SEBRING — An all-hands-on-deck call went out at 10:22 a.m. Wednesday to all Sebring area departments for a fire at Sears department store.

Fortunately, deputies on the scene were able to get the fire out quickly, according to Sgt. Amanda Dettman, ranking Highlands County sheriff's deputy on the scene.

"(We) got it out before Fire (and Rescue) got here," Dettman said. "They're just making sure it's all out."

Highlands County Fire Rescue Chief Marc Bashoor confirmed that. He said all that caught fire was the air-seal curtain around the middle bay of the store's loading dock. He had firefighters rip and soak the curtain for any hot spots, just in case.

It's there to create an air seal between the box trailer and loading dock, saving in air-conditioning costs.

The last truck there left at 9:45 a.m., Bashoor said. Employees had told him it hit harder than normal when it backed up.

Bashoor's theory, yet to be proven, is that the last truck to unload at that spot may have hit hard and either damaged a running light on the trailer or mashed an already broken light against the padded fabric curtain, causing it to smolder.

Once the truck left, the curtain smoked into flame, Bashoor said, again stating all he had was a theory.

Spring Lake fields fee questions

By KIM LEATHERMAN

SEBRING — The board of supervisors for the Spring Lake Special Improvement District held a meeting to once again discuss the assessment methodology for home and property owners in the district.

The board was joined by Steven McDonald, chief economist for Community Solutions Group, who went into great detail on the assessment review his company did for the District in November. McDonald was present Wednesday to field questions and make sure residents and future developers had a good understanding on any changes that would occur if the board went ahead with the firm's recommendations.

The District has been doing its own annual assessment methodology for years but decided to have a third party do a study for fiscal year 2020. The purpose of spending $18,000 on the study was to ensure the District was on the right track.

The estimated assessment for the upcoming year would be $298.66. It is currently at $293.61. The assessment was decreasing and seems to be holding steady. In 2016, the assessment was $299.62 and in 2013 it was $312.27.

McDonald said the assessment will help with future growth for different classes of properties. He also said there was no right or wrong way to do an assessment. Florida law says assessments can be done to pay for infrastructure.

The assessments have to be fair and equitable, according to McDonald.

"It's most important that the assessment cannot exceed the benefit of that property," McDonald said. It would seem the District was doing an adequate job in their assessments, he said.

"The current methodology was fair and equitable," McDonald said. "It was not arbitrary or capricious with the exception that we believed that there needed to be some definitions cleaned up."

The main differences, if McDonald's

Vaughn Road bridge, over Charlie Creek, stands ready for use as soon as Highlands County vacates the right of way leading to it and through it. The bridge has been a bone of contention between the county and Florida Department of Environmental Protection, largely for an agreement to share cost of the repairs. Because it was verbal, the conditions to meet have fluctuated, for both sides.

SEBRING — Highlands Hammock State Park's Equestrian Center campground by Charlie Creek has been sitting ready for use for the last 10 years.

If talks pan out on a written road-vacation, bridge-reimbursement agreement between the Highlands County Board of County Commission and the Florida Department of Environmental Protection, the county might vacate that road right of way this year, the state may pay its half of repairing the bridge and Highlands Hammock State Park may get to open the Equestrian Center.

Officials want to get everything in writing, this time.

County Administrator Randy Vosburg told commissioners on Tuesday that he thought he'd hammered out an iron-clad agreement with the state before the county paid approximately $75,000 to repair the single-lane bridge on Vaughn Road spanning the creek. He didn't get it in writing, however.

Vosburg said Tuesday that was a "lesson learned." Right now, he and County Attorney Joy Carmichael are working with state officials to finalize a formal agreement that would help ensure all parties get what they want in a timely manner.

History of Vaughn

Highlands County wanted to vacate the road, Vosburg said, but the Florida Department of Transportation said the county would need to either fix the dilapidated bridge over the creek or tear it down.

The Florida Park Service wanted to have the bridge to reach equestrian trails on the other side of the creek,

Two-car crash narrows U.S. 27

By PHIL ATTINGER
STAFF WRITER

SEBRING — A two-car crash Tuesday afternoon shut down two southbound lanes of U.S. 27 at Lake Josephine Drive, forcing through-traffic into the left turn lane.

Florida Highway Patrol reports have not been released on the wreck, and a request for information has been made, but an update on injuries or even those involved is not yet available.

The wreck, called out at 3:39 p.m. to Highlands County Fire Rescue and Emergency Medical Services, involved a dark orange Jeep Wrangler Unlimited four-door hardtop and a black crew-cab Ford pickup.

It's unknown which direction each vehicle was traveling. The impact left the Jeep sitting in the travel lanes facing north toward Twitty Road with severe front-end damage and its hood popped open, resting against the windshield.

The Ford truck was nose-forward in the ditch in front of the Sunoco gas station on the southeast corner of the intersection. Two people, it appeared, were milling about the truck.

It appeared that one driver might have been transported with non-life threatening injuries while another driver and passenger may have escaped with minor injuries, if any.

A black Ford crew-cab pickup, in the background, landed nose-in on the slope in front of the adjacent Sunoco gas station. Florida Highway Patrol has not yet released the names or conditions of the drivers.

Engine 19 from DeSoto City Fire Department responded to the wreck, along with Highlands County sheriff's deputies. The fire engine parked in travel lanes to direct motorists to the inside turn lane. Deputies also directed traffic.

The intersection has a flashing caution light and is known for T-bone wrecks caused when one driver attempts either to cross to/

from the median or to pull out in front of oncoming traffic.

The intersection hazards are compounded by the junction being on a curve, having a hill to the east that can also obscure approaching vehicles and being on a stretch of road with no traffic signals to slow traffic.

Drivers are advised, even without wrecks at that location, to use caution when approaching that intersection and to expect people to cross or pull out in front of them.

Highlands County Youth Citrus Project underway

SPECIAL TO
HIGHLANDS NEWS-SUN

SEBRING — For most Highlands County 4-H members, the 4-H year starts Sept. 1, but not for the Highlands Youth Citrus Project exhibitors. Just as all citrus growers in the industry know, growing the state's official state fruit is a yearlong responsibility.

April kicked off the annual 4-H project for the 2019-2020 4-H year as the exhibitors were still wrapping up the 2018-2019 year. More than 50 youth registered for the project this year and will spend nearly a year raising their Valencia citrus trees provided by Lyke's Bothers Inc. to exhibit and sell at the 2020 Highlands County Fair in February. If you are interested in purchasing one, the citrus trees will be on display at the silent auction the entire week of the fair.

This year they will be using the Tree Defender covers again. Last year's trial proved a success with 100% of the lab results coming back negative for citrus greening, also known as HLB. Years past, the citrus trees were all sprayed with imidacloprid insecticide spray. The psyllid bug that transfers greening to the trees have begun to become unaffected by the spray.

Only minor injuries in five-car crash

LAKE PLACID — State Road 70 and County Road 721 is a dangerous stretch of highway that runs east and west between Okeechobee and Lake Placid. This portion of asphalt has been the scene of multiple accidents and vehicular fatalities.

A multi-vehicle crash just before noon on Monday was the latest wreck. Only minor injuries were reported between the seven passengers and drivers in the five vehicles.

The Florida Highway Patrol reports a 2006 Century Freightliner semi trailer, driven by Lara Eloy, 46, of Immokalee, was traveling east on SR 70. At the same time, a 2006 Toyota Sienna van, driven by Niurka Diaz, 56, of LaBelle, and her passenger Rolando Guevara, 53, of LaBelle, were also traveling eastbound in front of the semi.

A 2009 Nissan Sentra, driven by Claudia McDougall, 75, of Melbourne, was in front of the Toyota van driving east. Charles Hale, 76, of Springboro, Ohio, was in a 2016 Chevy pickup truck and was stopped facing east in front of the Nissan.

Alexander Buck, 24, of Okeechobee, was also stopped in a 2013 Dodge truck. The Chevy and Dodge pickup trucks were stopped because of traffic further up the road, reports state.

Eloy, the semi driver, was reportedly unable to slow down fast enough and hit the rear of the Toyota. That collision caused a chain reaction. All of the vehicles ended up in the same eastbound lane on SR 70.

The FHP report indicates Diaz and Guevara had minor injuries and were taken to AdventHealth Lake Placid for treatment. Diaz was not wearing a seat belt, according to the report. No one else was harmed.

The report indicates alcohol was not a factor in the crash. Eloy was cited for reckless driving.

Kendall Lynn Heckert, 61, of 5515 County Road 17 South in Sebring, was arrested on April 29 for failing to comply with registration laws. His original charge was for sexual abuse in the first degree in Harrison County, West Virginia.

Once the final clue is revealed, all entrants will have a chance to locate the prizes.

"We're giving people something to do and rewarding them for doing it," added Christian.

So, what's in it for you?

The final location will contain three keys. These keys will open a box that contains a prize. Three keys. Three boxes. Three winners. One winner will receive $5,000. Another lucky winner will get a five-year membership to Fitness Factory. And the third box will contain a $500 gift certificate to Turner Furniture.

Once the three keys have been located, there will be a box opening party at the Tru By Hilton in Sebring on the evening of June 1.

Sound like fun? Then register online or in person at the Hometown Realty Pros office at 3535 U.S. 27 in Sebring. Registration ends Friday.

5 THINGS That Will Make You SMARTER

1. A sneeze is the best way for the body to clear its passages so you can keep breathing clean air.
2. When irritants such as mucus from a cold or the flu, germs, dust, pollen, animal dander, or pollutants — just to name just a few — infiltrate the nose lining, you take a massive inhalation. Then the chest muscles tighten and pressure builds. The tongue pushes against the roof of the mouth, forcing breath to come out fast through the nose, and — achoo!
3. About one in four

4. According to the Mayo Clinic, the expelled air from one sneeze can reach speeds of 30 to 40 mph or more.
5. You may snore, but you don't sneeze when you sleep. It has to do with sneezing being a reflex action. When you're sleeping, the nerves involved in sneezing are relaxed, breaking the chain reaction of the typical sneeze.

proposal is accepted, will be assessing duplexes/multiplexes as one equivalent land unit per dwelling.

Previously, duplexes that were on one lot were assessed as one unit, while others that were on two lots were assessed as two units. An owner of a duplex on two lots was being charged the fee twice, while an owner with a duplex on one lot was charged the fee once for the past 20 or so years.

McDonald said only 5% of the properties in the District were subject to change and only 2% of those owners would see an increase.

Chris James owns a duplex and was concerned she will have to pay double the assessment she currently pays. She asked if there would be a way to grandfather property owners like her or if there would be any consideration in the assessment for older properties, such as hers, that were built in the 1970s. James seemed concerned she and her tenants would be affected by the additional assessments.

Bill Lawens addressed the audience and said people living in apartments or duplexes make just as much impact on the community as people in six homes do.

McDonald replied the assessments are sort of blind for that very purpose. There is no lawful way to grandfather someone to keep from paying the assessment. The board of supervisors could offer to find money to pay the assessment through other funds but that wouldn't be fair to the other homeowners.

"In the non-residential properties is probably where you will see the most increase," McDonald said. "It increases from the improved non-residential to — at the minimum 1.5% increase but the vast majority doubled. So 100% increase. That's because they were being treated as one acre or one unit."

The firm recommendations are that vacant residential and nonresidential property that consist of less than one acre be equivalent to 1.0 equivalent land use. If the same property has more than one acre, with a few exceptions, it is equal to 1.0 ELU rounded to the next acre. Improved non-residential property, excluding the golf course, is equivalent to 2.5 ELUs per acre, rounded to the nearest ELU. Golf course uses are equivalent to 1.0 ELU per acre, rounded to the nearest acre, according to the Spring Lake Assessment Review.

Helmut Wyzisk III, a developer from Celebration, asked the board of supervisors to consider adding a class for properties of over 20 units. He felt developers might be hesitant to buy in the District with the assessments.

McDonald did not agree with Wyzisk. He said that having too many classifications can get tricky. He said people often find loopholes where there are many classifications.

The board will keep discussing the assessment methodology and try to come to an agreement before work on the draft budget is due in June.

KIM LEATHERMAN/STAFF

Duplexes and multiplex owners could be charged one equivalent land unit per dwelling if the Community Solutions Group assessment methodology review is accepted by the Spring Lake board of supervisors.

while the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission wanted to keep a bridge to let vehicles cross the creek for law enforcement reasons.

Vosburg said he worked out a deal with the Park Service to split the cost of the bridge, which worked out to be approximately $36,000 each.

However, once the work was done, Vosburg said, Park Service officials in Tallahassee wanted a formal agreement, stating exactly when the road would be vacated. Vosburg couldn't do that, he said: The county has to, by law, hold public hearings before vacating the road, and residents might bring up concerns at those meetings.

Also, he said, utilities in the right of way — like Duke Energy — have to make sure the Park Service would honor their easements.

Tuesday's tiff

At Tuesday's County Commission meeting both commissioners and local park officials grumbled about how each party has handled this matter.

It did not descend into argument, however. Both sides acknowledged a level of miscommunication on the matter.

Carmichael said she found "sufficient legal basis" for the county to expect payment after fixing the bridge, not after vacating the road.

Commission Vice Chair Ron Handley said he would be fine with leaving the road open and not closing it, but Commission Chair Jim Brooks said the park wouldn't then be able to open the Equestrian Center.

Morgan Tyrone, Highlands Hammock State Park manager, said he had to learn the history of the campground, having only been at his own post for three and a half years. He said the county had changed a lot of requests and conditions to the agreements with the Park Service and state/local park officials have "adjusted accordingly."

One of the hold-ups for the county was the desire to trade the closure of Vaughn Road with a deal to pave Hammock Road all the way through the park to Hardee County. "We've never seen that (either)," Brooks said. "I don't think we're going to see that."

Olive branches

Tyrone did not say he could guarantee paving Hammock Road would ever happen, but he knew it wouldn't without the county vacating Vaughn Road.

He also said the Park Service can work with Duke Energy and other utility easement holders to speed up the process.

Commissioner Greg Harris suggested the county simply go through the vacation process, "get our check and move on."

Tyrone said the Park Service has the money in its budget this year to pay Highlands County. All it takes is for the road to get vacated.

Commissioner Arlene Tuck suggested the county do that as soon as possible.

"Why cut off your nose to spite your face?" she asked, right before making a motion to prepare paperwork to vacate the road and have it sent to the state to start the reimbursement process.

"We need to move forward, understanding each other, in writing," Commissioner Don Elwell said, to which Tyrone agreed.

"Hopefully we can start fresh," Elwell added.

The vote on Tuck's motion was 4-1, with Handley dissenting. Brooks gave his vote as, "Reluctantly, yes."

Getting ready

Meanwhile, state park officials had inmate work crews out at the equestrian camp on Wednesday, mowing and clearing dead brush, in anticipation of a grand opening sometime in the near future.

Assistant Park Manager Caleb Nail said the camp is designed for its best use in the dry season, which has almost ended.

When it's too wet, he said, not only does the creek overflow into a flood plain around the sites, but the equestrian trials on the other side become flooded.

Park employee Harry McClintock said the park does a major mowing project twice a year at the Equestrian Center, along with regular checks on its restroom facilities, to make sure everything is still in order.

For now, the restrooms and other facilities seem to be working just fine, he said.

Mutual aid calls went out to Sebring Fire Department Ladder 15 and both Fire Chief Robert Border and Deputy Chief Dirk Riley. Battalion Chief 1 William "Billy" Kingston also responded from HCFR.

The call was resolved rather quickly. However, later that day at 1:30 p.m., Engine 19 responded to a call for another fire alarm at Sears.

After investigating, members of that fire crew told the Highlands News-Sun it was a false alarm. Employees set the alarm off while trying to reset it.

OBITUARIES

Ida L. Maxon

Ida L. (Wolfe) Maxon, 85, of Sebring, Florida passed away peacefully on Friday, May 3, 2019. She was born on Nov. 24, 1933 to Sylvan and Viola Wolfe in Niagara County in Western New York.

She was one of seven siblings, whom all preceded her: Kenneth, Sylvan Jr., Jessie, Leona, Maylan and an infant sister.

She was raised in the small town of Kendall and graduated from Kendall High School in Orleans County, New York, which borders on Lake Ontario.

She is survived by her husband of 65 years, Clyde Maxon; her three children, Thomas (Sue) Maxon of Old Fort, Tennessee, Sally (Ty) Oliver of Avon Park, Florida and Scott (Cindy) Maxon of Sebring, Florida; grandchildren, Jason (Tiffany) Maxon and Shaun Maxon, Trevor Long, Chase Long; and great-grandchildren, Sarah and Elijah Maxon.

