TU: This Year's Best Write-In Candidate

"Your vote counts." You hear that wisdom often during an election year. But did you realize that by supporting TU, you are casting a vote for the university?

Your gift increases the university's alumni giving rate, which is simply the percentage of alumni who contribute to the university — regardless of the amount of the gift.

Why should we care about the alumni giving rate?

This number plays an important part in the thinking of corporations and foundations which support TU. The reasoning is simple: If alumni consider TU a worthwhile investment, maybe they should, too.

College ranking organizations, including U.S. News & World Report, also watch alumni giving and factor it into a school's ranking. As TU strives to work its way up the U.S. News & World Report ranking, we need your support. We need your vote.

So the next time you open your checkbook, please take a moment to look at the ballot in front of you. Remember that a gift of any size will boost our alumni giving rate, and write in your vote.

Thank you.

FOOD FORTHOUGHT NIMROD/HARDMAN AWARD CELEBRATION

"Nourishment for readers, writers, and lovers of good food and tasty ideas" is the subtitle of this year's Nimrod/Hardman Awards conference and workshop, to be held on the TU campus October 20-21. From presentations on spicing up your poetry to lectures about writing and publishing food literature, this year's conference offers a "full plate" of ideas and activities for people of letters. Featured guests include author and chef Crescent Dragonwagon, novelist John Edgar Wideman, poet and professor Thomas Lux, and courtroom novelist William Bernhardt. Conference participants this year have a unique opportunity for one-on-one workshops with one of about 20 editor/instructors. (Participants must provide poetry or prose samples with registration to take advantage of this opportunity.) Participants also will honor this year's winners of the Nimrod/Hardman Awards in poetry and prose. For information or to request registration material, call (918) 631-3080 or email nimrod@utulsa.edu. Or visit www.utulsa.edu/nimrod on the Web.

Oklahoma College Savings Program

By Robert Butkin, Oklahoma State Treasurer

Many Oklahoma parents are looking for the most effective way to save for college expenses. For those parents, and all Oklahomans interested in educating our youth, there is good news. Oklahoma has established a tax-deferred college savings plan.

The Oklahoma College Savings Program takes advantage of federal tax law to let Oklahomans get tax benefits when they are saving for college. People setting up accounts don't pay income tax on investment earnings from their accounts. The accounts operate a lot like a retirement account. Income tax is paid only when money is withdrawn to pay for college expenses, and then the tax rate is based on the college student's tax rate, which is almost always lower than the parents' rate. Oklahoma's program also creates similar tax treatment for Oklahoma income taxes.

Oklahoma parents know the value of a college education. If we are to enable our kids to live up to their best potential, we must do all we can to make college more affordable for more people.

We believe that Oklahoma's College Savings Plan will make it easier to send the next generation of Oklahomans to college. Anybody, including parents, grandparents, employers, and friends, may open up college savings accounts under the Oklahoma Plan.

This program is flexible as to choice of college. Unlike other states' plans, which restrict the choice of college to certain institutions chosen by state officials, the Oklahoma program recognizes that this important decision should rest with our kids and their families. The program is available whether the child attends an in-state or out-of-state college, a private or public college, a two-year or four-year institution, or post-secondary v-tech instruction.

Second, the program gives families flexibility as to how much to save for a child's education. Our program is the only type of program that permits families to save the full amount of their children's education, including room and board. Of course, nobody is required to save the maximum. Families may save as little as $15 per month, and to make it easy to save, we will permit automatic payroll deductions for these contributions.

The Oklahoma College Savings Program is now open for investment accounts. For more information about the program, please call 1-877-654-7284 or contact our website at www.ok4saving.org.

Editor's note: The publication of this guest editorial is for information purposes only and does not constitute endorsement of the program. Families saving for planned expenses should evaluate all their savings and investment options and decide which is best for them.

DuPont Donates Patent to TU

DuPont, a Fortune 50 corporation, has donated a patent to TU for development of a little black bead that can absorb organic contaminants in solutions and convert them into benign substances.

DuPont executive Jay B. Rappaport said each year DuPont researchers generate more ideas than the company's scientists alone can develop and turn into commercial products. "We believe The University of Tulsa has the resources and expertise needed to develop this technology to its fullest potential," he said.

The beads, known by the trademarked name Bio-Sep, were invented by DuPont scientists Tom Bair and TU alumnus Carl Camp (Ph.D. '90). The product, which has been used to clean groundwater polluted by gasoline, consists of BB-sized porous beads made of a polymer and filled with activated carbon, which accounts for the black coloration. The beads have lots of room inside for the bacteria that degrade the contaminants.

Chemical engineering professor Kerry Sublette says professors and students will conduct research to find uses for the beads in a range of settings. TU researchers are using Bio-Sep to increase the efficiency of bioreactors that remove toxic hydrogen sulfide from gases and wastewater produced in the oil and gas industry. This work will be field-tested next year.

Any income that might derive from the product, such as licensing of the patent, will be used to enhance undergraduate and graduate programs at TU.

TU and Williams Launch Risk Management Program

TU and Williams will establish the Williams Risk Management Center at The University of Tulsa this fall. The center, a part of the College of Business Administration, will integrate the latest in trading floor technology in a new graduate program that focuses on merging financial theory with the practice of risk management in the energy industry.

"This partnership between the university and Williams is a vital bridge between the corporate world and the academic world," said TU President Bob Lawless.

Graduate students will receive the academic training and hands-on experience essential to a career in the burgeoning field of energy risk management.

"The demand for students with premier skills in quantitative analysis, financial engineering, structure valuation and risk management will continue to grow at a record pace," said Keith Bailey, Williams chairman, president and chief executive officer. "Williams and TU have a rare opportunity to tailor financial education to these demands."

The center will offer students a master of science in finance degree with a concentration in energy risk management. Other concentrations in the program are corporate and international finance, and investments and portfolio management.

In addition to attracting business students, the program is designed for students in math, engineering and the sciences seeking to apply their analytical skills to solving business problems.

"By working together, we will prepare students with extensive training in a sophisticated financial laboratory," said Gale Sullenberger, College of Business Administration dean.

For more information, call the College of Business Administration at (918) 631-2242, or visit the website: www.cba.utulsa.edu

Four TU Students Win Goldwater Scholarships

For the second time in three years, all four of The University of Tulsa's nominees for the Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship have won the prestigious award. The four winners in the 2000 scholarship competition are sophomores Stephen Magill, Clinton Campbell, Andrew Bourne and Dominic Schulte.

The Goldwater Scholarship is considered the premier award for undergraduates in mathematics, science and engineering. TU is one of 13 universities nationally to win four scholarships, the maximum number that can be awarded to any institution.

Since 1995, TU has produced 19 Goldwater winners, all participants in the Tulsa Undergraduate Research Challenge.

EPA Broadcast on Asthma Features TU Researchers

Richard Shaughnessy, program manager for indoor air research at the university, and Estelle Levetin, biology professor, were featured in a nationwide broadcast on asthma by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The program, "Breathing with Asthma: An Environmental Perspective," featured 39 minutes of video filmed in Tulsa, including a visit to the TU professors' laboratories. In addition, Shaughnessy was linked by telephone to a national audience to answer questions from viewers.

The program offered basic information about asthma, including strategies for reducing airborne contaminants that can trigger asthma.

The broadcast was available on the Internet and was shown via downlink sites nationally.

TU Named a Center of Excellence in Cybersecurity

The National Security Agency has designated TU as a Center of Excellence in Information Assurance. As one of seven institutions chosen this year, TU's Center for Information Security (CIS) will help protect Internet systems from hackers and cyberterrorists.

"Our faculty and students are working at the frontiers of computer security research," said TU President Bob Lawless. "Now they will help defend our national infrastructure against cyberattacks like the destructive 'Love Bug' and its mutations."

The TU center is spearheaded by computer science professors John Hale (BS '90, MS '92, Ph.D. '99) and Sujeet Sheno. Both professors have worked closely with the NSA since 1994. Hale was recently awarded a prestigious career grant of $210,000 by the National Science Foundation for his security research and education initiatives.

Sheno was named the 1998-99 U.S. Professor of the Year for founding the Tulsa Undergraduate Research Challenge (TURC), a nationally recognized program of scholarship and service that grew from NSA-sponsored research.

CIS will award a new certificate in information assurance and will also oversee cybersecurity research projects.

News from the TU Board of Trustees

Five new members have been elected to TU's Board of Trustees: Howard Janzen, president and CEO, Williams Communications; Clifton Taulbert, award-winning author of Once Upon a Time When We Were Colored; TU alumnus William F. Thomas (BS '74), co-owner, Gemini Properties; TU alumnus Michael E. Wiley (BS '72), retired President and COO, Atlantic Richfield Company; and TU alumnus Joseph W. Moeller (BS '66), president, Koch Industries, who previously served on the TU board from 1994-1998.

Fulton Collins, chairman and CEO of Collins Investments Inc., has been re-elected chairman of the TU Board of Trustees for a fourth one-year term.

Returning to the TU board after a one-year leave are Robert E. Lorton, publisher, chairman and CEO, World Publishing Co., and Paula Marshall-Chapman, CEO, The Bama Companies. In addition, TU Alumni Association President Lynn Jones joins the board as an ex-officio member.

Trustees elected to emeritus status are Cortlandt Dietler, Burt Holmes, Jill Tarbel and Katie Westby.

Kravis Foundation Grant Sparks Film Program

From the lost childhood of Orson Welles's Citizen Kane to the casual violence of Quentin Tarantino's Pulp Fiction, film explores life in all its guises.

This fall, TU students will have the chance to understand the filmmakers' art in the Henry Kendall College of Arts and Sciences' new interdisciplinary Film Studies program directed by Joseph Kestner, McFarlin Professor of English. "Film Studies is the perfect new major for the 21st century," Kestner says, "since knowing film will be an essential component of many careers."

Liberal arts students will examine the history, theory, and basic production techniques of film and video using state-of-the-art tools of the trade.

"I am extremely grateful to George Kravis and the Raymond and Bessie Kravis Foundation for the grant that will enable us to have cutting-edge equipment for the program," Kestner says.

The Kravis grant will provide high-performance computers, digital cameras, and digital editing stations, giving students hands-on experience with the latest and most advanced production equipment. Kestner also reports that an extensive collection of films and books is being developed to support the program.

BOUNCING BABY BOYS

Jake Patrick McMurray and Bradley Brice Miller have received VIP treatment since joining the TU family. Jake attended the groundbreaking for the Michael D. Case Tennis Center, and Brice is a frequent guest in the president's box at the Donald W. Reynolds Center.

New TU superstars? Absolutely.

Jake and Brice are the infant sons of first-time moms Paige McMurray, TU women's tennis coach, and Kathy McConnell-Miller, TU women's basketball coach. Jake was born Christmas Day, 1999 and Brice arrived January 3, 2000.

Both boys often accompany their moms to work and travel with them. Brice went to every women's basketball away game, making his first road trip when he was only 17 days old. (He's also familiar with the Reynolds Center. Once, he even had his diaper changed by TU's first lady, Marcy Lawless.) Jake also has racked up the frequent flier miles, traveling to Dallas for the WAC tennis tournament and on several road trips with the team.

Motherhood has brought changes for the coach moms. McConnell-Miller says she has become more organized; McMurray says she has become more flexible.

Both, however, are in full agreement on their favorite thing about being a mother — their sons' smiles.

SUPERCALIFRAGALISTIC STUFF

Who can crush 30 cans per minute, cool a steamy swimming pool, and roll five gallons of cold water across a hot parking lot?

No, it's not Superman. It's TU's senior mechanical engineering design class under the guidance of Professor John Henshaw.

Teams of students designed and built several innovative devices during the spring semester including a semi-automated machine for crushing aluminum cans to be operated by a local group of disabled workers. They also prepared a study on several ways to reduce pool temperatures, which solar radiation can raise to 95 degrees Fahrenheit. Their collapsible rolling stand can transport a loaded barrel-shaped cooler across a parking lot and grass playing field and then can be raised to tabletop height.

Students also built a device that can measure lip motion during speech to aid people such as stroke patients who have lost part of their speech abilities.

