

ANTISEMITISM, PAST AND PRESENT

Much has been written about the alarming rise of antisemitism. The attention is important; so is historical context. Antisemitism is often called the longest hatred. It is the most adaptable and resilient—always there to fill a vacuum, provide a scapegoat, and offer simple answers to complex questions. Its durability speaks to its distinctiveness.

Antisemitism has existed in connection with monotheistic religions and in other traditions as well. It has existed on the right and the left; in democratic and autocratic societies; in good economic times and bad; among all social classes; under globalization and in more isolated societies; with and without a Jewish homeland; and, perhaps most tellingly, with and without Jews.

As Christianity came to define Western civilization, antisemitism grew as it served both political and theological goals. In 1492, Spain threatened its Jews with extermination if they did not convert or leave. The Enlightenment's vision of universal rights seemed promising, but secular society too found ways to hate Jews, resulting in social and economic exclusion. The Dreyfus Affair in France in 1894 rallied antisemites of all types. Darwinism spawned a range of theories about human genetics such as the eugenics movement that was later distorted by Nazi scientists who defined Jews as a "race" capable of "infecting" superior races. For most of history, antisemitism has been a phenomenon of the right, as it tried to hold on to social and religious traditions or protect its economic status during rapidly changing times. But industrialization led to Jews being blamed for both the ills of capitalism and its ideological challenge—communism.

In recent years, new forms have emerged: anti-Zionism and Holocaust denial or, more insidiously, Holocaust minimization. And we see Holocaust glorification, as demonstrators throughout Western Europe shout slogans such as "Jews to the gas."

But we would be foolish to focus solely on the recent spate of alarming acts. There is an equally worrisome problem. In Hungary and Greece, political parties with antisemitic agendas—Jobbik and Golden Dawn, respectively—have won seats in their parliaments. As a 2014 Human Rights First report stated, [these parties have] "put down deep roots that will be difficult to eradicate," and their impact "now threaten[s] to erode European democracy from within."

Seventy years ago Allied armies first encountered the horror of the camps—the ultimate manifestation of unchecked antisemitism. Today is not 1944 or 1894 or 1492, but today must be seen through a historical lens. This is not a new problem, but Europe's enduring one—and ours.

What was, we cannot change. But what is—what will be— WE CAN MAKE IT DIFFERENT.

—NESSE GODIN

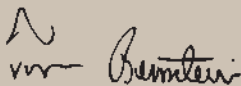

Holocaust survivor and Museum volunteer

As we write this letter, the world is in great turmoil. The numerous problems and crises can often seem overwhelming and make us feel helpless. The role of the Museum is to remind people at all times, but especially at times like these, that history matters. We cannot understand or address the present without an understanding of the past. It also reminds us of the consequences of action—and inaction.

That's why our $540 million campaign for the future is so important. We're pleased to report that to date we have raised $352 million in annual and endowment funds as well as capital funds for our new Collections and Conservation Center. This includes an exceptional commitment from the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Foundation. As a result of their $10 million gift to ensure the growth, vitality, and impact of Holocaust studies in the United States and abroad, the Museum has named our academic center the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies.

Like all Museum programs, the Mandel Center is focused on the next generation. Our work with and for young people—in schools, on campuses, and most crucially online—is an urgent priority. For it is they who will help shape how we respond to challenging times, now and in the future.

Thank you for making this possible.

56,000

People accessed the Arabic version of the online HOLOCAUST ENCYCLOPEDIA, available in 15 languages.

9,936

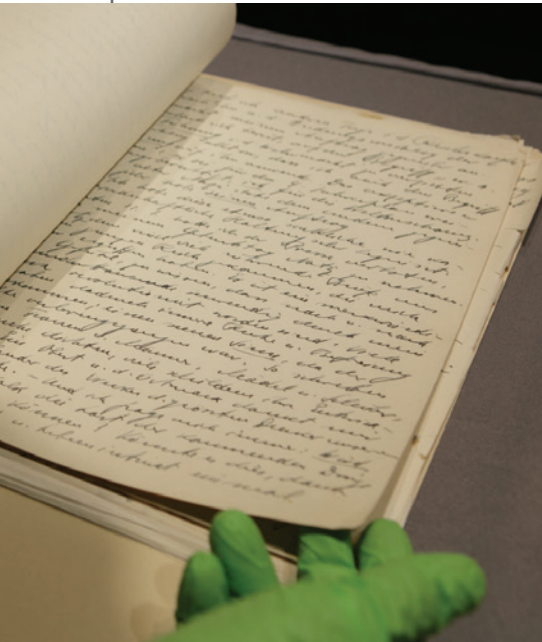

US and international military officers, members of the court, and federal and local law enforcement personnel participated in leadership development training.

6 million

Pages of archival material were added to the Museum's collection.

