Ike Walks Out From Hospital

In obvious high spirits as he walked arm in arm with the President's chief of staff, Dwight D. Eisenhower, the President's son-in-law, Richard M. Nixon, walked out of the hospital today.

The widows overlooking the east wing of the hospital and the President's daughter, Patricia, were seen as they stepped out of the doorway, though the crowd gaped and murmured.

The President seemed somewhat taken back by the size of the crowd. He opened his mouth once or twice as if to whistle in amazement.

Mrs. Eisenhower occasionally cast a pained, proud look to her husband.

Eisenhower said "Hi" to two or three people who were waiting to get into the limousine.

A flurry of questions from newsman, photographers and other people outside the hospital were answered by the President's daughter, Patricia, who said she was not in the limousine.

Senate Votes $4.5 Billion New Struggles Loom For Foreign Aid Bill

Actually, the Senate added $400 million to the bill yesterday. The new legislation is estimated to cost $4.5 billion.

The President asked for a $4,000,000,000 program for the fiscal year which starts tomorrow. This compares with $2,700,000,000 voted in the 1955 session.

The only big cut sought yesterday was a billion-dollar slash proposed by Sen. Langer (R-SD). It went on a voice vote. Sen. Long (D-La.) had lost 58-27 a week ago in a Republican candidate for State Senator.

Heard Along Main Street

And on Some of Manchester's Side Streets, Too

Still Trying for a Laugh. The long arm of coincidence must have suffered some torn ligaments on June 27. For on that day it stretched out to embrace an 84-year period.

On the day in question, The Herald, on Page 8, printed a story about an Oct. 19, 1872 copy of a newspaper called the Manchester (Conn.) Times, which had been unearthed by a Flushing, L. I., woman. Included in the story was a joke, picked at random from a column of alleged gloom-chasers, which was as follows:

A witness, in describing certain events, said: "The person we saw at the head of the stairs was a man with one eye named Jacob Wilkins. 'What was the name of the other eye?' spitefully asked the opposing counsel."

On the same day, June 22, The Herald's regular Sense and Nonsense department appeared on Page 14. One of the jokes it included was about the stranger's encounter with the village dimwit. "The looking for an old friend," says the stranger. "Do you by any chance know a fellow around here with one eye named Simpson?"

"I can't say that I do," replies the dimwit. "What's his other eye named?" And while the long arm of coincidence is rubbing its torn ligaments with liniment, the rest of us can ponder on the longevity of the joke, which is as "Hardy" today as it was 84 years ago and resign ourselves to the fact that it will probably outlive us, as it has the Manchester Times.

Takes Two to Tango. Earlier this week, while doing some banking, an alert reporter happened to notice that the bank's president and two vice presidents, who were congregated around one of the desks. Their heads were closer than the National League baseball pennant race. "What's up?" the reporter asked a teller. All he got was a nod of the head. The reporter, having completed his business, walked over to the group to see if there was a story in the making. He was flabbergasted, almost—when he saw that the quartet was busy scanning a telephone book looking for the number of a client.

That Was Dancing Music! When the Jaycee wives planned their inaugural dinner-dance, they engaged a dance band composed of five young men who looked to be of high school age. The other night the band played, perhaps as many as 50 numbers. Every one of them was a number thoroughly familiar to the Jaycee crowd whose average age is 28 or 30. One of the guests surmised that the band leader figured out in advance the group's time and picked all his selections from those glorious 40s. But at least one observer held out the hope that there might be

She Couldn't Run. That story brings to mind an experience of a similar nature that involved the town's mayor more years ago than he cares to remember. As a young man, he served a short time as an assistant to a local embalmer. His job was to make sure that a big enough coffin was selected for the body. Call him the humorous sardonic, if you chose, because he would note the size of the corpse and then fit his own form in each box until he got one of adequate size. It was during one of those moments one day that the bookkeeper chanced to make her way to the second floor of the building and, just as she opened the door and entered, Mayor Turkington was hoisting himself out of the box. The bookkeeper let out a blood-curdling scream and dropped to the floor in a dead faint.