She, along with her family, moved to Sebring in 1981. She owned and operated the "Just Desserts" bakery in the mid-1980s and was known for her artistry with cake decorations. She was a loving and supportive wife, who worked alongside her husband and sons in a local family business, from which she retired.

As a young mother, she, along with her husband, raised their children on a thriving family dairy farm. Ever the hard worker, she raised sweet corn to sell at her roadside stand for extra "mad" money. She found great joy in her beautiful snapdragons that bloomed every summer. Additionally, she could drive a tractor and wield a sledge hammer if necessary.

You would have to ask her husband or children about the cistern in the basement to fully understand the prowess of the sledge hammer.

Ida was intelligent, beautiful, an accomplished artist, crossword puzzle whiz, had a tremendous sense of humor and will be greatly missed by all those who love her. The world is the same, the sun came up this morning and the birds sang. Our world will never be quite the same, as it has become a little bit quieter without her.

There will be no memorial service. In lieu of flowers, please make a donation to the Lake Placid Art League, 127 Dal Hall Blvd., Lake Placid, FL 33852.

The official start of the Atlantic hurricane season is still weeks away, but this week, May 5-11, has been designated Hurricane Preparedness Week. It's time to make sure all of your insurance policies are in place and updated, and your emergency situation plans are understood by all family members.

The temperatures are rising and the school year is nearing an end. What comes next is hurricane season.

The Atlantic hurricane season runs from June 1 to Nov. 30. Accuweather meteorologists are calling for this year's season to be a "near normal to slightly above normal" season. Accuweather's Atlantic Hurricane Expert Dan Kottowski told the Highlands News-Sun last month they are expecting 12-14 named storms this season, with five to seven of those expected to become hurricanes. At least two of those are likely to become major hurricanes.

But, as Kottowski said and many Highlands County residents know to be true, it's not the predicted number of storms that is important. All it takes is one storm to change our way of life. Remember Hurricane Irma in 2017 when thousands of county residents went days without electricity? Highlands County was the second hardest hit county in the state.

Those who lived in Highlands County in 2004 can most certainly remember the trifecta of hurricanes Charley, Francis and Jeanne and the havoc they wreaked on the county.

Then there are the stories of Hurricane Andrew, a destructive Category 5 hurricane in 1992 that made landfall in South Florida, destroying more than 63,000 houses and damaging thousands more. That storm didn't even compare to Hurricane Michael that struck the Florida Panhandle on Oct. 10, 2018, flattening much of Panama City Beach and Mexico Beach. It too made landfall as a Category 5 storm and remained a strong Category 3 as it made its way across Georgia. Michael's death toll, near 50, continued to climb as much as three months after the storm made landfall.

The Federal Emergency Management Administration has spent more than $1 billion on recovery so far from Michael's wrath. Highlands County continues to wait for reimbursement from FEMA for cleanup work after Irma. Around Highlands County, blue-tarped roofs still dot the landscape.

Kottowski said this year's "climate pattern has the capability to produce several very strong storms and so people should not let their guard down."

Floridians should know by now that any preparations made ahead of a storm can never be too much. Just because we live inland, it has been proven that hurricanes can still cause devastation. People need to be prepared.

One of the best ways you can do that is to plan on attending the Hurricane Preparedness Expo, sponsored by the Highlands News-Sun in partnership with the Highlands County Board of County Commission and the Emergency Operations Center. The two-day family event is set for June 7-8 at Lakeshore Mall. Storm Team 8 Chief Meteorologist Steve Jerve will be at the Saturday event.

Start preparing now. Don't wait until a hurricane is forecast to make your plans. Our worst enemy won't be the storm itself, it will be our procrastination.

We are not what we see

HARRIS & CO

Dorothy Harris

We are not what we see when it comes to Netflix viewing habits. Take for example the gourmet series I eat up in small binges when possible. Consuming an hour of time watching competitors create stunning meals is a fine choice. We love it or perhaps it's just me and Mr. Harris tolerates my selections. Able to whip up a simple meal or a scratch cake, he's a fine chef though when he feels like it and yes, he even does the dishes.

Stranger still, when we watch cooking programs, I'm lapping it all up, but have no interest in preparing similar meals at home. We don't dine that way and considering how unusual most of it is, Mr. Harris is thankful for that. He has no interest in sampling gorgeously plated octopus or other uncommon proteins turned into art on a plate.

Then there are the gardening shows. My recent favorite involves a famed English gardener who helps homeowners fix their yards. On those rare evenings we have an hour to be still, I watch intently, hoping to learn a few things. As he guides homeowners in creating the sought after English garden, I find their toils and struggles quite soothing. Nearly all blow their budget, which is immensely satisfying.

Watching, I feel relaxed and inspired, but honestly I don't know why. Just like the cooking shows, the tips may be implemented here and there, but mostly I follow my own course. Take for example his recommendations that all gardeners stock with about five species of plants.

"Madness," I murmur. I've got more than that in nearly every plant island. My backyard selections passed that total quite a few digits ago. In fact, even I have realized that unless I do a complete revamp of the setup, I can't add anything new.

This doesn't stop me from accepting the gift of favorite bromeliads from a neighbor or moving plants around to achieve a different look. Even with the backache-inducing toil, it's one of my favorite ways to spend a weekend. My body however does not agree. It would now prefer to spend the hours lolling about in the spa or perhaps the neighbor's pool. Simply put, days of heavy yard work have begun to have a less than desirable outcome the next day.

Still we labor and grouse about the effort, telling ourselves we will take it easy this time. Later, nearing exhaustion I suggest selling it all and fleeing to a condo near the beach. Mr. Harris will suggest pulling out everything and pouring concrete. With much of the initial landscaping far overgrown, we have spent a few years taking it back to a more manageable height as our bodies scream in protest. It will, I joke, be perfect just in time for the next owner to rip it all out once more.

This madness of pouring money into the yard continues. I dream of Tuscan-style patios and pergolas dripping flowered vines as rock fountains splash over terraces filled with botanical wonders. What folly it would be. Then again, if we added an outdoor kitchen and lounge area it would be a beautiful place to watch gourmet cooking shows.

How Mueller's use of subtlety and subterfuge continues to bewilder the left

Jorge W. Rodriguez-Sierra

There has been mass confusion fueled by a deliberate, albeit nonsensical, media campaign since the now infamous Mueller Report and Muller Report part deux were released as to what were the significant takeaways from the reports. The left was anxious to bury the headline; the Trump campaign did not collude with Russia, and the investigation concluded it could not move forward with a charge of obstruction of justice.

Mueller, who saw action as a combat veteran, but has undoubtedly seen more savagery in his tenure as a veteran of DC politics, knew full well he would need substantial cover to deflect the heavy fire we would come under if he were to fulfill his duty properly and limit the report to legally relevant facts.

Mueller capitalized on the fact that most people are unaware of the function and role of a prosecutor. A prosecutor never determines whether someone is guilty or innocent. That function is reserved for a jury. A prosecutor's duty is to examine evidence and determine if a crime was committed. In this case the answer was a resounding NO. Had it been yes, the takeaway would have been that the special counsel office found evidence supporting prosecution.

To be clear, this decision is a yes or no proposition. If the answer is maybe, that would mean even the prosecutor has reasonable doubt that that the potential defendant may not be guilty. How can a prosecutor convince a jury when they haven't been convinced beyond a reasonable doubt?

The provision of the report that states the Office of the Special Counsel was unable to "exonerate President Trump," is one example of the aforementioned metaphorical shiny objects deliberately inserted to distract the unwitting. Such distractions serve an important psychological purpose, placation of the rabid left-wing base to continue to cling to a delusional glimmer of hope that there may be something nefarious still yet to be uncovered within the Trump administration. Friendly reminder; Mueller can neither exonerate, nor convict the president, again that would be left to a jury.

Lest we forget, every American citizen, and that would include the president, is presumed innocent until proven guilty. This requires consideration while acknowledging that the prosecutor has declined to move forward with a prosecution. Without a prosecution the president cannot be found guilty. Ipso facto the president is not, and can never be guilty of obstruction of justice.

The Mueller Report contains hundreds of pages where the Office of the Special Counsel needlessly and gaudily catalogues federally-funded opposition research casting the president and his administration in a negative light. This may be at least one reason why the investigation dragged on for as long as it did. However, this is not the proper role of a prosecutor. Mueller perversely abused the power bestowed upon the Office of the Special Counsel. The OSC's decision to include this extraneous, nonrelevant content is abhorrent to our criminal justice system.

Exaltation of the Mueller Report is heralded citing misguided and confused rationales. One frequent pronouncement, praises the report's "thoroughness." The length of the Mueller Report, at nearly 500 pages, is grotesque and wholly unnecessary for the task that was assigned. The primary substance of its girth is packed with legally irrelevant findings, included for the sole purpose to tantalize the liberal fantasy that impeachment of President Trump over this non-trovery is viable. Mueller does these fantasists a great disservice, the last thing America needs right now is for federal prosecutors to create dueling realities via partisan pandering.

What should be the takeaway from the report? The investigation was convened under false pretenses (see fraudulent FISA court application for Carter Page) and the report confirms as much. The Trump campaign did not collude with a foreign foe. In a few weeks be prepared for the embarrassing full-blown hissy-fit that is sure to follow the release of the Inspector General's report. That report will expose those who abused their office all while wasting millions of taxpayer dollars to fund a politically-motivated charade.

The 7:45 p.m. ceremony featured Jocquas Walker as its speaker. Walker, who graduated with his associates degree, plans to continue his education and work toward a bachelor's degree in criminal justice. At age 32, he suffered a stroke.

"If you learn anything from my story, be open to new people who add a piece of wood to the fire inside you," he said. "Don't be afraid of vulnerability, because weakness provides an opportunity to develop and rebuild strength.

"Even if life presents you with unfortunate circumstances, standing in faith and considering the things we have overcome in the past, our tests should prove that we are built for this journey called life," Walker said. "In the words of Optimus Prime from 'The Transformers': 'Let's roll out!'"

Walker garnered two standing ovations.

Earlier in the ceremonies, Dr. Thomas Leitzel, college president, addressed the graduates.

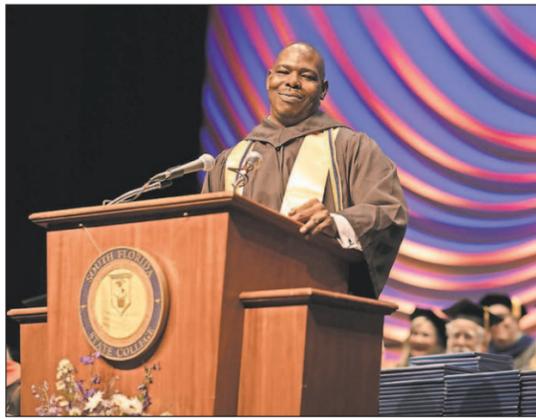

"In 2013, a tattoo of a semicolon became fairly popular. The semicolon stands for something unfinished in a sentence," he said. "It, literally, means 'get ready, something else is coming.'

"For our graduates, the semicolon is a reminder that your story does not stop tonight. Your story and your impact in our regional and global community continues," Leitzel said.

Leitzel also acknowledged the upcoming retirements of Dr. Christopher McConnell, professor of biology; Dr. Kristina Lewis, professor of English; Dr. Cherie Stevens, professor of computer science; and Enrique Ramos, professor of tutoring and learning. They were each recognized for their long years of service to students and SFSC.

Dr. Charlotte Pressler, director of SFSC's Honors Program, recognized nine Honors Program graduates for academic excellence, outstanding leadership, and strong citizenship. They were Jeremy Aguilar, Tashida Buchanan, Nicholas Fischer, Leticia Jauregui, Cambrie Landress, Mauricio (Damien) Marquez, Jami Mercer, Kristal Shands, and Shaneria Williams.

Avon Park will host McKeel Academy on Friday night for the Class 5A-District 8 championship. Win or lose, the Red Devils will play in a regional quarterfinal next week.

"The first win is the toughest to secure your spot in the playoffs," said Avon Park head baseball coach Whit Cornell. "Trent Lewis pitched a great game and the guys played great defense behind them. We hit the ball well, Mulberry made some good defensive plays, they are a scrappy team that continued to improve throughout the season."

Avon Park took a first inning lead after Cory Leech led off with a single into right field and Lewis reached on an error. With two outs, Avon Park catcher Matt Tyson hit a double to left-centerfield to drive in Leech and Lewis to put the Red Devils up 2-0 after the first inning.

Avon Park added to its lead in the bottom of the third, manufacturing a run after Leech hit a one-out Sebring's Cody Carpenter celebrates after striking out the last Auburndale batter to seal Tuesday's win.

SEBRING — The Sebring Blue Streaks showed great resilience in rallying from a three-run deficit to beat Auburndale by a score of 4-3 in Tuesday night's semifinals of the Class 6A-District 10 tournament at Firemen's Field.

The come-from-behind victory improved Sebring to 11-13 overall and puts them in tonight's district championship game against Lake Wales.

"We did the little things tonight and played a full seven innings for the first time this year," said Sebring head coach Jasone DeWitt. "This is a great group of guys and I'm proud of them. They come ready to work every day. For the hard work and effort they put into this I am happy they will be able to experience a championship game."

Auburndale struck in the top of the first inning as Michael Knight reached base and managed to score on a pair of passed balls and a wild pitch to give the Bloodhounds a 1-0 lead.

Sebring pitcher Blayne Huter settled down after that and kept Auburndale off the scoreboard until the top of the fifth inning. Huter went five innings and struck out seven batters.

Auburndale expanded its lead in the top of the fifth inning as Zayne Corneal singled and Jakob Runnels followed with a two-run blast over the left-centerfield wall to give the Bloodhounds a 3-0 lead.

Sebring finally broke through in the bottom of the frame as Charles Petty doubled to left-centerfield, Trey Bender doubled to move Petty to third base and Kenny Palmerton lofted a sacrifice fly to right field to score Petty.

Joey Warner singled to centerfield with Bender moving to third base. Zach Doorlag drilled a double to centerfield to plate Bender and Warner to tie the game at 3.

Kameron Taylor grounded out to first allowing Doorlag to advance to third. Sam Lieske came through with a clutch single to right field to score Doorlag to give the Blue Streaks a 4-3 lead.

coming in to replace Huter. Carpenter struck out four of the six batters he faced and kept Auburndale from scoring to sew up the district semifinal victory. "Blayne Huter did a great job throwing tonight," said Dewitt. "That bomb that he gave up was a great pitch. Auburndale's catcher is a great player and we probably should have just walked him then, like we did in the last inning. Our goal was that he wouldn't be the guy that beat us. I talked to Cody Carpenter at the start of the seventh. Told him to get the first two outs, we would walk the catcher and then get the guy after him. We stuck to the plan. Our guys have fought and battled all year, have played well, have played bad and continued to improve. Tonight we were focused. We gave up those two runs in the fifth and came back and scored four in the bottom of the fifth. That was a great way to answer. We will play Lake Wales for a chance to play at home. This time we are playing with house money. We are in but we will not be satisfied with runner-up. We are going to continue to play our game and do the little things. We are going to pressure them and play the game the right way." Sebring will play at Lake Wales tonight with the first pitch set for 7 p.m.

single, Lewis walked and Leech stole third base. He raced home on a passed ball to give the Red Devils a 3-0 lead. Avon Park capped off the scoring in the fifth inning. Cory Leech walked and Dayvon Terry fouled a ball off his right ankle. Terry needed a few moments to walk off the pain, but bounced back to hit the next pitch over the left-field fence, the ball barely staying fair, for a two-run homer to make it 5-0. Lewis shut down the Mulberry offense and the Avon Park defense remained stellar as they did not allow a Mulberry baserunner, three in all, to advance past first base. Lewis finished with a complete-game shutout. The junior only allowed a single in the fourth inning while striking out six and walking one. Leech led the Red Devils with two hits and three runs scored, while Tyson and Terry each drove in two. With the win, Avon Park will host the McKeel Academy Wildcats in the Class 5A-District 8 championship game at 7 p.m. Friday at Charles R. Head Field. Coach Cornell expressed a great appreciation of the support by the Avon Park community and hopes to see a large turnout in their quest to move forward in the playoffs. Win or lose, Avon Park, which made it to the State Final Four last year, will play in a regional quarterfinal on Wednesday night.

