The canal from Nantes to Brest

Hilly in the cosy fall of the countryside, reorganizing space and creating a thousand landscapes in Brittany, the entertaining canal located in the heart of the peninsula links Brittany of Nantes to Brest. Taken under Napoleon I and inaugurated in 1858 by Napoleon III, its construction was inspired by war. In 1803, the war with the «perfidious» Albion beginning again, it is more than ever essential to link the arsenals of Brittany. However, such a company required the involvement of all the actors of the project and it is certainly not the case. It is an incredibly site which remarkably describe Jacques Guillet in his splendid work «Breton sea-faring». It will take ten years to level the 52000 m<sup>2</sup> of the base and twenty years to squeeze all the blocks. 3000000 m<sup>3</sup> of soil was to be stirred to level a platform as that of the pyramid of Khéops to dig the trench of Glomel ! Prisoners of the Spanish war, free workers and convicts of Brittany are the suffering inhabitants of the canal attacked by cholera, fevers or tuberculosis. The conditions are terrible. From dawn to dusk work is carried out at any time in the water or mud for very low wages paid with a delay, the canal was never served neither during wartime nor in time of peace, meaningless and almost desert-like for sailing. Meanwhile despite all the setbacks, agriculture, commerce and industry will soon sprout thanks to intensive work. From 1898-1902 train in the centres of Brittany contested seafaring. The Guerlédan dam was constructed that year to supply electricity to a part of the centre Brittany.

Buried under tons of water seventeen locks, the village of slaters, towpath and promises attesting that the dam would be ideal to Brest. And today? Canal de l'Unité, as named by the association that worked for the reunification of Brittany, successfully escapes from being a hoax: the destruction of the locks and the outfalls! Hence to answer a European directive * aiming at obtaining the «ecological welfare of water» by 2015. The strong mobilisation for the canal but also with the elected representatives of the centre of Brittany at the end of 2007 classified Nantes canal in Brest «strongly modified body of water» – MEFM equally recognising the historical heritage, and culture of seafaring. At the great dam of the Federation of Finistère for fishing and the protection aquatic milieu qualifying the canal natural water mass (MEN), permitted the return of 2000 salmon. Ecotourism covers 360 km from the river valley, crossing the «lose callous of Brittany», permitting sailors and pedestrians to discover this attractive country.

Visit abbey + strolls natural: adult €9.50, young person €6 and child €4.* It is one of the most important collections of religious architecture preserved in Brittany, founded by the count Alain de Goëlo in 1202. Classified as a historical monument in 1862, the Beauport abbey was bought over in 1993 by the Conservatoire of coastal areas and lake shores. The name "Beauport", or "Bellus Portus", perfectly expresses the size of the abbey coastline. It was successively a centre for pilgrims on their way to Saint-Jacques-de-Compostelle and a maritime trade and economic centre. For six centuries, the canons built and designed this property, with a remarkable architecture, decorated with roses, fig trees and orchards. Bordered by salted marshes, the abbey is located close to a protected harbour and activities are organized all year round. The House of apple offers a presentation of the cider-producing orchard of Beauport. Open to the sea, this room also welcomes groups of children, in addition to the existing educational rooms on the site. In addition, the Beauport domain was recently accepted as the 33rd member of the prestigious Network of the Great Sites in France (RGSF).

Dinan

DIN – ham, «fortified town»? «City on the heights»? Or DIN – Ana, the «fortress of Anna», the mother goddess of the gods and all the Celts, became, underneath the face of Santez, Anna the very official owner of Breton since 1913? Discover!

Beauport Abbey

It is simply important to note that its name is glorious due to its rich history that has made it one of the best equipped cities of Brittany in urban and architectural medieval heritage. The ramparts are visible and open all over the walls, dotted with towers and doors which are witnesses to the various eras and modernisations. While Brest's tours were destroyed in the second half of the 19th century, that of Jerzual, built in the 12th century to which a drawbridge was constructed in the 14th century, that of Saint-Malo, fortified in the 15th century or that of Guichet with its 13th century towers are for the pleasure of visitors or historians. However, the «Donjon» built by the duke John IV on his return from exile, in 1368, was undoubtedly the most attractive. Made up of two towers linked by a curtain, it is similar to the old castle of the Ermine of Vannes or the Solidor tower of Saint Malo. It is one of the best preserved works in Brittany, despite the collapse, at the end of the 17th century, the pepper-pots which topped it. The Donjon, now deprived of its military role, houses a fine collection of traditional costumes from Dinan. A walk inside the ramparts will inevitably lead visitors to the Saint-Sauveur basilica, one of the most remarkable Romanesque monuments in Brittany. The west porch and the southern traditional farmhouse, only memories of the era of its construction, date back to the 12th century. You have not heard the last of it for it is important to note that Dinan has the richest civil urban heritage and profane in Brittany, with a hundred and fifteen wood houses. So it is ideal to come and take a walk in the «key of the ducal cassette» as affectionately called by the duchess Anne, during the International Meetings of the Celtic harp, during the violin or ramparts festivals. The heritage service of the City valorises the 18th century heritage, very important but also less known. Dramatized visits, conferences, exhibitions in the centre of interpretation of the heritage... For other ages exist than the middle Ages in Dinan!

The Dinan tourism office celebrated its 100 years in 2006. Hundred years of information, services and reception, which built its reputation and made it a departure point for all visitors. For more transparency, it signed a quality control charter with the regional federation of tourism offices just before summer 2006. You can discover all the aspects of this city that has kept its medieval structure and its fortifications, the greatest in Brittany with the help of a guide lecturer. Therefore, along its streets, you can marvel at its 17th and 18th century hotels, its beautiful Roger-Vercel college fresco, its ancient Benedictine convents or the old Saint-Catherine convent, the abandoned children's refuge and its chapel.

Fort-la-Latte

Just a stone's throw from high cliffs of cap Fréhel, Fort-La-Latte is a beautiful stone structure in the middle of a short moor with yellow dyes of the gorse, white hawthorns and mauve heath in spring. Built on a rocky spur by the Gouyon- Matignon, it was known as the "Gouyon-Rock" before name; Fort-La-Latte definitively. This Stone mirador overlooking the sea is one of the most spectacular fortresses in Brittany. A scarp donjon that dates from the war of succession in Brittany, between 1341 and 1368, a small entrance hall with drawbridge at counterweight and bring doorway in tierce-point, a barbican, steep-cliffs, bastions added in the beginning of the 18th century by Garengneau, the Vauban military engineer architect and a cannon ball oven: Fort-La-Latte is worth visiting. Renovated for cinema purposes, the old historical stone fortress has become very attractive and ideal for film making for many films have been made within the last four decades: Ridicule de Patrice Le comte, with Jean Rochefort, Game of the king, Quentin Raspail, according to the work of Jean Raspail, with Marc Evans, Pierre Dux and François Matouret, Lancelot of the Lake, by Claude Santelli, The Dance of death, Claude Chabrol, with Michel Bouquet, Metzengerstein, Roger Vadim, with Jane Fonda or Chouans, Philippe de Broca, with Sophia Marceau, Stéphane Freiss and Philippe Noiret. The most memorable was the shooting in 1957, by the Hollywood blockbuster Les Vikings, in which Kirk Douglas and Tony Curtis share the limelight with beautiful Janet Leigh.

Ploumanach

It is one of the most unusual landscapes in Brittany. As far as the eye can see, when get to the tip of Squewel or the low wall protecting the lighthouse from the fury of the sea you will find a blend of pink rocks damaged in the sea like a gigantic petrified waterfall. But what happened here to make this place this disgusting? Erratic rocks on a moor. Is it to subdue their excesses? The turtle, the bottle, Napoleon's hat, inverted shoes... In these places struck by the hand of God – or the devil – «the spirit is lost in conjectures», as rightly said by Charles Le Goffic. It is necessary to come in a pilgrim's humility and the conviction of a seer to better appreciate these rocks. It is by taming them that they will release their attractive shapes. Take a few steps from the lighthouse to Marie Scanve's who looks after his stones with the same conviction as the other keepers of Sept islands including lighthouse flickers a few miles offshore to discover these attractive stones for Maria is the large priestess of Maison du Littoral. Those who only saw in the Côte de Granit Rose homogenous piles of «large stones» are now disappointed! A budding geology Paradise, with its rocks over 300 million years, Ploumanach will also seduce lovers of palette. It is best to come in the evening when the last rays of a summer sun irradiate attractive stones and enjoy the tall and amazing neo-gothic Costaères or try planting a needle in nose of Saint Guirec like girls in search of marriage. You will be able to visualise the country that River discovered at the end of the 19th century, when half of the fishermen's houses were crowned with thatched and the other half in pink bricks from Wales.

Finistère

Île de Sein

Off the pointe of Raz, 8 km from the coast, is a tiny tip of ground. It is less than 2 km long for a few hundred meters even a few dozen wide. An average walker runs around it, on foot, in one afternoon. The highest peak hardly reaches 6 m above sea-level and the average altitude does not exceed 1.5 m ! Sein is a bare island with a few trees and bushes. Its architectural heritage is quite new. The church of the market town, dedicated to Saint Gwénoù, was built between 1898 and 1901, thanks the women who carried stones on their heads one after the other from the port. You to enjoy the beauty of the continent.

Monts d'Arrée

A few lines on a guide are not enough to describe the mounts of Arrée. Get lost to enjoy this outstanding environment. On the spot, all the senses are awakened. At the summits, in the shade of crests, a breathtaking landscape is discovered. On sunny days, you can see a larger part of the department. Depending on the season, the vegetation produces pink and golden shades. The moor displays a collection of attractive colours. Via the paths, designed by the gorse and the short plants, gathering instincts are noticed. In summer, blueberries and wild bays are at your disposal. The flora is rich, abundant wildlife: lovers of nature are at the right place. Human dwelling is sparse: the low houses, are made mainly of schist, the local stone. Life was hard because the ground was poor. Main human activities were generated by peat and slate. Particular climate and difficult human conditions: are the motives behind many legends? Remains the same for several mysteries glide, come to discover their secrets.

Pointe Saint-Mathieu

Finistère south's pride is the tip of Raz; the north of the department possesses its place with that of Saint-Mathieu. This place is furthestmost in the sea. An attractive place, located at the end of Plougonvelin became very popular. Shaped by the waves, this twenty meters high steep cliff overlooking the sea. Several buildings were built on this headland with the abbey as point of focus. It is currently being renovated. All around it was a village but most homes now disappeared. A lighthouse, built in the 19th century, watches over the ocean accompanied by a semaphore. A chapel and a memorial to the sailors that died at sea for France is found in the vanities. It is a popular starting point for surveyors along the paths of GR34. This year, this site is also a privileged location and popular to observe the arrival and departure of the flotilla of hundreds of boats grouped during the Thunders of Brest 2012, the big international maritime gathering organised from the 13th to the 19th of July in metropolis Brest.

Crozon Peninsula

Stuck between the harbour in the north and the bay of Douarnenez in the south, the Crozon peninsula is surrounded by the sea. It takes its name from the main city, Crozon, and its cross shape makes it easily recognisable. It is appreciated for the beauty of its landscapes. You will find in particular magnificent natural sites like the pointe des espagnols, the Pointe de PEN-Hir with the famous heaps of peas and Goat. But, you must not be limited to these few mythical places! Municipalities like Camaret (where the Vauban Tower and the chapel of Rocamadour are located) and Lanvéoc (known for the Naval College and its sea base), are also ideal to visit. Cliffs, creeks, indented coastlines, beautiful beaches: a real paradise for lovers of nature. A military heritage (strong, tour, battery) is also worth visiting due to its location. Apart from that, it also has a rich cultural heritage. At the entrance of the peninsula, Menez Hom over 300 m offers a panoramic view of this territory.

