. AR 11:653, 680 (2010 document prepared in anticipation of Amendment 13 listing
 7 overall MSY as 123,000 and citing Conrad Study as basis). Consequently, OFL and MSY both
 8 rely on the Conrad Study’s MSY estimate. Id. Amendment 13 also retained the existing 25,000 mt
 9 ABC level, setting it at “25 percent of OFL/MSY.” AR 31:933; AR 30:924 (“ABC” for monitored
 10 stocks equals “OFL * 0.25”). Amendment 13 set these levels despite concerns from the Pacific
 11 Council’s Scientific and Statistical Committee, a statutorily created advisory body, that the 12 underlying anchovy biomass estimates were “quite dated.” AR 14:703.

13 In 2016, the Catch Rule established the ACL based on the OFL and ABC values set in 14 Amendment 13. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74311. Accordingly, the ACL derives from Amendment 13’s
 15 OFL and ABC values, which derive from the MSY set in Amendment 8 in 2000, which derives 16 from the 1991 Conrad Study. The Court now turns to the evidence Plaintiff argues shows the 17 Conrad Study’s estimate no longer constitutes the best scientific information available.
 18

 20 b. Defendants Fail to Discredit Plaintiff’s Evidence

21 Plaintiff argues that the Service failed to set the ACL based on “the best scientific 22 information available” because recent scientific information indicates that the anchovy has 23 collapsed below the levels found by the 1990 Conrad Study, and thus that the Conrad Study’s
 24 MSY estimate (and the OFL, ABC, and ACL that derive from it) is no longer accurate. 16 U.S.C.
 25 § 1851(a)(2). Plaintiff’s argument relies on three main pieces of evidence: a 2015 peer-reviewed 26 study of the anchovy population, a 2015 survey of anchovy abundance conducted by the Service,
 27

1 and findings by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (“FWS”) and NOAA that anchovy predators
 2 are experiencing food shortages. Defendants argue that each piece of evidence is unreliable, and
 3 that the Service therefore reasonably disregarded Plaintiff’s evidence. The Court considers each
 4 piece of evidence in turn, and concludes that none of Defendants’ criticisms justify disregarding
 5 Plaintiff’s evidence.

6 Plaintiff’s first piece of evidence is a 2015 peer-reviewed study led by former Service
 7 scientist Alec MacCall (“MacCall Study”) who produced prior anchovy stock estimates and co-
 8 authored the Northern Anchovy Fishery Management Plan (“FMP”), which was later expanded
 9 into the current Coastal Pelagic Species Fishery Management Plan (“CPS FMP”). AR 90:1998–
 10 2005 (Alec MacCall, et al., Recent Collapse of Northern Anchovy Biomass Off California, 175
 11 Fisheries Research 87–94 (2015)); AR 5:51; AR 5:68; AR 30:889–90. The MacCall Study found
 12 that anchovy biomass averaged around 15,000 mt between 2009 and 2011, that anchovy biomass
 13 had declined by 99 percent since 2005, and that “anchovy biomasses estimated for 2009–2011 are 14 the lowest seen in 60 years.” AR 90:2003–04. Put otherwise, the MacCall Study found that the 15 anchovy population collapsed after 2005. MacCall subsequently extended the MacCall Study’s
 16 analysis through 2015. AR 175:2998–3004 (Alec MacCall, et al., California Anchovy Population
 17 Remains Low, 2012-2015 (2016)). The updated analysis was in line with the initial MacCall
 18 Study, and found that the anchovy stock “remains low after a collapse after 2005” and that 19 anchovy biomass averaged 18,200 between 2012 and 2015. AR 175:2998; AR 163:2861. The 20 updated analysis also found that preliminary data from 2016 indicated that “there has been no
 21 substantial recovery in 2016.” AR 175:2999. Consequently, the MacCall Study supports Plaintiff’s
 22 argument because the MacCall Study suggests that the Conrad Study’s 733,410 mt biomass
 23 estimate is far too high, and thus that the OFL, ABC, and ACL that derive from the Conrad Study
 24 are also far too high. Indeed, the MacCall study’s biomass estimate, if accurate, means that the 25
 26
 27
 28

1 25,000 mt ACL would allow commercial fishing to harvest the entire anchovy stock.

2 Defendants criticize the MacCall Study on two grounds. First, Defendants note that 17,286
3 mt of anchovy were fished in U.S. waters in 2015 and that animal predation would have consumed
4 an even larger quantity of anchovy.<sup>5</sup> AR 196:3168. An internal analysis by the Service found the 5 MacCall Study's claim that anchovy biomass averaged around 15,000 mt between 2009 and 2011
6 was likely inaccurate as "the combined removal of anchovy due to predation and fishing almost 7 certainly exceeded 15,000 MT every year since 2008." AR 196:3168. Second, the same Service
8 analysis found the California Cooperative Oceanic Fisheries ("CalCOFI") survey, which provided
9 the data for the MacCall Study's biomass estimates, might understate the anchovy population
10 because the CalCOFI survey occurs during a limited time window (usually January and April) and 11 in a limited area (San Diego, California to Point Reyes, California). AR 159:2783; AR 196:3160, 12 3171. The Service therefore concluded that the CalCOFI survey data "are not suitable for 13 estimating the biomass of the anchovy stock." AR 196:3166.

15
16 Defendants' arguments fail to discredit the MacCall Study. The predation claim fails
17 because the MacCall Study estimates spawning adult anchovy biomass, whereas the fishery
18 landings to which Defendants point include both adult and juvenile biomass, thereby inflating the 19 amount of biomass relative to the MacCall Study. AR 90:1998. Moreover, Defendants ignore the 20 facts that the MacCall Study reports that average biomass for 2009 to 2011 is 15,000 mt, and that 21 anchovy biomass in a given year might exceed the annual average.

23 In turn, Defendants' criticism of the MacCall Study's use of the CalCOFI survey data fails
24 because it also applies to the Conrad Study on which the Catch Rule relies. The MacCall Study
25 and the Conrad Study both use data from the CalCOFI survey, which has been in place since 1951.

26
27 <sup>5</sup> Defendants claim the amount of anchovy consumed by predation may exceed the amount fished 28 by as much as seven times. However, the evidence on which Defendants rely refers to predation of coastal pelagic species in general instead of predation of anchovy. AR 196:3168.

1 AR 196:3159. The MacCall Study used CalCOFI data from 1951 to 2011 to produce an anchovy
2 biomass estimate for 2009 to 2011. AR 90:1998. MacCall’s follow-up analysis relies on CalCOFI
3 data from 1951 to 2015 to produce an anchovy biomass estimate for 2011 to 2015. AR 175:2998.
4 For its part, the Conrad Study relies on biomass estimates from 1964 to 1990 from a 1991 study
5 led by Larry Jacobson (“Jacobson Study”) that Defendants do not dispute employed CalCOFI
6 data. AR 5:68 (Larry Jacobson et al., Spawning Biomass of the Northern Anchovy in 1991 (1991)).
7 Defendants’ Reply at 7; see AR 200:3239 (subsequent study by authors of Jacobson Study using 8 CalCOFI data).

10 Defendants argue that because the Jacobson Study combined CalCOFI data with other 11 information, the Jacobson Study’s use of the CalCOFI data is unproblematic. However,
12 Defendants have not identified these other sources of information, and the Jacobson Study is not
13 in the administrative record. The Court is therefore faced with two studies that rely on CalCOFI
14 data, with the distinction that the Conrad Study is based on data from 1964 to 1990, whereas the 15 MacCall Study is based on data from 1951 to 2011 and, through MacCall’s subsequent update, 16 through 2015. The Court therefore rejects Defendants’ claim that the MacCall Study could be 17 disregarded.
18

19 Plaintiff’s second piece of evidence is a Service technical memorandum (“Acoustic Trawl
20 Survey”) that estimated anchovy abundance based on data from acoustic trawl surveys completed
21 during the summer of 2015. AR 274:3640–54 (copy of Acoustic Trawl Survey). The Acoustic 22 Trawl Survey employed “echosounders” which “transmit sound pulses down beneath the ship and 23 receive echoes from animals and the seabed in the path of the sound waves. The backscattered
24 signal, i.e. the sound that is scattered back ... provid[es] an indication of the numbers and physical 25 properties of the targets in the water column.” AR 247:3689. The Acoustic Trawl Survey 26 estimated that the anchovy’s biomass was 31,427 mt. AR 247:3688. The estimate remained the 27

1 same even after the Acoustic Trawl Survey was reviewed by other Service employees. AR
 2 251:3735–49 (estimate as of August 2016 with same 31,427 mt figure); AR 239:3639 (email
 3 noting internal review of survey); AR 253:3767 (same). Although the Acoustic Trawl Survey’s
 4 31,427 mt biomass estimate exceeds the MacCall Study’s estimate, it still supports Plaintiff’s
 5 challenge to the OFL, ABC, and ACL because it is far below Amendment 13’s 100,000 mt OFL
 6 and the underlying Conrad Study’s 733,410 mt average biomass estimate.

 8 Defendants criticize the Acoustic Trawl Survey on two grounds. First, Defendants note the 9 Acoustic Trawl Survey was not final when the Catch Rule was completed, and thus argue its 10 contents could be disregarded. Defendants point in particular to Fishermen’s Finest, 593 F.3d at 11 897, which held that a Council was not arbitrary and capricious in failing to consider data that 12 only became available a month before the Council issued recommendations to the Service.
 13 Second, Defendants argue that the Acoustic Trawl Survey was unreliable because it did not 14 include anchovy in inshore areas or surface waters. AR 159:2782. Defendants point in particular to 15 a report from a Service and Pacific Council workshop (“Workshop Report”), which recommended
 16 against using Acoustic Trawl Survey to estimate overall anchovy biomass until methods could be 17 devised to account for the gaps in the survey’s coverage. AR 159:2782 (“[T]he present [Acoustic
 18 Trawl] [S]urvey data cannot be used to provide estimates of relative or absolute abundance for 19 northern anchovy.”). As those methods were not yet complete, the Workshop Report concluded 20 the Acoustic Trawl Survey should be “restricted to providing an estimate of abundance only for 21 the area and the portion of the water column surveyed.” AR 159:2782.

 24 Defendants’ claim that the Acoustic Trawl Survey could be disregarded because it was not 25 yet final is unpersuasive. “[B]y specifying that decisions be based on the best scientific
 26 information available, the Magnuson–Stevens Act recognizes that such information may not be 27 exact or totally complete.” Midwater Trawlers, 393 F.3d at 1003 (emphasis in original).
 28

1 Consequently, “[i]t is well settled ... that the Secretary can act when the available science is
2 incomplete or imperfect, even where concerns have been raised about the accuracy of the methods
3 or models employed.” Category Scallop Fishermen v. Sec’y, U.S. Dep’t of Commerce, 635 F.3d
4 106, 115 (3d Cir. 2011) (citation omitted) (ellipses in original). A complete draft of the Acoustic
5 Trawl Survey was available by June 2016, and its biomass estimate did not change during the 6 Service’s internal review. ECF No. 48 at 8; AR 251:3741 (survey as of August 2016 with same
7 31,427 mt figure). Thus, the Service had an in-house biomass estimate and supporting analysis
8 four months before the Catch Rule was issued in October 2016. This distinguishes Fishermen’s
9 Finest, 593 F.3d at 897, because in the instant case the Service had a complete draft instead of raw
10 data and the Service had four months to consider the information instead of just one. See Bryson, 11 940 F. Supp. 2d 1029, 1050–51 (holding Council’s failure to incorporate new MSY estimate into 12 draft FMP amendment was arbitrary and capricious, where MSY estimate was created in 13 November 2010 and the Council sent the draft amendment to the Service in January 2011).

15 Defendants’ argument that the Acoustic Trawl Survey should be disregarded because it did 16 not incorporate inshore areas and surface waters is also unpersuasive. The Court agrees with 17 Defendants that the Workshop Report shows the Service reasonably concluded that the Acoustic
18 Trawl Survey could not provide an estimate of total anchovy biomass until methods to account for 19 the inshore and surface water gaps in its coverage were in place. AR 159:2782. Yet the Workshop 20 Report also states that the Acoustic Trawl Survey “can provide adequate information to develop an 21 estimate of absolute biomass for the [anchovy] within the surveyed area” and its 31,427 mt low
22 biomass estimate supports Plaintiff’s claim that the anchovy population has declined below the 23 levels on which the OFL, ABC, and ACL are premised. The Court notes too that CalCOFI survey
24 data that the Conrad Study employs covers a smaller area than the Acoustic Trawl Survey.

27 Compare AR 159:2783 (CalCOFI survey extends from San Diego to Point Reyes) with AR

1 251:3740 (“The summer [Acoustic Trawl] occurred over 80 days ... from San Diego to the
 2 northern end of Vancouver Island.”). It is thus unclear why Defendants believe the gaps in
 3 CalCOFI surveys do not preclude their use while gaps in the Acoustic Trawl Survey coverage
 4 preclude its use.

5 Plaintiff’s third piece of evidence consists of reports indicating that anchovy predators
 6 were being adversely affected by the anchovy stock’s decline. A 2016 Service report found that
 7 anchovies and sardines “remained at very low levels in 2015, where they have been since 2009.”
 8 AR 143:2681. The same report noted that prey shortages had caused “unusual mortality events”
 9 among California sea lions in 2013, 2014, and 2015. AR 143:2684–85; see AR 42:1139 (noting 10 California sea lion pups were starving due to lack of sardines and anchovy). Similarly, FWS sent a
 11 series of letters to the Pacific Council (on which the Service sits) explaining that anchovy
 12 predators were experiencing food shortages due to a lack of anchovy. AR 42:1137–39 (May 2015
 13 letter); AR 64:1306–07 (November 2015 letter); AR 161:2818 (October 2016 letter). FWS noted 14 that a 25-year decline in overall seabird abundance, large-scale cormorant starvation, and 15 California sea lion deaths all “point[] to the generally reduced availability of northern anchovy to 16 marine predators.” AR 42:1139. FWS was particularly concerned about “unusual mortality events 17 and a multi-year decline in breeding success” among California brown pelicans because the 18 withdrawal of Endangered Species Act protections from the California brown pelican had 19 expressly assumed the CPS FMP would ensure an adequate food supply. AR 42:1138. This 20 evidence led FWS to suggest that absent “a recent biomass estimate, it is unknown whether the 21 25,000 metric ton Annual Catch Limit ... serves a protective function for the [anchovy] ... or for 22 the marine mammals, birds, and fish that depend on it.” AR 47:1139.
 23
 25

26 Defendants argue this evidence can be ignored. First, Defendants argue the evidence could 27 simply reflect declines in other fish anchovy predators consume, such as sardines. AR 143:2680.