Lake Placid 5, DeSoto 0

Lake Placid cruised past DeSoto by a score of 5-0 in Tuesday's night's Class 5A-District 10 semifinal game. The victory moves Lake Placid, which improved to 10-11 overall, into tonight's district championship game at Lemon Bay. "We played a complete game," said Green Dragon head coach Harry Tewksbury. "We had excellent pitching and just enough offense." Lake Placid's JJ Huergo started and earned the win with three scoreless innings and Cody Jolley hurled spotless relief for the Green Dragons. Lake Placid scored three runs in the bottom of the first inning on a bases-loaded throwing error by the DeSoto pitcher. The Green Dragons tacked on a run in the second inning and another one in the sixth inning to take a commanding 5-0 lead. DeSoto failed to score in its last at-bat to give Lake Placid the win. Lake Placid senior pitcher JJ Huergo earned the win against DeSoto on Tuesday with three scoreless innings of work.

Bay tonight in the district title game. Lake Placid lost both games to Lemon Bay during the season. Win or lose, Lake Placid will play a regional quarterfinal next week. "We lost to Lemon Bay twice this season," coach Tewksbury said. "We match up well with them, but the boys seem to be intimidated by them. We beat Avon Park and Okeechobee this season and there as good or better than Lemon Bay. We need to play with confidence and see what happens."

Keep your family happy with small talk while having dinner at the table.

DINNER DIVA
Leanne Ely

Making dinner time family time

I can't tell you how passionately I feel about families sitting down and eating meals together. Nothing is quite as satisfying and fulfilling as preparing a nutritious meal for your loved ones and sitting around the table together to enjoy it as a family unit.

I don't care if it's fruit and yogurt for breakfast or roast chicken for supper, as long as you make an effort to sit down and eat as many meals as you can together. It's a perfect way for everyone to connect with one another, and it provides a feeling of comfort and security for your children.

When my kids were little, eating at the table was not optional. I planned the meals, they would help me prepare dinner and then we would sit down together and eat. I believe that we're as close as we are partly because I made family dinner time a priority in our lives. They knew they could talk about what was going on in their lives anytime, but dinner time was just the natural time to connect. I wouldn't trade those minutes together for anything.

So how do you get everyone around the table together if you haven't made a big deal of it before?

Lay down the law. You're the boss, so make the rule. No meals in front of the TV. Period.

Involve everyone. Giving everyone mealtime chores will give you a hand, and it will make your kids feel more involved in the process, making it more likely that they'll be keen to sit down and eat with you. Start at the grocery store by letting the kids decide which vegetables to buy. Explain the difference between organic foods and conventionally grown foods. Really start to provide your kids with an education about where their food comes from. Then, at home, depending on the ages of your children, you can have them do all kinds of things from washing and/or peeling vegetables to stirring sauces and setting the table. Trust me, they'll be much more anxious to help prep than they will be to clean up, so perhaps you could start there!

Make it fun. It will be easier to get the kids to the table with you if you serve food they like. That's a no-brainer. Give everyone a couple of options for dinner and hold a family vote over what gets served — majority rules! If it's pizza night, let everyone make their own individual pie. Fajita night? Put all the toppings on

CB'S Smokehouse New eatery opens on The Circle

JERRY MEISENHEIMER/CORRESPONDENT

The décor inside CB'S Smokehouse restaurant on the Sebring Circle is relaxed and rustic.

Features old school cooking, relaxed atmosphere

By JERRY MEISENHEIMER
CORRESPONDENT

SEBRING — Lifetime Sebring couple Carl and Candie Beckman both graduated from Sebring High School — Carl in 1997, Candie in 1998. Through the years, Carl had a forever dream of opening his own restaurant. Well, two weeks ago, that became a reality. He and his wife opened the doors to CB'S Smokehouse.

But it didn't happen overnight. A lot of behind-the-scenes work had to be done first, like a total remake of what used to be the site of Sandy's Circle Café. The Beckmans created a very rustic, almost picnic style décor. The walls and tables create the feeling that you're eating in an old-west setting. In fact, most of the chairs don't even match, which adds to the experience. As soon as you walk inside, there's a relaxed atmosphere.

Over the years, Carl prepared for this day, having started out in the food industry as a dishwasher and working his way up to be the cook at a well-known barbecue restaurant. Then he went into catering. Now he's the pit master — slow cooking all the meats in a huge oak wood burning smoker. Meanwhile, Candie Beckman has her background in human resources and accounting. So, they both have what it takes to run their new adventure front to back.

CB'S Smokehouse has a simple motto — "Cooking the old school way with wood and time."

Located at 213 Circle Park Drive, on the historic Sebring Circle, CB'S opens for breakfast every morning at 6 a.m. They serve lunches and dinners too. The diner is open until 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday; Friday and Saturday, they close at 10 p.m. Sunday afternoon the staff gets to go home at 2 p.m.

The opening of CB'S Smokehouse has created 20 new jobs in the area. They even

Braising can maximize the freshness of spring vegetables

By AMERICA'S TEST KITCHEN

While raw and roasted vegetables certainly have their place, braising is a great technique for cooking even the most delicate vegetables.

You may think braising would turn verdant spring vegetables drab and watery but, in fact, braising can maximize their freshness and make them taste more like themselves.

To turn early-season produce into a warm side dish, we started by softening a minced shallot in olive oil with additional aromatics for a savory base. To build a flavorful braising liquid, we poured in water and lemon and orange zest and dropped in a bay leaf.

Adding the vegetables in stages ensured that each cooked at its own rate and maintained a crisp texture. Peppery radishes, which turned soft and sweet with cooking, were nicely complemented by the more vegetal notes of asparagus and peas (frozen peas were reliably sweet, and adding them off the heat prevented overcooking).

In no time at all, we had a simple side of radiant vegetables in an invigorating, complex broth — proof positive that Fresh corn is dense with nutrients. It is high in beta carotene, phosphorus, lutein, zeaxanthin, potassium, choline, magnesium, and fiber.

A fresh look at corn

MISSION NUTRITION
Judy Buss

Fresh corn is one of the culinary pleasures of life. Snack and party food, such as corn on the cob, corn and black bean salsa (a.k.a. Southern Caviar), are among the favorites. Corn, popular around the world, was cultivated 8,000 years ago in Central and South America and by Native Americans. To this day, it is a staple in those cultures' daily meals and also plays a spiritual role.

Although containing naturally-occurring sugar higher than most vegetables, and should therefore be consumed in moderation, most people don't realize that fresh corn is dense with nutrients. It is high in beta carotene, phosphorus, lutein, zeaxanthin, potassium, choline, magnesium, and fiber.

Corn is a member of the grass family that includes wheat, oats, rice, barley, rye, and millet. The kernels are the fruit of the plant as well as its seeds. Sweet corn, consumed as a vegetable, is different from corn grown for feeding livestock, for corn syrup production, oil, corn starch, meal and flour, and for ethanol fuel. In its dried and ground state, corn is considered a grain and is gluten-free. It does not, however, offer the same nutritional level as fresh (and raw frozen) corn.

Baby (miniature) corn is not a specific cultivar. It is simply harvested very early. Corn varieties include black, purple, yellow, red, speckled, and white. Unfortunately, most U.S. corn crops are genetically modified (GM), also known as genetically engineered (GE), and are also heavily sprayed with pesticides. It is therefore highly recommended to

For a nutritious version of artichoke dip, look to navy bean

By AMERICA'S TEST KITCHEN

Most artichoke dips could justifiably be called mayonnaise and cheese dips, given what goes into them.

To create a more nutritious rendition, we looked to bean dip to provide a creamy base that contributed protein and fiber instead of saturated fat.

We thought that the vegetal artichokes (high in vitamins K and C and various minerals) would partner well with the earthy-sweet but mild beans, adding some needed character.

We chose

navy beans for their velvety texture, rinsing them to remove excess sodium. Using canned beans and jarred artichoke hearts kept the recipe easy. To increase the creaminess of our dip and add a filling burst of protein, we incorporated Greek yogurt.

Finally, a healthy dose of lemon juice, garlic, parsley, and scallion added fresh flavor and brightness. Serve with vegetables, whole-grain crackers, or whole-grain chips.

Navy Bean and Artichoke Dip

Servings: 6-8

Start to finish: 50 minutes
1 teaspoon grated lemon zest plus 2 tablespoons juice
1 small garlic clove, minced
1 (15-ounce) can navy beans, 2 tablespoons liquid reserved, beans rinsed

1 cup jarred whole artichoke hearts packed in water, rinsed and patted dry, 2 tablespoons chopped
1/4 cup fresh parsley leaves
1 scallion, white and light green parts cut into 1/2-inch pieces, dark green part sliced thin on bias
Salt

1/4 teaspoon ground fennel
Pinch cayenne pepper
1/4 cup organic plain 2 percent Greek yogurt
Cold-pressed extra-virgin olive oil

Combine lemon zest and juice and garlic in bowl and let sit for 15 minutes.

Pulse garlic-lemon juice mixture, beans, their reserved liquid, whole artichoke hearts, parsley, white and light green scallion pieces, 3/4 teaspoon salt, fennel, and cayenne in food processor until finely ground, 5 to 10 pulses, scraping down bowl as needed. Continue to process until uniform paste forms, about 1 minute, scraping down bowl as needed.

Add yogurt and continue to process until smooth, about 15 seconds. Transfer to serving bowl, cover, and let stand at room temperature for 30 minutes. (Dip can be refrigerated for up to 1 day; bring to room temperature before serving.) Season with salt to taste. Sprinkle with reserved chopped artichokes and dark green scallion parts, and drizzle with oil to taste before serving.

Create a tangy, savory sauce at home

By METRO CREATIVE

Seafood can be a healthy addition to anyone's diet, and there are plenty of ways to cook fish. Seafood is often made even more delicious with the right accoutrements — such as a tasty dipping sauce.

Tartar sauce long has been the peanut butter to seafood's jelly. Seafood and tartar sauce is a common pairing, particularly for baked or fried dishes. Tartar sauce features a base of either mayonnaise or aioli. The vinegary, creamy base is enhanced with pickled treats, such as capers, gherkins, pickles, or relish.

Tartar sauce has appeared in cookbooks since the 19th century. It is believed to be derived from the French sauce tartare, which was named after the Tartare ethnic group who once occupied parts of Ukraine and Russia. In Turkey, a condiment known as tarator has traditionally been used as a condiment for fried seafood.

There are many different variations on the tartar sauce recipe. This recipe, courtesy of the Food Network, is one that seafood lovers can try. Home chefs can substitute capers or add fresh herbs like dill to expand the flavor profile.

Tartar Sauce

1 pint mayonnaise
 2/3 cup dill pickle relish
 2 tablespoons white onion, minced
 1 ounce lemon juice
 Pickle juice to taste
 Mix ingredients together, refrigerate and serve as needed.

METRO CREATIVE

offer delivery on weekdays to local businesses during lunch time. The phone number is 863-402-1573.

The menu simplifies ordering because every starter, lunch item, or dinner choice has a description of what comes with it. They make their own coleslaw, potato salad, and the barbecue sauces on premises. Southern favorites like fried corn on the cob, collard greens, and mac n cheese show up as sides. The breakfast menu does have one selection that is a fancy way of saying eggs, grits, home fries, choice of meat and style toast. Just ask for 'The Roanoke.' The name came from the fact that since 1917, the building has been called that.

The barbecued beef, pork, turkey, chicken, and ribs are available every day. However, since the smoked brisket takes 18 hours to perfection, it's only offered on Friday and Saturday. In addition to typical barbecue, you'll find ribeye and New York strip steaks during dinner hours. Kids get plenty to pick from as well.

So, if you've got a 'hankering' for authentic barbecue, grilled over oak logs, circle around to CB'S Smokehouse. When you smell the smoke off Commerce Street, you'll know you found it.

braising can bring out the best in even the most delicate flavors. A toss of chopped fresh tarragon gave a final nod to spring. Look for asparagus spears no thicker than 1/2 inch.

Braised Spring Vegetables with Tarragon

Servings: 4-6
 Start to finish: 30 minutes
 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
 1 shallot, sliced into thin

rounds
 2 garlic cloves, sliced thin
 3 sprigs fresh thyme
 Pinch red pepper flakes
 10 radishes, trimmed and quartered lengthwise
 1 1/4 cups water
 2 teaspoons grated lemon zest
 2 teaspoons grated orange zest
 1 bay leaf
 Salt and pepper
 1 pound asparagus, trimmed and cut into 2 inch lengths
 2 cups frozen peas
 4 teaspoons chopped fresh tarragon
 Cook oil, shallot, garlic, thyme sprigs, and pepper flakes in Dutch oven over medium heat until shallot is just softened, about 2 minutes. Stir in radishes, water, lemon zest, orange zest, bay leaf, and 1 teaspoon salt and bring to simmer. Reduce heat to medium-low, cover, and cook until radishes can be easily pierced with tip of paring knife, 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in asparagus, cover, and cook until tender, 3 to 5 minutes.

Off heat, stir in peas, cover, and let sit until heated through, about 5 minutes. Discard thyme sprigs and bay leaf. Stir in tarragon and season with salt and pepper to taste. Serve.

buy corn that is organic and non-GM exclusively. Most grocery stores carry, at least, bags of organic raw frozen kernels. Look for the official, certified USDA organic logo. Steamed (still frozen) for 5 minutes, the kernels can then be used in numerous dishes, even added to your mixed raw vegetable salad. Steam corn-on-the-cob, (cut in half to fit your pot) for 12 minutes. Big flavor is on the menu. Enjoy delicious new ways to boost the nutritional value of your meals. The following are some recipes for you to try:

Corn-Bell Pepper Salad

2 servings
 2 cups raw frozen corn kernels
 1 green onion, thinly sliced
 1/2 red bell pepper, finely chopped

2 tablespoons chopped cilantro leaves
 Dressing
 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 2 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
 1 teaspoon hot pepper flakes (optional)
 Salt and pepper to taste
 Steam corn 5 minutes. Promptly rinse in gently running cold water for few seconds to halt cooking process. Drain and cool on a plate. Meanwhile, in medium bowl, mix all dressing ingredients. Add onion, bell pepper, cilantro, and corn.

Veggie Succotash

2 servings
 2 tablespoons cooking olive oil
 2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
 1 green zucchini, ends trimmed, peeled
 3 green onions, sliced, including their whites
 1/2 red bell pepper, chopped
 1/2 cup frozen corn

kernels
 3/4 tablespoon dried oregano
 Salt and pepper to taste
 2 tablespoons lemon juice

In skillet, heat oil on medium heat. Add garlic stirring constantly for 30 seconds. Remove garlic from skillet and place on small plate. Set aside. Cut zucchini in half crosswise. Cut each half lengthwise. Place each quarter, flat-side-down, on cutting board. Place two quarters side-by-side and slice thinly. Repeat procedure with remaining quarters. Add zucchini slices, onions, bell pepper, salt, pepper, and oregano to skillet. Cover and cook slowly, 7 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add corn and cook 5 more minutes. Add lemon juice and garlic and serve immediately.

Corn and Black Bean Salsa (Southern Caviar)

Yield: 4 -5 cups
 2.5 cups corn kernels

from 4 ears or frozen kernels
 1 cup cooked black beans, drained
 3 green onions, thinly sliced, including their whites
 1 medium tomato, finely chopped
 1 jalapeno, seeded, finely chopped
 Dressing:
 Juice of 2 limes
 3 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
 2 cloves garlic, finely grated
 2 tablespoons fresh cilantro, chopped
 Salt and pepper to taste
 Steam corn 5 minutes. (If frozen, no need to thaw out). Promptly remove from stove and run gentle stream of water over them for 5 seconds to halt cooking process. Drain. Transfer to plate to cool and set aside. In medium bowl make dressing, and add all the other ingredients. Refrigerate 1-2 hours before serving.

Tip: To chop the jalapeno use gloves, then wash the gloved hands, cutting board, and knife with soap and water before removing gloves.

Teen who charged attackers was lone death in school shooting

Student killed in Colorado high school shooting was 18-year-old who leaped from his desk and charged two attackers

HIGHLANDS RANCH, Colo. — The lone fatality in the Colorado high school shooting was Kendrick Castillo, a friendly 18-year-old who leaped from his desk in a literature class and charged the two attackers, sacrificing his life to buy classmates time to escape.

Another 18-year-old preparing to enter the Marines also tackled the shooters. And an armed security guard then confronted and detained one of the shooters.

Authorities said these acts of bravery helped minimize the bloodshed from the attack, which also wounded eight people.

"We're going to hear about very heroic things that have taken place at the school," Douglas County Sheriff Tony Spurlock said Wednesday.

The attackers were identified by law enforcement officials as 18-year-old Devon

Erickson and a younger student who is a juvenile and was not named. They allegedly walked into the STEM School Highlands Ranch through an entrance without metal detectors and opened fire in two classrooms.

Student Nui Giasolli told NBC's "Today" show that she was in her British literature class when Erickson came in late and pulled out a gun.

Castillo lunged at the gunman, who shot the teen. Castillo's swift action gave the rest of the class time to get underneath their desks and then run across the room to escape, Giasolli said.

