ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The existence and success of the vegetable variety trial program conducted at Auburn University is initially due to the commitment of the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station (AAES) administration. The authors wish to thank the superintendents and the farm crews of the AAES Research and Extension Centers, Horticulture Stations, Research Stations, and Experiment Fields for their commitment, day-to-day support, and dedication to this program over the past five years. The active support of the seed industry is also gratefully acknowledged.

INTRODUCTION

Successful vegetable production begins with the choice of a good variety. Although this choice is mainly made by producers and sometimes by produce buyers or processors, the choice of a variety affects the entire production of that vegetable, from seeding or transplanting in the field to retail sale.

The main objective of a vegetable variety trial program is to provide commercial vegetable growers, county Extension personnel, Extension specialists, and backyard gardeners with practical information on variety characteristics and performance under the growing conditions of Alabama. Another objective of a vegetable variety trial program is to take an active part in testing promising advanced breeding lines developed by seed companies and public breeding programs.

The purpose of this publication is to summarize five years of vegetable variety trials (1994-1998). Because Alabama has a wide range of growing conditions, this publication has relevance beyond the boundaries of Alabama and is designed to be used as a reference on the main vegetable varieties growing in the southeastern United States.

In this publication vegetable crops are listed alphabetically. For each vegetable crop, the botanical classification and horticultural characteristics from seed catalogues and from field observation are presented.

Each variety has been rated on a 0- to 4-star scale (Table 1). Because several attributes are important in selecting a vegetable variety, the rating combines the yield potential, the claimed disease resistance/tolerance, the horticultural type, and other relevant observations. This rating was developed under set circumstances, and variety performance may vary under different growing conditions. Therefore, it is always recommended to pre-select a variety for commercial production by planting a small acreage of a limited number of potentially adapted varieties. Buyers should also be familiar with the selected variety.

Some known seed sources are also listed, but vegetable varieties may also be available from other sources. Detailed information on cultural practices and grading guides can be found in previous variety trial reports (see references).

Because new vegetable varieties are continuously developed, variety evaluation is a continuous process. Updated information may be found at <http://www.ag.auburn.edu/dept/hf/faculty/esimonne>.

ARTICHOKEHelianthus tuberosus* L.

Family: Compositae

Harvestable plant part: modified stem and leaves

Typical days to maturity: perennial (90 days)

Main production challenges in Alabama: no commercial production

ASPARAGUSAsparagus officinalis* L.

Family: Liliaceae

Harvestable plant part: stem

Observed days to maturity: perennial

Main production challenges in Alabama: weeds

Ready for harvest: when stems are 12 to 14 inches, and before branching

Typical harvest schedule: two to three times per week for three to four weeks

SNAP BEANPhaseolus vulgaris* L.

Family: Leguminosae

Harvestable plant part: pods with immature seed

Observed days to maturity: 52 to 60 days (spring production)

Main production challenges in Alabama: Fusarium root rot, Rhizoctonia root rot, Pythium root rot, root knot nematode, mosaic viruses

SMALL MELONS

CANTALOUPE (MUSKMELON) – Cucumis melo L. Reticulatus groupHONEY DEW – Cucumis melo L. Inodorus group

Family: Cucurbitaceae

Harvestable plant part: mature fruit

Observed days to maturity: 60 to 71 days (spring production, from seeds)

Main production challenges in Alabama: Fusarium wilt, powdery and downy mildew, bacterial wilt

Ready for harvest: cantaloupe—one-third to one-half slip; honey dew—yellowish color, loss of pubescence on fruit (will not slip even when mature); French charentais—yellowish color (will not slip even when mature), fruit blossom-end softens

Typical harvest schedule: four to five harvests over two weeks
