in the news briefly

A demand for information issued by the Iowa attorney general's office has been served to the President of National Research Systems, Inc. (NRS), Burce B. Burke, by the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

Julian Garrett, head of the attorney general's consumer protection division, said the demand requests NRS to release to his office information regarding employees and customers of the firm.

The information requested is essentially the same as that earlier requested in a subpoena, but was never delivered to an assistant attorney general because he failed to appear at a scheduled meeting with Burke.

Garrett declined to state what action he will take if NRS does not respond to the demand. However, a ruling by District Court Judge William Eads following a Nov. 7 hearing stated an injunction could be issued against the firm if such a demand were not answered.

The Clinton Street Dormitory Association is sponsoring a raffle, with a color TV as the prize. Tickets will be sold in the Burge Hall Lounge from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. today, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, Nov. 30. Drawing for the winning raffle ticket will be at 4 p.m. Friday.

Proceeds from the sale of raffle tickets will be equally split among the four east side dormitories. The money will then be used by each residence hall for educational or charitable

Bracelet

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - Gov. Robert Ray got a bracelet Wednesday from the League of Women Voters of Iowa, who said they hoped the gift would lead to the end of a concept in which women are regarded as property.

Ray was the first in Iowa to receive a bracelet, a band of nickel silver bearing the letters "ERA," for Equal Rights Amendment.

The league hopes bracelet sales will raise sufficient funds to enable leagues in 20 other states to push for legislative passage of the proposed constitutional amendment.

Drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House has denied any involvement in a reported effort to limit a federal investigation of a $300,000 heroin smuggling operation that was said to involve financing by Robert L. Vesco.

In a published report, a spokesman for Vesco in Nassau denied the financier was "involved directly or indirectly in any way with traffic in heroin or any other narcotic.'

The New York Times reported this week that an undercover agent involved in narcotics investigations for several federal agencies told agents of the Bureau of Customs and Drug Enforcement Administration last summer about a heroin smuggling plan in which it was alleged that Vesco was to supply $300,000 for the deal.

The Times said the investigation was abruptly ended shortly thereafter.

Murder case

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - Police said Wednesday they were searching for the daughter of poet-playwright Mary McDougal Axelson, 82 who died after being beaten in her hospital bed.

Mrs. Axelson died Tuesday, 22 hours after a nurse heard the woman cry for help and found her bleeding from the mouth.

The playwright's daughter — 44-year-old Mary Axelson Cropper of New York City — visited the hospital Monday about the time of the beating, police said. "We are looking for Mrs. Cropper to question her about what happened," a police spokesman said. "We are treating this as a murder case."

Joseph McAloon, administrator at Doctor's Hospital, said "before she died Mrs. Axelson told police and hospital officials that her daughter had hit her. She died before she could tell us how it happened and why.

Financing

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - A proposed revolutionary system of financing national election campaigns through the U.S. Treasury "goes beyond the reasonable approach," Gov. Robert Ray said Wednesday.

The U.S. House is to act upon a bill passed 57-34 by the Senate Tuesday that would have the treasury pay for the campaigns of major party presidential, vice presidential, Senate and House

The measure would bar private contributions. "It bothers me immensely," Ray said of the legislation. "If we go to public financing, I think the action of the last campaign has driven them

(Congress) to it." "But I'd hate to see them do away with any public contributions which are a method of participating in a campaign.

Ray said he prefers that individual contributions still be allowed.

Intramurals face money cuts

Staff Writer

No additional funds are available "at the present time" for the Recreation Services Division (RSD), which co-ordinates all of the intramural programs, according to Philip G. Hubbard, vice president for student services.

Harry Ostrander, RSD director, previously stated that unless supplementary appropriations are received by RSD from the administration, the possibility of a drastic cutback in intramural sports activities will have to be faced.

Intramural activities already canceled due to fund shortages are the pre-Thanksgiving basketball tournament and the one-to-one basketball contest.

Ostrander plans to meet with Hubbard some time next week to formally ask for additional funds because of increasing costs, mainly wages for student officials, and decreasing university appropriations.

RSD needs an additional $15,000, according to Ostrander, to maintain the same level of services as were provided last year.

But in an interview, Hubbard said that the $32,565 appropriated to RSD for 1973-74 is all the money they are going to get. He indicated that the University of Iowa is faced with severe money problems and there just is no additional money for RSD.

Ostrander will only be to set priorities on the RSD services so that it can be determined which of these services

Ostrander admitted that the university is in a money squeeze, but he argued that "we don't have a realistic budget to begin with." He said the RSD budget request was cut $27,000 for this year. When informed of Hubbard's comments. Ostrander expressed dismay and said, "I had thought that when I outlined the figures to Mr. Hubbard he would see that the money would be well spent, considering the vast number of students participating."

Besides coordinating intramural activities. RSD coordinates informal recreation activities at both the Field House and the Recreation Building.

Because he is still compiling the data to show how much each individual activity will possibly cost this year, Ostrander said he has not determined his priorities for cuts if additional funds are not received.