When Bald Means Beautiful

Cancer. It's not a word you hear spoken around campus much. But when TU student Ben Gundersen was diagnosed with cancer, it left his friends and family shocked.

"At first, I didn't know how to react," said Sean Cribbs, who lives in the Honors House with Gundersen.

Known by his friends as Benji, Gundersen first noticed blurred vision and headaches. He only learned of the cancer after his eyesight deteriorated to the point where he had to go to the hospital. There, tests revealed that a tennis ball-sized mass had grown in the back of his skull, causing the distortion in his vision. Last February, the growth was surgically removed and diagnosed as a fast-growing, malignant tumor.

"The pressure created by the tumor was so great that it was pushing its way out of the skull as the surgeons cut the bone open," Cribbs said.

Honors House residents rallied around their friend. During his hospital stay, people were with him nearly 24 hours every day. Eight residents of the Honors House shaved their heads in support for Gundersen. Cribbs and freshman honors student Kendra Nuckels were involved in the campus Cancer Awareness Week in April.

"The whole shaved heads thing was really cool," Gundersen said. "They came to the hospital with 'Benji' written across the backs of their heads and a picture of their head-shaving incident. It's great to know that all my friends supported me. It's one of those unique things you don't see people do that often."

Gundersen's cancer has been diagnosed as anaplastic appendomyoma, and doctors say he has at most 10 years to live. Gundersen said the prognosis really hasn't changed his daily routine or mindset.

"It's put a new perspective on everything," he said. "I haven't become less active. I'm still going to finish school."

Gundersen completed the school year by working independently with his professors. In addition, he works as an independent Web page designer.

"If there's anyone who can live the last 10 years of his life to the fullest, it'll be Benji," Nuckels said.

"The main thing I've been trying to do is get people to stop moping around me," Gundersen stressed. "Because I'm certainly not doing that."

It's Never Too Late

Patricia Stem is the definition of a nontraditional student. The 44-year-old grandmother was a full-time mother for 22 years who had always dreamed of going to college. On May 6, she received a degree in psychology. Stem has taken advantage of everything that college has to offer — she was a member of Mortar Board and Phi Beta Kappa honor society, an Outstanding Senior in Psychology, and vice president of Psi Chi psychology honor society. After graduation, Stem plans to study psychology in Germany and then pursue a graduate degree in clinical psychology.

All in the Family

When Brenda Johnson graduated from TU in May, it was a true family affair.

Not only did she receive a degree, but her daughter and son-in-law crossed the stage as well. Johnson, who works full-time at TU for the vice president of business and finance, received a bachelor's degree in music; her daughter, Danielle German, received a bachelor's degree in education; and her son-in-law, Perry German, received a bachelor's degree in accounting. Adding to the excitement of this very special day, Johnson sang TU's Alma Mater and "America" at commencement.

A TU Degree via Canada

Patricia Rider traveled back and forth across the Canadian border to achieve her TU degree. A native of Canada, she moved to Tulsa with her parents and husband during her first year at the University of Toronto.

After arriving in Tulsa, she took a break from school and worked. Three years later, she enrolled in classes at Tulsa Community College and decided to pursue a degree in biology. She later transferred to TU. Just before her senior year, Rider's husband was offered a job in Toronto, and they moved. Once again, she enrolled at the University of Toronto. TU accepted her credits from Toronto, and Rider graduated with TU's Class of 2000. She has been accepted into a graduate program in microbial ecology and toxicology at the University of Toronto.

Marketing Man Makes Music

After graduation from The University of Tulsa, Brian Gonzales could probably land a good-paying, comfortable job in marketing, but instead he's going to Cusmapa, Nicaragua to set up a music program in an orphanage. He'll get a modest place to live and a stipend of $50 a month. "I'm going to understand life and love in some of its simplest forms," he says. "I would like to take the lesson with me through my life." Gonzales, who plays the piano and several rhythm instruments, plans to teach himself guitar by the time he gets to the orphanage.

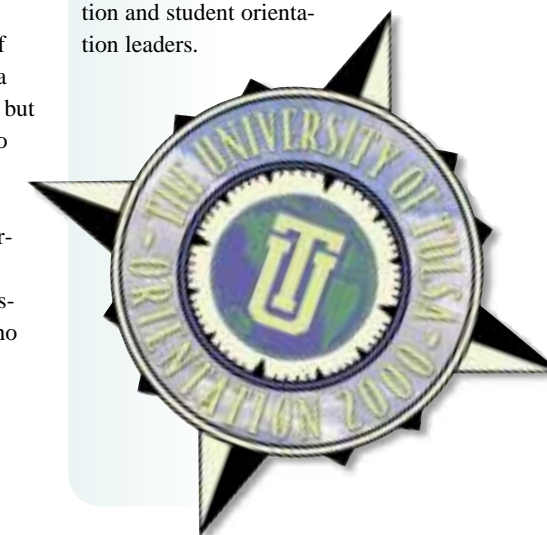

BLOWS INCOMING FRESHMEN AWAY

This fall's batch of TU freshmen will hike, bike, build, fix, golf, camp, climb, canoe, sculpt, spelunk, march, museum hop, shop, raft, read, and explore their way through Hurricane AdvenTUre, a brand new take on student orientation.

"The outdoor adventure trips will allow our students an exceptional college experience," says Yolanda Taylor, associate vice president for enrollment and student services and dean of students. "Our freshmen will have an intense physical experience, challenge themselves to grow in different ways, and, most importantly, form new and lasting friendships with other students."

In mid-August, freshmen first will convene at TU for pre-trip registration and matriculation, then depart for four-day adventure trips to either Rocky Mountain National Park, Santa Fe, or the Arkansas back country. Students also may elect to remain in Tulsa for local adventures.

Each trip includes a member of the TU faculty and/or administration and student orientation leaders.

Dinner Held in Honor of the Circle Society

The University of Tulsa recently honored the inaugural membership of The Circle Society. Members of this group represent the pinnacle of private support, having demonstrated unsurpassed commitment to the advancement of the university. The gifts they have bestowed have raised facilities, established and advanced academic programs, funded vital research, sustained faculty, supported operations, and have empowered thousands of talented students to pursue and achieve their dreams.

Inductees were honored May 9 at a black-tie dinner at the Donald W. Reynolds Center.

Hoops and Hearts

Several members of the TU family spent last Valentine's Day at Hoops and Hearts, where guests enjoyed dinner, friendship, and a clear view of the basketball game from the President's Suite in the Donald W. Reynolds Center.

Clockwise, from right: Don and Rita (BS '79) Newman, Aubyn Howe, and Jack and Maxine Zarrow; Stan and Marcia Lybarger; Jill Tarbel (BA '46); Bob ('61) and Sandy ('61) West.

Mabee Legal Information Center Dedication

After many months of anticipation, TU celebrated the opening of the Mabee Legal Information Center last March. The facility, which houses the College of Law's holdings and supplements them with abundant online resources, has nearly 280,000 items. The project, which carried a cost of $10.4 million, was made possible by the support of many generous friends, who were recognized during dedication ceremonies.

Tulsa Mayor Susan Savage addressed attendees.

Law Dean Martin Belsky joins Chapman Trustee Sharon Bell, her husband, Greg Gray, and President Lawless in the Chapman Rotunda.

Vision Realized:

The Mabee Legal Information Center

The rich, traditional finish of the new Mabee Legal Information Center (MLIC) belies the hard-wired, cutting-edge technology just below the surface.

Easy access to information is at the core of the MLIC, which synthesizes traditional with virtual methods of study and research. Carrels, desks and tables wired for the Internet, state-of-the-art electronic shelving that maximizes the use of space, and specialized classrooms create a showcase not only for the College of Law, but for the entire university. The multimillion-dollar renovation of John Rogers Hall and the new three-story MLIC addition reinforce the College of Law's standing as a premier legal center and marks TU as a resource for lawyers throughout the region.

Once again, the university and its students are the beneficiaries of visionary contributors whose generosity ushers in a new era of support for legal education. ❖

