my garden at perch hill

To visit Perch Hill next spring, please pre-book at sarahraven.com

Here is our SPRING catalogue, with more dahlias, cut flower collections, veg seedlings and sweet peas than ever before. We're also putting an even stronger focus on nature-friendly gardening. I want to make our gardens absolutely full of colour and beauty, but also make sure that they provide habitats and food for birds, butterflies and bees. The more I garden, the more I realise our own back yards can make a difference to the way the world is going - and because our gardens combined cover such a large area, if we all club together, there is a chance of slowly turning things around. Spring is such an optimistic time. It's a moment to make a new start, to ensure our own small part of the world is better, more vibrant and more beautiful. So that's the recipe here, full-on life and full-on colour in the garden!

- remember they're edible. Scatter their colourful petals over salad

Bulbs in the green are bulbs for planting in active growth with their leaves just beginning to die back.

These bulbs do better planted like this in the spring. It's like lifting a clump from your own garden; they settle in quickly and will start to flower from the following year. After three years you can lift and divide your own and spread them around your garden.

Four reasons to grow sweet peas

- on a teepee or arch, they give almost instant height and structure to a cutting patch

- as legumes, they'll help fix nitrogen and so enrich your soil

Scented Pelargonium Collection

I'm obsessed by these four, scented-leaved pelargoniums. I pick the foliage for very long-lasting arrangements, use the edible flowers to decorate puddings, and harvest the leaves all the time to use as flavouring and to make delicious cordials (see our website for recipe ideas). PLUS they look fantastic.

BORDER perennials

Salvias are in my top five families of plants. They have incredible texture, in jewel-like colours, often flowering from late spring to winter. Salvias are brilliant for pollinators, help keep our roses fungal-free and have edible flowers. They are supremely elegant - I am passionate about almost every one.

From the top Salvia 'Amistad' (see page 57) is growing here with Salvia curviflora, 'Jezebel' (see our website for both) and Salvia 'Love & Wishes' (see page 59).