Dol-de-Bretagne and Mont Dol

Dol, first sanctuary in Brittany, neighbouring town to «Brezih», Combourg and Antrain. Main door to romantic Brittany. Chateaubriand and Victor Hugo lived on several occasions in the medieval town that has the remains of an exceptional past. From the middle Ages, Dol has an exceptional fortune. Its location at the crossroads leading towards Normandy and the abbey of Mont-Saint-Michel is well known but the jewel of this old bishopric, is the Gothic cathedral known as the most attractive. Placed under Samson's evocation, one of the seven founding saints of Brittany, for a long time it was the primatial church of the peninsula. In the 6th century, Nevenoe-Nominoë in French—was crowned king of Bretagne in Dol. In order to take the Breton church out of the Frankish protection, to change the bishop's palace in to an archbishop's palace, which did not please the archbishop of Tours, who had, till then, authority over the bishops of Armorique! The case was taken to the court of Rome, the trial took over three centuries and ended with the defeat of the bishop who had to abdicate in 1199 his metropolitan rights. If the Episcopal seat was deleted since 1801, it is left for the archbishop of Rennes and metropolitan Brittany to bear the titles of Fraud and Saint-Malo. Dol is located in the heart of old marshes and offers the lure of an exceptional heritage, half-timbered houses, low galleries, irregular roofs as one of the few examples of civil architecture of the 12th century in France and one of the oldest houses in Brittany, «house of the Small Metal». «During sunny days, the hosts left on Thursdays and Sundays and we are often taken to the Dol Mountain where we can enjoy the attractive sea and marshland». In this light, François-René De Chateaubriand still a student in Dolby then, drew up the draft of the «old stones» which, according to the legend goes had been thrown there by Gargantua at the same time as Mont-Saint-Michel and Tombelaine. Formerly, this land was covered by the sea; only peak in the heart of moving beaches sprouted the Dol Mountain. This former island, old and important place of druidic worship is also an archaeological station. In 1872, art in the vicinity of the town unearthed the remains of some 150 animals, reindeer, rhinoceros, mammoths, and cavern lion... !The high silhouette-65 m-above the Marias, mysterious and fascinating, marked by brilliant since time immemorial.

Brocéliande – Paimpont Forest

■ FORÊT DE BROCÉLIANDE AND VAL SANS RETOUR PAIMPONT

www.broceliande.valsansretour.com

Descriptive name for this forest, also called Paimpont forest that once covered Brittany. From the middle Ages, the Brocéliande forest is mentioned in literature as the theatre of the adventures of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table to the search for Graal. History and myths tangled up without being easy to untangle it. Arthur seems to have existed, but on the Brittany island, during the time of Anglo-Saxon invasions. Whatever, Brocéliande is the world of Merlin the Magician, of the fairy Viviane, of the Knights of the Round Table, of King Arthur. As for Val no return, here again, let the experts the role to debate on the real destination of the Maison de Morgane or Hotié-Morgane. According to legend, the fairy who wanted to be avenged for an unsteady lover decided to imprison the unfaithful knights. Only Lancelot, faithful to Guenièvre, could break the enchantments. But this megalithic safe, which dates back to around 2,500 years BC, is especially an excuse to push you in the mythical druids' forest. The Val Sans Retour is also the pond, the Miroir aux fées and the well-known golden Tree, work of François Davin.

Dinard

Located in the heart of a magnificent region, with Mont-Saint-Michel in the east and Cap Fréhel in the west, Dinard, pearl of the North, offers the dazzling of its gardens lingering down to the sea. In 1850, the city was just a small fishing port attached to the town of Saint-Enogat. Twenty years later, Dinard became the centre of a real English colony, attracted by the beauty of the shore and the cool climate. The Anglo-Saxon aristocrats have got used to stay at holiday in summer and practice bathing in the sea and tennis. The duke of Audiffred-Pasquier, Sirs Coppinger, Roederer and baron Féard built superb residences and Dinard became a fashionable station, the smartest of the Emerald coast, was classified one of the best beaches in France! Nearly 800 castles and villas – today, more than 400 of them are a classified historical monuments— its stones covering, raised around palm trees, tamarix and camellias, making the city a small Riviera, where boulevards and avenue adorn the elegant new city. Although the beach is not very wide, it swells in a semicircle. Accessible by train and equipped by 1887 with all the amenities of leisure, ballroom, the Grand Café with a terrace and orchestra, a game room and a billiard table, Dinard enabled elegants and dandies to enjoy a life full of celebrations. Many celebrities, seduced by its ambiance, came for holidays: Ernest Renan, Agatha Christie, Oscar Wilde, Winston Churchill, Jules Vernes, Pablo Picasso... If on the beach nothing seems to have changed, but for the colour of the stripes of the tents, it is peaceful clientele of retired people and families who succeed the lords and kings. Dinard of the Belle Epoque is no more but its indefinable charm remains. Rocky peninsula, inserted between two bays, it meets the sea in all directions, the coasts, the islands. Square or round towers, the ramparts seem to be covered paths, granite steps leading to the sea, gargoyles and carved stones reflect the former builders of the resort. Romantics will be delighted by the Moonlight, during summer and the changing musical atmospheres every evening.

Aiguilles de Port-Coton and Pointe des Poulains

Do not miss these two attractive sites. The first, in the municipality of Bangor, captivated Claude Monet who, against winds and tides, completed Port Coton in thirty-nine fabrics. These jagged rocks are very inspiring to artists. Walkers will not escape a moment of emotion, especially when the sea is out of control and the wind blows endlessly. In the northwest of the island, the tip of Poulain where the Sarah Bernhardt's shadow still floats dips into the ocean. A few steps away, the island of Poulains is dominated by a small light. In fine weather, you can see Groix Island, Lorient and the bay of Quiberon. At low tide, the island is linked to the tip of Poulains by a sandy beach and pebbles. Recommended for lovers and the curious. Wait till sunset for maximum satisfaction. Unless you prefer one of these days when the elements are unleashed... also worth a visit! 800 km of jagged coasts, rocky coasts, fine sandy coasts, every summer hundreds of thousands of lovers of marine delicacies are welcomed here.

Carnac

This is the place of the world megalithism. Kind of lovers' Mecca of "large stones", in a radius of a few km<sup>2</sup> it accommodates the greatest concentration of all types of megaliths in the world. Carnac is famous for its alignments! 3 871 stones high, menhirs or peulvens according to the former name, spread throughout the four major groups of Menec, Kerzerho, Kerlescan and Kermario, very close to each other, with that of Small Menec which includes a hundred stones are distributed over eight lines. The landscape is at this point marked by the presence of the stones that gave this town its name. Carnac actually takes its name from carn, word common to all the Celtic languages meaning a heap of stones. Theories of Royer de la Sauvagère which, in 1755, have there the remains of a Roman camp to those of these American gis on the territory which, in 1944, took them for German anti-tank lines of defence, via all of Doctor Stukeley ophiolâtriques in 1824, you could make it an encyclopaedia of the megalithic collection of carnacéen howler. It was only during the second half of the 19th century and, in the 60s, first scientific excavations organised under the auspices of the Polymathique Company of Morbihan, to notice finally, with the view of the furniture that was discovered here, that the dolmens in the corridors were actually sepulchres, dating from the Neolithic era, (at least 2000 years on arrival of "our ancestors the Gallic"! Alignments are a source of inspiration and their builders left symbols to be debated on. For numerous writers like Jacques Briard or Gwenc'hlan Scouézec, Carnac, with its monumental dimensions at the time was a major religious centre where huge crowds gathered to celebrate seasonal worships.

Golfe du Morbihan

Paradise for migrating birds and oyster farmers, a real reserve for wildlife, seasons pass-by over the "small sea", "Mor-bihan" in Breton.

A small welcoming and secret sea, but at times violent! It stretches over about 100 km, enclosed by the Rhuys peninsula and the tip of Kerpemir near Locmariaquer; country with many faces and the 300 islands, water country, mist and lights, alternating spits of land and stretches of salt water, not easy to separate water from the ground... The gulf empties and refills every six hours, under the influence of the moon, entertaining, it is a real paradise. There are various ways of reaching it; by air, by helicopter or in order to see best enjoy its setting; on foot, taking the coastal tracks but the tour is endless since the coasts are cut into embedded valleys, and by boat, ah the boat! Embark on all sorts of boats, flat, Zodiac, sea kayaking, sailing, sinagot, shuttles to enjoy the sea for it is no doubt the best way to discover this rare pearl with changing landscapes. Civilisations continued celebrating the Gulf in the heart of the best megalithic center in the world. Cairn from Gavrinis Island, a masterpiece, Locmariaquer and its imposing monuments – great menhir which was once more than twenty metres high, Table of traders, Er Grah tumulus – all very attractive and unique. A mixture of softness and violence, it is said that the sun shines here like in Catalan making the gulf always bright even at the peak of the tourism season.

Suscinio

In the peninsula of Rhuys, in the heart of a marsh box, where reed beds, hatch the golden buttons and the iris blossom, Suscinio castle recollects ancient times when it was the favourite residence of the dukes of Brittany. The castle was first revealed by 1218 in a written letter by Pierre de Dreux, known as Mauclerc but the fortress is only one of the many ducal manors that Breton. If his son Jean Ier (1237-1286) systematizes the construction of game parks of the forest, Jean II (1286-1305) left the old ducal residence of the Mound in Vannes to settle in Suscinio. Jean IV (1364-1399) and his son John V (1399-1442) constructed the home-châtelet of the eastern façade and the western home that made Suscinio a comfortable and prestigious residence with its attractive dormer windows. From the first half of the 15th century, the castle adopted the structure which you have heard about today and the construction of a new ducal castle in Nantes, in 1466, diverted the attention of the dukes of the old fortress of "above of the marshes", while the defeat of Saint-Aubin-du-Cormier in 1488 destroyed the policy of independence in Brittany. Suscinio was once a property of the French king later abandoned at the mercy of brambles and jackdaws. Sold as national property during the Revolution, it accommodated the "Red Army" of the Cadoudal Chouan chef, before being sold in parts by a careless owner. It was first classified "Historical Monument" after the visit of Prosper Mérimée in 1835 but it is a dilapidated building that gained in 1965 the general Morbihan council. However, after four decades of renovation the ducal house regained its beauty; a ceiling, a blanket and identically rebuilt floors, all make Suscinio a model of renovation and resurrection. The 30 000 terracotta tiles varnish with slip or earthenware, found in 1963 at the bottom of the moats and in 1975 in a slope located in the south of the castle, constitute the most beautiful collection of medieval tiling in Europe. To visit absolutely!

Île de Bréhat or Île aux Fleurs

► A glorious past. Île aux Fleurs, little gem nestled in the heart of sunny pink rocks lit by the sun, and a deep blue sea. Here, the landscape changes from hour to hour to suit the mood of Madame weather. Composed of two main islands linked to the eighteenth century by a bridge built under the orders of Vauban, surrounded by about ten islets, this archipelago is always animated by ebb and flow.