Hubbard said the three alternatives he foresees for RSD for the remainder of this year are: -To cancel specific intramural programs. -To institute a student fee for the recreational services by either an additional student recreation fee at the beginning of the year, or by assessing student fees for specific activities that are now provided free, such as swimming, handball, or tennis, or by charging entry fees for intramural

-To close the Recreation Building and the Field House during university

Hubbard said he has received no student input concerning any cuts in intramural services but he said he wants to know what the students think. "I place great importance on student opinions," he said.

Hubbard said he personally favors the closing of the buildings during breaks to the cutting of specific Students contacted by The Daily Iowan reacted to the possibility of curtailed inframural activities in ways varying from "extremely unfortunate" to a "f-cking shame." Bill Holtze, M2, Alpha Kappa Kappa intramural chairman, said that if the cuts do come he would attempt to get together with other co-ed managers to decide some course of action. He said petitions could be circulated to be taken to Hubbard showing the wide student interest in intramural sports.

Jack Broman, A4, coach of the Easy Hitters co-ed football team, said writing letters and petitions is secondary. He said first the administration should be confronted to find out exactly what their position is, and if the students didn't agree with the administration, letters should be writ-

"Mr. Hubbard might think students are apathetic about intramurals," Broman said. "If he needs numbers and petitions to show him how students feel, we'll get them."

Broman also said that if co-ed basketball is canceled he would organize a league himself.

'We'll get voluntary officials to work so it won't cost anything, but there has to be some kind of activities for the students," he said.

Ostrander said an increase in the minimum wage law is the cause of the rise in wages for student officials. Compounding this increase is the rise in the number of teams entering intramural sports, necessitating more student officials.

Missing from the RSD income this year is $6,924 RSD received last year from the administration to cover the difference between expenses incurred and fees received for the operation of the Recreation Building. Fees are charged to non-students for use of the building facilities.

Hubbard said an agreement was reached between RSD and the administration last year concerning the Recreation Building, but he said no agreement was made this year and that the building would have to be self-sufficient from now on.

Ostrander said with the present fee set-up, this is an impossibility. He said it takes a minimum of $14,000 to provide supervisors, supplies and equipment to run the buildi

Non-student fees last year came to $8,713 and he said the figure this year would be considerably less due to the scheduling of additional physical education classes during prime " revenue periods. Money saving measures Ostrander has already initiated include closing University High gym, cutting the number of life guards from two to one in the Field House swimming pool as well as reducing the number of hours the pool is open from three to two. and utilization of graduate assistants as supervisors at the Recreation Building whenever possible.

The student recreation program at Iowa State University (ISU) receives almost four times as much money as

According to Jerry Maas, ISU intramural director, somewhere between $82,000 and $85,000 will be spent this year on men's intramural programs alone.

In addition, $32,000 will be spent for informal recreation activities and the women's intramural program will spend $6,500.

Maas said of these three programs nearly $81,000 of the total will go to paying the wages of student employees, both officials and staff

CIA recruits on campus without making 'big splash'

By STEVE HELLE Staff Writer

The recruiting policy of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) on the University of Iowa campus furthers the notion that it is a secretive, undercover organization.

Leo Sweeney, former faculty member of the UI department of economics, is on campus today interviewing graduate students for CIA economic research in Washington, D.C., is not the usual UI campus recruiter for the CIA.

But neither he nor the regular recruiter from the Kansas City regional office try to "make a very big splash"when they come to recruit, according to Jerald Barnard, chairman of the economics department.

Sweeney failed to tell the UI Career Planning and Placement Service that he was coming to the campus to recruit, standard practice for all prospective student employers. Barnard explained it was an apparent oversight on Sweeney's part. He pointed out that the Kansas City recruiter always notifies the placement office beforehand.

Sweeney arranged through his contacts in the economics department to meet with about seven Ph.D. and M.A. students. According to Barnard, he is looking for highly trained economists.

"This economic research job is a little different from other companies' positions only in that it has an international aspect to it," Barnard said. "The job is not undercover or secretive. It involves trying to make sense out of foreign economies and what impact they will have on the U.S. economy. The Department of Agriculture offers the same kind of job." But no matter what position the CIA is trying to fill, its recruiting policies are not the same as other employers, according to Corinne Hamilton, director of the Career Planning and Placement tacts us after several students have contacted them, and they let us know they are coming to interview those students. They wait for the students to contact them."

Barnard revealed that the CIA contacts the economics department first, though. "We then send out letters to all our graduate students," he said, "and anyone interested can sign up for an

"They come on campus all the time-the regular recruiter comes two or three times a year. But they don't like to make a big splash when they come. Their behavior is somewhat secretive when they come because some people have an adverse reaction to them.'

Philip Hubbard, vice president for academic affairs, related there is no university regulation against CIA recruitment on the UI campus. "As far as we are concerned, they are a government agency," Hubbard said. "Our placement services are open to any employer offering bona fide employment to college graduates. There are no restrictions on any particular employer."

Barnard said the CIA offers lucrative starting salaries-$18,000 for a Ph.D. graduate and from $13,000-$14,000 for M.A. grads. "The federal government pays relatively well," he said. "Its salaries are above academic levels."

"The financial situation for low income students is unresolved for the next year. Unless more money is allocated for the coming year the increase in financial aid to the middle income group '(that the administration proposes) has to come at the expense of the lower income group," he said.

