Rediscover the joys of pudding sandwiches . . . and help TU in times of tight budgets, it can ways to support worthy causes.

But here's an idea: Why not brown bag it, and pass some of the savings on to TU? ■ Eating out can be an unexpected drain on your finances. By packing your lunch, you can save easy dollars, save commuting time and trouble, and maybe even eat healthier, too. (And, if you still have that childhood lunch pail, you can be amazingly cool again.) ■ Plus, when you share your savings with TU, you make a

Time Out

Sometimes it is good to side step the hurly-burly of routine. In this fast-paced age of instant, techno everything, sometimes it is good to slow down, to steal away. Study an old, old photograph. Sit quietly in a museum and open your imagination to just one piece of art. With your mind's eye, freeze-frame a sliver of joy to savor later.

This past April, about 125 TU students, faculty and staff stole away for a mid-week treat in Tyrrell Hall's auditorium. Beneath its stately vaulted ceiling, a standing-room only crowd was enchanted by the clarion voices of TU Opera Workshop students. Time melded; Tyrrell Hall faded into Bly House, Essex County, England; jeans and sneakers and laptops were no longer relevant in the world created by the workshopers as they sang excerpts from Benjamin Britten's opera, "The Turn of the Screw" in a dazzling one-hour performance.

Listening, one could not help but be reminded of those students and faculty and arts benefactors who came before. Listening, again time melded to 1929 and a smiling crowd of dignitaries and students at the groundbreaking ceremony for the "Tyrrell Fine Arts Building." Were they imagining our 21st century joy? How pleased they would be to know that more than a half-century later, the arts are alive and well at TU.

When the minutiae of life obscure your Big Picture, treat yourself to a time-out. TU offers myriad opportunities for you to steal away. Come to campus and freeze-frame a memory or two.

Campus Expansion Continues with Groundbreaking For Student Health and Fitness Center

With cheering students gathered on the construction site, ground was broken in April for a 67,000-square-foot student health and fitness center that will include a cardio-weight training area, a three-court gym, a suspended indoor track, two multipurpose rooms for aerobics and other activities, a student lounge and a wellness center.

"TU's new student health and fitness center is important to each and every student who calls TU home," said TU President Bob Lawless. "Any groundbreaking ceremony is a significant benchmark for a growing university, but this one is particularly meaningful because of the profound effect this center will have on the quality of life on our campus. Now TU students will have a state-of-the-art facility dedicated to their physical well being, just as our classrooms, libraries and labs enrich their minds."

The estimated cost of the facility is $12 million. Major contributors are the Grace and Franklin Bernsen Foundation, the H.A. and M.K. Chapman Charitable Trust, and Fulton and Susie Collins.

"This facility will touch every student in a major way," said TU Student Association Vice President Jennifer Geffert. "It will be our home for intramurals, for personal workouts, for wellness programs, and for just hanging out with each other. As a TU senior, I am a little sad to be graduating at what I feel is one of the most exciting times in TU history."

TU's Mabee Gymnasium, at Eighth Street and Florence Avenue, will continue to house the university's swimming pool, five racquetball courts and one squash court.

TU Students Win Goldwater, Truman and Udall Scholarships

April was a banner month for TU with students winning five major national scholarships.

Matthew Lindsey, a senior majoring in economics and political science, received a $30,000 Truman Scholarship, awarded to undergraduates who plan to attend graduate school in preparation for careers in government, the nonprofit sector or public service. Lindsey's research focuses on utility company deregulation and how to provide low-cost electricity to low-income families.

Scott, a biological sciences major, hopes to use her expertise in molecular genetics to develop an antibody-based blood test for ovarian cancer. Craft, a chemistry major, focuses her research on developing chronic pain therapeu-

Record-Setting Increase in Research Funding

External funding for research at the University for the last fiscal year was $13,997,099, an all-time record. Al Soltow, TU's director of research, said the amount is an increase of $2.7 million, or 25 percent, over the previous year, the largest increase ever.

Of the total, 59 percent was federal funding, 31 percent came from private industry, and 10 percent was provided by the state of Oklahoma and other local sources.

tics with fewer side effects than morphine. Swearingen, also a chemistry major, is researching titanium dioxide as a catalyst for water purification.

To culminate a spring filled with scholarship honors, Swearingen also has been awarded a Morris K. Udall Scholarship, which is awarded to juniors and seniors pursuing studies in the environment or Native American health care and tribal policy. The award honors the late Udall's 30 years of service in the U.S. House of Representatives.

"These scholarship achievements continue what has become a spring tradition among TU students," said TU President Bob Lawless.

All four students are active in the Tulsa Undergraduate Research Challenge (TURC), a program that offers highly motivated undergraduate students challenging research, advanced coursework and one-on-one mentoring with faculty.

TU Receives $2.79 Million To Train 'Cyber Corps'

The National Science Foundation has chosen The University of Tulsa as one of six schools to train elite squadrons of computer security experts under a new "Cyber Corps" initiative. The designation includes a grant of $2.79 million.

NSF director Rita Colwell announced the program and award May 22. The Federal Cyber Service Initiative will train the next generation of computer security experts, who will help defend the Internet against attacks.

"This grant is further recognition of the high quality of research conducted by our faculty and our students," said TU President Bob Lawless, "And the government's selection of TU to help launch this initiative demonstrates that we are at the forefront of computer security education in the nation."

TU program leaders are computer science professors Sujeeet Sheno and John Hale. Beginning this fall, each year for three years, TU will enroll 12 students in the program, which is open to juniors and first-year graduate students. Students will conduct research, often in collaboration with federal scientists, and outreach activities, such as developing information technology ethics courses for middle and high school students.

First Class of Presbyterian Leadership Scholars Attending TU

Twelve students from three states are attending the University as the first recipients of the Presbyterian Leadership Scholarships, a new program aimed at fostering young leaders who are both spiritually dedicated and academically talented.

This is the second year TU is offering the scholarships, which are renewable for up to four years. Each recipient becomes a member of the TU Presbyterian Leadership Program, which focuses on mission, leadership and spiritual development. The program holds weekly meetings and pursues service projects in Tulsa as well as occasional national and international trips.

Scholars also can take part in a trip to Scotland to study the roots of the Presbyterian Church.

KWGS 89.5 FM Installs New Transmitter

KWGS Public Radio 89.5 FM recently acquired a new all solid-state Harris "Z" transmitter capable of increasing signal strength and reliability.

"Our goal as a station is to provide listeners with continuous access to quality public radio broadcasts," says Rich Fisher, KWGS general manager. "The new transmitter represents a significant step for the station."

The new transmitter provides more stability and reliability in broadcasting, as well as decreased maintenance costs and electricity usage. The main benefit for listeners will be more public radio, with fewer interruptions in air time.

According to Brad Newman, chief engineer for KWGS, the old transmitter was finicky on tuning, with significant changes in weather causing temporary downtime for the station. The new transmitter will not be affected by temperature changes.

Funds for the new transmitter came from listener donations and a grant from the Chapman Trust.

Athletic Training Celebrated in March

March 2001 marked the first nationwide celebration of athletic training and its role in society. The National Athletic Trainer's Association led the initiative.

Many people misconceive that athletic trainers are simply "water boys or girls" working the sidelines of athletic events. The truth is quite different. Certified athletic trainers (ATCs) are involved in all aspects of athletic preparation, from prevention to rehabilitation of injuries for athletes as young as secondary school to seasoned professionals.

There are currently about 20,000 certified athletic trainers in the country and 113 accredited athletic training programs, including the one at the University. About half of all certified athletic trainers are women.

TU's athletic training department participated in an intrastate Penny War as part of its activities for March. Athletic trainers from OU, OSU and TU collected money during home basketball games in late February and early March. TU raised $440. All of the funds collected were donated to the Brian Luinstra Scholarship Fund, named in honor of the OSU athletic trainer who died in the OSU-Colorado plane crash in January.

Center for Executive and Professional Development

In order to better meet the training needs of executives in Tulsa and the surrounding areas, the Management Development Center has moved to the College of Business Administration and is now known as the Center for Executive and Professional Development.

Under the direction of Linda Adlof, the center will continue to offer quality training programs for the business community. The new location will facilitate a greater coordination and interaction with business faculty members.

The first new initiative undertaken by the center is the executive series, quarterly programs for upper managers. The first two sessions covered leadership and risk management. The last two programs will be announced later this year.

The center also will continue to offer in-company programs that are customized for each corporation's specific needs.

For more information about the new center or the programs being offered, call 918-631-2215 or visit www.cba.utulsa.edu/cepd/.

iMBA™ On-line Lauded

The inaugural class of TU's iMBA™ program just completed its first year on-line. With a higher retention rate than most on-line programs in the nation and good reviews from the students involved, the iMBA™ has been declared a success.

Enrollment for the second class is open. For more information on this program, call 918-631-3211.

Williams Risk Management Center to Open

The Williams Risk Management Center, which will offer students a master's of science degree in finance with a concentration in risk management in the energy industry, will launch its first classes in the fall.

The center will provide graduate students with the academic training and hands-on experience essential for a career in energy risk management, a burgeoning field in the age of electronic finance, deregulation, globalization and technological innovation.