However, Defendants’ support for this claim is the same report by the Service that notes anchovies have been at low levels since 2009. Id. Second, Defendants argue that anchovy may simply have moved out of some areas in which predators are located. AR 87:1965–66. Yet Defendants’ evidence in support of this assertion is that the anchovy’s spawning range contracted inshore in 2012 and 2013, which is a sign of low anchovy population and therefore supports Plaintiff’s theory that the Conrad Study’s MSY estimate no longer constitutes the best science available. AR 90:1999 (“The habitat utilized by spawning anchovies expands into the offshore region in times of high abundance and contracts into nearshore core areas when abundances are lower.”); AR 7:165; AR 26:792.

In sum, Defendants have failed to explain why the evidence to which Plaintiff points could be disregarded.

3. The Overfishing Limit, Acceptable Biological Catch, and Annual Catch Limit Were Not Based on the Best Scientific Information Available

Defendants’ final argument is that the flaws to which Defendants point in Plaintiff’s evidence means that the OFL, ABC, and ACL were based on the best scientific information available, despite their reliance on the Conrad Study. The Court disagrees, and finds that it was arbitrary and capricious for the Service to find that the OFL, ABC, and ACL were based on the best scientific information available in light of the more recent evidence that Plaintiff highlights.

The Magnuson-Stevens Act’s National Standard Two mandates that “[c]onservation and management measures shall be based upon the best scientific information available.” 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(2). “[B]y specifying that decisions be based on the best scientific information available, the Magnuson–Stevens Act recognizes that such information may not be exact or totally complete.” Midwater Trawlers, 393 F.3d at 1003 (emphasis in original).

At bottom, Defendants’ argument is that it was reasonable for the Service to rely on the

1 1991 Conrad Study’s MSY estimate because Plaintiff’s more recent evidence was so flawed that it
2 could be disregarded. Yet the Court has previously explained that the flaws to which Defendants
3 point do not justify disregarding Plaintiff’s evidence. Moreover, even if the Service could have
4 reasonably disregarded part of Plaintiff’s evidence, Defendants have not responded to Plaintiff’s
5 compelling point that in the aggregate, recent evidence strongly suggests that the anchovy
6 population has declined well below the 733,410 mt value on which the OFL, ABC, and ACL are 7 based. Instead, the Catch Rule continues to rely on the Conrad Study while simultaneously
8 acknowledging that “[the Service] agrees there is evidence that [the anchovy] did likely go
9 through a decline in the recent past and abundance may still be at some relatively low state.” 81
10 Fed. Reg. at 74311.

12 Nor is the Court persuaded by Defendants’ reiteration that the Service’s scientific 13 judgments are entitled to deference. “The Service cannot rely on reminders that its scientific 14 determinations are entitled to deference in the absence of reasoned analysis to cogently explain
15 why its . . . measures satisfied” the Magnuson-Stevens Act. Daley, 209 F.3d at 755 at 755–56
16 (quotation marks and citation omitted). Here, the Service’s sole basis for the OFL, ABC, and ACL
17 is the Conrad Study, and the Court has previously explained why the Conrad Study is insufficient.
18 Indeed, the only piece of recent evidence Defendants provide suggesting the anchovy population
19 has not declined is an acoustic trawl survey from the summer of 2016, which Defendants concede
20 is not in the administrative record and cannot be considered in evaluating the Service’s action.
21 Friends of the Clearwater v. Dombeck, 222 F.3d 552, 560 (9th Cir. 2000).

23
24 The Court is thus left with Defendants’ acknowledgment that the anchovy population has 25 likely declined, Defendants’ continued reliance on the 1991 Conrad Study for the OFL, ABC, and 26 ACL, and a substantial body of recent scientific information—including a 2016 study that relies
27 on more recent CalCOFI data than the Conrad Study—that indicates the Conrad Study is no longer

1 accurate. Compare Oregon Trollers, 452 F.3d at 1120 (upholding the Service’s reliance on 1986
2 and 1988 studies to impose fishery restrictions in 2005 because plaintiff’s challenge to the fishery
3 restrictions was “[b]ereft of any contrary science.”) with Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc. v. Evans, 168
4 F. Supp. 2d 1149, 1153–54, vacated in part on other grounds, 316 F.3d 904 (9th Cir. 2003)
5 (rejecting the Service’s reliance on 15-year old bycatch estimates in light of evidence indicating 6 bycatch rates had risen in recent years). Faced with this information, the Court concludes that the 7 OFL, ABC, and ACL are arbitrary and capricious because the Service has “offered an explanation
8 for its decision that runs counter to evidence before the agency.” Pac. Dawn, 831 F.3d at 1173.
9 Framed differently, the Court finds that the Service acted arbitrarily and capriciously because the 10 Catch Rule fails to “articulate a rational connection between the facts found and the conclusions 11 reached.” Bosworth, 510 F.3d at 1023.

13 The Court also finds that the Service’s dismissal of the MacCall Study is arbitrary and 14 capricious because it is “so implausible that it could not be ascribed to a difference in view or the 15 product of the agency’s expertise.” Pac. Dawn, 831 F.3d at 1173. The Catch Rule dismisses the 16 MacCall Study because it “does not provide analysis for years past 2011” and is based on data 17 from “surveys that are best at providing regional indices of relative availability and variability of 18 the stock, but are not estimates of overall biomass.” 81 Fed. Reg. at 74311. That criticism is not
19 plausible, as the Conrad Study MSY value the Catch Rule relies upon uses the same survey data.
20 The “outdated” argument is also not credible because the Catch Rule is rejecting a study based on 21 data from 1951 to 2011 in favor of a study based on data from 1964 to 1990.

24 In sum, the Court finds that the OFL, ABC, and ACL are arbitrary and capricious because 25 Plaintiff has presented substantial evidence that the OFL, ABC, and ACL are not based on the best 26 scientific information available.

27 C. The Service Should Have Considered Whether Relying on the Conrad Study

Would Prevent Overfishing

2 Plaintiff next argues that the OFL, ABC, and ACL violate National Standard One because 3 they do not prevent overfishing. 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(1). Specifically, Plaintiff argues the 4 overfishing limit (“OFL”) is too high to prevent overfishing because it is based on the Conrad
5 Study’s maximum sustainable yield (“MSY”) and thus the Conrad Study’s 733,410 mt biomass
6 estimate, and the evidence indicates that the Conrad Study’s biomass estimate is now inaccurate.
7 In turn, Plaintiff argues the acceptable biological catch (“ABC”) is too high to prevent overfishing
8 because it derives directly from the OFL, and argues that the annual catch limit (“ACL”) is too
9 high because it simply copies the ABC. The Court agrees.
10

11 National Standard One requires that “[c]onservation and management measures shall
12 prevent overfishing while achieving, on a continuing basis, the optimum yield from each fishery
13 for the United States fishing industry.” Id. Overfishing is a rate of fishing “that jeopardizes the 14 capacity of a fishery to produce [MSY] on a continuing basis.” Id. § 1802(34). MSY is “the largest 15 long-term average catch or yield that can be taken from a stock.” Consequently, overfishing is “a
16 rate of fishing which would jeopardize the capacity of a fishery to produce the [MSY] on a 17 continuing basis.” Bryson, 940 F. Supp. 2d at 1036.
18

19 The preceding discussion of the best available science resolves this dispute. The 100,000
20 mt OFL derives from the Conrad Study’s MSY estimate, and thus from the Conrad Study’s
21 733,410 mt biomass estimate. AR 5:54 (Conrad Study MSY estimate); AR 7:148 (Amendment 8
22 adopting Conrad Study MSY estimate); AR 29:827 (noting Amendment 13 set OFL equal to the 23 existing MSY value); AR 11:680 (citing Conrad Study as source for OFL value). As discussed
24 above, Plaintiff has provided substantial evidence that the anchovy population has declined well
25 below the 733,410 mt biomass level found in the Conrad Study. Indeed, the McCall Study
26 estimates that anchovy biomass has been between 15,000 mt and 18,200 mt from 2009 to 2015, 27
28

1 which means the OFL would have exceeded anchovy biomass by over 80,000 mt. AR 90:2003;
 2 AR 175:2999. Underscoring the point, the Catch Rule itself acknowledges that “there is evidence
 3 that [the anchovy] did likely go through a decline in the recent past and abundance may still be at 4 some relatively low state.” 81 Fed. Reg. at 74311; see AR 143:2681 (2016 Service report finding
 5 anchovy and sardine stocks “remained at very low levels in 2015, where they have been since 6 2009.”). Given this backdrop, it was at minimum arbitrary and capricious for the Service to fail to 7 consider whether the OFL estimate still prevented overfishing in light of its reliance on the Conrad
 8 Study. Pac. Coast, 265 F.3d at 1034 (“Agency action should be overturned ... when the agency 9 has ... entirely failed to consider an important aspect of the problem.”).

11 It follows that it was also arbitrary and capricious for the Service to fail to consider 12 whether the ABC and ACL could prevent overfishing in light of its reliance on the OFL. The 13 Service maintains the 25,000 mt ABC prevents overfishing because it is a 75 percent reduction 14 from the 100,000 mt OFL. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74311 (“OFL was set equal to its MSY value and its 15 ABC level was reduced from this OFL by 75 percent to account for scientific uncertainty in the 16 OFL and to prevent overfishing, among other considerations.”). This presumes the OFL is 17 accurate, which in turn presumes the accuracy of the MSY value derived from the Conrad Study’s
 18 biomass estimate of 733,410. AR 5:54 AR 7:148; AR 29:827; AR 11:680. The problem, in other
 19 words, is that the ABC is justified solely in terms of the OFL and therefore “ignores the critical 20 variable: anchovy abundance.” Plaintiff’s MSJ at 17. Reducing an outdated OFL by a fixed
 21 percentage without considering whether the anchovy population might have changed since 1991
 22 ignores the most important aspect of the problem—the size of the anchovy population. That is 23 arbitrary and capricious. Nat’l Wildlife Fed’n v. Nat’l Marine Fisheries Serv., 184 F. Supp. 3d 861, 24 894 (D. Or. 2016) (“Without identifying ‘rough’ recovery abundance levels and time frames, [the 25 Service] cannot logically conclude that” an action will not harm salmon population). It follows
 26
 27
 28

1 that it was arbitrary and capricious to simply set ACL equal to ABC without inquiring whether the
 2 anchovy population had changed since the Conrad Study was published. 81 Fed. Reg. at 74311
 3 (“The ACL for the [anchovy] is currently set equal to its ABC value of 25,000 mt, which is 75,000
 4 mt lower than its OFL.”)

5 In sum, it was arbitrary and capricious for the Service to fail to consider whether the OFL,
 6 ABC, and ACL still prevented overfishing in light of their direct reliance on a MSY estimate from 7 a 1991 study that evidence in the administrative record indicated was out of date.

 9 D. Vacatur is the Appropriate Remedy

10 Defendants argue that even if the Court finds the Catch Rule is arbitrary and capricious, the 11 Court should not vacate the ACL because a new acoustic trawl survey from 2016 (“2016 Survey”)
 12 indicates the anchovy population is recovering.

13 There are two problems with Defendants’ argument. First, the 2016 Survey results are not 14 persuasive enough to overcome the presumption that a court shall “set aside an agency rule that a 15 court finds arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with the 16 law.” Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc. v. U.S. Dep’t of Interior, 275 F. Supp. 2d 1136, 1143 (C.D. Cal.
 17 2002). The 2016 Survey estimates that the anchovy stock is at 151,558 mt, which Defendant
 18 stresses is far higher than the estimates Plaintiff provides. However, the 2016 Survey estimate is 19 still well below the Conrad Study’s 733,410 mt estimate, which is the figure from which the MSY, 20 OFL, ABC, and ACL are derived. Thus, even if the 2016 Survey is correct, it is unclear how the 21 2016 Survey can justify the OFL, ABC, and ACL.
 22

 24 Second, Defendants’ only support for their argument that the Court can consider evidence
 25 outside the administrative record in determining a remedy is a district court decision that discusses 26 preliminary injunctions, which are not at issue here. Nw. Envtl. Def. Ctr. v. U.S. Army Corps of 27 Engineers, 817 F. Supp. 2d 1290, 1300 (D. Or. 2011). Given that United States Magistrate Judge

In sum, the Court rejects Defendants’ claim that vacatur is inappropriate.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court GRANTS Plaintiff’s motion for summary judgment and DENIES Defendants’ cross-motion for summary judgment.

RE: NOAA-NMFS-2017-0155-0001; Fisheries off West Coast States; Coastal Pelagic Species Fisheries; Multi-Year Annual Catch Limits for Finfish Stocks in Monitored Stock Category

Dear Mr. Thom:

We request that you reject the proposed rule to set multi-year annual catch limits for so-called “monitored” stocks in the West Coast Coastal Pelagic Species (CPS) fishery, immediately promulgate new regulations to establish interim catch limits for the central stock of northern anchovy (CSNA) that comply with the recent court order in Oceana, Inc. v. Ross,<sup>1</sup> and initiate development of a new, lawful rule in cooperation with the Pacific Fishery Management Council (Council) that establishes a system to specify annual, ecosystem-based management reference points for CSNA, the northern subpopulation of northern anchovy (NSNA), and jack mackerel. The proposed rule is virtually identical to the rule the court recently struck down with respect to the CSNA as unlawful, arbitrary, and not based on the best scientific information available. In fact, the proposed rule is, if anything, more flawed than the rule the court has vacated, because it adopts an invalid management framework for an indefinite number of years and fails to take into account the effects of removing forage species at the specified levels for an indefinite period. The same flaws the court identified in the prior rule for CSNA apply to NMFS’s current proposed rule for the CSNA, the NSNA and jack mackerel: in particular, the proposed limits are not based on best available science and do not prevent overfishing. In addition, the proposed rule again fails entirely to account for the needs of marine predators.