> Jones said that the only fair means of giving aid to the two groups would be to increase funding of higher education rather than to increase aid to one group at the expense of another.

> John Moore, director of financial aids, said that so far the federal administration has been unwilling to do that. "If Congress allocated too much money for higher education, Nixon vetoes it.

Lobbying

Attempts presently are being made to increase federal funding to include both the lower and middle groups. The National Association of Financial Aids Administrators has begun a lobbying effort in Washington, D.C., to work for the increased allocation.

In addition, Jones points out, The changes in the priorities there exists an "equal access of the administration to include community" operating across the middle income level studen- the nation, working to open up

However, Moore stated that although he supports the goals of the "community," he does not see a threat in the Nixon aid policy. Rather he sees it as an attempt to appease the middle income groups, and does not believe that this will in any way affect the funding of lower income students. He said it will offer to the middle income students only the opportunity to borrow money.

Moore predicts that the grant type of aid, such as BEOG, will be given almost exclusively to lower income persons, while loans will be given to both financial groups with the lower group getting first priority.

Council moves meeting time

The Iowa City Council passed a resolution Tuesday night which will change the time of its 4 p.m. formal meetings to 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and the time of its informal meetings from 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The move, which, which is hoped will allow greater citizen accessability and input to the council was the recommendation of a special council sub-committee on meeting times.

The sub-committee consisted of Councilman J. Patrick White, Councilwoman Carol deProsse, and Councilwoman-elect Penny Davidsen.

The changes in meeting times which will take effect at the first of the year, stem from criticisms of council inaccesability raised during the recent city elections.

The motion passed with Mayor Tim Brandt voting against it, and Councilman Loren Hicker-

Editor's Note-This is the first of two articles exploring alternatives to car transportation for Christmas vacation travel plans. Today's article deals with the vacation crush for mass transportation and effects of the fuel crisis upon it, and Friday's looks at rates and availability of transportation services.

By JIM HUERTER Staff Writer

For those who are planning vacation escapes from Iowa City, a word to the wise: hurry! The holiday rush, as usual, has found its way into the heart of the mass transit systems. This combined with the current energy crisis could Spokesmen acting on behalf of different factions of transportation industries stressed the need for those who were planning to use the airlines, trains, and buses this holiday season to make their intentions known in advance.

This, they said, would give their respective companies some idea as to the number of people to expect, and allow them to make adjustments in their scheduling so they may effectively skirt those problems which might arise from the energy crisis.

However, most of the major airlines operating in this area have yet to directly feel the fuel and energy restrictions. President Nixon's recent proposal of a 15 per cent reduction in fuel allotments to the air travel industry, combined with the already existing 10 per cent cutback, will bring the total to a 25 per cent reduction.

Although this will not have an immediate effect on air travel in this area, the major companies now servicing the Cedar Rapids-Iowa City airport area foresee some changes soon.

The same holds true for other elements of the mass transit system. The first step in overcoming the problems that are now developing is for the people who patronize these services to aid the transit companies by planning their holidays early.

This will give the companies time to adjust to any problems that might arise. According to the spokesmen, if approached properly, the fuel crisis will not present any problems that can't be successfully averted.

Frank Dolan, representative of the Universal Travel Agency in Cedar Rapids, said, "After Dec. 20, there will be virtually little or no space available for those people desiring to use the trains in this area.

One of the major problems now confronting Universal and other travel agencies is the apparent lack of communication involved in the booking of train reservations.

Although there has been a steady increase over the past few years in the use of the train system, passenger service in this area is operated exclusively by Am Track, a government subsidized Am Track has limited access in this area. Based in Chicago, Am Track's closest stations are Burlington and Ottumwa.

Dolan said his agency has had "a terrible time booking with Am Track," adding, "they must be terribly under-staffed.'

William M. Osterhage, resident manager of Ozark Airlines in Cedar Rapids, said, "To date, the only change in Ozark's scheduling policy has been its elimination of Saturday-only flights, and as of yet, this policy does not affect Cedar Osterhagen also said that as of Dec. 15, Ozark and Frontier airlines plan a 5 per cent rate increase. Speaking of the effects the energy crisis will have on schedules, he said the more severe fuel cutbacks will probably be felt around Jan 1. "Flight schedules will probably be lessened somewhat, less flights being offered on a given

A customer service agent for United Airlines in Cedar Rapids said that it would probably be another four to six weeks before the long term effects of the energy crisis will be felt in Cedar Rapids. He said that some cutbacks in scheduling may occur around Jan. 7, 1974.

At present, United is still operating on "normal" schedule, the spokesman said, but the system is being evaluated to meet any problems that might arise due to the current energy crisis.

The spokesman said that youth fare and stand-by rates will be available, but on a somewhat limited basis. He suggested that those holding youth fare cards would be wise to make reservations as soon as possible

An employee at the Iowa City depot added that the operators of the busing systems feel that they are fully prepared to handle the holiday crowd.

He also said that when a company offers bus service to an area, and later anticipates an increase in the number of people who will be using the service, they simply use more buses, bringing them in from Des Moines, for example.

Who will run this country?