College of Engineering and Natural Sciences

Defending Phone Networks from Cyberattacks

Computer Science Professors Sujet Sheno and John Hale have been awarded $977,865 by the Department of Justice and the Oklahoma City National Memorial Institute for the Prevention of Terrorism to develop systems that can defend the nation's public telephone networks against attacks by cyberterrorists.

The TU professors also head TU's Center for Information Security, where research is aimed at protecting the Internet against cyberattacks.

Sheno says the convergence of the Internet and telephone networks into a single global network "makes it possible for hackers, cyberterrorists or enemy powers to use software to disrupt vital communications from afar."

The goal of the three-year grant is to develop attack management systems that will immediately detect, identify and respond to public telephone network attacks.

TU will work closely with information technologists at Williams Communications, headed by Mark Bender, senior vice president and chief information officer, and with scientists at the U.S. Department of Commerce's National Institute of Standards and Technology in Gaithersburg, Maryland.

TU's center is the only one in the country to offer three federal certifications in information assurance. The curriculum integrates information security content within mainstream computer science courses and emphasizes computer law and policy issues.

Computer Science Professor Receives $463,294 for Research

When businesses merge, so must their information technology. Integrating critical computer systems can be a daunting task.

Rose Gamble, an associate professor of computer science at the University, has recently been awarded two research grants totaling $463,294 to find ways to make such transitions easier.

Gamble has received a three-year, $200,000 grant from the National Science Foundation and a three-year grant of $263,294 from the Air Force Office of Scientific Research to fund her work on component-based software engineering.

TU Developing Oil Clean-Up Standards

TU and three other universities will receive approximately $776,000 from the U.S. Department of Energy for a project aimed at pollution prevention and remediation at oil production sites in the Tallgrass Prairie Preserve in Osage County. The 39,000-acre preserve is home to about 1,200 bison.

TU, the University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma State University and the University of Arkansas comprise the Integrated Petroleum Environmental Consortium, which received the three-year grant. Kerry Sublette, IPEC director and Sarkeys Professor of Environmental Engineering at TU, is project leader. Other TU researchers are professors Tom Harris, chemistry, and Laura Ford, chemical engineering. Sublette says the preserve contains over 100 wells producing 15 to 20 barrels of oil per day and as much as 10 times that volume of brine.

Electrical Engineering Professor Peter LoPresti stands in TU's new Williams Communications Fiber Optic Networking Laboratory, which opened in January. The lab, under LoPresti's direction, will be used by students learning how to design telecommunications networks, professional engineers seeking training on the latest equipment, and companies researching innovations that might further revolutionize the world of communication.

Professor Named Fellow of American Welding Society

Edmund F. Rybicki, the Frank W. Murphy Distinguished Professor of Mechanical Engineering and chairman of the mechanical engineering department at TU, has been named a Fellow of the American Welding Society. Only five of the society's 51,000 members were selected to receive the award this year.

Election is based on reputation and outstanding accomplishments of the individual.

New Book Examines Literary Collaborations

English Professor Holly Laird's new book, Women Coauthors, explores literary collaborations in which women writers have played central roles.

Published by the University of Illinois Press, the book examines writing partnerships among women or between a woman and a man.

Laird, who chairs TU's English department, is the editor of the journal Tulsa Studies in Women's Literature.

Yuchi Language Project Receives $297,000

Richard Grounds, a research professor of anthropology at TU, will serve as director of a $297,300 project to preserve the Yuchi language.

"We have very few fluent speakers who can help us learn our language and carry it forward," says Grounds. "The language is vital for our ceremonies, for maintaining who we are as a people." Yuchi, also spelled Euchee, is spoken fluently now by only four elderly tribal members.

The grant of $99,100 per year to the Euchee Tribe is from the Administration for Native Americans.

"The primary emphasis of the project will be on documenting the unique language," says Grounds. He says funds will pay for three key steps: documenting the language as spoken by the current fluent speakers, who are all elders; developing a series of CD computer programs containing the language; and providing training for teachers, volunteers, students and elders so they can pass the language on to others.

Anna Norberg Named J. Donald Feagin Professor

Anna Norberg, pianist and TU professor of music, has been named to the J. Donald Feagin Endowed Professorship in Music, which was established this year by Margery Feagin Bird in honor of her late son.

"This is a most fitting and deserved recognition for Professor Norberg," said TU Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs Roger Blais. "She has been a shining example to our students for many years as both a musician and a role model."

A 1965 graduate of TU, J. Donald Feagin enjoyed a successful career in advertising and public relations alongside his many accomplishments as a musician and songwriter. He died in 1981 of cystic fibrosis.

Norberg has been a member of the TU School of Music faculty since 1976. A native Tulsan, she is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College and the Cleveland Institute of Music.

Norberg's areas of specialization include piano performance, music theory, piano literature and pedagogy, and women in music. She is a founding member of Trio Tulsa, which was established at TU in 1986 as the resident chamber ensemble.

Rudi and Mary Anne Rožsa, Roxana and Bob Lorton, March and Bob Lawless at a McFarlin Library luncheon honoring Béla Rožsa.

Concert & Competition Honors Béla Rožsa

The School of Music has established the Béla Rožsa Memorial Concert and Composition Competition in tribute to the late professor and to encourage a new generation of composers to discover and reach their full potential.

Each year, a competition will be held, and the winning composition will be performed at the annual concert. The student winner will also receive a cash prize, and his or her name will be added to a plaque in the School of Music.

Béla Rožsa was a professor at TU from 1945 to 1974. He was hired as a composer and later became head of the Department of Music Theory, director of Graduate Study and taught organ and piano. Rožsa searched for untapped potential in his students and was a passionate teacher who bestowed a lifelong love and appreciation of music upon all who studied with him.

College of Law

NELPI Students Help Tribes Assess Risks

Last November, NELPI hired three law students — Perry Eckhardt (third year), Kelly Crouch (second year), and Julia Kerstyn (first year) — as research assistants working in NELPI's Office of Tribal Environmental Management Services. NELPI is conducting a three-year research project for the Tribal Association on Solid Waste and Emergency Response, which is funded by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The project will identify (via survey) hazardous waste sites on or near Indian lands that may affect human health and the environment. In addition, a guide will be developed to assist tribes with creating risk assessments that are sensitive to cultural practices.

TU Professor Publishes Article on Adoption

Professor Marianne Blair has published "Unveiling Our Heritage: A Comparative Examination of Access by Adopted Persons and Their Families to Identifying and Non-identifying Information" in the Irish Journal of Family Law (published in two parts in September and December 2000).

Law Calendars Online

Students, faculty, staff, and alumni can now access the college's calendars by clicking the "Calendar" link on the main law school Web page — <http://www.utulsa.edu/law>. Specific calendars, such as special events, law school, alumni, or MLIC, are available. Law Librarian Dan Bell designed the calendars for the various organizations within the college and also organized the links on the calendar page.

Exploring Cyberlaw

Professor Tom Arnold gave a special presentation to approximately 45 people last October titled "Introduction to Internet Intellectual Property Law Issues."

Cybersquatting, cybergripping, domain name hijacking, linking, and framing were among the topics covered.

Gifts Help Students, Meetings/Seminars

An estate gift established the Warren L. and Billie F. McConnico Endowed Scholarship, providing financial assistance for deserving law students. Both McConnicos are TU alumni.

The William E. Douglass Endowed Scholarship, funded by Robert Douglass in honor of his son, will support an annual scholarship based on merit and need.

Ken Brune has pledged monies to establish the Annette Watkins Brune Lecture Series in memory of his wife. The gift will fund a portion of the costs for out-of-state alumni meetings where a seminar by a faculty member or the dean is presented.

Dean About Town

In addition to his teaching and scholarship, Dean Martin H. Belsky is active in the Tulsa community, having served on Magnet Schools Task Force 2000 for Tulsa Public Schools and chaired and conducted the Interfaith Dialogue for NCCJ in January 2001.

He has given speeches to various organizations on topics including informed voting and campaign financing; hate crimes and the First Amendment; the Supreme Court and the viability of Roe v. Wade; and responsibility, civility, and growing up and living with parents and others. The latter was a presentation to the National Honor Society at Jenks High School. The dean has also been in national news discussing the impact of the uncovered FBI files in the McVeigh case.

LL.M. in Indian Law

The University of Tulsa College of Law is offering the first master's program in American Indian and Indigenous Law at any American Bar Association (ABA) approved law school.

The objective of the LL.M. program is to train U.S. lawyers as well as lawyers from around the world in issues critical to adequate understanding and representation of American Indian and other indigenous peoples.

Prof. Holland Assumes New Posts

Tom L. Holland, associate dean for academic affairs and professor of law, was elected president of the Board of Directors of Neighbor for Neighbor, Inc., at its annual meeting last September. He also was appointed as the faculty athletics representative to the National Collegiate Athletic Association for TU by President Bob Lawless effective January 1, 2001.