NMFS’s proposed rule would freeze in place a static catch limit for a species whose average long-term abundance has declined significantly in recent decades and which can decline by well over 90 percent within two years. NMFS does not offer any scientific rationale for doing this other than to posit that it is relying on default values established twenty years ago in Amendment 8 and recommended (with reservations) by the Council in 2010. As the court’s recent decision makes clear, NMFS may not simply rely on “default” values that lack a sound scientific basis. NMFS should not waste more public resources on this failed management path.

Rather, it should use the ample science available to it to manage the species in a scientifically sound, lawful manner.

Factual Background

As detailed below, the “monitored” framework is not consistent with the best available science regarding these stocks’ basic biology and ecological importance, contradicts basic fishery management principles, and does not meet basic MSA standards for preventing overfishing and accounting for predator needs. Recent data underscores the inadequacy of this approach as well as the urgent need to develop a new approach to protect the stocks and the predators that rely on them.

It is well established in the fisheries and natural resource literature that static catch limits that are not regularly updated are not sustainable for fluctuating populations, and therefore fail to prevent overfishing. As stated in the seminal paper on this topic, May et al. 1978:

An alternative strategy is to aim for constant yield (constant catch, constant quotas, constant Y). Many people have noted that such a strategy, if pursued rigidly, will extinguish the population if the target yield is inadvertently set above the actual MSY value. Even if the yield is set below the MSY, the system will collapse if the population ever happens to fluctuate below a threshold value (see, e.g., [R.M. May, 1977]<sup>2</sup> and references therein). In general, for an arbitrary population growth curve, a strategy of constant Y will lead to longer return times and greater population fluctuations than the constant effort strategy producing the same average yield.”<sup>3</sup>

May et al.’s warning is especially compelling in light of recent data, which indicate that multiple CPS stocks have declined in the past decade and remain at low levels relative to the past. These data and trends are described below.

Moreover, the Council’s original basis for establishing the “monitored” framework — lack of abundance information for certain stocks — no longer applies and was never legally valid in any case. The “monitored” framework in the CPS FMP is predicated on the absence of annual biomass estimates due to fishery managers assigning lower management priority to these stocks.<sup>4</sup> Yet NMFS currently collects data necessary to produce updated abundance estimates each year for all CPS finfish stocks and reliable methods are available for producing such annual estimates. The Council recently concluded an Acoustic Trawl Methodology (ATM) review which took place on January 29-February 2, 2018. The panel, composed of SSC members and reviewers from the Center for Independent Experts unanimously concluded that the ATM surveys are ready for use in management for jack mackerel, CSNA, and NSNA, both as relative biomass indices for use in stock assessments and as survey-based biomass estimates to directly inform management. The results from the 2017 ATM survey have already been analyzed to distinguish all the CPS stocks, and can readily provide estimates of abundance. The workshop compiled background literature, data, and responses to review panel requests, all of which are relevant to this proposed rule and should be part of the record.<sup>5</sup> We are providing a subset of these relevant materials as attachments to this letter.

At the review, NMFS representatives stated that their management goal is to develop estimates of stock biomass for primary CPS (CSNA, NSNA, jack mackerel, Pacific mackerel, and Pacific sardine) on an annual basis, that the “N. Anchovy transition to “actively managed” has begun and J. mackerel expected in near future” and that the highest quality data available for meeting that stated goal is the AT survey.<sup>6</sup>

It is high time for NMFS to abandon the “monitored” framework and move to real-time, science- and ecosystem-based management. Since 2013, NMFS has expressed its intent to complete stock assessments for all CPS stocks, including the CSNA.<sup>7</sup> Initially, this assessment was scheduled for 2016.<sup>8</sup> In November 2015, the Council asked the SWFSC to conduct a stock assessment for presentation at the November 2016 Council meeting, including plans to convene a scientific workshop to be held in Spring 2016 to develop the best approach for the assessment.<sup>9</sup> The Council also asked the CPS management team to explore alternative management and policy approaches and report back to the Council in Fall 2016, and asked Council staff to place consideration of more active management of anchovy on a future meeting agenda.<sup>10</sup> In November 2016, the SWFSC committed to completing an integrated stock assessment “as soon as the appropriate biological information can be collected, verified, and processed . . . .”<sup>11</sup> Furthermore, in November 2016 and April 2017, the SWFSC provided biomass estimates for the CSNA to the Council for 2015 and 2016 respectively. And in 2017, the Council asked the SSC to review methods for developing an OFL for the CSNA, evaluate the results of the January 2018 acoustic-trawl survey methodology review to determine whether it can be used to calculate a biomass estimate and  $F_{MSY}$  for CSNA, with a report due to the Council in 2018.<sup>12</sup> As described above, that review concluded that the ATM surveys are ready for use in management for jack mackerel, CSNA, and NSNA, both as relative biomass indices for use in stock assessments and as survey-based biomass estimates to directly inform management.

Central Subpopulation of Northern Anchovy (CSNA)

Like the previously promulgated management measures for the central subpopulation of northern anchovy, the proposed OFL, ABC, and ACL for this stock are based on a bioeconomic analysis from 1991.<sup>13</sup> This analysis uses an age-structured stock synthesis model incorporating spawning stock biomass (SSB) estimates for 1964-1990 to derive estimates of maximum sustainable yield and the biomass at maximum sustainable yield. These biomass estimates are based on CalCOFI egg and larval data collected from offshore southern California, beginning just north of Point Conception and ending south near San Diego, covering the upper water column. Although this study does not recommend using this specification for the purpose of management, Conrad 1991 found that the spawning stock biomass at MSY for anchovy over this timeframe was over 733,000 mt. According to the biomass estimates used in the model, the population of anchovy increased from 1964-1974 followed by a steady decline until 1985. In 1990, the biomass estimate for CSNA was 299,410 mt, the lowest estimate since 1964.

Figure 1 Overlay of Thayer et al. 2017 and Conrad 1991 time series of the central subpopulation northern anchovy spawning stock biomass estimates, 1951-2015 and 1964-1990 respectively.

A 2017 study by Thayer et al., updating MacCall et al. 2016 from 2012-2015, shows consistent estimates to Conrad 1991 for the 1964-1990 period, then a drastically different population of northern anchovy during the post-1990 era.<sup>14, 15</sup> Thayer et al. used CalCOFI egg and larval data to estimate annual spawning biomass (SSB), with a correction factor to scale biomass estimates north to Point Reyes, CA. This time series shows low levels of anchovy abundance beginning in 1989 and remaining low until a spike in spawning abundance in 2006, followed by a steep decline in 2008. This collapse resulted in anchovy spawning biomasses below 100,000 mt through 2015, with estimates indicating the spawning biomass had collapsed as low as 5,000 mt. The Thayer et al. 2017 abundance time series for CSNA, which represents the most complete, up-to-date time series of abundance, indicates the mean spawning biomass was 902,941 mt during the 1964-1990 period, and only 20,700 mt for the 2009-2015 period. In other words, the most recent 7 years in the time series are 97.7% lower than the period on which the proposed ACL is based. Clearly any reference points based on the 1964-1990 data do not reflect recent stock conditions.

The Southwest Fisheries Science Center (SWFSC) began conducting acoustic-trawl surveys to measure CPS biomass in 2006, however, until 2015 did not produce estimates of CSNA biomass due to low stock size and low management priority. The SWFSC produced acoustic trawl survey biomass estimates for CSNA in 2015, 2016, and 2017.<sup>16</sup> Survey results for 2015 determined a stock size of 31,427 mt, further confirming the collapse of CSNA observed in Thayer et al. 2017. Notably, the target strength<sup>17</sup> used to scale the 2015 estimate was significantly increased in the 2016-17 surveys. The biomass estimate would have been far lower if the currently used target strength was used. Consistent with other sources of information indicating that some recruitment has occurred since the stock hit a record low, the 2016 estimate increased to 151,000 mt, and the preliminary estimate of biomass from the summer 2017 survey is 180,000 mt. The most recent 2017 total biomass estimate of 180,000 mt is below any biomass estimate during the 1964-1990 period, is more than 80% lower than the 1964-1990 mean biomass, and is 40% below the cutoff biomass of 300,000 mt used in previous management. Moreover, the acoustic trawl biomass estimates include juvenile as well as adult fish, whereas only spawning adult biomass (age 1+) are generally counted for management purposes.

<sup>17</sup> In acoustic trawl surveys, target strength describes the acoustic reflectivity of a single target. Measurements of target strength are used to scale acoustic estimates into numbers or weight of the target species per unit area.

Note Thayer et al. 2017 estimates are in spawning stock biomass, while the AT survey estimates are measured in total biomass, including non-spawning fish.

In addition to egg/larval data and ATM surveys, the California Department of Fish and Wildlife and California Wetfish Producers Association have produced biomass estimates using aerial surveys from 2012 to 2017. Estimates ranged from 0-67,684 mt for anchovy.<sup>18</sup> In 2017, the Southern California Coastal Pelagic Species Aerial Survey Methodology Review provided recommendations on potential uses of this information in management.<sup>19</sup>

Anchovy is a critical food source for many marine wildlife species, including commercially and recreationally valuable fish, mammals, and sea birds.<sup>20</sup> According to diet studies of 32 different marine predators, anchovy is the most important forage fish throughout the California Current Ecosystem.<sup>21</sup> Some predators, such as the California brown pelican, rely heavily on anchovy to provide the nutrition they need to breed successfully.<sup>22</sup> Anchovy is part of a small suite of preferred prey species that provide especially high energy to predators; other species include Pacific sardine and Pacific mackerel.<sup>23</sup> If these other species are highly abundant and available at times of low anchovy abundance, some predators may be able to switch prey and obtain adequate nutrition. However, in recent years, these alternative forage species have also declined to relatively low levels.<sup>24</sup> The Pacific sardine population (age 1+ biomass) fell by over 95% from 2007 to 2015 and has remained so low that the sardine fishery has been closed since then. 80 Fed. Reg. 22926 (Apr. 24, 2015), 80 Fed. Reg. 36933 (June 29, 2015).

In reports to the Pacific Fishery Management Council, including NMFS, the United States Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) has presented information on brown pelican mortality events and breeding failures and has requested that fishery managers consider what additional management measures they should take “to ensure that an adequate forage reserve of northern anchovy...is maintained over the long term for California brown pelicans and other marine predators in the California Current Ecosystem.”<sup>25</sup>

The brown pelican was removed from Endangered Species Act protection in 2009, partly on the premise that the Coastal Pelagic Species FMP would ensure adequate food supplies.<sup>26</sup> However, unusually large numbers of adult brown pelicans died of starvation in 2008, 2009, and 2010, and adult pelicans continued to exhibit abnormal behaviors associated with limited prey availability, such as preying on common murre chicks and increased scavenging, in more recent years.<sup>27</sup> FWS explained that, in addition to adults suffering malnutrition, brown pelicans had experienced breeding failures since 2009 that were directly linked to lack of available anchovy.<sup>28</sup>

Recently published analyses of seabird and forage fish distribution and abundance in the CCE show that a substantial decline in seabird abundance in the northern portion of the southern CCE (from around Point Conception, California, northward) – a rate of decline of 2.2% per year from 1987-2011 – is attributable to declines in anchovy abundance and availability.<sup>29</sup> FWS has pointed out that many other marine predators, including Brandt’s cormorants appear to have suffered from “the generally reduced availability of northern anchovy . . . in the [California

Current Ecosystem].”<sup>30</sup> FWS also explained that an unprecedented die-off had occurred in 2015 among common murre chicks, which rely on anchovy for about half their diet.<sup>31</sup> These concerns led FWS to highlight as early as May 2015 that an updated assessment of anchovy abundance was essential to determine whether the ACL of 25,000 mt would protect the anchovy population or the predators that depend on it.<sup>32</sup>

Sea birds are not the only marine predators that suffer from a lack of available anchovy. In a report to the Pacific Fishery Management Council, NMFS itself documented mass starvation and die-offs among California sea lions from 2013 through 2016, leading it to declare “unusual mortality events” under the Marine Mammal Protection Act. NMFS scientists determined these events were caused by insufficient availability of high energy forage, particularly anchovy and sardine.<sup>33</sup> Moreover, a leading whale expert, as well as numerous whale watch professionals, have notified NMFS and the Council that anchovy fishing in Monterey Bay posed a risk of direct competition between humpback whales and the anchovy fishery, both through depleting the whales’ food source and through driving the whales away from their prey with boats and “acoustic deterrent” devices (also called seal bombs).<sup>34</sup> Oceana and other conservation groups have pointed out that low anchovy abundance could also harm Chinook salmon and coho, which are both protected under the Endangered Species Act and the subject of an important commercial fishery that NMFS is responsible for conserving and managing.<sup>35</sup> A recent study showed that anchovy has comprised as much as 20% of the diet of salmon in the CCE.<sup>36</sup>

Jack mackerel

Like the other monitored CPS stocks, the most recent biomass estimate for jack mackerel is so outdated that control rules and management reference points based on it bear no rational relationship to the current status of the stock. The proposed rule relies on the default management framework established in 1998 as part of Amendment 8 to the CPS FMP to set the US OFL for jack mackerel at 126,000 mt, the US ABC at 31,000 mt (a 75 percent reduction from MSY), and the ACL at 31,000 mt.

