ADVERTISEMENTS.

MUTUAL ASSURANCE WITH MODERATE PREMIUMS.

THE SCOTTISH PROVIDENT INSTITUTION, 6 ST ANDREW SQUARE, EDINBURGH.

THE TERMS of this Society secure, as compared with those of other Offices, a larger original Assurance for the same Premium, and eventually, to good lives, as large Additions as where the ordinary high rates are charged.

A Policy for £1200 to £1250 (with right to Whole Profits) may, at most insuring ages, be had for the Premium elsewhere charged to assure £1000 only.

Policies originally for £1000 have already, under the peculiar system of the Society, been increased to £1300, £1500, and even to £1700, to be further increased (in the case of those which may then subsist) at the division of the Profits to be made at the close of the present year.

Examples of Annual Premium for Assurance of £100 at Death, with Right to Whole Profits—

Age, . . . . .	25	30	35	40	45	50
Payable during life	£1 18 0	£2 1 6*	£2 6 10	£2 14 9	£3 5 9	£4 1 7
Limited to 21 Payments	£2 12 6	£2 15 4*	£3 0 2	£3 7 5	£3 17 6	£4 12 1

* Thus a person of 30 may secure £1000 at death for a yearly premium of £20 15s, which in the other Scottish Mutual Offices would assure £800 only.

Or, if unwilling to burden himself with payments during the whole of his life, he may secure a Policy for £1000 for a Premium of £27 13s 4d, limited to twenty-one payments, being thus relieved of payment before he has passed the prime of life, for a Premium nearly the same as most Offices require during the whole term of life.

☞ Tables of Premiums payable for 21 years, or other fixed period, may be had on application.

Above 15,000 Policies issued. Subsisting Assurances, upwards of 5 Millions. Annual Revenue, £200,000. Accumulated Fund, arising entirely from Premiums, considerably above a Million.

Reports and every information may be had on application.

IN soliciting the patronage of the public in behalf of a second Issue of his Parochial Directory of Fife and Kinross, the Publisher admits that, notwithstanding the great amount of care and expense he has incurred to make it as accurate as possible, it is still imperfect. Errors both of omission and commission have occurred in spite of every care; and changes arising from deaths and removals since the various proof sheets were revised for the press, are of course inevitable and common to every Directory. Still, he is confident, it will be found generally accurate, and will, in that respect, bear comparison with any work of a similar nature.

One important difference between the first and the present issue is that the Historical and Topographical Notes prefixed to each Parochial Division of the first impression are not reprinted in the present volume. No doubt these notes were, to many, the most attractive feature of the work, but as they added considerably to the cost, without materially adding to its value as a Directory, it has been deemed advisable to omit these notes in this edition. Subscribers, however, can be supplied with a copy of the first issue, at a nominal charge, until it be exhausted.

Strangers using the Directory are recommended to do so in connection with the beautifully and carefully prepared map, drawn and engraved by Messrs W. & A. K. Johnston, of Edinburgh, expressly for the work. In many districts, important towns and villages will be found connected with more than one parish, and as the various parishes are distinctly marked in different colours, those who may require to use it in despatching circulars, &c., will find that the Map taken in connection with the Directory, is essential to its proper use and completeness.

With a few exceptions the Parochial divisions of the two Counties have been strictly adhered to. The exceptions are those of parties who, while resident on the border of one Parish, have very intimate relations with the adjoining one ; these will be found under both parishes.

DESCRIPTION AND EARLY HISTORY.