A very attractive landscape, its history dates back to the prehistoric period; the Romans took over the land of Coadec. Bréhat like many Breton cities, was founded by a monk, Saint Budoc, in 470. Fleeing from the looters ravaging Great Britain, he, joined by other brothers, founded the first Breton monastery. In the middle of the eleventh century, Bréhat was placed under the supervision of the duchy of Penthièvre and its capital, Lamballe. Fortified in the middle Ages, it bears the repercussions of the war of succession in Brittany and the League. Breton, the English and French fought over this strategic land. Later, the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries made the archipelago a theatre of wild fighting later ravaged by England and Spain. Privateers, pirates and smugglers haunted the sea during the heroic decades of the late eighteenth to nineteenth centuries, thus separating England from France; this made the sailors of the island famous for their bravery. Corouge captains: Lambert, Fleur, Burgeon and others are names forever remembered in the island explaining why the economy of Bréhat has for long depended on the sea; the peak of its development was during the Great Fishing Period.

Nowadays, fishermen go round the seas of the world to make ends meet but always come back to plant their memories. If fishing is no longer the main activity here, numerous sites bear the history of this glorious past.

► L'île aux Fleurs. Bréhat named Flower Island is not for granted. Several generations of privateers and sailors brought back from their world adventures all sorts of exotic plants that easily grew up, thanks to a very favourable sunny microclimate, often sunlit. Ideal mini-paradise of scents and colours, Bréhat offers in comparison to the miniature garden, flora composed of mimosas, myrtles, fig trees, almond trees and other eucalyptus, pierced with luxuriant vegetation and pink rocks. The contrasts are amazing and attractive; they show the difference between the northern and the southern islands. The first is tormented by its wild moors and coves. Its eastern coastline covered by storms and currents is also very violent with many protruding rocks, making it Irish-like. The archipelago and the great expanses discovered during low tides are good for reproduction and wintering of a rich and varied avifauna: terns, oystercatcher birds, curlew and other sandpipers. The pleasant island of the south is a garden of Eden with contemporary villas, low small houses with stone mansion and thatched old roofs built almost everywhere. Spring is certainly the best season to come for a dream on this island that has managed to inspire Matisse, Gauguin and Fougita so well.

Sightseeing

■ LA CHAPELLE SAINTE-ANNE

The Sainte-Anne chapel is located around the Delasselle garden. Constructed in Romanesque style, it was reconstructed between the end of the 11th century and the beginning of the 12th century on the site of the primitive church. In the middle of the 18th century, this edifice and its neighboring Notre-Dame-de-Péniti church were used just for official ceremonies. From 1793, it was transformed into an arms depot, which led to the degradation of the monument. Its roof and pillars collapse in 1860 due to the movement of sand. The rest of the chapel was dedicated to Saint Ann, owner of the island and was classified in 1980.

■ LA CHAPELLE SAINT-MICHEL

Built during the second half of the nineteenth century on a 26 metres high mound, located on the highest point of the Bréhat Island, the Saint-Michel chapel offers one of the most beautiful views of almost all the archipelago, especially the Béniguet Island, the Maudez Island and the Arcouest tip. Its orange tiled roof is therefore used as a seamark and offers views very clear on the southern island. It was built on the ruins of the old semaphore destroyed by lightning in 1820. It also replaces a much older chapel, which was once used as guardroom and gunpowder store during the Revolution. Note the presence of a small private home in front of the chapel, dating back to 1898.

■ LA CROIX DE MAUDEZ

You will enjoy a wide view standing opposite the sea, in the middle of the moor. This cross was erected by the Bréhatis in memory of Maudez, a monk, who built a monastery on a nearby island in the year 570 after being ousted of the island he had come to evangelize. The Maudez cross was erected in 1788 and faces the island of the same name. It is a granite monolith standing on a molded base.

■ LES DÉCAPITÉS DE BRÉHAT

This is a very interesting story that amazes everyone, leaving a nice collection of the «decapitated». The «Café des Pêcheurs» cabaret, run by Madame Guéré was visited by numerous artists at the beginning of the last century. One of them could not pay for his slate and the quick-tempered boss threatened to cut off his head. The artist began to make his self-portrait on a glass and gave it to the owner, telling her that his work was worth more than her slate. Consequently, the artists took for practice to paint their faces on the Café des Pêcheurs glasses.

■ ÉGLISE NOTRE-DAME DU BON SECOURS

Not far from the town hall, is this church built in 1873 on the site of the old cemetery. It houses the stole (classified as Historic Monument) of Saint Pol who according to a legend defeated the dragon with it. You can also admire the fine statue of the Virgin made of polychrome wood of the 16th century, as well as a stained glass that reveals the exploits of the Tremintin pilot, whose lifeboat now bears his name.

■ ÎLE MAUDEZ

Attached to the town of Lanmodez because it was separated from Bréhat by the channel of the Trieux River, the Maudez Island is geographically part of the Bréhat Archipelago. It takes its name from Saint-Maudez, which was removed there and had an oratory dating approximately to the sixth century, of which there are only some ruins, in the centre of the island. It is said that the island was infested with snakes, and that Saint-Maudez hunted some with his prayers. The island was abandoned at the time of the Norman invasion in the ninth century. In the eleventh century, it was offered to the Bégard Abbaye. Today private, the island has an extremely remarkable architectural heritage: eleventh century priory, remains of a former prieuriale church restored in to a home, Saint-Maudez chapel, nineteenth century guardroom. A pardon ceremony once took place on November 18th on the Maudez Island until the Second World War, for the fact that Saint-Maudez's cult was much respected in Brittany and particularly in Trégor, probably due to the fact that he had the capacity to preserve snakes.

■ ÎLE RAGUÉNES

East of Bréhat, the Raguènes Island is located opposite the Lavrec Island. Its 5 acres are not inhabited; it is mainly covered by ferns and ivy, and has very few trees. You can access it at low tide, by Loguédic and the Lavrec Island. It was once inhabited at least from the eighteenth century. The ruins of a rectangular building still remain on the south coast of the island. On the north-east coast, you will also find the vestiges of a small guardroom.

■ MOULIN DU BIRLOT

☎ +33 (0)2 96 20 02 83

birlot@bretagnenet.com

The Birlot tidal mill is set on the Kerpont canal, west of the southern Bréhat Island. It is a 140 meters cove created for the 2 acres water reserve that supplies the mill. Renovated, it was built between 1633 and 1638. This mill is considered one of the most beautiful in Britain. In 1916, it stopped producing its 25 tons of annual flour and a baker who had settled on the island started importing flour from the continent. Today, buckwheat is milled there. Strangely, the mill accommodates a small barn owls family in low seasons.

■ LE PHARE DU PAON

Pointe du Paon

The Paon tip (originally known as «Pen» in Breton, which means peak or head) is located at the extreme north of the island. The current lighthouse, red polished porphyry, is a fully automated fixed fire from 1949. It replaces the original building built in 1853 and destroyed by the Germans in 1944.

Sit at the foot of the lighthouse and admire the bright sunrays on its pink granite rocks. The breath-taking view, alongside the smoking foam and cool smell of the Moor makes it an ideal place for relaxation as you dream of a distant place. No wonder: The lighthouse overlooks an impressive chasm formed by two huge rocks (do not venture there). And he who talks about Breton chasm means legends! This place was the theatre of the assassination of Count Goëlo by his two sons, represented by the two rocks following their petrification. Later, the spirit haunting the chasm was an oracle: Bréhat girls came to consult it by throwing a stone, the number of bounces on the rocks indicating the number of years separating them from marriage.

■ PHARE DU ROSÉDO

The Rosédo Lighthouse is set on the Rosédo land, north of the Bréhat Island. Historically, its alignment with its twin the lighthouse of the Peacock, enabled sailors to avoid the Horaine pitfall, located off the Paon tip! You will also find in this place a semaphore dating back to 1862. The first Rosédo lighthouse was built in 1858 and lit in 1860 as a fixed red light; the current lighthouse was built between 1947 and 1949. It consists of a rectangular turret with a round face; it was automated in 2007.

■ PLAGE DE GUERZIDO

Located at Pointe du Guerzido consisting of a barra spur, Plage de Guerzido is the main beach of l'île de Bréhat; it is composed of sand and pebbles and is truly remarkable for its natural and calm site, very attractive. It stretches from Roc' H Guenanec to 'Bec Per an Nouan. On the seafront, you will find the seaside architecture typical of the end of the nineteenth century and the beginning of the twentieth century, heterogeneous in the styles ranging from Scottish mansion, the English house with bow-window. Cabins also built at the beginning of the last century can also be seen.

À la carte: Around €15. Chèque Restaurant. Terrace.

Set close to the centre of Bréhat, this restaurant-brasserie offers a traditional and local cuisine in an old rustic stone house. Though the menu is not long, the dishes served are excellent. Many guests fissure for a house speciality: scallop nuts tart and leeks fondue. You can choose classic mussels and chips that will not disappoint you. For dessert, delicious pancakes, a Breton far or classic chocolate fondant are available. Do not come too late for the produce may be limited on crowded days since they are fresh. The welcome is warm and as soon as the sun is up, you will be delighted under the arbour, well-fed and in a good mood, ready to leave for a walk on the multiple Bréhat paths.

■ L'ENEZ VRIAD

21, Allegoat

☎ +33 (0)2 96 20 08 05

Open all year. Set menu at €17. À la carte: Around €24. Terrace.

This pretty little hotel with flowers and shaded terrace is run by Delphine and Erwan Hamet, a couple who settled on the île aux Fleurs for 10 years now, taking up the snack bar whose owner had retired. Erwan was previously second chef at La Marne Paimpol, while Delphine was head waiter there. The couple is well adapted to island life and also works throughout the year with their restaurant and bar service. That is why you will meet both tourists and locals who take their coffee or their working midday meal. The cuisine is rather oriented towards the sea; so much the better for it is present from all sides. The chef's speciality, beef stew Scallops, has its own reputation. Note that the place is sometimes crowded (according to season) and you might sometimes queue for a long time.

It will be a nice idea to take a boat from the tip of Arcouet to come at mid-day to savour fish and seafood on the terrace of this lovely restaurant. Here, the marine species are fresh from the sea and your appetite will go crazy for the homemade foie gras with Espelette pepper and onion jam. The cuisine is classic, but also innovated and some dishes like bass fillet with clams and chorizo will charm you. Even if you are not a fan of seafood, rack of lamb with thyme flower will give you a treat. The seafood platters are sumptuous and if you are a fan, then eat some lobster for a menu is dedicated to it. You are advised to spend the night after dinner in one of the rooms of the hotel.

This creperie-tearoom is located in the bourg in a beautiful stone house with a terrace and garden, on the road leading to the Paon lighthouse. It is ideal to sit for a meal during a walk. The pancakes and galettes are delicious, whether with «classic» or «special» garnishes (fish garnishes, scallop shells...). You will not be disappointed either by the specialties from Brittany like Kig ha Farz stew, typical of ancient Brittany, or sautéed lamb with peat or pancake-sausage with salicorne. To complement it all: you can choose a Breton cider from the best origins. The terrace is pleasant and the welcome very friendly... perhaps you will return to taste it, in order to enjoy a tea from an excellent selection, with a homemade cake or a large ice-cream from an artisan ice-cream maker.