MLIC Quick Facts

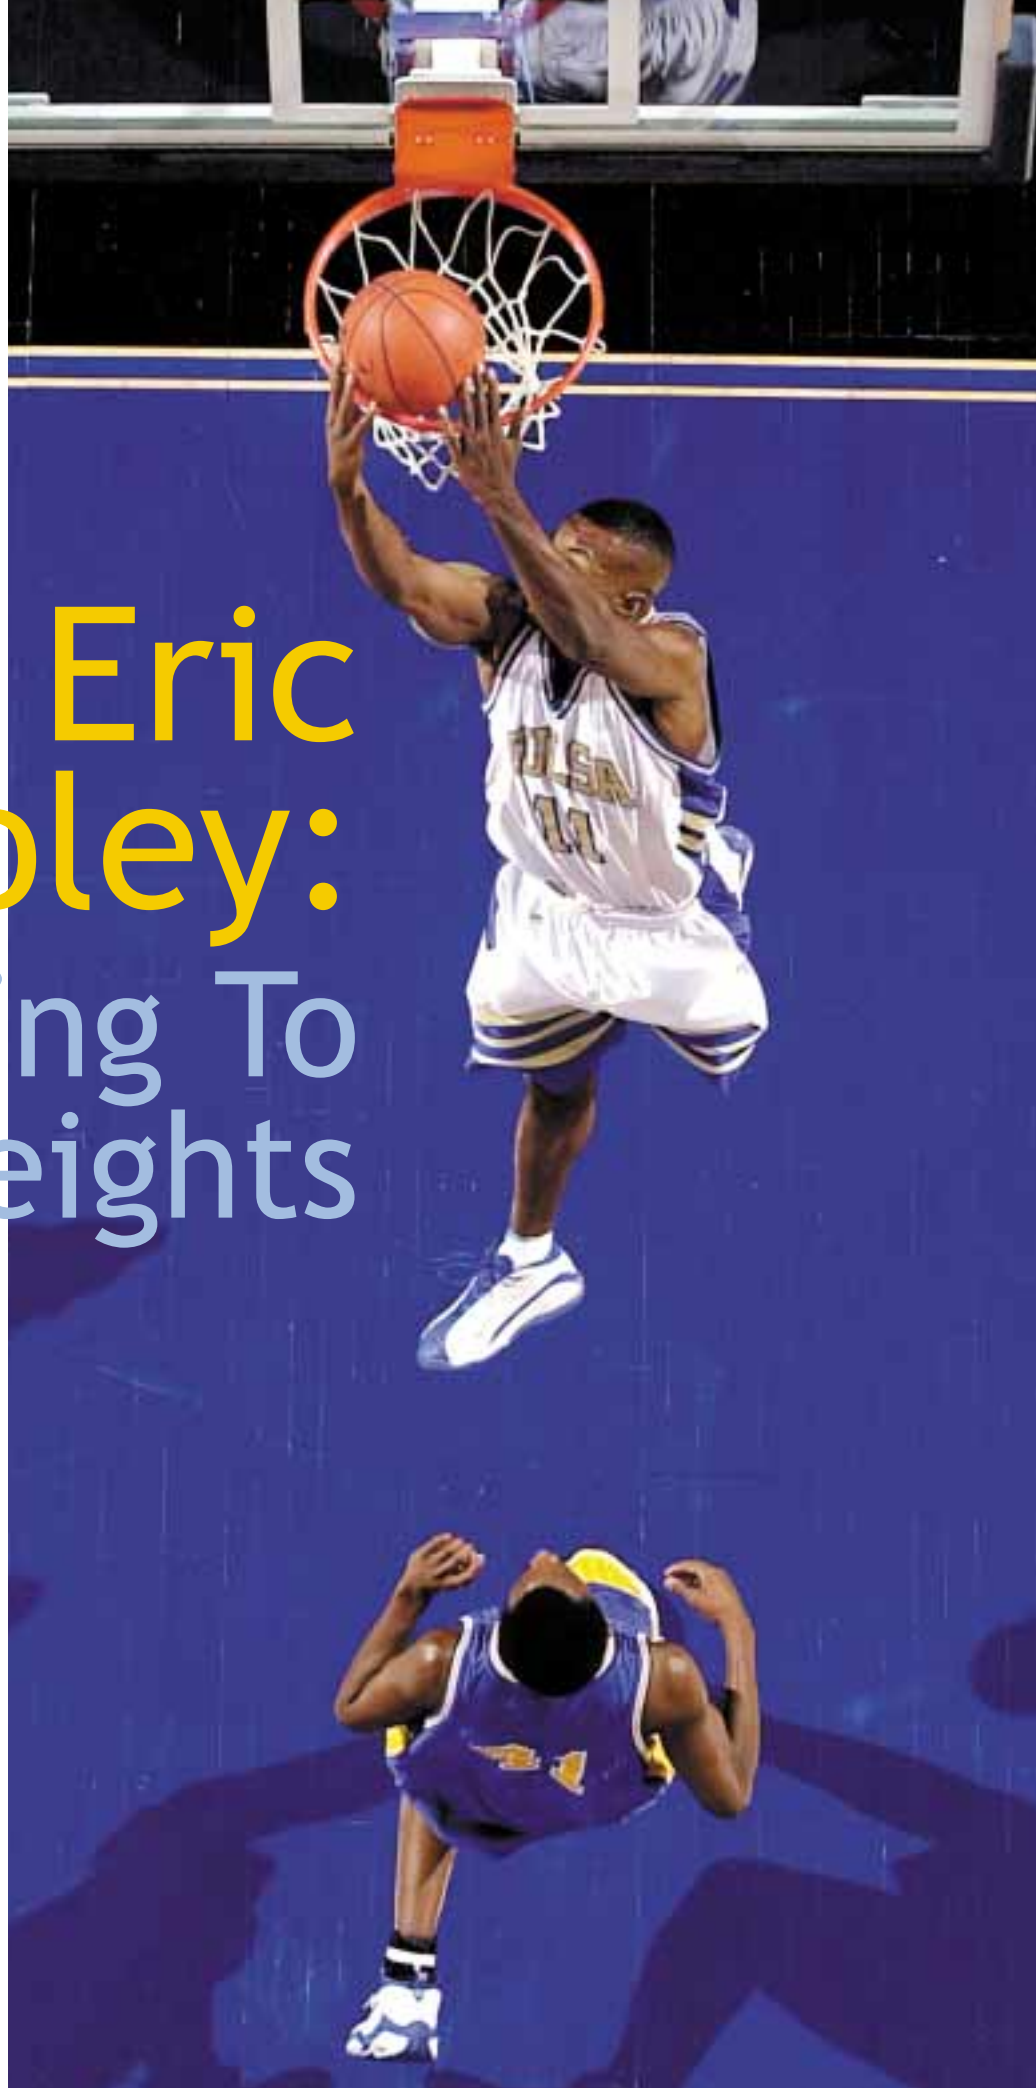

- Books and other materials: 279,864
- Future growth to 250,000 volumes
- Active serial subscriptions: 3,964
- Data jacks: 500
- Three computer labs: 36 PCs; 500 Mhz Pentium IIIs with 128 MB of RAM, flat screen displays, 6 GB hard drives, 100 MB zip drives
- Technology Training Center: 24 laptop computers and "smart podium" for professor
- Access to on-line databases: Westlaw, LEXIS, LOISLAW, VersusLaw
- Tables and carrels wired to the World Wide Web
- Alumni suite with a high-tech conference room

Eric Coley: Rising To New Heights

By Joan Crenshaw
Nesbitt (BA '86)

For some people, there are certain words or phrases that so often punctuate their thoughts and conversations that the words seem to be indelibly written into the stories of their lives.

Sometimes, the words are nothing more than the conversational equivalent of a well-worn pair of shoes or a comfortable chair — a preference that represents not so much choice as habit.

For senior Eric Coley, the emotional and physical leader of the winningest basketball team in TU history, there are three words frequently spoken that reflect his heart, his optimism, his strength, his passion, and his will to become the man he promised his mother he would.

“Without a doubt.”

Whether he’s talking about his tumultuous past or undetermined future, Eric views it all through a lens that reflects life primarily in absolutes — where even uncertainties are seen as opportunities to be seized, and obstacles, like so many that have already been hurdled, are respected but not feared. Where there is room for a realistic assessment of one’s situation, but not for doubt.

“Eric Coley is extraordinarily focused,” says Associate Dean of the College of Business Administration Jim Cagley. Anyone who has seen Coley play basketball knows that description to be an understatement, but Cagley is speaking of the young man he knows as a student.

Coley took Cagley’s “Business in Society” class in the spring of 1998, during his sophomore year and a period when the only thing extraordinary in his life was grief. His mother died of cancer just a few days before the semester began. As if that weren’t enough to contend with, by spring break, Coley was grappling with impending fatherhood.

“Eric had a job to do that semester, and he did it,” Cagley said. “I admire him for that.”

Finishing his demanding TU classes that spring was just one of many jobs the 22-year-old has required of himself the last four years. Coley, who has described his mother as “everything . . . The alpha. The omega,” also was a dutiful son — preparing himself for life without his mother even while trying to help her through her last days. He was a father to Eric, Jr., and more than an uncle to his nephew, Johnathon. He was a typical college student, trying to carve out time for his girlfriend, Cynthia, for his friends, and for himself — to sleep, to hang, to ride the horse that carried him on long rides night after night when his saddle must have borne the weight of the world. And he was a crucial member — the “glue” — of a team destined to write history at TU and to focus the national spotlight on Tulsa and the Golden Hurricane.

And while Coley says he can’t imagine “just being a student” without the word “athlete” hyphenated to that title, he also admits that his senior season was his first at TU when he played purely for love of the game. The first three years — perhaps it was the weight of so many other responsibilities pressing on him — felt a bit like, well, a job.

“Being a Division I basketball player with tremendous outside responsibilities, which he took very seriously — well, I can’t imagine any student being under any more pressure than Eric,” said Barry Kinsey, professor of sociology and TU’s NCAA faculty representative. “In some respects, it is remarkable that he was able to manage it all and, on occasion, do quite good work given the pressures he was under. I don’t know how many of us could have survived.”

Not surviving — whatever that entails — is not an option for Coley, whom former coach Bill Self called a “warrior.”

“He’s as tough as any kid I’ve ever known,” Self said, “not only physical toughness but mental toughness, and he’s proven it on and off the court. When his back is against the wall, that’s when the cream rises to the top and Eric is at his best. You know, life is full of spinning negatives into positives. Eric has an inner strength that has allowed him to spin his misfortune into being an inspiration to other people.”

It is inspiration rooted in his mother’s legacy.

“Everything goes back to my mother,” he said. “She always told me no matter what I did in life she would always love me, but I’m always asking myself, ‘What would my mom think about me right now?’”

He says that thought, along with Eric, Jr., motivates him to “provide every opportunity in the world to make a better life for me and my son and my nephew.”

The first step in making that better life will be taking care of some unfinished business at TU; Coley will return to campus to complete his last few course hours for his degree in sociology. The hurly-burly of the postseason and his work to prove himself to the NBA led him to put his studies on hold just as the semester was drawing to a close.

“Before it’s all said and done,” Coley said, “I’m going to have my degree. It’s one thing I promised my mom.”

And if the NBA doesn’t knock on his door? He says he sees himself coaching at the Division I level.

And, eventually, he knows he will end up “living down in the country,” in McIntosh County, where he will breed quarter horses, rope calves, and walk the familiar streets of Eufaula, a town that took such pride in a favored son that its citizens gave him the key to the city and devoted a day in April to celebrating his accomplishments. Accomplishments that would have made Wanda Coley proud.

Without a doubt. ❖

Targeting TU's Future

Jack Rea (BS '47) has probably forgotten more classified information than most people will ever know.

Although Rea was educated as a chemist, his aptitude for computing and a stint in the Navy steered him into the fascinating field of postwar national defense, where rapidly developing technology met Cold War strategic imperatives.

Rea earned a BS in chemistry at TU and went on to earn an MS in chemistry from the University of Wisconsin. It was about that time that he caught the computer bug.

His first job was for the Allison Division of General Motors, where he used the very first IBM computers to perform mathematical analyses aiding the design of jet and turboprop engines. In subsequent positions with the Rand Corporation (later the System Development Corporation), Rea helped design air defense systems combining the power of radar and computers to monitor and control the deployment of aircraft and missiles.

From 1972 until his retirement in 1991, Rea worked for Raytheon, where his primary role was developing tracking and targeting software for the HAWK missile system, the precursor of the PATRIOT missile.

These days, instead of tracking enemy planes, Rea keeps track of his expanding collection of classical music recordings. He currently owns about 3,500 LP records and close to 6,000 CDs, which he keeps cataloged on his computer. Thanks to Rea's generosity, this collection ultimately will find a home in the TU School of Music. (Rea played trombone in the TU band.) Rea also is an avid reader, especially of science fiction, with continuous collections of sci-fi magazines Analog (from 1939) and the Magazine of Science Fiction and Fantasy.

In addition to bequeathing his music collection to TU, Rea has made plans to have his estate endow the Ralph J. Kaufmann and E.A. Howard Endowed Scholarship Fund, which he currently funds out of monthly disbursements from an IRA. He established the fund in 1994 to honor the two men, who were TU professors.

"Professor Kaufmann was an extremely good teacher and a great man," Rea says.

"He was personable and honorable — a good man to work with." Rea, who himself benefited from a Howard scholarship as a TU student, included E.A. Howard's name on his endowment to commemorate the support that had been there for him.

"Establishing this scholarship fund is my way of paying TU back by passing it on," he says.

Rea was recently inducted into The University of Tulsa Circle Society (see page 10) as a member of the Circle of Patrons.

Distinguished Alumna

Roxana Lorton

It's not one of the most momentous rungs on Roxana Lorton's (BA '63) towering ladder of success, but in its own quaint way it stands out on a piece of paper: As a TU sophomore, she was voted Best-Dressed Woman on Campus.

"Daddy [renowned late TU music professor Béla Rožsa] teased me about that," she says. "He said he didn't make enough money for me to be the best-dressed woman on campus. Still, I guess I had a knack for putting things together."

It's a knack that has served her – and TU – very well over the years. After putting together a successful academic career that saw her graduate with a journalism degree and Outstanding Senior Honors, she went on to build a successful marriage with college sweetheart and Tulsa World publisher Robert E. "Bob" Lorton, Jr. (BA '64). (Bob also earned a TU journalism degree.) Since then, Roxana has put together an impressive list of community leadership roles, including chairing the boards of the Tulsa Philharmonic, Gilcrease Museum, Tulsa Town Hall, and the Philbrook Museum of Art, of which she is chairperson elect. She also has served in board positions with the Tulsa Opera, The Junior League of Tulsa, Planned Parenthood, Girl Scouts, the Tulsa Arts Council, and several other organizations. Not surprisingly, she also is a member of the TU Board of Trustees.

In the TU history books, however, one of the Lortons' most heroic feats has been their successful leadership of the university's pivotal New Century Campaign from 1993-98, when they motivated others to pledge more than $108 million for scholarships, construction, and other university improvements. These funds have already begun fueling the university's next wave of growth and promise to make a dramatic long-term difference to the future of TU.

Without a doubt, Roxana Lorton still has the knack for putting things together.

Dinner with the Pops

Roxana Rožsa grew up in a Mediterranean-style home on Tulsa's scenic Swan Lake. Her mother was athletic – a championship golfer – and a dedicated civic volunteer. She also was creative, working for a while in advertising. Her father was a quintessential intellectual – a classical composer, conductor, and musician and an accomplished chess player. Had he not been a musician, he would have studied medicine and become a surgeon.

The New York Metropolitan Opera Company brought Béla and his parents to New York when they fled Hungary because of the Bolshevik turmoil in 1917. Bela's East-Coast upbringing introduced him to sophisticated social circles; these ties would remain through his adult years. While living in Tulsa, Rožsa periodically played chess with physicist Edward Teller, father of the Manhattan Project. Academics and musicians were regular guests in the Rožsa home for chess, cards, and conversation.