FIFE is an extensive and important County on the eastern side of Scotland. It is in the form of a peninsula, having the waters of the Firth of Forth on the south, the German Ocean on the east, and on the north the Tay, which separates it from Forfarshire; on the west it is bounded in a very irregular manner by Kinross-shire, Clackmannanshire, and parts of Perthshire. Its greatest length from east to west is about 43 miles, and its greatest breadth 21 miles. Its total area is estimated by various writers at from about 298,000, to 322,000 acres, of which fully three-fourths are under cultivation. The County lies between  $56^{\circ} 3'$  and  $56^{\circ} 25'$ , north latitude. At an early period the district of Fife, including Kinross-shire, Clackmannanshire, parts of Perthshire, and perhaps part of Stirlingshire, was designated Ross, a term signifying a peninsula, and seems to have been under one jurisdiction. Different events conspired to break up this ample territory into, at least, three distinct counties. The small shire of Clackmannan was first separated, and about the year 1426, another portion was cut off, and entitled Kinross, a name importing the head of the peninsula. It has been well remarked, "That such changes have had no effect in retarding the prosperity of the County, although a better division might easily have been made." From its compact nature and partial independence of support from without, it was the custom to designate it the "Kingdom of Fife," a popular phrase still retained. The ancient history of Fife, as of the other portions of Scotland, is wrapt in obscurity, and almost all we learn from Tacitus and other Roman authors is, "that the original inhabitants of the district of Ross, of which Fife forms the eastern part, were named the Horestii, a Celtic tribe." It is said that they had no towns in Fife, but had numerous hill forts all over the county, the remains of which are still to be traced on the hills of Dunearn, Carnock, Craigluscar, and Saline; also, in the Ochils in the parishes of Strathmiglo and Newburgh. Evidence of the struggles of these early Celts with their Roman invaders, is to be found in the circumstance that, in these forts, both British and Roman remains have been discovered, proving that the strongholds of the Horestii had been captured by the Romans, and afterwards used by them for the purpose of safety and defence. Little is known of the history of the district after the invasions of the Romans, further than that the Picts are next heard of as the inhabitants of Fife, who, towards the close of the 9th century, finally submitted to the King of the Scots; after which we read of the Danish invasions, from which the district often suffered severely. The most insular portion of Fife, between the northern and southern divisions of the Kingdom, was of great advantage to the County, by placing it beyond the general sphere of Highland and Border warfare, by which it escaped many of the troubles which long vexed other portions of the country, and was thus enabled, at a much earlier period than other districts, to cultivate the arts of peace. It is known that for some time prior to the 11th century, the County was, in a great measure, either the property or under the potent jurisdiction of a line of Thanes, or Earls, of the name of M'Duff, who, from the middle of the eleventh century to the forfeiture of the family in 1424, were among the most influential of the Scottish Peerage. The chief residences of the Earls of Fife were at Cupar and Falkland, it being on the forfeiture of Murdoch, Duke of Albany, and confiscation of his estates to the Crown, that the Palace of Falkland became the property and residence of the Scottish Sovereigns. From various concurring evidences in history, we learn that the Peninsula of Fife was originally almost an entire forest full of swamps, as indeed was nearly all the rest of Scotland. While in the condition of a forest, it was the haunt of wild beasts, and especially boars of a large size, and it is understood that such creatures, as well as the larger animals of the chase, were not extirpated until after the reign of James V., who, like his predecessors, made Fife the scene of his hunting expeditions, while residing at the Royal residence of Falkland. It is long, however, since Fife was freed from all such characteristics of a rude country.

Fife has always occupied a prominent place in the History of Scotland. Though this prominence may be owing, in some degree, to the circumstance that both a Royal residence and the ecclesiastical capital of the Kingdom were in the County, still much is owing to that energy and enterprise which for centuries have characterized the native inhabitants, who have ever proved themselves equally ready to defend or forward the best interests of their country; and in all the contests of the people for the maintenance of their civil and religious liberties, we find the "men of Fife" at their posts, and distinguishing themselves either as soldiers in the field or councillors in the cabinet. At the Reformation, the County was ever foremost in those struggles which ended in the overthrow of Popery, and in the complete ascendancy of Protestant principles.

The peninsula of Fife exhibits in its surface a series of vales, stretching from east to west, parallel with the sea on each side, and of greater and less dimensions. These vales, which in some places are not so distinct as in others, are the basins of various small streams, which are either poured into the Firth of Forth or St Andrews Bay. Fife has a bleak hilly appearance when viewed from the Edinburgh side of the Forth; but no sooner is the summit of the first rising ground reached, in penetrating into the interior, than the scene is agreeably changed, and the tourist successively delighted with the view of these consecutive vales, consisting of finely cultivated braes waving downwards to the brooks in their lower parts, and diminishing in acclivity as they approach their eastern termination. The vales of the Orr and the Leven being passed, the traveller is ushered into the wide and extensive vale of the Eden, or "Howe of Fife;" through which glides, with noiseless current, the stream which gives its name to the central valley of the county. Further north the land is again hilly, though for the most part in a high state of cultivation, declining with rather a quick descent to the Firth of Tay.

AGRICULTURE, SOIL, TRADE, MINERALS, &c.

In the County are four kinds of soil, differing in quality, and generally occupying distinct tracts of country. Along the banks of the Forth, the soil is for the most part of an excellent quality, being deep rich loam on good clay, and gravel mixed with loamy earth. Northwards from the lines which bound this territory to the base of the hills on the south side of the Howe of Fife, to the western parts of the county, the soil is in general inferior; being cold, poor, and wet clay, with mossy and stony land. The Howe of Fife consists of loam, partly deep and moist, and partly light and dry, with a proportion of moor and moss, with better land at the lower end of the strath. In the hilly ground from the Howe to the Tay, the soil is in general good, having much rich loam, clay, and gravel. Of course by the constant operation of improvements, these primitive properties of the soil are in all cases, to a greater or less extent, modified, improved, or altered; and to such an extent has the practice of draining and trenching been carried on, and of applying manure, lime, guano, and other patent fertilizers to the soil, that during the last sixty years the change in the appearance of the County is almost miraculous. Land that sixty years ago was not considered fit for cultivation, now yields heavy crops, and is rented at sums that formerly would have been considered fabulous for the best land in the district.

