State congressional delegation claims Hodel's renegeing on drilling agreement

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Members of California's congressional delegation today angrily accused Interior Secretary Donald Hodel of breaking an agreement that would limit offshore oil drilling and vowed to extend a moratorium on all new exploration for oil and natural gas off the California coast.

Some other legislators held out the possibility of writing into law the tentative agreement they reached with Hodel in mid-July, which they accused the interior secretary of abandoning during a heated, two-hour private meeting today. "The administration's credibility has suffered a very serious blow," said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-San Mateo. "We had an agreement and the Department of the Interior is renegeing on that agreement. We have no alternative but to go for a moratorium."

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-San Rafael, said, "We have a new show. It's called 'Let's Break a Deal.'" Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Sacramento, said Hodel had "in effect abrogated the preliminary agreement."

Hodel, meeting with reporters after the meeting, denied that he had backed out of the agreement. "We are much closer together now," he said. "We have the framework in the preliminary agreement to go forward in the negotiations."

Under the preliminary agreement reached July 16 between Hodel and the California delegation, 150 tracts, each 9 square miles, would be offered for oil and gas exploration off the California coast in exchange for extending until the year 2000 a congressional moratorium on exploratory drilling of the state's re- (Please see OIL/A2)

Irvine quadriplegic loses everything in apartment fire

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A quadriplegic lost everything he owned Monday afternoon when a fire ravaged his apartment and spread to adjoining units at an affordable housing complex in Irvine, authorities reported.

No one was injured. The blaze, which caused $104,000 in damage and displaced three families, was one of three fires reported within 24 hours on the Orange Coast.

In Newport Beach, a stubborn chemical fire broke out after school Monday at Corona del Mar High School. And firefighters in Costa Mesa responded before dawn today to a structure fire at a Hamilton Street apartment complex.

Richard Phost, disabled in a truck accident several years ago, was not in his apartment when a fire broke out in a patio area and moved up the side of the apartment, Orange County fire spokesman Joe Kerr said.

OC Supervisors reject vote to oppose drilling

Nestande and Wieder argue about earlier vote on compromise

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County Supervisor Bruce Nestande triggered a spirited exchange with Supervisor Harriett Wieder today when he suggested the board reverse its position on offshore oil drilling and vote to oppose any drilling off the California coast.

Nestande broached the subject after Wieder said she would not be present at Wednesday's board meeting because she had been asked to testify before Congress on the issue.

The board voted 3-0 on July 24 to support a congressional compromise that would allow oil exploration on 150 offshore tracts, including several off Newport Beach and Laguna Beach, in return for a moratorium on drilling elsewhere through the year 2000.

But the board's support for the compromise included a provision that no drilling be permitted off Orange County's coast which might lead "to frightening environmental consequences," according to the resolution.

Nestande and Supervisor Roger Stanton were not present when that action was taken.

"We're pitting California community against community on this. We're saying not in our own backyard. I'm in favor of no oil drilling off the California coast — period," Nestande said.

He added that had he been present at the July 24 meeting he would have advocated a no compromise position. "Things were meant to be changed," Nestande said in asking the board to reverse itself.

"You're shooting from the hip," an agitated Wieder countered. She added her testimony would not state the board's position on the matter.

Supervisor Ralph Clark, who said he was in "total opposition" to offshore drilling when he for the July resolution, quickly spoke up to second Nestande's motion for reconsideration.

"I can't see why we should ever be part and parcel of offshore drilling," Clark said, calling offshore drilling rigs "ugly evildoers."

He added the oil companies were working to "twist government around their fingers" on the drilling issue.

In the end, however, supervisors agreed to hold off any consideration of changing its official position until the matter can be reviewed by their staffs and brought formally before the board.

Mesans seek marina support

Countywide backing urged for 3,000-slip development proposed on Santa Ana River

By TONY SAAVEDRA
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two Costa Mesans are circulating petitions to drum up countywide support for a plan to build a 3,000-slip marina in the landlocked city.

Real estate financing consultants Thomas Testa and Diane Ramirez co-founded the Costa Mesa/Newport Marina Organizational Committee three weeks ago.

They hope to send a petition with 27,500 signatures from Orange County residents to federal legislators, who will be deciding the fate of Costa Mesa's passage to the sea.

City Councilman Donn Hall made a Capitol Hill plea in March for Congress to waive federal policy preventing local governments and businesses from paying for a $250,000 study required for the project.

The necessary feasibility report, to be compiled by the Army Corps of Engineers, has repeatedly held up the 26-year-old marina plan because the corps would only accept federal funds.

Since Congress has routinely denied Costa Mesa's funding request, the city offered to raise the money through private and public donations from local governments and area businesses.

Hall testified in Washington last spring for the second time in two years before congressional subcommittees on waterways and navigation. But he won't know if that trip was successful until Congress unveils its budget proposals next month.

Hall is hoping the marina, which would run along the east bank of the Santa Ana River through Newport Beach, will be included, either by appropriating the money or allowing the city to begin its fund-raising campaign.

Testa and Ramirez are attempting to sway local representatives by showing countywide support for the estimated $100 million marina through the wetlands of Costa Mesa.

"Some friends of my family are waiting two to three years for boat slips and the prices are going through the roof," said Testa, 30, an avid boater. His father, who lives in Huntington Harbour, operated a boat dealership for 10 years.

Testa said part of the problem is that many waterfront communities restrict residents from renting their (Please see PETITIONERS/A2)

Defense contractor convicted

An Irvine defense contractor pleaded guilty Monday to charges that he defrauded the federal government by submitting false bills for contracts.

Thomas E. Snooks, owner of Systems Engineering Technology Associates Corp. and SETAC Corp., pleaded guilty in federal court to two counts of mail fraud and one count of making false statements to the government.

In exchange for his plea, federal prosecutors agreed to drop 16 other charges stemming from the operation of his companies.

The 47-year-old San Clemente resident agreed to pay $186,000 in restitution to the government.

Snooks is free on $10,000 bail and is scheduled for an Oct. 21 sentencing. He faces a maximum of 15 years in prison and a $12,000 fine.

The rapist has blond hair, possibly styled in a bowl cut, and is very tan, according to the latest descriptions. Investigators said the suspect is about 6 feet 2 inches tall with a thin build.

Plans have no room for the inn

Irvine Co. development squeezing out roadside landmark — the Orange Inn

The sun may finally be setting on the Orange Inn, the weathered but beautiful roadside restaurant that stands wedged between Corona del Mar and Laguna Beach on Pacific Coast Highway.

Modern times and the press of development seem to be fast catching up with the inn, one of the Orange Coast's last visible reminders of Depression-era California.

For the past four years, owner John Bodrero has operated the inn famous for its hand-squeezed juices and fruit shakes on a month-to-month lease from The Irvine Co.

And for at least as long, company officials have warned Bodrero of impending development along the still pristine hills that now give motorists a nature break between Corona del Mar's bustling shopping district and downtown Laguna Beach.

But Bodrero is attached to the inn which he operates with his wife and their two oldest children. And he has clung to it despite its slow deterioration and the telltale signs that have foretold the inevitable development of the countryside where deer and coyote now roam.

But finally, it seems, after many false starts The Irvine Co. is ready to build out its remaining slice of the coast.

"Things are beginning to hop down there," Irvine Co. spokesman Jerry Collins confirmed. "The county and the Coastal Commission have approved a plan for the Irvine Coast which doesn't make practical provisions for the Orange Inn," he said.

Bodrero says Irvine Co. officials have told him he will have to move by March 1986 to make way for construction of Pelican Hill Road which will connect with Coast Highway and lead to a neighborhood of pricey homes, a resort hotel and other visitor-serving businesses.

The Irvine Co. has offered to give Bodrero the white board and batten structure with orange trim if he can find a new home for it.

But Bodrero and his wife Kathy say they hope to convince the Irvine Co. to keep the 54-year-old inn because of its historical significance and the affection local residents have for it. Thousands of patrons have signed

Developers of water amusement center say they need quick decision to get project going

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The fate of a water amusement center proposed for Lion Country in Irvine may be decided tonight by the Irvine City Council.

Developers of the project have claimed that a favorable council decision is needed immediately if they are to begin construction in time to open next summer. If the council does not allow them to proceed, the developers have said, the Lion Country water park plan will have to be scrapped.

But city planning staff members have urged the council to require an extensive review that would delay construction for three to four months.

The council will decide whether Lion Country and American Sports World, the Colton-based company that wants to build the water amusement center, need to obtain a new conditional use permit before building the rides. These would include water slides, waterfalls and rafts rides.

The businesses claim Lion Country's present permit, issued in 1973, allows these activities.

But city staff members say the water amusement proposal is significantly different from the modest entertainment area envisioned for Lion Country, which formerly was a wild animal park. The staff members say a new permit review would allow them to evaluate air-raft hazards (the park is near the El Toro Marine Corps base), potential transportation problems and other issues.

At the Aug. 20 council meeting, a spokesman for American Sports World said construction of rides must (Please see IRVINE/A2)

"He has special needs and he lost everything," said Huggins, who said Phost and a family residing at the apartments have been provided with lodging at a local motel. Shaw was taken in by friends, he said.

The fire at the Flagstone apartments broke out about 4:21 p.m. and was brought under control within 36 minutes, Kerr said. Forty firefighters responded.

Earlier Monday, a small but stubborn chemical fire erupted in a science laboratory at Corona del Mar High School but caused only $500 in damage, according to Newport Beach Fire spokesman Russ Cheek.

He said the 3:42 p.m. fire was handled with extreme caution before it involved several volatile chemicals, including sodium and phosphorus that can ignite spontaneously when exposed to oxygen. Sodium can explode if it comes in contact with water, Cheek said.

High school science teacher Ron Schnitzer suited up in a special hazardous materials jumpsuit and helped city firefighters battle the blaze, Cheek said.

"He knew what was there and how to handle it," Cheek said. "As far as fires go, it wasn't bad. But because of the chemicals, it handled to be handled carefully."

The third fire erupted shortly before 6 a.m. today at the New Breed apartment complex in Costa Mesa at 393 Hamilton. Firefighters reported that the blaze was extinguished at 6:40 a.m. Nobody was injured.

The indictment charged that Snooks and his companies cheated the federal government out of more than $460,000 through alleged time card fraud and fund diversions.

Following the June 6 indictment, U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner issued a warning to other defense contractors, calling cheating the government "morally equivalent to thievery from the American taxpayers."

While Snooks awaits sentencing, his companies may be purchased by a Newport Beach firm anxious to obtain its engineers and defense contracts.

Sandy Sandhu, president of SRS Technologies, announced last week that the purchase depends on the outcome of the federal case and a final audit of the companies.

Currently, Snooks' companies are suspended from acquiring further contracts from the U.S. Department of Defense. Sandhu said SRS will try to have that ban lifted.

maining 6,310 undeveloped offshore tracts. Six of those tracts are located off the coast of Orange County.

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Monterey, chief House negotiator, said the majority of the delegation offered today to make some minor changes in the 150 tracts to get the deal through Congress with administration support, but that Hodel insisted on major changes. "Hodel made it very clear that he can't support" the initial agreement, Panetta said.

Before today's meeting, Hodel had protested that the 150 tracts covered by the July 16 agreement represented only 5 to 10 percent of the state's potential offshore petroleum resources.

He said that was insufficient, and the oil industry agreed.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told reporters that "we do not have an agreement," despite support by the state's two senators and 70 percent of its 45-member House delegation.

"Presumably we will seek to extend the moratorium and/or put the agreement into law, with some modifications," he said.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said he favors writing the July 16 agreement into law, with some changes to cover "sensitive areas in Southern California."

Wilson said that would be preferable to extending the moratorium that Congress has imposed annually since 1981 to forbid new exploratory offshore drilling along about three-fourths of the California coast out of fears of environmental damage. The original moratorium was intended to thwart then-Interior Secretary James Watt's plans to open almost the entire California coast to oil exploration.

Panetta told reporters the delegation's next step would be to decide whether to seek an extension of the moratorium or write the July 16 agreement into law. He and Fazio suggested starting by extending the moratorium, which expires Sept. 30, and determining whether further negotiations are possible within the framework of the July 16 agreement.

"We can't negotiate an agreement without a moratorium," Panetta said, indicating that delegation members are wary of negotiating after Hodel's backdown. "We've got a well that's been poisoned," Panetta said.

During an eight-day tour of California communities last month, Hodel said it appeared that the negotiators had selected "the wrong 150 tracts" because "these tracts have very little potential" for yielding petroleum resources.

He said later that "it's clear this (agreement) is not in the national interest."

Hodel said today that when the preliminary agreement was announced, he was unaware of Interior Department findings that the 150 tracts contain only 50 million to 200 million barrels of oil or their equivalent in natural gas. The department said the best 150 tracts it has identified off the California coast would yield an estimated 300 million to 900 million barrels of oil.

Karl Wendelowski, executive director of Friends of the Earth, a private environmental group, met with Hodel on Monday and said afterward he thought the July 16 agreement was falling apart.

Cigarette tax hike battle lit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tobacco-state senators called on Congress today to let the federal tax on cigarettes drop to 8 cents a pack as scheduled this year, while health groups demanded the tax be doubled to 32 cents and the money used to offset smoking-related health costs.

"This is an inherently bad tax — it is highly regressive and punitive at best," Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., told the Senate Finance subcommittee on taxation. "Cigarettes are a legal product, and as long as they are, the tobacco-using American public should not be subjected to taxes designed to discourage their use of such a product," he added.

Dr. M. Roy Schwarz, vice president of the American Medical Association, cited findings that smoking is the chief cause of lung cancer and that other health risks are related to tobacco. More than 350,000 Americans died last year of smoking-related disease, he said, a "compelling reason for addressing the issue and for raising the tax to 32 cents per pack."

As part of a deficit-reduction measure, Congress voted in 1982 to double the tax to 16 cents but to let it drop back to 8 cents on Oct. 1, 1985. However, as the federal deficit grows and Congress searches for revenue, it has become virtually certain that the tax will not be allowed to fall.

private docks to outsiders. He estimated at least 5,000 new slips are needed to accommodate boating enthusiasts who live inland.

"There's probably someone in Yorba Linda who has a 30-foot yacht or something but doesn't have anywhere to dock it," Testa said. "This would even affect boaters living in Riverside."

Additionally, he said the waterway would not just benefit surrounding properties and businesses, but would strengthen the marine industry in Orange County.

Testa also reasoned that the increased tourist traffic heading to the proposed marina would generate more business for merchants along the county's major thoroughfares.

Testa and Ramirez both live in a tract near the northern end of the future marina. He conceded the project would boost property values there and within 10 miles of the proposed waterway.

An economic study commissioned by the city last March concluded the marina would also generate up to $18.5 million in state and local tax revenue during the first 10 years.

The report, by Los Angeles-based Keyser Marston Associates Inc., added the project would spur housing development in nearby areas and provide jobs for more than 11,000 construction workers and commercial employees.

"As far as countywide benefits, we're just setting the stage," Testa said.

He and Ramirez donated $300 apiece to get the committee off the ground and are now enlisting volunteers to take petitions to businesses, supermarkets, swap meets and residents.

Dornan group hears rebel's plea

By the Associated Press

EAST LOS ANGELES — A foe of Nicaragua's Sandinista government told supporters at a fund-raiser here that rebel forces known as "contras" are growing and will prove effective in less than a year.

About 300 people listened to Adolfo Calero's plea for assistance Sunday at the event organized by a group called Americans for Freedom Fighters.

U.S. Rep. Robert Dornan, an Orange

County Republican, heads the group.

Calero, president of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, asserted that the contras are getting better militarily and winning popular support in Nicaragua.

"Our forces have grown to almost 20,000," said Calero, who was formerly a soft drink company executive in Nicaragua. "We believe that the issue of political power will be decided in Nicaragua within a year."