In President Nixon's fast and furious attempt to get the American people to think about something-anything-but Watergate, he has placed increased emphasis on our foreign policy. With his trusty aide, now Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger at his side, Nixon has tacked such issues as the Middle East crisis and the energy shortage together to form a conglomerate problem of tremendous

Nixon has also been heard in the last few weeks to drag out some old post-Vietnam speeches and rehash the value of ending the longest war in this nation's history. (It is also interesting to note that when listing his accomplishments Nixon includes the "total peace" that Americans are experiencing today. But in his reasoning for remaining in office, he includes the need to end the war-in which we are involved—in the Mideast.)

Peace is an "honorable" goal and it seems only proper that those who have been clamoring for it for the last ten years accept Mr. Nixon as a belated, but welcome member to the fold. Past experience tells us to subject Nixon's statements on these issues to the scrutiny afforded to claims made by business and industry.

Nixon is on the right beam when he attempts to rebuild his credibility with talk of his foreign successes-Vietnam, China and the Soviet Union—because this type of warmth has been the dream of a majority of Americans for the duration of the Cold War. He also knows that any chance of reassuring people of his ability to govern by means of his domestic policy would surely meet the same fate as would bragging about the 1972 Nixon campaign. But his claims of a new foreign policy in light of these accomplishments has to undergo the aforementioned scrutiny.

Nixon, along with Kissinger, has said that alt lough we are entering a generation of peace, the Defense Department budget cannot be cut. They claim that we must maintain a powerful, if not awesome force, to deter other powers from backing out on negotiations. This would appear to be leading us into another extended period of Cold War as the threat of military might to obtain peaceful ends is highly questionable, if not totally ridiculous.

If indeed the major powers are mature enough to discuss long-range plans of world prosperity without the semi-shielded threat of nuclear deterrants, wonderful. Let's get on with it. But if there has been no significant breakthrough in negotiable territory let's not compound the situation by financially nuturing it.

The President's new Secretary of Defense, James Schlesinger, has completely ruled out the thought that "the new generation of peace" includes a return to peace-time spending. The new detente with the Russians "is a velvet glove-a mailed fist in a velvet glove. Should we be discussing the beauty and texture of the glove, or the import of the mailed fist?'

(Kissinger's) famous vision of a world precariously balanced among contending power blocs is a prescription for perpetual conflict, not peace. And his record in the Nixon administration encompasses not only the celebrated journeys to Peking and Moscow, not only the marathon peace talks in Paris, but also the two most revolting episodes is recent American history—the secret bombing of Cambodia and the covert wiretap surveillance of journalists and members of Kissinger's own staff. This backround hardly promotes unbounded confidence in the Kissinger promise of new candor in the process of making foreign policy."

This reflects on a question initially raised by the Watergate scandal and intensified in recent months. Is the problem with creedibility in government in America a reflection of our apathy and general disinterest in governing ourselves? Are we content to be governed rather than to govern?

A new foreign policy, one that assures peace and security for America and all the world, will begin when we regain the will and the opportunity to govern ourselves.

Circulation Department

To the Editor:

On the 19th of November a letter appeared in the Daily Iowan which was highly critical of the Circulation Department in the University library. The letter began with references to specific mistakes made by some of the circulation staff and ended with a blanket indictment of the "inefficient girls" in the department. The last paragraph of the letter implied further that the inefficiency was linked to widespread "abuses perpetrated by student helpers...and regular full-time help." The writer offered as a solution "getting rid of the inefficient girls."

We appreciate the opportunity to answer this letter. First, to the best of our knowledge there are no "girls" working in the Circulation Department-only men and women. Most of these men and women work for slightly more than has been suggested as a minimum wage for this country, doing tasks from which most faculty and students would like to escape. Nevertheless, we consider ourselves productive and try to do our best. Furthermore. we reject the implication that because we make mistakes we are ripping off student and taxpayers. Second, we would like to suggest a more responsible way to remedy the alleged "abuses" in the Circulation Department. If a taxpayer or student has knowledge of improper behavior which demands the removal of one or more of the Circulation Staff, we think it is their duty to confront the employee with specific charges before the employee's supervisor. Certainly, this approach is preferable to the near libel appearing in the letter in question.

Lastly, we would like to apologize for our mistakes in the past. Although we do not believe that students or faculty in general share the unconstructive views in the November 19th letter, we realize that foul-ups cause confusion and waste time and energy. We will continue to try to minimize such hassles in the future.

Recreation funding

To the Editor:

Some of you may be aware that something is happening around the Intramural Department that has caused the curtailment of the intramural program for this semester and possibly for next semester. I feel you are due an explanation since it directly involves you as students here at Iowa.

I attended a meeting last night of the Recreation Advisory Committee. A memorandum was read which stated $32, 656.00 was allocated for general expenses this year. This is far short of last years expenses which were $50,702.00. The Recreation and Intramural Department needs at least $50,000.00 to run the program as they feel it should be run. Already two popular fall sports-One-on-One and Pre-Holiday Basketball have been cancelled. Pool hours gave been shortened and U-High has also been closed to open recreation. If this funding does not come, there may not be any wrestling, softball, volleyball and maybe even basketball during second semester. THIS IS NOT AN EXAGERATION! This is a fact Another fact is that about 80 per cent of the budget goes to pay salaries of student employees. Therefore, a $15,000.00 budget cut results in around $12,000.00 less money being allocated to students.