Tulsa World "People and Places" columnist Danna Sue Walker grew up in the same neighborhood; she and Roxana have been lifelong friends, ever since Roxana, in braids and roller skates, knocked on Danna Sue's door and explained, "My best friend used to live here, so now that you're moving in, you have to be my best friend."

Walker remembers the frequent distinguished visitors in the Rožsa home. She recalls one evening when, as junior-high-aged girls, she and Roxana were invited to sit for dinner with visiting members of the Boston Pops Orchestra.

"At that age, of course, we thought we were so sophisticated," Walker says. "We spent the evening talking with them, and they told Dr. Rožsa, 'Oh, these girls are so bright.' After they left, Dr. Rožsa told us, 'Of course they thought you were bright; you agreed with everything they said!'"

By Doug Fishback

More like a family

Given the richness of her upbringing, it's no surprise that Roxana at various times in her adolescence wanted to be an artist, an archaeologist, and an advertising mogul; her interests — and abilities — were that varied. Ultimately, though, she followed her mother's lead and settled on a journalism major, with an emphasis on advertising and the "business end" of the profession. She minored in art.

She joined the TU Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, known for its sisters' high academic standards; was elected secretary of her sophomore and junior classes; and was the first female student to serve as business manager of the Kendallabrum yearbook, a role she performed for two years.

She remembers the time when as business manager, she worked with the all-male Sigma Delta Chi organization, whose members were supposed to sell yearbook ads. When she became frustrated with the slow pace of sales, she gathered up her papers, went out, and sold all the ads herself. Hughes Tool took out a full-page ad. F&M Bank was another big sale.

"My undergraduate days are one of the happiest times of my life," she says. "Because I grew up as the daughter of a TU professor, the whole campus community already was more like a family."

Wonderful, energetic, and loving

Even though they both live fast-paced lives, Bob and Roxana Lorton still take time to end their cell-phone calls with "I loooove you!" For anyone, after 38 years of marriage, those kinds of details matter.

"Wonderful, energetic, and loving" are adjectives that come readily to Bob's mind when describing his wife. "She has taught me how to have fun and always keep a positive outlook," he says.

Asked for an example of "classic Roxana," he recalls the chutzpah she showed in 1977 when, as chairperson of the Tulsa Philharmonic Ball, she moved the gala from its usual venue at stately Southern Hills Country Club to a pulsing Tulsa disco. "The old, stodgy guys may have raised an eyebrow, but everybody else ended up having a great time," he says. "The event even won a national award for innovation." And it raised more money for the Philharmonic than had any previous gala.

Having a great time seems to be inevitable when Roxana Lorton is involved. Danna Sue Walker comments, "She loves to laugh, and she makes sure everyone has a good time. She is a high-energy person."

The late TU professor of English Darcy O'Brien said of her, "The phrase 'never a dull moment' must have been coined to describe Roxana, who lavishes her humor and warmth like paprika. She has that rare and elusive quality, a genuine personal style, joyful and dazzling."

Committed to TU

In a fitting turn, Roxana returned the tribute by working with TU patrons Jack and Debby (JD '82) Oxley to raise funds to endow a chair honoring the professor's memory (See Oxley profile, page 41). O'Brien was a member of TU's nationally recognized Department of English from 1978 to 1996. His area of specialty was fiction writing and 20th-century British, Irish, and American literature. He died March 2, 1998, at the age of 58.

The O'Brien Chair endowment campaign was just one of many ways Roxana has served the university. Through their leadership of the landmark $108 million New Century Campaign alone, the Lortons have secured their places in TU history. In recognition of their longstanding support of TU, the Lortons recently joined other friends of the university as inaugural inductees into The Circle Society. (See page 10.)

As a member of the TU Board of Trustees, Roxana has served on the Building and Grounds, Faculty and Curriculum, and Advancement committees. She is a member of the Golden Hurricane Club, a member of the President's Council, and a former member of the Alumni Board of Directors. She also has been an advisor to Mortar Board. Her service to TU earned her the J. Paschal Twyman Award in 1996.

Behind this impressive list of accomplishments is a strong sense of dedication.

"I have always been committed to the university," Roxana says. "Besides having a strong connection to TU throughout my life, I also see the university as an extension of the community. TU is one of Tulsa's jewels, one of the pluses that help attract new businesses and residents. President Lawless' goal is to move TU into the top 50 universities in the nation. I want to help achieve that goal." ❖

Distinguished Alumna Genave Rogers

What does it mean that two acquaintances of Genave King Rogers (BS '38) during two separate phone conversations on the same day each take time to note how gracefully she waits in airports?

Former TU development officer Tish Peitz Stuart (BS '73) ran into Genave last year in the Las Vegas McCarran International Airport.

"I was returning from a trip," Stuart says. "My flight back to Tulsa was running late. It was late at night, I was tired, and now I was going to be stuck in the airport. As I went back to sit in the chairs, there was Genave. She was returning from a financial conference and was booked for the same flight. Even though it was late, she was as fresh as the morning, sitting there happily reading a financial magazine. The delay didn't ruffle her feathers any; she wasn't deterred at all by the fact the planes were late. She was just excited about this great financial conference she had attended."

Clevanne McGhee Kirberger (BM '52), retired TU Hurricane Club coordinator, can confirm this patience: "She never complains. She just rolls along with what comes."

Rolling along with what comes is one of the main ingredients of Genave Rogers' success. As the eldest of three "Depression kids" and the first female graduate of the TU College of Business Administration, she has blazed her share of trails. Her pioneering spirit helped her make one of the biggest professional decisions of her life: After her husband Leslie Rogers, Tulsa attorney and brother of John Rogers, passed away in 1974, she took on the challenge of managing the couple's investments herself. She could easily have left that task to any of a number of readily available advisors. Today, those investments have grown to the point that looking after them has become a full-time job.

"Genave has a phenomenal business mind," Stuart says. "She learned investing from her husband, and she's been very smart about it over a long period of time. She's really done it on her own. She's quite an impressive woman, ahead of her time in her thinking and in her ambition to be independent and to help other people."

A go-getter

Genave's resolve is nothing new to her sister, Happy Hullings. Asked what the family thought when Genave announced she was going to major in business at TU, Hullings says, "She didn't tell anybody she was going to study business; she just did it. That's Genave for you. She's a go-getter."

The entrepreneurial spirit is no stranger to their family, it turns out. Their brother, Jim King, is founder and president of Regal Chemical Company, Atlanta, Georgia, which supplies chemicals to golf courses throughout the Southeast.

"To understand our family's enterprising spirit, you have to go back to mother," Hap says. "She didn't permit any foolishness. We weren't allowed to say 'can't.' 'Don't tell me you can't,' she'd say. 'You find a way.' And since Genave was older, she had more can'ts put in front of her than the rest of us. She blazed a lot of trails."

A longtime friend

Genave Rogers has blazed many trails in her generous support of TU, as well. To honor her husband's memory, she established the Leslie Rogers Memorial Scholarship Fund in 1977. This fund awards 10 merit-based scholarships each year to TU students who participate in the Greek system. (Genave is a member of the Phi Mu sorority.) She contributed substantially toward the university's ongoing development west of Delaware Street. She also sponsors the "Rogers Rookie Challenge," which stimulates giving among recent TU alumni by providing matching funds. She is a supporter of TU athletics and a former board member of the Golden Hurricane Club. Most recently, she dramatically advanced the College of Business Administration's Business Law program with a generous endowment.

By Doug Fishback

In celebration of her lifetime of support of TU, Genave recently joined several other friends of the university as an inaugural inductee into The Circle Society. (See page 10.)

In addition to supporting TU, Genave has befriended community organizations including Emergency Infant Services and the Tulsa Zoo. She also was a sponsor of the 1998 Williams LPGA Pro Am Golf Tournament.

Generosity and the Rogers name have long been entwined. Genave's brother-in-law, the late John Rogers, for whom John Rogers Hall is named, was central in transforming an independent downtown Tulsa night school into the TU College of Law. To accomplish this task, which was finalized in 1943, John enlisted the financial support of the Chapman-McFarlin interests. Not only that, but John served as dean of the college — without pay — from 1949 until 1957. The Rogers family's support of the College of Law, and now of the College of Business Administration, has made a profound and permanent impact on professional education at The University of Tulsa.

Hold the salads

But simply sharing financial support is not enough. Genave has shown an unmistakable personal interest in those she helps, especially students. Each year, she holds an upscale dinner party for Leslie Rogers Scholars at downtown Tulsa's Petroleum Club. For Tish Stuart, these parties showcase Genave at her best.

"Anyone who knows Genave knows that she has a flair for elegant clothing and jewelry," she says. "She always looks gorgeous at these dinners, and she's always in a great mood. She sits at the head of the table, very proud of her young people."

"During the evening, she'll talk to each student and find out about his or her plans and studies; she's interested in learning about each individual. And she makes it a point to get everyone dancing. She'll encourage everyone to get onto the dance floor, and she'll dance with all the young men. Everyone has a great time. Genave loves for everyone to enjoy these dinners, and her attitude is 'NO, hold the salads; we're dancing!'"

More than wanting students to have fun, however, she wants them to be well-equipped for life. Stuart puts it best: "She is very interested in helping young people become successful, and she deserves her share of credit for TU's next generation of outstanding alumni." This dedication to the success of TU students, combined with her years of experience in managing investments, recently led Genave to make a major gift to TU establishing the Genave King Rogers Endowment for Business Law.

Susan Boyd, Applied Assistant Professor of Business Law, couldn't be happier with Genave's support of the Business Law specialization in the College of Business Administration; Boyd has made it her top priority to get the program up and running — and funded.

"When I told my students about Genave's gift to business law, they cheered and clapped," Boyd says. They absolutely understand the significance of this support.

Given Genave's success, sharp business sense, warm personality, and her genuine concern for students, there is no one I would rather see the Business Law Center named for than her. She's my she-ro." ♦

Distinguished Alumnus Fred Vierra

A 1996 profile in The University of Tulsa Magazine described TU alumnus and telecommunications executive Fred Vierra (BS '57) as "project manager for the global village." Although the year 2000 finds him working with independent technology investment groups instead of chairing TCI International, Inc., his passion for cutting-edge technology and his global focus are stronger than ever.

Take Brazil, for example.

VeloCom, Inc., an international telecommunications company chaired by Vierra, is tapping the emerging South American communications market. After signing an ambitious contract with the Brazilian government to provide telephone service in 44 cities with only 18 months' lead time, VeloCom launched services as promised last January. According to Vierra, the company immediately signed up 100,000 customers and is maintaining robust growth of about 3,000 new customers a day.

Vierra explains his entrepreneurial strategy in deceptively simple terms: "Find a niche that hasn't been served or is being underserved, and get there first." It's a good philosophy, made even more effective by knowing, for example, that Brazil has the ninth largest economy in the world while being ranked a lowly 87th in "teledensity." Put into layman's terms: Brazil has managed to do a booming business with relatively few telephones. Just imagine what Brazilians could do once they've been equipped with advanced communications tools, including a high-capacity data infrastructure providing widespread Internet access and networking capability. (VeloCom already has licenses with the Brazilian government to add data services like Internet access to the voice service it already is providing.)

The market opportunity of an underserved country like Brazil is enough to make Vierra the entrepreneur spring into action. It also fascinates Vierra the global citizen. As a self-described "conceptual person," he is quick to engage topics like the long-term impact of advanced technology on developing nations. He has a historian's interest in forces past and present that shape the human condition.

"The information revolution is so profound that the countries and companies that do not embrace this technology and run with it now will be left behind far worse than those that lost out on the industrial revolution," he says.

Window on the future

The high-tech future will depend on innovative user-end technology and on development of an extensive network infrastructure. Good examples of both can be found in companies connected to Vierra.

PhoneFree.com (www.phonefree.com), an emerging company financed by eVentures Group, Inc., of which Vierra is vice chairman, offers Internet-based voice, video, and text communications services that are free to users. PhoneFree.com lets users turn their PCs into telephones or even (if their computers are equipped with cameras) into "video phones" and place free PC-to-PC or PC-to-phone calls over the Internet. PhoneFree.com is supported by revenues from advertisers whose banners appear in a window at the tops of users' on-screen control panels. Although such technology, known as "IP telephony," is in its early stages, it could ultimately represent a significant competitive threat to traditional telephone service providers.