"The Sandinistas lied to the people," Calero said. "They promised liberty.

Instead they gave us a totalitarian regime like the one in Cuba, one that is supported by Fidel Castro himself."

Calero denied that the rebels would collapse if the U.S. Congress permanently withdrew aid.

"Such ideas are the worst stupidity," Calero said. "We have fought on our own with American aid. We have not only held our ground, we have grown substantially."

Dornan said unity was essential to the rebel cause and indicated he would continue to try to persuade Edén Pastora, a leader in the revolution that toppled the dictator Anastasio Somoza—but then became disillusioned with the Sandinistas, to join the Nicaraguan Democratic Front.

Pastora, who is known as Commander Zero, is "a good personal friend," Dornan said.

"Edén visits me every time he's in town (Washington)," Dornan said. "I'm going to keep working to try to convince him to join us. I'm never going to give up on him. He's too good a man."

improve on the aging structure while maintaining the flavor of the inn which has provided roadside respite for travelers and health food sandwiches and shakes to beach-goers for so long.

"We could upgrade," John Bodrero said. "Of course, it would never be the same."

But a fancied version of the inn would surely be preferable to taking their business into one of the beach communities, Kathy Bodrero said. "It would be like having an Orange Julius," she said.

The Bodreros may be fighting an unstopable tide when it comes to The Irvine Co.'s plans. Resort areas already designed for Pelican Hill and the Sand Canyon Road extension will be "integrated units" and a roadside restaurant won't fit in, said Rick Cermak, project manager for the Irvine Coast. The resort may not even have direct access to Pacific Coast Highway, the lifeblood of the inn, he said.

The Bodreros have until March to find a new location because that's when their lease is scheduled for renegotiation, Cermak said. Now that Orange County has approved a land-use plan for the area, the inn is a non-conforming use and it would be too troublesome to seek a temporary permit for it, he said.

"There comes a point where it's just time to move," Cermak said. And it seems that time is March.

John Bodrero, who has run the inn for nearly 15 years believes local residents and tourists alike will be sad to see the restaurant go.

"We get the surfers, the beach-goers, and tourists. We get business people and professional people. It's really nice to see the variety of people standing in line," he said.

During the busy summer months, the inn plays host to beach-goers at Crystal Cove State Park across the highway. Tanned surfers and bikini-clad beachniks troop up for a peanut butter shake and maybe a turkey and avocado sandwich on fresh-baked bread.

But well-suited professionals from nearby Fashion Island and other locals return to the restaurant during the winter months to enjoy its unpretentious ambience and maybe pet Oso the resident Belgian Shepherd who adopted the inn and the Bodreros 11 years ago.

The Orange Inn has a long history that stretches beyond its first incarnation as a roadside fruit and vegetable stand in 1931.

Before that, the small, rectangular building was an orange and tomato packing house owned by the Irvine Ranch, Kathy Bodrero said. Elders recall the structure during its early years when it was closer to Emerald Bay, she said.

Leo and Ida Cross operated the inn from the Depression through 1970 when he sold it to Bodrero. They expanded their stock from fresh fruits to include dried fruits and nuts, sandwiches and their legendary date shakes and hand-squeezed orange juice, Kathy Bodrero said.

The Bodreros have kept the inn much the same as when John purchased it from Cross. They offer a long list of unusual shakes and smoothies along with hefty sandwiches filled with meat, fish or vegetables.

Until last winter, John Bodrero still sold fresh fruit, but low demand made the outdoor stand unprofitable, he said. Dried fruit, nuts, health bars and honey-sweetened cakes are still available.

If they must leave their oasis of eucalyptus, date palm and coral trees, the Bodreros say they hope to take the inn with them.

If that's not possible, they will pack up the inimitable Oso, re-crete the mysterious Greek fruit goddess that Kathy rescued from a demolished Long Beach restaurant and go looking for a storefront to set up shop and continue their natural cookery.

"It's the end of an era," John Bodrero said woefully. "The minute they start building here, it's going to be the end of an era."

Episcopals pick chief bishop

The Texas-reared Episcopal bishop of Hawaii, the Rt. Rev. Edmond Lee Browning, was elected today to become the presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church, its primate and overseeing pastor.

Chosen by the church's bishops convening in Anaheim, his selection was speedily ratified by a booming voice vote of the lay-clergy branch of the church's governing convention, its House of Deputies.

The bishops elected Browning from among four nominees in secret balloting while secluded in a parish church more than two miles from the main meeting site at the Anaheim Convention Center.

They had been cloistered there for nearly four hours in prayer, discussion and successive balloting until a winner emerged. Word of it was rushed by chauffeured courier to the lay-clergy delegates.

The new presiding bishop, a powerful voice of an influential church, serves a 12-year term, succeeding the Most Rev. John M. Allin, a conciliatory Mississippian.

Browning, 56, considered a progressive, was a missionary bishop in Okinawa, and bishop of American churches in Europe before becoming head of the Hawaii diocese nine years ago.

Early in his career, he had served parishes in his native Corpus Christi, Texas, and also in Eagle Pass, Texas.

He is a strong critic of the nuclear arms race, a supporter of the ecumenical movement for Christian unity and an advocate of the poor.

Ramirez trial may be out of LA area

Lawyer cites 'intense publicity,' seeks to move Stalker case

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A defense attorney said intense publicity may make it difficult for Richard Ramirez, accused of one of 14 slayings attributed to the Night Stalker, to get a fair trial in a Los Angeles courtroom.

Deputy Public Defender Allen Adashek made that assessment Monday after Municipal Court Judge Elva Soper delayed taking a plea from the 25-year-old Ramirez until Sept. 27. Adashek said he needs more time to prepare his defense.

Ramirez spoke only one word—"yes"—during the brief hearing when Deputy District Attorney Phil Halpin asked if he waived his right to a speedy hearing.

"There's so much material involved in this case, it's going to take a great deal of time to prepare," Adashek told reporters afterward.

The public defender said he had been contacted by El Paso, Texas, attorney Manuel Barraza, who said he would come to Los Angeles this week to talk with Ramirez at the request of his family in Texas.

Barraza told a Los Angeles newspaper in a telephone interview Monday that he intends to request that the trial be transferred out of Los Angeles.

"The first step would be to get it out of Los Angeles," Barraza said. "...there's just too much adverse pretrial publicity. It's almost like, in the eyes of the public, he's guilty."

However, Adashek said no decision had been made on whether to try to move the case to another jurisdiction.

Halpin said he would oppose attempts to move the trial because it would be expensive.

"I hope we can assume Mr. Ramirez will get a fair trial here in LA," he said.

Halpin also said evidence in the case was still being reviewed and any additional charges would be filed before Ramirez is scheduled to enter his plea.

Ramirez was captured by angry citizens 10 days ago in East Los Angeles and was charged last Tuesday with one count of murder and seven other felonies that could make Ramirez eligible for the death penalty if convicted.

The charges stem from the May 14 slaying of William Doi, 66, and the attack on his wife in their Monterey Park home, and the May 9 attack on Clara Cecilia Hadsall, 85, who was robbed in her Monrovia home.

Ramirez also has been served with an arrest warrant stemming from the Aug. 17 Night Stalker slaying of Peter Pan, 66, in San Francisco.

stolen from a blue 1985 Ford Escort parked in the lot of Golden West College Monday evening.

A $210 purse containing credit cards was reported stolen from a Volkswagen Jetta parked in the lot of the Huntington Beach Athletic Club, 9872 Hamilton, Monday. The thief also did $160 damage, police reports said.

The owner of a red 1984 Porsche Cabriolet reported Thursday that someone stole the wheels and the convertible top off his car. The loss was estimated at $8,600. The incident took place in an underground garage in the 16900 block of Algonquin.

Someone reportedly stole a $350 car stereo from a green 1983 Mercedes 300D parked in the 200 block of 6th Street Monday.

A thief reportedly stole 400 T-shirts valued at $2,400 from a white 1974 Dodge van parked in the 4800 block of Neely over the weekend.

Book set on career of Hudson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A book about the life of AIDS-stricken Rock Hudson will detail the actor's career, but a spokesman said Monday it's "just not his style" to disclose intimate secrets of fellow celebrities.

Dale Olson, Hudson's publicist, said William Morrow and Avon books will publish the book "My Style" next summer.

It is being written by Hudson and friend Sara Davidson, and proceeds will be donated to the Rock Hudson AIDS Research Foundation, a New York-based organization to find a cure for the deadly disease, the spokesman said.

"What Rock will say in the book is not known," Olson said.

But he added that Hudson, 59, is unlikely to discuss in detail the private lives of other celebrities.

"Basically, it is a career book," Olson said. "But it is just not his style to name names. He would never divulge information about other people. He would never do that."

Hudson was secluded inside his Beverly Hills mansion Monday, eating meals and playing games.

"He's pretty good," Olson said. "He's been up and having his meals. He's playing games and reading. He fills in crossword puzzles and plays games like Trivial Pursuit and a game called Spite and Malice. He loves games."

England rioting leaves 2 dead, buildings burned

By the Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, England — Hundreds of youths went on an overnight rampage in a rundown immigrant district of England's second-largest city leaving at least two people dead and 50 buildings burned out in the worst urban violence to hit the country in four years, police said today. Two bodies were found in a gutted post office this morning, and "several people are unaccounted for," said a Birmingham police spokesman, Tim Hilton. Police earlier said that three bodies had been found, and gave no reason for the change in numbers. Twenty-three police officers and six firefighters were injured in the melee, none seriously.

Incumbent narrow winner in Norway

OSLO, Norway — Conservative Prime Minister Kaare Willoch's three-party coalition edged its way to a one-seat victory early today in the closest general elections in Norway since World War II. The slim margin made Willoch, who campaigned on promises to protect Norwegians from higher taxes and inflation, the first Conservative in this century to win a second term as prime minister. Although the Conservative coalition won by the slimmest possible margin, election officials said today Willoch's one-seat victory over the socialists in the Norwegian parliament, the Storting, was safe.

Thailand to probe coup attempt

BANGKOK, Thailand — Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda announced a civilian-military investigation of the coup attempt against him today and said he would insist on fair treatment of the suspects. He said he was not certain of the guilt of former Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanad, who at one point was accused of leading the insurrection Monday. Kriangsak is leader of one of the party's in Prem's coalition government.

Metal fatigue cited in JAL crash

TOKYO — Japanese investigators have discovered traces of metal fatigue in a pressure wall on the Japan Air Lines jumbo jet that crashed last month, killing 520 people, a Japanese newspaper said today. A rupture in the wall, called the aft pressure bulkhead, has been cited as a possible cause of the crash, history's worst single-plane disaster. The national newspaper Asahi Shimbun reported that Transport Ministry investigators found "beach marks" — traces of metal fatigue — from a microscopic "replica," molded from the bulkhead plate.

School strikes on in seven states

Students were expected back in classroom today in Newport, R.I., after striking teachers approved a new contract, but walkouts in seven states dragged into a new week, idling nearly 120,000 pupils. In the largest strike, affecting 43,500 students, the Seattle School District threatened Monday to go to court to end the week-old dispute. A state mediator met separately with negotiators for the district and the Seattle Teachers Association, which represents 3,700 striking teachers. "Realistically, there could be no school until next week," Superintendent Robert Nelson said Monday.

Senators set industry aid bills

WASHINGTON — Senate sponsors of legislation to aid import-battered U.S. industries say they're ready to join forces and move ahead with their bills this month despite new Reagan administration initiatives on trade. "I am very pessimistic that we're going to work anything out with the administration," Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said following a meeting late Monday among Senate leaders and President Reagan's trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter. Danforth disclosed that he and other Senate backers of trade legislation may attach a veto-threatened textile import quota bill onto needed legislation to raise the nation's debt limit.

Congressmen fighting weapon test

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is scheduled to begin final testing of an anti-satellite weapon Friday, but two Democratic congressmen plan to ask a federal court to halt the demonstration shot, sources say. The Air Force weapon, which will be fired from beneath a high-flying F-15 jet fighter, will track down and destroy a seven-year-old scientific satellite over the Pacific Ocean, according to Capitol Hill and other sources who discussed the program Monday only on condition they not be identified.

Engine of crashed plane studied

MILWAUKEE — A malfunctioning engine from the Midwest Express DC-9 jetliner that crashed killing 31 people will be taken to Dallas to be broken down and thoroughly inspected, officials said. James Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, which is investigating Friday's crash at Billy Mitchell Field, said the jet's right engine showed a 4-inch-by-4-inch hole on the top left side of its crumpled casing. "What we are talking about is something that is not consistent with impact damage," he said Monday.

Scientist says 'Leave Titanic alone'

WOODS HOLE, Mass. — The Titanic should be left undisturbed in its silent tomb at the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean in memorial to the 1,513 people who died when it sank 73 years ago, says the scientist who found the ship. "It is a quiet and peaceful place, and a fitting place for the remains of this greatest of sea tragedies to rest," said Robert Ballard, chief scientist on the U.S.-French expedition that came home Monday to the cheers of 300 people gathered at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. "The Titanic lies now in 13,000 feet of water on a gently sloping Alpine-looking countryside overlooking a small canyon below," he said. "Forever may it remain that way."

Hurricane Rick bears down on Hawaii

HONOLULU — Hurricane Rick, one of the strongest and best developed on record in the eastern North Pacific, continued to approach the Hawaiian Islands today with winds gusting to 145 mph, the National Weather Service said. Forecasters, however, say the storm will turn north by Wednesday and begin to weaken before it gets close enough to pose a threat to the islands. "Based on all the current data that we have and the history of such storms, this is what we expect will happen," said John Mukai, a meteorologist with the weather service here.

Navy code thief gets two years

SAN DIEGO — A federal judge dealt the harshest sentence allowable to a 25-year-old man who pleaded guilty to a role in the theft and attempted sale of top secret Navy code cards. U.S. District Judge Earl Gilliam ignored pleas for leniency by the defense and exceeded a prosecutor's recommended six-month prison sentence by ordering Dale Irene to spend two years in prison. The sentence meted out Monday was the stiffest possible under the plea bargain in which Irene pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor counts of receiving stolen government property.

State prisons isolating AIDS victims

SACRAMENTO — California prison officials say they are taking no chances and have begun isolating prisoners with AIDS and those whose blood shows they have been infected with the AIDS virus. "We are not waiting," said Dr. Nadim Khoury, chief of health services for the California Department of Corrections. "We have the obligation to isolate these people now. We will try to limit whatever infectious disease we have before it gets out of control." AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, has been a substantial problem in the prisons of New York, New Jersey and Florida. In those states, intravenous drug abusers account for a far greater number of AIDS cases than in California, where the vast majority of AIDS cases are among gay men.

Man held in slaying of girl, 5

WHITTIER — A 21-year-old man was booked for investigation of murder after a 5-year-old neighbor girl was killed during an apparent burglary attempt, authorities said. An autopsy was planned today to determine how little Anna Cruz was killed early Monday and whether she had been sexually molested, a coroner's spokesman said. The girl, who had been sleeping in the living room of her mother's apartment, was strangled or suffocated, Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Steve Lee said.

Escaped Folsom convict recaptured

CHESTER — A Folsom Prison inmate who escaped Saturday has been recaptured without incident in northern Plumas County. Plumas County sheriff's deputies said Monday they stopped Charles Ray Davis, 31, Sunday in connection with the break-in of a vehicle in Chester, and a computer check showed a warrant for his arrest. Davis, who was serving time for attempted burglary and parole violations, apparently walked away from Folsom's minimum-security unit.

French hostages awaiting release

But there's no word on other Westerners kidnapped in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two Frenchmen kidnapped in Beirut almost four months ago were expected to be released soon following the release of the last batch of Lebanese prisoners from Israel's Atlit prison, a Shiite Moslem official said today.