A member of the school's robotics club and a relentless tinkerer, Castillo had an infectious smile and gentle sense of humor, according to friends. He worked part-time at a local manufacturing company that had offered him a job after an internship because he was such a standout employee.

"To find he went down as a hero, I'm not surprised. That's exactly who Kendrick was," said Rachel Short, president of the company, Baccara.

Brendan Bialy, also 18 and a senior who was enrolled in a delayed-entry program for the Marines, charged the shooters as well, helping fight them off, according to authorities and witnesses. "His decisive actions resulted in the safety and protection of his teachers and fellow classmates," Marine Capt. Michael Maggiti said.

Then, as the shooters moved through the 1,800-student campus, an armed security guard detained one of them, Spurlock said.

The guard was employed by Boss High Level Protection, a company started by a former SWAT team leader who responded to the Columbine shooting. The owner, Grant Whitus, told The Associated Press the security guard is a former Marine who ran to the area of the shootings and Welcome, Archie!

Meghan and Prince Harry introduce their son to the world

By JILL LAWLESS and DANICA KIRKA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Tired but beaming, new parents Meghan and Prince Harry presented their 2-day-old son to the world as he slumbered Wednesday and also revealed his name: Archie.

The royal couple, known as the Duke and Duchess of Sussex since their marriage not quite a year ago, said the full name of the child born seventh in line to the British throne is Archie Harrison Mountbatten-Windsor.

The baby slept peacefully through his carefully orchestrated media moment. His mother, making her first public appearance since giving birth early Monday, called Archie "a dream" who "has the sweetest temperament."

"He's really calm," Meghan said.

Harry quipped: "I wonder who he gets that from."

Harry and Meghan did not choose an aristocratic title for their son. He is not a prince but could have been given the title "Lord" before his first name.

Instead he will be known for now as "Master Archie Mountbatten-Windsor."

The surname, used by some members of the royal family, was created to recognize the lineage of both Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Philip.

Unlike many senior royals, Archie only has one middle name. Prince Harry's full name is Henry Charles Albert David.

The couple did not disclose why they chose his first and middle names — though the meaning of Harrison, "son of Harry," is probably a clue.

Many in Britain had expected a more traditional royal name, with bookmakers taking many bets on Alexander, Arthur and James.

Archie, a name of Germanic origin with meanings that include "genuine," "bold" and "brave," is an increasingly popular baby name in Britain. It was among the top 20 most common boy's names in 2017, according to the U.K.'s Office for National Statistics.

Tourists visiting Windsor Castle, which is nearby the royal residence outside London that Meghan and Harry moved into last month, mulled over the baby's name. Surprise seemed to be the most common reaction.

"A mouthful for him," Elizabeth Barker, an Irish tourist, said laughing. "But anyway, I guess, if that's what they wanted, then it's the name that they like. You know, nobody has to like it."

Iran threatens more uranium enrichment if no new nuke deal

Trump issued executive order announcing new sanctions targeting Iran's steel, aluminum, copper, iron

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran threatened Wednesday to enrich its uranium stockpile closer to weapons-grade levels in 60 days if world powers fail to negotiate new terms for its 2015 nuclear deal, raising regional tensions as a U.S. aircraft carrier and bombers headed to the Middle East to confront Tehran.

A televised address by President Hassan Rouhani, who once pledged that the landmark deal would draw Iran closer to the West, saw the cleric instead pressure Europe to shield Tehran from the sanctions imposed by President Donald Trump withdrawing the U.S. from the agreement exactly a year earlier.

Rouhani's threats put the world on notice that it cannot continue to rely on Iran complying with terms of the unraveling deal in the coming weeks. Meanwhile, a U.S. campaign of sanctions hammering Iran's anemic economy and blocking its sale of oil on the global market is only making life worse, putting further pressure on both its Shiite theocracy and its 80 million people.

Trump issued an executive order announcing new sanctions targeting Iran's steel, aluminum, copper and iron sectors, which provide foreign currency earnings for Tehran.

Rouhani earlier compared the situation to a medical emergency for the Islamic Republic, only 40 years after its founding.

"We felt that the nuclear deal needs a surgery, and the painkiller pills of the last year have been ineffective," Rouhani said. "This surgery is for saving the deal, not destroying it."

Iran on Wednesday stopped its sale of excess uranium and heavy water as a first step, Rouhani said, something required under the deal. The U.S. last week ended deals

Where's the pot? California tracking system unlikely to know

A computer system known as track-and-trace is intended to keep a watchful eye on legal marijuana market, but is it?

By MICHAEL R. BLOOD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — When California voters broadly legalized marijuana, they were promised that a vast computer platform would closely monitor products moving through the new market. But 16 months after sales kicked in, the system known as track-and-trace isn't doing much of either.

As of last month, just nine retail outlets were entering data into the network established under an estimated $60 million state contract, even though 627 shops are licensed to sell pot in California.

The rate of participation is similarly slim for other sectors in the emerging industry.

Only 93 of more than 1,000 licensed manufacturing companies producing extracts, oils and other products were documenting their activities in the network in April. And of the nearly 4,000 licensed growers, only about 7 percent, or 254, are using the high-tech system, according to a review of state data.

How are state officials watching over the nation's largest legal pot market? For now, it's essentially a paper trail.

Most California companies are required to document their business on paper sales invoices and shipping manifests. But experts say that can be a doorway for criminal traffic.

With paper records, regulators are relying on an honor system, said Patrick Vo, CEO of BioTrackTHC, which provides seed-to-sale cannabis tracking in eight states, including New York and Illinois.

Without a digital crumb trail in place, "there are so many areas

Voice-print technology monitors inmates' calls in Florida

Installed in at least 23 counties, been used to bring criminal charges in at least one

By KATHERINE CAMPIONE

FRESH TAKE FLORIDA, A NEWS SERVICE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — A sophisticated voice-identity technology that monitors inmates on prison telephones has been installed in at least 23 Florida counties and has been used to bring criminal charges against inmates in at least one of them, a Fresh Take Florida investigation found.

The technology produced by a secretive, Dallas-based company is designed to make and store voice prints of inmates and to ensure they are using prison phones under their own identities, rather than secretly making calls using the IDs of other inmates.

Inmates throughout Florida are compelled to agree to monitoring by the software developed by Securus Technologies, called Investigator Pro, or they risk losing or limiting their phone privileges. But there are unanswered public policy questions about the technology: What happens to the voice records of defendants who are acquitted or whose criminal charges are dropped? What happens to voice records of innocent civilians whom inmates call from jails? What restrictions exist in using those voice records for other purposes, by governments or private corporations? What happens if the software mistakes someone's voice for another's?

The technology was first revealed in a January report by the Intercept, an online news organization, but it has been difficult to find out details of the technology because the company that produces it has been tight-lipped. According to a memo obtained by Fresh

Take Florida, the company has advised facilities to stick to a list of talking points when approached by journalists about the technology.

The company is privately held and said it works with more than 3,400 public safety, law enforcement and corrections agencies across the U.S. and that its services are used by more than 1.2 million inmates. But it has not discussed its technology or its implications in extensive detail, describing it only as an "essential tool for law enforcement" that can detect and prevent serious crimes.

A Securus executive, Joanna Acocella, declined to answer questions about the company or its software. She said in a statement that the tool has prevented "serious criminal activity, including violence within prisons, and harassment of witnesses and victims of domestic violence."

In Gainesville, court records show that a felon with a lengthy rap sheet of drug and violence charges has been accused of using other inmates' ID numbers to call people surreptitiously. Since the latest arrest of Roosevelt Smoaks in February, the Securus software has tracked calls he allegedly made to his girlfriend, his mother and a bail bondsman while using someone else's identity.

"I was informed by Investigator Pro, a software platform associated with Securus, that there was a high probability that Smoaks had made numerous phone calls using the PINs of other inmates," wrote Michael H. Lynch of the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. Lynch said in court files that both he and the software separately were able to recognize Smoaks' voice on the recorded calls.

Smoaks subsequently was charged with nine counts of criminal fraud and impersonation, all felonies. He has pleaded innocent and is being represented by a public defender.

Investigator Pro was also used in at least two other cases in Alachua County alone to support criminal charges against inmates, according to court records reviewed by Fresh Take Florida.

The software "uses continuous voice identification technology to determine what inmate(s) are speaking on the call, detect certain three-way call violations and help investigators find correlations between calls that might otherwise go undetected," according to the company's contract with Alachua County, obtained under public records laws.

Voice identification creates a unique digital fingerprint based on the voice it detects in an audio recording. That can be stored and used by Investigator Pro to compare against unknown voices in other recordings and identify them.

Internal records obtained by Fresh Take Florida said the software uses a proprietary algorithm to generate a numerical formula based on a person's voice. The company says in documents that actual voice clips or audio samples aren't stored on its computers in Texas, but the unique value associated with the person's voice is stored there and can only be analyzed using the Investigator Pro software. It's unclear how many tens of millions of voices across the United States are represented in the company's data.

"The function of it is to identify you," said Aaron Mackey, a staff attorney for the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a civil liberties group that has raised questions about the technology. "Even if they claim that it's being stored separately and that the data that they're storing is not itself personally identifiable, the whole point and purpose of creating that digital identifier is to subsequently identify you."

Mackey likened it to other types of biometric technology, like facial recognition. A device might not store an actual photo of the owners' face, but it creates a digital sequence that is uniquely identifiable based on the scan of the face.

There appears to be little oversight about how long Securus stores the data or whether it can be used for other purposes now or in the future, Mackey said.

"There's no backend protection or limit on how long they get to keep this personally identifiable information about you," he said. "They're just sort of collecting up all of this data and keeping it in perpetuity."

Some Florida counties began using the software as early as 2014, soon after Securus acquired JLG Technologies, a company that had been spearheading the development of voice biometric technology.

In most counties, Securus funds the upfront cost of the use of its technology, according to contracts reviewed by Fresh Take Florida. The phone call and video visitation rates that inmates and their callers are charged are paid to Securus to pay off the debt. Counties are contractually obligated to ensure that Securus makes its money back in full by the end of the contract term. Otherwise they owe the remaining balance, which they can choose to pay or renew their contracts until the call rates pay the debt.

Each county also earns a commission on the general revenue made from its correctional facilities. Some get other perks as well. The Gadsden County Sheriff's Office received a $100,000 signing bonus for using the company, according to the county's contract.

The Florida Bar has decided a disciplinary investigation will continue into a tweet sent by Gaetz about President Donald Trump's former lawyer, Michael Cohen.

Florida Bar won't dismiss complaint over Rep. Gaetz tweet

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A Florida Bar disciplinary investigation will continue into a tweet sent by Republican U.S. Rep. Matt Gaetz about President Donald Trump's former lawyer, Michael Cohen.

Bar officials said in a statement Wednesday the matter is being examined by a grievance committee. Gaetz represents the Panhandle and is an attorney and Florida Bar member.

The potentially intimidating tweet came in February on the eve of Cohen's testimony criticizing Trump before a House committee. Cohen is imprisoned after pleading guilty to several crimes.

Gaetz tweeted: "Do your wife

Detective dragged by vehicle during traffic stop in Florida

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — A detective was injured while being dragged by a sports utility vehicle during a traffic stop in Florida.

Coral Springs police spokesman Chris Swinson tells the SunSentinel that the plain-clothes detective was wearing a badge when he stopped the BMW on Tuesday afternoon.

Swinson says while the detective was talking to two men inside the SUV, it took off, dragging him. He fired his gun but no one in the vehicle was injured. The detective suffered injuries to his arms and legs.

Florida police officer collapses during training, dies

SANIBEL, Fla. (AP) — Authorities say a Florida police officer died after collapsing during a training exercise.

The Sanibel Police Department posted on Facebook that 63-year-old Anthony Neri died Monday after being rushed to a local hospital. Officials didn't say what kind of training Neri had been doing, but the post says he died of natural causes.

Neri joined the department in 2012 as a police aide and became a police officer in 2015. Before that, Neri had a 30-year career as a Revenue Officer with the U.S. Department of Treasury. He had also worked for three years as a police officer in New Jersey.

Cruel and unusual? Florida sued over solitary confinement

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Department of Corrections is being sued over its use of solitary confinement in a complaint that alleges the state's isolation techniques are cruel and can cause permanent damage.

The Southern Poverty Law Center filed its suit Wednesday in the U.S. District Court in Tallahassee. It claims Florida uses solitary confinement at twice the national average rate and sometimes isolates prisoners from human contact for years.

Corrections spokeswoman Michelle Glady said in an email that the department uses "close management" practices only "when absolutely necessary to ensure the safe and secure operation of our institutions."

But the lawsuit contends the punishment is often used for minor, nonviolent infractions and that 10 percent of the prison population is managed through solitary confinement.

Deputy revived by Narcan after exposure to fentanyl

CLERMONT, Fla. (AP) — Authorities say a Florida sheriff's deputy was revived with Narcan after he was apparently exposed to fentanyl during a traffic stop.

Lake County Sheriff's Sgt. Fred Jones tells news outlets that the deputy saw drugs in the vehicle as he was pulling out a suspect. That's when the deputy was overcome by the drug and passed out.

Jones says another deputy injected the deputy with Narcan, which helps reverse an opioid overdose. He regained consciousness, but then two arriving firefighters began feeling ill.

Jones says one of the firefighters was also given Narcan.

Newborn girl found alive in trash bin after cries are heard

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Florida sheriff's deputies say a newborn girl has been found alive inside a trash bin.

The Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office says two people walking at an apartment complex near Boca Raton heard crying coming from the bin and found the baby Wednesday morning.

Spokeswoman Teri Barbera said the baby girl was taken to a hospital for evaluation and is expected to survive.

Under Florida law, unwanted newborns can be dropped off anonymously at a hospital or fire station with no questions asked. The child is then placed up for adoption.

Woman who set fire, stabbed deputy gets year in prison

EDGEWATER, Fla. (AP) — A Florida woman who set her ex-boyfriend's house on fire and stabbed a deputy has been sentenced to a year and a day in prison.

The Daytona Beach News-Journal reports 27-year-old Brittany Bonin was sentenced Monday after pleading no contest to charges including of first-degree arson and aggravated battery with a deadly weapon. She'll get credit for 314 days spent in county jail, meaning she'll serve another 52 in state prison.

Authorities say Bonin set fire to her ex-boyfriend's Edgewater home in 2017. The ex-boyfriend went to get help from a neighbor, who was a captain with the Volusia County Sheriff's Office. The neighbor called 911 and reported that Bonin stabbed him in the lower back while he was trying to restrain her.

Pressured over media rights, Myanmar frees Reuters reporters

2 Pulitzer Prize-winning journalists were arrested in December 2017 for breaking Myanmar's Officials Secrets Act

YANGON, Myanmar — Two Reuters journalists whose imprisonment for their reporting on the Myanmar military's abuses of Rohingya Muslims drew the world's attention to curbs on freedom of the press were freed in a mass presidential pardon.

Wa Lone, 32, and Kyaw Soe Oo, 28, walked out of Yangon's notorious Insein Prison at about 9:40 a.m. Tuesday. As they passed through the front gate, waving to the gathered crowd, they were mobbed like rock stars by fellow reporters who as professionals had covered their plight and as colleagues had pushed for their release.

"I want to say that I am very happy today. I want to thank our friends and families who were trying for our freedom and also to those from all over the world who sympathized with us," Wa Lone said. "I am really excited to see my family and colleagues. I can't wait to go to my newsroom."

Then they were hustled into a black van and taken to reunite with their families.

The two reporters were arrested in December 2017 as they were working on a story about security forces involved in killing Rohingya and were accused of illegally possessing official documents, a violation of the colonial-era Official Secrets Act. At their trial the two contended they were framed because of official displeasure over their work, but they were convicted last September and sentenced to seven years in prison.

The case drew global attention not only as a media freedom issue but also as an example of how democratic reforms in Myanmar have stalled under Nobel Peace laureate Aung San Suu Kyi's civilian government, which took power in 2016 with high hopes that it would usher in a new, more open era after decades of isolation under military rule.

It also came as international condemnation built over the brutal counterinsurgency campaign that Myanmar's military — which still maintains unchecked control of key ministries such as those responsible for security — launched in the western state of Rakhine, driving more than 700,000 members of the Rohingya minority group to flee to Bangladesh. U.N. officials and others likened the offense to ethnic cleansing, or even genocide.

Trump asserts executive privilege over full Mueller report

Democrats vote to hold Barr in contempt

By CHRIS MEGERIAN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump asserted executive privilege Wednesday to block release to Congress of the special counsel's unredacted report and its underlying evidence in a dramatic escalation of a legal and political clash between House Democrats and the White House.

