2 years ago, I was in jail where my mother, who lives locally, was charged $12.95 per phone call, whether we stayed on the phone for 15 minutes or not. When she could get up to put money in for me, it cost me 2.97 to call her. However, I couldn't call my father because out-of-state rates were far too much. He didn't hear from me for a few months because I couldn't afford to call him and let him know what was going on.

It is important for all families to remain connected, even those with a family member in prison. The incarcerated are paying for their mistakes; don't make the families pay as well. It was crazy-expensive to get a call from our son in jail. When he was in jail in Georgia, we got calls that asked us to call back using 3 or 4 digit number. No one told us how.

It was to a company that Georgia jails subscribe to. We found this out the DAY HE WAS RELEASED.

$1.00 per minute for kids to speak to a parent in prison is evil. Our society needs inmates who return home from prison to have family ties. It is for ALL OUR BENEFIT that families be able to keep in touch with the imprisoned. To allow these 3 phone companies to charge up to $1.00 per minute is evil.

Please reinstate capitalism and stop these 3 companies from charging outrageous fees to the poorest of us all. WE ARE ALL Hurt when inmates lose touch with the family.

I strongly support FCC regulation of in-state call charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow all family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Thanks for re-thinking this regulation.

I lived with unmanageable phone bills for many years, and with speaking only once a month to my dearest friend, until Massachusetts allowed prisoners to have a phone number list and deduct the cost of CALLING DIRECTLY, NOT COLLECT from their personal accounts. I, Adam Liggat, strongly support FCC regulation of in-state call charges in the prison phone industry. It is without question, unacceptable to charge poor people to simply talk to members of their family or friends. In every day life, we as human beings, talk to one another and when we go away from our loved ones, we have the luxury to be able to pick up a phone and simply dial a number to be able to talk to our loved ones. Surely there are members of your own company who can go home from work and contact any member of their family or any close friends without having to worry about how much the phone bill costs? So why charge an astronomically high amount of money to poor people for them to contact their own loved ones? It is disgusting, in my opinion and I'm sure of many others opinions in the world, that there are companies including yourself that are even considering charging poor people to make phone calls. Lets not forget to mention the amount of profits that you are making. The profits of which more than likely pay your staff to come in every day and fill out sheets of paper which look good to the public eye. So it is only that I ask of one thing, please implement regulations that will allow all family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates, or to in fact, scrap the whole charging system all together. Then think of how much a happier, closer, and freer world this could be for poor people.

Adam Liggat

Dear Sirs and Mesdames:

I am personally acquainted with children who have had a parent serving time in prison. Life for these kids is hard enough because of the separation they endure without having the added financial burden of high phone rates that make contact more difficult. Kids need their parents, even if all they can have of them for a season is by telephone. Please don't allow phone companies to make it harder to have that little bit of contact available to them by profiteering on prisoners and their families.

I strongly support FCC regulation of in-state call charges in the prison phone industry. I ask that you please implement regulations that will allow all family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Sincerely, Catherine Young

Operating prisons for profit creates invidious incentives. Just as with the corrupt and brutal LA sheriff's deputies, allowing such practices as phone-call gouging are certain to cause worsening problems.

Please implement regulations that will allow all family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It is not fair that we have to pay for higher rates as if we were overseas. A lot of us are unable to go visit our loved ones due to the distance or because we do not have a way to get there, therefore, it would be great that we can talk to or loved ones over the phone at least two or three times a week without having to pay high prices.