There was, however, no word on 10 other missing Westerners. They include seven Americans — including former Huntington Beach resident David Jacobsen, 54, American director of the American University Hospital, kidnapped May 28 — two other Frenchmen and a Briton.

"We are waiting for a word from the kidnapers. We expect the release any time," said Sheikh Hassan Masri, spokesman for Amal, the dominant Shiite militia group which has been involved in efforts to secure the release of the two French hostages.

Michel Seurat, 37, a researcher at the French Center for Studies and Research of the Contemporary Middle East, and Jean-Paul Kaufmann 42, a journalist working for the French L'Evenement Du Jeudi weekly, were abducted together May 22 on the Beirut airport highway.

Marcel L'Angel, the French embassy's first secretary, told The Associated Press: "We still have no word as to when or where they will be released. We are waiting."

Amal officials had said the kidnapers of Seurat and Kaufmann contacted during the June hijacking of a TWA jetliner by Shiite extremists and promised to free both captives once Israel fulfilled the hijackers' demand for release of 766 Lebanese prisoners in Atlit.

The 17-day hijack drama ended June 30 with the release of the last 39

American passengers and crewmen in Beirut. Israel has been freeing the Atlit inmates in batches and today released the last 119.

Military sources in Israel said most of the 119 prisoners were members of the radical Hezbollah, or Party of God.

32 state senators approve tougher death penalty law

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An expansion of California's death penalty law has won overwhelming approval of the state Senate.

The proposal, AB989 by Assemblyman Gary Condit, D-Ceres, won a 32-5 vote Monday, sending it back to the Assembly for concurrence in Senate amendments.

The same proposal went down to defeat last week when most GOP lawmakers abstained from voting amid Democratic charges that the Republicans were playing political games.

But this time, the Republicans removed their opposition, despite the defeat again of GOP amendments to take away Supreme Court justices' salaries if they failed to decide death penalty appeals within 150 days.

Senate Minority Leader Jim Nielsen, R-Woodland, claimed that the Republicans had no choice but to vote for the bill this time around. "The measure before us at least does something," he said.

Nielsen said the GOP would have to "come back and do something on the (salary) sanctions through an initiative or (by) raising it in (legislative) campaigns." But he denied that the Republicans brought up the salary issue merely to try to get ammunition to use against the Democrats in the 1986 state Senate races.

The bill contains provisions to: —Allow use of the death penalty when a defendant intends to kill one person under circumstances covered by the death penalty law but accidentally kills someone else.

—Add two new crimes — mayhem and foreign object rape — to the list of felonies that, when combined with murder, can result in death sentences.

—In death penalty cases, bar a judge from reducing in the interest of justice a sentence of life without parole or death. The judge could still make such a reduction if he or she found that a jury's verdict was contrary to law.

—Allow a 16- or 17-year-old convicted of first-degree murder and another specified felony to be sentenced to either life in prison without parole or to 35 years to life. Current law allows a maximum sentence of 25 years to life with the possibility of parole in such cases.

—Raise the minimum sentence for first-degree murder to 35 years to life. Currently, it's 25 years to life.

Drug pals describe Belushi's last shots

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In comedian John Belushi's final drug-filled days, Cathy Evelyn Smith, toting a hypodermic needle in her purse, cruised through Hollywood with the comedian, injecting him and his friends with powerful narcotics, two witnesses testified.

Nelson Lyon, who wrote scripts for the "Saturday Night Live" comedy television show on which Belushi starred, testified Monday that Belushi's last hours began with a "boys' night out" with celebrity pals and a cocaine-snorting session with comedian Robin Williams.

Lyon and Belushi friend Leslie Marks-Moritz, testifying at the start of Smith's preliminary hearing on charges that she killed Belushi, said they willingly shared drugs, with Belushi in March 1982, stretching out their arms for Smith's repeated injections.

Lyon indicated he and Belushi were given powerful "speedballs," a mixture of heroin and cocaine.

Belushi, star of the movies "Animal House" and "The Blues Brothers" as well as "Saturday Night

Cathy Evelyn Smith

Live," was 33 when he died March 5, 1982, of an overdose of "speedball" heroin-cocaine mixtures at a Sunset Strip bungalow.

Smith, 38, a former backup singer for such singers and songwriters as Gordon Lightfoot and Hoyt Axton, is charged with second-degree murder and 13 counts of furnishing and administering drugs to Belushi.

The preliminary hearing is being held to determine if she must stand trial on the charges which could bring her a maximum sentence of eight years and eight months in prison if convicted.

Moritz, who said she was injected only with cocaine while Belushi apparently received "speedballs," said Smith warned her that the shots could be lethal.

No requiring local signals on cable TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger on Monday refused to force cable television operators to keep carrying all local TV signals on their systems.

Burger left intact a federal appeals court ruling that deemed Federal Communications Commission's so-called "must carry" rules unconstitutional. The appeals court ruling takes effect Tuesday.

Burger was told that television broadcasters, especially operators of UHF stations not affiliated with any major network, fear that cable operators will drop their signals once the rules are wiped out.

Three U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals judges here ruled unanimously July 19 that the rules abridge the free-speech rights of cable system operators.

Leaving open the possibility that the commission could redraft the rule to make it acceptable, the appeals court said the rules "are fundamentally at odds with the First Amendment and, as currently drafted, can no longer be permitted."

The National Association of Broadcasters, which plans to file a formal appeal of the lower court's ruling on Sept. 18, asked Burger to keep the rule in effect until the Supreme Court considers that appeal.

Massacre shrine unauthorized, doomed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The city still hasn't decided what to do with the vacant lot where the San Ysidro-McDonald's massacre occurred, but officials have ordered the removal of a makeshift shrine erected there.

Tom Arena, who built the memorial on the city-owned lot two weeks ago, said he won't move it.

"We're not going to tear it down," he said. "If they try to tear it down, I'll stand in front of it. They'll have to tow me to jail first."

Arena said he constructed the memorial consisting of plaster statues, a rose bush, votive candles and a picture of the Virgin Mary after becoming frustrated with the city's inaction.

The memorial marks the site where on July 18, 1984 gunman James Oliver Huberty walked into a McDonald's restaurant and opened fire with three weapons. Before he was killed by a police sharpshooter, Huberty killed 21 people and wounded 19 others.

District attorneys warned about anti-Bird campaign

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A letter from a Los Angeles law firm warning district attorneys not to spend public money in the fight to oust Chief Justice Rose Bird has drawn sharp replies from several prosecutors.

The letter warned district attorneys statewide they could face felony charges over the practice.

"The prohibition against the expenditure of public funds for partisan political purposes is clear and unequivocal," attorneys Mark E. Overland and Robert Berke said in the letter.

Berke is president of the California Attorneys for Criminal Justice, an organization of defense lawyers he said has not taken a stand in the matter and did not authorize him to send the letter.

Berke did not accuse any prosecutor of improper electioneering.

WEDDINGS

STATUM-OGDEN

The Laguna Beach United Methodist Church in South Laguna was the setting for the Aug. 24 marriage of Tuckey Ogden and Douglas Frank Statum. One hundred forty guests attended their reception at Ben Brown's Restaurant in Laguna Beach.

Mrs. Tucker Hogrefe Odgen of Mantoloking, N.J., and the late Mr. Jack K. Ogden are the parents of the bride, and Air Force Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Glen Statum of Costa Mesa are the bridegroom's parents.

The bride, a Laguna Beach resident formerly of Bay Head, N.J., was given in marriage by her brother, Jay Ogden. She wore a gown of bridal taffeta fashioned with a fitted basque bodice with self-ruffling over the shoulders and accented with Venice lace. The bouffant skirt ended in a chapel train. Her veil of pearl-trimmed silk illusion was held by a crown of pearls and silk flowers.

Donna Serbe was maid of honor and Mike Gorman was best man. Other bridal attendants were Bridgette Ostrand, Jackie Ogden, Andrea Statum, Steve Pritchard, Ed Garcia and Wendell Blanton.

After a wedding trip to Naples, Fla.,

Tuckey Statum

the couple are residents of Costa Mesa. She is with Anchor Mortgage Services Inc. in Newport Beach and he is an accountant with Ticor Title Insurance.

PARENTEAU-COZAD

Celane Renee Cozad and Normand Henry Parenteau exchanged wedding vows in a Sept. 7 ceremony in the First Presbyterian Church in Santa Ana. Dr. Michael Pulsifer conducted the double ring ceremony and music was provided by Sharon and Christine York and Roger Carmichael. The couple greeted 250 guests at a reception at the Santa Ana Elks Club.

Mrs. Roberta Thomas Knauer of Santa Ana and Charles Richard Cozad of Balboa are the parents of the bride. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parenteau of Long Beach.

Given in marriage by her grandfather, Robert C. Thomas Sr., the bride wore a Victorian style gown. Seed pearls accented the floral pattern of Alencon lace and Schiffli embroidery on the bodice, and the skirt swept into a cathedral train. At the neckline, she wore a family heirloom cameo given to her by her grandmother, Mrs. Robert C. Thomas Sr.

Celane Parenteau

June Young Kim was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Diane Thomas, Emily Parenteau, Marci Karst and Shelly Henick. Rebekah Ann Thomas and Regina Barron were flower girls and Robert C. Thomas III was the ring bearer.

The bridegroom chose Fred Valles as his best man and ushers were John Reilly, Roger Wilson, Roy Fuller and Wayne Nyback. Tom Todaro and Danny Dorsey were junior ushers.

After a wedding trip to Ocho Rios, Jamaica, the couple plan to live in Corona in the late fall. The bride, a past debutante of Las Campanas, Fullerton and National Charity League in Newport Beach, is employed by CooperVision in Irvine. Her husband, a graduate of Cerritos College and Northrup Institute of Technology, is with Ricmar Engineering in Fountain Valley.

BADGLEY-YODER

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Newport Beach was the setting for the Sept. 7 wedding of Judith Melba Yoder and Kevin Bruce Badgley.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hoehn Yoder of Newport Beach are the parents of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Lee Badgley of Cloverdale are the bridegroom's parents.

Bridal attendants were Pam Yoder, maid of honor, and Christine Stillinger, Diane Blanchard, Vicki Allee and Jody and Joyce Chapman as bridesmaids.

Larry Badgley was best man, and ushers were Dan Riordan, Lenny Pieroni, Dave Wilson, Marty Hunt and Dwayne Shirakura.

After greeting their guests at a reception at the Santa Ana Country Club, the couple left on a wedding trip to Kauai, Hawaii. They are residents of Santa Clara where he is a staff engineer at John Fluke Manufacturing, and she is a designer/draftsman at Hoover Associates in Palo Alto.

This chick chirps 'cheap, cheap'

DEAR ANN LANDERS: To "Dating and Middle-Aged in Kalamazoo": Where do you find those darling men who insist on picking up the check?

I'm a 36-year-old divorcee who is tired of being asked to dinner, then after dessert, he lets the check sit there until I pick it up.

Another adorable guy invites me out for cocktails, orders a second round, and when the waitress brings them he says, "It's your turn to pay. Please give the girl a nice tip."

Down with women's lib! It started all of this garbage. Give me a gentleman who will take me out and pay the tab. None of these big spenders is raising two kids on a secretary's salary. P.S. I also have to pay $2 an hour for the babysitter. Sign me — DISILLUSIONED AND TAPPED OUT IN TOPEKA

DEAR TAPPED: Why do you attract such losers? There must be better material in Topeka. Keep looking. The next letter should be of interest.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I are in our early 60s. This is a second marriage for both. Our previous mates died. My wife is financially well off and so am I.

Before our marriage, a year ago, we agreed to share all expenses. Immediately after, I found myself paying for everything.

Our household expenses amount to over $1,000 a month. She has never paid a dime toward anything. Weeks go by and she doesn't open her wallet.

Neither of us has a relative in the world. When I asked her what she is saving her money for she replied, "It isn't the money—it's the principle."

As for travel, dining out, or taking a trip she says, "It's too expensive," so we sit at home and watch TV.

I never thought my golden years would be spent like this. She is a good woman in many ways — kind, considerate and a marvelous cook — but I can't stand her miserliness. Any advice? — TIREDFIT ALL

DEAR TIRED: In addition to being painfully stingy, your wife has another problem. She's a weisher.

Why have you not reminded her of the agreement to "share everything"? Maybe you also have a problem — no guts.

There's more wrong here than just money. It's poor communication. You two should be honeymooning still. Instead, she's a stick-in-the-mud, and you're angry at her stinginess.

Neither of you is having any fun. I recommend joint counseling before you find yourselves telling it to the judge.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just returned from the hairdresser and am close to tears. I explained that I want to wear my hair long but it needed to be trimmed slightly and ended up in preparation for the new style.

She turned my chair around so I couldn't see what she was doing. Before I knew it I looked as if I'd been scalped. When I asked what in the world she had done she replied, "This is new and it's what you should be wearing."

I realize my hair will grow back but I am furious at what that dame did to me, literally behind my back. This sort of thing happens to women all the time. Why? — HAGERSTOWN, MD.

DEAR MD: I asked my hairdresser, Brian Blanchard. He said, "Too many hairdressers would rather be creative than follow the client's instructions. The woman has a right to be furious. She should find another hairdresser."

She's caught in documentary web

My husband and I watch a lot of animal documentaries on PBS. We have for years. At first, it was enough to satisfy the public's curiosity of animals by seeing a whale take a trip to the Baja or a deer called Bambi play in the meadow. It was real interesting.

After a couple of years when all the animals in the world had been photographed taking trips and playing in the meadows, producers figured we should see how they get their food.

This seemed reasonable. It was also a little gross seeing mothers eat their babies, snakes eat bird eggs, lions stalk newborn wild beasts, cheetahs eat monkeys and bears grab handfuls of fish out of streams and stuff them into their mouths. We went through a couple of years of hyenas fighting over carcasses, but it was real interesting.

But the focus on how animals got their food was soon used up and someone decided it might be fascinating to see how animals gave birth. There wasn't a documentary that flashed by where someone wasn't falling out of someone. Some animals dropped their eggs, some gave them to a friend to carry. Some carried them in their mouths and spit them out and I wouldn't have been surprised to see someone give birth in their ear. Seeing a male sea horse give birth gave me a moment of exhilaration, but it got a little stale.

Producers were up against the wall. What else could you say about animals? Then, someone suggested their sex life. Bingo. Animal documentaries have never been the same since.

There is an unwritten law among censors that sex is only dirty when it applies to humans. With animals, it's a way of life and in perfect accord with the evolution of the planet and everything living on it. Joan Rivers could get arrested for saying what David Attenborough would get a conservationist medal for.

I have seen lions doing you-know-what on TV every 10 minutes of their courtship, night crawlers who are switch hitters and very weird, salmon who kill themselves going upstream to spawn and, having done it, die a happy death.

I've seen ducks who grab the neck of the female and practically drown her for the privilege, walrus who maintain harems and the swift birds, who mate in flight (their mother knew what she was doing when she named them).

Paparazzi slink around every bush and tree in Africa followed by 50 natives carrying lenses. There isn't a single creature on land, sea or air who is safe from the probing eye of the camera. Why those poor pandas from China have not had a moment's peace since they arrived in this country.

We were cleaning out the garage the other day when my husband said, "Look at that!" There were two spiders on the wall, one small female and the other male twice her size. "I do believe we're going to see an X-rated documentary here."

The male spider moved closer to the female and ate her. So much for sexual appetite. I wonder where we go from here.

Local colleges call on citizens to get involved

By LARRY P. STEVENS

Those of us who serve in a community college enjoy a special privilege.

Few professions are more satisfying or carry a greater public trust. But in order for us to effectively discharge our trust, we need your involvement.