This stock has not received much management attention due to low catches since 1990.<sup>37</sup> The most recent estimate of biomass was produced in 1983—more than three decades ago.<sup>38</sup> State fishery managers have cautioned that “[t]hese estimates must be viewed as tentative approximations of the population” because “at the time, the spawning frequency of jack mackerel was not known, and estimates were based on the spawning frequencies of northern anchovy” and because “estimates were derived from plankton surveys for eggs and larvae in the Southern California Bight, which did not cover the entire range of the spawning population, and assumptions were made for the contribution of older jack mackerel outside the survey area.”<sup>39</sup> A later study using more accurate spawning frequency would have yielded a lower biomass in 1983, but no later biomass estimates have been produced since then.<sup>40</sup> In 2015, NMFS SWFSC scientist Edward Weber reported in his presentation at the CalCOFI conference that the most recent spring and summer larval surveys of jack mackerel within the Southern California Bight have remained at very low relative levels since their last noticeable peak in 2006, and are well below the levels observed in the 1950s -1980s period.<sup>41</sup>

As with both stocks of northern anchovy, NMFS has not explained how it is accounting for scientific uncertainty in implementing the jack mackerel stock’s ACL, nor justified why a 75% ABC/OFL buffer is sufficient to prevent overfishing for this highly fluctuating stock, which is also known to rapidly fluctuate by several orders of magnitude. Furthermore, the OFL is based on an estimated biomass from a period when jack mackerel were clearly far more abundant than they have been in recent years. Recent catch levels of jack mackerel have been on the order of 1,000 metric tons.<sup>42</sup>

NMFS does not explain why it chooses to rely on outdated numbers when it has more recent data to inform management measures. In 2014, NMFS scientists published results of 8 acoustic trawl surveys conducted from 2006 to 2013 with coastwide U.S. biomass estimates for jack mackerel, ranging from 9,000 metric tons to 389,000 metric tons, with a mean of approximately 167,000 tons.<sup>43</sup> Notably, the most recent available biomass estimates for this stock are below NMFS’s proposed OFL and even below its proposed ACL. See figures 3 and 4 below.

Based on these peer reviewed and published biomass estimates, the MSY proxies used in Amendment 8, which serve as the basis for the proposed ACL for jack mackerel are grossly outdated, and well above current levels. Of significance is that in 5 of the 8 surveys, the biomass is below the OFL established in the FMP, and 2 of the 8 survey estimates are below the proposed ACL of 31,000 mt. This clearly does not prevent overfishing. Yet NMFS has not considered any of this information in the proposed rule.

Northern Subpopulation of Northern Anchovy (NSNA)

Like management measures for the other two stocks, the proposed limits for the NSNA rely in part on outdated assumptions and unexplained assumptions regarding current biomass and productivity.

NMFS does not explain what estimated abundance or MSY underlies its proposed ACL for the NSNA. As noted above, the 2018 acoustic trawl survey methodology review approved the ATM survey for generating relative indices of biomass for stock assessments and for providing direct survey estimates of biomass for use in management of all CPS finfish stocks. Preliminary results of the 2017 survey (CUFES and trawl) indicated a discrete distribution of NSNA.<sup>44</sup> We understand that the SWFSC is now analyzing the 2017 ATM survey data to provide a biomass estimate for the NSNA, and that analysis of previous ATM surveys will allow biomass estimates for prior years. NMFS does not explain why it has chosen to move ahead with specifying multi-year catch limits for this stock without any basis in scientific data when its own scientists could produce updated abundance estimates in the very near term, and those estimates are essential to rational, science-based management.

In addition, NMFS fails to explain why it relies in the proposed rule on an  $F_{MSY}$  fishing rate that conflicts with its own updated analysis. The CPS FMP describes OFLs for CPS as being “based on MSY or MSY proxy harvest rates applied to the best available estimate of biomass.”<sup>45</sup> In response to a court order, the Council amended the CPS FMP in Amendment 14 to establish an  $F_{MSY}$  proxy for NSNA of 0.3, based on the  $F_{MSY}$  proxy used for Pacific mackerel.<sup>46</sup> However, this MSY proxy was based on the productivity of Pacific mackerel, not northern anchovy, in the absence of recent biological reference points for northern anchovy.

In contrast, the NMFS report on MSSTs (Hill et al. 2016) calculated an average instantaneous  $F_{MSY}$  fishing rate of 0.266 for CSNA, equivalent to an annual exploitation rate (or “ $E_{MSY}$ ”) of 23.4%. It is not clear why NMFS would continue to use the higher proxy of 0.3 for the NSNA based on a different species instead of the estimate for the CSNA, especially when NMFS itself recently updated that parameter.

Legal Requirements that the Proposed Rule Must Satisfy

Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act

The MSA requires that “[c]onservation and management measures shall prevent overfishing while achieving, on a continuing basis, the optimum yield from each fishery....” Id. at § 1851(a)(1). The term “overfishing” means “a rate or level of fishing mortality that jeopardizes the capacity of a fishery to produce the maximum sustainable yield on a continuing basis.” Id. at 1802(34). See also 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(e)(2)(i)(B). Maximum sustainable yield (“MSY”) is the “largest long-term average catch or yield that can be taken from a stock or stock complex under prevailing ecological, environmental conditions and fishery technological characteristics....” 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(e)(1)(i)(A).

To determine optimum yield, NMFS must reduce MSY “by any relevant social, economic, or ecological factor” and “tak[e] into account the protection of marine ecosystems.” 16 U.S.C. § 1802(33)(A)-(B). NMFS regulatory guidelines recognize that, with respect to forage fish, the greatest overall benefit to the Nation is served by leaving a higher biomass in the water to fulfill their critical ecological role. Those guidelines specifically acknowledge the unique ecological value of forage fish like anchovy, 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(e)(3)(iii)(B)(3), and direct NMFS to give “serious attention” to “maintaining adequate forage for all components of the ecosystem” and reduce the annual catch limit below the acceptable biological catch to maintain adequate forage for marine predators. Id. at §§ 600.310(e)(3)(iii)(A)(3), 600.310(f)(3)(iv). In addition, the Coastal Pelagic Species FMP states that one of the goals of the FMP is to “[p]rovide adequate forage for dependent species” and specifies that the annual catch limit is set equal to the acceptable biological catch or “reduced by [optimum yield] considerations.”<sup>47</sup>

Setting an appropriate ACL is critical to meeting the MSA’s National Standard 1 requirements. The statute requires that the FMP “establish a mechanism for specifying annual catch limits...at a level such that overfishing does not occur.” 16 U.S.C. § 1853(a)(15). Setting an appropriate ACL, in turn, depends on setting an appropriate OFL and ABC. The overfishing limit (“OFL”) is an estimate of the maximum catch level that will not jeopardize the fish population’s ability to produce maximum sustainable yield. 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(e)(2)(i)(D). Acceptable biological catch (“ABC”) must account for scientific uncertainty in estimating the overfishing limit, as well as other sources of scientific uncertainty, and must be set lower than the OFL. 50 C.F.R. § 600.310(f)(2)(ii). The annual catch limit (“ACL”) may not exceed the ABC and often should be set at a lower value, both to prevent overfishing and to account separately for reductions in catch necessary to meet ecological, economic, and social needs necessary to achieve optimum yield. 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(1); 50 C.F.R. §§ 600.310(e)(3)(ii), 600.310(e)(3)(iii)(A)(3), 600.310(e)(3)(iii)(B)(3), 600.310(f)(3)(iii).

The Magnuson-Stevens Act requires that “[c]onservation and management measures shall be based on the best scientific information available.”<sup>48</sup> Courts have emphasized that

NMFS “must utilize the best scientific data available, not the best scientific data possible.”<sup>49</sup> In other words, NMFS may not decline to take actions to conserve and manage the fishery on the basis that the available information is uncertain or could be improved by more research or analysis. “It is well settled . . . that the Secretary can act when the available science is incomplete or imperfect, even where concerns have been raised about the accuracy of the methods or models employed.”<sup>50</sup> The agency has a particular responsibility to take “urgent action” in times when immediate measures are needed to conserve a stock. In such instances, NMFS must act even if the data are “incomplete or imperfect.”<sup>51</sup>

As the court in Oceana v. Ross explained, NMFS has a duty under the MSA to thoroughly review all relevant information available at the time of its decision and may not disregard data that is superior or contrary to the data underlying its proposal. “Nor is it enough for [NMFS] to simply note contrary scientific evidence’s existence without providing a reason for rejecting it.”<sup>52</sup> Rather, NMFS must weigh the available evidence, rationally determine what the best available science is, and explain how its decision reflects that best available science. Continued reliance on information that the agency knows is outdated and inaccurate is arbitrary and capricious.<sup>53</sup>

Endangered Species Act

NMFS’s proposed multiyear annual catch limit specifications for both subpopulations of northern anchovy and jack mackerel may have an adverse effect on marine predators listed under the Endangered Species Act (ESA), including Chinook salmon, California least tern, marbled murrelet, and humpback whales. Anchovy provides a critical food source for these species. Removing anchovy and jack mackerel through fishing, particularly when alternate prey like Pacific sardine and Pacific mackerel are also scarce, poses a risk to these predators. Reducing availability of preferred (and more nutritious) food sources may decrease the listed predators’ reproductive success and drive localized population declines.

ESA Section 7(a)(2) requires federal agencies to ensure that no action they authorize, fund, or carry out is likely to “jeopardize the continued existence of any endangered species or threatened species or result in the destruction or adverse modification of [critical habitat].”<sup>54</sup> Therefore, regulations implementing Section 7 provide that: “[e]ach Federal agency shall review its actions at the earliest possible time to determine whether any action may affect listed species or critical habitat. If such a determination is made, formal consultation is required . . . .”<sup>55</sup> The “may affect” standard “is a relatively low threshold for triggering consultation.”<sup>56</sup> If the proposed action has a “possible” effect on listed species, the consultation requirement is triggered.<sup>57</sup> Formal consultation may only be avoided if, as a result of the preparation of a biological assessment under 50 C.F.R. § 402.12, or as a result of informal consultation under 50 C.F.R. § 402.13, “the Federal agency determines, with the written concurrence of [the Service], that the proposed action is not likely to adversely affect any listed species . . . .”<sup>58</sup>

Where the agency has previously completed ESA consultation on an action, it must reinitiate consultation when, among other circumstances, “new information reveals effects of the action that may affect listed species or critical habitat in a manner or to an extent not previously considered.”<sup>59</sup> NMFS has not completed prior ESA consultation on the effects on listed marine predators of the proposed multi-year ACL levels for northern anchovy and other species in the CPS FMP. Even if it had, any prior look that NMFS took at the issue assumed that anchovy abundance was several times greater than the best available science indicates that it is now and well over an order of magnitude above levels recently observed in the 2009-2015 period. NMFS has yet to consider newer information, including egg, larval, and adult surveys, MacCall et al. (2016), Thayer et al. (2017), acoustic trawl survey estimates produced by the agency for 2015-2017, changes in predator populations and their relative consumption of coastal pelagic species, and changes in marine predator behavior, reduced breeding success, and starvation events, which demonstrate that anchovy are at low abundance relative to the period on which NMFS’s measures are based. In addition, NMFS must consider new information regarding the worsened status of listed salmon species, as well as the effects of removing anchovy from the CSNA and NSNA both in terms of directly removing prey and displacing predation by cormorants and other sea birds that normally feed on anchovy onto juvenile salmon. It must also consider new information concerning breeding failures and deaths among least terns due to lack of anchovy. All in all, NMFS must consider that the levels of fishing NMFS now proposes to authorize in its proposed rule may have much more significant effects on listed predators than NMFS has considered in the past.

National Environmental Policy Act

The National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) sets forth an environmental review process that is “intended to help public officials make decisions that are based on understanding of environmental consequences, and take actions that protect, restore, and enhance the environment.”<sup>60</sup> To achieve this goal, NEPA requires federal agencies to fully consider and disclose the environmental consequences of an agency action before proceeding with that action.<sup>61</sup> Agencies' evaluation of environmental consequences must be based on scientific information that is both "[a]ccurate" and of "high quality."<sup>62</sup> In addition, federal agencies must notify the public of proposed projects and provide the public the opportunity to comment on the environmental impacts of their actions.<sup>63</sup>

An environmental impact statement (EIS) is required for all "major Federal actions significantly affecting the quality of the human environment."<sup>64</sup> It must provide a "full and fair discussion of significant environmental impacts and . . . inform decision makers and the public of the reasonable alternatives which would avoid or minimize adverse impacts or enhance the quality of the human environment."<sup>65</sup> In an EIS, the federal agency must identify the direct, indirect, and cumulative impacts of the proposed action, and consider alternative actions and their impacts.<sup>66</sup>

An agency may determine, after preparing an Environmental Assessment (EA) and Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI), that preparation of an EIS is unnecessary. However, an agency may rely on an EA/FONSI only if its proposed action will not have significant environmental effects.<sup>67</sup> Moreover, the agency may not rely upon the analysis performed in a prior EIS regarding the agency action if "the agency makes substantial changes in the proposed action that are relevant to environmental concerns," or "[t]here are significant new circumstances or information relevant to environmental concerns and bearing on the proposed action and its impacts."<sup>68</sup>

Because the proposed rule would authorize the removal of multiple key forage stocks over an indefinite period of years, and substantial new information has emerged regarding the status of forage fish stocks, dependent predators, and ocean conditions, NMFS must analyze the effects of the proposed rule pursuant to NEPA.

The Proposed Rule Violates Basic Legal Requirements

The Proposed Rule Features the Same Flaws as the 2017 Specification Rule, Which a Federal Court Invalidated and Vacated

On January 19, 2018, a federal court ruled that NMFS's specification of an annual catch limit of 25,000 mt for the central subpopulation of northern anchovy violated the basic requirements of the MSA and the Administrative Procedure Act. The court found that NMFS's prior rule violates National Standard Two's requirement that management actions must be based on the best scientific information available. The court further found that the agency did not provide a reasoned explanation for rejecting the scientific information presented, including the peer reviewed study prepared by Alec MacCall, et al., acoustic trawl survey information estimating very low abundance, and Fish and Wildlife Service and National Marine Fisheries Service reports that anchovy predators were being adversely affected by the anchovy decline.