Open all year. À la carte: Around €18. Terrace.

This small Creperie with a family atmosphere is set in a nice setting, near the port and the town hall. The galettes and pancakes are made on site, with local produce and fresh side dishes. The terrace in a flower-filled courtyard is shaded, and very pleasant. Excellent organic cider is also available at the restaurant. Note that, you would need a bit of patience (sometimes much) in season, but the service remains friendly. Of course, there is no need to linger for a coffee if you like a real espresso, but you would have spent a pleasant time before attacking, or continue your visit to the charming île aux Fleurs.

■ LE SHAMROCK

Finistère Islands

Glénan Islands

A fluctuating population for an incalculable surface area and an island occupied only during high seasons! 18 km from Fouesnant, the Glénan islands are very attractive. Around the "Room", a small inland sea and favourite stopover for great sailors, eight main islands, a dozen of small islands and many tablets are organised in a circle. Today, most of these islands are classified as ornithological reserves or private islands, such as the Giau-tec Island and its islets where birds (tern sandwich and pierregarin, gravelot with uninterrupted collar, crested cormorants. . .) come for refuge and breeding. The rest of the archipelago is inhabited only in summer and entirely dedicated to nautical leisure. The past of Glénan Island is dotted with fortunes and ailments. Inhabited since prehistory period, they have been the landmark of the privateers and pirates at the beginning of 18th century. In 1881, the archipelago had 85 inhabitants, all fishermen, farmers – goémoniers or soda manufacturers. «Sea workers» of the whole of Finistère concentrated on lobster and langoustine fishing. The installation of the nautical centre in 1940 and an international diving centre gained the archipelago its fame. It is important to protect it to make the site permanently attractive. 1000 pleasure boats are available for you on the island on some summer days; as a result some seabird species desert the archipelago; one of the most attractive coastal eelgrass herbarium, the «marine pastures», is endangered by the anchoring of the boats, organised moorings of the Magpie and Chamber. It is recommended to fish before the tides. A vast expanse of sand and rocks is discovered as you explore the sea further and the sea offers ponds for fishes and shellfishes. Endeavour to protect the ecosystem while visiting to secure its future and beware: underwater fishing is prohibited in the greatest part of the archipelago. Saint-Nicolas Island is a rich and small natural reserve. A Quimper botanist discovered in 1803 a narcissus (unknown and very scarce) on the island. The news keeps spreading and gradually the island is being ravaged and a natural reserve was created in 1973, to be invaded by brooms and brambles. Sheep and donkeys have been used for thirty years by botanists and naturalists to preserve the Ouessant bushes. Available ecological balance, the narcissus can blossom. Visits are possible at the beginning of spring.

Île de Batz

Batz has many attractions and is an ideal touristic sight. Tour the island-3.5km long, 1.5 km wide – in four hours. An old corsair house built at the beginning of the 18th century is located in the south-west, this guardhouse accommodated gunners of close batteries as well as custom staffs. The lighthouse, the Delasselle garden, the snake hole, the old stone houses are some places to visit to get a taste of unadorned nature. The beaches are located to the west and south, but the water temperature is often colder than elsewhere, however, tonic and invigorating!

Agriculture is the main activity in Batz: fifteen organic and traditional farms share 170 hectares of cultivable land divided into several pieces. Fishing is also part of the economy: 22 professional sailors for 5 fileyeurs, 2 trawlers and 5 goémoniers.

This island was originally divided into squares and swept by the Gulf Stream making it less known compared to the other finistériennes islands. Discreet? Sail for barely 5 minutes to get to this overwhelming scenery. Sandy beaches cover over 14 km of the coast of this island. Its microclimate gives it a very rich flora and fauna and a preserved natural heritage. More than 650 species of algae on the coasts of North Finistère. This extraordinary heritage is due to the quality of the sea water and local climatology. The algae are used for agriculture, medicine, cosmetology, agri-foodstuffs and thalassotherapy. This island also accommodates rare species of plants, birds and shells. Follow all paths paved or not to discover the island.

In 1897, Georges Delaselle, a Parisian insurer and passionate of exotic plants, loves the atmosphere of Batz island. He noticed the exotic and rare plants from the four corners of the world and decided to construct a garden dedicated to these plants. In the process, a necropolis from the Bronze Age was put in place. When he died, a luxuriant oasis replaced the original arid dunes. Abandoned for years, an association renewed the garden and in 1997, the conservatory of littoral became the owner. You will see a collection of more than 2,500 plants with about two-thirds from the southern hemisphere. The garden is divided according to species, each of which invites you for a visit. It is a genuine conservatory of the world's biodiversity.

Île de Molène

Several interpretations have been made on the origin of Molène. For some, the name of this "island of the end of the world" comes from Breton moal enez which means bald island and others believe it comes from the hilly structure of the island with its peak 26 km above sea level surrounded by islets, 15 km from the coast; 1h30 from Brest by boat or 30 minutes from Conquest. Molène has a home port that welcomes Molenians and holidaymakers all year round since access to the Molène archipelago is very dangerous for sailing meanwhile tourism has grown in Molène over the years. Fishing remains the main economic activity in Molène and most people specialise on abalone shells which were awarded a label "Molène abalone" due to its scarcity and taste; they are usually collected from September to April. Algae gathering serve both agro-nutritional purposes and cosmetics industries. A marked hiking path has been built for visitors to take a walk and discover the grey seals of the Iroise Sea. After Ouessant, had received the teams of Philip Lioret, for the film titled The shipmate with Sandrine Bonnaire, Philippe Torretton and Grégori Derangère, Molène in 2011 will host the next Olivier Dahan's full-length feature film, the making of The Lords, with Gad Elmaleh, José Garcia, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Frank Dubosc. Board a PEN Ar Bed boat to enjoy the sea of Molène all day long.

On June 18 1896, Mathieu Masson, a fisherman from the Molène island bumps into pieces of wood, wrecked barrels and banana bunches, during a fog. For him a shipwreck just occurred, the Drummond Castle had collapsed during the night in Fromveur. The island is on alert, on Ouessant and the continent only three people survived and the deceased were brought back and buried in the cemetery of the island. Thanking the inhabitants for their devotion, Queen Victoria offered a clock, a calice and a water tank for them to collect rainwater.

■ ÉGLISE SAINT-RONAN

The present church was rebuilt at the end of the 19th century because the first one was no longer big enough for the Molénais parishioners. Inside, some treasures can be seen. Among the ciboria and statues, you can see a non signed canvas with magnificent oil from the 17th century, called La Vierge et l'Enfant. By its side, there is a ruby chalice donated by the archbishop of Canterbury to the head of the island to thank him following the shipwreck of the Drummond Castle. Queen Victoria and the English authorities also offered a clock for the bell tower as a sign of gratitude. Two ex-votos depicting boats, a three-master and a sloop are also visible.

■ LA MARCHÉ TRIELEN – MOLÈNE

One day of spring tide in August or September depending on the years. Many participants limited to 100. Disadvised with the children of less than 10 years.

The idea is simple: walk 3.5 kilometres in about 1h 30m. However, it has a few constraints. The main determinant is the coefficient of tide for it needs at least 107 for the journey to be good. Then, you have to be physically strong to slog along the rocks and «walk» on the laminar flow. If all these aspects are put together in addition to a good mood, you can reach Trielen from Molène by walk. This original walk is organised since 1979 by the Molénaise Club and takes place once a year. A smart advice: do not miss it to have an unforgettable experience!

If you want to eat Breton specialities in Molène, then go to Vent des Iles creperie. At the top of the harbour station, Cathy Tual awaits you in this pleasant modern house. If you are an enthusiasts, then try the homemade galettes and also the Gull furnished with prawns, curry and rice, Molène Skréo sausage with algae or scallops with leek cream. For groups of six people and more, order a mutton stew “cooked in mounds”, a famous traditional dish. Do not leave without tasting a proper honey crepe before taking a nap.

■ HOTEL KASTELL AN DAOL

Open all year. Closed in January. Daily for lunch and dinner. Menu from €19 to €26. Children's menu: €9. Lobster with several presentations: €58.

If you visit the islands of Iroise, stopover at Molène, even for a stay. Do not think you will starve in this part of Breton because at the Kastell An Daol restaurant, founded by the Masson family in 1962, you will find something to eat. The marine environment here is a camp of huge stone and the fishermen bring back in their shelves, crabs, lobsters, crayfish which finds itself on the menu of this exceptional restaurant. Yannick Masson prepares with master-hand all these treasures of the sea and, if you want to eat lobster, it should be prepared here. Cooked with whisky, Armorican, tarragon, or The Bellevue way, unfortunately you will eat only one of them. It is possible, of course, to choose a platter of seafood or another dish. On sunny days, you can enjoy oysters as a starter, followed by a monkfish in white butter or a place molénaise sauce on the terrace. To finish why not take a far Breton? You will remember live to remember Molène!

■ RESTAURANT BAR L'ARCHIPEL

Le Quai ☎ +33 (0)2 98 07 38 56

Open all year. Closed during the year's end celebrations. Daily for lunch. Menu from €19 to €26. Fixed rate formula: €15. Terrace.

As you get to the quay of Molène, you may need a walk to recover from seasickness or to look for something to eat. Go to Restaurant de l'Archipel, or sit on the terrace overlooking the sea that offers a magnificent view. The chef Marcel Monot and his regional cuisine can make you regain your appetite. The Ricard lobster will definitely delight you. The Molénaise land and sea cuisine (smoked Molène sausage with algae, conger, Pollock and cooked shellfish sauce served with potatoes) will end your appetite, but you can also have mussels or white butter. After a dessert, for those with more appetite, you can take a tour of the island.

Hiking in Ouessant

The island has several historical and archaeological attractions. However, the wild beauty of the landscape makes its natural heritage the major reason for a visit to Ouessant. Nonetheless, it is not always sunny. Well-equipped you will see unleashed elements, by the South-west winds over the tips of Pern, Porz Doun or the outskirts of Créac'h. Caution is needed for accidents occur regularly due to carelessness. On sunny days, visit PEN Arlan, the heath of gorse and the attractive flowers. Descending into the pier from the charming port of Arlan, you will notice the exceptional clearness of the waters. Up North-east towards Cadoran, you will enjoy the majestic view from high cliffs, by the radar tower before returning to Lampaul by the outskirts of Keller Island. Exceptional, the landscapes and the calm will leave you with unforgettable memories. Thanks to the "Map of the island and Practical Guide", found in the Tourism Office, located at the edge of Lampaul church, the roads and paths will be no mystery to you. Prefer ankle boots, the gorse and aggressive brambles on the small paths, and waterproof, because the ground and the vegetation are often wet. Measures against the rain and the wind are recommended.

Sleeping

■ HOTEL KASTELL AN DAOL

10 rooms. Double room. Breakfast: €8. From €42 to €62.

In Molène, you will not be disturbed by cars or noisy tourists. It is calm here and at Kastell an Daol, camped by the port, your rest and relaxation will be better than a stay in Thalasso. Thanks to your comfortable room, restorative sleep alongside tours in this beautiful environment, visits to the Museum of Drummond Castle and your conversations with the locals in the evening at the pub run by a member of the Masson tribe and a fan of Johnny. After some cervoise beers, guests are welcome to eat in an exceptional seafood restaurant.

Open all year. Double room from €80 to €110. Half-board required. Catering facilities (€15 by adult meal and €8 by from 4 to 14 years old child meal, drinks included).