The community colleges of California are going through the greatest transition in their 75-year history. Established to bring the benefits of college closer to the local community, the community colleges are now moving toward a state-controlled system.

The shift in control toward Sacramento may be the inevitable result of the shift of funding from the local to the state level, which occurred following the passage of Proposition 13. Since the state now funds the community colleges, it is to be expected that the state will take a greater interest in determining our mission. The inevitable consequence will be greater uniformity among the community colleges and movement toward a state "system" of community colleges responding more to statewide priorities.

Almost one-half of California's adult population has attended a community college. These colleges gear their programs to community needs and draw their students almost exclusively from the local communities they serve. Community is a part of our name. The diversity among the community colleges is as wide as the differences between the communities they serve. This diversity, and our emphasis on local needs, has been one of our strengths.

A greater degree of state control carries with it advantages and disadvantages. Whatever state control brings, it is not likely to be greater responsiveness to local needs and concerns. Therefore, even stronger local citizen input is necessary to help offset the effects of potential state centralization.

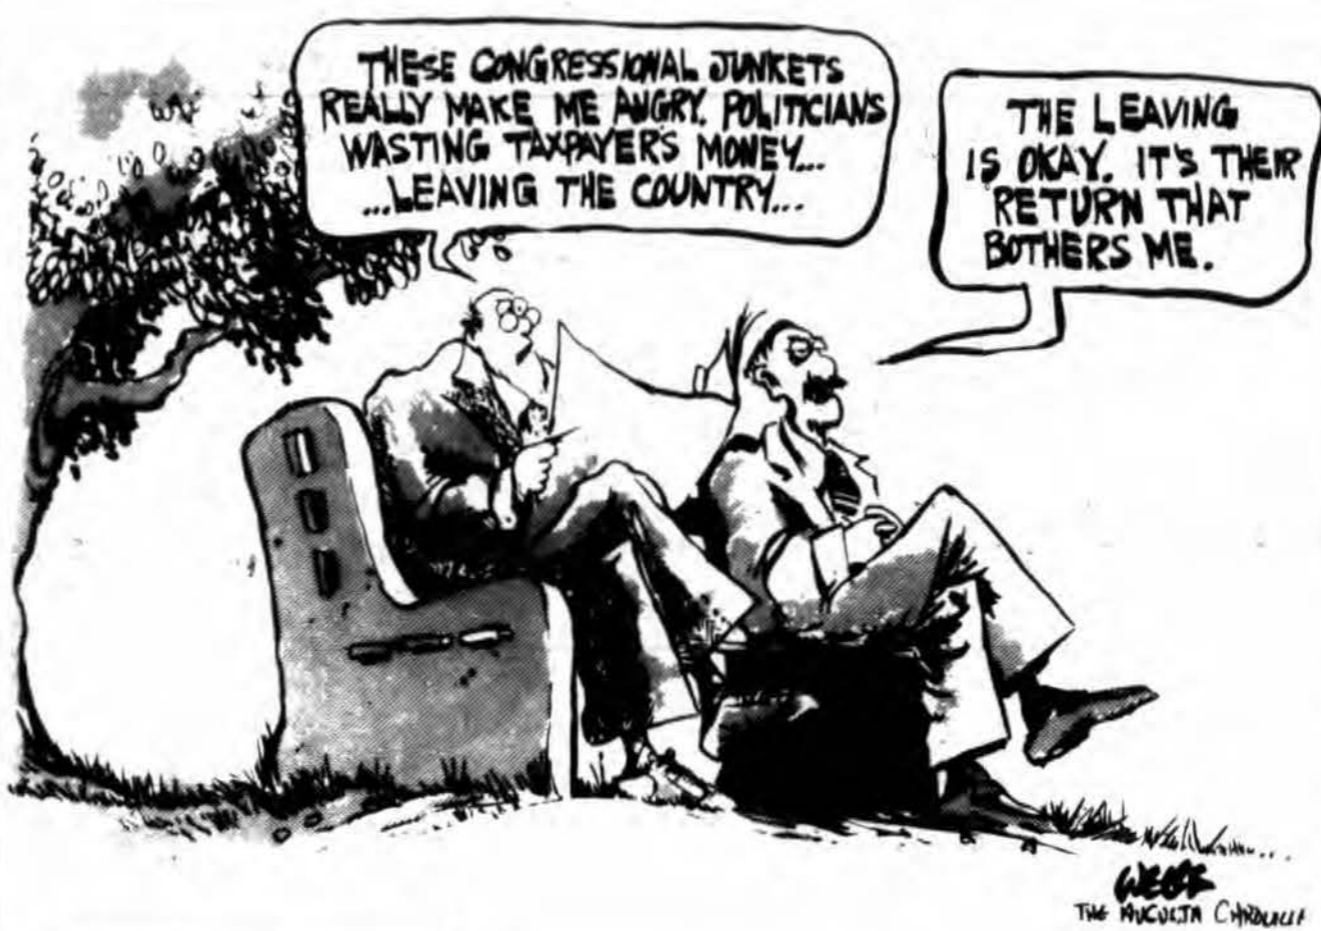

Orange County is going through some dramatic changes that are not typical of many areas of the state. For example, the population of the Saddleback Community College District is projected to increase by 65 percent in the next 15 years. Concurrently, the economic base is rapidly changing.

We are experiencing rapidly changing local needs at a time when the state is moving toward a community college system based on statewide norms and needs — which are not necessarily congruent with those in Orange County. We simply are not "average" in the characteristics that determine educational needs.

More than ever before there is a need for strong local citizen involvement to identify your needs and to help us plan to meet them in the face of a trend toward greater uniformity among the community colleges. The Berman-Weiler report, entitled "A Study of California's Community Colleges" and prepared for the California Roundtable (an organization of senior executives in major California corporations), observes the community colleges "to be unusually flexible institutions with the capacity to adapt quickly to local needs." The continued active involvement of local citizens is essential if we are to retain the capacity to be responsive to community needs in the years ahead.

Our Board of Trustees, the faculty, and administration value your active interest in our colleges. We appreciate your service on our several advisory boards, your participation in our surveys of educational need, and your willingness to keep us informed on matters of educational concern to you.

Larry P. Stevens is chancellor, Saddleback Community College District.

Whether you say Hoover or Boulder, it's a good dam

Later this month, the "golden anniversary" of the dedication of the Hoover Dam will be celebrated in Boulder City, Nevada.

So, here we go again. Is it Hoover Dam? Or Boulder Dam? That's an argument that has survived a half century.

Some of you, like me, are able to remember the big foofarah that started 50 years ago. The big argument! Is it Hoover Dam or Boulder Dam?

If you will remember, the greatest of all depressions up to that time started in 1929. Herbert Hoover was president of the United States and he was blamed for the depression.

Who was to blame? Why, said the Democrats, of course it was the Republican president Herbert Hoover. Well, maybe he was to blame. At least the GOP hadn't come up with an adequate defense. So, even though the decision to build the dam was made under a Republican administration, by the time the dam was completed Franklin Delano Roosevelt was president of the United States.

So it was his job to dedicate the dam. President Roosevelt did not attempt to change the name given to the dam before he was elected to office. So he dedicated "Hoover Dam."

Well, gentlemen and ladies, what had happened before the election was nothing compared to the hissing and snarling that took place after President Roosevelt dedicated that dam.

A Newport Beach resident, Robert Lee, is vice president of Los Angeles Water & Power Associates Inc. and he tells the story rather accurately — not about the hissing and snarling — but about how we Southlanders succeeded in persuading the federal government to build the great dam. In the August issue of the Los Angeles Water & Power Associates Newsletter, he says:

"The Los Angeles Department of Water & Power was one of the leaders in early negotiations and the signing of power purchase contracts that brought the project into reality. It is participating with the U.S. Reclamation Bureau in the ceremonies planned for Sept. 28 in Boulder City.

"DWP's involvement in the concept of building a high dam on the Colorado River began in the early 1920s. In 1923, William Mulholland, head of the DWP water system and builder of the Los Angeles Owens River aqueduct, made the first reconnaissance study of the possibility of bringing Colorado River water to Los Angeles and other Southern California cities. At the same time, DWP power engineers under the direction of E. F. Scattergood, head of the municipal power system, were investigating the economics and the design of a proposed huge hydroelectric facility and power lines.

"Los Angeles citizens voted 5 to 1 in a 1924 election to authorize the DWP to sign contracts guaranteeing to buy a large share of the power that would be sold to finance the project. Congress specified that sufficient power purchase contracts had to be signed before any federal funds would be advanced for project construction.

"Under that requirement — the first of its kind — the government would be paid back its investment, with interest, in 50 years. That assured the project would be built with no cost to the nation's taxpayers.

The DWP was the major guarantor of that unique repayment arrangement.

So, in 1935 the great dam — call it Hoover or Boulder, it truly makes no difference to us Orange Countians — was completed. What does make a difference is that, as a result of building the great dam, the state of California constructed another dam farther down the river called the Parker Dam. And that dam made it feasible to take water out of the Colorado River and transport it, via aqueduct, to Orange County and neighboring counties.

However, as Bob Lee points out in his Newsletter, "record setting water use the past year and below normal supplies in some reservoirs have prompted the Metropolitan Water District to urge Southern California consumers to step up their water conservation efforts.

"Stating that adequate water is available this year, MWD General Manager Carl Boronkay warned that if next year is unusually dry, California could be in the grips of a serious drought. Conserving now will help reduce problems in the future. In addition to the uncertainties about nature's water supplies, MWD faces the hard fact that the Central Arizona Project will go into operation later this year and that will ultimately take more than 50 percent of the Colorado River water MWD has relied on."

The foregoing is not at all the entire Colorado River story. I can only hope that all the newspapers of Southern California give a complete and accurate (note the adjectives) report of the golden anniversary.

Yes, it looks as if we have a lot of thinking to do about water in the next few months and years. And it isn't smart to worry about the proper name of the big dam.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Eye doctors see clear road to riches via cataract work

Current archaic Medicare practices make it easy to overcharge government

WASHINGTON — For an elderly person whose vision is failing because of cataracts, the restoration of sight is a benefit beyond price. But that doesn't excuse eye doctors who have become "Medicare millionaires" by getting fat off their patients and the federal government performing cataract operations.

These greedy few have taken advantage of archaic Medicare reimbursement methods to submit unconscionable overcharges for the surgical implantation of intra-ocular lenses that correct cataracts. And because of current reimbursement practices, the Department of Health and Human Services has no choice but to pay.

In a recent review of 38 ophthalmologists in six states — California, Texas, Florida, New York, Pennsylvania and Washington — the HHS inspector general found that 10 had become millionaires through the cataract operations.

Nationwide, the lens-implant operation is the most common major surgical procedure reimbursed by Medicare. It is estimated that at least 1 million Americans will undergo the procedure this year alone, at a cost to Medicare of about $3 billion.

In fact, the internal inspector general report, obtained by our associate Tony Capaccio, predicts:

"Unchecked, cataract surgeries will increase to 2 million procedures and cost the taxpayer nearly $6 billion (in 1990.)"

The wild card that allows eye surgeons to rake in the big bucks is the recent technological improvements that have made the implant operation as simple as it is effective. It is now a 30-minute outpatient procedure; when it was first developed in the late 1970s, it required three to six days in the hospital.

But the Medicare reimbursement rates were set when the operation was still experimental and could be performed by only a handful of surgeons. And as long as the rates are still in effect, some ophthalmologists will continue to charge the legal limit and become what the inspector general report calls "Medicare millionaires."

"A surgeon may now perform as many as 10 to 15 operations in a day," the inspector general notes. "Neither the medical profession nor Medicare has acknowledged these technological advances and efficiencies by reducing the charges or payments associated with cataract surgery."

concludes that "overcharging for the lenses and inflating the costs of surgery ... are almost universal."

One of the 10 millionaires reviewed by the inspector general was a Florida eye surgeon whose clinic performed more than 5,000 implant operations last year, for which he was reimbursed $6.4 million by Medicare.

A Texas surgeon got $1.3 million from Medicare for implants last year, according to the inspector general's office. He received 1,600 free lenses from a manufacturer in exchange for the use of his name in its advertisements. He then submitted claims for reimbursement of $80,000 for the lenses. Medicare paid $64,000 of this, and the surgeon's patients were billed for the rest.

No law covers summer tragedy

Managers unlikely to pay for tainted cheese, melons

It was a different kind of case from the contaminated Jalisco cheese and the tainted watermelons that plagued California this summer, but executives here could have been excused for feeling a bit smug and safe when three corporate officials in Illinois were sentenced to 25 years in prison last month.

For it couldn't have happened here. Not their crime — that could easily have happened here and probably has. But the penalty. The three executives of a silver recycling plant were convicted of knowingly exposing workers to deadly cyanide fumes. One died.

If the same thing had happened here, prosecutors would either have had to prove murder or manslaughter, or let the matter rest. And since those charges are harder to prove than the one the three were convicted of, they'd probably be free men today if their plant were in California.

Thanks to the strong lobbying of the California Chamber of Commerce and the California Manufacturers Association, that's the problem faced by this state's prosecutors in dealing with the cheese and watermelon affairs.

For only a month before the contaminated cheese episode occurred, the big business and industry lobbies managed by a one-vote margin to kill a proposed law that would have made it a crime for a manager not to notify the public when his business knowingly produced goods likely to cause public harm.

"Be a manager, go to prison," the Chamber of Commerce labeled the bill, otherwise known as SB 1154, sponsored by state Sen. Nicholas Petris, a Democrat from San Francisco's East Bay suburbs.

The chamber and the CMA both claimed repeatedly that the bill wasn't needed because "business people who put monetary gain before product safety can be punished under existing law."

But can they? Even in the case of the tainted cheese, which apparently killed more than four dozen persons, manslaughter or murder will be much harder to prove than it would be to prove that unpasteurized milk was knowingly mixed with pasteurized. And mixing itself is no crime today unless the mixer knows the unpasteurized product is listeria-laden.

The result may be that the cheese producers go scot free. A similar result is possible in the tainted watermelon case, where farmers who may have ignored pesticide restrictions need fear nothing more than misdemeanor charges.

But both cases would have been covered by the ill-fated SB 1154, which exposed executives who knowingly produced harmful goods to a year in jail and as much as a $500,000 fine.

"Our bill certainly looks meek and mild compared to the penalties in Illinois," said Felice Tanenbaum, chief aide to Petris. "We didn't even include toxic poisoning in the workplace as the Illinois law does. Our bill is dead for this year, but when we bring it back, we're very likely to make it broader."

What is clear after the summer's tainted food tragedies is that California consumers need more protection of the type SB 1154 would have provided.

For the cheese and watermelon cases may represent only the tip of an iceberg. They were discovered because dozens of persons became ill. How many similar incidents of producers cutting corners go undiscovered?

'Madwoman' well dressed but overweight comedy

You may improve the outward appearance of a 300-pound woman with the finest in clothing, coiffure and makeup, but you still have to be careful of the furniture when she sits down.

Jean Giraudoux's vintage comedy "The Madwoman of Chaillot" is the theatrical equivalent of such a corpulent coquette, and the Westminster Community Theater has dressed her quite elegantly in its elaborate and ambitious production. But at nearly three hours, the "Madwoman" still carries a good deal of poundage in the wrong places.

Rather than excising or simply jettisoning some of Giraudoux's superfluous and — in today's theater — downright silly segments, director Larry Blake has turned them into veritable production numbers. His staging is undoubtedly faithful to the script, but a leaner, sharper version would command more fervent attention.

Such an overstuffed play demands outstanding interpretation on stage, and here the Westminster theater is blessed, at least in the upper ranks. Jan Angelino is dynamically captivating in the title role of the dotty countess who plots to rid Paris of its more corrupt elements — industrialists, profit seekers and even (gulp) the press. It's a bravura performance with all the satirical nuances intact.