Op Eds on McVeigh Appear Nationally

While Timothy McVeigh faced execution, Paul Finkelman, Chapman Distinguished Professor of Law, made his thoughts on the subject known across the nation with opinion articles published in USA Today, and the Baltimore Sun. As a result, he was included in a special feature on the execution that aired on Fox News April 30, 2001.

Students at TU posted “Gone Fishin’” signs on their dorm room doors and headed for the University’s indoor swimming pool for a fishing tournament sponsored by the Recreational Sports department. The pool in Mabee Gym was stocked with 300 catfish, and for $3, anglers could catch as many fish as they could carry home.

Theatre of the Rising Sun

TU Theatre pulled out all the stops for its production of Rashomon, a drama about the different ways people view the same incident and what causes them to draw the conclusions that they do.

Guest fight choreographer Michael Chin visited the campus and gave workshops on proper reactions, tension and safety in performing slaps, punches, and shoves. Japanese theatrical staging techniques, including Kabuki and the Bunraku puppet theaters, were used in the TU production.

“Kyogen”—stage helpers—helped tell the story by doing everything from serving as horses to using rice and beans to create the sounds of a rain shower. Student-actor Randy Lee Chronister even gave up his hair for his role as the priest, receiving a close shave from Lisa Wilson, TU associate professor of theater and director of the production.

“It’s fun to see the students come so far in embracing a style and making it successful,” said Wilson. “It was a challenge, but we had a good time.”

A Loving Handshake

“My teacher, Miss Robertson, this morning I have received word from the President . . . the request for clemency cannot be granted. At the present time, I am fully prepared to go . . . The day after tomorrow at nine o’clock, I shall be leaving. . . .”

Resigned to his fate, J.R. Postoak wrote Ann Robertson, the missionary whose diligent work at an Indian school evolved into the Henry Kendall College of Arts and Sciences, which became TU.

In addition to Postoak’s lament, Robertson received letters from other former students that were far less doleful. The writers reported on their families and communities, and their missionary work. W. Tanyan closed his letters by offering “a loving handshake.” Written in Creek, the letters add a rich dimension to the history of Oklahoma.

Until recently, the only way to view the letters was a trip to TU’s Special Collections. Now, thanks to a collaboration between McFarlin Library and the College of William and Mary, the Robertson letters are available on-line as part of the Creek Language Archive, a language preservation project of Prof. Jack B. Martin at William and Mary and translator Margaret Mauldin.

You can read the letters as well as other Creek material by visiting <http://www.wm.edu/linguistics/creek/>.

Trash to Treasure

Mike Sheehan, TU’s coordinator of Physical Plant Safety & Recycling Service, reports that the University has turned tons of trash to real savings.

Since 1996, the TU community has diverted the following from the waste stream:

- 16,589 pounds of aluminum;
 - 367,962 pounds of steel and other nonferrous products (mainly through the efforts of the Physical Plant, which cleans out metal products); and
 - 1,386,555 pounds of paper and cardboard.
- Environmentally, that translates to saving:
- 15,246 trees;
 - 2,287 cubic yards of landfill;
 - 58,212 gallons of oil;
 - 4,851,000 gallons of water; and
 - 2,841,300 kilowatt hours of electricity; and averting 41,580 pounds of air pollution.

Have Genes, Will Travel

In the classic debate of nature versus nurture, TU husband-and-wife researchers Charles and Mary Brown score one for heredity when it comes to cliff swallows.

In a recent study, TU biology professor Charles Brown shows that genes guide cliff swallows when they select the size of colony in which to live.

In 1997 and 1998, the Browns tagged and switched nearly 2,000 hatchlings from nests in big colonies to nests in small colonies, and vice versa. The parent birds raised the foster hatchlings along with their own. About nine months later, when the foster birds were starting their own families, the Browns report that 36 percent were found in the area where they were born, not where they were raised.

Says Brown: “They are picking the size colonies that their parents picked; so it is not environment, it is genes that appear to be dictating their choice.”

A Model Case

Architect Larry C. Kester’s firm celebrated its 20th anniversary recently with a unique sculpture of sorts — a one-of-a-kind centerpiece built by Kester’s sons, Brian and Brad.

After about 30 days and 28,000 blocks, the younger Kesters, both of whom work for the firm, completed a Lego model of TU’s new Michael D. Case Tennis Center.

After the celebration, the model was dismantled and the Legos were donated to Helping Hands, a local charity.

The real Michael D. Case Tennis Center — which Kester’s firm designed — features six indoor and twelve outdoor courts.

Currently under construction on the west side of Delaware Avenue, the tennis complex will be the site of the 2004 NCAA Men’s Tennis Championship.

Reeling 'em In

Mike Lybarger and Roy Stiner from Zebco presented Steve Tipton, TU professor of mechanical engineering, with a plaque for a patent he received (with his co-inventor Larry Hlava) long ago while doing contract work with Zebco.

The patent (owned by Zebco) is for the use of magnets to return the bail wire on a spinning reel. This is usually done by a mechanical spring that is subject to fatigue failure and is traditionally a weak link in the design of spinning reels. The magnets provide a unique alternative that will never fail.

Tipton built a functional prototype of that reel back in 1987, and the patent was issued in 1988.

Recently, strides have been made in the technology of magnets, making them stronger, smaller and less expensive. That opened the door for the practical use of this concept, and the reels with this feature are now doing very well on the market.

The Wright Way to Write a Play

Michael Wright, who teaches playwriting and screenwriting at TU, gives insight into the creative writing process in his new book Playwriting Master Class.

Wright asked seven award-winning playwrights to create an original work based on the same idea — “There is a key in an envelope in a drawer.” Interpretation and use of the sentence was left up to them.

The 207-page book contains each writer’s process, from start to finish, as they create short but complete plays. Wright includes other material, such as journal entries and follow-up interviews, to give readers a view into these playwrights’ processes, methods and thinking.

Normally, Wright explains, writing a new play occurs in solitude, “and most of us only see the finished work. This approach gives us a chance to look over the playwright’s shoulder as they work.”

Zhou Xiaojing will be back at TU this summer to hold another session of gymnastics classes.

Olympian Teaches Gymnastics

This winter, two-time Olympian Zhou Xiaojing shared her expertise in rhythmic gymnastics with eager young girls in a class sponsored by TU’s Recreational Sports department. The girls received instruction on many of the rhythmic gymnastics apparatus including hula hoops, ribbons, and balls. On the last day of class, students and their parents were treated to a performance by “Jenny,” as she was called by her new American friends.

Zhou Xiaojing was in Tulsa on an immigrant visa sponsored by TU business professor David Pan. She will graduate from Beijing University of Physical Education in July and return to Tulsa to teach summer camp classes on campus. She will then enroll in TU’s English Institute.

When Horses Fly

California tycoon Leland Stanford knew there was substance to the Pegasus legend, and he hired British photographer Eadward Muybridge to prove it.

Using multiple cameras, electric shutters and a projector, Muybridge offered proof that during a horse’s running stride, there is a moment when all hooves are off the ground — that in fact, horses do fly. The eccentric photographer, whose work was the precursor to motion pictures, went on to record the movement of hundreds of animals and humans.

This spring, TU senior Will Crafton completed an internship in the Photographic History Collection of the Smithsonian National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. “The position involved working to further research Muybridge’s life and catalog the Muybridge collection of stop-action photography,” says Crafton, who is majoring in history and education.

While in the nation’s capitol, Crafton also had the opportunity to witness the Presidential inauguration as a guest of Larry King. “This is history,” said Crafton. “This is democracy in action. It’s a vibrant city, and this is a vibrant time to be here.”

Fraud Busters

What began with a phone call to TU Legal Clinic’s Older Americans Law Project helped stop a scheme to defraud a group of senior citizens out of nearly $250,000.

In March 2000, a Tulsa woman called the Older Americans Project complaining that she had given more than $70,000 to a man who claimed to be raising money for Tulsa Youth for Christ. She tried, in vain, to get her funds back.

After the initial call, five more seniors contacted the clinic with similar complaints. TU Professor and Project Director Mo Bernstein and TU law student Derrick Eihausen gathered information and turned it over to the Tulsa County District Attorney. The suspect is awaiting indictment.

“As an advocacy and educational facility, we are able to assist the Tulsa community in many ways,” says Bernstein.

The Older Americans Law Project, partially funded by the Tulsa Area Agency on Aging, provides free legal services to those 60 years of age or older and living in Creek, Osage and Tulsa Counties.

Are We Alone in the Universe?

Fritz Benedict, a senior research scientist and astronomer at the University of Texas McDonald Observatory, addressed that topic — and the nine steps that must be explored before answering that question — during a lecture at TU in February.

Benedict, who uses the Hubble Space Telescope for his work, presented the 2001 Shapley Lecture (funded by the American Astronomical Society), titled “Nine Steps to Extraterrestrial Life.”

Benedict says there are nine essential steps that led to humans dominating this planet. “The first four steps involve an astronomical exploration of our universe,” he says. “Is there anything special about our galaxy, our star, the sun; or the planet we inhabit?”

Chemistry dominates the next three steps, he says. How did life arise on our planet? Could this process occur elsewhere in the galaxy?