The White House announced the decision as the Democratic-led House Judiciary Committee prepared to vote to hold Attorney General William Barr in contempt of Congress for defying a subpoena and refusing to turn over the material.

"This is information we are legally entitled to receive and are constitutionally obligated to review," said Rep. Jerrold Nadler, the New York Democrat who chairs the committee.

As the hearing began, the Justice Department released a letter saying that Trump was making an initial claim of executive privilege, a legal principle that allows the president to keep private conversations with his advisers.

The Mueller report relies heavily on interviews with current and former senior staff in the White House, most notably former chief counsel Donald McGahn.

"Faced with Chairman Nadler's blatant abuse of power, and at the attorney general's request, the president has no other option than to make a protective assertion of executive privilege," White House Press Secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders said in a statement.

If the House Judiciary Committee approves the contempt resolution, the next step would be a full vote of the House.

It could be averted if negotiations between committee staffers and Justice Department officials produce a compromise, but that outcome appeared unlikely after the White House asserted executive privilege, giving Barr legal grounds to resist.

Democratic leaders said they had no choice but to sanction Barr. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) said, in response to a question, "Yes, I think that the attorney general should be held in contempt."

Republicans have argued that it would be improper for Barr to show Congress the redacted material, which includes grand jury evidence that is protected by law, intelligence material that is classified to conceal sources and methods, and sensitive details about ongoing state and federal investigations.

"Democrats have launched a proxy war smearing the attorney general when their anger actually lies with the president and the special counsel, who found neither conspiracy nor obstruction," said Rep. Doug Collins of Georgia, the top Republican on the House Judiciary Committee.

Contempt votes are rare but not unprecedented. In 2012, Attorney General Eric H. Holder Jr. became the first sitting Cabinet member to be voted in contempt by the Republican-controlled House in a battle over access to Justice Department documents on a failed gun-tracking operation known as "Fast and Furious."

A court battle ensued and lasted for years after Holder left his position.

New York Senate OKs giving US House Trump state tax return

Bill doesn't name Trump, but law would apply to returns filed by officials

By CHRIS CAROLA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York's Senate easily approved a bill Wednesday that would allow three congressional committees to get access to President Donald Trump's state tax returns, giving Democrats a potential end-run around the administration's refusal to disclose the president's federal returns.

The bill, which now goes to the state Assembly, doesn't target Trump by name but would authorize state tax officials to release returns filed by several state and federal officeholders if requested by the leaders of the House Ways and Means Committee, the Senate Finance Committee or the Joint Committee on Taxation. Both chambers of the state Legislature are controlled by Democrats.

The law would apply to returns filed by the U.S. president and vice president, U.S. senators, the state's governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general or comptroller.

It would include filings related to personal income taxes, real estate taxes and corporate income taxes and cover up to five years of returns before the person took office.

Sen. Brad Hoylman, a Manhattan Democrat who is one of the main sponsors, said Republicans were "misinformed" about the issue, pointing out that current federal law already allows congressional committees to request a person's tax returns from the IRS.

"The power of the Congress to see your federal taxes already exists," he said. "We're not doing anything new here."

Trump's home state is New York, where many of his business enterprises are based.

Financial information in state returns is likely to mirror much of what is in his federal returns.

Republicans said Democrats should be focused on lowering the state's high taxes and improving the lives of New Yorkers, not going after the president's tax returns, a move GOP senators deemed intrusive and a violation of privacy rights.

"I find that extremely troubling. This is bad public policy," said John Flanagan, a Long Island Republican who leads the Senate's GOP minority.

The vote fell along party lines, with 39 Democrats in the 63-seat Senate voting for the measure.

White House officials didn't respond to a request for comment.

Federal law allows Congress to demand the president's tax returns under certain circumstances, but on Monday Treasury

Secretary Steven Mnuchin declined to disclose Trump's federal returns to the Democratic-controlled House, saying the request "lacks a legitimate legislative purpose."

That refusal set the stage for a possible legal battle. Any law passed in New York might also be destined for a court challenge.

The New York Times reported Tuesday that Trump's businesses lost more than $1 billion from 1985 to 1994, based on tax information the newspaper acquired. New York's proposed law wouldn't authorize the disclosure of Trump's returns in any of the years described in the Times report.

Previous efforts to bring the legislation to a floor vote in the Senate were blocked by Republicans, who lost control of the chamber in the November elections.

Trump defends y-u-u-ge losses as 'sport' — slams 'Fake News hit job' on taxes

(TNS) — The Donald says he's got game — even though he lost more than $1 billion.

President Trump defended as "sport" the giant losses he reported on his taxes and lashed out at the New York Times for running a story he called "Fake News hit job."

"You always wanted to show losses for tax purposes," he wrote.

Trump's unusually factual response suggests the Gray Lady got under his skin with the expose, which undercut his claim of business acumen that was a key selling point of his upset 2016 presidential win.

He has refused to release any of his tax returns.

Democrats are demanding the last six years of Trump's 1040s under a law that appears to give the White House no wiggle room. Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin has refused to hand over the returns, leading to a standoff with Congress that will likely wind up in court.

US stocks slide as modest rally fades ahead of trade talks

By DAMIAN J. TROISE and ALEX VEIGA
AP BUSINESS WRITERS

A modest rally faded in the last few minutes of trading on Wall Street, leaving stocks slightly lower Wednesday ahead of the latest round of trade talks between the U.S. and China.

The late-afternoon reversal added to the market's losses following a steep sell-off a day earlier as investors worry that the costly trade dispute between the world's two biggest economies will escalate.

Financial markets turned volatile this week after President Donald Trump threatened to impose more tariffs on Chinese goods, a threat that is set to become reality early Friday. Negotiations between the U.S. and China are scheduled to continue in Washington on Thursday, and will include China's top trade official.

Trump said on Twitter that China is coming "to make a deal" but that he'll still be ready to raise tariffs if the negotiations fail to produce an agreement.

That appeared to give the market a boost, but it didn't last.

"Investors are concerned that a deal may not be forthcoming," said Quincy Krosby, chief market strategist at Prudential Financial. "You don't want to be caught off-guard by perhaps a negative comment out of Beijing overnight or, for that matter, the White House."

The S&P 500 index fell 4.63 points, or 0.2%, to 2,879.42. The benchmark index had been up 0.5%.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average inched up 2.24 points, or less than 0.1%, to 25,967.33. The Nasdaq composite dropped 20.44 points, or 0.3%, to 7,943.32.

The Russell 2000 index of small company stocks slid 7.34 points, or 0.5%, to 1,574.97.

Major stock indexes in Europe closed with modest gains.

Bond prices fell. The yield on the 10-year Treasury rose to 2.48% from 2.44% late Tuesday.

Utilities, banks, internet companies and technology stocks accounted for much of the slide. NRG Energy fell 4.4%, Capital One Financial dropped 1.5%, Netflix slid 1.6% and Intel lost 2.5%. Health care stocks notched the biggest gains, led by McKesson Corp., which climbed 4.8%.

The U.S. and China have raised tariffs on tens of billions of dollars of each other's goods in their dispute over U.S. complaints about China's technology and U.S. practices.

Investors have been anticipating a deal throughout this year, which contributed to double-digit gains in all the major indexes. But the latest tough talk is raising anxiety on Wall Street and casting more doubt about a resolution.

US regulators get sympathy from Congress

Lawmakers of both parties warn that fines against big companies like Facebook may be inadequate to change conduct

By MARCY GORDON
AP BUSINESS WRITER

WASHINGTON — Federal privacy regulators got a sympathetic hearing from Congress on Wednesday for their request for greater powers and funding to police privacy, as lawmakers warned that fines against big companies may be inadequate to change their conduct.

The Federal Trade Commission is negotiating a record fine to punish Facebook for alleged violations of users' privacy.

But "a large fine in a single case does not solve the problems that consumers face," said Rep. Jan Schakowsky, D-Ill., chairwoman of the House consumer protection subcommittee.

At a hearing with the five members of the FTC, Schakowsky said the agency needs more funding and authority "at a minimum to restore consumers' confidence."

Rohit Chopra, one of the FTC commissioners, said that for some big companies, fines are a mere "parking ticket."

"We cannot change behavior without finding out who at the top caused those problems," Chopra said.

Although Schakowsky and Chopra didn't specifically mention Facebook, the FTC is considering a rare action to hold Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg personally accountable for Facebook's alleged failure to honor a 2011 agreement over privacy lapses.

The FTC also may limit how the giant social network targets advertising to its massive user base — potentially making the action far more than a regulatory slap on the wrist.

Beyond a fine expected to run as high as $5 billion, comprehensive action by the FTC could mark a watershed in federal action against the tech industry in the name of consumer privacy.

Rep. Michael Burgess, R-Texas, said even a large fine "is inconsequential for a company the size of Facebook" while potentially damaging smaller businesses.

By usual practice, the FTC — an independent agency — is split with three Republicans and two Democrats. FTC Chairman Joseph Simons has advocated tougher enforcement action against tech companies and must obtain the agreement of at least two other commissioners for any action on Facebook.

Lawmakers have started work on a new national privacy law that could sharply curtail the ability of the biggest tech companies to collect and make money off people's personal data. The role of the FTC as an enforcer of privacy protections is a key issue in the debate over legislation.

Consumer privacy advocates and Democratic lawmakers say the agency currently lacks teeth and have pushed for expanding its powers and funding.

The FTC doesn't have the authority, for example, to levy civil money penalties for first violations for most unfair or deceptive practices. It can only issue orders halting the conduct, as it did with Facebook in 2011.

The agency would be expected to write new privacy rules should Congress pass a new law.

Behind the momentum for a new law is rising concern over a string of scandals and the compromise of private data held by Facebook, Google and other tech giants that have reaped riches by aggregating consumer information. The industry has traditionally been lightly regulated and has resisted closer oversight as a threat to its culture of free-wheeling innovation.

Uber, Lyft drivers protest across the US, overseas

By CATHY BUSSEWITZ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Some drivers for ride-hailing giants Uber and Lyft turned off their apps Wednesday to protest what they say are declining wages at a time when both companies are raking in billions of dollars from investors.

Demonstrations took place in 10 U.S. cities, including Chicago, Los Angeles, New York, San Francisco and Washington, as well as some European locations like London. But they did not seem to cause much disruption and many riders were still able to hail a car with ease.

The protests arrive just ahead of Uber's initial public stock offering Friday. Uber hopes to raise $9 billion, putting the company's valuation in excess of $91 billion.

It's not the first time drivers for ride-hailing apps have staged protests. Strikes were planned in several cities ahead of Lyft's IPO last month, although the disruption to riders appeared to be minimal then, too. More cities are participating in Wednesday's protest.

"Drivers built these billion dollar companies and it is just plain wrong that so many continue to be paid poverty wages while Silicon Valley investors get rich off their labor," said Brendan Sexton, executive director of the

The Guild organized a caravan of Uber drivers across the Brooklyn Bridge Wednesday.

Some drivers went offline in New York between 7 a.m.

and 9 a.m., though it was still easy to locate a driver during rush hour near Wall Street in lower Manhattan.

Drivers in Los Angeles are participating in a 24-hour strike and picket line at Los Angeles International Airport.

C. difficile is difficult to treat, but not a terminal illness

DEAR DR. ROACH: In December, I developed an abscess in my jaw from food getting caught in my tooth. I went to see a local dentist who prescribed clindamycin and metronidazole. I came down with a case of C. difficile. I have since found evidence that multiple antibiotics and clindamycin are causes of C. diff.

I am getting mixed messages about my prognosis. Some medical people are telling me it's not a big deal and to just wash my hands a lot.

My primary physician, however, gave me the impression that this is basically a terminal diagnosis.

She told me how sorry she was and that I had been a very healthy person but am not any longer. She told me that it will most likely recur, and every time it does it will be more difficult to treat until I become antibiotic resistant, and that people die from it. She also told me that she would set me up for the standard yearly appointment, but that I should come see her whenever I need to.

I am paranoid about what my future now holds and what, if anything, I can do. I would like your opinion of this situation. Any guidance you can give me would be greatly appreciated. — Anon.

ANSWER: Clostridium difficile ("C. diff") infections are common but can be serious. As you correctly note, many antibiotics are associated with the acquisition of symptomatic C. diff infections, and although clindamycin is the best known, other antibiotics (quinolones, amoxicillin and related penicillins) are actually more common. The antibiotics kill off large numbers of healthy bacteria, allowing the unhealthy C. diff to take over. The cardinal symptom of C. diff is watery diarrhea, at least three loose stools in 24 hours. Abdominal pain and cramping, nausea and poor appetite are common. Fever is less common. Symptoms can start during antibiotic treatment or up to a month after completing antibiotics.

Treatment is stopping the antibiotic if possible and if still being given. Antibiotic treatment against C. diff is with the newer drug fidaxomicin or with oral vancomycin; unfortunately, fidaxomicin is ridiculously expensive — a course of fidaxomicin is $3,000 via goodrx.com in the U.S. at the time of writing.

A course of oral vancomycin costs much less, often less than $200 through the same website. If neither of these is available, metronidazole is a less-expensive alternative. Fidaxomicin has the lowest risk of recurrence of the infection, and many experts will reserve it for a person who has recurred after oral vancomycin. For the unusual person who continues to recur after antibiotic treatment, fecal microbiota transplants (processed from stool of healthy donors) have been safe and effective.

I am disturbed that you got the impression that C. diff is a terminal diagnosis. Although in rare cases, hospitalized patients can get so sick that they can die from C. diff, this would be very unusual in less severe disease, as in someone who is able to go home from the hospital.

Handwashing is necessary to reduce infection to others. Avoiding drugs like Prilosec that suppress acid can help prevent recurrences. Finally, probiotics (live healthy bacteria) may be of use in reducing infection and recurrence.

Picking up after mother is lifelong family dilemma

DEAR ABBY: My mom has never been what you would call a housekeeper. Dad did all the shopping, cooking and cleaning. As a child, I remember our house always being a mess. Mom worked, and I don't know why she never felt like she needed to clean up after herself. My dad would straighten up after her, and there were often arguments about it.

Fast forward. Dad passed away three years ago, and my mom hasn't changed. She leaves things all over the house like she did before — dishes, bowls, soda cans, shoes.

The first year, I would go over and clean only to return a couple of days later and find the place a mess again. She won't let cleaning people in because she "doesn't like the smell of the cleaning products."

I feel like a bad daughter because at this point, I won't go over to her house anymore. I cannot spend time there. If this were new behavior, I would be concerned, but it's been this way as long as I can remember. My daughter won't visit her either. What do I do? — Miffed About The Mess In Virginia

Dear Abby

DEAR MIFFED: Because your mother is the way she is and always has been like this, take her out or to your home when you want to visit with her.

DEAR ABBY: Chewing ice in your tea, coffee or soft drink is as rude as eating your food or cracking your gum with your mouth open.

As I write this, I am sitting in a nice neighborhood coffee shop. The man next to me ordered an iced beverage, which he has been chomping through for the last 10 minutes. This is rude under any conditions, but magnified by the fact that some of us are going over work matters and trying to enjoy a coffee and muffin break. — Breaking The Ice

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Before you worry, argue, decide on an approach or anything else, take a step back. Lighten up, and ask yourself, "What's the very least I can do?" Because that might be just the light touch that's enough to fix the problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Your friends have opinions. Colleagues are happy to share what they know. The experts will certainly weigh in if you ask them to (or, more likely, pay them to). But no outside opinion is the absolute answer. That will come from you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The sense of safety you establish around you can be felt by others, and it's an attractive environment. So you can expect that people will come into your realm, get comfortable there and settle in to stay a while.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Everyone wants to believe in the miracle cure, but if it were as good as the advertisement, everyone would already know about it, and many of the world's problems would be solved. Save your money.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). People pick up what you're putting down, buy what you're selling, take what you're giving, laugh at your jokes and generally say yes to you. Why? They like you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). When you have something good, you want to share it. The other thing you need to do is protect it. You can share and protect at the same time once you decide this is what you need to do.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Having excellent organizational systems will make you so much more productive than people who don't have such structures in place. Start asking questions like, "How can I do the menial things faster, cheaper or simpler?"

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Let no one rush you along. It works out great when you relax and move at your own usual pace, if not considerably slower than that. Time will be your ally, mentor and financial advisor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Doing the right thing can bring unexpected consequences just like doing the wrong thing can. The difference is you can definitely manage the consequences of doing the right thing with your head held high.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). At the end of this day, everyone recalls the parts that were joyful, scary, angry or epic. Use this. Strike an emotional chord to create a desired impact and influence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Some of what you encounter is amazing. There are always a few different ways to look at it. Once you land on a way that works for you, hold steady to this point of view.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Though no one is trying to stand in the way of your happiness as they fulfill their own agenda, they'll unwittingly create an obstacle in your path to it. You'll need to go around that and keep moving.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 9). Your involvement in a project increases, and the next three months show you happily under the influence of the "IKEA effect," placing a high value on and deriving great satisfaction from the things you partially created. As far as relationships go, you'll make someone's life beautiful, karma that comes full circle. Sagittarius and Libra adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 20, 4, 44, 7 and 1.