Likewise, Ron Grigsby is passionately eloquent as the ragspicker with whom the madwoman conspires. He has, in essence, just two lines — both of which are about five minutes long — and he delivers them with fervent conviction.

The "heavies" in the show come across with all the subtlety of Jackie Gleason playing Ralph Kramden. Edward J. Steneck, Paul Anderson and Tom Hardy as the oil seekers virtually dare their audience to nod off during their blustery, scenery-chewing moments on stage, each seemingly attempting to surpass the other's volume.

Nearly as outlandish are Angelino's three clucking sidekicks — Louise Tonti, Dorothy MacDonald and especially Martha Faulkner whose gift for broad physical comedy is given free rein. The trio are on stage for one extended scene which contributes little to the story but elicits gales of laughter.

The romantic subplot, on the other hand, is delicately underplayed with Kerene Barnard and T. Bradshaw Yates moving cautiously and tentatively toward each other, oblivious of the madness around them. Helen Higgins is wordlessly splendid as the deaf-mute who can only be understood by Barnard, while Mason Malone as the waiter and Carol Albright as the bag lady lend effective atmosphere and Robert Slick displays his fine juggling talents to great advantage.

Wil Thompson contributes a whimsical scene as the sewer man, a sort of French, philosophical Ed Norton. Michael Aquila and Julie Tincher entertain effectively as street singers, while Lon Richardson and Alan Price have some nice bits as establishment figures.

Tony Grande is a properly officious police sergeant and usherettes Kathleen O'Brien and Cindy Bollman double deliciously as streetwalkers. Rounding out the large cast are Karla Abrams, William Carmignani, Yolanda Whitney and Raymond Holz in various characterizations.

The café and cellar set designs by Bronson are richly detailed and the special effect involving a hidden door is particularly well accomplished. Such embellishments are attractive and eye-catching, but cannot fully mask the ponderousness of Giraudoux's script.

"The Madwoman of Chaillot" continues for four more weekends, playing Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 through Oct. 5 at the Westminster Community Theater, 7272 Maple St., Westminster. Call 995-4113 for ticket information.

NBC, PBS capture 13 tech Emmys

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — NBC and PBS were twice as good as the competition, collecting 13 Emmys each this weekend for behind-the-scenes, prime time television excellence.

CBS shows won seven Emmys and ABC, six.

With 13 already in hand, NBC has a good chance at continuing its five-year domination of the awards when the remainder of the statuettes are given out by the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences later this month.

The glittery cop show, "Miami Vice," topped other prime time series with three craft awards. It has been nominated for 15 Emmys overall.

NBC received 125 out of a possible 297 Emmy nominations. Last year, NBC won 20 Emmy awards, including five for its long-running police drama series, "Hill Street Blues." That program has won 25 Emmys and needs only one more to break the all-time record set by "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Emmys in 30 categories will be presented Sept. 22 during the 37th annual Emmy awards. In the weekend ceremony, which included 39 categories, "Miami Vice" was honored for art direction, film sound editing and cinematography.

Also earning three awards were the PBS serial "Dance in America" and the NBC miniseries "Wallenberg: A Hero's Story."

Other multiple winners with two each included CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," for film editing and film sound editing, and PBS' "Heritage: Civilization and the Jews," for individual programming and writing.

West won the ten of diamonds, cashed the ace and then shifted to the queen of spades. Declarer allowed this to win, but won the ace when the suit was continued. The audience expected South to go after hearts for his ninth trick, and had already consigned him to down one. Declarer did indeed cash the ace-queen of hearts, but he now had an inferential count of the hand. West's carding suggested that he was 2-2-4-5. To test this, declarer

Dan Quisenberry

Quiz: He's shed his comic role

By JOSEPH DUDEVOIR
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Milton Berle would have been proud if he were there in the visitors' clubhouse at Anaheim Stadium to hear Dan Quisenberry. "I'm not afraid to steal a line, especially a good one," said the Kansas City Royals relief pitcher. "Some call it research."
And Quiz (as his teammates call him) does his homework. Even his delivery (pitching, that is) is "borrowed."
Quisenberry is sitting in his dressing cubical after the Royals dropped the first game of a three-game series to the Angels, 7-1, Monday night.
Despite the importance of these games (the Royals' lead was cut to a half game with the loss with only 26 games left) Quiz doesn't appear too worked up.
"It's still exciting, but it's a long season," he says. "After you're in the league for a few years the excitement wears off a little. I look forward to the end of the year, though. We seem to come around at that time of the year. Why? I don't know. I guess it takes us that long to get going," he said.

Quisenberry, a Costa Mesa High graduate (1972) and former Orange Coast College star, has gone through a maturation process that is slowly shedding his comedic image of years past.
This isn't the same Quisenberry who made a reputation with his mouth and his arm. This is a man who has grown past his old antics. He now leaves the stand-up comedy to the younger players.
Bret Saberhagen thinks he's Jerry Lewis. He's a funny guy who's always running around doing some crazy things," said Quisenberry.
When asked about his earlier days of madcap mischief, Quisenberry becomes quiet. You get the idea he would rather not discuss the past.

"What prompted me to do the things I did was not knowing what to say," he says quietly. "I didn't get a lot of fame when I was in high school, college or the minor leagues. And when I came up to the big leagues I wasn't sure how to act in front of all the lights and cameras."
"I have some memories of nonsense. Mostly when people would come to me after games just to see what they could get me to say. It's something I don't care for now," he said.
Why the change?
"In the last few years I've had some kids, got more involved with my family and got more serious," said Dan.
Quisenberry, now 32, makes his home in Leawood, Kansas with his wife Janie and his two children, Alysia (5) and David (4). But Quiz still likes to come back to his old haunts in Costa Mesa.

"I miss the roots. Sometimes I like to drive around Orange County, particularly the Costa Mesa area. I still go back and visit old friends and go by Orange Coast College when I'm out here. It brings back a lot of good feelings. There's a lot of nostalgia for me," he said.
"No doubt about it," said Angel Manager Gene Mauch, "he'll go down as one of the greatest relievers of all time."
When asked if that's how he considers himself, Quiz backs off a little.
"Well, I guess I'm up there," he says with a shrug. "There's been a lot of good ones, though. Goose Gosage, Bruce Sutter, Sparky Lyle and Rollie Fingers."
So what's in the future for one of baseball's premier doorkeepers?
"I'd like to play five more years and get into another World Series he says. "I think that would be enough for me."

It's a sweet victory: Candy baffles KC

Angels put it together at the right time, 7-1

By JOSEPH DUDEVOIR
Daily Pilot Correspondent

It was time for someone to make a stand. In danger of setting in the west like a fading fall sunset, the Angels needed a stand-up guy to take charge.
And when it was said and done, 6-7 pitcher John Candelaria was standing tallest after slowing down the runaway Kansas City Royals in the first game of a crucial three game set.
"Wasn't he beautiful?" said Angel Manager Gene Mauch of the Candyman, who set the first-place Royals down on two hits through eight innings to give the Angels a big 7-1 win in front of 29,688 at Anaheim Stadium Monday night. The win shaved Kansas City's lead to a half game in the American League West.
"Maybe tonight set the stage for the rest of the series, but the game is history and we have to do it again," said Candelaria, who raised his Angel record to 5-1 since his trade from Pittsburgh Aug. 2.
The only hits he surrendered came in the second and eighth innings, a blop double to Hal McRae and a solo homer from Darryl Motley respectively.
"He had some great stuff out there," said Royals third baseman George Brett. "But you have to consider we've never seen him before."

Tonight's game

Candelaria retired 20 in a row between the two hits. He struck out four and didn't allow a walk before turning the mound over to Doug Corbett in the ninth.
By that time the game was well out of the Royals' reach, thanks to Craig Gerber's bat and the air-tight Angel defense.
The normally light-hitting Gerber went 3 for 3 with 3 runs batted in to lead a trio of hungry Angel hitters: Daryl Scottiers, who hit a two-run homer for his second round tripper of the year and his first in two months. And Ruppert Jones, who snapped an 0-for-September drought (0-20) with a single and a solo homer in the fourth for the first Angel run.
But while the offensive show was nice, considering it was at the expense of Royals starter Bret Saberhagen, who had owned the Angels in past appearances, it was Candelaria who took the suspense out of this one.
"There will be no pat on the back for this one, though. I'm aware I can pitch. And I'm sure the gentlemen in the American League know I can pitch," said Candelaria.
Someone asked Candy if he was all the way back now.
"I didn't think I went anywhere," was his reply.

And neither did the Royals, who had been going places since July 21, winning 31 of 45 games and eight in a row coming into town.
But while Candelaria was mowing down the Royals, the Angels broke through against Saberhagen, the Royals 21-year-old Wunderkind who had fashioned a 17-5 record coming in. And what's more, he was 3-0 against the Angels with a microscopic earned run average of .78 against them.
First it was Jones taking Saberhagen deep to get things going.
Then a three-run triple, highlighted by Gerber's two-run triple, gave the Angels and Candelaria some operating space.
After Royal first baseman Steve Balboni's throwing error and Saberhagen's balk put Bobby Grich on third and Gary Pettis on second, Gerber drove a ball off the right field wall, just missing a homer by a few feet.
"The odds of me hitting one out are astronomical," said Gerber, who raised his career average against Saberhagen to .833 (5-6). "It felt good to contribute after sitting on the bench a lot."
"He was outstanding," said Mauch of Gerber. "It was the best day of his career."
And it, along with Candelaria's performance, couldn't have come at a better time for the Angels.
"That's a nice way to start a season, because the season just started today," said Mauch.

Angel third baseman Jack Howell was one of the defensive stars in Monday night's 7-1 victory over Kansas City at Anaheim Stadium.

HB tries to break CdM run

Sea Kings on right side of 5-1 series mark with Oilers

When it began in 1979 some might have construed the Huntington Beach High-Corona del Mar matchup a matter of the Oilers trying to pick on CdM with a considerable advantage in numbers.
Such was not the case, however. It was simply a matter of continuing a game when the CIF decided to allow a 10th game in lieu of a preseason scrimmage.
And if there has been any advantage, it's obviously been in favor of Corona del Mar, which has dealt the Oilers five losses in the past six years.
"Yes, we're fed up," says Huntington Beach Coach George Pascoe about the Oilers' situation with Corona del Mar.
"But that's a reflection on what they've done to us. The guy (Dave Holland) is a great defensive coach, and now he's got Billy White (offensive coach).
"They just let you make mistakes," continues Pascoe. "They line up defensively and say 'block us,' and if you're going to make mistakes our offense is going to be good enough to score."

"It's set a trend for us. Losing to Corona 14-10 late in the game last year started some bad habits and if we're going to break those habits we have to get off on the right foot."
The Oilers enter at full strength — except there is no 6-7, 290-pound transfer from Banning High for the Sea Kings to worry about. "He (Dan Goodman) checked out his gear and after a couple of practices it was evident he was a very good player. But then he disappeared. He's still on our roster and if he came to me and explained I'd probably keep him, I'd be a fool not to. But as of right now..."
Holland, the Corona del Mar coach, has no such personnel problems.
What he does have is an experience problem, in relation to the Oilers.
"Their experience concerns me more than anything," says Holland. "They have a lot of guys returning on the defensive side of the ball — like Vera, Hatch and Pagnanelli."

Laying foundation on opening night

Fountain Valley, MD have a great deal to prove

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Opening night: It doesn't really matter who, where or what... but there is an anticipation within that is seldom duplicated.
But for Fountain Valley and Mater Dei high schools, championship contenders in their respective leagues, Thursday night's non-league duel is also the foundation.
"We always tell our kids the first game is an opportunity to identify themselves, a chance to be noted for this or that and the identity usually carries on through the season," says Fountain Valley Coach Mike Milner.
"Last year (a 17-14 Fountain Valley victory) I was just hoping we could play with them," says Mater Dei Coach Chuck Gallo. "This year I think we can play with them and give them a good ball game."
The two hook up at Santa Ana Bowl in the fourth straight opener and the Barons are looking to up their win streak over the Monarchs to three.

"Their offensive line is impressive (the Barons average 240 pounds up front) and (Lance) Zeno is supposed to be the No. 1 lineman in the nation."
"(John) Peart is a pretty good quarterback, but we have a pretty good lineup and I think we'll be competitive."
"But our basic feeling," continues Gallo, "is that nothing counts until we play St. Paul in the pit in the league opener. We'd like to win, and we'd like to look good. But the only things that really count are league and CIF."
The Barons enter without any new injuries, but tailback Tom Vrab will be on the sidelines for the first part of the year because of knee surgery.
Milner has brought up sophomore Derek Tuescher, a 5-10, 160-pounder, in hopes of maintaining his I-oriented offense, and he'll be shuffling in Jon Aguirre and Terry Reichert at fullback.
Tight ends Rob Lendino (225) and Glenn Gordon (225) will both be in the lineup when the Barons move to a one-back setup, according to Milner.

"I'm sure they'll line up in a one-back and they have an excellent intermediate passing game," says Milner. "We have to mix our coverages and try to disguise things so he (Mater Dei quarterback Todd Marinovich) doesn't know what coverage we're in prior to the snap."
Zeno, the Sunset League's Lineman of the Year and an All-CIF selection as a junior, received national prominence with U.S. Today's recognition as the nation's top lineman.
At 6-4, 190 pounds, the sophomore Marinovich is 25 pounds heavier and considerably stronger," according to Gallo. As a freshman he led Mater Dei with 15 touchdown passes amidst 1,968 yards gained on 167 completions in 282 attempts (59.2 percent).
The Monarchs are in relatively good shape, but are without receiver Carlos Prietto, who has been held out of contact during practice because of a lower back injury during the summer.
"He hasn't received the go-ahead to play," says Gallo, "but Mike Kelly should be all right." Kelly, a returning starter at linebacker and described by Milner as "Mater Dei's best athlete," was slowed by an ankle injury in practice, but is apparently fully recovered.

Eagles suffer key loss: Rosellini out with mono

By RICHARD DUNN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Estancia High football coach Ed Blanton feels that his team is ready to take on South Coast League powerhouse El Toro Friday night, but a key part of his offense is hurting so the Eagles will have their work cut out.
Blanton found out Friday that starting quarterback Mike Rosellini (6-2, 180) has mononucleosis and will not be available for the Eagles' non-league opener at Mission Viejo High School. "I don't know how long he'll be out," Blanton said.
Also missing is speedster Eric Dorn (6-4, 180), who last season as a junior covered both ends of the field at wide receiver and safety. Dorn is out with a torn cartilage in his right knee suffered while long-jumping at the state track and field meet in June. A decision is due today regarding possible surgery.

Both Rosellini and Dorn will be sorely missed in the Eagles' offense, but Blanton is hopeful that senior Sean Kinkade can fill Rosellini's shoes at quarterback.
"I'm confident with him (Kinkade) in there," Blanton said. "He has good intelligence."
Blanton says he'll be relying on his offensive line to carry most of the load, a heavy one indeed for El Toro. "The offensive line is going to be our strong point," Blanton said. "I'm real

Rose says tonight's the night

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose predicts he will set baseball's hit record tonight, not with a small step but with a great leap into history.
The Cincinnati Reds' player-manager resisted the temptation to take an unscheduled swing at his 4,192nd career hit Monday night, keeping himself on the bench during a 2-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.
Instead, Rose chose to take his cut at topping Ty Cobb tonight before an expected sell-out crowd of more than 52,000 in Riverfront Stadium. He wants to end the season-long drama with a flourish.
"Yeah, I think I'm going get a couple of hits tomorrow night," Rose said after Monday's game. "I'm not going to try for a full house again Wednesday night."
The crowd of 29,289 Monday night didn't want him to wait that long.
Even before the game, fans were chanting, "Pete, Pete," in efforts to change his mind about sitting down.