The last two steps are “doozies,” he says. Does intelligence arise as a natural consequence of a rich, threatening environment? Is our galaxy sterile, feral, fallow or filled? The answer, he says, “may most depend on a final, critical tenth step.”

Healing a Country

Few places on earth show the effects of war more vividly than Bosnia-Herzegovina. In four years, more than 200,000 people were killed, there were more than one million refugees, and another million people were internally displaced as a result of the conflict.

As a clinical psychologist with expertise in traumatic stress studies, Elana Newman was interested in the impact of war on a country's citizens and on the journalists that cover the fighting. So she traveled to the war-torn country to view first hand the toll that war takes on the mental health of those who live through it.

Newman, an assistant professor of psychology at the University, was one of eight American scholars to receive a grant to participate in the Young Investigator's Program on Trauma and Reconciliation in Bosnia-Herzegovina. This program was sponsored by the U.S. Department of State Research and Training Program for Eastern Europe and the Newly Independent States of the Former Soviet Union (Title VIII) and the National Research Council, which is the operating arm of the National Academy of Sciences, National Academy of Engineering, and Institute of Medicine. Four Bosnian Young Scholars also participated in the program.

For 12 days last September, the group visited a variety of governmental and non-governmental agencies including orphanages, refugee camps, mental health clinics, and homes for the elderly. Their goals were to identify scholars for the U.S. Department of State to call upon in the future and to create collaborations between Bosnian and American scholars.

According to Newman, Bosnia-Herzegovina has been undergoing a dual transition during the nearly five years since the end of the war; recovering from the effects of a devastating war and at the same time transitioning from an authoritarian political system and economy to a democratic free-market state. Not only are people trying to recover from losing family members, being displaced, and losing property, but they also need to learn new ways to manage in an economy that is quite difficult and different from before the strife.

The delegation focused on how institutions and organizations in Bosnia-Herzegovina, in cooperation with the international community, address these problems and how these issues impact other reconstruction goals. Specific topics for discussion included the current state of health in the region, policies toward traumatized individuals, issues of accurately judging the scope of the problem and of prioritizing problems, and the impact of international assistance.

Newman says that without a doubt, the majority of the Bosnia-Herzegovina population is trauma-exposed. In her report on the trip, Newman wrote that not only has the majority endured life threatening situations, but also other malevolent experiences that accompanied the war, such as shortages of food and medicine and poor living conditions. Exposure to such trauma and hardship put the citizens of Bosnia-Herzegovina at risk for psychological and physical disorders, including post-traumatic stress disorder.

Journalists covering the war were also affected by it. Several whom Newman met described great impairment due to the war, including a period of substance abuse and traumatic symptoms that diminished over time. One reporter said he is more reactive to news events now than he was when he was "stepping over bodies daily."

Newman sees these journalists playing a pivotal role in the healing in Bosnia-Herzegovina. She believes that by communicating the truth, discussing mental health issues and services, discussing trauma-related issues, and generally raising dialogue across communities, journalists can play a huge role in reconciliation.

Ironically, one obstacle to healing the country could be the healers. While psychologists are willing to work together for a common cause, Newman found that there is also much resistance to this notion. "Imagine the international community telling you to reconcile with those who made your life hell — it can't work."

Newman wrote: "Clearly, working on mutual mental health goals will take careful planning, commitment and many years of overcoming internal and external resistance, institutions, policies and strategies."

She was struck by the combination of beauty and devastation in the country. The group would dine outside in a beautiful European setting but then see bombed-out buildings. People had lost everything in the war but had such a generosity of spirit that they would not allow her to so much as buy them a cup of coffee. And while their lives were filled with war and destruction, the women of Bosnia-Herzegovina always took the time to fix their hair and make-up, ensuring that they were beautiful in the face of all the ugliness that surrounded them.

Newman hopes to return to the country for further research. She has received a follow-up grant to pursue an exchange program with the University of Sarajevo in an effort to offer intellectual and professional support to young Bosnian psychologists. She would like University of Tulsa psychology students to have the opportunity to travel to Bosnia-Herzegovina and take courses there, establish relationships with American peers and gain further research mentorships. She would also like Bosnian psychologists to have the opportunity to visit the United States and learn new methods of treating trauma.

Although she never saw herself as an expert on Bosnia-Herzegovina, Newman has developed a warm place in her heart for the war-torn country. Her ultimate goal is to find a sustainable way to establish reform in Bosnian mental health care and to bring hope to a people who have suffered so much. ♦

Wampus How 1971

A Poet's Perspective

By Deanna J. Harris

American poet and social commentator Robert Bly has much to say about the state of America. Bly, whose second collection of poems, The Light Around the Body, received the 1968 National Book Award, sparked the men's movement in 1990 with the publication of Iron John: A Book About Men.

Hailed as a seminal American poet, Bly eschewed academe, opting to earn a living as a writer, editor and translator (Scandinavian). As the co-founding editor and publisher of the literary journal named for the decades in which it was produced (the Fifties, Sixties and Seventies), Bly regularly exposed little-known European and South American poets to the American reader.