RESCUING the Evidence

Each month, approximately 42,000 people from more than 150 countries access the Museum's collection online.

Building the collection of record on the Holocaust is a daunting challenge, but this year the Museum acquired an average of 11 new items every week. The lost diary (above left) of Alfred Rosenberg, a confidant of Hitler who was instrumental in the "Final Solution," was one of these items, found after a 17-year search by Museum staff. Partnerships with US Immigration and Customs Enforcement and the US Department of Justice were essential to locating the diary, which offers insights into a perpetrator's mindset (see ushmm.org/rosenberg). Through the Museum's new online search tool—collections.ushmm.org—remote access to the collection is now available to anyone, anywhere, anytime.

Global Reach of the Film THE PATH TO NAZI GENOCIDE

EDUCATING New Generations Worldwide

The Museum's new film, The Path to Nazi Genocide, which offers a concise overview of the Holocaust and what made it possible, was translated and distributed by the United Nations to the countries listed above. The Museum seeks to challenge people worldwide about why the Holocaust happened, as well as their own roles in society. After the special exhibition Some Were Neighbors: Collaboration & Complicity in the Holocaust opened in April 2013, an initial evaluation showed that a large majority of visitors said it would make them think differently about their own behavior. The traveling exhibition State of Deception: The Power of Nazi Propaganda, which challenges visitors to think about their responsibilities as consumers of information, began its national tour at Chicago's Field Museum.

ADVANCING New Knowledge

The strategic goals of the Museum's Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies are to foster new generations of Holocaust scholars and to shape and lead the field of Holocaust studies. More than one-third of all Holocaust victims were Soviet Jews. Recently opened archives in former Soviet states have enabled staff and fellows at the Mandel Center to pursue research into previously unanswerable questions about the Holocaust in the East. Together with Russian partners, the Mandel Center organized two major international conferences on the Holocaust in Moscow. The participation of scholars from the United States, Belarus, Ukraine, and Russia began building local expertise, while the Center's 2014 Silberman Seminar provided US college faculty with new insights on the Holocaust in the USSR to enrich their teaching. New staff scholars (below) with specialized expertise on the USSR and Ukraine ensure the impact of the Museum's Initiative on the Holocaust in the former Soviet Union.

225 scholars attended the Museum's two conferences in Moscow, the first in Russia focused exclusively on the Holocaust.

PREVENTING Genocide

Leading the field of genocide prevention is central to our mission as a living memorial. This past year, the Museum led efforts to raise public awareness of the new international doctrine Responsibility to Protect (R2P), an important tool in genocide prevention, through a symposium, public programs, and outreach to the media and policymakers. While R2P focuses on the role of governments, the Museum's initiative on hate speech and incitement examines ways individuals can influence societies at risk of group-targeted violence. Giving voice to the voiceless, the Museum projected on the building photographs (above) of the plight of the Rohingya, a Muslim minority in Burma that has been systematically persecuted (see ushmm.org/rohingya).

500 people—
including leaders
of think tanks,
policymakers,
and foreign policy
specialists—
attended the R2P

At the 2014 Days of Remembrance, the Museum marked the 20th anniversary of the genocide in Rwanda, during which up to one million Rwandans, predominantly Tutsis, were killed in 100 days. The Museum conferred the 2014 Elie Wiesel Award—its highest honor—on retired Canadian Lieutenant-General Roméo Dallaire, who attempted valiantly to warn the world about the impending violence when he was head of the UN peacekeeping force in Rwanda. His actions in the face of overwhelming apathy by the international community exemplify the Museum’s motto, “What you do matters.”

The NATIONAL CAMPAIGN

NEVER AGAIN: WHAT YOU DO MATTERS

“Our foundation is delighted to have been an ardent supporter of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum since its inception. We are pleased to place the Mandel name on the Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies, the world’s principal venue for Holocaust scholarship.”

chairman and CEO of the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel
Foundation

Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum is honored to recognize the exceptional generosity and vision of the Mandel family for their $10 million gift to ensure the Holocaust is a vital field of academic study in the United States and around the world. The Mandel Center will be at the forefront of advancing new knowledge about how the Holocaust happened—and was allowed to happen—that will shape how future generations understand its significance and are inspired to act on its lessons.

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum is grateful to the following individuals, who have made an outright leadership campaign gift of $1 million and above since October 1, 2009.

TRAVEL with Purpose

April 18–26, 2015

JOIN A MUSEUM DELEGATION TO LEARN ABOUT THE HISTORY OF THE HOLOCAUST IN HUNGARY and what is being done to address the current rise of antisemitism there. This trip will include tours of beautiful cities and Jewish sites, as well as meetings with community leaders, survivors, and experts who are struggling to rescue Holocaust evidence, ensure accurate Holocaust education, and defend history against distortion by today's Hungarian government.

For more information, contact Nadia Ficara at nficara@ushmm.org.