An exceptional place. The Conservatory of Littoral has entrusted to David and Soizic, the Quéménès islander farm which produces part of their necessities as well as that of guests who can rent one of the three guestrooms. No need to say they are comfortable, with the murmur of the sea and the wind being the only sound décor during your stay, with deep nights, free from inopportune awakening. After a good breakfast, you can carry on with your activities with or without your hosts who will take you back to Molène in their boat at the end of your stay.

Campsites

■ CAMPING MUNICIPAL

☎ +33 (0)2 98 07 39 05

Open in summer. To check with the town hall. 50 campsites. Campsite + 1 person from €6.30 to €8. Extra person from €4.20 to €5.

Mobil-home or caravan users will not like this campsite. Here, it is a paradise for tents sheltered from the western winds by a wall. No entertainment nor snack bar. What good then? The bars and pubs of the town are a few minutes away and if you want to play petanque, then take the path around. For lunch, you must have caught some seashells, shrimps or crabs, if not, go to one of the restaurants or the creperie. You might have guessed, the Molène campsite is part of the ten natural campsites Brittany which has not been modified with animations and aquaparks.

Île d'Ouessant

It is difficult to describe Ouessant in a few lines... To start with some figures: the island is over 20km from the continent 1,500 hectares for surface area and was first crossed by a steam around 1880. Electrified in 1953 it is made up of a church, two chapels and 18 cavalries. Finally, the surroundings are watched by 2 earth-lighthouses (Stiff and Creac'h) and 3 lighthouses at sea (the Mare, Keroon and Nividic). Since 1982, the Stiff tower has been very attractive mostly towards sunny days with close to a hundred inhabitants. On arrival, you are shaken by Fromveur; swift marine currents from 8 to 10 knots separating Molène from Ouessant but once on the island, Cliffs, steep coasts, waves, foam, sea birds, grey seals, gorse, heather and other attractive sites welcome you. Many paths mostly for bicycle riding and other roads with small pieces of star-shaped stone constructions will please you. These paths also accommodate sheep during storms. As tradition recommends, sheep are always allowed to feed in the pasture (end of September) to mid-February. Mound stew became an Ouessant culinary speciality thanks to sheep and Ouessant has many other interesting things worth discovering and it is not forbidden to revisit!

Although you are on an island, you will not be able to have a really attractive stay without a visit to this Tourism Office where everyone rushes as the shuttles serving the boat arrives. Therefore take some time to find out about places to visit such as the Maison du Niou, the Phares et Balises museum, the various remarkable viewpoints of the island or the accommodations. Open all year.

This cruise to the islands is a brilliant idea ... This is probably what you will have in your mind as you board one of Penn Ar Bed's ships. From the Saint Evette pier, in the municipality of Esquibien, it will take just one hour for you to get to Sein island and its small houses, its beautiful beaches and lovely promenades. Before you get there, take advantage of the cruise, either on deck or in the lounges of the ship, especially as Enez Sun starts its cruise by crossing the Cape Sizun coast until Raz ... that the ship will cross without any swirl depending on conditions. Then you will see the edge of the island abound with wrecks and reefs. This is a cruise full of emotion...

■ OUessant DÉCOUVERTE

Bourg de Lampaul ☎ +33 (0)6 12 22 92 73

Open every day. Departures at 13: 30 and 15: 30. Guided tour.

If you do not know Ouessant, then take a guided tour for an exploration of the territory. The island is quite large and has several historical sites concerning built heritage, as well as landscape attractions. It will be difficult for you to visit them all in a reduced time, especially if you are there for a day. The guide, an expert in his domain will take you to all the remarkable viewpoints and will show you the most famous shipwreck sites, for the archipelago of Ouessant and Molière has a very sad record about them.

How to get there

Of course you can reach Ouessant in pleasure-boats. However the vicinity is dangerous because of stormy weather and the buoys mooring in the bay of Lampaul, orientated South-west, or Steep, oriented North-east, are very safe only by good weather cover, the winds can rapidly rise. You will therefore prefer to reach the harbour of Steep by Fromveur II boat which belongs to the regional shipping company PEN ar Bed which also serves Molène and Sein Island, with another boat. It is advisable to go from Brest than Conquest. Indeed, if the journey lasts more than an hour, this choice has many advantages. Goulet of Brest is very attractive and you can easily find an anchorage on the marina of Brest. But most importantly, you will not dare to anchor in the difficult city of Conquest where the free port is always full and all the other parkings are payed for. Many people, surprised by the configuration of the place, find it difficult to embark. So, if you decide to start from there, take precautions, get an hour before. Shuttles are organised to get you to Fromveur II. During the seasons another solution is to embark from l'Aber-Ildut, in the North or Camaret, in the South.

Sightseeing

■ BOURG DE LAMPAUL

Lampaul is the village of the island, it is also a meeting point as you land to negotiate on how to discover the island (bicycle, walk? the choice is difficult) or where to have lunch or a drink before your departure of the boat. Here, you will find almost everything: supermarket, bars, restaurants, bakery, pharmacy, school. You can also rent bicycles for a tour of the island, to get information at the tourist office and if you wish, visit the church. It should be noted that its bell tower was built thanks to the donations from the British crown after the shipwreck of the Drummond Castle. Going down, you get to the Lampaul port where there is the sailing school, the diving club and the lifeboat. At the south-western end, the view of the beautiful Lampaul bay is so unreal and so magnificent. Finally, it is in Lampaul that takes place most of the festivities of the International Exhibition of the island's book.

Do you know the cough? It is one of the emblematic species of the site. The island of Ouessant, as well as the archipelago of Molène, is an interesting bird site, as numerous species of birds make their nests here while others are just passing by. Indeed, 400 bird species have been counted at the time of migrations including 150 to 200 sedentary species. You can also see a colony of seals. At the beginning, the centre was created as a naturalist and migratory birds observation site. Activities of environmental education are also available. Themed visits are organised to thoroughly explore the rich biodiversity of the island of Ouessant. About forty beds are offered to accommodate different categories visitors (scientists, students, young people) for a night or more in the biosphere reserve of the Iroise sea.

Open all year. Low season: every day from 11am to 5pm; Tuesday to Sunday from 1.30pm to 5.30pm. High season: every day from 10.30am to 6pm. Reservation for groups. Free for under 8-year-olds. Adult: €3.50. Child (from 8 to 14 years old): €2.40. Group: €2.80. €4.50 (Finistère Passport). Guided tour: adult €1.20/group adults: €1. It is here that was created the first eco-museum of France in 1968. Upon entering, you get the feeling that time has stopped. The houses are typical of the traditional architecture of the area. They are designed with ground floor and roofs in a very functional way. Note the openings on the floor, small and located on the upper end of the façades. The interior layout also attracts the visitors. A partitioning system with two parts of similar size at both ends of the house. One of them furnished with a table, bench, bench cases and equipped with a fireplace is the daily lounge. The room located at the other end has the same layout, but its decoration is fancy and its wood polished. This is the ceremonial section of the house, used on special occasions. In both houses, furniture, engravings objects, photos and costumes also bear witness to the riches of the island in the last century.

■ ÎLE DE KELLER

Towards the north, you can see an island with only one house. This small rocky island of 0.28km<sup>2</sup> is since the beginning of the 20th century a private estate. Every summer, the members of this family move into their house, a former sheepfold transformed into a home still without running water nor electricity. This island is well known to ornithologists as it is a bird sanctuary of first importance: cormorants, sea gulls, oystercatcher birds, small penguins, ruddy turnstones and puffins nest here in peace. You can admire them using binoculars from PEN Ru Meur point. From there, you can feel the strong marine current separating the island of Keller from the island of Ouessant.

The museum of the lighthouses and beacons could only be installed in Ouessant. Indeed, the outskirts of the island and those of the archipelago of Molène are known to all the sailors of the world for its danger. Ouessant has 5 lighthouses, many beacons and landmarks used for navigation. The museum, setup in the former power station of the Creac'h lighthouse, presents the history of the maritime markings. It also evokes the many shipwrecks which took place around and the epic construction of some monuments like the Jument lighthouse. Several Fresnel lens and other optical objects are exhibited. Several models and audiovisual documents complete the visit. It is a museum for enthusiasts of lighthouses but also for those who are interested in this particular heritage.

■ PEN AR LAN

From this peninsula, you will see the uproars of Fromveur, the rocks of Molène, the Four channel and its maritime traffic. On the ground, do not miss the cromlec'h, an oval wall made up of small menhirs. The site was refurbished. It is thought to an ancient astronomical observatory. Along the coast from the south, you will see the cross of Saint Paul, an annual pilgrimage site. Near the cross, the rock is still marked by the knee prints of the saint and claws of the devil. It is a myth! The valley of PEN Lan is home to the only trees growing in this hostile region, willows as well as a multitude of birds. The village of Kernoaz still has some attractive old houses. With its small dyke, Porz Arlan is a sunny harbour offering one of the rare sandy beaches on the island.

■ LE PHARE DU STIFF

Closed from September to June. High season: open every day from 10am to 12pm and from 2pm to 5pm. Adult: €2. In the seventeenth century, its construction was decided and it was built. It is therefore one of the oldest French lighthouses still in operation. But it was no longer enough to mark the entrance of the Manche: an ancient semaphore, about 100 metres below and radar setup above. Its installation came after the Amoco Cadiz sank in 1978. The Stiff bay is the main place of life, after Lampaul. She lives with the arrival of vessels that link the mainland, a few fishing boats and other that transport materials. Since summer 2011, you can climb its 104 steps to enjoy a breath-taking view of the island. Just like the five other lighthouses of Finistère, it was classified as a historical monument in November 2010.

■ LES POINTES

In Ouessant, there is no complication, you have to go around the island to appreciate these majestic natural landscapes. Of course, at times the winds may hinder respiration but it should be noted that the island has an exceptional natural heritage: jagged cliffs, rocks, steep coasts... The point of Pern is a classified site where one can observe the strong sea currents around the island. The port of Arlan with its large dyke is also a lovely place where you can see the lighthouse of Mare and Molière. But it is best to go on an adventure, follow the roads and paths, to the hamlets surrounded by walls...

Knife & Fork

■ CHEZ CAROLE

Stang Ar Glan

Sur la route du Stiff à Lampaul

Open for lunch and dinner. À la carte: Around €15. Crepe or pancake made with butter: €3.

You need to be attentive to find this excellent creperie with its unique charm. In this Ouessant-native residence run by a woman of the region (Ouessant is called the island of women), located along the road that goes from the port of Stiff to the market town of Lampaul, you can eat wheat pancake and buckwheat gallettes, with garnishes of exceptional quality and washed down with cider or organic apple juice. The decor is good with its unique ambience where you can also have tea or herbal teas.

■ CRÊPERIE DU STANG

Bourg de Lampaul

Bas du bourg

☎ +33 (0)2 98 48 80 94

Open daily for lunch and dinner. Booking advised. À la carte: Around €15.

You need to visit the charming port of Lampaul, protected by its high piers and its narrow entry, as confined as the port itself. Going up to the market town, you will certainly not fail to visit Crêperie du Stang, run by Mr and Mrs Masson. In its pleasant decor, without excessive flourishing nor ostentatious signs of tradition, you will enjoy authentic buckwheat gallettes and wheat pancakes, made on biligs and decorated with fresh garnishes. You would not resist being tempted by Saint-

Jacques aux algues ou la Molénaise à la saucisse fumée sur le goémon. After a maple syrup pancake, you are ready to visit the museum of Lighthouse and Beacons.