On the less glamorous but equally vital infrastructural side, Vierra sees wireless technology as a key remedy to the need for quick development, such as the 18-month deployment that VeloCom achieved in Brazil. In particular, wireless solves the problem of "last-mile access," which is the final link between phone company local offices and customers' homes and businesses. It is this street-by-street last-mile build that takes the most time and effort to complete. Wireless technology provides a quick solution whereby strategically placed towers can cover entire neighborhoods or commercial districts while reducing the headaches of last-mile construction.

Falling in love with technology

Vierra's interest in technology took root during his TU days. Although he majored in business, where his favorite courses were economics and management, he kept one eye on the developing field of electronics, taking a course in which one project was wiring a circuit board. After graduating, he went to work (in a non-technical capacity) for a computer company, where his interest in technology caught fire.

"I fell in love with the new technology and whined until they let me take classes to learn to be a computer programmer," he says.

And become a programmer he did. "I actually wrote code that worked," he jokes.

His interest in technology ultimately steered him back into management. Luggage maker Samsonite recruited Vierra to run its information systems group, and from that position he became the company's vice president of finance.

Vierra once again melded his passion for executive management and communications technology when he joined United Cable Television Corporation in 1982 as executive vice president and chief operating officer. Shortly thereafter, he was named president and COO, titles he retained when UCTC merged with United Artist Entertainment Company.

When Tele-Communications, Inc., acquired United Artists in 1991, Vierra became responsible for TCI's international cable and programming operations, which his group eventually took public. When Tele-Communications International, Inc., was formed, Vierra became Vice Chair and CEO of that enterprise.

In recent years, in addition to helping guide VeloCom through business opportunities in South America, Vierra has served on the directing boards of Formus Communications; Telewest Communications, plc; and Flextech, plc. Formus develops broadband wireless technology, primarily in Latin America and Europe. Telewest is a British telecommunications company, and Flextech is a major supplier of thematic channels to the UK television market.

Two lines

As a friendly, approachable man with a wealth of executive experience and perspective (He also has served on the boards of directors of Turner Broadcasting and the Discovery Channel), Vierra is the kind of person you can't help but ask for a pearl of wisdom, which he gladly shares.

"I've always told people who work for me that there are two lines to watch," he says. "First, there is your career development line. That is, your progress in terms of job responsibility and career advancements. Second, there is your learning curve: Are you gaining new knowledge, building your skills?"

"If your career progress line is flat but your learning curve is up, don't worry. Your new knowledge and skills will advance your career over time. If your career progress line is up but your learning curve is a little flat, don't worry. Your advancements will cause you to learn new things. But if both lines are flat, then you're going nowhere. Get out, because you can't afford to waste time."

Tulsa connections

Although he was born in San Francisco, Vierra says he considers Tulsa his hometown. His desire to remain close to friends and family living here weighed heavily in his decision to attend TU after he returned from Marine Corps service during the Korean War.

While working toward his business degree as a marketing and management major, Vierra maintained an active extracurricular life. He served as president of the Sigma Epsilon fraternity and was active in intramural athletics. He also worked part-time at Vandever's Dry Goods Co.

"The fundamentals I got at TU prepared me very well for the evolution of my career," Vierra says.

Fortunately for TU, Vierra has remained close. He is a member of the College of Business Administration Executive Advisory Board, and he and wife Roxanne also have been financial supporters of the college. In 1996, he shared his expertise as a speaker for the TU Friends of Finance.

Vierra, who was named Outstanding Alumnus for the College of Business Administration in 1997, says he is honored to be named one of TU's Distinguished Alumni.

"I'm really quite flattered by it," he says. "There are lots of very fine people who have graduated from The University of Tulsa. To be named a Distinguished Alumnus is very satisfying."

Vierra lives in Denver with Roxanne, his wife of 35 years. The two make the most of his international business activities by traveling together whenever possible. The couple also took up golf a few years ago, "because we didn't have enough things to aggravate us," he jokes.

As far as business goes, Vierra finds enough challenge in his current projects to keep him busy for years to come. "I plan to continue to do what I'm doing," he says, "looking for start-up companies that represent good opportunities for people."

By "people," Vierra doesn't mean just investors. With his comprehensive perspective and his interest in the historical implications of technology, he looks to the companies of tomorrow for more than mere financial return.

"Given the incredible power of technology and the increasing role it plays in daily life, the next generation of innovators has an opportunity to make a tremendous social contribution," Vierra says. "One of the most exciting things about being part of the technology sector is the opportunity we have to help shape the future for people all around the globe." ♦

Mrs. Homecoming 2000 Bonnie Williams

By Doug Fishback

Not only did Bonnie Williams come in on her day off to be interviewed for her Mrs. Homecoming profile, but she also brought homemade chocolate chip cookies. Baked goods have a proud history of ensuring glowing write-ups, but Bonnie hardly needs the help. Ask most anyone, and they'll tell you Bonnie is TU personified.

"She exhibits the most Hurricane spirit of almost anyone on this campus," says Karla Campbell, assistant director of alumni relations. "She is a true Golden Hurricane: dedicated, hard-working, cooperative, creative, and she goes above and beyond."

As assistant director and special events coordinator for the Golden Hurricane Club, Bonnie works in that ever-changing area where one minute she might be debating the merits of canapés versus crab puffs for next week's reception, and the next she might be arranging receipt of a major gift from an athletics benefactor. Whatever the needs of TU Athletics, Bonnie is there to make it all happen, whether that is coordinating the annual All Sports Banquet for 800 TU athletes and athletics staff, arranging for pom-poms and balloons to be distributed at games, or planning TU Athletics Hall of Fame ceremonies. She also works with the Women of the Hurricane and the Lettermen's Association to cultivate support for TU athletics. As development director and former officemate Sandy Willmann puts it, "She works her head off and carries the TU spirit with her wherever she goes."

"I'm doing something I really love doing," says Bonnie, who began working at TU five years ago as a volunteer during the introduction of TU's Western Athletic Conference affiliation. "And I also feel that what I do makes a difference."

Bonnie isn't the only one who believes in the difference she makes. After only two years at TU, she was chosen as employee of the year.

This honor has since been reconceived as the Service That Achieves Results (STAR) Award. Bonnie's daughter, property management secretary Brooke Gregory Lewis, recently followed in her mom's footsteps by being recognized as a 1999-2000 STAR employee after only one-and-a-half years of service.

It's clear that Bonnie's success stems from her personal concern for TU athletes.

"I attend a lot of games, and I love to see the kids perform," she says. "You love to see them do well, because they're almost like your children."

Bonnie's recognition as Mrs. Homecoming was announced at May's All Sports Banquet in front of hundreds of athletes and coaching staff.

"It was a big shock," she says. "I was like a deer in headlights. At first, when they called me over, I thought there was a problem. I thought 'Oh, no, I'm really fired now!' Being named Mrs. Homecoming is really an honor."

Although her job finds her regularly working until eight or nine at night and attending a variety of events, Bonnie still makes time to pursue hobbies. In addition to gardening with her husband, Denny, she attends meetings of The T-Town Questers, which is a local chapter of a group specializing in the history of America through the study of antiques. A journalist by training and by former employment, Bonnie has a passion for heirlooms and the stories surrounding them; she has compiled notebooks on pieces handed down within her own family and has done genealogical work tracing both sides of her family back as far as the 1400s.

Before joining the TU family, Bonnie held positions including associate executive director for the Oklahoma Special Olympics, registrar and office manager for the Bartlesville Public Schools, and columnist for the Simpsonville, South Carolina, Tribune Times. ♦

J. Paschal Twyman Award Winner Arnold Brown

By Doug Fishback

From an institutional standpoint, Arnold Brown's (BS '50) history is ideal; just about everything you would hope an alumnus would accomplish, he has. As a returning World War II Navy veteran, he was an active TU student and successful student-athlete who supplemented his TU petroleum engineering degree with additional graduate courses. He went on to found and lead successful businesses in the petroleum industry. He has underscored his professional achievements by supporting community organizations, and he has maintained robust ties with his alma mater as an alumnus, a trustee, a supporter, and a friend. Now, TU is proud to name him the recipient of the 2000 J. Paschal Twyman Award. The award recognizes individuals who have gone above and beyond in their service to the university.

As a TU student, Brown demonstrated his energy by participating in a variety of activities. He was a member of the Engineers' Club, the student chapter of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, and the Independents Club. He also lettered in varsity baseball three years.

After receiving his petroleum engineering degree in 1950, Arnold completed six hours of graduate study in reservoir engineering at TU. He also completed six courses in management and several short courses in areas including reservoir engineering, oil property evaluation, oil recovery, and drilling. The breadth and depth of his training provided a solid foundation upon which he would build later successes.

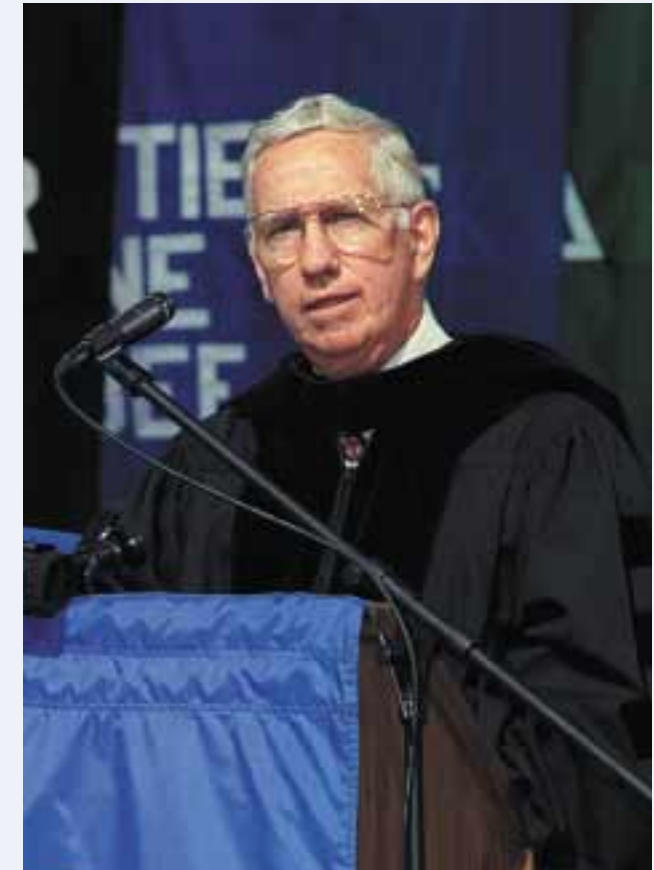

In 1963, Brown formed KWB Oil Property Management, Inc., with Henry Keplinger and Joe M. Wannemacher. This company, which is still in business, provides comprehensive petroleum management services, including short- and long-term business strategies, financing and budgeting, corporate organization and staffing, asset analysis, and field production. Brown currently serves as chair of KWB and as founding partner of Brown & Associates, a KWB subsidiary formed in 1973. His other executive appointments have included serving as CEO of KWB and as president and CEO of subsidiaries KWB, Inc., and Consol Petroleum, Ltd.

Beyond forging a successful and lengthy executive career, Brown has used his resources and energy to support a number of community organizations. In 1989, he served as president of the YMCA of Greater Tulsa, an organization he also supports financially. He is a former trustee of the Tulsa Philharmonic and has served on the Board of Elders of College Hill Presbyterian Church.

Brown's ongoing support of TU is both longstanding and varied. He has served a total of 17 years as a trustee and in 1998 was elected trustee emeritus. He chaired the board from 1985 to 1987 and from 1996 to 1997 was trustee liaison for corporate and foundation giving. He is a member of the Engineering Hall of Fame and in 1983 was named a TU distinguished alumnus.