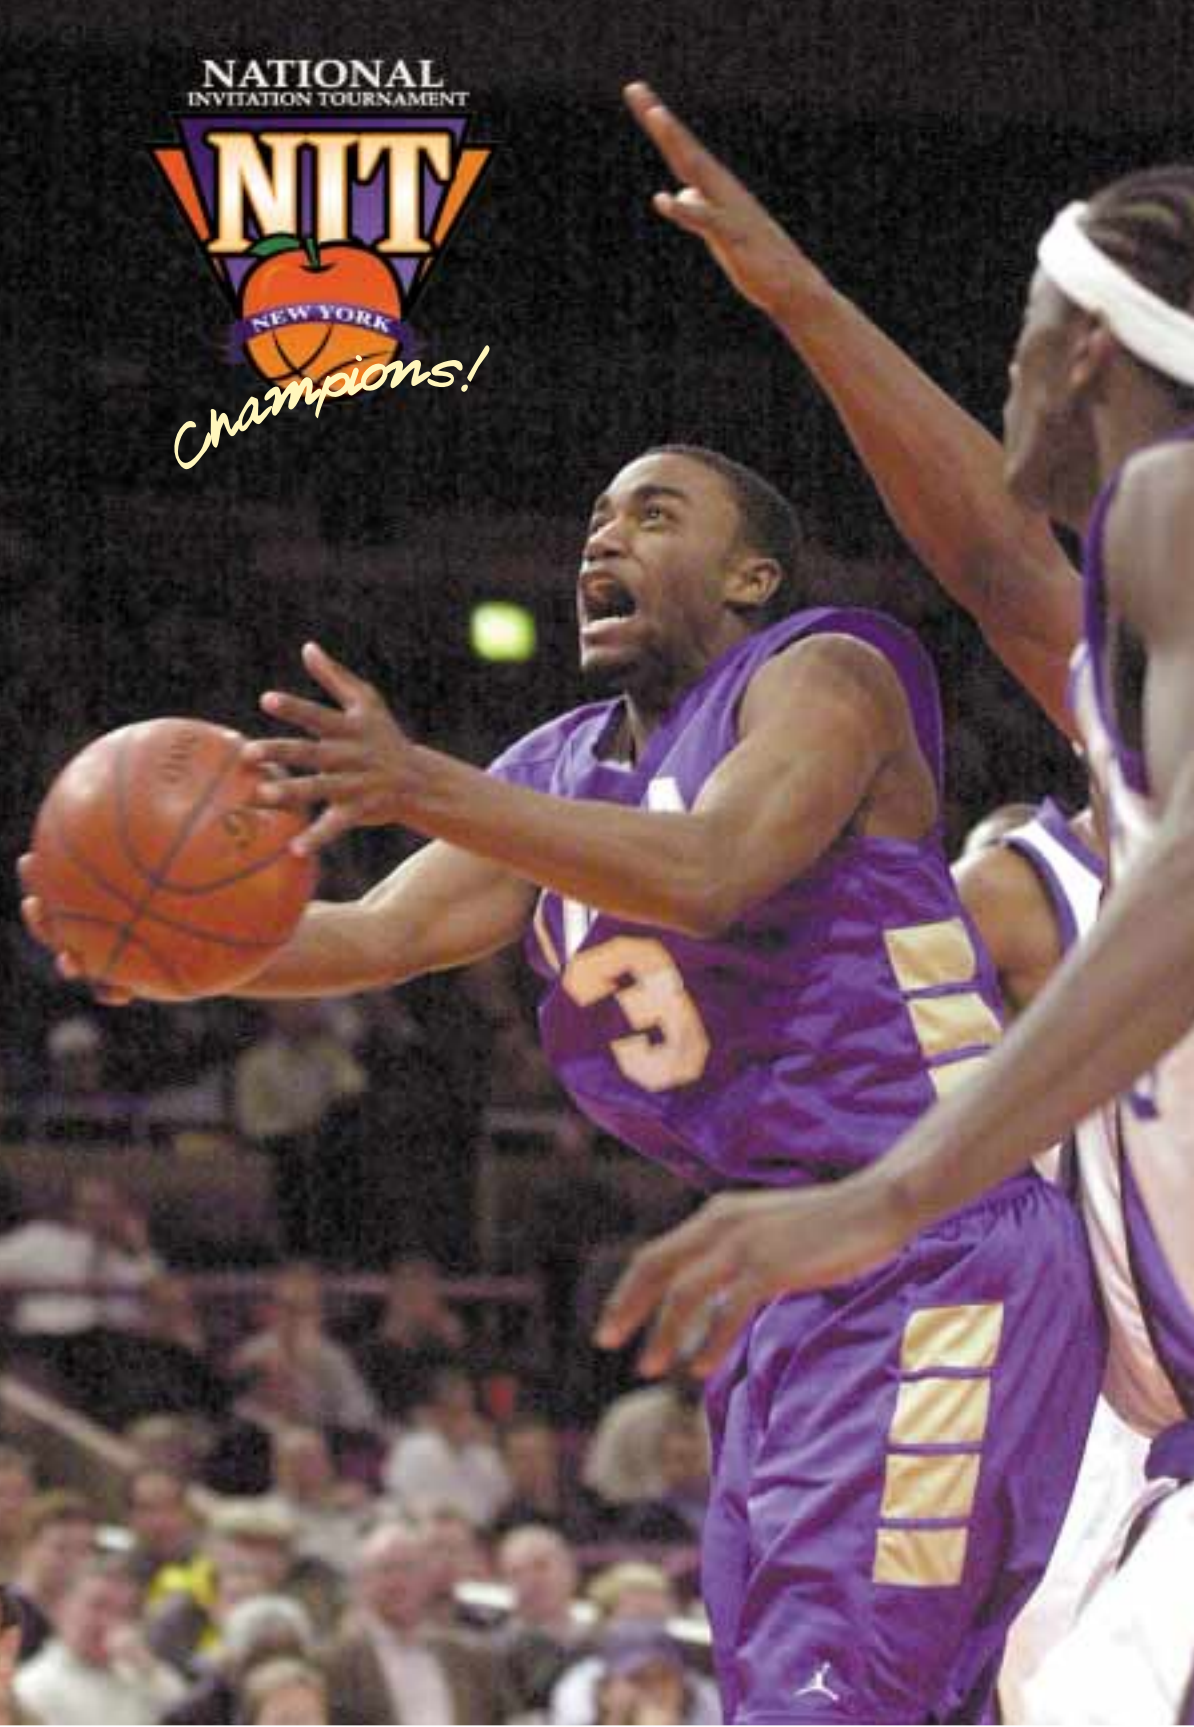

"Robert Bly is known not only for his poetry," says Gordon Taylor, TU Chapman Professor of English, "but also for his support of young poets."

Through myth, folklore, fairy tales, legends and Jungian psychology, Bly's more recent work examines the cultural landscape of America. In The Sibling Society, he proposes: "... the old structures of the impulse-control system have loosened: the superego took its hands away from the throats of young people, or so it seemed, and the whole nation relaxed, felt less depression, endured less repression. . . . Yet something went wrong. How did we move from the optimistic, companionable, food-passing youngsters gathered on that field at Woodstock to the self-doubting, dark-hearted, turned-in, death-praising, indifferent, wised-up, deconstructionist audience that now attends a grunge music concert?"

Last December, anonymous donors presented Special Collections in McFarlin Library nearly 300 books, chapbooks, broadsides and editions containing works by Robert Bly as well as a complete set of the Fifties, Sixties and Seventies Press publications. The collection also includes more than 400 periodicals containing Bly's poems, interviews and essays. The gift is in honor of Wayne G. (JD '33) and Casey Thomas (BS '33) Parkhurst.

The Bly collection enhances McFarlin's 20th-century American literature collection. Lori Curtis, director of Special Collections, notes, "This collection will give TU students and the community a unique opportunity to study the career of a major American poet." ♦

RELENTLESS!

The Drive to the Championship

By Deanna J. Harris and Ed Sharrer, BS '92

Ask Alabama's Crimson Tide who's top dog, and they'll tell you — TU.

Tulsa soundly defeated Alabama 79 to 60 at the 64th National Invitation Tournament on March 29.

The Golden Hurricane men's basketball team stormed into New York City's Madison Square Garden and dominated the NIT for the second time in 20 years.

In an AP interview, senior guard and star player Marcus Hill said, "People see Tulsa, and they don't know what they're going to get. Once the game gets going, they realize we're a good team."

That tenacity drove the Golden Hurricane to victory. Underrated by many pollsters, TU overwhelmed Alabama, holding Rod Grizzard, the Crimson's top scorer, pointless for 33 minutes. In a CNN interview, Grizzard admitted: "Top to bottom, they played better than us for 40 minutes."

Putting together two solid 20-minute halves of basketball led Tulsa to the impressive victory. At times during the NIT tournament, Tulsa lost focus for several minutes at a time, allowing big leads to dwindle. But the team always rebounded, stepping up the intensity and claiming victory. In the championship game, there was no let-up.

With an impressive show of athleticism and teamwork, the Golden Hurricane had a 14-point lead at half-time for a score of 36 - 25. Hill, named the tournament's MVP, scored an impressive 24 points. Sophomore Kevin Johnson had 16 points that included two baskets, putting TU up 59 - 40 with 9:28 to play. Tulsa deflected passes and pressured the ball constantly with junior Greg Harrington making 11 points and 9 assists. Charlie Davis hit a season high 10 points.

What the Hurricane lacked in height, they more than made up for in relentless energy. Seniors Hill and David Shelton turned in stellar performances for what was the last game of their collegiate careers.

In their march to the NIT championship, the Golden Hurricane scored wins over teams from the Big 10, the SEC, and Conference USA. Alabama, ranked in the top 25 for almost the entire season, was stunned by the speed and ferocity of Tulsa's team.

Winning the NIT provides a great surge of momentum for next season. By playing tough competition — on the road and on neutral floors — Tulsa's young players gained valuable experience and should be battle-tested for future big games. Losing only two top players and returning four of the best guards in the WAC — Antonio Reed, Dante Swanson, Harrington and Johnson — the Golden Hurricane promises to be a powerhouse for the next several years. ♦

Rise of the Native Son

Student-athletes, students, faculty, staff, fans and members of the local media jammed the President's Suite at TU's Reynolds Center on April 9 to learn who would be the University's next basketball coach. Most in the crowd agreed that there was one man among the many angling for the job who was head and heart above the rest.

When TU Athletic Director Judy MacLeod announced that John Phillips, assistant coach here since 1997, would be TU's 28th head basketball coach, the room exploded with applause and cheers. Phillips said that he has been a TU fan since the age of 14 when his dad brought him to his first Golden Hurricane game. He admits that he was never a very good player. Even during his high school playing days, Phillips says that he was better at telling other players what to do to improve their game than at performing himself.

Approaching the podium, Phillips, a 1965 graduate of Tulsa's McLain High School, smiled in a way that put you in mind of another much-loved Oklahoma son.

"Last week, I felt like I was at my own funeral," he told the crowd in reference to the "good words" the community has for him.

The impression of Will Rogers deepened as Phillips addressed the crowd, relating one humorous story after another in an easygoing style:

"When my Mom heard about this, she told me, 'Well, they've had Bill and Buzz, so I guess it's about time TU had sense enough to hire somebody — handsome.'"

After thanking President Bob Lawless and MacLeod

for having faith in him, Phillips acknowledged his familial debt: ". . . to my son, Duggan, who'll be entering TU's doctoral program in English this fall. He looks like me, but he has his Mom's brains. . . to my daughter Kelly, the love of my life, who'd make a terrific coach, . . . and to my wife, Leah, who has been around the world — in Oklahoma — and who lets me live my dream. . . ."

Phillips preempted queries about his recruiting abilities, stating that he's been winning friends and their loyalty his whole life. The new coach said that he learned the best recruiting techniques from his dad, who taught him to be sincere, honest and trustworthy.

Loyalty earns Phillips high marks with Tulsa fans who've been annoyed in recent years by head coaches who have left TU to launch lucrative careers in high profile schools. When Phillips was asked whether or not he had a buyout clause, he quipped, "Sure. I told my wife she's now sleeping with the $2 million man!"

Gathering the basketball squad to the podium, Phillips encouraged the crowd to congratulate the team on their recent NIT victory, then teased Antonio Reed — who'd half-jokingly said he would apply for the position and be a player-coach — "He's taking it hard that he didn't get the job."

Referring to TU's 2001 NIT championship team, Phillips acknowledged that the basketball program at TU is a tremendous product and made a pledge to the University and specifically to the players:

"After you win the NCAA championship, we will be back here talking about the team and nothing else."

In Memory of William E. Douglass

In 1994 The University of Tulsa College of Law lost a distinguished alumnus, William Douglass (BS'64, JD'67). Robert Douglass lost his only child. Douglass recalls that for several years after losing his 52-year-old son, he felt “lost.” But with time came the desire to find a way to honor Bill.

“I wanted to do something in his memory, and what stood out in my mind about Bill was he had been so good about helping people,” explains the senior Douglass. “I thought creating a scholarship would be an appropriate way to continue his legacy. I believe he would have liked the idea of providing a perpetual scholarship.”