■ LE FROMVEUR

Rue du Fromveur

Bourg de Lampaul

☎ +33 (0)2 98 48 81 30

Open daily for lunch and dinner. Menu from €13.50 to €44. Children's menu: €8.

It is the restaurant-brasserie you can not miss, at the center of the market town of Lampaul. Its terrace ideally located on the street is however very calm, because traffic is limited on the island. In this pleasant place, outside as well as in the dining room, the carte will reveal to you the riches of the place like seafood, crabs, langoustines or scallops, but also lamb, Ouessant being an island whose second population after Man is sheep. After a terrine de congrou ou de chevreau au lambig (apple brandy), you will continue with schilgig, saucisse fumée aux mottes. After some sweets, why not take a room above, since the restaurant has a hotel.

■ HÔTEL-RESTAURANT LA DUCHESSE ANNE

Bourg de Lampaul

Aux aubords de la Mairie

Open daily for lunch and dinner. Menu from €15 to €28.50 (daily menu: €12). Children's menu: €8. Lunch menu: €12.

It is certainly the restaurant which has the most beautiful view. From the dining rooms, you can admire the savage beauty of Lampaul while eating, like the Pern and Porz Doun points as well as the Jument and Nividi lighthouses. Comfortably seated in this classic dining room, you will certainly go for seafood. Oysters, mussels or seafood platter are obviously served, but do not neglect the cassoulet of scallops with vegetables. Continue with a filet de lieu jaune aux algues et coquillages before tasting for example a tarte tatin. You are now ready to discover the landscape in front of which you dine so well.

■ TY KORN

Bourg de Lampaul

☎ +33 (0)2 98 48 87 33

Open all year. Tuesday to Saturday for lunch and dinner. July and August open all day. Booking advised. Set menu at €31. Children's menu: €10. Wifi.

You cannot ignore this establishment, when you visit the centre of Lampaul. First, as its name suggests in breton, it is located at the corner of two streets forming an acute angle. (Ty Korn means corner house). It is the only pub of the island that serves excellent beverages. When you look at the carte, you will know that it is a restaurant of high-quality, serving dishes prepared on the spot with fresh produce, therefore explaining the absence of some seafood, during storms. The tartare de haddock à la ciboulette et betteraves will give you a glimpse of the house. Its filet de bar de ligne à la réglisse, fondue de céleri, can assure you of Mademoiselle Kennedy-Campbell's talents, an experienced chef. You can be served viande d'agneau or even a vegetarian meal. Clearly, it is impossible to spend a few days in Ouessant without visiting this place at least once.

Lovers of a natural life will enjoy the wild state of Ouessant Island. If you are a real camper, looking for a campsite without Mobil-home, noisy entertainment, aqua land and bracelet around your wrist, you will be delighted to stay here in the comfort of the gentle sea breeze. Located on the outskirts of the market town of Lampaul, the sites are not demarcated, have good sanitary conditions, but charged shower rooms as water is a rare commodity on the islands. If you are nostalgic of Ireland, then camp in Ouessant whose moorish and ribin (paths) looks like those of green Erin. Use adapted equipment because the weather is not always beautiful here.

Open at the port of Stiff to boarding time and unloading of the boat. Handling of the luggage of the port of Stiff towards Lampaul and conversely. Day: €10 to €14, week: from €37 to €50 depending on the type of bicycle.

To move on the island of Ouessant, the bicycle is definitely a practical and rational choice. The size and the contours of the island allows for a marvellous visit on a bicycle. Using this modern horse, you will reach the different parts of the island where exceptional views of lighthouses, islands, reef and the horizon awaits you. If you are not a big walker, it is also the only way to go do your shopping at the market town, in case you are staying far from Lampaul.

■ LOCATION DE VÉLOS

Three companies as one chooses, either from the wharf, or in the market town of Lampaul, but beware for it goes up to the town! The cost is generally the same. Some bicycles are equipped with baskets and children seats. On foot, the keen hikers will arrive at the village, located 3.5km away, in about 40 minutes.

Open on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday to Saturday from 8.30am and from 7.30pm; Sunday and public holidays from 9am and from 12.30pm. Open on Sunday.

Coming from the continent, you obviously cannot take all your food and products along, especially for a one-week stay. Do not worry for you are not obliged to have lunch and dinner in the restaurant. The Spar, on Church square has the variety of products just like the supermarket downtown as well as some regional specialties or Opinel knives for picnickers. A cash machine is also available in this store.

Île de Sein

A few miles offshore, opposite the tip of Raz is one of the wildest and hardest points you can think of. This island is extraordinary both for its resistance to wild winds and its attractive summer lights. Sailors once said: «He, who sees Sein, sees the end». Last rampart before the immensity of the Atlantic, beating the fury of storms or to be caressed by wide breeze, like a mirage set flat on the blue horizon or in thick fog, Sein is sometimes considered the origin of the world. Harsh waves come crashing on the reef and this undulated and flat strip 6 metres above the sea made of sand and pebbles, often covered by the sea and pushing the inhabitants over the rooftops, has always been a challenge and a nightmare to sailors. However, most people prefer living here; at the beginning of 20th century, the population exceeded 1000. Fish and shellfish are abundant here. Skilled and bold sailors, Sênans have identified themselves throughout their history of sea rescue. These heroic actions permitted the population of the island to avoid paying property tax. Much courage is needed to be able to live on this island given that the agitated passage of Raz de Sein is a high spot for shipwrecks and storms. This unusual setting was used for several film shootings; God needs men and very recently Elisa with G. Depardieu and V. Paradis. A Latin geographer named the island Sena in 43 and according to legend, the island was used as a grave yard for druids; priestesses' refuges have extraordinary powers. Christianised by Guénolé in the 5th century, Sein has kept for centuries the pagan rituals dedicated to the sun and the moon, so much so that priests were not welcomed. Like Ouessant, Sein has maintained for long its reputation of the island of women for the men had to go farther for a living, fishing and shopping. In the 19th century, the island was stricken by a cholera epidemic causing the women to adopt black attires from then. Nowadays, this traditional attire is only worn by old women. Women cultivated a few lean products before joyfully receiving the rector's charity and to invest on rescue operations combating the storm in small boats but the nervous islanders made them to lit fire to attract the boats for looting. Mistakes of the youth or survival are easily forgiven for the Sênans' heroism is vivid. When general de Gaulle launched the appeal on the 18th of June 1940, all valid inhabitants of the island, close to 150, met in London. Their number represented a quarter of the first revolutionists; all these made Sein the most decorated island in the country. A fortress of dams and ramparts enclosing grey houses of the narrow streets with the corners of the houses épannelés to let pass the cider barrel make the village extraordinary. Rue Charles – Foucauld leaves from the 85 cm undulated quay, broadens into a 1.40 m boulevard. You to halt the sea and the wind; everything is put in place for protection against any harsh situation and the alleys take you straight to the sea in windbreaker labyrinth. Boats with powerful engines are available to reach the island from the continent. Breath-taking, the island seems to be in the centre of the world mostly when the fog transforms the island into a bus boat. Everything is so unique in this authentic environment. Like its rivals Ouessant and Molène, Sein belongs to the Armorique Regional Natural Park with no trees over its 50 hectares, but remains of the low walls demarcating and protecting tiny cultivated plots, now covered by uncultivated land.

■ CHAPELLE SAINT-CORENTIN

The building was probably rebuilt in the 16th century. It was tiny and was of no artistic interest. The chapel housed a painted statue of Saint Corentin, an old and razed figure, holding an episcopal stick and wearing wooden grey gloves and a white mitre. To change the wind, he could point the stick towards the desired wind. If your wishes were not granted, the saint was put under penitence and recovered with wrack. Senans only had one wish: the restoration of this chapel. Thanks to Abbot Marzin, it was rebuilt and inaugurated on 13 August 1972. The original statue of the saint is due to Tudy, an artist from the island and the three stained-glass windows to a Senans family.

■ LE CIMETIÈRE

The number of “those who diet at sea” is impressive and you will find the tomb of Alain Kaminker, brother to Simone Signoret who was kidnapped with a sword during the shooting of the film La mer et les jours, in December 1958. His soul wanders with that of Marceline Cuillandre, his adoptive Senane mother.

■ ÉGLISE SAINT-GUENOLÉ

This church was constructed on the remains of the Benedictines of Landévennec built in the 12th century. In August 1790, Abbot Guillaume-Alexandre Le Guellec informed the administrators of Finistère that his church may fall in ruins and basic work were done. It is only under the offices of Abbot Le Borgne, 1898-1910 that the present church, dedicated to Saint Guénolé was rebuilt. Although it does not have any artistic style, Senans are proud of it and they worked there when they were free from their maritime profession. Men designed the stones from the shore while the women transported them here. As the Latin inscription on the main doorway «State Virtute Dei And Sudore Plebis»: «Up by the will of God and the sweat of the people.» states. A marble plaque fixed inside the church gives details of its construction in Breton- 1901 - and its consecration - on the 8th of July 1902. The superbly carved wood pulpit is a donation of the Filles du Saint-Esprit religious congregation. On its south side two curious menhirs are referred to as the «talkers».

■ MUSÉE DE L'ASSOCIATION LAGAD AN ENEZ

Open every day from June 1st to September 30th.

In the old Marin refuge at Paimpolais quay, you will discover the history of Sein Island through objects and old postcards. Rooms devoted to the Second World War.

■ PHARE D'AR MEN

About 10km west of the island and 29.80 metres above sea level, on a cliff by the ocean, is the Ar Men lighthouse. Opened in 1881, its construction took 14 years at the cost of enormous efforts. Classified in the hierarchy of "paradise, purgatory or hell" by the guards, it belongs to the last category. The conditions of the construction of the lighthouse were very dangerous for relieve, the state of the sea sometimes forbidding approach to the lighthouse and some workers were stucked there for several weeks. Swept by the swell, the supply ship had to carry out acrobatics. The pilot of the ship showed proves of an incomparable control so as to preserve the lives of his men. An epic which ended in 1990 due to its automation.

Morbihan Islands

Île d'Arz

Nestled in the heart of the gulf of Morbihan, the Arz Island, an archipelago of nine islands is seen from afar, identified by the slim spire with its bell tower. Flat and relatively wild, it gave way to generations of master captains, especially from the era of sailing ships. The last was Jean Bulot, captain of Abeille Flandres, one of the most powerful offshore tugs in the world used in towing ships in Quessant. Considering the strict territory of the island, it reached an area of 269 hectares (during high and low tides), 330 ha if we add small dependent islands. In a starfish shape, it is about 3.5 km long and wide to the north-south and to the East-West. Its terrain is not very pronounced: the highest point «peaks» at 19 m in the village and the second «summit» is at Billihervé, in the place modestly called «mountain» which is 13 m high. However, this place will give you a nice view of the whole horizon. Meaning «bear» in Breton, the island offers the spectacle of a succession of countryside plunging sea and deserves a trip to the most beautiful spring days. The village is also very picturesque with its narrow streets, whitewashed houses with colorful shutters and its hydrangeas flowered gardens, camellias and mimosas. Since 2010, the island is full agricultural renaissance thanks to young farmers trained in organic farming, who moved there.