The bidding:

EAST	SOUTH	WEST	NORTH

Pass	3♠	Pass	3NT
Pass	4♠	Dbl	All pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♥

An expert will sometimes bid and play a hand like he has X-ray vision. That's a mirage. His decisions are almost always based on bridge logic. South in today's deal was Australian international Sartaj Hans. He considered partner's three no trump bid to be a choice of games — extra values with only three-card spade support. He chose to play in spades and ran into a penalty double on his left.

West continued with the king of hearts at trick two and then a low heart, ruffed by East and over-ruffed by Hans. Hans led a club, which West won with his ace and continued with a club to dummy's king. The ace of spades revealed the trump position, so Hans ruffed a heart low in his hand and led the jack of diamonds for a winning finesse. When West proved to have three diamonds, Hans ruffed a heart with the king of spades as West helplessly under-ruffed. A spade toward dummy's queen-10 picked up the trumps and Hans brought home his doubled contract. Well played!

The contract would have been defeated had West shifted to a low trump at trick three instead of playing a third heart. That is difficult to see even looking at all four hands, so it is hard to fault West too badly for this "mistake".

California to ban pesticide it says hurts babies' brains

By BRIAN MELLEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's most productive agricultural state moved Wednesday to ban a controversial pesticide widely used to control a range of insects but blamed for harming brain development in babies.

The move cheered by environmentalists would outlaw chlorpyrifos after scientists deemed it a toxic air contaminant and discovered it to be more dangerous than previously thought. California Environmental Secretary Jared Blumenfeld said it's the first time the state has sought to ban a pesticide and the move was overdue.

"This pesticide is a neurotoxin, and it was first put on the market in 1965," Blumenfeld said. "So it's been on the shelf a long time, and it's past its sell-by date."

The decision comes after regulators in several states have taken steps in recent years to restrict the pesticide used on about 60 different crops in California, including grapes, almonds and oranges. Hawaii banned it last year, and New York lawmakers recently sent a measure to the governor outlawing use of the pesticide.

DowDuPont, which produces the pesticide, said it was disappointed with the decision and that farmers who rely on the pesticide say it will hurt their ability to control insects.

"It's a very important part of the crop protection tool box," said Casey Creamer, president of California Citrus Mutual, which represents 5,000 growers. "We're fighting for our lives here trying to protect ourselves from deadly diseases, and we keep losing tools."

Creamer questioned the scientific studies behind the decision and said removing the pesticide could hurt efforts to prevent a pest like the Asian citrus psyllid from decimating the citrus industry in California like it did in much of Florida. The pest infects citrus trees with a fatal disease.

Blumenfeld said California took action in part because the federal government allowed the pesticide to be used after the Obama administration tried to phase it out.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency under President Donald Trump reversed that effort after reevaluating the science. Environmental groups and farmworkers challenged that decision, and a federal appeals court last month ordered the EPA to decide by July whether to ban the pesticide.

"This is a historic victory for California's agricultural communities and for children nationwide," said Miriam Rotkin-Ellman of the Natural Resources Defense Council. "The science clearly shows that chlorpyrifos is too dangerous to use in our fields. Since California uses more chlorpyrifos than any other state, this ban will not only protect kids who live here, but kids who eat the fruits and veggies grown here."

The pesticide is in a class of organophosphates chemically similar to a nerve gas developed by Nazi Germany before World War II. Its heavy use has often left traces in drinking water sources. A 2012 study by the University of California, Berkeley, found that 87% of umbilical-cord blood samples tested from newborn babies contained detectable levels of the pesticide.

Dr. Gina Solomon, a medical professor at the University of California, San Francisco, and former deputy secretary of Cal-EPA, said chlorpyrifos is unusual in that it's one of the best understood pesticides because it's been so extensively studied.

"We know a lot about what it does to developing children, and that science is the bedrock of the action that Cal-EPA is announcing," she said. "Many pesticides have been studied well in lab rats, but in this case, we actually know what it does to people."

Studies in cities where the pesticide was once used to kill cockroaches before it was banned for indoor use in 2000 and in rural farmworker communities showed it harmed brain development in fetuses and affected reading ability, IQ and led to hyperactivity in children, Solomon said. Even head sizes were smaller in children whose mothers were exposed to the pesticide.

While the ban — technically known as a cancellation — could take up to two years to take effect, the state Department of Pesticide Regulation has recommended that county agriculture commissioners adopt stricter rules on where and how the chemical can be applied, including larger buffer zones.

Use of the pesticide has been reduced by more than half in California since 2005, to just under 1 million pounds used on crops in 2016, the state says.

Eagle with 8-foot wing span crashes into Alaska home

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Many are familiar with uninvited guests unexpectedly crashing at the house, but an eagle took such a scenario to new heights in Kodiak.

An eagle grabbed a piece of freezer-burned halibut that someone had thrown out, and apparently misjudged its climb up a cliff with the 4-pound piece of fish while likely being chased by another eagle, the Kodiak Daily Mirror reported Tuesday.

The wrong trajectory led the eagle to smash through a front window of Stacy Studebaker's home Saturday.

"It was so unbelievably loud. My first thought was: I thought an atomic bomb had dropped and the windows were blowing out," said Studebaker, who founded the local chapter of the Audubon Society.

She was astonished to find the damage came from a bird crashing through her window.

"I ran around the corner and here was this eagle, in the living room," Studebaker said. "Shards of glass were flying everywhere, and the eagle flew over to the other plate glass window and was trying to get out. It was scratching at the window sill and pecking ... it was just frantic."

She opened a door in the kitchen and tried to coax the eagle out of the house but the bird had a different idea.

"It went into the kitchen, along with its 8-foot wingspan — we're talking stuff coming off the walls, everything coming off the counters, it was just mayhem," she said.

A neighbor showed up, and they tried again to get the eagle outside.

"But it freaked out again and flew into the dining room and there was just stuff flying everywhere — broken glassware, art supplies, you name it. It was still trying to get out through the windows in the dining room," Studebaker said.

Eventually they maneuvered behind the bird and were able to get it out of the house, which took her and her husband hours to clean up.

where things can go wrong," Vo said. "Things can be intentionally altered."

Track-and-trace sometimes is referred to as seed-to-sale to reflect the goal of tracking marijuana plants every step, from the time they are planted until products are purchased by consumers. The goal is to keep illegal cannabis from store shelves while making sure legally produced products don't drift into the underground market.

According to state law, the tracking system is required to provide "data points for the different stages of commercial activity, including, but not limited to, cultivation, harvest, processing, distribution, inventory and sale." It's also intended to help the state keep track of taxes.

But for now, California's electronic monitoring system is seeing just fragments of the legal market — not the rigorous seed-to-sale oversight envisioned when voters approved Proposition 64, the law that opened the way for broad legal sales.

Alex Traverso, a spokesman for the state Bureau of Cannabis Control, said the agency was unaware of any enforcement cases triggered by fraudulent or altered paper records. To date, it has received more than 50,000 manifests.

According to the state, the California tracking network created by Florida-based Franwell Inc. has been functional since Jan. 2, 2018, the day after legal sales began.

So why are so few licensees using it? In short, time and bureaucracy.

It goes back to state regulators' decision to first issue only temporary cannabis licenses, as California faced a tight legal deadline to begin sales on Jan. 1, 2018.

It wasn't possible to train thousands of temporary license holders to use the tracking system "without causing significant disruption" to the new, regulated marijuana market, said Rebecca Foree, spokeswoman for the state Department of Food and Agriculture.

Instead, the state decided only annual license-holders would use the track-and-trace system. But the first annual license wasn't issued until November, and only a relatively small number have been issued since.

Meanwhile, scores of temporary licenses have expired, leaving companies in a kind of legal limbo, technically unable to do business in the state market.

Even when the tracking system comes into widespread use, it will provide only a partial look into statewide growing and sales since California's illegal pot industry continues to thrive.

allowing Iran to exchange its enriched uranium for unrefined yellowcake uranium with Russia, and to sell its heavy water, which is used as a coolant in nuclear reactors, to Oman.

In 60 days, if no new deal is in place, Iran will increase its enrichment of uranium beyond the accord-permitted 3.67%, which can fuel a commercial nuclear power plant. Rouhani did not say how far Iran would be willing to enrich, although the head of its nuclear program again reiterated Iran could reach 20% enrichment within four days.

Once a country enriches uranium to around 20%, scientists say the time needed to reach the 90% threshold for weapons-grade uranium is halved. Iran long has maintained its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes. However, Iranian state television's English-language service Press TV, citing sources close to presidency, said the country would withdraw from the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty if Europeans sought to sanction Iran at the U.N. Security Council.

Rouhani also said that if the 60 days pass without action, Iran will halt a Chinese-led effort to redesign its Arak heavy water nuclear reactor. Such reactors produce plutonium that can be used in nuclear weapons.

Iran notified Britain, Russia, China, the European Union,

France and Germany of its decision earlier in the day. All were signatories to the nuclear deal and continue to support it. Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif met Wednesday in Moscow with his Russian counterpart Sergey Lavrov and offered a letter as well.

"If the five countries join negotiations and help Iran to reach its benefits in the field of oil and banking, Iran will return to its commitments according to the nuclear deal," Rouhani said.

confronted one of the armed students in a hallway.

The guard drew his weapon and apprehended the person, Whitus said.

"He doesn't even realize how many lives he saved by stopping a school shooting," Whitus said.

Both suspects were students at the school, and they were not previously known to authorities, Spurlock said. A message left at a phone number listed for Erickson's home was not immediately returned. He was scheduled to make an initial court appearance later Wednesday.

Josh Dutton, 18, said he was close friends with Erickson in middle school but had not seen him for four years while attending a different high school. On Sunday, he spotted Erickson at a local light rail station and said he was shocked at how much his friend had changed.

Erickson wore all black and was significantly thinner and did not seem interested in talking.

"He said he'd just turned 18 and he owned rifles," Dutton said.

The shooting took place exactly a week after a gunman killed two students and wounded four at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

It also came nearly three weeks after neighboring Littleton marked the anniversary of the Columbine attack that killed 13 people. The two schools are separated by about 7 miles in adjacent communities south of Denver.

Douglas County District Attorney George Brauchler said the community remains resilient in the face of multiple shootings, including Columbine, the 2012 theater shooting in the Denver suburb of Aurora and the 2013 shooting at Arapahoe High School.

The attacks are "aberrant acts" although they might seem otherwise to the rest of the world, he said.

Raccoon moves into zoo; keepers can't expel it

BERLIN (AP) — A wild raccoon has moved into Heidelberg Zoo in Germany and keepers can't kick him out.

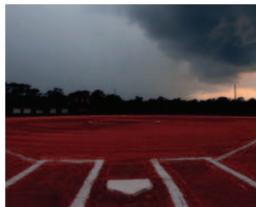

German daily Rhein-Neckar-Zeitung reported Friday that zoo staff recently discovered the uninvited guest inside the raccoon enclosure, where he seemed to be getting along fine with the seven original residents.

The newspaper reported that the interloper — nicknamed Fred — can expect free board and lodgings for life, because European Union rules forbid him from being released back into the wild.

Under a 2015 EU directive, raccoons are considered an invasive alien species that might pose a threat to European plants and animals.

Wild raccoons in Europe are the descendants of animals that escaped from fur farms decades ago.

Fred is unlikely to produce offspring, however. EU rules dictate he'll have to be castrated.

Tampa Bay rally goes to waste after 13 innings

Kiermaier tied game with two-out ninth-inning RBI single; Pham thrown out at home

By FRED GOODALL
AP SPORTS WRITER

ST. PETERSBURG — Running out of options in an expended bullpen, Arizona manager Torey Lovullo turned to Archie Bradley and Zack Godley.

One was coming off a late-inning meltdown that triggered a three-game losing streak. The other was dropped from the starting rotation less than a week ago.

Bradley and Godley relished the opportunities, rebounding with stellar performances in Wednesday's 3-2 victory over the Tampa Bay Rays in 13 innings.

Wilmer Flores drove in the winning run with a two-out RBI single.

Eduardo Escobar made up for a crucial throwing error, leading off the 13th with a single off Adam Kolarek (2-1) — Arizona's first hit since the fifth inning.

He moved to second on a double-play grounder before scoring on Flores' two-out, broken-bat hit to right field off Chaz Roe.

Pierre-Paul's Ferrari did 360, hit a wall on I-95

ESPN reports star defensive end suffered fractured neck after accident near Fort Lauderdale

AP PHOTO

Tampa Bay defensive end Jason Pierre-Paul's season could be in jeopardy after ESPN reported he sustained a neck fracture after crashing his Ferrari on I-95 near Fort Lauderdale, May 2. Pierre-Paul led the team in sacks last season.

By RICK STROUD
TAMPA BAY TIMES

TAMPA — A 911 call by Jason Pierre-Paul and a witness to his accident May 2 indicates the Bucs defensive end lost control of his red Ferrari and hit a wall on I-95 near the Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport.

Pierre-Paul can be heard telling a dispatcher for the Florida Highway Patrol he is not injured but needs help removing his vehicle.

"Hey, I'm on the middle of the highway and I'm by the Fort Lauderdale airport, International Boulevard by the sign Davie Boulevard and my car just did a 360 in the middle of the road and I'm headed south. I mean north," Pierre-Paul said in a 911 call obtained by Slaterscoops.com.

Pierre-Paul was asked if his vehicle struck anything.

"Yeah, I hit the median, but I'm okay," Pierre-Paul said.

"It's right in the middle. It has to be moved or a cop has to come or somebody is going to hit it."

Pierre-Paul and his passenger, James Thompson, were taken to the hospital around 3 a.m., the report says.

Although Pierre-Paul said he was not injured during the 911 call, ESPN's Adam Scheffer reported that further evaluation by specialists hired by the Bucs revealed he has a fractured neck and may require surgery. If so, it could be a season-ending injury.

At the very least, Pierre-Paul is out indefinitely pending further evaluation.

Road conditions may have contributed to the accident because it was raining.

A female witness who called 911 to report the accident said the Ferrari hit a wall while traveling southbound and that there was debris on the road.

"He hit a wall," the witness said. "A Ferrari, it's a sports car. It's red. Because it's raining."

When asked if the vehicle was blocking the road, the witness said, "Yes, they're in the middle of the road and a car is going to hit it. Please hurry."

Two convicted of bribery conspiracy in federal trial

Sports business manager and amateur coach were arrested after FBI investigation

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — An aspiring sports business manager and an amateur basketball coach were convicted of bribery conspiracy Wednesday at a trial that showed top college coaches were paid off to steer NBA-bound athletes to favored handlers.

The verdict capped the two-week trial of Christian Dawkins and youth basketball coach Merl Code in a case that forced the NCAA to confront corruption affecting basketball players at some of its elite programs.

Dawkins, 26, and Code, 45, were convicted on a conspiracy count, but acquitted of some other charges.

Leaving court, Dawkins said he could have chosen to cooperate with prosecutors and identified coaches he knew were willing to funnel money to top athletes.

"I could have," he said. "Anybody who's paying players to me is a good guy. I think the whole case is B.S. so I wouldn't have cooperated."

The verdict came just days after Dawkins took the witness stand and denied bribing anyone. He testified that an informant and undercover FBI agents, posing as investors in his fledgling management company, had tried to get him to pay bribes, but he refused.

In closing arguments, a prosecutor said Dawkins lied to jurors.

Outside Manhattan federal court, Code said: "There was no evidence at any point in the trial that I bribed anybody."

The prosecution revealed how financial advisers and business managers allegedly paid tens of thousands of dollars to assistant college coaches and athletes' families to steer highly regarded high school players to big-program colleges, sometimes with the help of apparel makers. The bribes also secured the allegiance of players to certain financial advisers, managers and even a tailor.

During the trial, universities were portrayed by prosecutors as victims of greedy financial advisers and coaches.

Steven Haney, a lawyer for Dawkins, said the acquittal of Dawkins and Code on some charges showed jurors "found that the universities were not victims."

"That spoke loudly from this verdict," Haney said.

He added: "The real crime is (unpaid) student athletes making universities millions of dollars."

Haney spoke with pride of Dawkins. "He could have

Bad timing for Embiid's health woes

By BRIAN MAHONEY
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Joel Embiid doesn't know if he will feel better. He certainly knows he has to play better.