Brown and his wife, Pat (BA '50), have provided generous financial support to TU. They contributed to the construction of the Donald W. Reynolds Center and to the Michael D. Case Tennis Center, which is currently under construction. They also have contributed to the TU donor recognition fund, which makes it possible for the university to say "thank you" to its supporters by hosting special events. Most notably, the Browns have made arrangements for their legacy of support to continue well into the future; in 1995 they established a deferred gift whereby TU will receive a sizable bequest from their estate.

The 2000 J. Paschal Twyman Award commemorates Arnold Brown, his professional success, his community spirit, and his exemplary service and devotion to The University of Tulsa. ♦

Registry of Patrons

Leadership consists of two key elements: a far-reaching vision of the possible, and dedication to empowering others to achieve that vision. The University of Tulsa is fortunate to have a wealth of leaders—friends who share a vision of excellence in higher education and who provide the support necessary to realize that excellence.

It is our annual honor and privilege to publish the Registry of Patrons, which recognizes, albeit in a very humble way, those who help lead The University of Tulsa toward a brighter, richer, more productive future.

Those included in this Registry of Patrons provided their support from June 1, 1998, to December 31, 1999, inclusive. By choosing December 31, 1999, as our ending date, we are positioning ourselves to begin publishing the registry to correspond to the calendar year instead of to the fiscal year, as has traditionally been the case.

The university staff has made every effort to provide a complete and accurate listing of donors and gifts received during this period. Please accept our apologies if any mistake or omission has been made. In the event of mistakes or omissions, please contact the Office of Institutional Advancement, The University of Tulsa, 600 South College Avenue, Tulsa, OK, 74104, or call (918) 631-2561, and we will correct our records.

International Scholarship Honors Richard Hojel

Long before most people began talking about the “global economy,” a handful of enterprising individuals were busy building it. Richard Hojel (BSBA ’61) counts among those business leaders for whom there were no borders.

As president of Corporación Frigus-Therme, S.A. de C.V., Hojel oversaw interests in the U.S. and his native Mexico, most of which focused on manufacturing for the oil, petrochemical, and gas development sectors.

As part of his dedication to international economic development, he served as chairman of the Institute of the Americas on the campus of the University of California – San Diego, from 1992 to 1995.

Hojel, whose time at TU was his first experience of living outside Mexico, was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and was named a TU Distinguished Alumnus in 1982.

To honor the late Richard Hojel’s accomplishments and preserve his ideals of international opportunity, TU trustee Phyllis Hojel, his wife; their four children; and longtime friends Nancy and Peter Meinig have endowed a scholarship fund. The fund provides scholarships for undergraduate and graduate students in petroleum engineering, with a selection preference given to citizens and residents of Mexico. Phyllis and Richard Hojel were recently inducted into The University of Tulsa Circle Society (see page 11) as members of the Circle of Leaders.

“Supporting international scholarships is an excellent way of bringing cultures together,” Mrs. Hojel said. “Bringing Mexican scholars to TU, giving them the opportunity to live in the United States and exposing them to the U.S. spirit of democracy and free enterprise is a gift in which not many Mexicans are able to participate. The Richard C. Hojel Scholarship gives both Mexican and North American students the opportunity to learn more about each other, and, I believe, this contributes to both cultures.”

Mrs. Hojel – then Phyllis Schumacher – attended TU as a liberal arts major from 1960 to 1962. Since her husband’s death, she and their children; Lisa; Richard, Jr.; Mark; and Gina; have managed the family businesses.

PROJECT 2000: Willis Wood Honors TU Roots Across the Miles

Willis B. “Bill” Wood, Jr. (BS ’57) may tell you that as a petroleum engineering major at The University of Tulsa, he was a “slow bloomer,” but don’t let his modesty fool you. His career is a case study in rising through the ranks.

After graduating from TU, he worked for oil companies in Texas and California before joining the Pacific Enterprises group of companies in Los Angeles, where he served in a number of executive positions before becoming executive vice president of the largest subsidiary, Southern California Gas Company. He eventually became chairman and CEO of Pacific Enterprises and retired in 1998 after successfully merging the company with ENOVA Corporation to form Sempra Energy.

In addition to being regular supporters of the TU College of Engineering Annual Fund, Wood and his wife, Dixie, more recently contributed toward Project 2000, a College of Engineering and Natural Sciences initiative to provide scholarships for promising petroleum engineering students who are residents of the United States.

“An engineering degree can give you an entrée into other fields, such as business or law,” he said. “In my case, TU gave me a tremendous education; it was the right school at the right time.” He cites strong faculty and the individual attention afforded by TU’s size as key contributors to his college experience.

Wood’s professional success and extensive civic involvements in southern California have offered him ample opportunity to forget his Tulsa roots, but this Kansas City native has made it a point to continue to support TU. “I got a tremendously good education there, and I’ve felt that I owe TU something,” he said.

Wood notes with amusement that since his recent retirement, he seems busier than ever. His many private-sector and civic involvements include board positions at two colleges and the California Medical Center Foundation. He also is a trustee of the John and Dora Haynes Foundation, which funds research in areas of social interest in California.

DOING WHAT CAN BE DONE: Stafford Finds TU Education A Good Investment

The year was 1950, the war had ended only four years earlier, and a young man named Raymond K. Stafford (BS '54, LLB '58), family in tow, stepped onto campus to begin his accounting studies at TU. He chose TU on the recommendation of a friend who had attended the engineering school. He also chose TU because it offered veterans' housing, and for this young man with a wife and a child, that was a great opportunity.

Many of Stafford's memories of TU are tied to the experiences he had living in the veterans' housing, located about where the south section of seating of the Donald W. Reynolds Center now stands.

"I remember when one of our friends rented a television set. We all gathered to watch the Republican National Convention and the nomination of Eisenhower for President," recalls Stafford.

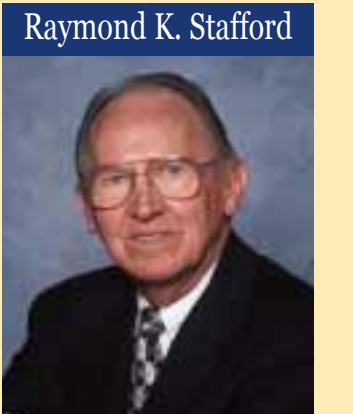

He also recalls the hot summers in Tulsa. While sitting on his porch he watched the football team go through their early morning workouts a few feet away.

Stafford completed his bachelor's in accounting in 1954 and received his LLB (equivalent to today's JD) from the TU College of Law in 1958. He is a CPA as well as a member of the Oklahoma Bar Association and the United States Supreme Court Bar. He retired from Amerada Hess Corporation in 1990, where he served as a senior vice president and chief financial officer.

He has been an annual donor to the university since 1971. Always interested in education, Stafford has long believed that giving back to his alma mater is his own way to help future generations. Jane and Raymond Stafford were recently inducted into The University of Tulsa Circle Society (see page 11) as members of the Circle of Friends.

"The future of our children and grandchildren is education. Anything one can do, should be done to support education," he says.

Stafford currently resides in New Jersey with his wife, Jane. They have four children: Terre Frank, Patricia Oakley, Susan Smith, and Bradley Stafford. Terre and Brad also are TU alumni. The Staffords take great pride in their eleven grandchildren.

MacKays Keep Support Close to Home

Tulsa entrepreneurs and UC Berkeley graduates Andy and Helen MacKay have chosen to lend considerable support to The University of Tulsa that might understandably have gone instead to the institution where they earned their own advanced degrees.

The MacKays own and manage Tulsa’s Maccor, Inc., which builds sophisticated testing equipment for batteries. They chose to base the business in Tulsa in 1986 after living and working in a number of locations, from the Bay Area in California to Boston. Several of Maccor’s 50 employees are TU graduates.

“Life in Tulsa has been good to us,” Andy explains. “Our business has been very successful, and the time came to give something back to the community. We have chosen to contribute to TU because we’ve been very impressed by the quality of the university. Several of our key employees are TU graduates, so through them TU has helped us become successful. In addition, Helen and I have been impressed by Dr. Lawless. He and everyone else at TU have treated us like family.”

And the MacKays certainly have returned the favor. In addition to being passionate backers of athletics through their Hurricane Club membership, they have, through Maccor, donated equipment to TU’s chemistry department. In addition, they have contributed substantially to the Presidential Scholarship Program, an endowment program providing annual full scholarships for distinguished students. Ongoing support of this program is allowing TU to attract and retain the highest-caliber students. Helen and Andy MacKay were recently inducted into The University of Tulsa Circle Society (see page 11) as members of the Circle of Patrons.

Andy also benefited from scholarships as a student. His father was in the Navy, and a top-notch education would have been difficult to afford were it not for a National Merit Scholarship and, in graduate school, a fellowship. “The chance to attend a top university has made a big difference in my life,” he says. “That’s why Helen and I chose to invest in the Presidential Scholarship Program.”

Oxleys Remember Darcy O'Brien

John and Debby (JD, '82) Oxley preserve the family tradition of getting wholeheartedly behind a worthwhile enterprise. John — “Jack” to his friends — and his father, the late John T. Oxley, founded Oxley Petroleum in 1962 — a business that thrives today.

After the senior Oxley passed away, Jack continued to grow the family’s thoroughbred operations, running horses in top races, including the Kentucky Derby. On November 6 of last year, Jack and Debby’s horse, Beautiful Pleasure, won the $2 million Breeders’ Cup Distaff race.

Indeed, when it comes to investing in worthwhile pursuits, the Oxleys don’t blink; they act.

That’s why when TU alumni and supporters Bob (BA '64) and Roxana (BA '63) Lorton approached them about supporting the endowment of a university chair honoring late TU English professor Darcy O'Brien, the Oxleys signed on with gusto, providing more than half the necessary funds under commitment of The Oxley Foundation.

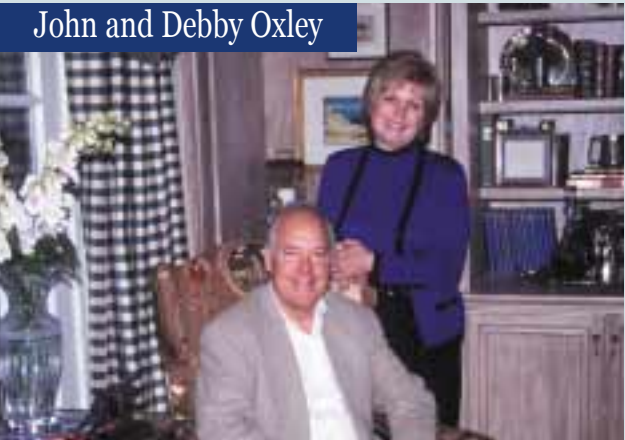

O'Brien was a member of TU’s Department of English from 1978 to 1996. His areas of specialty were fiction writing and 20th-century British, Irish, and American literature. He died March 2, 1998, at the age of 58.

O'Brien was more than a distinguished professor to the Oxleys; he was a close friend. “He was the most genuine person you could hope to meet,” said Jack, who had known O'Brien since the 1970s. “When you were talking with him, it was the most important thing in the world to him at that moment.”

The Oxleys also contributed generously to the New Century Campaign. Additionally, the Oxley Foundation provides scholarships for TU students.

“We enjoy supporting TU,” Jack said. “We’re thankful for the many blessings and interests that make our lives so interesting, and we like to pass along some of our good fortune when we have the opportunity.”

The Oxley Foundation, represented by Jack and Debby Oxley, was recently inducted into The University of Tulsa Circle Society (see page 11) as a member of the Circle of Benefactors.

McGraw Embodies Tulsa Spirit of Generosity

Joseph R. McGraw (LLB '59) fully embraces the spirit of giving that characterizes Tulsa. His generosity across nearly four decades has included contributions of time, service and effort supported by notable monetary gifts.

McGraw, an active member of the College of Law Fund Raising Committee, secured many outstanding contributions to the new Mabee Legal Information Center. “The point is that we’ve all graduated from TU and had a better life because of it. TU provided not only a great education, but associations with classmates that are invaluable. For me, helping the university is a given.”

After graduating from TU’s College of Law in 1959, McGraw headed west for a position as an assistant trust officer with Bank of America in San Francisco. There one of his responsibilities was managing property — a task that proved fortuitous. McGraw discovered that he enjoyed the real estate business. Upon returning to Tulsa, he joined Crouch-Davisson-Mulhall, Realtors, as a sales associate.