Dodgers give 'their all'

Tired LA topples Atlanta, 9-7; play two today

ATLANTA (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers were tired, a long way from home and down by three runs in the eighth inning. Manager Tom Lasorda says what happened next showed why his team is on top of the National League West.
The Dodgers rallied for a five-run inning, eventually beating the Atlanta Braves 9-7 Monday night in a game that was rescheduled after the July baseball strike.
"They came back, didn't they?" said Lasorda. "It was a great bunch who battled all the way. We got a group of guys who give their all. They don't know how to quit. What a game, what a team."
The victory kept Los Angeles eight games ahead of the Cincinnati Reds, who beat San Diego 2-1 earlier in the day.
Mike Marshall, who had hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning, capped a five-run eighth with a two-run single. The Dodgers trailed 6-3 when Bill Madlock and Mike Scioscia hit consecutive one-out singles against Zane Smith, Atlanta's third pitcher.

aren't they're lying. We've had a lot of tough games in a really tough part of the season."
Brian Holton, in his major league debut, got credit for the victory, though the only batter he faced. Terry Harper got a two-run single that put the Braves ahead in the seventh inning. Harper was thrown out stealing to end the inning and the Dodgers rallied in the top of the eighth, making Holton the winning pitcher.
"Maybe tomorrow night I'll get a couple of guys out," Holton said.
After Scioscia tied the score on the board, Atlanta tied the score in the bottom of the fourth. Marshall's fifth inning homer put the Dodgers back out in front, but Glenn Hubbard cut the margin to a run in the sixth by hitting his fifth home run.
Gerald Perry's two-run double and Harper's two-run single moved Atlanta ahead in the seventh inning after the Braves loaded the bases with two outs.
The Braves have long been out of contention this season, but Hubbard said the team is not rolling over and playing dead.
"We are fighting all the way to the last game of the season," he said.
The game was played before a paid crowd of only 3,136, the smallest at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium this season.

Pro golfer Funseth, 52, succumbs

NAPA (AP) — Professional golfer Rod Funseth, who continued to play on the PGA senior tour until last year after being told he had terminal chest cancer, died Monday night at his home with family members present. He was 52.

Funseth was a consistent money winner on the Professional Golfers Association tour for close to 20 years and won three tour events, the 1965 Phoenix Open, the 1973 Los Angeles Open and the 1978 Greater Hartford Open. He won more than $600,000 during his career on the regular tour and was successful on the senior PGA tour as a 50-year-old rookie.

His wife, Sandi, daughter, Lisa, 18, and son Mark, 17, were with Funseth when he died.

"He wanted to die at home," said his wife. "This was his choice. He fought a courageous battle."

The Spokane, Wash., native set the competitive course record at Pebble Beach, an 8-under-par 64 in the 1972 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. The record stood until 1983 when Tom Kite shot a 62 in the same tournament.

Funseth made his debut on the seniors tour in 1983 and won the Legends of Golf and Hall of Game tournaments and lost in sudden death to Billy Casper in the U.S. Senior Open, collecting more than $120,000 for the year.

Dickerson, Rams close to terms?

From AP dispatches

The Rams were scheduled to meet with contract holdout Eric Dickerson Monday, but there was no word from either side regarding what transpired during the negotiations.

Pete Donovan, the National Football League team's director of public relations, said as he left the Rams' offices Monday evening that he did not know what had occurred at the meeting.

Dickerson, who shattered O.J. Simpson's NFL single-season rushing record last year, had asked for a three-year, guaranteed extension of his current contract, which has two years remaining.

The Rams, 3-1 without Dickerson in the preseason, also won their NFL regular-season opener, taking a 20-16 victory over the Denver Broncos Sunday.

Rams Coach John Robinson, talking Monday afternoon during his weekly meeting with reporters, said Dickerson was to meet with unnamed club officials sometime during the day.

Robinson said he was not attending the meeting because he didn't want to miss practice.

"I think it's very important to the football team that they see me here," Robinson said.

The Rams coach did say of the negotiations with Dickerson, "The things that lie in the way are specific." He added, though, that didn't mean an impasse might still exist.

Robinson said he was pleased with the Ram's season-opening victory Sunday over the Denver Broncos.

"It's nice to get started right," he said.

"But I think we could take a lesson from the Vikings-49ers and Oilers-Dolphins games; it's a cliché, but anybody can beat anybody and we've got to remember that."

"It was a good game for us, no question about it," Robinson said. "There are so many games played over the 16-game season that can go either way... It was a hard-fought, battle-in-the-dirt type of game."

Charles White, who won the 1979 Heisman Trophy while playing for Robinson at the University of Southern California, made the difference for the Rams in the second half as they rallied from a 16-10 deficit.

White, who spent the last four years in undistinguished toil with the Cleveland Browns, gained 83 yards on 18 carries in the second half and scored on an 8-yard run with 2:07 remaining to give the Rams the victory.

"I've always said Charlie White was the toughest man I know," Robinson said of the runner he picked up as a free agent during the off-season after the Browns had let him go. "I'd seen him play under pressure and I know what he can do."

Although Robinson always has been one of White's staunchest supporters, he admitted he doesn't foresee pro greatness for him.

"I don't think he's ever going to be a great runner in the NFL," the Rams coach said. "But he's going to be a solid player for us, going to play a lot of years."

White didn't get a chance to run the ball in the first half against the Broncos, as Barry Redden got the starting nod. But Redden, bothered by a week-old injury to his ankle, sat out the second half as White made the most of his chance.

Another new Ram, quarterback Dieter Brock, got slightly mixed but mostly favorable reviews from Robinson.

Brock, a 34-year-old NFL rookie signed by the Rams out of the Canadian Football League, completed 16 of 29 passes for 174 yards.

He was intercepted twice and lost one fumble, but Brock also threw a 2-yard scoring pass and was a perfect five-for-five for 58 yards as he marched the Rams to their winning touchdown.

"I don't think he really had the touch (passing), but he played the entire game well," Robinson said. "Using tennis terms, it's like you can't get your first serve in, but you still find a way to win."

Robinson seemed satisfied with most aspects of the Ram's play.

He did, however, point out that Denver quarterback John Elway burned the Los Angeles defense with a pair of rather long touchdown passes, so the Rams' secondary needs to improve its coverage in certain situations.

SPORTS BREAK

Pair-ity of college football team is no double-talk

From AP dispatches

NAPERVILLE, Ill. — Football players tend to look a lot alike bunched up in pads and jerseys, but North-Central College's team will really make its opponents see double this season. Four times over.

The Cardinals have four sets of twins, three of them identical, and Coach Paul Connor says even he has to use jersey numbers to tell some of them apart.

"Sometimes I have to stop and think before I call," said Connor. "The Ricks brothers are especially tough to tell apart."

Don and David Ricks, 17-year-old freshmen from Deerfield, Fla., are identical down to the frames on their glasses, said Jeff Brewer, the school's sports information director.

Though both are defensive backs, Connor apparently is resisting the temptation to rotate them and leave some hapless opponents believing they were facing one tireless super player.

"I play the left corner and he plays the right corner," said Dave, noting he and his brother have the same build and speed and can anticipate each other's moves.

A recurring problem cited by some of the twins was getting blamed for a sibling's mistakes.

"It happens all the time, that somebody will yell at you for the other's mistakes," said Ken Wilson, 21, of Jacksonville, Ill., a starting tight end.

His identical twin, Greg, is a starting split end, lining up a bit farther down the line. Both are seniors, and both are wearing their hair very short for the season.

"He catches more passes," said Ken. "But this is my first year playing tight end."

Frank Hobart curled his hair, to distinguish him from his straight-haired brother, Wes. But that does little good when their locks are covered by helmets.

The 18-year-old freshmen from Michigan City, Ind., play offensive guard. Frank wears No. 66; Wes No. 65.

"Coach Connor's got us mixed up all the time," Frank said.

The fourth set are fraternal twins Tim and Tom Franklin, 18, freshmen from Watska, Ill.

Connor recruited the three sets of freshman twins in his first season at North Central College, a member of the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin. The school ended last season with a 2-7 record.

Quote of the day

El Modena High football coach Bob Lester, looking ahead to Friday's non-league opener with Coach Bill Workman's Edison High Chargers at Orange Coast College: "The only reason I scheduled him (Workman) in the first place is because I love to see his pregame warmups. They could put it to music and take it on the road. They're all on their knees and Billy comes along and blesses them. I'm going to get there early because I don't want to miss it."

Cards drop into tie with Mets

Ryne Sandberg and Keith Moreland drove home first-inning runs and Shawn Dunston singled home another in the second, leading Chicago to a 3-1 triumph Monday night over the St. Louis Cardinals. With their third straight loss, the Cardinals dropped into a first-place tie in the National League East with the idle New York Mets.

Elsewhere in the National League Monday, Mike Scott combined with two relievers on a seven-hitter for his career-high 16th win and doubled in a run to lead Houston to a 4-2 victory over San Francisco. Scott, 16-7, gave up five hits in seven innings and won for the fifth time in his last six games. Dave Concepcion made the most of his chance to share the spotlight with Pete Rose. As 29,289 frenzied fans screamed for Rose to try for baseball's hit record, Concepcion rapped three singles, including the game-winning run in the ninth inning to give the Reds a 2-1 victory over San Diego.

Yanks capture 10th straight

Mike Pagliarulo's fourth hit of the game, a two-run single in the 10th inning, sent the New York Yankees to their 10th straight victory, a 9-4 triumph Monday night over the Milwaukee Brewers. Despite the victory, New York remained 1 1/2 games behind American League East-leading Toronto, which beat Detroit 5-3 behind home runs by Cecl Fieder, George Bell and Garth Iorg. Toronto starts a four-game series in New York Thursday night. Winner Jimmy Key, 12-6, scattered seven hits and took a 5-1 lead into the ninth... Elsewhere in the American League, Gary Gaetti homered twice and drove in three runs and John Butcher pitched a four-hitter as the Minnesota Twins beat the Chicago White Sox 5-0. Gaetti hit his 15th homer, a two-run shot over the center-field fence, in the fourth inning after Tom Brunansky walked. Gaetti homered to almost the exact same spot in the fifth inning with the bases empty... Wayne Tolleason tripled and doubled and scored twice on singles by Don Slaught as Texas ended a six-game losing streak by beating Oakland 3-1... Gorman Thomas' fly ball to left field fell for a bases-loaded forceout that drove in Spike Owen from third in the 12th inning, giving Seattle an 8-7 victory over Cleveland.

Prep's death is mystery

HAMPTON, Iowa — Hampton football coaches say they are mystified over the death of high school player Shawn Varrelman, who died Saturday night of injuries he apparently received in a game Friday night.

Coaches say they have viewed films of Friday's game with Ackley-Geneva and say they can't find any one play in which the Hampton offensive center and defensive end suffered an unusually violent blow. "Nothing showed up on the game films, and we watched him on every play," Ed Anderson, assistant Hampton football coach, said Sunday. "We went over the films twice, and we'll do it again tonight. But so far we haven't found anything out of the ordinary."

Officials with St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn., said Sunday that Varrelman died of a severe concussion and anoxia, the medical term for total deprivation of oxygen.

Varrelman, 17, complained of dizziness toward the end of the game and collapsed after walking to the sidelines. He was treated by medics, then was taken to Franklin General Hospital in Hampton. Later he was flown to St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, where he died.

'Racing theatres' bill on way?

SACRAMENTO — Bills to allow three "racing theaters" where people could bet on horse races and to allow additional harness and quarter horse racing were approved Monday by the state Assembly.

The theater bill, SB590 by Sen. Ken Maddy, R-Fresno, received a 41-27 vote. It returns to the Senate.

It would allow the California Horse Racing Board to license up to three racing theaters, one in Northern California and two in Southern California. The theaters, where customers could watch and bet on races going on at tracks, would have to be at least 45 air miles away from race tracks.

Assemblyman Phil Wyman, R-Tehachapi, said the theaters would be the same as off-track betting, which has been defeated in the Legislature and would "set a bad precedent."

Newland lukewarm on season

But UC Irvine's water polo team has its hot spots

By SHARON FRUTOS

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

UC Irvine water polo coach Ted Newland enters his 20th year of coaching, so excuse him for not exaggerating his prospects for the 1985 season. Newland lets his two national championships and several runner-ups speak for him.

Where does Newland expect the Anteaters to finish?

"I wish I could tell you," he said. "Stanford should finish No. 1, then UCLA, then everyone else is bunched together."

The Anteaters lost a few players to graduation, but have several back.

"We're kind of in between," Newland said. "We have some old (players), and some young."

The middle-of-the-road outlook Newland has for his team can't be disputed, yet. The Anteaters defeated USC, 12-8, and lost to Long Beach State, 10-7, in preseason meetings last weekend.

There is some excitement in the UC pool, however.

Jeff Campbell, a senior out of University High, has spent a lot of time training for the season. He's just returned from the University Games in Japan, and came away from the Sports Festival with high-scoring honors. Campbell also is a U.S. National team member.

After earning All-America acclaim in '83, Campbell red-shirted last season. In last weekend's action, he scored eight goals against USC, and three against Long Beach.

"He's one of the outstanding college players this year," Newland said.

Joining Campbell on the returning roster is Michael Doting, Mark Maizel, J.R. Salvatore and Bret Del Valle. Salvatore led the Anteaters in scoring last season with 50 goals. Del Valle is the Anteaters' only other senior. He was in a car accident prior to last weekend's scrimmage and missed both games with slight head injuries, but is expected back soon.

CDM-HUNTINGTON...

(220) and Franco Pagnanelli (225) are the backbone of Huntington's offense, and Pascoe says he has found help in Tim Wilson (230) and Mike Cole (190), who should be able to spell Pagnanelli and Hatch on offense.

The Oilers operate out of the Delaware winged-T, something Corona doesn't figure to see again, but Holland says it's a good test for the future.

"They make you stay home and be disciplined," says Holland. "The key is not to start following the football too soon, or you're going to be in trouble. We need discipline."

While the Oilers have Joe Napoli returning at quarterback, Corona happy with them."

René Caballero (6-0, 195), Mike Chretien (6-1, 205), Curt Crandall (6-1, 205), Ken Fait (6-1, 200), Casey Swanson (5-11, 190) and Adam Walburger (6-5, 210) are the offensive linemen Blanton speaks so highly of.

So how are the limping Eagles, 4-5-1 last fall, going to compete against a tough El Toro team? "We're going to have to play good defense... we can't let them have the ball all night," Blanton explained. "We can't let them dictate to us."

Blanton said that the Chargers have several defensive starters back from last season, "but they also have a sophomore at quarterback," he added.

"Some sophomores are pretty good, but they're still sophomores."

Bret Johnson, son of El Toro Coach Bob Johnson, is the quarterback. And apparently a pretty good one according to Fountain Valley Coach Mike Milner, who said, "He's a helluva athlete, a winner with a great presence of mind. He's the most improved quarterback I saw during the summer passing league."

Mesa after a win

Costa Mesa High Coach Tom Baldwin suffered through a miserable

0-9-1 season last year, and he'll be the first one to tell you that, too... that was last year.

And now it's this year, and the Mustangs, behind an enthusiastic Baldwin and a team that he calls "experienced," are looking to turn some heads. Costa Mesa's first test will be Friday night in a non-league match-up at Bolsa Grande.

Winning is what's on Baldwin's mind the most. "We just need to win a football game," he said. "I think we can play with a lot of people, but we haven't won (in 14 starts). We need a win very badly... some teams just want to play well and prepare for league (in non-league games), but we need to win."

"It's like we're going to the Super Bowl."