Won't Answer Roll Call. Last Saturday, "Heard Along" carried a story about the Hobo's Convention to be held next month, reporting that only one of the two men who represented Manchester last year would be there as Manchester's representative this year. It seems the other half of the infamously duo has moved to New Britain, and is scheduled to wear the Hardware City's colors to the convention this year. According to a report received this week, the other half will not only fail to represent Manchester this year, but he probably won't be able to attend the convention at all. The Herald learned this week that the former Manchester resident was caught sleeping in a Hartford park and was arrested. The policeman took a half-full bottle of wine away from him and then called the paddy wagon.

While waiting for transportation to the city jail, the annual convention delegate, seeing the seriousness of his plight and probably trying to get back in the good graces of the law, pulled another wine bottle from his pocket and told the policeman, "You might as well take this one too."

It didn't do him any good. The next day in court he was sentenced to 30 days in the Seisms St. jail for a projected strike.

Unless the bailiff decides to let him take a little vacation, it looks as if there will be one delegate missing when the annual Hobo's Convention convenes next month.

Girls Tour Swift Plant In Chicago

By GIL HUNT. Dwight Perry's touring group of Indian squaws left Bridgman, Mich., in the face of a cooling breeze from Lake Michigan June 27, and then followed the Lake Shore Drive around the southern tip of Lake Michigan to Chicago.

The girls on the tour held dainty noses at the industrial smells of Gary, Ind., where U. S. Steel's plant, a sight on the trip, is battling down for a projected strike.

The daintily held noses went from bad to considerably worse as the tour approached the Chicago stockyards under the skillful piloting of John Perry. When the four station wagons hauling the vacationing girls entered the stockyard area, Ellen Shapiro was found wearing the nose clips she uses for swimming. The mischievous air did not improve during a guided tour of the giant Swift's Packing Plant pork processing division. Roberta Bork breathed signs of relief, as did Lucy Quinn, when Al Hartman of Swift's public relations department, informed the group that the slaughtering processes were no longer on the visitor's route.

The girls enjoyed a color film on the founding of the Swift's, and then watched awe-struck the skill of the meat-cutters, reducing entire pork carcasses to anatomical cuts of meat. Appetites were whetted by a visit to the curing room for bacon and hams, which served to make the luncheon in the company dining room a more interesting record time. An attempt by Mrs. Logan of the Swift's staff to interest Anne Simpson and Linda Belding in a career in home economics in industry met, with Linda's blunt announcement that she hated to cook. Miss Logan spluttered a bit, but weathered the situation.

The afternoon found the touring group in the top section of Chicago's welcome relief from the filthy slums of the stockyard district in South Chicago. A drunk's restless repose on a down-tour with the girls, sparked a spirited discussion of social welfare and the need for slum clearance. Vociferous leaders in the Ellen Shapiro, Nancy Davis contributed an informed discussion of the disc jockey shows over the Chicago area radio, while listening to the radio in Gil Hunt's car during the drive through the city.

By 6 p.m. the girls were settled in the Hotel Freeport in Freeport, Ill. After putting away a roast beef supper, the girls investigated this Mid west town via walking tours in somewhat noisy groups. The typical friendliness of the Westerner is beginning to be evident in the La East. The girls used to the reserve of New Englanders, are seizing the opportunities for acquaintanceship with local teenagers. June Cerone, first in the line to be taken to Connecticut shoreline summer home is closely akin to heaven has already had her conviction put to severe test.

Ice Cream Party. Several girls in the group led by Anne Simpson and Linda Belding rode around the city in the company of one of the local belles, who pointed out the Freeport sights, and introduced the girls to several of them.

A gigantic ice cream party in one of the town's hotel rooms attracted several Freeport girls as well as Manchester ones. The raucous affair was brought under control by Gil Hunt in something less than an hour and a half, which is about par for the course.

Parents of Triplets Receive Gifts from Local Merchants

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jones, sleep in the crib as they are small enough so they won't crowd one another. The third will occupy the bathmat.

"We'll probably need three cribs sometime in the future," Jones said, "and we are on the way to acquiring them."

The three new Jones boys were in incubators until the beginning of this week, although they haven't needed oxygen since about the third day after they were born. However, they did need warmth and a controlled environment; it was for these reasons they were kept in the incubators.

The Joneses have one other child, a daughter, Jacqueline, 18 months old. Mrs. Jones is the former Phyllis Townsend. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Jones, 354 Summit St.; and the maternal grandmother is Mrs. Frances J. Townsend of 85 Henry St.