After a few years at Crouch, McGraw formed his own company, but not before undertaking a significant service to his community—as a two-year member of the Oklahoma House of Representatives followed by six years in the State Senate. Ultimately, his business demanded his full attention, and McGraw left the political arena. His company merged with Crouch Davisson Stewart to become the highly successful McGraw Davisson Stewart, Realtors.

McGraw, who is director of the Greater Tulsa Board of Realtors Foundation among many other professional associations, says, “Oklahomans, and especially Tulsans, are a very giving people, and I count it a privilege to support this community. I come from a family whose philosophy is to give and support community causes. By giving, you truly receive.”

The spirit of giving equally inspires McGraw’s wife, Carol, who founded the Brush Creek Boys’ Ranch more than 20 years ago. “She recognized a need and knew how to fill it,” he says.

Both McGraws serve on the Mental Health Association Advisory Board. “For us, giving back to the community and the university is the most natural thing to do, especially in Tulsa, where generosity is the norm.”

O’Hornett Extends Chapman Legacy

If we put the words “hometown” and “philanthropy” together, almost certainly the next words in line would have to be “Chapman Trusts.” Maintained by the Chapmans, McFarlins and related families, these trusts have been an unflinching wellspring of support for The University of Tulsa for the last half century.

The support given to TU by the Chapman Trusts, however, is best viewed in the context of a broader legacy of community support. Hometown pride, in fact, is one of the top reasons Mrs. Frances Walter O’Hornett, known to her friends as “Frannie,” has contributed to the university.

“Our family has always supported The University of Tulsa because we live in Tulsa and want excellence for the institution,” she said.

At the age of 82, Frannie carries on her family’s custom of supporting a city and a university of distinction. She is involved with TU’s McFarlin Fellows, and her generosity helped endow the Darcy O’Brien Chair in memory of the beloved professor of English. She also recently pledged a substantial gift to the TU Presidential Scholarships program, which helps TU attract and retain top students through full scholarships.

As the daughter of the late Frederick and Pauline McFarlin Walter, Frannie witnessed many acts of family philanthropy. She speaks proudly of her mother’s efforts with the Tulsa Junior League to provide medical care locally for children with disabilities. Pauline Walter also spearheaded fundraising for construction of a convalescent home that years later became the Children’s Medical Center with Chapman-McFarlin financing. Frances and the late Patrick O’Hornett were recently inducted into The University of Tulsa Circle Society (see page 11) as members of the Circle of Leaders.

With such examples of generosity forming the backdrop of her upbringing, it is little surprise that Frannie takes such satisfaction from helping TU students get a first-class education: “I’m glad to know that every one of the Presidential Scholarships makes a quality education affordable for outstanding high school students.”

Frances O’Hornett

Happy Memories Yield A Sound Investment

TU's School of Music provides the perfect space for students to define the nuances of a Beethoven sonata or create their own cool jazz riffs thanks in part to the continued gifts of Bob and Jean Shaffer Roberts (BBA '39) of Dallas.

The Rachel Watson Shaffer student lounge and computer room in Tyrrell Hall was the first gift made to TU by the Roberts in memory of her mother, a concert singer.

Most recently, the couple funded the Bob and Jean Roberts Music Instruction Suite, a space that accommodates 10 electronic pianos and includes jazz and cello studios. Each studio is large enough to support one-on-one instruction for private lessons and chamber music coaching.

These gifts to the university arise from Jean's happy memories of her student days at TU. She recalls working with a young Ben Henneke in establishing TU's first theatre. They named it the Experimental Theatre, and Henneke, who would eventually earn a doctorate and become president of the university, adapted such classics as Tartuffe. Jean played two parts in Tartuffe and also played the lead in the Henneke version of Pinocchio. It's a measure of her natural exuberance that she played the puppet-come-to-life before Walt Disney produced the beloved cartoon movie. Bob and Jean Roberts were recently inducted into The University of Tulsa Circle Society (see page 11) as members of the Circle of Friends.

The Experimental Theatre was not Jean's only campus activity. She was president of Chi Omega when the sorority built its house at 3100 East 5th Place. It was a point of pride that Chi O was the first sorority house on campus and was designed by Tulsa's legendary Ada Robinson, designer of the Boston Avenue Methodist Church. (Coincidentally, Bob and Jean were married there by Grady Snuggs, then head of TU's Religion Department.)

The generosity of Bob and Jean Roberts extends beyond the music department to the College of Business Administration, where they have endowed a scholarship. The couple endorse learning by doing, a philosophy both music and business majors can appreciate.

Buzz Peterson Named Men's Basketball Coach

On June 20 Robert "Buzz" Peterson was named head basketball coach. He comes to TU after a four-year stint at Appalachian State University. Peterson, 37, brings 13 years of Division I coaching experience to TU. As a coach, he has been a part of five teams that advanced to post-season competition, including three trips to the NCAA Tournament and two appearances in the National Invitation Tournament (NIT). Peterson played on four NCAA Tournament teams at North Carolina.

"We are extremely pleased to have Buzz Peterson as our basketball coach," said Judy MacLeod. "It is obvious by his past coaching experiences that Coach Peterson has been involved in building winning basketball programs."

In four years at Appalachian State, Peterson compiled a 79-39 overall record and 47-14 Southern Conference regular season mark. His teams won or shared the Southern Conference North Division championship in each of the last three seasons, and posted 20 or more wins in those final three campaigns. Peterson was named the Southern Conference Coach of the Year Award in both 1998 and 2000.

Student-Athletes Recognized at Banquet

The University of Tulsa recognized its athletic teams and student-athletes in April at the school's fifth Annual All-Sports Banquet. Top awards were given to TU's "Ultimate Team" members, recognizing the all-around achievements of Tulsa's top eight student-athletes. In addition, the "Ultimate Service" Award and the Dan Bitson Courage Award were presented.

The "Ultimate Team" members for the 1999-2000 academic year are Jeremy McClure (football), Meagan Misner (soccer), John Mosley (football), Kasie Pittman (Basketball), Monica Poveda (tennis), Tim Surface (cross country/track & field), Inemesit Usoroh (track & field) and Fride Vullum (cross country/track & field). Each of the honorees are first-time recipients of the award. The "Ultimate Service" Award was presented to football manager Trey Benaar.

The Dan Bitson Courage Award was presented to senior softball catcher Kerri Hasselbar.

Student-athletes named business professor Susan Boyd Professor of the Year.

The Warren Garrison Academic Excellence Award went to senior cross country and track and field athlete David Bohlen.

Women's Tennis Strong

The University of Tulsa women's tennis team posted a record-setting 21-6 season in 1999-2000, receiving its first-ever selection to the NCAA Championship. Under the guidance of second-year Head Coach Paige McMurray, the Hurricane shattered 12 school records.

The squad finished first in the Central Region, second at the Western Athletic Conference Tournament and earned its highest-ever national ranking — No. 23 — in April. TU also set school marks for consecutive wins with 13, was 11-6 against nationally ranked teams and was 6-1 at home.

McMurray, who gave birth to her first child, Jake Patrick, on Christmas Day, was named the Central Region Coach of the Year and became the fastest coach to reach 30 wins in just her second season.

Track Teams Productive

The 1999-2000 track season was very productive for the Golden Hurricane men and women. Not only did 29 school records fall, but TU athletes qualified 12 events for both the NCAA Indoor and Outdoor Championships.

Women's Golf Delivers Parting Gift to McNamara

When TU's women's golf team hosted the Western Athletic Conference Women's Golf Championships here in April, their goal was clear: Retain the WAC championship. That they did. By winning the tournament, the team brought a final jewel to retiring coach Dale McNamara's 26-year reign as one of the winningest women's golf coaches in the nation.

Hawaii, San Jose State, SMU, TCU, UTEP, and Tulsa played 54 holes at the par-72, 6,066-yard course at Forest Ridge Country Club in Broken Arrow.

Introducing Melissa McNamara

Former TU All-America golfer Melissa McNamara has been named women's golf coach for the Golden Hurricane.

McNamara, 34, succeeds her mother, Dale, who retired following 26 seasons as the Tulsa coach. The younger McNamara, who is currently on the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour, qualified for the 2000 U.S. Women's Open.

"I'm extremely excited about coaching at my alma mater," McNamara said. "I think I can bring a wealth of experiences to assist our student-athletes. I hope that I can help young people make decisions not only in the game of golf, but in life."

"Melissa was highly recommended by numerous community leaders, and she sold herself to the search committee," said TU Athletic Director Judy MacLeod.

In 11 seasons on the LPGA Tour, McNamara posted wins at the 1991 Stratton Mountain LPGA Classic and teamed with Mike Springer to medal at the 1993 J. C. Penney Classic.

Angela Henderson Named New Alumni Director

The top priority for Angela Henderson, TU's new alumni director, is to nourish an at-home feeling in TU alumni about their alma mater. Henderson has a strong and practical vision for the Alumni Association — to reach out to alumni and to get more alumni involved with the university. "It is very important to us that our alumni remain connected and active in the life of their alma mater."

Right now, her focus is on making this year's Homecoming truly memorable for alumni — ensuring that every detail is covered.

"TU is like a family," says Henderson, a native of Bartlesville, who has a 16-month old son, Jared. She and her husband, Dwayne, a civil engineer for Skiatook, reside in Owasso.

"In college, you form lifelong relationships and friendships with fellow students, professors, and staff. These are the people who help shape you, and they are the people you stay in touch with throughout your life; the people you share your laughter and tears with forever. I'm hoping that Homecoming will be reminiscent of a large family reunion."

Alumni involvement means connecting or reconnecting to the university and staying connected. "My goal is to bring alumni back to campus as often as possible and to bring the Alumni Association to the areas where our alumni live." Henderson outlines a two-pronged approach to keeping alumni up-to-date on TU: first, to make sure that all on-campus programs are attractive and accessible so that alumni will feel proud to be part of TU events; second, to reach out to alumni who live outside of Tulsa.

"I want alumni to feel that TU is their family, and that the campus is their home."

Come Out of Your Shell

There were plenty of fixins' for alumni from the Classes of 1989 to 1999 who gathered for a "Holiday" on the U at a Cajun-style Shrimp Boil and Catfish Dinner last April. Following the spicy delights, the alumni gathered at J.R.'s for an After Glow get-together.

Old Heroes, New Leaders, All Friends

Albert ('BS 86) Myres (right) and Angela, his wife, got to know new TU Head Football Coach Keith Burns at an alumni gathering at Houston's DoubleTree Post Oak Hotel last May. Myres lettered in football during his TU days.

Under the Stars with Mozart

TU alumni journeyed to Woolaroc's natural outdoor amphitheater for the annual TU night at OK Mozart. The concert featured the Solisti New York Orchestra conducted by Ransom Wilson.

Alumni enjoyed a light repast, then settled in for an evening of music by Mozart, Hummel, Haydn, and Doppler. The evening concluded with Handel's "Music for the Royal Fireworks" accompanied by a spectacular fireworks finale.

John (BA '65, JD '68) and Carolyn Catron (BS '67) Woodard enjoy their picnic dinner at the festival.

TU friends Dr. Jennifer Gibbons and Tom Clark were among the 75 participants who made the journey to Woolaroc for this year's event.

Love for TU

"You can be in the right place at the right time, but you also have to be ready to do the right thing," says real estate entrepreneur Mike Case. As someone who launched a real estate management business during the unsteady markets of the 1980s and has emerged as a key player in residential and commercial real estate, he is uniquely qualified to talk about doing the right thing in the face of opportunity.

Certainly his decision to captain fund raising efforts for the Michael D. Case Tennis Center gets no argument from TU fans. This 54,000 square-foot facility, which is part of the university's Donna J. Hardesty Sports and Recreation Complex, will feature six indoor and 12 outdoor competition courts, spectator seating, electronic scoreboards, lighting for night competition, conditioning and training facilities, staff offices, lounges, and a pro shop.

With a cost of $7 million, the project was no small fundraising challenge.