"Our kids are a little scared and a little nervous," Baldwin said. "But we have some experience and our kids are excited... we're not going to downplay (this game) at all — it's an important game."

"I keep reading in the papers where they have a good passing attack," Baldwin added. "But last year they only passed eight times and completed two, and we intercepted two. We can only go on the film we have on them from last year. We think our experience is going to help us out a great deal."

John Carlson, a 6-3, 235-pound junior, is one of Baldwin's key offensive weapons and one of three tight ends the coach plans on using.

Adam Beck and Erich Vogel are the other two tight ends that junior quarterback Paul Rodriguez will be throwing to.

Dallas rolls to 4-14 win

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas' determined defense intercepted Joe Theismann five times Monday night and Cowboy quarterback Danny White and placekicker Rafael Septien made Washington pay for its mistakes with a 44-14 National Football League victory over the Redskins.

White, wearing a flak jacket for the first time in his career, directed a 98-yard scoring drive and combined on a 55-yard scoring strike with Mike Renfro while Septien kicked field goals of 53, 39, and 43 yards.

Cornerback Victor Scott completed the humiliation of Theismann on his 36th birthday by plucking off a pass and returning it 26 yards for a touchdown to build Dallas' lead to 30 points midway of the fourth quarter.

Washington reserve quarterback Jay Schroeder didn't fare any better than Theismann, serving up a 21-yard touchdown interception return to Dennis Thurman with 2:50 left in the game.

The Cowboys' victory over their hated National Football Conference Eastern Division rival snapped a three-game losing streak to the Redskins.

Berra says he used cocaine with Parker, Lacy, Milner

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dale Berra said he shared cocaine with at least four teammates while playing for the Pittsburgh Pirates and was once warned by Manager Chuck Tanner not to talk to a man now accused of selling the drug to major-league players.

Berra, a New York Yankees infielder and son of Hall of Famer Yogi Berra, admitted Monday in federal court that he "had a (cocaine) problem" last year with the Pirates. But he said he hasn't used the drug since last October.

Berra's testimony was to continue today in the cocaine distribution trial of Curtis Strong, 38, a former Philadelphia Phillies clubhouse cook. Strong is charged with dealing cocaine 16 times from 1980 to 1984 when the Pirates played home games.

Other players who could be called as witnesses today were Jeff Leonard of the San Francisco Giants, Lee Lacy of the Baltimore Orioles and Dave Parker of the Cincinnati Reds. Berra testified that he'd used cocaine with both Parker and Lacy.

Berra said he used the powdered narcotic with Pirates' pitcher Rod Scurry and former Pittsburgh outfielder John Milner. Seventeen current or former players have been implicated in using cocaine since last Thursday, when Kansas City Royals outfielder Lonnie Smith became the first player to testify.

"It made me feel euphoric. It made me feel well," said Berra, the fourth major-leaguer to testify in the Strong trial.

Berra, 27, said his father "stands behind me" although he doesn't condone the use of cocaine.

"He was very supportive of me," Dale said of his famous father. "Obviously, it wasn't an easy thing to do. But he's been such a good father to me his whole life, he accepted it."

The younger Berra said he snorted cocaine only occasionally until increasing his use in 1984 after an elbow injury forced him to go on the 21-day disabled list.

"I had a lot of time on my hands in the summertime for the first time in 10 years... it was the opportune time to do some (cocaine)," Berra said. "Any time you use cocaine, you have a problem," Berra added. "Yes, I had a problem."

New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin, when asked to comment on Berra's testimony, said he had been aware of the problems in Pittsburgh.

"I was the one who told his dad about it," Martin said. "Not so much about Dale but what was going on in Pittsburgh. But it's history as far as I'm concerned."

Berra testified that he first tried cocaine at a New Year's Eve party in New Jersey on Dec. 31, 1978, after several years of turning down opportunities to use the drug.

Plan for 'what ifs'

What happens to the family-owned business when the proprietor dies? What if the proprietor and the key employee are killed in a common accident? Who will have the authority to operate the company? Will the company be sold for less than its true value in a forced sale?

Most small business owners are very occupied with the day-to-day operations of the business.

Some time should be set aside to plan for the sale or transfer of the business in the event of the owner's death.

Sit down with a scratch pad and list a few "what ifs."

What if I die? What if I'm permanently disabled, physically or mentally? What if I disappear while on a fishing trip and cannot be found? If something should happen to you, how do you want your company disposed of?

Have you a friendly competitor with whom you could have a buy-sell agreement to cover the contingencies? Do you have relatives or friends knowledgeable enough to run your business with whom you could have a buy-sell agreement?

None of us likes to plan for something as unpleasant as dying. But the planning is far better done by you, the one who is knowledgeable about the business. Planning done after the fact will probably be less favorable to your family.

Businesses that depend on the daily input of the owner's expertise have an even greater concern. These businesses start losing gross revenue almost immediately upon the absence of the owner and are often more difficult to sell because of the expertise required of a new owner. A written buy-sell agreement can help establish the business' value for estate tax purposes and provide a ready buyer in the event of your untimely absence.

Irvine S&L profits where others fail

Irvine City Savings goes from nothing to $36 million in assets in a year's time

By JOY DEE ANTHONY
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Douglas Weeks was a 14-year-old messenger boy at a Michigan bank when he got his first taste of the world of high finance. Before he was out of his early-20s, he had sold about $100 million worth of life insurance and disability coverage in two weeks.

Now he's chief executive officer of Irvine City Savings. The savings and loan association was started from scratch a year ago and has been quietly turning a profit for the past two quarters in a competitive business climate.

All over the country, analysts are exploring the reasons why so many other institutions have failed.

Meanwhile, Weeks and his crew watch their S&L grow, pointing out that the appeal of a small institution serving local needs is something even a big money center would have difficulty challenging. Even if people could do everything at a one-stop shopping center, he said, "they might not be convinced that they're getting any of it competently." Specialization is the key to satisfying customers, he said.

With $330,000 of a new million dollar common stock offering already sold, and assets of $36 million, he is optimistic for the future.

But it wasn't easy in the beginning. When Irvine City Savings applied for federal insurance of accounts from what is the thrift equivalent of the FDIC, "we found ourselves in the middle of an unannounced moratorium on approvals," Weeks said. There was no formal recognition that they weren't approving any new savings and loans at the time, he said, "but, in fact, they weren't." With older S&Ls needing attention, the whole process came to a halt.

In the meantime, more severe operating restrictions were thrust on all newcomers to the thrift world. The regulators decided not to approve any institution that wasn't in line "with their view of what an S&L ought to be," Weeks said. According to the regulations, many of those who did not get approval could have. But "what the regs say and what the regulators do with their regulations are two different things. They became less than subtle," he pointed out. The whole idea was to permit only those institutions who were likely to avoid the kind of problems the old institutions were having.

One new restriction was the requirement that the S&L maintain a net worth equal to 7 percent of all savings liabilities. Existing institutions need only keep to a 3 percent net worth.

That "inhibited our growth to an even smaller pace than we would have preferred," Weeks said. If the authorities so decree, he notes, after three years the restriction might be lifted. Right now, he calls it "the only impediment to being everything we can be as soon as we can be it." The other new restrictions, however, "we would have imposed on ourselves" anyway, he said.

The approval for Irvine City Savings came through in December 1983. Doors opened in June 1984. Before that happened, area residents such as Pete Rabbitt, Edwin Meserve, Michael McClellan and others joined the board of directors.

Senior Vice President Paul Guiso, the original organizer of the thrift, said that despite the opinion of some skeptics, he "felt intuitively" that the new institution would be a success.

But in spite of the rapid growth of the city of Irvine, the good business climate of Orange County, and the thrift's location near a major intersection, the real secret to its success lies deeper, Weeks said. "Our greatest capital is our people," he said.

Reagan's tax reform plan faces stormy path

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's becoming more and more apparent that President Reagan's vaunted skills as a salesman will be severely tested this fall on the subject of tax reform.

Nobody expected the plan put forward by his administration to sail smoothly and smoothly through Congress and into law. The power of the "special interests" to object, obstruct and delay was well known.

But according to pollsters and legislative leaders of both parties, the proposal has failed to stir enthusiasm among the general public, whose backing it was hoped would give great impetus to the push for overhauling the tax system.

In a typical reading, the accounting firm of Ernst & Whinney found in a

The campaign was kicked off at a special reception in Los Angeles honoring 18 of the Southwest's leading executive women. Actor John Forsythe and Bullock's chairman Allen Questrom presented the women with a specially designed, limited-edition pin, The Portfolio Award, created for Bullock's by jewelry designer Tulla Booth.

During the two-week intensive campaign, the new Executive Woman Personal Wardrobe Consultant Service is being initiated, along with a series of fashion shows, seminars and clinics.

The Executive Woman Personal Wardrobe Consultant Service will be available on an on-going basis. It is being tested in nine Bullock's stores, among them South Coast Plaza and Bullock's Pasadena, Westwood, Century City, Beverly Center, Sherman Oaks, Del Amo, Mission Valley (in San Diego) and Scottsdale, (Ariz.).

survey of 2,500 people that the great majority — 63 percent — want a new, simpler tax code. But only 37 percent said they liked the one Reagan has put forward.

Leading lawmakers ranging from Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., have said in recent days that the plan has engendered little excitement.

"The people on the street — they never mention it," said O'Neill.

Reported Helms: "I have not heard one person in North Carolina mention it except in a deprecating way."

"I don't expect we will see it in its final form this year," Helms added.

Appraising the outlook, the Value Line Investment Survey, the nation's largest investment advisory service, said: "We think that tax reform efforts will not result in the passage of any legislation until 1987 at the earliest."

"Passing the annual budget has become so time consuming that Congress would probably have trouble bringing about such a sweeping change in the tax code in a single year."

"Few in Washington now think there's any chance for passage in 1985, and in 1986 the elections will be prominent on the minds of those in Congress. We doubt that our representatives will be inclined to offend such broad swaths of their constituencies in an election year, even if the overall plan benefits the majority of them."

It may, in fact, look like a sensible idea to take some extra time to weigh the consequences before embarking on any drastic change in the tax rules.

The trouble is, the debate does not take place in a vacuum. It creates uncertainties for businesses and individuals trying to plan for the future.

For that reason, Jonathan Frank, Value Line's assistant research director, suggests it might be beneficial if the administration backed off for the time being, perhaps turning the question of tax reform over to a bipartisan commission like the one that helped produce some major changes in Social Security in 1982.

"We think the sooner the president pulls the plan off the table for "The program has been developed," said Frank Doroff, Bullock's senior vice president, "because Bullock's recognizes that the executive woman has very special wardrobe needs and to assist her in meeting them we have created this service."

"The consultants are available to meet privately with customers to discuss their wardrobe needs and preferences with considerations for occupation, budget and personal executive style. The consultant will make suggestions and will help the customer to shop more efficiently."

The Executive Woman Personal Wardrobe Consultants will be located in the Bullock's Portfolio Department. This department has been also designed to facilitate shopping by focusing in on merchandise suitable for career dressing.

During this intensive campaign, five fashion shows featuring the latest clothes for the executive woman will be held. The South Coast Plaza show will be on Sept. 17 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Following the fashion shows, informal modeling will take place and wardrobe consultants will be on hand to answer any questions.

Beauty and make-up clinics will also be held to round out the program.

The Bullock's executive woman fashion shows will feature fall fashions from designers such as Anne Klein II, Calvin Klein Classifications, Perry Ellis, Portofino, Tahari, Linda Allard for Ellen Tracy, Debra Kuchme, Carole Little, Kazmed and Axis.

Seminars for the executive woman are also slated to address a variety of topics that are especially of interest to the career woman. Topics include: Shortcuts to Elegant Entertaining; Leadership: Method, Magic or Madness; Superwoman The Juggling Act; Volunteerism: What's in it for You; Discovering Art in Your Community; Skills for Success: How to Build a Positive Power Base; Change Your Voice, Change Your Life; and Visibility, Credibility and Risk Taking.

Kelly Templeton's hair salon celebrates 20th anniversary

There's a 20th anniversary party going on in Costa Mesa, and it's not for a 1965 class reunion.

It's for the hundreds of hairdressers and the possible thousands of local customers who have been associated with Kelly Templeton's hair salon since its opening 20 years ago.

Still operating from the same location on 17th street in Costa Mesa, Kelly held an open house on Sept. 5.

Kelly attributes his business longevity to his easy-going style and the salon's friendly, relaxing environment that appeals to a broad range of customers, including men as well as women.

Security Pacific to close Catalina Island branch

Residents of Santa Catalina Island will have only one bank to go to when Security Pacific National Bank shuts down the branch it has operated here for more than 66 years.

Security Pacific spokeswoman Mary Trigg said that the Avalon branch will close Nov. 20 because its potential for growth is limited and it would also be expensive to bring it into line with the bank's other automated offices.

The 2,500 accounts will be transferred to a Long Beach branch, but Trigg acknowledged that the closing may mean a loss of customers to National Bank of Catalina.

Irvine quadriplegic loses everything in apartment fire

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A quadriplegic lost everything he owned Monday afternoon when a fire ravaged his apartment and spread to adjoining units at an affordable housing complex in Irvine, authorities reported.

No one was injured. The blaze, which caused $104,000 in damage and displaced three families, was one of three fires reported within 24 hours on the Orange Coast.

In Newport Beach, a stubborn chemical fire broke out after school Monday at Corona del Mar High School. And firefighters in Costa Mesa responded before dawn today to a structure fire at a Hamilton Street apartment complex.

Richard Phost, disabled in a truck accident several years ago, was not in his apartment when a fire broke out in a patio area and moved up the side of the apartment, Orange County fire spokesman Joe Kerr said.

Kerr said the fire destroyed Phost's

Irvine City Council pressed for ruling on Lion Country

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The fate of a water amusement center proposed for Lion Country in Irvine may be decided tonight by the Irvine City Council.

Developers of the project have claimed that a favorable council decision is needed immediately if they are to begin construction in time to open next summer. If the council does not allow them to proceed, the developers have said, the Lion Country water park plan will have to be scrapped.

But city planning staff members have urged the council to require an extensive review that would delay construction for three to four months.

The council will decide whether Lion Country and American Sports World, the Colton-based company that wants to build the water amusement, need to obtain a new conditional use permit before building the rides. These would include water slides, waterfalls and rafts rides.

The businesses claim Lion Country's present permit, issued in 1973, allows these activities.

But city staff members say the water amusement proposal is significantly different from the modest entertainment area envisioned for Lion Country, which formerly was a wild animal park. The staff members say a new permit review would allow them to evaluate aircraft hazards (the park is near the El Toro Marine Corps base), potential transportation problems and other issues.

At the Aug. 20 council meeting, a spokesman for American Sports World said construction of rides must begin by Sept. 15 in order to open by next summer. An additional delay would upset the financing plan and force the company to look for a new water park site, the American Sports World spokesman said.

Council members postponed action until tonight, saying they wanted to review similar water parks and the Lion Country grounds. The council members also asked the city staff to clarify several technical issues in connection with the water park proposal before today's meeting.

The council meets at 6:30 p.m. at Irvine City Hall.

Petition drive under way to expedite Mesa marina

By TONY SAAVEDRA
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two Costa Mesas are circulating petitions to drum up county-wide support for a plan to build a 3,000-slip marina in the landlocked city.

Real estate financing consultants Thomas Testa and Diane Ramirez co-founded the Costa Mesa/Newport

Marina Organizational Committee three weeks ago.

They hope to send a petition with 27,500 signatures from Orange County residents to federal legislators, who will be deciding the fate of Costa Mesa's passage to the sea.

City Councilman Donn Hall made a Capitol Hill plea in March for Congress to waive federal policy preventing local governments and businesses from paying for a $250,000 study required for the project.

The necessary feasibility report, to be compiled by the Army Corps of Engineers, has repeatedly held up the project.