Colleagues from the Hunt Oil Company in Dallas described Bill Douglass as “not just bright, but truly smart.” Next to his family, Hunt was his life. Many friends and fellow legal professionals recall his sincerity and unique ability to reach out and touch others’ lives. With his dedicated involvement in community organizations, his steady sense of ethics, and his timely humor, Bill Douglass made a lasting impression on those who knew him, leading one colleague to eulogize, “In the tapestry of life, he was a mighty big stitch that made the bigger picture brighter and more meaningful.”

His father has made it possible for him to continue to touch lives, even those of young aspiring attorneys who never had the opportunity to meet a man who embodied the best of scholar, lawyer and citizen.

Robert Douglass’ gift of stock established the William E. Douglass Endowed Scholarship for the College of Law. In addition to providing financial assistance to deserving students beginning in the fall of 2001, the endowment serves as a lasting tribute to a son, a father, a husband and a dedicated practitioner of the law.

Phillips Petroleum Company

Like old neighbors, Phillips Petroleum Company and The University of Tulsa have grown up together. And through the decades, Phillips has been a loyal supporter of TU. Thanks to the petroleum company and its foundation, TU has been the beneficiary of grant, equipment, and scholarship gifts exceeding $3 million.

TU has always been an important source of professional recruiting by Phillips, according to Scott Nickel (JD'89), manager of international compensation and benefits for the company. “Phillips has TU graduates throughout our company, including the functional areas of engineering and science, as well as accounting, information technology, legal and other professional areas,” explains Nickel. “Our company views TU as an extremely important provider of top-quality technical talent. It is for that reason that we established the Phillips Scholarship Program in the TU College of Engineering and Natural Sciences.”

Phillips initiated the program in 1997 with a gift of $100,000 to fund scholarships in the areas of petroleum, chemical and mechanical engineering. Phillips has continued that level of support each succeeding year to sustain the program.

Phillips augments the scholarships with mentoring opportunities, social events, visits to company laboratories and business offices, and an overriding interest by Phillips personnel in the personal and academic well-being of the scholars.

Many students accept internships and summer positions with Phillips, and a senior from the first class of scholars has just been offered and accepted a full-time post with the company after graduation in May 2001.

“The Phillips Scholars Program is fantastic,” says John Henshaw, TU associate professor of mechanical engineering. “What really impresses me about Phillips is the generosity with both their time and resources. At TU our students grow intellectually through their coursework, and the repeated meaningful interactions, both social and professional, with Phillips employees help them grow professionally as well.”

In addition to continuing the Scholars Program, last year Phillips supported College of Business Administration scholarships and the college Annual Fund, the College of Engineering and Natural Sciences Annual Fund, the Office of Career Planning and Placement, and a variety of other campus professional development activities.

Dr. Jacob W. Jorishie, Jr.

“Jake” Jorishie’s interests run the gamut and include staying involved in his church, recording his own keyboard arrangements, cheering on Golden Hurricane basketball, and investing in a community sports complex. And all that’s in his spare time, when he’s not caring for patients and staying on the leading edge of developments in dental medicine.

Jorishie came to TU in 1967 for a pre-med track, receiving his bachelor of science in zoology. From there he was off to Washington University in St. Louis to study at the School of Dental Medicine. After graduating in 1974, he participated in a hospital dentistry residency program with the United States Navy.

He returned to Tulsa to open his own private practice in 1977 and has been a TU season ticket holder and donor ever since. “I like to be a part of successful endeavors,” says the Golden Hurricane Club member of his motivations for supporting and advancing higher education.

Though much of his TU coursework was associated with his pre-med major, he spent the balance of his academic career participating in almost every area of student music programming.

“Participating in music activities allowed me to receive what was known as a tuition remission scholarship, a 50-to-75 percent discount on my school bills,” he recalls. Jorishie acknowledges he has always been grateful for that assistance and consequently directs many of his contributions to TU to student music activities. He also serves on the Board of Visitors for the Henry Kendall College of Arts and Sciences.

“I believe the people who own TU are the people who graduate from TU and claim ownership,” says Jorishie. “I believe alumni are the constant force behind a great university.”

The Zarrow Families Foundation

The Zarrow family knows the meaning of commitment — to family, to work, to community, and to causes in need of champions.

From the family's launch of Sooner Pipe & Supply, a Tulsa-based company founded in 1937, the Zarrow's built the business into a successful company with several overseas and U.S. locations. Just as admirably, the family has used that success to benefit a wide variety of community organizations and causes. Institutions throughout the local community and the state have been the fortunate recipients of the Zarrow's generosity.

“The Zarrow families are committed to helping support education, social services, Jewish causes, health programs, medical research and mental health programs,” explains Jeanne Gillert, grants manager of the Zarrow Families Foundations. “They also have a passion for helping the challenged, disadvantaged and homeless, giving geographical preference to concerns in the Tulsa area.”

Over the years, TU has been the beneficiary of many gifts from each of the three Zarrow Families Foundations: the Maxine and Jack Zarrow Family Foundation, the Anne and Henry Zarrow Foundation, and the Zarrow Families Foundation. With members of the family having attended TU, Gillert explains that the Zarrow's interest in supporting the university is a combination of their alumni ties and their dedication to higher education in their community. “They have a keen interest in seeing TU continue to provide exceptional educational opportunities, drawing students from Tulsa, the Midwest and internationally,” she says.

The Zarrow's are supporters of TU athletics and have also generously given to the fund that allows the university to conduct donor recognition activities.

The Anne and Henry Zarrow Foundation was a 2000–2001 Annual Fund Challenge sponsor for the College of Law. The Maxine and Jack Zarrow Family Foundation has been committed to creating opportunities for minority students through scholarships in the College of Engineering and Natural Sciences. All three foundations strongly supported TU's University School, including endowing scholarships.

“Their passion for education comes from a deep-seated belief that education can and does make a difference in a young person's life, and it is the key to their subsequent success as an adult,” explains Gillert.

Dear Loyal Golden Hurricane Fan,

Last fall, your TU football program answered the challenge. Our student-athletes dedicated themselves and focused on finishing every challenge put before them, whether it was successfully completing a practice drill, doing well in the classroom, or winning football games. The Tulsa Golden Hurricane completed the 2000 season with the most wins in 10 seasons. It was a culmination of a great deal of hard work and sacrifice.

On the field, the 2000 Golden Hurricane won its Western Athletic Conference opener at Rice, 23-16, then defeated Hawaii, 24-14. Sophomore quarterback Josh Blankenship threw for 2,507 yards to rank fourth on the school's single-season passing chart. Junior receiver Donald Shoals was among the nation's top receivers and punt returners. He completed the season ranked second in the WAC and ninth in the nation in receiving yards (99.6 per game). The pinnacle was Tulsa closing the season with back to back wins against San Jose State (28-17) and Nevada (38-3).