As a student, I am asking you, if you are at all concerned with the future of the INTRAMURAL PROGRAM, to voice your opinion. It is time the importance of the recreation and intramural program is brought to the attention of the University officials. If something is not done quickly, the administration will feel that no one cares about the program and let it go. If you are concerned, let your opinion be known.

Editor's Note: Today's Equal Time column is a contribution of R.J. Sheldahl, a unior in liberal arts.

I was born August 6, 1945...the same day a bomb was dropped on Japan (an atom

I wrote an erudition to the editor last year. I wrote it to the D.I. But I wasn't published. All I said was (in effect) that Nixon was hiring mercenaries in Viet Nam

Nixon (I only call him president with great reluctance) says we've got some kind of energy crisis. I think he's full of bullshi+t. There may be an energy crisis all right, but the only cause I can find is our dearly beloved president himself

Last summer I was pushing oil barges around in the Houston shipping channel. By coincidence I ran into the mayor of Texas City who owned and ran some kind of tank farm. He said, "I don't know anything about this oil shortage; my 'boys' wash their hands in ethyl." So you all know it's political. I further learned if conditions weren't as they are, we could be shipping up oil from Venzuela for $.07 a gallon.

Consider also the protests of the war in Viet Nam. Consider also that even though 'precious' American lives are no longer being lost that we are still economically fighting the war in Viet Nam through Nixon's Vietnamization program.

In my book "Nitler Nixon" is a fascist pig who "probably" "jacks off" to war movies. If you think I'm insulting the president, you are right, and I'm insulting every "simple bastard" who voted for the "simple son of a b+tch" (no reflection on his mother) who runs our exploiting, opportunistic United States of America

This letter is from a veteran who possesses an honorable discharge from these United States of America. I was working from a BCD but all I got was an "honourable" discharge from a country whose "Commander in Chief" obviously possesses no honor at all. All he possesses is a million dollars, a San Clemente estate and a free ride around the world. Personally, I don't think he deserves it unless he gets spit in his face every place he goes. (I'd spit in his face myself if I didn't think he would bring his army with

If any of you voted for Nixon because he supposedly supported a law and order plank, consider the fact you may have noted for the biggest outlaw the world has ever known. But don't get me wrong. maybe Nixon is not his own man and is acting under orders from a power greater than his own (like the devil).

Impeach Nixon? I think he ought to be indicted as an international war criminal, just like the Nazi war criminals of WWII!

At heart I'm a pacifist. But speaking of violence. I respect the man who rolls a drunk on the street with a tire iron with a rag wrapped around it more than I respect the "white collar thieves" of these United States of America. At least the hood on the street is honest about being "one way." And that is more than you can say for Mr. Nixon. I call him mister only because he runs some kind of war outfit.

Having a man like Nixon elected president makes me really wonder whether the people of America are competent enough to elect their own president. If they can elect a man purely on the basis of some slick add campaign, maybe we deserve to get duped. If the people of the United States of America don't see to it Nixon is impeached, I'm afraid I might hate the country I was born in for the rest of my life.

Sometimes I'm not nice. If fact, somebody once told me to "go to hell!" I said, "OK, where do you want me to go? It's got 50 states."

You know, there are a lot of so-called "Christian" people in this land. They seem to be wondering who the anti-Christ really is. Well, after last night I quit wondering. I saw him on TV. He talks about peace, but he's a war monger if I ever saw one. He fights wars around the world and he says he's declared some kind of drug war. He sure has. He's a methodone pusher and methodone is harder to kick than "smack."

This letter is coming from someone who paid a $250 marijuana tax to the Internal Revenue Service for a 1/2 oz. bag of "grass". Don't get me wrong; I've been rehabilitated. My worst habits today are nicotine and alcohol and I have a doctor who claims I'm dying from emphysema. Another M.D. said I had chronic bronchitis and a third said I had asthma. (So if anyone thinks I deserve to die for my words herein, don't bother, because according to the doctors, my life expectancy at my present rate is about 40 years. I'm 28 years old so if I'm to believe a certain doctor I've only got 12 more years this trip around anyhow.) Personally, I believe the legal drugs are more dangerous than the illegal ones. In fact a doctor once told me I would be better off smoking two "joints" a day than smoking three packs of cigarettes. But strangly enough, that same doctor didn't write me out a prescription for cannibas sativa. There may be justice in this land. I don't know, but I haven't seen much of it in the last four or five years.

Periodical bappenings

Just a few happenings in political

The Republican National Committee puts out a monthly magazine entitled, "First Monday." You may say big deal, and that would be all right because that's exactly what my reaction was to receiving it in the mail.