"Raising the support was more time consuming than I had thought it would be," Case says. "Securing the last 15 or 20 percent was tough. I called in a lot of favors. But if we were going to do this project, it was going to be a first-class deal."

What motivated Case to do this deal in the first place? Case and his wife, Pat, are tennis enthusiasts. In addition, Case's friendship with TU Head Tennis Coach Vince Westbrook and interest in the TU program were key factors. Add to that a real estate executive's understanding that what's good for TU is good for Tulsa, and the project was off and running.

At the March 22 groundbreaking for the center it was announced that TU will host the 2004 NCAA tennis championships — exposure Case likes to see.

"High-profile tournaments attract visitors," he says. "When you bring a few thousand people to the city for four or five days, that's obviously good for the economy. In addition to the economic benefit, this level of exposure is good for Tulsa's image. When ESPN comes and does tournament coverage, and in the process features the city, it puts Tulsa in a better light."

In 1983, Case founded Case & Associates, which began as a property management firm and in 1986 began purchasing and leasing properties. Although the company still owns and manages commercial properties, the focus is primarily on multi-family structures. The familiar red Case & Associates cube currently marks more than 20,000 apartment units in the Southwest.

"We started this business when times were tough, but we've been able to make the right decisions and take advantage of opportunities," Case says. "Starting when we did has helped us develop the ability to be smart about what we do."

Case, whose desk includes a phone and a ten-key calculator but no computer, still personally crunches the numbers on every real estate purchase the company makes. He also does not close any deal without "walking the units" himself to make sure they meet the company's standards.

Although he maintains a hands-on role in the company's daily business, Case, at age 50, is cashing in on his success by making time for family and fun.

"My biggest success is that I have three children and seven grandchildren," he says. "For a man my age, that's pretty good. Everything else goes away someday, but family is what's really important."

When he's not in the office or checking out a property, Case likes to spend time on the golf course or tennis court. He and Pat also enjoy traveling. Three or four times a year, the couple forego the company jet, hop on their 45-foot tour bus, and enjoy a few days on the road.

Whether he's working or playing, Case likes to maintain an active lifestyle. "I'm not one to sit around," he says. "I like to work hard and play hard. That way I never get bored."

Rockin' Austin

Golden Hurricane fans blew into Austin, Texas, last March to rally behind the men's basketball team as it marched into the Sweet 16. The festivities reached fever pitch at Scholz Garten, which was teeming with TU supporters. Fans, the band and cheer squad rallied behind Dr. Bob Lawless who used a megaphone to pump up the volume as fans headed for the Frank Irwin Center to witness the Golden Hurricane sweep past the Miami Hurricanes, placing TU for the first-time ever among the Elite Eight.

Allan G. Barclay, Ph.D. (BA '55) recently received the American Psychological Association Award for Distinguished Contributions to Public Service.

Gayle Williamson (BM '56) has joined Patterson Realtors in Tulsa. He has been involved in commercial real estate for more than 30 years. An accomplished pianist and composer, Gayle currently serves on the board of the Oklahoma Jazz Hall of Fame and handles publicity for the Tulsa Jazz Society.

Garvin Emanuel (BS '57) writes that he retired from NASA Marshall Space Flight Center in November 1990 and is enjoying an active retirement life. He and his wife, Karol, live in Huntsville, Alabama.

Dr. Walter F. James (BS '57) was named 1999 Kansas Accounting Educator of the Year by the Kansas Society of Certified Public Accountants. Walter is a professor emeritus at Washburn University and taught accounting for 32 years at the University of Missouri, Oklahoma State University and Washburn. He lives in Topeka, Kansas.

David C. Hunt (BS '58) is the director of the Stark Museum of Art. He has had several books published and is listed in Who's Who in American Art and in Contemporary Authors. He and his wife, Carol, (BS '67) live in Orange, Texas. They have three children: Laura; Anne, who graduated from TU in 1999; and Matthew, who is currently a junior at TU.

Jerry Goodman (BA '61) was sworn in as Chief Judge of the Oklahoma Court of Civil Appeals.

H. Ross Hawkins (BS '61) took early retirement from Morgan Stanley Dean Witter and became full-time president of The Hummingbird Society, a conservation organization dedicated solely to hummingbirds that he founded in 1996. He and his wife, Beth, live in North East, Maryland.

David Keithley (BS '61) was appointed vice president and manager of corporate audit for Bank of Oklahoma in Tulsa.

Lewis (Lew) Burns (BS '62) was recognized as an outstanding alumnus by TU's College of Business Administration. He is president, CEO and director of Dover Industries, an independent subsidiary of Dover Corporations. He lives in Dundee, Illinois with his wife, Wynona. They have four children and six grandchildren.

James L. Embry (BS '63) and his wife, Sarah, celebrated the birth of their first grandson, Mason Embry, on October 31, 1999. James is president of Profiles of Kansas City and lives in Olathe, Kansas.

James E. Frasier (BS '63, JD '65) will serve as president of the Oklahoma Trial Lawyers Association for 2000. He also serves as a representative to the Democratic National Committee from Oklahoma and on the DNC Executive Committee. He and his wife, Sally Freeman Frasier (BS '63), have two children and live in Tulsa.

Charles Bryan Worthen (BS '63) and his wife, Freda Jo, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on June 17, 2000. They live in Houston.

O.A. "Duke" Griffey, III (BSBA '64) has been elected to the Board of Directors of City Bank in Shreveport, Louisiana. He is senior vice president at City Bank. Duke has over 30 years experience in banking and has served as a banking and financial institution instructor in the banking system and as a guest lecturer in the MBA program at Centenary College. He also has taught as an adjunct professor at Centenary. Duke is active in the community and currently serves as vice chairman of the Louisiana Heart Walk and as a board member of Louisiana Heart. He and his wife, Lynda, live in Shreveport. They have two daughters; Allison is an anesthesiologist in Benton, Arkansas, and has two children, Alexis and Avery. Kristen is a speech therapist at Willis Knighton Medical Center in Shreveport.

William E. Dunstan (MA '66) teaches at North Carolina State University and has published Ancient Greece. It is the second volume written by him for the Harcourt Brace Series on Ancient Civilizations. The Ancient Near East was published in 1998 and Ancient Rome is slated for 2001. William lives in Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

Bill Foy ('66) has had two articles published in national magazines. "Small Door, Big Trouble" appeared in Flying Magazine and "Out in the AM, Back in the PM" was published in Plane & Pilot Magazine. He also has authored a book titled, West of Serengeti, which recounts his and his wife's experiences living in Uganda and Kenya, East Africa as missionary teachers. They both taught in college and in the public school system in East Africa. Bill owned and utilized two aircraft in Africa to facilitate their mission's endeavors. He currently lives in Schellsburg, Pennsylvania.

T.D. "Pete" Churchwell (BS '67) has been named to a senior management position as American Electric Power and Central and South West Corp. prepare for their merger. He will serve as state president - Oklahoma in the new organization. Pete also was honored by the Tulsa Education Fund at its third annual Excellence in Education Award dinner in March. He was recognized for his strong commitment to education and assistance in establishing and supporting the TEF endowment fund.

R. Bruce Montgomery (BA '67) writes that after successful careers in teaching secondary level high school, as a licensed substance abuse counselor and a realtor, he has decided to "really bite the bullet" and enter law school at the age of 55. He will graduate in May 2002. He lives in Georgetown, Maine.

Larry Alsop, Lt. Colonel, USAF Ret. (BS '68) is a captain for United Airlines, flying the Boeing 737, based at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago. He and his wife, Debbie (BS '69), live in a suburb of St. Louis. Their three children and four grandchildren also live nearby.

Dean M. Trafelet (JD '68) has been appointed a trustee of the American Home Products Corp. Settlement Trust by the United States District Court in Philadelphia. The five bil-

Dr. John Forrest

John Forrest, M.D., (BA '72) is not content simply to practice medicine; he is actively involved in shaping it, as well.

Forrest, a Tulsa urologist specializing in interstitial cystitis and urologic oncology, has supplemented his clinical practice with a host of board appointments and organizational commitments that place him at the forefront of medical developments.

"I've never liked decisions being made that might govern my future without my having input," he says. "I always have enjoyed being involved in shaping issues, whether they're medical, political, social, or academic."

Forrest is an appointed member of the Practice Guidelines, Parameters, and Standards Committee of the American Urological Association. This committee works closely with the federal government in designing and evaluating national guidelines for the care of urologic diseases.

He also is one of only two private-practice physicians appointed to the seven-member National Board of Medical Advisors for the Interstitial Cystitis Association (ICA). Forrest has done extensive work on interstitial cystitis, a chronic inflammatory disease of the bladder, and regularly delivers professional presentations on the disease as part of his role with the ICA.

In addition to being president of the Tulsa Surgical Society, Forrest is president of Utica Physicians Associated, Limited. This organization, comprising more than 500 physicians throughout northeastern Oklahoma, addresses professional issues such as pension management and contract evaluation.

Fortunately for TU, Forrest's passion for service extends beyond the world of medicine. He recently completed a term as a TU trustee, and he also has served as president of the Golden Hurricane Club and on the Alumni Association Board of Directors. Forrest and his wife, Cheryl (BS '74) also are regular financial contributors to TU.

For Forrest, serving TU is a given. His love of the university is rooted not only in his own undergraduate experience, but also in his family's history. His father, Dr. Herbert J. Forrest, attended TU, and his grandfather, Cloyce D. Forrest, served as a TU trustee. In fact, Dr. John and Dr. Herbert both studied undergraduate embryology and zoology from the late TU professor Claude Leavengood.

"My earliest memories are of going to football games at Skelly Stadium with my grandfather," Forrest says. "Both my grandfather and my father impressed on me at an early age that TU is one of the integral pillars of this community, and that the continuing support of TU was a very important issue, not only for the Forrest family, but also for the community in general."

The message had taken such root in Forrest's mind that he and Cheryl decided to return to Tulsa in 1983 instead of pursuing prized job offers at prestigious institutions such as Cornell University, Yale University, the University of Virginia, and Northwestern University. Certainly, his medical residency at the renowned University of Virginia Hospital and a grueling but invaluable fellowship in urologic oncology at New York's Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Institute had made him a stand-out candidate for such positions. But Tulsa prevailed.

"When it came down to it, Cheryl and I both felt a very strong pull to be with family and community and move back," he says.

John and Cheryl, who earned a BS in special education at TU, have two children, Bennett, 19, and Stephanie, 14. Although it would seem impossible for Forrest to have time for hobbies, he enjoys playing competitive tennis and breeding and showing horses. One of his animals has won two world championships.

With all his commitments and interests, however, TU remains high on Forrest's list of priorities.

"Cheryl and I are excited about TU, and we maintain an excitement about supporting TU," he says. "That's not hard to do." ♦

Earthen Art

In the tiny town of Meta Ortiz, Mexico, an artist's living room or kitchen might be both studio and gallery, heralded by pots: in front of the door, near the fence, or, on the roof. And, most likely, creating the richly detailed clay pottery, for which the town is becoming famous, is a family affair.

Led by Steve Sumner, director of the Division of Fine and Performing Arts, and Whitney Forsyth, a School of Art professor, a group of TU students, faculty, staff and alumni (Rhonda Jackson, John Bryant, Jason Haney, Michael Teal, Cynthia Brown, Sherril Womeldorff, Ginger Tomshany, Kristen Miller, Janice Weeks, April Oward, and Laurie Spencer) spent spring break there, learning the fine art of handmade pottery. Each day the TU group trekked 30 miles over barely there roads from their hotel in Casas Grandes to Meta Ortiz, spending the day with the local artisans.

Meta Ortiz has become an artist colony, with over 100 potters living in the village. Making use of clay from nearby mountains, the artisans have neither expensive tools nor potter's wheels. They work the clay by hand, dip homemade brushes into colors ground from local plants and fire their work under large clay pots (that act as kilns) in a bonfire. The pottery is then burnished to a high sheen, again by hand.

When the local mines closed down, and Meta Ortiz was on the edge of extinction, village elders revived the town's economy with an art form as ancient as the hills.