The court also found that the overfishing limit, allowable biological catch and annual catch limit violate National Standard One because they do not prevent overfishing. In so holding, Judge Koh noted that substantial evidence showed the anchovy population had declined well below the 733,410 metric tons MSY biomass estimate used in the 1991 anchovy management model. The court also rejected NMFS's arguments that the recent increase in anchovy abundance to about 151,000 mt supported its rule, noting that this value is still far below abundance values analyzed by Conrad (1991) and used as the basis for the "default" MSY, OFL, and ABC values. Because the court invalidated the "default" OFL and ABC values, NMFS and the Council must produce new values based on the best scientific information currently available.

The proposed rule is just as defective as the one the court struck down. If anything, it is more fundamentally flawed, because it proposes to freeze in place annual catch limits that have no basis in current scientific information and bear no relationship to the crucial variable in determining whether any ACL will prevent overfishing and account for ecosystem needs: the size of the fish stock.<sup>69</sup>

The "Monitored" Approach Implemented by the Proposed Rule Is Unlawful and Must Be Changed

The "monitored" framework that NMFS seeks to implement in the proposed rule fails to meet fundamental MSA requirements for conserving and managing fish stocks. The multiple, fundamental flaws inherent in the "monitored" approach include the following.

First, setting static, long-term catch limits for stocks that fluctuate significantly and frequently is contrary to basic fisheries science. It has long been established that setting a constant catch limit over time for a fluctuating fish population will lead to the population's collapse.<sup>70</sup> As May et al. (1978) pointed out, "[e]ven if yield is set below the MSY, the system will collapse if the population ever happens to fluctuate below a threshold value." These conclusions were reaffirmed in Clark 1990 seminal work "Mathematical Bioeconomics" and remain widely accepted today, for example regularly being cited as a basis for recent studies.<sup>71</sup>

Using average biomass over a time series as the input into the OFL formula would be equivalent to setting OFL greater than MSY for all years in which the stock is below average, and would therefore fail to prevent overfishing in violation of the MSA. As shown in MacCall et al. 2016, Thayer et al. 2017, the CSNA biomass can decline by over 90% within a 2-year period [91.2% decline from 2007-2009]; and by over 99% in as few as four years [96.4% reduction from 1986-1990; 99.1% reduction from 2005-2009].<sup>72</sup> Furthermore, biomass can remain at low levels (below 100,000 mt) for extended periods of at least 7 consecutive years, as observed from 2009-2015.<sup>73</sup>

Second, the best available science regarding anchovy abundance shows that the 75% buffer between the ACL and ABC and the OFL is wholly inadequate to prevent overfishing, given that this species can fluctuate by 99% within a period of a few years.

Third, setting catch limits without regard to the current size of the stock violates the MSA. As the recent decision in Oceana v. Ross emphasized, the critical variable for determining an appropriate OFL, ABC, and ACL is the size of the stock.<sup>74</sup> Furthermore, abundance data are available for all CPS stocks. Since 2006, NMFS has conducted acoustic trawl surveys twice per year that provide information on the stock size of CSNA, NSNA, and jack mackerel. The 2018 ATM review panel unanimously concluded that the summer ATM survey could be used to provide a biomass estimate for jack mackerel to directly inform management, and that the ATM survey could be used to provide total biomass estimates for CSNA and NSNA, if nearshore areas are addressed. Multiple options exist for addressing nearshore areas, including using mean densities or density trends from survey transects to develop nearshore estimates, or using additional acoustic information if feasible. NMFS may not simply rely on outdated “default” values to set the ACL in the proposed rule when it has updated data available to it. Instead, NMFS must work with the Council to update all management values based on best available science.

Third, the FMP’s and proposed rule’s failure to provide for any regular evaluation of stock status violates the duty to assess stock status relative to the ACL, ABC, OFL, and status determination criteria. See 16 U.S.C. §§ 1853(a)(3) (FMP must assess and specify “present and probable future condition of” the stock); 1853(a)(10) (FMP must specify objective and measurable criteria for identifying when the fishery is overfished (i.e. MSST)). In order to determine if a stock is overfished, meaning that it has fallen below a biomass that would support MSY, fishery managers must know the status of the stock. Yet under the “monitored” approach, fishery managers only track landings. NMFS admits in the proposed rule that landings are not a reliable indicator of stock status for anchovy. 83 Fed. Reg. 1009,1010 (Jan. 9, 2018). Well-established science demonstrates that landings are not a reliable indicator of abundance for anchovy or any other CPS species, since their tendency to travel in schools as well as the use of fish finding technology and purse seine gear renders them easy to catch even when they are at low abundance.<sup>75</sup> It is impossible to prevent a stock from becoming overfished or subject to overfishing if the agency does not regularly evaluate the actual abundance of the stock relative to catch levels and actively manage fishing based on the latest information.<sup>76</sup>

<sup>75</sup> Lenfest Forage Fish Task Force. Pikitch et al. 2012. Little Fish, Big Impact: Managing a Crucial Link in Ocean Food Webs. Lenfest Ocean Program. Washington, DC. Summary. See also Essington et al. 2015. Fishing amplifies forage fish population collapses, PNAS Early Edition, available at <http://www.pnas.org/content/early/2015/04/01/1422020112.full.pdf>.

<sup>76</sup> Furthermore, NMFS has failed to adopt MSSTs or other criteria for determining when the stock is overfished for CSNA, NSNA, and jack mackerel, despite these measures being required by the MSA and having produced options for doing calculating MSST and other values. Hill et al. (2016) (2016 MSST Report).

NMFS has no excuse for failing to produce regular abundance estimates for all CPS stocks. NMFS already collects the data necessary to estimate abundance every year for all of these stocks through its acoustic trawl survey and other surveys, and has readily available, reliable means for using that data to produce abundance estimates. NMFS must use that data to regularly evaluate the status of CPS stocks and conserve and manage those stocks in a way that effectively prevents overfishing and accounts for ecosystem needs.

Fourth, the lack of any effective trigger for reevaluating numerical catch limits to ensure that they are consistent with the best available science on stock status violates the MSA.<sup>77</sup> The framework implemented in the proposed rule only provides that the ACL will be reconsidered if landings “consistently reach the ABC/ACL level” for an unspecified period of time, “if new scientific information becomes available to warrant changes, or if changes are made in the future to the existing ABCs or OFLs.”<sup>78</sup> As discussed above, simply monitoring landings and comparing them to the ACL may prevent overfishing on paper, but does nothing to prevent overfishing in the water; that is, it does not prevent catch from exceeding MSY levels when stocks are at low levels. To the contrary, this trigger for revisiting the ACL value is guaranteed not to prevent overfishing. As we have seen in the case of the central subpopulation of northern anchovy, the stock abundance may drop below the static OFL and even below ACL value. In that case, the fishery cannot possibly catch the full ACL. In other words, using landings as the measure of whether the ACL value should change is guaranteed to fail at exactly the time it is most crucial: when the stock has hit a critical low.

Furthermore, to see the inadequacy of the vague “new scientific information that warrants change” trigger, one need look no further than NMFS’s continued refusal to reconsider the ACL value for the central subpopulation despite multiple sources of scientific information demonstrating that the stock declined to a historical low and remains low relative to 1964-1990, as well as a formal request from the USFWS to initiate the Point of Concern Framework under the CPS FMP. Moreover, so long as the agency only monitors landings while neglecting to use its own available data to produce annual abundance estimates, declines in abundance are likely to go unnoticed for significant periods of time before “new scientific information” comes to light. And at that point, the decline is likely to be severe.

NMFS’s reliance on changes to OFLs and ABCs as a trigger for reevaluating the ACL suffers from a similar defect. Namely, without a required, regular evaluation of current abundance, or the timely introduction and serious consideration of new, real-time data, the Council will have little impetus to change the OFL and ABC, especially in circumstances where data indicates stocks are low and such consideration would likely result in a lower ACL. More to the point, with respect to the central subpopulation of northern anchovy, the court has already invalidated the “default” OFL and ABC values, compelling NMFS and the Council to produce new values based on the best scientific information currently available.

Finally, the proposed rule entirely fails to account for ecosystem needs despite the well-established importance of these stocks as key food sources for dozens of marine predators. The failure to consider whether the static values set in the proposed rule would provide adequate food <sup>77</sup> Setting indefinite, multi-year catch limits is also inconsistent with the FMP itself, which suggests that the OFL, ABC, and ACL may be revised through the “annual” specification process. The proposed rule eliminates any such annual process.

for marine predators violates the MSA, NMFS regulatory guidelines, the assumptions made in the delisting decision for the California brown pelican, and the CPS FMP itself.

Recommendations

For all the reasons stated above, the “monitored” category under the CPS FMP violates the MSA, and the proposed rule violates the MSA, ESA, and NEPA. NMFS should eliminate this faulty “monitored” management framework entirely, and manage all species based on the most current estimates of stock size. We understand that in light of the approval by the 2018 ATM Methodology Review, the Southwest Fisheries Science Center is currently preparing 2017 biomass estimates for all CPS finfish stocks, including jack mackerel, NSNA, and CNSA, based on results of the 2017 surveys. We expect that NMFS will use this best available science to evaluate the current status of these stocks and craft a management framework, including updated OFL, ABC, and ACL that prevent overfishing and achieve optimum yield. NMFS should immediately begin working with the Council to develop new management measures for the central subpopulation of northern anchovy, northern subpopulation of northern anchovy, and jack mackerel that contain the same features and annual updates as the so-called “actively managed” framework in the CPS FMP. In other words, NMFS and the Council must develop an updated, ecosystem-based harvest control rule for these stocks, updated reference points, and a system for updating and specifying reference points on an annual basis based on annually updated abundance estimates.

The ACL NMFS previously promulgated for the central subpopulation has been vacated by the court. As we explained above, bringing the management of the CSNA and the other two stocks currently designated as “monitored” into full compliance with the MSA will require NMFS to overhaul the management framework for these stocks. In the meantime, NMFS may not allow fishing to continue in the absence of an ACL that will prevent overfishing and account for predator needs. To the extent NMFS intends to allow continued fishing on this stock, it must promulgate an interim ACL that will prevent overfishing and account for predator needs based on the current condition of the stock. We emphasize that NMFS’s current approach to “monitored” stocks, including the specification of static, indefinite catch limits, the use of outdated data, the use of an insufficient buffer to account for uncertainty in the OFL, and reliance on landings to track the stock, is illegal and must be revised.

However, should NMFS find it necessary to use existing formulas in the FMP to establish a short-term, interim OFL, ABC, and ACL for the CSNA while it completes the needed changes to the management framework, it could use published recent multi-year biomass averages from recent studies such as Thayer et al. 2017, multiplied by the most recent estimates of  $F_{MSY}$  from the Hill et al. 2016 MSST Report to determine OFL,<sup>79</sup> and use data on the extent of population fluctuations to determine a sufficient ABC buffer to account for uncertainty in the stock (we note that NMFS has not explained how the 75% reduction is sufficient to account for uncertainty in stocks that can decline by over 90% in a two year period). NMFS would then need to determine what further reduction from the ABC was necessary to account for predator needs.

NMFS could also consider basing an interim ACL on the pre-Amendment 8 management framework for anchovy. That framework included a 300,000 mt CUTOFF value. When the stock fell below 300,000 mt, the fishery was allowed to catch no more than 7,000 mt. If NMFS were to use this approach, NMFS would need to revisit whether allowing 7,000 mt of catch is appropriate given what we know about stock condition and dependent predators. If NMFS permits any level of fishing for the CSNA, it must fully explain how the limits it establishes will prevent overfishing and account for predator needs.

Furthermore, in light of recent predator impacts, requests from the public to address impacts to non-CPS species, and requests from the USFWS to initiate the Point of Concern Framework in Section 2.1.2 of the CPS FMP, NMFS should consider additional time/area closures to protect CPS dependent predators. We also request that NMFS immediately establish MSSTs for all finfish stocks in the CPS fishery, including NSNA, CSNA, and jack mackerel as required by the MSA.

We look forward to working with NMFS and the Council to bring CPS management into line with the best available scientific information regarding the biology, ecological importance, and current status of the central and northern subpopulations of northern anchovy and jack mackerel, and into compliance with the MSA and other applicable law.

RE: Agenda Item C.4 – Process for Review of Reference Points for Monitored Stocks

Dear Chair Phil Anderson and Pacific Fisheries Management Council members:

My name is Arjun Subramanian and I reside in the San Francisco Bay Area. I represent Heirs To Our Oceans. We are youth leaders who are dedicated to inspiring awareness, action, and responsibility amongst youth worldwide to protect the waters of our Blue Planet for our and future generations. Our mission is to create the next generation of environmental leaders. Before discussing the specifics around northern anchovies, allow me to share some details about Heirs To Our Oceans, as well as my personal connection to the cause of ocean conservation.

I come to you as a youth ambassador speaking on behalf of our oceans. I also come to you because I have heard that as a group you consume high quality information, make good decisions and primarily because you care.

Heirs To Our Oceans

Heirs To Our Oceans was created in May 2016 with a group of youth, ages 10-13, who live near the Pacific Ocean in the San Francisco Bay Area. We hold ourselves out as leaders in the space of ocean conservation. Like my peers, I feel empowered and take charge for my generation as I see what is happening to the oceans right in front of me. I am determined to do something about it.

My fellow Heirs and I study these real-world issues through a customized learning model developing our problem solving and critical thinking skills. As a junior scientist, I engage in self-driven independent learning based on my passions and concerns as well as in interdisciplinary studies where all major subject matters are tied to the theme of ocean conservation for future generations.

We dive deep into our areas of focus, by which I mean the essential natural resources the oceans provide for human health, and the various human impact issues to show that change must happen now to preserve those resources and reverse the damage that has been done. Such areas of focus include the importance of keystone species, marine botanicals, role of top predators, cetaceans and coral reefs, as well as the detriments of plastics in our oceans, ocean acidification, warming waters, overfishing and improper fishing practices, and finally the endangerment of many species.