But for a lack of nothing else to do I decided to skim through it, if for no other reason than to see whether or not Republicans had anything to say

Well, I found out that they had quite a bit to say. First, I found out that the Republican party is not a party of "fat cat" contributors, but rather a party with "grassroots" contributors. I am not one to be cynical, but for a party that raised a reported $60 million for last year's presidential election, well...all I can say is, thats a hell of a lot

I was then informed, contrary to what all other political analysts have said, that the GOP came out of the 1973 election just peachy. Wondering about the discrepancy, I read further only to find out that all the other major periodicals in this country, when analyzing the election results, forgot to include some of the important races the Republicans

For instance, they didn't mention that "all-important" race for the school board in Webster Parish, Louisiana. They forgot to include that Peter Velis of Westfield, Massachusettes won a seat on the General Court of that state and for the life of me, I cannot comprehend how they forgot about this biggie-George W. Cripps, Kent County, Delaware, took over a Levy Court Commissioner post. Hot damn.

Finally, towards the end of the magazine, I chanced upon the fable section. This is a section devoted to supposedly ridiculing the Democratic party by making up names for the leading party members and then making a story out of it. The fable includes: the Chap of Quiddick (Edward Kennedy); George of Right On (George Wallace); George of Leftover (George McGovern); Hugh the Humpe (Hubert Humphrey); and Scoop of the West (Henry Jackson). There were a few more but I'm sure you get the point. The only moral of this fable is that, those who are in the process of getting their ass kicked know not which way to

I would also like to touch upon another periodical entitled, "The Pink Sheet On The Left." It's rather difficult to explain what the "Pink Sheet" stands for. Suffice to say that John Wayne is a radical compared to this outfit.

The "Pink Sheet" is always good for a few laughs, but one of their better stories appeared in the latest issue. While explaining the radical tendencies of those people involved in the making of the movie, "Executive Action"-a movie about the right-wing conspiracy that really was in charge of the assasination of John Kennedy-they said the following about actor Will

"Will Geer (who plays the lovable grandfather on the popular TV series, "The Waltons") has an extensive radical background. Geer was identified as a member of the Communist Party, USA, by Harold Ashe, in sworn testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in September, 1951. Geer himself took the Fifth Amendment when asked by the committee about Party membership in April, 1951. In addition to a Communist front record going back to the 1930's. Will Geer was an entertainer at and sponsor of the 'Herbert Aptheker Testimonial Dinner' on April 28, 1966." I can forgive lovable Will if he was at one time a Communist, but knowing that he was at the Herbert Aptheker Testimonial Dinner just shakes my belief in grandfathers. It is truly

The last item concerns the Iowa Drivers License which I understand carries a new heading at the top of it rather than the old "Iowa Motor Vehicles Operators License" heading, which was standard before.

What we now have instead, is the name of our Governor, whats-his-name. I find it to be a sad state of affairs, (come to think of it, this state is in a bad state of affairs)) when the governor of a state doesn't have enough ability to make his name known without plastering it on all the driving licenses in the state. What with this and his call for people to rat on their neighbors, ol' whoozits is trying to make next year's gubenatorial race an exciting one. It may seem rather disrespectful to refer to our Governor as whats-his-name and whoozits, but I'll br damned if I'm going to give him anymore free publicity.

Hawkeye wrestlers face rugged schedule

By BOB DYER Sports Editor

When you coach a wrestling team in the same state as perennial national powerhouse Iowa State, like Avis, you have to try Gary Kurdelmeier is beginning his second year as head wrestling coach at Iowa after directing the Hawkeyes to a second place Big Ten and seventh place NCAA finish in his initial season.

"Iowa State is the yardstick we use in seeing how far we've come along," said Kurdelmeier Wednesday. "We're waiting for the day when we can overtake While readily admitting that day has not yet arrived, Kurdelmeier, a former NCAA champ at Iowa, believes the Hawkeyes are closing the gap on their in-state rivals.

"Wrestling is really coming on as a spectator sport, not just at Iowa but all over the Big Ten," said Kurdelmeier. "The whole conference has begun Dan," said Kurdelmeier. "As a (158-pound junior). Sanderson

Kurdelmeier believes the new NCAA limitations which allow only six full scholarships a year

"In the past, three schools in the Big Eight-Iowa State, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State-have emphasized the sport more and have had more grants-in-aid to work with," Kurdelmeier said.

In over-all balance, the Iowa coach feels the Big Ten is equal to any league this year. "Michigan, Michigan State and Wisconsin all have super personnel," continued Kurdelmeier, "and Minnesota is a good, strong team. Of course we feel we'll be right up there in contention too," he added. Iowa had its finest recruiting

'We've actually had two very good recruiting years back-to-back and early indications lead us to believe this spring will be an even better year," Kurdelmeier said.

The Hawkeyes return 14 lettermen and will be strong in the lower and middle weights. Defending 190-pound Big Ten champ Fred Penrod did not return to school.

"Penrod's loss forces us to move a couple of the younger wrestlers up from 177 pounds," said Kurdelmeier. "If we get many injuries in the upper weights it could be a problem."

Keith Mourlam, a youngster from Webster City, is currently running ahead of Sones and won the 118-pound title at the Minnesota Invitational last weekend.

"I guess Keith hasn't been reading Sones' press clippings," quipped Kurdelmeier. 'We expected Keith to be a good one and he's come along fast. He's a real quiet kid who just has tremendous dedication."

Coaching position up for grabs

Sports Editor

That old tune "Everybody's Doin It" best describes the number of opinions being bantered about concerning the identity of Iowa's next football

So why should I be any different!