The Gulf of Morbihan is undoubtedly one of the most visited sites in Brittany. Its calm gulf, protected from the winds, offers a real inland sea in the heart of the ocean, dotted with 42 islands and islets, making it a remarkable site, is very popular among tourists and nature lovers! The boat bus of the Gulf will enable you visit two of the largest islands: the island of Arz and the Ile aux Moines. Departures shuttles takes place from the maritime station of Vannes, but equally from Senna (Barrara'ch) or Port Navalo. During the low seasons there are 12 crossings to-from/day. In high season (July / August) count up to 18 crossings between 6: 45am and around 7: 45pm, leaving a certain choice! It takes only 30 minutes to reach the island of Arz, sandy beaches, hiking trails, its mudflats, its exceptional fauna and flora. To reach the Ile aux Moines, 1-2 Crossings / daily available from April to October (from valves or Port Navalo). Over the same period, three excursion ideas (tourist boat tours) are available with or without stops on one or both islands, with anecdotes and comments from real sailors!

■ L'ÉGLISE DE LA NATIVITÉ DE NOTRE-DAME

The 12 century Nativité de Notre-Dame church was refurbished in 1396, 1412, 1553, and between 1836 and 1840. Inside, you can see a polygonal font embedded in the wall and two angels holding a badge above, in the corners of the frame of the nave. The "Déposition de la Croix" painting, an artwork by Lhermitais de Vannes (1700-1758), dates back to 1754. The church is classified as a historical monument.

■ LE MOULIN À MARÉE DE BERNO

To the northwest of the island, we discover the dam and the Berno water-mill dating from the sixteenth century. Note that the Berno water-mill still works thanks to volunteers who restored it for 6 years. At the initiative of Jean Bulot, known as «the storm man», a retired captain of the «Abeille Flandre» tow-boat who restored the water-mill of Arz Island abandoned since the beginning of the century. In June 2000 the mill was ready to start a first draft. It is, with that of the Bréhat Island, one of the few mills in France to work identically.

■ LE PRIEURÉ

Created in 1008, the Prieuré Notre-Dame was rebuilt in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. It now has a town hall and a school and offers a remarkable view of the Morbihan gulf and the Ilur Island. From there, two small roads link to Liouss tip and its dolmen, one passing through the Glénan Islands nautical centre (to the left), the other through Brouel tip (to the right).

■ LE TOUR DE L'ÎLE

The southern part of the island is certainly the most wild and a visit by walk will be good. Returning to the market town, do not hesitate to make a stopover at the sixteenth century Kernoel manor. Along this course, the many beaches are perfect for a swim without any danger for children. The coastal path that surrounds the island allows you to observe all the birds that live there: tadornes de Belon, aigrettes-gazettes, ducks and wading birds of all kinds.

Belle-Île-en-Mer

It is the largest of the islands in Ponant and one of the highest, up to 71 m above the sea and 14 km offshore Quiberon. All the landscapes are gathered here : fertile, arid moors, cliffs and rugged coasts of the Atlantic facade with the famous crags of Port-Coton and the amazing Apothicairerie cave, sandy beaches overlooking the continent. You can also find fig trees, laurels, mimosas, palm trees and camellias on this Island and many famous artists have been here for inspiration: Prévert, Claude Monet, Courbet, Matisse, Vasarely, Flaubert, Proust, Derain, Colette, Sarah Bernhardt... It takes a full day to cover this Island by car and the coastal path reserved for pedestrians covers nearly 100 km around the island. This Island has been severally invaded and human existence on it dates back at 3000 BC while the landscapes, the villages and fields have been there since 1000. A haven of choice and a relais to British Isles, Belle-Île has been severally invaded: Norman Celts and Romans. In the 5th century, it was evangelized by Breton-natives and the marquis Gondi lord built the in the first fortress in 16th century. Mid-17th century, Fouquet became owner of the island. Superintendent of Louis XIV, he decided to continue the work of fortification. At the beginning of the 18th century, the king rented the island after having bought it from the Indian Company. A great heritage, the English coveted and occupied it from 1761 to 1763. Until then, Bellilois were not owners of the land or their houses. The buildings burned down during the successive invasions were rebuilt in a precarious way. If the last English occupation only lasted two years, however it was destroyed in the built heritage and flooded vaults and public buildings. Once again French in 1763, its lands were divided between all the inhabitants to whom 78 Acadian families were added two years later, thrown out from Canada. Small low ceiling houses, topped by an attic and sheltered by a equal gable roof were built with the help of subsidies in kind. During the revolution, the island was isolated by the English privateer then Belle-Île invested in agriculture, fishing in particular sardine and fish canning facilities. This island mainly lives on tourism and is very popular to famous artists. Four towns make up the canton of Belle-Île. Around these four boroughs accommodate more than 100 villages worth visiting. To spend more than a day on this small paradise, an excursion by bus will allow you to appreciate the main historical sites and emblematic scenes (get more information at the tourism office). The island is inhabited all year round by nearly 5000 inhabitants with a vast market, so it is needless to bring many items. You can buy your fresh products every morning in the Palais market (all year round) or every Sunday morning in Locmaria and in the farm-product exhibitions of the "tour of Flavours". Taste the delicious tomatoes, strawberries and the melon of Belle-Île. Health and first aid services, bank agencies (with dispensers) are also found on the island.

Le Palais

The Palace is the administrative and economic «capital». It is the smallest and most populated town with more than 2500 inhabitants. Its port is the main door to the mainland both for the transportation of passengers and goods. The Palace offers a unique military historical heritage in France to visitors.

Closed in January and on December 25th. Open every day. Flexible schedule dependings on the season. Free for under 10-year-olds. Adult: €7.50. Child (from 10 to 16 years old): €4.50.

Fortified by Vauban, the « Amour of the Atlantic » overlooks the port of Palace. This remarkable military architecture that was recently renovated still retains traces of the fortified castle of the dukes of Gondi and Retz that could not be erased by the modifications of the 19th century. The construction of the urban wall was only realized between 1802 and 1877. This group of ramparts moats and bastions are proves of the 19 century military architecture and it is a good place for a pleasant and interesting walk. Private property since 1960, it houses a museum which tells the fascinating story of Belle-Île, its famous men and the artists who loved it. You will also discover the daily life of sailors and fishermen. Temporal exhibitions are organized there.

Annaig Lorec, lace embroidery designer for 20 years now and a real inexhaustible lace specialist, will be happy to help you discover her work in her artistic crafts shop, Grenier de Manon, located opposite the church. You can find crystal curtains of lace or creations of unique lace pieces like jackets, dresses for example, but also tablecloths, lampshade covers... made with lisle thread. Annaig Lorec also offers custom-made curtains, restores ancient works and offers crochet work training for beginners or to those willing to improve their standard. Moreover, reception is particularly charming; fans, you would be wrong if you chose to deprive yourself from this.

Bangor

Bangor was founded by monks from d'outre-Manche in the 6th century.

This small town has 800 inhabitants living in thirty villages grouped around many valleys that resort towards the sea. Bangor is the interior town of the island. Its white and low houses huddle around the church which replaced an old Roman chapel. It also has the wildest part of the island and most exposed to the southwest winds. The beautiful beaches of Herlin, Kérel or Donnant are located on the rocky coast. The spectacular shaped rocks are legion.

■ LES AIGUILLES DE PORT-COTON

Aiguilles de Port-Coton is undoubtedly the most famous site on the island. Many painters were fascinated by the beauty of the jagged rocks. Amongst them is Claude Monet, who through a few famous paintings, revealed the splendour of the place. The name Port-Coton comes from the foam which during stormy weather forms large sparkling flakes comparable to cotton.

■ LE GRAND PHARE

The Goulphar lighthouse, whose construction plans were designed by Augustin Fresnel went operational in 1836; its tower is 52 metres high. You can have access to the lantern through the 213 granite steps followed by an iron staircase. On a bright day, the panoramic view of the island and the continent, from Lorient to Croisic is simply beautiful. It is one of the greatest lighthouses in France.

■ LA PLAGE DE DONNANT

Nestled below the cliffs, this beautiful and imposing golden sandy beach, which delights the eyes with an outstanding landscape, is a paradise that attracts family members and friends who come to have fun in summer. People do not come here for its calmness but for the show of its turbulent and raging waves. It is an ideal destination for surfing and body-board lovers. In July and August, swimming is supervised from 1 pm to 7 pm.

Locmaria road, take the 4th on the left.

Open on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday to Saturday; Sunday.

On the road to Bangor at Locmaria, you will find a restaurant as you take the fourth Street to your left. Everything here is organic and natural since twenty-five years now. Fabrice and Lydie will welcome as in a family or friendship. You will start with the basic product of the house: bread. About forty different kinds are available, moulded and handmade then baked in the oven of the forge. An organic grocery store is available here and you will find all sorts of products like cosmetics, domestic products, spices, cheese, and vegetables. We also organize bread and chocolate making courses and more generally organic or alternative cuisine, gluten-free for example. The place is worth a visit because of the quality of its product.

Locmaria

The highest point of the island, this municipality founded in 1070 with over 830 inhabitants is divided into 33 villages. It differentiates itself from other municipalities of the island by its well-developed agriculture, its dense habitation, its important hamlets and the surprising lack of maritime activities. Its sweet and wild coast offers the highest cliffs of the island as well as the beautiful and great beaches of Port Andro, Samzun and Grands Sables (2 Km of fine sand ideal for water sports).

■ L'ÉGLISE ET LE BOURG DE LOCMARIA

In its Romanesque style, the Notre-Dame-de-Locmaria church is the oldest building in Belle-Île. It has a 17th century choir and an 18th century turret bell tower. Legend has it that Dutch pirates cut down a tree in front of the church for their mast. The trunk was deformed by Notre-Dame and it could no longer be used. Many pilgrims also go there to thank Notre-Dame-de-Bois-Tors.

■ LA PLAGE DES GRANDS SABLES

With its 2 km of fine sand, it is the longest beach of Belle-Île. Like the other beaches of the interior coast, it is well protected from dominant winds. It is supervised in July and August (from 1pm to 7pm) and is perfect for water sports.

Sauzon

It is the second municipality of the island. Its name might be derived from the presence of Saxons on the shores after the Romans.

The main activity of this beautiful small port has been fishing. It also housed the first fish canning factory by 1843. Today, it attracts a few fishermen of crayfish, lobsters and hermit crab. Like the rest of the island, Sauzon displays is made of attractive landscapes

■ L'APOTHAICAIRERIE

Among the numerous caves dotted along the coast of Belle-Île, this one is without doubt the most famous and even the most beautiful. It owes its name to the cormorants that once live there, on the interior corbel of the rock like jars on the shelves of a pharmacy. Due to the danger it presents, access to the Apothicairerie cave is forbidden but the panorama offered by the site on the wild coast and the moor is unique.

■ LA POINTE DES POULAINS

Dominated by a small automatic lighthouse with a range of 23 miles and whose autonomy is ensured by its solar panels, the site offers a spectacular view. Closed from October 1st to March 31st. Open at All Saints holidays. Open every day. Menu at €22. À la carte: Around €25. Children's menu: €8.