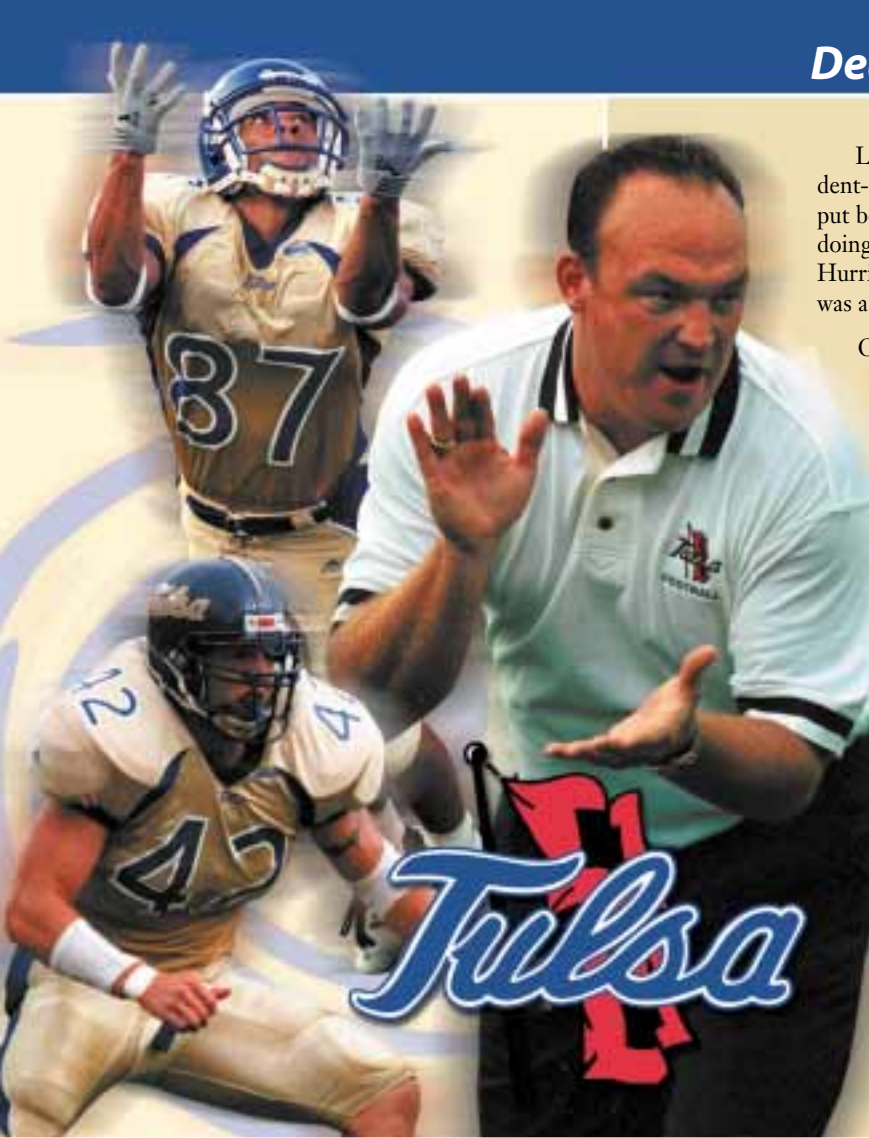

Now we need you to join the team! We need you and your family in Skelly Stadium for six home dates. We need you to purchase season tickets and experience Golden Hurricane Football . . . from Hurricane Alley with pre-game music and games for the kids, to our traditional pre-game team walk along Glenn Dobbs Drive, to the excitement of college football action! This fall, we host Indiana State, Fresno State, New Mexico State, Hawaii, Louisiana Tech, and SMU. Six great games you aren't going to want to miss.

Buy your season tickets today! Call 918-631-4688, fax your order, mail the form below, or visit the Reynolds Center Ticket Office! I look forward to seeing you at Skelly Stadium.

GO TU!

Keith Burns, Head Football Coach

Women Golfers Win Third Straight WAC Championship

Tulsa used four-under par 68s from Stacy Prammanasudh, Dani Mallon and Maiko Senda on the final day to run away from the field at the Western Athletic Conference Championships, April 25, at the Golf Club of Castle Hills in Lewisville, Texas.

The Hurricane shot a final round 13-under par 275 to finish the tournament with a WAC Championship record even-par 864. Tulsa began the day with a two-stroke lead over TCU and five strokes over third-place San Jose State. The Hurricane ended the day with a 25-shot victory over second-place TCU, while San Jose State placed third with an 894 title.

Tulsa had all five of its golfers place among the top-nine individuals.

Prammanasudh, who was also named as the WAC's Golfer of the Year for the second straight season, captured individual medalist honors with a five-under par 211 by scoring rounds of 73-70-68.

En route to the team title, the Hurricane broke every WAC record possible. The Hurricane set the single round record (275), breaking the previous mark of 292 set by San Jose State in 1997; the previous 54-hole record was 892 and 36-hole record of 592, both established by San Jose State in 1997. The three individual 68s by Prammanasudh, Mallon and Senda is a new record, while Prammanasudh's 54-hole total of 211 broke the previous mark of 220.

"It was just awesome today," said Head Coach Melissa McNamara. "First, our players were great; second, the golf course was great; and third, the conditions were perfect — all of those things have to happen for records to be broken. I'm so incredibly proud of them."

McNamara, who was named WAC Coach of the Year in her first season, claimed her first collegiate victory with the WAC title. "I'm just thrilled to see our girls play as well as they did today," said McNamara. "I really felt like I just sat back and watched. It was a very special win, but we're looking for more."

Senda, who placed second as a freshman at last year's WAC Tournament, and freshman Suzie

Fisher each carded 54-hole totals of 220 to finish in a fourth-place tie. Senda turned in her 68 following rounds of 81-71. Fisher carded a 71 after a 69 the previous day. Mallon completed her final round with a 68 following rounds of 80 and 73.

In the final two rounds, Senda carded a five-under par 139 after an opening round nine-over par 81, while Mallon turned in a three-under par 141 on the final 36 holes following a first round eight-over par 80 on Monday.

The tournament victory for Prammanasudh was the third of the season and sixth of her collegiate career.

In addition to Prammanasudh, freshman Fisher earned first-team all-WAC honors, while sophomore Senda was a second-team selection.

The Hurricane has been a member of the Western Athletic Conference for the last five years, and have won the last three league titles.

Men's Golf on the Rise

TU freshman golfer David Inglis has made his mark on a team that Head Coach Bill Brogden calls "my best team since 1995."

Inglis, a native of Roslin, Scotland, has placed among the top-20 in all 12 tournaments this season. In early May, he won the Western Athletic Conference individual title, while leading the Hurricane to a second-place team finish. It marked the second tournament victory of the year for the newcomer, as his first collegiate victory came at the LSU Spring Invitational.

With a team-leading 72.1 stroke average, Inglis was named the WAC's Golfer of the Week three times, and in the fall earned Golfer of the Month for October.

Inglis was selected as the WAC's Freshman of the Year.

Stacy Prammanasudh Among the Best Ever at Tulsa

There has been just one athlete in school history to earn first-team All-America accolades in all four seasons of competition — golfer Jody Rosenthal.

Tulsa's Stacy Prammanasudh, with two first-team All-America merits already in the bag, garnered her third first-team honor this season.

Since first breaking into the nation's top-10 individually as a freshman, Prammanasudh has consistently stayed there. This year she ranked as high as third, and is currently eighth nationally.

In April, Prammanasudh was named the Western Athletic Conference Player of the Year for the second straight season. She also captured medalist honors at the WAC Championship in Lewisville, Texas, while leading the Hurricane to the team title for the third straight year.

"I wanted this victory. It was what I went down there to do, but I'm more excited about our team score. It was good to see it all come together," said Prammanasudh. "I've been really working on my putting, and it finally paid off." The three-time first-team All-American totaled 14 birdies and two eagles for the 54 holes.

Prammanasudh has placed among the top-10 in every tournament this season and entered the NCAA Central Regionals with a 73.1 stroke average. She has placed among the top 20 in 29 of 31 career tournaments, and among the top 10 in 23 tournaments. She has won six career tournaments, including three this season.

In addition to the WAC crown, Prammanasudh won individual titles at the Edean Ihlanfeldt Invitational and the Stanford-Pepsi Intercollegiate.

'01 Football Season Promises Excitement

The enthusiasm and excitement that Keith Burns brought to the Tulsa football program in 2000 continues in 2001. The winning attitude and his past successes took shape last year as the Golden Hurricane posted its most wins (5) since 1991, and the most wins (4) ever in the Western Athletic Conference.

The Hurricane returns 40 letterwinners, 18 of whom are sophomores. With seven starters back on offense and eight starters returning to the defensive unit, fans can anticipate Tulsa taking the next steps towards a bowl game in the 2001 season.

On offense, the Josh Blankenship to Donald Shoals pass-catch tandem connected nearly 80 times in 2000, and much more of the same can be expected this year. With a running game that appeared to be making great strides at the end of the 2000 season, Tulsa's passing attack will be the beneficiary.

Eric Richardson and Ken Bohanon give Tulsa a solid speed-power combo in the backfield.

But the star is Shoals, a legitimate All-America candidate.

Shoals ranked among the nation's leaders in receiving yards (4th), receiving yards per game (9th), punt returns (10th), receptions per game (11th) and all-purpose yards (40th) last year. He was Tulsa's "Mr. Go-to-Guy," with 80 receptions for 1,195 yards and five TDs. He was also Tulsa's "Mr. Excitement," with two punt returns for TDs, covering 71 and 41 yards.

The defensive front is expected to be much improved in 2001. Although the Hurricane lost two defensive linemen and one linebacker from last year's team, 20 letterwinners are returning. Ends Drew McLaughlin and Brad Hawkins and tackle Sam Rayburn will anchor the line.

Enter Michael Dulaney, "Mr. Destruction," at linebacker. A transfer from Oklahoma, Dulaney sat out last season. He brings the talent and toughness to help transform the Hurricane defensive unit into the top squad in the WAC.

The bandit/rover and secondary positions return all five starters.

Health & Recreation Center Groundbreaking

The future is bright for student health and fitness at TU. The University broke ground in April for a 67,000 square-foot student health and fitness center. See story, page 3.

McFarlin Fellows

McFarlin Fellows met in April in conjunction with Seamus Heaney's campus visit.

Margery Bird & Sharon Bell

Mary Wafer-Johnston, director of recreational sports, took groundbreaking guests on a verbal guided tour of the facility.

Student Association leaders Matt Rice ('01), right, and Jen Geffert ('01), left, pose with Fulton and Susie Collins. Fulton, TU trustee chairman and the principal driver of the center project, spent many hours touring campuses and interviewing architects to make sure the TU project incorporated the latest and best approaches.

The University celebrated its most dedicated supporters as The Circle Society reconvened for its second annual gala evening April 10. The Circle Society recognizes friends of TU who have distinguished themselves through unsurpassed commitment to the advancement of the University. Through their generous support, members of The Circle Society have raised facilities, established and advanced academic programs, funded vital research, sustained faculty, supported operations, and have empowered thousands of talented students to pursue and achieve their dreams.

President and Mrs. Lawless welcome Jack Zink.

Baritone Nathan Myers (BA'01) performs operatic selections for guests.