The names most frequently mentioned are Ray Jauch of the Edmonton Eskimos, Jim Young of Arizona, Bill Mallory of Miami (Ohio), Lou Holtz of North Carolina State, Jim Williams of Dowling of West Des Moines High School, Bob Commings of Massillon, Ohio High School and Howard Vernon, formerly of East Waterloo High School and member of Frank Lauterbur's staff this

Add to this list Dyer's can-

Ray Jauch: A former Iowa halfback who played during the glory years of Forest Evashevski. Jauch has lots of backing, especially in Des Moines. A great many people in the state prefer the next coach to have an Iowa background. The big question with Jauch is could a man who has spent the last few years in Canada recruit successfully at the college level?

Jim Young: Young started his career at Ohio State but transferred to Bowling Green. His line coach there was a guy named Bo Schembechler. He later coached for Bo at Miami of Ohio and Michigan. He's familiar with the Big Ten and the situation at Iowa. The big drawback would be his Michigan ties. Many Hawkeye fans don't want Iowa to become the Michigan of the South. But fickle fans never ask where you went to school when you win. Young has been quoted as saying he's not interested in moving but people have a way of changing their minds.

Bill Mallory: Mallory has led homework on this unmentioned

Lou Holtz: Holtz comes from an Ohio State background which may not be an advantage with a Michigan athletic director. He doesn't have a great career won-loss record but he's won at a tough place to win (North in a bowl.

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Phil Johnson, assistant coach of the Chicago Bulls, was named head coach of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings basketball team Wednesday.

The 32-year-old Johnson replaces Draff Young, who had been interim coach of the National Basketball Association club since the resignation of Bob Cousy a week ago.

Johnson signed a contract for the rest of this season and the

The new coach takes over a club which has lost its last eight games. With six victories and 18 losses this season, the Kings are on the bottom of the Midwest Division of the NBA's Western Conference.

Fuel Crisis

BOONE, Iowa (AP)-Iowa high schools have voted overwhelmingly in favor of suspending athletic competition as a fuel conservation measure during the Christmas holiday

The Iowa High School Athletic Association said Wednesday member schools voted 408-66 to call off all athletic competition and practices Dec. 22-30.

An association official said 50-60 boys Christmas basketball tournaments will be called off because of the move.

Any regularly scheduled basketball games and wrestling and swimming meets during the period can be rescheduled at a later date, but not the holiday tournaments.

"It is the sincere hope of the association and its member schools that this action taken will prove to be a positive step and that this unified effort on the part of member schools and their staffs will show leadership to other segments of society during the energy crisis," the association said in a statement. The only exception to the holiday competition ban is that games and meets scheduled for Dec. 22 will be allowed.

Bredehoft said a search for a replacement will begin immediately by a committee appointed by the board of directors.

"The committee will review all applications for the position which could include members of the present staff,"

Seaman came to Wichita State in 1969 as a member of the staff of the late Ben Wilson and was named head coach following Wilson's death in the crash of a university-chartered aircraft in October 1970

At that time he was given a three-year contract which expires this Dec. 31.

Under Seaman, the Shockers compiled a 13-26 won-lost record. In 1972 they finished at 6-5, the first winning season at WSU since 1963, and they turned in a 4-7 record this year.

Court worries in Davis Cup

CLEVELAND (AP) - The rival Davis Cup captains, America's Dennis Ralston and Australia's Neale Fraser, both expressed concern Wednesday over the court on which the world's premier tennis competition will be waged this weekend 'The lines aren't straight and there are bubbles on the surface," said Ralston after a morning workout Wednesday. "I hope they can fix it before 'Frankly, we are disappointed," added Fraser. "The lines go in at the net which gives the court a sort of hour-glass figure.

And we're having trouble with the bounce, too. The most exciting Davis Cup challenge round in perhaps two decades will open with two singles matches Friday on a synthetic carpet laid over hardwood at the Cleveland Public Auditorium. It marks the first time in the 73-year history of the international series that the matches have been played indoors.

Relaxed rules which opened the door to all professionals not under private contract have revived Australia as a tennis power. It's Laver's first Davis Cup appearance since 1962. Rosewall hasn't played in the event since 1956. Newcombe's last Davis Cup appearance was 1967, the last year the Aussies

The Australians will be favored over a U.S. team that is jor championships among anchored by Stan Smith, the recognized world champion, and augmented by veteran pro Marty Riessen, Tom Gorman and 22-year-old Erik van Dillen.

The draw for the best-of-five series is scheduled Thursday at 11:30 a.m. EST in the City Hall. The two opening singles will be followed by the doubles Saturday and the two finals singles Sunday, reversing the first day's pairings.

What can you do with only a bachelor's degree? Now there is a way to bridge the gap between an undergraduate education and a challenging, responsible career. The Lawyer's Assistant is able to do work traditionally done by lawyers.

Three months of intensive training can give you the skills-the courses are taught by lawyers. You choose one of the six courses offered-choose the city in which you want to work. Since 1970, The Institute for Paralegal Training has placed more than 500 graduates in law firms, banks, and corporations in over 40 cities. If you are a student of high academic standing and are interested in a career as a Lawyer's Assistant, we designed a system for ourselves... Interface:A

The design goal of the new Interface: A was simple but ambitious: equal or exceed the measured, objective performance of every other loudspeaker intended for home reproduction of music regardless of cost, size or method of construction.