He's battling an illness, looking like someone who'd rather be in bed than on the court. But the Philadelphia 76ers need their All-Star center, so Embiid is trying to tell himself that he has to dig deeper to find more energy, even if it's only for three hours.

"You know, can't control my physical condition, but I can also control how much I push myself and I try to do that," Embiid said. "But I've just got to do more."

If he can't, he'll have all the time he needs to rest. With Embiid faltering, the 76ers try to fight off elimination and send the Eastern Conference semifinals back to Toronto when they host the Raptors for Game 6 on Thursday.

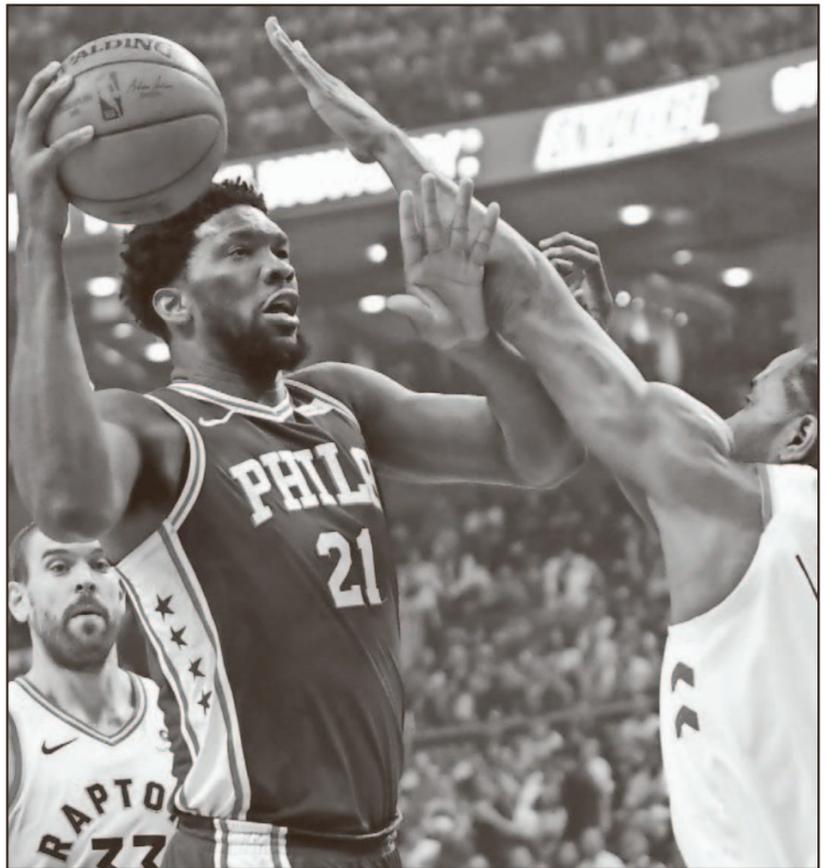

Portland will also try to send a series the distance on Thursday, hosting Game 6 against Denver, which has won two straight for a 3-2 lead behind Nikola Jokic, its dominant center.

Embiid is supposed to be a dominant center, too.

But he hasn't performed at anywhere near that level since Game 3, when he had 33 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks as the 76ers romped to a 21-point victory and a 2-1 lead. He's been unable to find that level again while missing valuable court time because of his illness, managing just 11 in Game 4 and then 13 points and eight turnovers in the Raptors' 125-89 rout on Tuesday. The 76ers used to be able to wait out Embiid's woes.

His foot injuries delayed the start of his career by two seasons, but that was back in Philadelphia's "Process" era when planning for the future superseded playing for the present.

They need him now against the second-seeded Raptors and the red-hot Kawhi Leonard, especially because fellow All-Star Ben Simmons is struggling, too. But it's Embiid taking the bulk of the beating from fans and media, and coach Brett Brown doesn't think that's right.

"I think it's grossly unfair, some of the criticism that he gets. I don't understand that," Brown said. "And so it's not ideal, you wished he were at shootaround, you wished he were in film sessions, but he had a temperature for the last few days that's kept him in bed."

A look at Thursday's games:

RAPTORS AT 76ERS

Toronto leads 3-2. Game 6, 8 p.m. EDT, ESPN.

NEED TO KNOW: Toronto's 36-point win in Game 5 was its largest in franchise playoff history. The Raptors need one victory to reach the East finals for the second time in three years, having fallen to Cleveland there in 2016.

INJURY WATCH: Pascal

Siakam looked back to full strength in Game 5 with 25 points, after struggling with a calf injury in Game 4.

KEEP AN EYE ON: Embiid's face. He vowed to be back to his normal fun-loving self in front of his Philadelphia fans.

"If you see me smile that means I'm doing what I'm supposed to do," he said after Game 5.

PRESSURE IS ON: Simmons. Embiid at least has an excuse for his struggles. But there's no reason Simmons should be averaging just 9.4 points in the series, and probably no way the 76ers can win it unless he improves.

NUGGETS AT TRAIL BLAZERS

Nuggets lead 3-2. Game 6, 10:30 p.m. EDT, ESPN.

NEED TO KNOW: The Nuggets have a chance to make it to the Western Conference finals for the first time since 2009. "Everyone on the team wants to win, and when we have that mindset, we're a pretty dangerous team," Nuggets guard Will Barton said.

INJURY WATCH: Jamal Murray has been hampered by a sore shoulder and an aching right thigh.

KEEP AN EYE ON: Nuggets forward Paul Millsap has found the fountain of youth in this series.

The 34-year-old is coming off a Game 5 in which he had 24 points. His presence also has been a calming influence for the Nuggets.

"You can see he doesn't have emotions. When things are not going good, he gets us together. When things are going good, he keeps talking with us," Jokic said.

PRESSURE IS ON: Blazers guards Damian Lillard and CJ McCollum, who were a combined minus-47 in Game 5. "We know that we're more than capable of getting it done in the next game," Lillard said. "We don't feel like we've played our best basketball yet and with our back against the wall, we don't really have a choice. Our mindset is just to get the next one, take care of home, and make it back here."

PGA Championship scores with schedule change

Major moved up from August in time to capture momentum from Woods' victory at the Masters

AP PHOTO

Tiger Woods, who accepted the Presidential Medal of Freedom in the Rose Garden of the White House, Monday, will seek his 16th major victory at the PGA Championship next week.

BY NEIL BEST
NEWSDAY

NEW YORK — CBS long favored moving the PGA Championship from August to May, and so it came to pass, starting next week at Bethpage Black.

What no one anticipated was that the move would coincide with an extraordinary stroke of luck — Tiger Woods winning the Masters last month.

"This is unquestionably one of the great cases of serendipity when it comes to scheduling that I've ever seen in the sports broadcasting world," CBS' Jim Nantz said Wednesday on a conference call to promote the event.

"You had to really bring together a lot of the governing bodies of the sport to execute this one move," Nantz said. "And who could have ever forecast that the PGA Championship would walk into Year One of this coming on the heels of one of the greatest moments in the history of the sport?"

"So the PGA Championship definitely hit the lottery with the move in 2019."

In previous decades, Woods would have had to wait two months to play in another major. The new calendar offers a major every month from April to July.

"We said all along that moving to May would be better from an ad sales standpoint, and it definitely has been, and we think it's going to be from a ratings standpoint and an overall interest standpoint," CBS Sports chairman McManus said.

This is the final year of CBS' current deal with the PGA, but a new one kicks in in 2020. This will be the last year in which TNT shows the first two rounds; ESPN will assume that role next May.

Naturally, having Woods in contention through Sunday would be ideal for the network.

Analyst Nick Faldo

expressed concern that Woods has not played competitively since the Masters, that the temperatures at Bethpage could be unusually cool, and that the rough could be challenging.

"If he hits in the rough at Bethpage Black he will not be able to scramble like he did at Augusta National," Faldo said, adding, "We have to just go back a couple of notches with our expectations."

Regarding Woods' layoff, Faldo said that as a golfer ages, "You need to play competitively somewhere in between the majors to just loosen things up and see where your game is, simple as that."

Baffert, Smith team up for Preakness Stakes

Improbable will have Triple Crown-winning jockey if colt is entered to run in Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — Improbable will have Triple Crown-winning jockey Mike Smith aboard if the colt runs in the Preakness on May 18.

Trainer Bob Baffert said Wednesday that he was making the switch from Irad Ortiz Jr. because "Mike and I have a little luck together."

Baffert and Smith teamed with Justify to win the Triple Crown last year.

Ortiz rode Improbable to a fifth-place finish in the Kentucky Derby on Saturday and the colt was moved up to fourth following Maximum Security's disqualification for interference.

Baffert said Improbable will train Monday at Churchill Downs, and then he will make a final decision on the colt's status for the Preakness, a race the trainer has won seven times. If Improbable joins the field for the middle leg of the Triple Crown, he would arrive in Baltimore three days ahead of the race.

The rest of the maximum 14-horse field for the Preakness has begun taking shape. Neither Maximum Security nor Derby winner Country House will run it.

War of Will, squeezed when Maximum Security drifted out at the Derby as the leaders were coming out of the final turn, was back training Wednesday. The colt had his right front shoe removed and his foot soaked in Epsom salts after experiencing discomfort, trainer Mark Casse said.

War of Will finished eighth — 4½ lengths behind the first-place finisher — and was moved up to seventh via the DQ.

Trainer Mike Trombetta said he will decide by Friday whether Win Win runs in the 1 3/16-mile race.

The colt ended up ninth in the Derby and emerged unscathed from the race, which was run on a sloppy track for the second straight year.

Also under consideration is Bodexpress, moved up to 13th after finishing 14th in the Derby. The colt is 0 for 6 in his career.

Among fresh prospects are Bourbon War, who would be ridden by Ortiz, Alwaysmining, Anothertwistafate, Laughing Fox, Owendale and Signalman.

Nadal overcomes virus to advance in Madrid Open

By TALES AZZONI
AP SPORTS WRITER

MADRID — Rafael Nadal was concerned going into his first match at the Madrid Open.

He lost practice time because of a stomach virus and didn't know exactly how his body would react when he stepped onto the "Magic Box" center court.

But despite the lack of preparation and the physical toll of the illness, Nadal cruised to a 6-3, 6-3 win over Canadian teenager Felix Auger-Aliassime to reach the third round in the Spanish capital.

Playing only a few days after falling ill, Nadal lost only four points on his serve in the first set and broke Auger-Aliassime three times in the second.

"I've had this stomach virus for a few days so this was a very important match for me," the second-ranked Spaniard said. "I've been improving but obviously the body remains a bit debilitated for a while. I'm very happy with the victory. It was very important."

Nadal is trying to rebound from consecutive eliminations in the semifinals of both Monte Carlo and Barcelona, which marked his worst start to the clay-court season in four years.

"The important thing is to win, you know, especially given what's happened in the last three days," he said.

A five-time champion in Madrid, Nadal will next face American Frances Tiafoe, who defeated Philipp Kohlschreiber 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

finished the four hour, 39-minute marathon in which Arizona pitchers combined to set a franchise record with 23 strikeouts.

The Rays made it interesting in the eighth, scoring an unearned run on Escobar's errant throw to trim Arizona's lead to 2-1. But they failed to take advantage of eventually loading the bases with no outs.

Reliever T.J. McFarland, the third Arizona pitcher of the inning, escaped the jam by striking out Brandon Lowe and getting Willy Adames to line out to second base.

The Diamondbacks weren't as fortunate in the ninth, when closer Greg Holland gave up a two-out double to Yandy Diaz and walked Tommy Pham intentionally before Tampa Bay tied it on Kiermaier's single to right.

The Rays ran themselves out of a potential game-winning rally. Kiermaier was caught in a rundown between first and second base after his hit, and Pham was thrown out at the plate trying to score from the third.

The Rays rallied from a 2-0 deficit to force extra innings, scoring on Escobar's eighth-inning error and Kevin Kiermaier's two-out, pinch-hit single in the ninth.

Adam Jones and Ketel Marte drove in runs off Rays starter Charlie Morton for the Diamondbacks, who avoided a sweep after being outscored 18-4 in the first two games against the AL East leaders.

"We've got to find a way to score and we just didn't," Rays manager Kevin Cash said.

"They just made good pitches. You feel good about yourself tying the game and doing everything you could to give your team a chance," Kiermaier said. "But I was maybe a little too aggressive, and that's why I'm a little upset with myself," Cash said.

Jarrold Dyson drew a pair of leadoff walks and scored Arizona's first two runs on a force play and Marte's RBI single that made it 2-0 in the third.

The Diamondbacks had plenty of other opportunities, but were just 1 for 8 with runners in scoring position against Morton.

Lowe extended his hitting streak to a career-best 12 games with an infield single for Tampa Bay, which was even worse than Arizona with runners in scoring position — going 0 for 12 with eight strikeouts before Kiermaier's ninth-inning single tied it.

Robbie Ray pitched 5 2/3 scoreless innings for Arizona, and allowing four hits and striking out a season-high 11. The Diamondbacks starter fanned six of the seven batters he faced with runners in scoring position.

Godley, moved to the bullpen to open a spot in the rotation for rookie Taylor Clarke, struck out two during a perfect ninth for his first career save.

"Felt good just to get on the mound again. ... It's awesome to be able to go out like that when it's a very positive situation," Godley said.

Bradley (2-3) allowed one hit and struck out five. "Felt a lot better," Bradley — three days removed from blowing a four-run, eighth-inning lead in a loss at Colorado — said after working three scoreless innings to get the win.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Rays: C Michael Perez was placed on the 10-day injured list after with a right oblique strain that occurred during

SMALL CROWDS

Attendance for the three-game series was just 24,846. Wednesday's finale drew the largest crowd, 8,663.

STRIKEOUTS GALORE

In all, there 42 strikeouts. Rays pitchers fanned 19, including John Ryan Murphy four times. Lowe struck out five times, a Tampa Bay franchise record.

UP NEXT

Rays: Off Thursday before hosting a weekend series against the second-place New York Yankees. RHP Tyler Glasnow (6-0, 1.47) is scheduled to start Friday against the Yankees' Domingo German (6-1, 2.35).

brought the whole world of college athletics to its knees and he chose not to," the lawyer said. "He was asked repeatedly by the government to cooperate. He said, 'I'm not going to give you the names of 15 to 20 coaches.' Today he leaves this courthouse winning four of six (counts)."

Prosecutors say video and audio evidence was overwhelming that Dawkins and Code eagerly embraced the scheme in 2016 and 2017. Code was a Clemson point guard in the 1990s who later developed college basketball contacts working for Nike and Adidas.

Four former assistant basketball coaches pleaded guilty to bribery conspiracy without a trial and await sentencing.

They include Emanuel "Book" Richardson, who was an assistant at Arizona when he was arrested in 2017, Chuck Person, who was an assistant at Auburn University, USC assistant coach Tony Bland and assistant coach Lamont Evans at Oklahoma State. Previously, Evans had coached at South Carolina.

The second trial to result from the arrest of 10 individuals featured some surprises, including claims that some bribes were paid to ensnare NFL-bound athletes at major schools.

Prosecution witness Louis Martin Blazer, a financial adviser, testified he paid football players from $100 to $3,000 to secure them as clients while they were at schools including Pittsburgh, Penn State, Michigan, Notre Dame, Northwestern, North Carolina and Alabama. He testified only after pleading guilty to stealing from clients, including NFL players, to invest in film and music projects.

Another revelation came when a recording was played of Clemson assistant coach Steve Smith listening to Dawkins' offer in July 2017 to help the family of Zion Williamson if Smith believed he could successfully recruit him.

Williamson played last season at Duke before entering the NBA draft scheduled for June. He is widely projected to be the No. 1 pick.

Also, additional schools emerged at the trial as possible targets of the conspiracy.

Blazer said he met in Las Vegas with assistant coaches eager to join the conspiracy but the men were not offered bribes because they could not deliver high-enough caliber athletes.

Those schools included Alabama, Connecticut and Texas A&M.

He also said he met with an assistant coach from Louisville. The prosecution has led to the ouster by Louisville of its Hall of Fame head coach, Rick Pitino, though he was never charged criminally.

Prior to the trial, assistant coaches Preston Murphy of Creighton and Corey Barker of TCU were placed on administrative leave by their schools after each was accused of taking a $6,000 bribe from Dawkins to send prospective clients his way.

Last week, Clemson announced it had fired Smith.

Code and Dawkins already were convicted in October on similar charges related to payments made to players' families rather than coaches. They were each sentenced to six months in prison.

MLB ROUNDUP

Milwaukee Brewers' Christian Yelich watches his solo home run against the Washington Nationals Wednesday, in Milwaukee. Yelich leads the majors with 16 homers.