Bob and Sandy West were among honored guests.

Major Hudson traveled from Phoenix to attend.

Seamus and Marie Heaney, seated, with President Bob Lawless and Marcy Lawless, Brent Beesley (son of Suzanne O'Brien), and Suzanne O'Brien.

Suzanne O'Brien, Seamus Heaney, actor Gailard Sartain (BS'69), and author Thomas Flanagan spare a moment for the camera.

Seamus Heaney

Bob and Pat Langholtz were among guests at a post-lecture dinner celebrating the endowment of the Darcy O'Brien Chair.

Remembering Darcy O'Brien

Irish poet and Nobel laureate Seamus Heaney returned to Tulsa in April to honor his late friend and colleague Darcy O'Brien, a member of The University of Tulsa English faculty from 1978 to 1996.

Heaney presented a public lecture inaugurating the Darcy O'Brien Endowed Chair at The University of Tulsa. The lecture marked Heaney's fourth visit to the University and his first visit to campus since the death of O'Brien in 1998 at the age of 58. The friendship between Heaney and O'Brien spanned more than three decades and began when both writers were teaching in the late 1960s.

Heaney was on The University of Tulsa campus as the first distinguished visiting scholar to hold the Darcy O'Brien Endowed Chair. The chair was established in 1999 to bring to The University of Tulsa distinguished visiting scholars in English, law, religion, science or other disciplines compatible with the legacy of Darcy O'Brien. The Oxley Foundation of Tulsa provided a challenge grant to establish the chair, and University of Tulsa trustees Robert E. (BA'64) and Roxana (BA'63) Lorton served as co-chairs of the endowment campaign. More than 200 friends and colleagues of Darcy O'Brien contributed to the endowment.

AN ARTFUL LIFE

REMEMBERING KATIE WESTBY

Anyone wanting to know the difference between having interests and living those interests should look to the example of Kathleen P. (Katie) Westby.

Katie believed with all her heart that art should play a prominent role in the life of a community, and she carried that belief into action with so much passion that for decades, the Westby name has been synonymous with the Tulsa arts.

Katie, who passed away last December, and her late husband, Gerald, played pivotal roles in establishing the Tulsa Performing Arts Center, and Katie continued her leadership as a PAC Trustee. Likewise, she was a founding member of the Arts and Humanities Council of Tulsa, which she helped establish in 1961. The long list of organizations that have benefited from the Westbys' leadership is a who's who of Tulsa Arts: The Tulsa Philharmonic, Philbrook, Tulsa Ballet Theatre, Tulsa Opera — and many more.

The Westbys also provided generous support to TU. Katie gave of her time and energy as a member of the Board of Trustees from 1973 until her death. Her dedication to TU earned her recognition including the J. Paschal Twyman Award for Outstanding Service in 1991, the TU Centennial Citation in 1995, and the Henry Kendall College of Arts and Sciences Distinguished Service Award in 1979.

In addition to supporting TU's Annual Fund and making possible the renovation of the former student activities building, in 1982 the Westbys established a charitable remainder unitrust to ensure their legacy of support would continue long into the future.

The trust grew appreciably over the years and passed to TU as Katie's final gift to the institution she and her family loved for so long. Funds that TU has received will endow faculty salaries and will be used to endow a maintenance fund for Westby Hall. These endowments will carry the Westby name in perpetuity.

Although Katie and Gerald Westby are no longer among us, their presence will continue to be felt through the many organizations they nourished with their vision and their support. That lasting impact is their legacy to us, and an ongoing testament to a life artfully lived.

Hart Hix

By Doug Fishback

Details can speak volumes about a person.

At the proud age of 80, Hart Hix ('41) makes custom vinyl license plates as a hobby. These plates often have a thin red trim stripe around the edge. To look at that stripe, which can't be more than an eighth of an inch thick, you'd assume from its uniformity and neatness that Hart uses a stencil, masking tape, or some such technique.

Nope. He carefully draws the line freehand with a fine-pointed brush, achieving results that in their precision rival anything a machine could produce.

These days especially, Hart's freehand technique says a lot: The personal touch matters. Craftsmanship is valued above convenience. And in many ways, it underscores the life he has led as a serviceman, a family man, a pioneer in information systems, an independent homebuilder, and a dyed-in-the-wool Golden Hurricane.

A Tulsa native, Hart majored in business at TU, where his teachers included Ben Henneke and M.M. Hargrove. He joined Shell Oil as an accountant in 1941, only to be drafted into the Air Corps the following year. A whirlwind of assignments found him at posts from Tacoma, Washington, to the English countryside, where he helped run a massive supply depot.

While he was serving an assignment in Denver, Colorado, he met his soon-to-be spouse, Dorothy Leinweber (BS'72, BS'75), at a Halloween ball.

"She was a five-foot-tall jitterbug, and I was a five-nine formal ballroom dancer," Hart recalls. "We couldn't dance together, so we sat and talked."

Apparently he said the right things. They were engaged the following Valentine's Day — "My name is Hart," he points out. — and married that June. Today their family includes three daughters, seven grandchildren, and eight (soon to be 10) great grandchildren.

After the war, Hart returned to his position at Shell. Over the coming years, he would be at the forefront of change as the company began using early punch-card machines for records keeping and later, batteries of top-of-the-line computers for business and technological applications. In fact, he was one of four people hand-picked in 1960 to design Shell's first company wide information system.

After 30 years with Shell, Hart retired in 1971 to start his second career.

"I knew all along that I wanted to be a homebuilder," he says. "In fact, in 1946 I designed and was contractor for our first home, at Second and Yale." That home still stands.

After working for the firm of Lee and Miller, in 1977 he began his own business, which he ran out of his home for the next eight years. Many of his houses are in the Chimney Hills Estates development, in the 91st and Sheridan area.

When the housing market went soft in the mid-80s, Hart decided it was time to hang up the T-square, although by no means did he plan to take it easy. In addition to maintaining part-time work as a fix-it man, he became more involved in the Lambda Chi Alpha organization, which he had joined as a TU student. His work included helping renovate the TU chapter's house and working on a national committee to design a new national headquarters.

Through it all, Hart and Dorothy have remained enthusiastic supporters of TU. They were charter members of the TU Alumni Association in 1974. In addition to holding football and basketball season tickets and following the teams to select away games, they have been generous with their financial support of the University, contributing gifts toward construction of the Donald W. Reynolds Center, renovation of Skelly Stadium, and support of TU's nursing program, of which Dorothy is an alumna.

Hart is active in TU's Fifty Years or More Club and is a charter member of the newly formed Heritage Committee (see back cover).

"Hart's enthusiasm for TU and his eagerness to stay involved are a great benefit to the Alumni Association and to the University," said Angela Henderson, director of alumni relations. "Hart's always there when I need a helping hand. He's blue and gold, through and through."

In a spirited bid for election against favored presidential challenger Thomas E. Dewey, President Harry S. Truman embarked on his grueling and now-famous 1948 Whistle-Stop campaign tour. On September 29 — at 3:55 p.m. according to the itinerary — the tour stopped in Tulsa. ♦ Times were tense for the Truman camp. Caught between the fading glow of the Roosevelt era and the emerging polarization of the electorate around postwar civil rights and social policy issues, Truman was a proponent of liberalism at a time when definitions were being rewritten and camps reorganized.

Although Americans seemed to favor him personally, many had given up on him as a political relic in his own time. ♦

Just the day before appearing in Tulsa, Truman had delivered a speech in Oklahoma City, in which he had defended the loyalties of U.S. federal government workers against the rising vitriol of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. (At the last moment, advisors deleted a line stating that federal workers were more pure than Ivory soap.) ♦ Less than two months after these photos were snapped at Skelly Stadium, photographers would capture the image of a victorious President Truman holding up a copy of the Chicago Daily Tribune, which had been prematurely sent to press with the blaring headline “Dewey Defeats Truman” — one of the most enduring images of American politics. ♦

Truman, who won the overall U.S. popular vote by a slim margin of 2.1 million votes, also carried Oklahoma.

The University of Tulsa

Heritage Collection

People carry forward a university's legacy, but things can tell an important story, too.

Leather football helmets, pep-squad uniforms, old Kendallabrum issues, and even long-forgotten report cards open a window on the past and give us a surprisingly rich perspective on the people who have gone before us — or on the people we once were ourselves.

The Heritage Committee of The University of Tulsa Alumni Association asks for your help in locating and passing along TU memorabilia — of any type — before it's lost forever. Donated items will be catalogued, preserved, and eventually displayed in a museum-quality showroom on campus, said Ed Flaxbart (BS'49), Heritage Committee co-chair.

"The TU Heritage Collection will preserve our history and enrich our understanding of what it means to be a TU alumnus, student, or friend," he said.

The Heritage Committee is off to a good start, but time is of the essence, said co-chair Bob McCay (BS'44). He points out that if material isn't cared for, it could be misplaced, lost through decay, or, even worse, it could be thrown out by someone who doesn't realize its significance.

If you would like to donate an item to the TU Heritage Collection, please contact the Office of Alumni Relations at 918-631-2555.