A good idea, this restaurant on the banks of the small port of Sauzon. Here, the cuisine revolves around seafood. Considering the location of the hotel you can be assured of fresh seafood, they practically leave the boat to the dish. On sunny days the view is pleasant from the terrace overlooking the stretch of water. The fish soup is naturally present. You maybe tempted by a good number of lemon pannacotta which is a delight or some oysters with bread, salted butter and muscadet. As for the whelks mayonnaise, they will satisfy with enthusiasm more than one person, you need to keep a little space in your stomach for the dish, filet de julienne for example or beef steak, for those who don't enjoy marine food. A far Breton later, and very perked up, you ready to explore the ways of Belle-Île.

creperielameremichele@wanadoo.fr

Open from February 21st to November 15th and during Christmas holidays. Continuous service in season. Late-evening service. À la carte: Around €15.

Did you ever eat pancakes and cakes or didn't you know all their flavours when freshly turned on biligs and garnished with ultra-fresh toppings? This is the time to jump on a boat to Belle-Île, postpone all other cases and go to Sauzon, where you will find the creperie Mere Michel overlooking the harbour to its full height. Installed in the warm room with regional style decoration, you'll be spoiled for choice by the menu adorned with the famous cat Mother Michel lost. Among the galette specialities try the «Palate» (Scallops nuts, fondue of leeks) or «Tasting» (assorted vegetables – onions, tomatoes, mushrooms, leeks – on a pancake egg cheese, ham, bacon, andouille sausage, crème fraîche). But keep a little space for pancakes as the «mother Michele» (banana gilded with butter, ball of nappée vanilla homemade chocolate and flambée with rum) or Sarah Bernhardt (chocolate, grilled crushed peanuts). This is good, welcome is friendly and it is delighted with the meal that you will go and stretch your legs on the port.

■ RESTAURANT ROZ AVEL

Place de l'Église ☎ +33 (0)2 97 31 61 48

Annual closing of mid-November has mid-December and of January 1st in mid-March. Open Thursday to Tuesday. Menu from €30 to €50. Lunch menu: €24. American Express. Groups welcome. Terrace.

It is good to be hungry at Belle-Île and Sauzon especially because Roz Avel, the windy hill in Breton, can overcome the toughest of them, and this in the most pleasant way possible. In this large Belle-Île house that reigns in the descent towards the port, on the church square, you will find a very comfortable room, or depending on the time a very pleasant terrace. The menu reveals local inspirations combined with those of world cuisine, for our greta delight: homemade duck foie gras in Chinon wine and spiced pear jam blueberries, lobster medallions on cep carpaccio and beetroot vinaigrette, the steak «of the Spray» (VBF) and seasonal vegetables sauce cherries and black cherry, seared fillet of sea bass with saffron cotriade way, return from fishing depending on market supply, warm Belle-Île goat on salad, iced nougat on biscuit with lemon marmalade and clementine coated with organic black chocolate Mokaya. A symphony of flavours

Île de Groix

«What is the source of its name, fairy or mystery? « sang Gilles Servat, in the early 70's of dreams and powder, at a time when Brittany got innovated by the intercession of new bards conceived earlier than this in the criss-cross dug by Alan Stivell. Gilles discovered his skills here, a stone's throw from Port-Tudy, where graffiti were spread which opted for a new Brittany. At Claude Pouzoulic, where he slept in a discount serving sailing centre, he composed an ode for the island where he met his first love. Indeed a place full of inspiration for Yann-Ber Calloc'h grew up here and named one of the three boats of the Compagnie Morbihannaise de Navigation after him, and his poem «Me zo gannets e kreiz ar mor» was used to name a second poem, but the music was given to it later, by Jeff Penven the «musical censor» of Bodadeg ar Sonerien, the Assembly of the ringers. E kreiz ar Mor. Found in the heart of the waves, Groix is an outstanding island with a simple, welcoming and authentic population only four km from the coast. Gwraç'hou Kroaz? Island of the «fairy» or «mystery»? «Cross»? Etymologists can't make it out. One could think that it was a former druidess's college or «wife of the other world», ferrywoman, psychopompe and probably instructor... Tuna fishing is best here, but Groix will always lean on recent pasts linked entirely to albacore tuna, a real aristocrat with white and delicate flesh whose caparisoned iron example serves as huge weathercocks on the bell tower of the church where it had for a long time dethrone the cockerel with «Gallic» single homophony (Gallo in Latin). At the beginning of the previous century, dundeas tuna boats, sailing boats, fast race, occupied the entire port, when they came back from the countryside from the gulf of Gascogne.» One could cross over the port, from one pier to another», proudly proclaimed José Calloc'h, one of the dowel worker of the eco-museum which was opened in 1981 in one of the last canning factories of the island. José, with a Benedictine patience, teaches knots to scholars or one-day trainees: chair knots, reef knots, star knot, listening, 8 and double chair knots. For years now, José like a Killdara virgin watches over the island. In its cave, the Grüssenheim- Alsace lifeboats get in touch with many books of Yann-Ber Calloc'h's students. His tomb is found in the cemetery of Groix, made of sarcophagus slates where one of the first inhabitants of this island was buried; a 1900 structure used by women to till the soil or harvest behind-tan, «fire wrack» used for warming objects. Visit Groix for its extraordinary natural heritage, its vast sandy beach embed with garnets at the reserve of tip of cats where amateur geologists or the curious can admire green schist and other glaucophanes.

Île d'Hoëdic

Houat and Hoëdic, these affectionately named «two sisters», translated into English as «duck» and «duckling», are different from Batz or Bréhat northern pitfalls, separated from the continent by a narrow trickle of water. Undertake a 45 minutes journey to discover Houat and Hoëdic, from Quiberon, on Dravanteg catamaran which takes much of its proportions «the stone trough» of Saint-Gildas, as the huge ferry vomits its dozens of automobile near Belle-Ile-en-Mer. Houat and Hoëdic, 950 hectares and 250 hectares respectively are isolates with limited touristic facilities and the two sisters remained isolated for a long time from the continental world, and its inhabitants lived according to their laws, needs and possibilities. A maritime republic... Simon the rector created in the 19th century the «canteen», a kind of supermarket before time for the interest of his flocks for loans without interest- canteen-keeper, tax collector... midwives. A «charter» was drafted and adopted in 1822 by the inhabitants of the two islands as a constitution until its prohibition in 1891 by a Third Republic which rejected exemptions from the sacro-saint principle «of unity» and especially «indivisibility»! Direct democracy under the Moorish arpents beaten by salty winds: to this fateful date, meetings were held trice a year to make decisions on the fate of the community, white and red beans were used as botanical paper ballots! Authentic and hard worlds described by the writer Alphonse Daudet in 1875: «as we come closer, the appearance changes, the real ground heated by the sun and the sea surfaces. The dull, vast and calm village overlooks the cliff and a few low houses face a belfry. The slopes, the almost invisible valleys, nomadic, thin wild vegetation all make the place deserted». The portrait outlined by the author of Letters of my mill is very dramatic and tourists can enjoy the attractive island with colourful and sparkling gorse in the blazing light of the sea, a covered island with bright thistle flowers, tamarisks, wild roses and many others. If Hoëdi is this small and flat, Houat, with its high cliffs and long sandy beaches is as attractive as the Beautiful – island and the convex beach of Treac'h er Goured located in the North-East. The white houses, wisely aligned on both sides of the main street around the outdoor or the monument of the four children who died during the 1914 war give Houat a cheerful and colourful facet not common in the Western islands of Brittany.

The entire fortress was restored and there you will find an example of military architecture of the nineteenth century. The fort is open to the public thanks to the Conservatoire du Littoral, the association for the management of the Fort and the Melvan association provide you with documentation that is constantly updated on the flora, fauna or the historical heritage. The association for the management of the Fort organises discovery tours of the flora, fauna, heritage and foreshore in summer.

■ LE MENHIR DE LA VIERGE

The Menhir of the Virgin is an average monolith dating from the 5th millennium BC. It measures approximately 4.10 m high and 2.30 feet wide. Its appearance is similar to the large erected steles from the land of Locmariaquer. In the upper part of the menhirs, you can see a small niche that bears witness to its christianisation in 19th century, from the statue of the Virgin Mary which is found here. An iron stump at the top of the building seems to form the remains of a cross at the top of the building. The menhir was listed as a historic monument in 1926.

Île d'Houat

Before the Neolithic Era, the Quiberon peninsula was extended by Houat (meaning «duck» in Breton) and Hoëdic («duckling») in the town of Saint-Nazaire and the sea – level was then lower than today. The island consists of high granite cliffs shaped by beautiful sandy beaches that hosted Saint-Gildas in the 6th century, a Breton monk who founded Abbaye de Rhuys. The Saint-Gildas church, built in 1766 left its remains on the island. Houat was coveted by the English and was fortified by Vauban. The royalists who survived Quiberon attack ended up in Houat which also served as a refugee camp in Cadoudal. Today, pretty White houses with blue shutters brighten the fascinating town dotted with narrow and flowery streets. The village is located below Saint-Gildas port with some thirty attractive fishing boats. Traditional fishing is still the main economic activity and nature reigns everywhere. The jagged coast is bordered by a foot-path and the attractive sand of the dunes with scarce and varied flora such as fragrant lilies, protected species found only on the Algarve. The beautiful beaches of Treac'h er Goured and Treac'h er Salus, the rocky peaks north of the island or the small forts on the Moor are worth visiting. The ruins that surround the southern part of the Beach were made when the port was destroyed on one terrible winter night in 1951 by a weak storm. Thanks to the solidarity of the entire nation, Houatais built the new port. Finally, Houat enjoys an exceptional sunshine with active and attractive clouds.

■ MUSÉE DE L'ÉCLOSARIUM

Open from beginning of May to end of September.

Compared to the small port, it is on the other side; you have to cross the island in its width. The walk is also very pleasant. This space is dedicated to the study of marine microscopic world under the theme of the feeding sea. It is both an observatory and a venue for the general public. You will learn a lot about Houatais lifestyle, but you will be taught about the importance and fragility of the marine ecosystem. The écloarium also hosts exhibitions of Morbihan painters.

Île aux Moines

This island is inhabited since the Neolithic Era as epitomized by many dolmens. Erispoë the king of Brittany offered the island to the monks of Abbaye de Redon in the 9th century. The islanders supplied agricultural products especially fava beans and beans to the monastic community and in the 10th century, the island was attacked by Normans like the Arz Island. Barely 500 m separate the cross-shaped island from the landing stage of Port-Blanc and yet at the end of the five minute crossing, it is a complete change of scenery. This island consists of low white walls fishermen's houses, high captains houses in attractive cut stones, distinctive lights and planted small gardens with thousand scents and colours with Morbihan golf and has welcomed many painters and writers who came for inspiration.

Come and discover on foot or on bicycle these contrasting landscapes along its paths overlooking mini hills descending into mini valleys and crossing mini woods with exotic names: Love wood, breath wood, remorse wood... Formerly known as Izenah, dotted with pine trees, fig trees and wild roses with fountains, small chapels, ruins of old windmills, megalithic remains, île aux Moines or «Pearl du golfe», as people call it mainly depends on tourism.

Its famous captains marked the history of this island, the society was stratified according to maritime hierarchy so much so that sailors and captains families never mingled, not even for marriages consequently like in Ouessant, maidens could choose their husbands themselves. In 19th century, a large three-master fleet fritters and humid schooners anchored on the Great Beach.

Like her neighbour Arz Island, île aux Moines has several species of birds. Come at the end of autumn and winter until to discover species of geese.