Yelich hits league-leading 16th homer

BREWERS 7, NATIONALS 3

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Christian Yelich hit his major league-leading 16th home run and Milwaukee won its sixth straight game, beating Washington.

Washington loaded the bases with one out in the ninth inning, but Josh Hader struck out pinch-hitter Kurt Suzuki and Adam Eaton for his 10th save in 10 chances. Mike Moustakas and Manny Pina also connected for Milwaukee.

Yelich's solo homer came on the fourth pitch of the game from Jeremy Hellickson (2-1). The reigning NL MVP finished with three hits and scored twice.

MARINERS 10, YANKEES 1

Yusei Kikuchi was brilliant on the mound in his Yankee Stadium debut, Ryon Healy had four extra-base hits and the Seattle Mariners routed New York 10-1 Wednesday night.

Healy homered and hit three doubles to help the Mariners win for only the second time in 10 games. Mitch Haniger and Edwin Encarnacion also went deep.

Kikuchi (2-1) pitched three-hit ball over 7 2/3 innings.

RANGERS 9, PIRATES 6

Hunter Pence connected for a pinch-hit grand slam in the eighth inning and Isiah Kiner-Falefa drove in the go-ahead run in the ninth as Texas rallied past Pittsburgh.

Kiner-Falefa doubled off Tyler Lyons (1-1) and an offline relay throw allowed Nomar Mazara to score. Rougned Odor followed with a two-run homer.

Joey Gallo gave Texas the early lead with a two-run shot that bounced off the concourse beyond the right-center field wall and landed in the Allegheny River. The estimated 443-foot blast was Gallo's 100th career home run in his 377th game, making him the fastest player to 100 homers in American League history.

Pirates first baseman Josh Bell's estimated 472-foot drive tied the game in the fourth inning and is the fourth ever to reach the river on a fly.

PHILLIES 5, CARDINALS 0

Jerad Eickhoff allowed three hits in eight innings, Cesar Hernandez homered and drove in three and Philadelphia beat St. Louis.

PADRES 3, METS 2

Hunter Renfroe hit a tiebreaking solo shot in the seventh inning, center fielder Manuel Margot robbed Pete Alonso of a homer and San Diego beat New York.

Eric Hosmer also went deep for San Diego.

INDIANS 5, WHITE SOX 3

Jose Ramirez hit a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning, giving Cleveland a 5-3 win over the Chicago White Sox and snapping the Indians' three-game losing streak Wednesday night.

Francisco Lindor singled with one out against Jace Fry (1-1) before Jason Kipnis struck out.

TWINS 9, BLUE JAYS 1

Jorge Polanco had five hits, including a two-run home run, Kyle Gibson struck out a career-high 11 and the Minnesota Twins beat Toronto 9-1 on Wednesday, completing a three-game sweep of the struggling Blue Jays.

It was the second five-hit game of Polanco's career. His first came April 5 at Philadelphia.

Eddie Rosario hit his AL-leading 13th home run, one of four long balls by the Twins.

C.J. Cron had a two-run homer among his four hits and Jonathan Schoop added a two-run shot.

Gibson (3-1) allowed one run on two hits in six innings to win for the third time in four starts.

TIGERS 10, ANGELS 3

Ronny Rodriguez drove in a career-high four runs and Matthew Boyd pitched six strong innings, helping the Detroit Tigers beat the Los Angeles Angels 10-3.

Rodriguez hit a go-ahead, two-run triple in the first inning. The second-year player had an RBI single in the two-run third and a run-scoring double in the four-run fifth to put Detroit up 7-1.

Tarpons punch ticket to regionals, beat Wave

Charlotte faces Venice in district finals today but will advance to regionals regardless

By CHUCK BALLARO
SUN CORRESPONDENT

PUNTA GORDA — For the Charlotte High School baseball team, it all came down to execution.

The Tarpons moved runners over on bunts, brought them home with sacrifice flies, and did the little things Tuesday in its District 7A-11 semifinal game against Fort Myers.

It all added up to a rather unsexy, but effective 6-2 victory to advance to the championship game Thursday against Venice, which beat Charlotte twice in the regular season.

"It was an overall team win. We executed, bunting people over, hitting three sac flies, that's situation baseball," Charlotte coach Lovell Cudjo said. "It's what we've been striving to do all year. And we got it done at the right time."

Aaron Martins drove in two runs for Charlotte (15-8), Michael Thomas had two hits from the No. 9 spot and three Tarpon pitchers combined to hold the Green Wave to three hits.

Fort Myers pitcher Caden Peeples breezed through the first, but got himself into big trouble in the second.

from Jonah Bourque to load the bases with no outs.

Charlotte cashed in with sac flies from Hal Turner and John Dominguez to make it 2-0 Charlotte.

In the third, Kevin Conway started the inning by reaching second on an error. Machado bunted him to third and Martins brought him home on (you guessed it) a sac fly to make it 3-0 to chase Peeples.

Kyle Machado, who started the game by striking out eight of the first 10 hitters he faced, suddenly lost command, walking the bases loaded in the third before getting out of the inning.

In the fourth, Machado walked the leadoff batter, Max Fleming, before Wes Wiles doubled him home, advanced to third on a throwing error and scored on a wild pitch to cut the Charlotte lead to 3-2.

Charlotte got those runs back and then some. Martins walked in a run in the fourth, while Michael Thomas and Conway added RBI singles in the fifth to pull away to a 6-2 lead.

"It was just small ball. We executed plays with the sac flies and that wins ballgames," Martins said.

"Especially against good teams like that, you need situational plays."

Conway and Hayse came on in relief and slammed the door on Fort Myers (15-9).

Cudjo said he hopes he can bring that execution to Venice, as it will be key.

"Both our games were close. If we execute and play the way we are capable of playing, we'll be there," Cudjo said. "We earned to get in it, so let's go win it."

Pirates' season closes after Gators turn tables

Port Charlotte limited to four hits after beating Island Coast twice during regular season

By BRUCE ROBINS
SUN CORRESPONDENT

PORT CHARLOTTE — Island Coast's Chase Chatman and two relievers combined to shut down the Port Charlotte offense on four hits and the Gators ended the Pirates season with a 3-1 victory in a Class 6A-District 11 baseball semifinal Tuesday night.

Chatman, an FGCU commit, also drove in two runs for Island Coast, who turned the tables on the Pirates after losing to them twice during the regular season.

Chatman went 5 ²/₃ innings and struck out 10 Port Charlotte batters. Meanwhile, the Pirates Ryan Lomski went the distance, striking out nine Gators while allowing just five hits.

After a 45 minute lightning delay, the Pirates got the early jump in the bottom of the first, as Scotty McLean reached on an error, moved up on a groundout and scored on Jordan Delcolle's single up the middle.

After the first seven Island Coast batters went down in order, the Gators evened the score on an RBI single by Chatman in the top of the third. That's how it stayed until the top of the fifth, when the Gators Kevin Rodrigues led off with a single. Another base hit put runners at the corners, and Jordan Dence laid down a perfect squeeze bunt to score Rodriguez with the go-ahead run. Chatman delivered another RBI single for an insurance run to make it 3-1.

The Pirates got two runners on in each of the last three innings, but couldn't score against Chatman and relievers Jack Campbell and Rodriguez.

Port Charlotte ended its season with a 17-9 record.

Island Coast (19-7) moves on to face Mariner for the district championship Thursday night.

TAMPA BAY TIMES

TAMPA — Planning for the end of anything can be difficult. But not knowing when that end is coming might be more challenging.

Anton Strålman certainly couldn't have expected his 2018-19 season to end with a month-long injury coming out of a March 5 game against Winnipeg. He missed all but two of the team's remaining 18 games, and Columbus' first-round sweep of the Lightning.

It was a disappointing conclusion for a 12-year veteran who posted some of his lowest offensive numbers since 2012-13, around the halfway point of his career.

After falling off the radar in early March, the rest was history.

Two goals and 15 assists don't say much for the 32-year-old defenseman, who has battled injuries in the past but nothing quite like the one he endured this season.

Strålman's experience and value to the Lightning will be weighed against the team's upcoming salary decisions. The looming salary cap and the inevitable signing of shutdown-center Brayden Point certainly poses a predicament. As do other unrestricted free agents, defensemen Dan Girardi and Braydon Coburn, who enter free agency with Strålman this summer.

Jan Rutta was recently signed to a $1.3 million-deal for one season, but where does that leave Strålman? Is his experience enough to convince Tampa Bay's executives to give the fourth oldest player on the roster another go at the Stanley Cup?

His numbers this season say no, but his experience in the league says yes.

Yet, experience didn't bring the Lightning anywhere close to a Cup this year, in fact, it brought nothing but embarrassment for the team that tore through league and franchise records all season long and got swept by a wild-card team in one week.

Strålman was often the odd man out when it came to the defensemen rotation coach Jon Cooper implemented this season.

All of the d-men with the exception of Ryan McDonagh and Victor Hedman made their rounds coming in and out of Tampa Bay's lineup.

Strålman's $4.5 million salary last season made him the third-highest paid defenseman on the roster behind Hedman and McDonagh.

Anton Strålman's season

High: On Dec. 29,

Adam Erne raced toward the net and looked for the open pass, but it was deflected and intercepted in open ice by the Canadiens. Montréal's Tomas Tatar scooped up the puck but when he passed it to Jeff Petry, it hit off the back of Petry's left skate.

Strålman picked up the puck and drove it toward the net for the unassisted goal, which helped tie the game 2-2 and propel the Lightning to an exciting 6-5 win at home.

Low: The lower-body injury sustained after the March 5 game against Winnipeg was the beginning of the end of his season.

Koepka back at Nelson after three major wins

By STEPHEN HAWKINS
AP SPORTS WRITER

DALLAS — Brooks Koepka has won three majors since he last played at the Byron Nelson two years ago, before the tournament moved to a new links-style course south of downtown Dallas.

A week before defending his title at the now-earlier PGA Championship, the third-ranked Koepka and No. 19 Patrick Reed are the only top-20 players in the field. They are among 14 of the top 50 in the world ranking at soggy Trinity Forest this week.

"I usually play the week before a major. I think Augusta is the only one I don't do it," Koepka said. "The rest of them I like to play the week before. You don't need to play that great. I try to get some rhythm."

Except for the two-man team event at the Zurich Classic, Koepka hasn't played since tying for second behind Tiger Woods at the Masters last month.

The PGA Championship, which Koepka won last August, has been moved to a May date and is now sandwiched between the two Dallas-Fort Worth events on the PGA Tour that had traditionally been played on back-to-back weeks. The Colonial will follow the PGA Championship at Bethpage in New York.

Koepka was the Nelson runner-up in a playoff against Sergio Garcia in 2016, and tied for 50th when the event was last played at Four Seasons in 2017. But Koepka has won both U.S. Open tournaments played since then.

Aaron Wise's only PGA Tour win came at Trinity Forest last year, when at age 21 he had a Nelson-tournament record score of 23-under par.

But Wise followed that victory by missing the cut in his next five tournaments. He has missed four cuts already this year, but backed up his 17th-place finish at the Masters with a tie for 18th at the Wells Fargo Championship last week.

"The game is good, you know. It's feeling great," Wise said. "It hasn't been maybe the most stellar year for me to this point but feel like I'm really trending well, feel like I had a great finish at the Masters, really got things going that weekend, jumped up the leaderboard a bunch and then continued that into last week and played really strong."

Trinity Forest member Jordan Spieth, also like Koepka a three-time major champion, hasn't won since the 2017 British Open. He was the highest-ranked player in the Nelson field last year when he was then third, but is now 39th without a top-20 finish in his 12 starts this season. He finished 21st at Trinity Forest last year.

Another Trinity Forest member playing this week is Tony Romo, the CBS NFL analyst and former Dallas Cowboys quarterback who is in the 156-player field on a sponsor's exemption.

This will be Romo's third PGA Tour start. He played in the last two tournaments played in the Dominican Republic, shooting 15 over and missing the cut both times.

"Obviously, I understand where I'm at comparatively to the guys in this field. These are the best of the best," Romo said.

Lakers decide not to hire Tyronn Lue as next coach

Los Angeles offered three-year deal worth $18 million but Lue wanted five-year deal

By TANIA GANGULI
LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Lakers are moving on from Tyronn Lue and will continue their search for a coach, according to a person familiar with the situation.

Lue and the Lakers began communicating

Friday about their vacant coaching job, about a week and a half after Lue's second interview with the franchise. Talks stalled Wednesday and the Lakers determined Lue was not a good fit for the organization long term, the person said.

A person close to Lue said his agent told the Lakers on Tuesday that they planned to move on from pursuing the job. Still, negotiations continued into Wednesday.

As the process unfolded, there were numerous issues on which the Los Angeles Lakers and Lue did not agree, people who were not authorized to speak publicly said.

One of those issues was the makeup of the Lakers coaching staff. According to someone close to Lue, the Lakers offered a three-year deal worth $18 million, but Lue wanted a five-year contract.

Lue and Philadelphia assistant Monty Williams were the two candidates the Lakers interviewed twice in the process, one that has been deliberately slow. The Phoenix Suns on Friday hired Williams, who did not receive an offer from the Lakers.

Lue had long been considered a front-runner for the job, which was vacated by Luke Walton on April 12, because of his connections to LeBron James and the Lakers.

He was the Cavaliers' coach when the team, led by James, won Cleveland's first professional sports championship in more than 50 years. He was a reserve point guard for the Lakers during two championship seasons.

Kyle Busch dodges fine for criticizing NASCAR rules

By JENNA FRYER
AP AUTO RACING WRITER

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Kyle Busch was not surprised he dodged a fine from NASCAR for ranting about its current rules package.

Busch's expletive-rid-dled assessment after Monday's rain-post-poned race in Delaware in years past likely would have drawn a hefty fine.

But NASCAR let Busch's criticism go this week, and he said Wednesday during a promotion for the upcoming Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway that he did not expect a fine.

"I'm not sure I said anything wrong," Busch said.

"I just spoke my opinion. Everybody has got an opinion."

Tony Stewart in 2016 was the last driver fined for criticizing NASCAR when he was penalized $35,000 for questioning safety over missing lug nuts.

For years, NASCAR secretly issued fines for criticism under the "conduct detrimental to NASCAR" policy, but became more transparent over the last decade.

Busch said he had a good discussion with NASCAR head of racing development Steve O'Donnell since airing his complaints.

"We're all trying to make everything better

Driver Kyle Busch poses with his car for the Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Cup series race during a news conference in Charlotte, N.C., Wednesday. The car will carry the name of fallen Army Sgt. Dale Griffin during the race on May 26. After Monday's NASCAR race in Dover, Delaware, in which he finished 10th, Busch used expletives to criticize the new rules package.

for everyone as a collective industry," Busch said.

"There are certain vote-getters that get their wish more than others. And it's frustrating at times and for us drivers that, you know, we tend to voice our opinions whether it's with the owners or whether it's with NASCAR. We don't seem to get very far. So that's where it becomes most frustrating at times."

Busch finished 10th at Dover while teammate Martin Truex Jr. drove from the back of the field to victory. With 750 horsepower and more downforce, the rules package is designed to increase side-by-side racing and manufacture competition.

Drivers have complained passing has become too difficult, while fans have pointed to the lack of cautions through 11 races and a general letdown because of all the hype surrounding the new rules.

After the Dover race, Busch blasted the package while complaining NASCAR does not care about his input. Kevin Harvick echoed that sentiment Wednesday during his weekly "Happy Hours" show on SiriusXM NASCAR Radio.

"The driver's voice is not being heard very much on things when it comes to competition, especially when it comes to this particular style of rules package, and then you get to Dover and it boils over after the first 11 weeks," Harvick said on his show.

Harvick said there has been a leadership void since Dale Earnhardt's death in 2001, and noted that Busch and Leavine Family Racing owner Bob Leavine both went very public with their gripes after Dover but no one expects much change.

Leavine, owner of a single-car, midpack team, used Twitter to concur with Busch's opinion of the rules package and has spent the two days since the race defending his position.

When a self-described longtime fan tweeted to Leavine that the sport has devolved into "little more than what I perceive professional wrestling to be."

All pomp and stagg-ing and very little of what we fans care about," Leavine did not disagree.

"Before Dale Sr. passed, he was the kind of guy NASCAR trusted, could go to and say things and the drivers all trusted and said we're on board with him. I don't really feel there's that type of communication since Dale Sr. left," Harvick said.

"There's no guy and no one really in the very top of the NASCAR executive side of things that has the experience inside the car that can relate to the drivers and say this is what these guys are feeling, what they're saying and I understand their frustrations."

"It's a very tough, tough position. After all this stuff is laid on the table by the race winner (Truex), Bob Leavine and Kyle Busch. There's a lot of things to digest here."