My Interest and Involvement

My personal interest in the ocean goes way back to my early childhood when I spent countless days in the Monterey Bay Aquarium. I was obsessed with sharks and memorized lists of facts about them. A love of the ocean has helped me overcome my fear of swimming. In fact, I will undergo my dive certification training next month. I became a Founding Heir of Heirs To Our Oceans after learning about the Pacific Garbage Patch five years ago from a scientist who went on a boat to study it. I wanted to do something to solve it.

This drove my first area of focus as an Heir, which is plastic pollution including its impact and potential solutions. After engaging in a year of research I recently wrote a paper about the same topic. My second area of focus is the importance of keystone species, especially forage fish, and their impact on ocean and related ocean economics. In the course of my research and learning I have had the opportunity to learn from expert researchers and scientists, conservationists, policy makers, and others to learn more about the ocean issues today and for years to come. As an Heir, I am involved in regular beach cleanups and in sharing what I learn with other youth and adults, through blogs and presentations. I am currently undergoing a Naturalist course at the American Cetacean Society along with my mom and my sister. My sister who is also an Heir studies Cetaceans. The ocean plays a huge part in our life.

My Concerns with the Health of Our Oceans

As you all would be well aware, the health of the ocean is in jeopardy. Our oceans are facing serious issues. During my study of plastic pollution, I learned that approximately 6% of the world's oil was used to manufacture plastic in 2014.<sup>1</sup> In doing so, the production of plastic directly affects climate change, one of the largest issues our ocean faces.

Changes in climate, along with other marine issues, impact the keystone species that inhabit the ocean. Anchovies and other forage fish face their share of perils, which I will elaborate in the next few paragraphs. I care about how the food chain is getting disrupted. I am gravely concerned this is going to have long-term deleterious effects on life forms small and large who depend on key stone species like Anchovies.

Anchovy

The northern anchovy is a keystone species along the West Coast of the United States. They are also forage fish, which are species that eat “plankton and support predators such as whales, sea lions, seabirds, sharks, salmon, and tuna.”<sup>2</sup>

As a forage fish, Northern anchovy is eaten by more than 50 species of the California current<sup>2</sup>. In fact, it is possible that more than 17% of the pre-recruitment biomass of northern anchovies in the California

Current were consumed by juvenile Pacific albacore.<sup>3</sup> It has been estimated in some years that northern anchovies consisted of 90% of the diets of king salmon<sup>4</sup> as well as 100% of the diets of Rhinoceros Auklet chicks off Año Nuevo Point.<sup>5</sup> In addition to this, anchovies form a major portion of the diets of humpback whales as well.<sup>6</sup>

As you are aware, anchovy habitats around the world are driven by upwelling, including the Central California Coast. These upwelling regions are prone to the constant cycle of overproduction and collapse with regards to different fisheries.<sup>7</sup> Ocean temperatures are another important factor when talking about anchovy habitats and conditions. Warm ocean conditions have been tied to earlier anchovy spawn per year (especially in the Pacific Northwest), and therefore a lesser number of anchovies in fisheries.<sup>8</sup> These warm oceans are usually caused by the El Nino phenomenon, which disrupt normal upwelling cycles.

These natural ups and downs are exacerbated by the two major issues anchovies face: climate change and fishing pressures.

Climate Change

Climate change has many negative effects on anchovies and their populations. There are many general projections regarding the effect of climate change on forage fish. Some of these effects on northern anchovies include lower populations and even earlier annual spawns, lowering the total population of anchovies.<sup>8</sup> Unlike sardines, which migrate north into cooler waters when there are high ocean temperatures, anchovies spawn earlier and earlier and retreat to the coast, therefore resulting in lower number of fish.<sup>9</sup>

This was exactly the case off the California coast recently. Off the San Francisco and Monterey Bays, there was a perceived boom in the population of anchovies. This resulted in many more humpback whales, and a boom in the whale-watching tourism industry. However, this perceived “boom” in the population of anchovies turned out to reflect low abundance of the overall anchovy populations. In fact, there was a recent El Nino along the California coast, and climate change is said to have exacerbated it.

Due to the extremely warm ocean waters, the remaining anchovies had retreated to the coast from the open ocean, resulting in this perceived boom.<sup>10</sup>

Fishing Pressures

We have an opportunity to learn from Peru, home to the world's largest single-species fishery. They have gone through a process of heavy fishing pressures on anchovies.

They started out in 2015 with high landings of juvenile fish, to the point where 50% of landings were immature and pregnant fish, along with low numbers of adult fish. Even though there were high numbers of juvenile fish, there were only 2 million tons of reproductive-age fish in October 2015 catches, well below the legal 5 million tons to open the fishery.<sup>11</sup> This was a problem because the fish need to reproduce in order to maintain a stable population. This crisis in Peru and actually also worldwide, was caused by warming waters and less upwelling in the Pacific from the El Nino year of 2015-16.

Even though the West Coast anchovy fishery is so much smaller than the Peruvian anchovy fishery, the former has experienced extremely low anchovy stocks. If the same catch limits were to continue regarding anchovy fisheries off the California coast, northern anchovy could potentially become overfished. As anchovies are known to be a species that undergoes wide natural fluctuations, it is crucial that they be managed using catch limits that reflect the most up-to-date information regarding anchovy populations.

Economics

The nearshore concentration of anchovies over the past few years has greatly increased profits in coastal communities from whale-watching and related tourism. Coastal tourism is usually the second highest source of revenue in Monterey County, one of the top whale-watching coastal counties. This data even further places a huge value on the anchovies which serve as food for humpback whales and other marine mammals.

However, if anchovy catch limits are not updated, this could result in sharp decline in coastal tourism, especially when anchovy stocks are so low. And this would get even worse over time given it becomes a vicious cycle.<sup>12</sup>

My Request

I have understood from my study of the oceans and related issues that protecting populations of forage fish such as anchovies from overfishing and natural perils such as climate change is crucial to the health of our oceans. I appreciate being close to the ocean and being able to witness the abundance of wildlife that visit and live in the Bay Area. I am incredibly motivated to make sure that I am able to enjoy this for my lifetime and for my future generations. I know that my role as an Heir in learning about the issues, participating in regular cleanups and continuously informing and educating my peers, is going to help in making sure that we can solve our ocean-related problems and promote the health of our oceans. I request you the Council adopt updated, science-based catch limits for northern anchovy to ensure we retain the right balance of these forage fish are fostered so that we can all continue to live and enjoy our beautiful ecosystem here on the West Coast.

I am extremely grateful for the opportunity as an Ocean Advocate to share my learnings and concerns with you.

272 Businesses Support New Management for Anchovy

The business leaders call on the Pacific Fishery Management Council to adopt ecosystem-based management for northern anchovy, including regularly assessing the stock, adopting science-based catch limits, protecting spawning regions at important times of the year, and a precautionary cutoff that suspends fishing when populations are low.

Mr. Phil Anderson, Chair
Pacific Fishery Management Council
7700 NE Ambassador Place, Suite 101
Portland, OR 97220

Dear Chair Anderson and Council Members:

As West Coast business leaders, we understand the invaluable role of anchovy and other forage fish in sustaining the marine ecosystem and helping drive our economy. Whales, seabirds and more than 50 other marine species that bring people and tourism dollars to our region depend on forage fish for much of their diet. Larger fish that are important to sport and commercial fishermen – including tuna, marlin, salmon and steelhead – also rely on healthy forage fish populations.

We write to ask the Pacific Fishery Management Council to adopt an ecosystem-based management framework that protects the crucial role of northern anchovy in the Pacific Ocean food web. This should include regularly assessing the stock, adopting science-based catch limits, protecting spawning regions at important times of the year, and a precautionary cutoff that suspends fishing when populations are low. By bringing anchovy management into the 21st century, the Council can ensure adequate prey for everything from whales to salmon, prevent overfishing, and support strong coastal communities.

Coastwide, anchovy are managed using decades-old information that simply doesn't reflect the current health of the stock. Catch limits for the central subpopulation have not changed since the 1990s, when anchovy numbers were much higher. We are concerned that these outdated management measures pose a risk to anchovy stocks, the marine wildlife that depend upon them – and therefore to our livelihoods as well.

While all forage fish contribute to the prey base for larger species, scientists tell us that none are more important than northern anchovy. For example, Chinook salmon rely on anchovy for as much as 70 percent of their diet. Ecosystem-based management of forage fish requires data on the dietary needs of major predators including marine mammals, other fish, and seabirds. Our understanding of predator dependency on northern anchovy has grown significantly in recent years. This information should inform development of a new framework for managing the fishery.

Please adopt updated management measures, based on the best available science, that protect northern anchovy's vital role as prey in the Pacific Ocean. By taking this action, the Council can help ensure a healthy ocean that supports a vibrant West Coast economy.

Thank you for your consideration, and for the Council's work to sustainably manage our West Coast marine resources.

Sincerely,
We the undersigned.

Mr. Phil Anderson, Chair
Pacific Fishery Management Council
7700 NE Ambassador Place, Suite 101
Portland, OR 97220

RE: Agenda Item C.4 – Process for Review of Reference Points for Monitored Stocks

Dear Chair Anderson and Council Members:

Thank you for the opportunity to submit these comments on the Pacific Fishery Management Council's (Council) review of reference points for monitored stocks in the Coastal Pelagic Species (CPS) Fishery Management Plan (FMP). In particular, we write with respect to the Council's consideration of alternatives for updating the Overfishing Limit (OFL) and Acceptable Biological Catch (ABC) for the central subpopulation of northern anchovy (CSNA). We appreciate the Council's attention to anchovy management over the past several years, as well as its ongoing discussion regarding the ability of the current OFL for CSNA to prevent overfishing. Given the importance of this stock as prey throughout the California Current Ecosystem, its ability to fluctuate widely over short periods of time, and recent data indicating that CSNA biomass remains relatively low as of 2017, updated reference points are needed in the near term to prevent overfishing and ensure adequate forage for dependent predators.

As part of Agenda Item C.4, we request that the Council take the following actions at its April 2018 meeting:

- Initiate development of an interim OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA in order to prevent overfishing, ensure adequate forage for dependent predators, and reflect best available science, as required by the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act (MSA).
- Over the next two years, prioritize completion of a stock assessment for CSNA to inform development of a long-term ecosystem-based management framework for the fishery that accounts for the needs and status of dependent predators.
- Manage all CPS stocks that are the subject of directed fisheries under the active management framework within the CPS FMP, and initiate an FMP amendment to eliminate the Monitored Stock category from the CPS FMP.

Below, we discuss these recommendations in greater detail.

Initiate development of an interim OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA, for adoption prior to the start of the 2019 fishing season.

Over the past several years, Pew has expressed concerns to the Council regarding the status of CSNA and the use of a static harvest control rule to manage this highly variable stock.<sup>1</sup> CSNA's fixed status determination criteria (SDCs) and management reference points stem from a default monitored stock control rule that was originally designed to be precautionary, but which did not anticipate the population collapse experienced by the stock during the last decade.<sup>2</sup> Given CSNA's demonstrated capacity to decline by as much as 97% in just a few years,<sup>3</sup> the monitored stock control rule's 75% buffer between OFL and ABC is not sufficiently precautionary. Further, the existing OFL of 100,000 metric tons (mt) is based on a long-term average MSY value derived from a 1991 bio-economic model<sup>4</sup> that utilized data from a stock which had not fallen below 299,000 mt,<sup>5</sup> and which does not represent the best available science on the current status of the stock.<sup>6</sup> A recent federal court ruling in Oceana v. Ross reached a similar conclusion when it invalidated the existing management framework for CSNA, citing in part the availability of scientific information that is better and newer than the current basis for CSNA management.<sup>7</sup>

For these reasons, we ask that the Council identify and adopt an updated OFL prior to the 2019 fishing season, along with a revised ABC and ACL, based on the best available science. We note that several sources of information and guidance are currently available that can assist fishery managers in estimating a new OFL. In late 2016, partly in response to concerns regarding the existing OFL, the Council tasked its Science and Statistical Committee (SSC) and CPS Management Team (CPSMT) with developing a joint report to identify alternate methods for estimating an updated OFL for CSNA.<sup>8</sup> This report, which was presented to the Council in April 2017, could provide a starting point for consideration of a revised OFL, particularly in the near term.

When the Council reviewed potential options for adopting a new OFL last April, we requested at the time that the Council task the SSC with recommending an interim updated OFL utilizing Option C with Sub-Option 1 from the Joint SSC/CPSMT Report.<sup>9</sup> We suggest this or a similar

We note that the preliminary results of the 2017 Acoustic Trawl summer survey show a CSNA biomass of approximately 180,000 mt; while this draft number represents an increase over the past two years of AT survey results, it remains slightly more than half of the lowest biomass estimate from the range of values upon which current management is based.

<sup>6</sup> In its November 2016 Supplemental Report on Northern Anchovy Stock Assessment and Management Measures, the SSC described the current CSNA OFL as being "based on a model using data from a historical period and collected under dramatically different environmental and abundance conditions."

approach remains a viable and management-ready pathway to selecting a new OFL based on recent biomass information. As specified in the report, Option C would set the OFL as FMSY multiplied by an estimate of absolute abundance.<sup>10</sup> The Joint Report identifies a number of potential FMSY sources under Option C that the SSC could consider utilizing, including Sub-Option 1, one of the FMSY values for CSNA as described in NOAA Fisheries' August 2016 review of Minimum Stock Size Thresholds (MSST) for CPS finfish.<sup>11</sup> Because these values are the result of the most recent analysis of biological reference points, we suggest that selecting the average FMSY (0.266) included in Table 6 of the MSST Report<sup>12</sup> provides a reasonable approach to calculating an updated OFL in the near-term. Similarly, the Council could incorporate even more recent information on stock productivity (from 1995 onward) to develop an FMSY proxy based on current stock and environmental conditions.