In Minerals, the County possesses extensive fields of coal, limestone, and ironstone; and for building and other purposes, the supply of both whinstone and freestone is inexhaustible, extensive quarries of the latter being wrought in the parishes of Cupar, Kemback, St Andrews, &c., sufficient not only for the wants of the several districts, but for transmission by railway to distant parts. There are also large beds of alluvial clay in almost all the districts of the County, and extensive brick and tile works are in full operation in almost every district.

For many years various branches of the linen manufacture have been extensively carried on in Fife, its chief seats being the centre and western parts of the County. At present while the weaving of linen by hand-loom may be said to be in a state of decay, manufacturing by steam power is acquiring great impetus by the erection of additional steam factories at Kirkealdy, Cupar, Ladybank, Freuchie, Auchtermuchty, Ferry-Port-on-Craig, &c. The manufacture of woollen and cotton goods in the County is very limited, linen forming the great manufacturing staple of Fife.

HILLS, RIVERS, AND RAILWAYS.

The principal Hills in Fife are the West Lomond, 1500 feet high; the East Lomond, 1471 feet; Largo Law, 1020 feet; and Kelly Law, 800 feet. There are only two streams entitled to the appellation of Rivers that run through the interior of the County—the Eden and the Leven—both of which are fine fishing streams, containing abundance of trout, and some salmon. Within the last 19 years, the Railway system has been extended over almost every district of the County. The North British, with the Boats on the Ferries at Burntisland and Tayport, connects the County with the Shires of Mid-Lothian, Perth, and Forfar; the Dunfermline and Stirling connects the County of Fife with Clackmannan and Stirlingshires; the Fife and Kinross and the Kinross-shire Railways connect the County with Kinross-shire; at the Ladybank and Cowdenbeath Junctions; while the St Andrews, Leven, and East of Fife branch lines connect their several districts with the main line; the whole forming a system of internal communication inferior to few counties in the Kingdom.

SOCIAL AND INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS.

During the last fifty years no County has made greater social and intellectual progress than has been attained by Fife; and perhaps nothing gives that progress so much prominence as the magnitude attained by the Newspaper Press connected with the County. Previous to 1822, there was no Newspaper published in Fife, and the practice was to advertise county and other public meetings in an Edinburgh Newspaper, and a few hundreds would probably cover the sum total of every Newspaper that found an entrance into the County. At present, Fife can boast of nine weekly Newspapers, having a total circulation of above 25,000; nor is this all, for the circulation of Edinburgh and other Newspapers, not connected with the County, is at present ten times more than it was when no native broad sheet existed. All this without taking into account the immense circulation of periodicals and books of every shape and size, which forty years ago had no existence, exhibits an intellectual progress which penetrates to all classes of society, and exerts an educational influence unequalled in any country or in any age of the world.

PARISH OF ABBOTSHALL.

THIS PARISH is situated on the southern boundary of the County. It is bounded on the south by the Firth of Forth and Kinghorn; on the east by Kirkcaldy; on the north by Auchterderran; and on the west by Auchterderran and Auchtertool.

PARISHES OF ST ANDREWS AND ST LEONARDS.

THIS PARISH, containing the Burgh of its own name, and the villages of Strathkinness, Kincahle, Grange, Boarhills, and part of Denhead, is on the east coast of the County. It is bounded by the Eden and Bay of St Andrews on the north; by the Bay of St Andrews, Kingsbarns, and St Leonards on the east; by Dunino, Cameron, and Ceres on the south; and by Kemback and Leuchars on the west.

ST LEONARDS is a small Parish lying partly embosomed in that of St Andrews, and is indentified with it, and with the city in most of its interests. It consists of several detached portions in and around the city, and of three farms on the east boundary of St Andrews Parish, surrounded by the Parishes of St Andrews, Kingsbarns, Crail, and Dunino. The two Parishes being so thoroughly connected, we have entered both in one list. The addresses belonging to St Leonards number only about 20.

POST OFFICE, New Town Hall, South Street, St Andrews, George Murray, Post Master, with sub-offices at Strathkinness, Denhead, and Boarhills.—Letters from Dundee, Edinburgh, Cupar, &c., arrive about 9.25 A. M., and 8 P. M., and from London

KINROSS-SHIRE.