Interior chief reportedly ready to order only N. California tracts for exploration

From staff and wire reports

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and members of California's congressional delegation returned to the bargaining table today in an attempt to modify a tentative agreement to limit oil exploration off the California coast.

The meeting was scheduled amid reports that Hodel wants to scrap the present agreement and was eyeing only Northern California oil tracts for exploration.

Hodel said during a tour of California last week that it appeared the negotiators had selected "the wrong 150 tracts" to open for offshore drilling when the agreement was announced July 16.

He complained that "these tracts have very little potential" for yielding oil or gas, and said later that "it's clear this (agreement) is not in the national interest."

Area defense contractor guilty of fraud

16 charges dropped in exchange for his guilty plea on three

An Irvine defense contractor pleaded guilty Monday to charges that he defrauded the federal government by submitting false bills for contracts.

Thomas E. Snooks, owner of Systems Engineering Technology Associates Corp. and SETAC Corp., pleaded guilty in federal court to two counts of mail fraud and one count of making false statements to the government.

In exchange for his plea, federal prosecutors agreed to drop 16 other charges stemming from the operation of his companies.

The 47-year-old San Clemente resident agreed to pay $186,000 in restitution to the government. Snooks is free on $10,000 bail and is scheduled for an Oct. 21 sentencing. He faces a maximum of 15 years in prison and a $12,000 fine.

The mail fraud counts concern $53,000 in extra billings to the government on a defense contract. The costs, however, were incurred on an earlier project, according to a grand jury indictment last June.

Following the June 6 indictment, U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner issued a warning to other defense contractors, calling cheating the government "morally equivalent to thievery from the American taxpayers."

While Snooks awaits sentencing, his companies may be purchased by a Newport Beach firm anxious to obtain its engineers and defense contracts.

Sandy Sandhu, president of SRS Technologies, announced last week that the purchase depends on the outcome of the federal case and a final audit of the companies.

Currently Snooks' companies are suspended from acquiring further contracts from the U.S. Department of Defense. Sandhu said SRS will try to have that ban lifted.

Both SRS and SETAC are involved with the Defense Department and aerospace programs such as the Strategic Defense Initiative — often referred to as the Star Wars program — and the NASA Space Station.

Broken neck suit goes to Newport claims adjuster

$5 million sought for diving injury to Alta Loma man

By SUSAN HOWLETT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A $5 million lawsuit filed against the city of Newport Beach by a Alta Loma man who broke his neck after diving into the surf a year ago was turned over to the claims adjuster by the City Council Monday.

The suit, filed in Orange County Superior Court on Aug. 28, 1984, seeks damages for William Burton Judd, 26. Judd has returned to the Palm Springs police force after recovering from the Balboa accident, according to his attorney, Jim Hawkins.

The claim was routinely denied Jan. 14 by the council. It now goes to the city's claims adjuster for consideration, according to Newport Beach City Clerk Wanda Raggo.

Judd was visiting the beach at 15th Street in August 1984 when he reportedly dived into the ocean and struck his head on a sandbar. Hawkins said Hawkins said Judd underwent two surgeries following the incident.

"We're just lucky he wasn't paralyzed," Hawkins said.

The suit contends the city failed to warn swimmers of possible dangerous conditions beneath the water. It states that the beach was in "a dangerous and defective condition," and that the city was aware of hazard.

The Judd case follows other similar claims against the city for alleged negligence regarding beach dangers.

John Taylor, a quadriplegic confined to a wheelchair since his April 1980 swimming accident, sued the city claiming it negligently failed to

Plans have no room for the inn

Irvine Co. development squeezing out roadside landmark — the Orange Inn

The sun may finally be setting on the Orange Inn, the weathered but beautiful roadside restaurant that stands wedged between Corona del Mar and Laguna Beach on Pacific Coast Highway.

Modern times and the press of development seem to be fast catching up with the inn, one of the Orange Coast's last visible reminders of Depression-era California.

For the past four years, owner John Bodrero has operated the inn famous for its hand-squeezed juices and fruit shakes on a month-to-month lease from The Irvine Co.

And for at least as long, company officials have warned Bodrero of impending development along the still pristine hills that now give motorists a nature break between Corona del Mar's bustling shopping district and downtown Laguna Beach.

But Bodrero is attached to the inn which he operates with his wife and their two oldest children. And he has clung to it despite its slow deterioration and the telltale signs that have foretold the inevitable development of the countryside where deer and coyote now roam.

But finally, it seems, after many false starts The Irvine Co. is ready to build out its remaining slice of the coast.

"Things are beginning to hop down there," Irvine Co. spokesman Jerry Collins confirmed. "The county and the Coastal Commission have approved a plan for the Irvine Coast which doesn't make practical provisions for the Orange Inn," he said.

Bodrero says Irvine Co. officials have told him he will have to move by March 1986 to make way for construction of Pelican Hill Road which will connect with Coast Highway and lead to a neighborhood of pricey homes, a resort hotel and other visitor-serving businesses.

The Irvine Co. has offered to give Bodrero the white board and batten structure with orange trim if he can find a new home for it.

But Bodrero and his wife Kathy say they hope to convince the Irvine Co. to keep the 54-year-old inn because of its historical significance and the affection local residents have for it.

Thousands of patrons have signed petitions over the years asking that the inn be saved. Kathy Bodrero said.

The Bodreros like the picturesque old-time atmosphere of the inn, with its informal — mostly outdoor — seating and eclectic garden overlooking the Pacific Ocean and the rolling Irvine Coast hills.

Phost lost everything he owned including special eating utensils and vehicles, according to Harry Huggins, a Red Cross spokesman.

"He has special needs and he lost everything," said Huggins, who said Phost and a family residing at the apartments have been provided with lodging at a local motel. Shaw was taken in by friends, he said.

The fire at the Flagstone apartments broke out about 4:21 p.m. and was brought under control within 36 minutes, Kerr said. Forty firefighters responded.

Earlier Monday, a small but stubborn chemical fire erupted in a science laboratory at Corona del Mar High School but caused only $500 in damage, according to Newport Beach Fire spokesman Russ Cheek.

He said the 3:42 p.m. fire was handled with extreme caution before it involved several volatile chemicals, including sodium and phosphorus that can ignite spontaneously when exposed to oxygen. Sodium can explode if it comes in contact with water, Cheek said.

High school science teacher Ron Schnitger suited up in a special hazardous materials jumpsuit and helped city firefighters battle the blaze, Cheek said.

"He knew what was there and how to handle it," Cheek said. "As far as fires go, it wasn't bad. But because of the chemicals, it handled to be handled carefully."

The third fire erupted shortly before 6 a.m. today at the New Breed apartment complex in Costa Mesa at 393 Hamilton. Firefighters reported that the blaze was extinguished at 6:40 a.m. Nobody was injured.

Jewish jurors screened in neo-Nazi trial

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal judge apologized to potential jurors in the racketeering trial of a white supremacist group, saying he was forced by the nature of the case to ask whether any of the candidates were Jewish.

U.S. District Judge Walter McGovern also had to deal Monday with the threat that his first panel of about 60 potential jurors might have to be replaced because they saw one of the defendants wearing jail clothing in court.

McGovern was trying to seat a 12-member jury and three alternates to hear the trial of 10 men and one woman charged with racketeering in the case of The Order. They are accused of attempting to overthrow the U.S. government and finance their efforts through armored car and bank robberies.

They also are accused of committing two murders in support of their alleged racist, anti-semitic views.

Eight potential jurors were dismissed Monday when they said they felt they could not be impartial. Jury selection was to continue today.

Among other things, McGovern asked the potential jurors about their military service and whether they or anyone they knew had been a member of such groups as the Ku Klux Klan, Posse Comitatus or any group

"promoting the Aryan race."

At one point, he apologized to jurors and said, "Because of the nature of the case, I have to ask you a question that I assure you I ordinarily would not do." He then asked if any of the potential jurors were Jews.

Only one person raised her hand and she assured McGovern she could be impartial if it is shown that some defendants held Nazi sentiments.

When McGovern asked if prospective jurors thought they could not remain impartial if it were shown that some defendants believe the mass extermination of millions of Jews never occurred, several raised their hands.

Jury selection was delayed temporarily Monday after defense attorney Douglas Smith objected to his client, Randall Paul Evans, appearing in court in jail-issue orange coveralls and said he had been denied regular clothing.

Smith said he and his client wanted to dismiss the first group of potential jurors because they had seen Evans in jail clothing, McGovern refused.

Evans and defendant Bruce Carroll Pierce, who also was dressed in orange coveralls, were then allowed to change into civilian clothes.

Another defendant, Gary Lee Yarborough, remained in neat, gray jail coveralls.

The trial stems from a federal grand jury indictment handed down in April that accused 23 people of running a nationwide crime network responsible for crimes that included armored car robberies, murders and arson.

Standing trial in addition to Yarborough, Pierce and Evans are Andrew Virgil Barnhill, Thomas Bentley, Jean Margaret Craig, Randolph George Duey, Richard Harold Kemp, David Eden Lane, Ardie McBrearty and Frank Lee Silva.

Ten others pleaded guilty previously.

Another of those indicted, David Tate, faces trial in Missouri on charges of killing a state trooper, while the 23rd defendant, Richard Scutari, is the lone suspect still at large.

The defendants are charged under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. A RICO conviction carries a maximum penalty of 25 years in prison and a $25,000 fine. It also allows prosecutors to seek forfeiture of all the assets used by the criminal group.

Pentagon tells of five arms deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon told Congress on Monday it has tentatively approved five arms deals with four countries, including two contracts with Pakistan described as a response to the Soviet occupation of neighboring Afghanistan.

Assuming there are no congressional objections, the Pentagon said it would offer Pakistan 88 self-propelled howitzers and 50-caliber machine guns for $78 million, and 110 armored personnel carriers equipped with machine guns for $25 million.

"The sales will contribute to the foreign policy objectives of the United States by enabling Pakistan to increase its capability to provide for its own security and defense, particularly in view of the increased threat resulting from the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan," the Pentagon said.

DIVING LAWSUIT IN NEWPORT...

place signs warning of hazardous offshore conditions.

The former surfer suffered a midcervical fracture of his spine when he jogged into the ocean and dived into an incoming swell, hitting an underwater sandbar.

A jury awarded Taylor $6 million to cover his future medical expenses.
The judgment was the largest ever levied against the beach city.

Jurors in the case agreed that the city was aware that offshore conditions made swimming and diving dangerous in the area, but took no precautions to warn beachgoers.

But the city contended that it would be impossible to warn people of all the conditions along the beach that could lead to injury. It is appealing the decision.

Another lawsuit, filed Dec. 31 on behalf of a Claremont teen-ager, sought $10 million in damages.
Edward Tessier became paralyzed after diving into the ocean off a Balboa beach in the summer of 1984.

Because of the number of beach-related personal injury claims filed against coastal cities, officials are looking into legislation to protect them against costly lawsuits.

State Sen. Marian Bergeson, R-Newport Beach, has drafted legislation that would exempt beach cities from responsibility in surf accidents.

City officials claim that they may have to close beaches to the public or charge much higher fees for beach use to cover insurance costs if such a legislation is not implemented.

PETITIONERS SEEKING MARINA...

26-year-old marina plan because the corps would only accept federal funds.

Since Congress has routinely denied Costa Mesa's funding request, the city offered to raise the money through private and public donations from local governments and area businesses.

Hall testified in Washington, D.C. last spring for the second time in two years before congressional subcommittees on waterways and navigation.
But he won't know if that trip was successful until Congress unveils its budget proposals next month.

Hall is hoping the marina, which would run along the east bank of the Santa Ana River through Newport Beach, will be included, either by appropriating the money or allowing the city to begin its fund-raising campaign.

Testa and Ramirez are attempting to sway local representatives by showing county-wide support for the estimated $100 million marina through the wetlands of Costa Mesa.

"Some friends of my family are waiting two to three years for boat slips and the prices are going through the roof," said Testa, 30, an avid boater. His father, who lives in Huntington Harbour, operated a boat dealership for 10 years.

Testa said part of the problem is that many waterfront communities restrict residents from renting their private docks to outsiders. He estimated at least 5,000 new slips are needed to accommodate boating enthusiasts who live inland.

"There's probably someone in Yorba Linda who has a 30-foot yacht or something but doesn't have anywhere to dock it," Testa said. "This would even affect boaters living in Riverside."

Additionally, he said the waterway would not just benefit surrounding properties and businesses, but would strengthen the marine industry in Orange County.

Testa also reasoned that the increased tourist traffic heading to the proposed marina would generate more business for merchants along the county's major thoroughfares.

Testa and Ramirez both live in a tract near the northern end of the future marina. He conceded the project would boost property values there and within 10 miles of the proposed waterway.

An economic study commissioned by the city last March concluded the marina would also generate up to $18.5 million in state and local tax revenue during the first 10 years.

The report, by Los Angeles-based Keyser Marston Associates Inc., added the project would spur housing development in nearby areas and provide jobs for more than 11,000 construction workers and commercial employees.

"As far as county-wide benefits, we're just setting the stage," Testa said.

He and Ramirez donated $300 apiece to get the committee off the ground and are now enlisting volunteers to take petitions to businesses, supermarkets, swap meets and residents.

OIL AGREEMENT UNRAVELING...

From A1
Interior Department spokesman David Prospero sidestepped reporters' questions Monday about whether the deal was dead. But an environmentalist leader, Karl Wendelowski, executive director of Friends of the Earth, said the agreement seems to be unraveling.

Under the agreement, 150 separate 9-square-mile tracts, would be offered for oil and gas exploration off the California coast, including six off the Orange Coast. In exchange, a congressional moratorium on exploratory drilling of the state's remaining 6,310 undeveloped offshore tracts would be extended until the year 2000.

One newspaper, quoting Hodel aides who did not identify, said today that Hodel has drawn up a new list of 150 potential tracts that includes only 14 originally included in his compromise with California's congressional delegation.

Hodel's aides refused to specify the location of the tracts he wants, but said they believe there is good energy potential off the shores of Santa Cruz, Point Arena and Bodega Bay. Those areas, all north of Big Sur, were not proposed for leasing under the original compromise.

Wendelowski, who conferred with Hodel on Monday along with Louise Dunlap, president of the Environmental Policy Institute, said the interior secretary left him with the impression that he would inform the California legislators today that "the whole situation was deteriorating."

Wendelowski said Hodel "seems to be backing away from even describing the agreement as an agreement," and that "the agreement everyone assumed was negotiated in good faith wasn't."

Prospero told reporters that Hodel "wants to continue negotiations as the best way to resolve the issue of offshore drilling in California," recognizing that the 150 tracts involved in the July 16 agreement constituted

"the best political agreement he could get."

Hodel asked for today's meeting in a letter to all 45 California Representatives plus the state's two senators.

Barry Toiv, a spokesman for Rep.
Leon Panetta, D-Calif., the delegation's chief negotiator, said last week that "minor changes will be considered" in the July 16 agreement but that "major changes will not be."

The current moratorium banning new oil and gas exploration in offshore California tracts expires Sept. 30. Congress has prohibited exploratory drilling off most of the California coast for the past four years for fear of environmental damage.

Toiv said that if the latest round of negotiations between Hodel and the California legislators breaks down, Panetta's group would try to extend the drilling ban for another year, or else turn the July 16 agreement into permanent legislation.

FREEWAY...

From A1
the freeway could be used exclusively for high occupancy vehicles, a carpooling move similar to the "diamond lanes" of the mid-1970s, according to Caltrans.

Orange County cities affected by the widening are Costa Mesa, Fountain Valley, Garden Grove, Huntington Beach, Irvine, Newport Beach and Westminster.

Plans for the project will be displayed one hour before tonight's hearing.