With respect to sources of abundance information for CSNA, we recommend that the Council look to available data from the Acoustic Trawl (AT) survey, an approach also described under Option C in the Joint SSC/CPSMT Report. At a recent methodology review for the AT survey, the panel conducting the review concluded that AT survey data may be utilized to generate survey-based biomass estimates that can be used to directly inform management for all five finfish stocks in the CPS FMP, including CSNA, once nearshore distribution has been addressed and a Management Strategy Evaluation (MSE) has been conducted.<sup>13</sup> While we strongly support conducting an MSE in order to develop a comprehensive ecosystem-based framework for sustainably managing CNSA over the long term, including a new harvest control rule that accounts for relevant optimum yield (OY) factors, we do not believe an MSE is necessary to develop a new OFL and ABC for CSNA in the near term. An updated OFL and ABC can be set using existing AT survey data – without the full and complex analysis of trade-offs, candidate management strategies, and OY factors that an MSE would provide – as OFL and ABC are intended to prevent overfishing, not to address the full suite of social, economic, and ecological considerations that are required to be incorporated into the determination of OY.

Overall, the review panel's evaluation of the AT survey represents a significant opportunity to provide annual estimates of abundance, enabling the Council to move toward active/annual management for all finfish stocks in the CPS assemblage. And in the immediate term, it provides fishery managers with a pathway to develop a new OFL and ABC for CSNA using the best available science.

A CSNA biomass estimate from the 2017 summer California Current Ecosystem Survey is expected to be available in the coming months;<sup>14</sup> this estimate could be used, in conjunction with the best estimate of FMSY (as discussed above), to calculate an updated OFL for CSNA prior to the end of 2018. We further recommend that AT survey data be considered alongside other available sources of CSNA abundance information, such as data from aerial surveys and the CalCOFI survey. CalCOFI data in particular can be used to help corroborate AT data, and to extract estimates of spawning stock biomass from estimates of total biomass. In recent years, these two data sources have yielded similar overall results regarding CSNA abundance, despite having different biases.<sup>15</sup> If these results diverge in the future, any discrepancy could signal a problem with bias in one of the methods and allow for further analysis or application of correction factors. Finally, with respect to calculating an updated ABC, the Council could use available data on the extent of CSNA population fluctuations to determine an appropriate ABC buffer that accounts for any uncertainty in stock abundance information, and then determine what further reduction from the ABC may be necessary to account for predator needs in setting an ACL.

Prioritize completion of a stock assessment for CSNA to inform development a long-term ecosystem-based management strategy that accounts for the needs and status of dependent predators.

While interim measures are needed to ensure CSNA is being managed in accordance with MSA requirements in the near term, we also request that the Council initiate a process to develop a comprehensive long-term management framework for CSNA that fully accounts for ecosystem and predator needs and status. Advancing a strategy of this kind aligns with the Council's broader goals of precautionary, ecosystem-based management, and would allow the Council and NOAA Fisheries to better meet the CPS FMP's core objectives of preventing overfishing, achieving Optimum Yield, and providing adequate forage for dependent predators.<sup>16</sup>

We appreciate the Council's attention over the last several years to the need for a new stock assessment for CSNA, and we thank NOAA Fisheries for its stated commitment to completing such an assessment as soon as "the appropriate biological information can be collected, verified, and processed."<sup>17</sup> Such an assessment is key to developing a long-term ecosystem-based framework for the stock. We ask that the Council request that NOAA Fisheries articulate a process and timeline that allows for completion of this assessment in the next two years. Once completed, we ask that this assessment be utilized – along with associated modeling data, specifically on California Current Ecosystem (CCE) predator/prey dynamics – to develop a long-term strategy for sustainably managing this fishery, including adoption of an ecosystem-based harvest control rule and CUTOFF that reflects current biological conditions.

Newer and better information on northern anchovy will allow the Council to set biological reference points, status determination criteria, and catch levels for CSNA with a much higher degree of certainty; prevent overfishing; better understand the cyclical nature of anchovy and its relationship to other CPS stocks, particularly Pacific sardine; and maintain the role of northern anchovy in the CCE. Such a framework would also account for ecosystem needs – with an emphasis on the forage requirements and status of dependent predators – as well as the social and economic factors consistent with achieving Optimum Yield, including the development of precautionary management measures.

Manage all CPS stocks under the FMP’s active management category, and initiate an FMP amendment to eliminate the Monitored Stock category from the CPS FMP.

Pew has long supported bringing CSNA into active management and eliminating the distinction between Actively Managed and Monitored in the CPS FMP. Here, we reiterate that position, and note that bringing all CPS stocks that are the subject of directed fisheries under the FMP’s active management framework would greatly improve the Council’s ability to manage these stocks using the best available science and in a manner that does not risk overfishing. As discussed previously, the availability and suitability of AT survey data – which is newer, better, and more reflective of current stock status than the long-term average MSY values upon which existing OFL and ABC are based for stocks in the Monitored category – provides a path forward to begin managing all CPS stocks as Actively Managed (or, simply, “managed”).

With respect to CSNA in particular, a shift to active management would allow the Council to develop a management framework that is responsive to the status of the stock, avoids the risk of overfishing, and better accounts for the needs of predators. Given the wide natural population fluctuations that anchovy undergo over relatively short periods of time, coupled with their key role in the ecosystem, annual biomass estimates (and eventually, regular stock assessments) are vital to understanding whether federal fishery managers are meeting their most fundamental obligations, including the prevention of overfishing and ensuring adequate prey for dependent predators. The SSC highlighted this need in a 2015 report to the Council regarding the then-current status of northern anchovy: “To obtain reliable estimates of the stock status for short-lived species such as anchovies, monitoring and assessments should be done frequently.”<sup>18</sup>

We also note that Pacific mackerel remains in the Actively Managed category of the CPS FMP, and CSNA in the Monitored category, despite the fact that landings of CSNA have on average far exceeded those of Pacific mackerel since 2001 in terms of both tonnage and ex-vessel revenue.<sup>19</sup> This scenario appears to be inconsistent with the intended distinctions between the two categories, which are meant to assign greater scientific and management resources to those stocks with more importance to the broader CPS fishery and that support “biologically significant levels of catch.”<sup>20</sup> The flipped placement of CSNA in the Monitored category and Pacific mackerel in Actively Managed underscores the apparent arbitrariness of this two-tiered management structure.

Further, if the Council’s deliberations over the past three years regarding the status and management of CSNA are any guide, the Monitored category does not provide fishery managers with a clear protocol for adjusting OFL and ABC. The SSC noted this dilemma in November

<sup>18</sup> Pacific Fishery Management Council. November 2015. Agenda Item H.3.a. Supplemental Scientific and Statistical Committee Report.

2016, when it concluded there was a factual basis for reconsidering the OFL at that time, but couldn't identify a specific process for doing so: "The SSC notes that in contrast to actively-managed CPS, there are currently no set procedures for setting and updating OFLs and acceptable biological catches for monitored species, including CSNA."<sup>21</sup>

This is surely not the intent of the CPS FMP – to leave managers without an identified pathway to update management measures should they deem such an update necessary – but we suggest the lack of procedural clarity in this matter has contributed to the current uncertainty regarding how best to adjust OFL and ABC for a Monitored stock. The FMP is clear that such adjustments can be made, but questions remain as to what the appropriate process is (beyond invoking the Point of Concern Framework). It is our understanding that this uncertainty is what led the Council to request input from the SSC last April regarding alternate methods for updating OFL for CSNA in particular, and therefore to this current agenda item.<sup>22</sup>

While identifying options for revising Monitored stock OFLs will assist the Council with the development of interim management reference points, and could inform longer-term strategies as well, we note that such clarification would still leave other material concerns regarding the Monitored category unaddressed. Further, as noted above, the availability of annual abundance data on all five CPS finfish stocks, including the three that are currently classified as Monitored, renders the distinction between the Active and Monitored categories unnecessary. We therefore recommend that the Council begin managing all CPS (that are the subject of a directed fishery) based on the most current estimates of stock size, and initiate an amendment to the CPS FMP that eliminates the Monitored stock category from the FMP.

Conclusion

In conclusion, we recommend that the Council initiate development of an updated OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA based on the best available science, for adoption prior to the start of the 2019 fishing season; prioritize completion of a full stock assessment for CSNA to inform a new, comprehensive ecosystem-based strategy for sustainably managing CSNA; and actively manage all CPS stocks using recent abundance information while eliminating the Monitored category from the FMP.

Re: Agenda Items C.3—Acoustic Trawl Survey Methodology Review - Final Approval—and
C.4—Process for Review of Reference Points for Monitored Stocks

Dear Mr. Anderson,

On behalf of our ~65,000 members, we thank the Council for its continued focus on updating assessment and management of northern anchovy, a critical forage species in the southern California Current Ecosystem (CCE). Our members care deeply about marine and coastal birds, including species that are critically dependent on northern anchovy: Pacific brown pelican, federally endangered California least tern, and sooty shearwater.

Since 2014, Audubon has requested the Council revise the existing management framework for anchovy commensurate with its importance to larger fish and other predators; the fact that it is actively fished; the tendency of the stock to undergo wide, rapid fluctuations; its recent prolonged collapse from 2009-2015; and its current estimated biomass at levels far below those used to derive current management measures.

Now, after considerable work by the Council, Scientific and Statistical Committee (SSC), NMFS, special review panels, and outside scientists, the Council and advisory bodies have all the tools needed to identify and adopt updated management reference points for the central subpopulation of northern anchovy (CSNA) and the northern subpopulation of northern anchovy (NSNA) for 2019. We urge no further delay in this action. As the SSC noted in 2010, “OFL and ABC [for CPS monitored species] should be updated when new biomass estimates or information on productivity become available.”<sup>1</sup>

These updates are badly needed to start to bring anchovy management into alignment with the Council’s broader goals of precautionary, ecosystem-based management, as well as the CPS Fishery Management Plan’s specific goals to prevent overfishing, achieve optimum yield, and provide adequate forage for dependent predators. The Council should also move forward with developing a harvest control rule with cutoff, and with eliminating the Monitored Stock category from the CPS FMP. The Monitored Stock Category has proven extremely problematic, creating unnecessary confusion and delay with updating management of this actively fished species.

In sum, at this meeting we request the Council:

- Direct the SSC to provide the Council, by its November meeting, an updated OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA.
- Direct the Coastal Pelagic Species Management Team (CPSMT) to develop and recommend an annual specifications process to set OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA, NSNA, and jack mackerel.
- Initiate an FMP amendment to eliminate the Monitored Stock category from the CPS FMP, and manage all CPS stocks (other than Ecosystem Component Species) under the active management framework.
- Direct the CPSMT to produce at the an upcoming 2018 Council meeting a plan with timetable for development and Council adoption of a Harvest Control Rule including Cutoff for CSNA.

Recent Council and Advisory Group Actions to Update Management Measures for CSNA

At its November 2016 meeting, the Council directed NMFS, the Scientific and Statistical Committee (SSC), the Coastal Pelagic Species Management Team (CPSMT), and the Coastal Pelagic Species Advisory Subpanel (CPSAS) to continue work to develop “an integrated stock assessment and procedures for setting and updating” an OFL, ABC, and MSST for the CSNA.<sup>2</sup> The Council also directed the SSC to identify alternative approaches for developing a revised OFL for the CSNA, and a process and timeline to consider OFL alternatives, for discussion at the April 2017 Council meeting.

At its April 2017 meeting, alternative approaches for developing a revised OFL for CSNA were summarized by the SSC and CPSM in a joint report,<sup>3</sup> and the Council provided further direction to the Scientific and Statistical Committee (SSC) to “evaluate the utility of ATM indices and the resulting abundance estimates to calculate a biomass estimate and an estimate of FMSY for CSNA.” The Council also scheduled for its April 2018 meeting an “Anchovy Abundance and Reference Point Update.”<sup>4</sup> At its September 2017 meeting, the Council approved Terms of Reference for a January, 2018 acoustic-trawl (AT) methodology review.

Tools now exist to generate a robust and updated OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA

The Acoustic Trawl Methodology Review Panel concluded in its draft report posted to the March Briefing Book, that the AT cannot be used to estimate absolute abundance for any finfish in the CPSFMP, and that it can be used to estimate relative abundance for all finfish in the CPSFMP.

Underlying this conclusion and described in detail throughout the report are the weaknesses and limitations inherent to the method for all CPS finfish unless and until recommended improvements can be made to increase  $Q$  (catchability). In the case of northern anchovy, the report finds that biomass estimates from the survey can be used to directly inform management, as long as “inshore areas are addressed,” and following a Management Strategy Evaluation (MSE) (Table 3, pg. 30).

While MSE<sup>5</sup> will likely be an important part of developing a long-term, ecosystem based management framework for CSNA, including a harvest control rule and cutoff, it is not necessary for the immediate development of a new OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA. Underscoring this notion is the authors’ suggestion in the “Assessment of the Pacific Sardine resource in 2018 for U.S. management in 2018-19”<sup>6</sup> (pg 26) that sardine assessment in the future will be based primarily or completely on AT results:

“Current management of the Pacific sardine population inhabiting the California Current of the northeast Pacific Ocean relies on an estimate of stock biomass (age-1+ fish in mt), which is needed for implementing an established harvest control rule policy for this species on an annual basis. It is important to note that the stock assessment team recommended that the preferred assessment approach for meeting the management goal was to use results from the acoustic-trawl (AT) survey alone, i.e., not results from an integrated population dynamics model.”

According to Table 3 of the AT Review Panel report, the panel found the AT survey of similar utility for sardine and anchovy, with the caveat that for anchovy, inshore areas (outside of AT survey area) must be addressed. The Panel provides recommendations (pg 19) for conducting this extrapolation, including two that would be “relatively easy to implement.” Further increasing confidence in the AT survey for estimates of CSNA biomass, is the consistency of results between total biomass estimated from the AT survey, and spawning biomass from the CalCOFI ichthyoplankton-based model (i.e. MacCall et al. 2016) for 2015.<sup>7</sup>

In sum, key tools available for immediate development of a new OFL, ABC and ACL for CSNA are the AT abundance estimate are the AT results with biomass in inshore areas addressed; NMFS’ Minimum Stock Size Threshold Report finding an average  $F_{msy}$  of 0.266 for CSNA based on eight stock-recruitment relationships; and the OFL options report of the SSC and CPSMT. This toolbox allows the immediate use of the best available science to implement a priority for the Council: updated management of CSNA to ensure compliance with the goals of the CPS FMP.