KINROSS is a small inland County situated at the western extremity of Fife, from which it was disjoined in 1426. It contains the smallest number of inhabitants of any county in Scotland. It is bounded by Perthshire on its north and west sides, and by Fifeshire on the south and east borders. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing "the head of the peninsula." Its length, from Auchmoor Bridge on the east, to the river Devon on the west, is twelve and a half miles, and its breadth, from Damhead on the north, to Kelty Bridge on the south, is nine and a half miles. Its area is about seventy square miles, or 45,000 imperial acres. The County is nearly begirt by hills, with intervening valleys between the several ranges. On the north and east are the Ochils and Lomonds, with the valley leading to Auchtermuchty between them. On the south is Benarty, cut off from the Lomonds by the pass traversed by the Leven. On the south are the Cleish Hills, between which and Benarty is a level opening traversed by the great north road; and there is a more extensive opening on the west, between the Cleish Hills and the Ochils. The central part of the County is partly occupied by Loch Leven, and partly by a level tract called the "Laigh" of Kinross, and chiefly comprised in that parish. The general configuration of the land may be regarded as simply a variety of braes and slopes, declining down from the hills to the central region. The whole face of the County, though wanting in the best features of landscape, has a rich appearance, both natural and artificial, and presents some charming landscape scenery; the chief of which is a view of Loch Leven from the rising ground on the eastern boundary. The northern part is drained by the Farg, and by the head streams of the Eden; a small portion on the west by the Devon; all the central parts by the North and South Quiech, and the Gairney, which all fall into Loch Leven; and on the southern border by the Kelty, a head stream of the Orr.

In the entire County there are only the towns of Kinross and Milnathort, and the villages of Maryburgh, Scotland Well, Kinnesswood, Middleton, Crook-of-Devon, and Duncrivie, and parts of Damhead and Kelty. Kinross is the only Burgh within the County, having lately adopted several clauses of the Police and General Improvement (Scotland) Act, and it unites with Clackmannanshire in returning a Member to Parliament. The County comprises only four complete parochial divisions, and parts of three other parishes, and is joined with Clackmannanshire and Linlithgowshire under one Sheriff-Depute; but there is a resident Sheriff-Substitute at Kinross, where the Sheriff Courts are held weekly.

PARISH OF ARNGASK (See Arngask, Fifeshire.)

PARISH OF CLEISH.

THIS PARISH, containing the hamlet of its own name, and the villages of Maryburgh and Kelty proper, is in the south part of the County. It is bounded on the south by the parishes of Dunfermline and Beath; on the west by Dunfermline and the Perthshire division of Fossoway; on the north by Fossoway and Kinross; and on the east by Portmoak and Ballingry.

For Postal arrangements see Kinross.

PROGRESS OF THE COMPANY.

Fire Department.

IN this branch of the Company's Business the Revenue has increased upwards of 50 per cent. during the last seven years, and now amounts to £56,000.

The REVENUE of the Company from all sources is now £205,000, and has been derived from Business transacted in the United Kingdom alone—the Company not having any Foreign Agencies. When this fact is kept in view, as well as the active competition existing among Insurance Companies, it cannot but be regarded as very satisfactory that this Company has not only maintained, but has largely increased its Business and Revenue during the past year.

Prospectuses and all other information may be had on application at the Head Office, or at any of the Co.'s Agents.

THE DUNDEE ADVERTISER,

Published Daily, Price 1d, and Semi-Weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays, Price 2d,

Is an old-established Liberal Newspaper, which has been repeatedly enlarged of late years, in consequence of the favour in which its large circulation and local influence have caused it to be held as an Advertising medium, and of the efforts made to render it complete in all departments as a business, political, literary, and family Journal. It pays great attention to the linen trade, its reports and general statistics on which are alike full and impartial. On public questions its tone is fearlessly independent. Its news is compiled with a view to family interest, and literary notices and communications pleasingly vary its columns.

Orders and advertisements to be addressed to JOHN LENG, Advertiser Office, Dundee.

THE PEOPLE'S JOURNAL,

PRICE ONE PENNY,

Established January, 1858,

Has (at the date of this advertisement, July, 1866,) reached the surprising Circulation of upwards of

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVEN THOUSAND COPIES WEEKLY,

The Largest Circulation in Scotland, and of any Paper published out of London. It excels in the completeness of its Local News, the careful selection and arrangement of its General Intelligence, the interesting character of its Original Articles, Sketches, Stories, Poetry, and Correspondence, and specially in its adaptation to the tastes and requirements of the people.

Agencies for the People's Journal have been established in almost every town and village in Scotland, and also in many of the large towns in England; and this, coupled with its immense Circulation, makes it an unequalled medium both for Local and General Advertisements.

Published every Saturday morning by JOHN LENG, Bank Street, Dundee; A. WESTWOOD, Cross, Cupar; and WM. LINDSAY, 30 Market Street, Aberdeen.