These actions are urgently needed. CSNA was recently in a collapsed state, and the stock size remains low relative to historic abundances. Fishing on a fluctuating forage stock when it is at low abundance hinders recovery and can further deprive predators of food resources.<sup>8</sup> Any level of forage fish catch has the potential to be biologically significant when the stock is collapsed or <sup>5</sup> The steps of MSE include: Develop an operating model that simulates what is known about the fishery based on the best available science. Develop a suite of Management Strategies (Data Collection, Assessment, HCR, and Management Action). Develop suite of uncertainty scenarios (alternative “states of nature”). Develop a suite of performance metrics to compare the outputs (these should reflect management objectives and risk tolerance.) Run Simulation tests. Compare the tradeoffs in performance of HCRs. in a depressed state, or if fisheries are highly concentrated in an area important to central place foragers.<sup>9</sup> For 2012-2014, the four-year average of biomass in U.S. and Mexican waters in 2012-2015 was estimated by MacCall et al. to be 24,300 mt<sup>10</sup>. For 2015 and 2016, the NMFS Acoustic Trawl (AT) biomass estimate for the portion of the CSNA in U.S. waters was 31,427 mt and 151,558 mt, respectively,<sup>11,12</sup> and the preliminary 2017 biomass estimate is approximately 180,000 tons.<sup>13</sup> In contrast, between 1964-1990 the average CSNA biomass was 733,410 mt, with a range of 299,410 to 1,611,800 mt.<sup>14</sup> It is on this outdated, 1964-1990 information the current Maximum Sustainable Yield (MSY) of 123,336 mt for CSNA was derived.

Simultaneously, the Council should direct the CPSMT to develop and recommend an annual specifications process to set OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA, NSNA, and jack mackerel, as these are currently Monitored Species. Annual specifications are described in the SAFE (Stock Assessment and Fishery Evaluation) document for actively managed species (e.g., pg 37 of the current SAFE document for CPS). As the SSC noted in 2016, “in contrast with actively-managed CPS, there are currently no set procedures for setting and updating OFLs and acceptable biological catches for monitored species, including CSNA.”<sup>15</sup> The CPSMT should identify a procedure for these species, whether via routine management measures, point-of-concern, or other pathway.

Eliminate the Monitored Stock category from the CPS FMP, and manage all CPS stocks (other than Ecosystem Component Species) under the active management framework

The Monitored Stock category has proven a major obstacle for managing CSNA responsibly. The distinction between Actively Managed and Monitored is a unique feature of the CPS FMP that appears to have no clear basis in the Magnuson-Stevens Act. If a stock is not classified as an Ecosystem Component Species or a Prohibited Harvest Species, it should be considered “managed” with the attendant measures and specifications associated with all managed FMP species. We were alarmed when in January, 2018 NMFS issued a Proposed Rule that would establish fixed multi-year annual catch limits for the finfish stocks in the monitored stock category. We urged NMFS to retract this rule as it would create an additional hindrance to Council action to put in place interim management measures as well as move toward a longer-term ecosystem-based management framework for the species that achieves Optimal Yield.

The proposed rule notes that “fisheries for monitored stocks do not have biologically significant catch levels and, therefore, do not require intensive harvest management.” This statement is problematic and highlights why these categories should be eliminated. The proposed rule provides no supporting evidence that fisheries for CSNA or other “monitored” stocks “do not have biologically significant catch levels, and therefore, do not require intensive harvest management.” As noted above, CSNA was recently in a collapsed state and the stock size remains low relative to historic abundances. The 25,000 mt ACL is 78% of NMFS’ 2015 biomass estimate of 31,427 mt, and is 16% of NMFS’ 2016 biomass estimate of 151,558 mt. In this light, it is difficult to understand how NMFS can assert that an ACL of 25,000 tons would not have the potential to be “biologically significant.” Actual fisheries landings for CSNA averaged approximately 8000 tons between 2006-2015. In 2015, landings exceeded 17,000 tons.<sup>16</sup>

Anchovy-dependent seabirds have been negatively impacted by the recent collapse and persistent low stock size of CSNA

Northern anchovy is a keystone forage species in the California Current Ecosystem (CCE) and is preyed upon by a wide variety of marine wildlife, including commercially and recreationally valuable fish, mammals, and seabirds.<sup>17</sup> Anchovy is the single most important prey species for CCE seabirds.<sup>18</sup>

The recent collapse and low availability of anchovy has impacted seabirds and other marine wildlife, including the California Brown Pelican Subspecies, which is particularly dependent on anchovy. California brown pelicans were federally listed as endangered in 1970 and removed from the list in 2009 due to recovery. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, in five detailed agency reports submitted to the Pacific Fishery Management Council between 2015 and 2017,<sup>19</sup> notes the CPS FMP must provide adequate forage for dependent predators, including the U.S. breeding population of California brown pelicans, which are “heavily dependent on the availability of anchovies... northern anchovy abundance within foraging distance from colonies is the most important factor influencing pelican breeding success within the Southern California Bight.” The Service notes that “as part of our decision to delist the California brown pelican, we determined that criterion 2 of the Recovery Plan was met because “food supplies are assured by the CPS FMP.” “

Within these reports, the Service describes unusually poor breeding success at the only U.S. breeding colony (the Channel Islands) as well as Unusual Mortality Events for the subspecies in 2009 through 2015. Breeding success in 2015 and 2016, while improved, still fell below long term means.<sup>20</sup> The Service also notes that “while the portion of the California brown pelican population in the Southern California Bight is approximately 17% of the entire population, these breeding colonies provide an important buffer for the population as a whole.” Pelicans have experienced similar declines in their core breeding range, the Gulf of California, where “... nest attempts have declined in the last decade, in especially extreme and unprecedented ways in a period of unusual warming in the last 3 years (2014–2016).”<sup>21</sup>

The recent collapse in anchovy stocks has negatively impacted the federally endangered California least tern, especially in southern California, where 87% of the total breeding population of ~4205 total pairs occurs.<sup>22</sup> Starting around 2009, the number of breeding pairs dramatically decreased from over 6600 to today’s levels (Figure 1). Age 1+ anchovy, and juvenile rockfish are the preferred prey of least terns, which also have an optimal foraging range restricted close to shore (within ~3.2 km). According to the California Department of Fish and Wildlife, “lack of sufficient foraging resources is widely thought to be a significant factor limiting California least tern population growth and warrants additional study.”<sup>23</sup> In addition to a more recent drop in breeding pairs, since 2001, overall productivity at least tern colonies south of Pt Conception has been well below the long term mean. This indicates that least terns are having difficulty locating preferred prey, and that preferred prey (age 1+ anchovies and rockfish) have likely become less abundant and/or more dispersed within the Southern California Bight. Research undertaken by Point Blue Conservation Science supports the hypothesis that occurrence of important prey for California least terns has decreased near colonies in the Southern California Bight, and this has negatively affected these colonies and driven down statewide breeding success (Figure 2). The optimal foraging range of terns provisioning young is ~3.2 km and adults bring a “single bill load” (one fish) back to the colony at a time.<sup>24</sup> Thus, least terns are highly dependent on fish close to the breeding colony while rearing chicks. An increase in diet diversity since 2000 indicates that least terns in southern California are relying more on alternative prey sources, including larval fish which are likely too small to effectively provision developing chicks.<sup>25</sup>

Sooty shearwaters feed primarily on anchovy, rockfish and squid when they migrate to the northern hemisphere in the off breeding season. Anchovy is the most energy-rich of these prey items and the most important prey shearwaters need to fatten before returning to breeding colonies in the southern hemisphere. Shearwaters concentrate to feed on anchovies in central and southern California, Oregon, and the Columbia River plume depending on season<sup>26,27</sup>

Sooty shearwaters traverse the entire Pacific Ocean while integrating oceanic productivity over a global scale. Upon completion of breeding in the southern Pacific (New Zealand), shearwaters undertake their migration to one of three areas in the western, central, or eastern North Pacific: (i) Kuroshio and Oyashio Currents region off Japan and Kamchatka Peninsula, (ii) eastern Aleutian Islands and Gulf of Alaska region, or (iii) the California Current region. Sooty shearwater populations have declined in recent years both at breeding colonies in New Zealand and at wintering grounds in the eastern North Pacific. These trends were associated with concomitant increases in oceanic temperatures, which may have limited regional biological productivity.<sup>28</sup>

Northern anchovy typically represents at least 10% of common murre adult diet and (along with Pacific sardine) and 53% of the chick diet.<sup>29</sup> In Fall 2015, an unprecedented die-off of primarily young-of-the-year common murre occurred along the Pacific Coast, resulting in beached bird rates 6-28 times higher than normal. Limited prey abundance or availability is believed to have been the primary cause of the event, although domoic acid exposure may have been contributing factors as well.<sup>30</sup>

Annual prey studies conducted since 1993 at Año Nuevo Island in central California show anchovy is the most important prey for rhinoceros auklets, making up 100% of chick diet in some years.<sup>31</sup> At the Farallon Islands, northern anchovy has historically been a very important component of diet for many seabirds including common murre, Brandt's cormorant, rhinoceros auklet and western gull. Prey consumption models suggest that Farallon seabirds alone can consume over 90,000 tons of anchovy per year. However, between 2009 and 2014, reflecting the collapse in stocks, anchovies were virtually absent from seabird diet. While some seabirds were able to partially compensate for this loss by switching to alternate prey, other species such as Brandt's cormorants and western gulls suffered extremely low breeding success and population declines.<sup>32</sup>

Sincerely,

Anna Weinstein

Re. PFMC Agenda Items C.3 – Acoustic Trawl Survey Methodology Review Final Approval and C.4 – Process for Review of Reference Points for Monitored Stocks

Dear Chair Anderson and Council Members:

I am writing on behalf of over 3,000 members of Sea and Sage Audubon Society (Sea and Sage) in Orange County, California. Our chapter has a long history of concern for, and active support of, the California Least Terns. In 1964 Sea and Sage helped to establish at the mouth of the Santa Ana River one of the first protected Least Tern colonies, which in 1973 became the first officially recognized tern colony under the Endangered Species Act.

We write today because we are concerned that the anchovy population, an important food source for the California Least Tern, is being managed using outdated information and measures. We encourage you to use the best available science to protect the anchovy populations.

In order to improve support of the numerous marine species and seabirds that rely on the northern anchovy, along with Audubon California, Sea and Sage asks that the Council take the following steps at the April 2018 Council Meeting:

- Using the recent efforts of the Council, SSC, NMFS, special review panels, and outside scientists, identify and adopt updated management reference points for CSNA and NSNA for 2019.
- Direct the SSC to provide the Council, by its November meeting, an updated OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA.
- Direct the CPSMT to develop and recommend an annual specifications process to set the OFL, ABC, and ACL for CSNA, NSNA, and jack mackerel.

- Initiate an FMP amendment to eliminate the Monitored Stock category from the CPS FMP, and manage all CPS stocks (other than Ecosystem Component Species) under the active management framework.
- Direct CPSMT to produce at the November 2018 Council meeting a plan with a timetable for development and Council adoption of a Harvest Control Rule including Cutoff for CSNA.

Thank you for your consideration. We appreciate the work you do to manage our marine resources sustainably.

Sincerely,

Susan Sheakley

March 30, 2018

Dear Chair Anderson and Members of the Council:

My name is Kate Spencer. I am a whale watching boat captain and naturalist with Fast Raft Ocean Safaris on Monterey Bay, California.

I would like to urge the Council to adopt an ecosystem-based approach to anchovy and other forage fish management on the West Coast, using the best available new science to dynamically adjust catch limits so there is always enough fish for predators as well as fishers.

I have worked in whale watching in Monterey since 2001. In those 17 years the humpback whale population on the West Coast has at least doubled, and the number of dedicated whale watching boats and whale watching companies has increased greatly.

Forage fish are food for the humpbacks and other whales, sea lions, pelicans, seabirds, and dolphins that make Monterey Bay famous worldwide. Four and a half million tourists a year visit Monterey County each year for its scenery, wildlife, and healthy ocean habitat. Whale watching is also a big draw in San Francisco, Santa Cruz, and Southern California.

In 2015 much of the world heard about the incredible bonanza of humpbacks surface feeding on anchovies right at Moss Landing in Monterey Bay. There were 75 whales a mile from shore for about two months straight, and many thousands of people paid to see it.

Ironically, that inshore schooling is an indication of a severely reduced anchovy population. We need to have confidence that the fishery management in the future will actively assess and respond to such fluctuations in forage fish populations.

I would remind the Council that modern fisheries developed when important predators like sea lions and whales were artificially absent from the ecosystem due to human hunting.

The current anchovy catch is based on biomass estimates from 1964 to 1990, when there were far fewer whales. In 1966 when commercial whaling was banned, the total population of humpback whales in the entire North Pacific had been decimated to about 1,200–1,400. They have rebounded and are now thought to be over 21,000.

In just the California-Oregon coastal whale feeding area, in 1991-1992 there were about 570 humpbacks and there may now be as many as 2,600.

Humpback whales eat a ton of forage fish or krill every day from at least May through November. Two thousand whales for 120 days is 240,000 tons of forage. Thousands of fin whales also feed in California, generally farther offshore, and can eat almost twice as much as humpbacks do.

These charismatic animals have changed both the ecosystem itself and the economic web of tourism-related businesses all over the West Coast.

I would like to respectfully recommend that the Council act now to develop new reference points based on the best available science for the West Coast forage fish populations, for the continued coexistence of fisheries, whale watching, and the growing tourism economy. I would be happy to give more information about whales, whale watching, and tourism in my area to the Council at any time.

Respectfully,