Is this goal important? Yes, because it leads you to better sound. We know that response down to 32 Hz is perceptibly better than response to 45 or 60 Hz or some other higher figure. And we insist that high frequency dispersion throughout the listening environment is vastly preferable to performance that is limited to on-axis perfection.

Reduced distortion at the owest frequencies can be identified and appreciated. And, all other things being equal, higher efficiency can lead to reduction of overall system distortion, especially when the goal is the illusion of concert level performance.

By every objective measure, the new Interface: A has met its design goal. It stems from a new concept, a new way of looking at loudspeaker design. It re-orders the awesomely complex inter-relationship between the various parameters of speaker and enclosure. And it involves making considered choices that revolve around performance rather than construction techniques.

Saturday

10 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

For instance, Interface: A happens to use an 8' main speaker in a vented enclosure. Chosen simply because, within the size range practical for home use, this combination is by far the best alternative. Ideas like "bigger speakers are better" or "small systems must be sealed" only get in the way and must be discarded. If a 6" or a 10" speaker had been measurably better, we would have used it. Or a dozen speakers if that had been best. It wasn't.

By all means appreciate the technical innovation that is unique to Interface: A. Its unconventional vent substitute and effective use of space and speaker size. Its combination of direct and rear-mounted tweeters to achieve uniform sound energy at all frequencies. And its unusual electronic equalizer that adds a mere 6 dB at 35 Hz yet is essential to the concept. But fascinating as these details may be, they are all only means to a rational end and our common goal.

Interface: A. It's not as far from perfect.

Speaking

By Michael Ryan

I'm speaking again
as the invalid in a dark room
I want to say thank you out loud to no one.
I want to fold my hard arms in on the sound, as the sound dissolves slowly like a man living

I'm honestly grateful there's breath to make noises with, and many words have meaning. I feel lucky when hello doesn't hurt. On a bus, I could love anyone.

It's not terrible to be alone.
Last night I talked to a person so carefully I might have been looking for a word that wouldn't change.
That made her ready for anything.

Really, I'm not being funny.
There are people everywhere sorry for the pleasure that keeps them going, although they circle that pleasure like a herd around its dying leader.
This pleasure, for me, is in speaking,
as if words enclosed the secret
in myself that lasts after death.

Michael Ryan

Local poet wins award

He discovers as he teaches

By JOHN SKOYLES Feature Writer

Every so often something happens that makes me believe there is a little justice in the world. Michael Ryan's fine book of poems "Threats Instead of Trees" being chosen as this year's winner of the Yale Series of Younger Poets is one of these occasions. This is the most coveted award for a first book of poems in the United States; competition usually runs over a thousand submitted manuscripts. Ryan deserves it even though the poems don't rhyme. His book will be published in April in an edition of 3,500 copies in countries all over the world. Previous winners include John Ashbery, W.S. Merwin, and James Wright. Ryan is currently a poetry editor of The Iowa Review; he can be seen daily in that office drinking coffee, grinding cigarette butts into the floor, and dispensing advice to the despondent. Next semester he'll join the faculty of the Writers Workshop.

Ryan has enough degrees to make alphabet soup: A.B., M.A., M.F.A., and PH.D. His poems have appeared in most of the major magazines and journals, including Poetry and The New Yorker

But these statistics say nothing of the poet whose writing classes enabled many of his students to continue their work in graduate writing programs around the country. And his friends, some of whom have already published books, still ask for his criticism of their new poems. One quality that makes for a great teacher is generosity, and Ryan is never too busy to read a manuscript and offer some pointed suggestions.

The fact that one year's student evaluations rated Ryan's poetry writing course among the ten highest in the university is some proof of his ability. Being in the classroom when he is moved to one of his long and apt discourses is to know that his vocation is teaching. I've heard him put together a spontaneous talk about poetry that involved Nixon, child psychology, insanity, Shakespeare, and french kissing. And it all worked toward a final point that not only surprised the class with its steady storm of correspondences, but I could tell that Ryan was delighting himself in discovering something new while teaching.

And the poems in his book show that he knows much about the craft of poetry. The strong emotions in his poems are tempered by this craft, producing their most powerful effect.

The book's title, "Threats Instead of Trees," hints at the type of poem it contains. There is little consolation, and much fear and obsession. When Ryan writes a poem entitled "Pastoral" there are trees, but only in the background. The subject is various internal conditions, among them love as the isolation of a widow "lifting her underclothes to show how lonely she has been."

Two major emphases in the book are a man's relationship to his lover and to his father. To the woman he admits that his obsessions may wreck their mutual lives: "If I taste my death in the back of my mouth, don't expect a kiss." The father who drank himself to death still lives in Ryan's memory this way: "I feel silent & changed, like a house when the father dies."

This is a book about major emotional events and a struggle to come to terms with them. The way in which constant consideration of abstract concepts leads to an examination of relationships is something new. Here intelligence leads to feeling, and it is rewarding to give over to Ryan's poems and come to know both aspects of his personality.

Ryan describes the abstraction that pervades his work as "what I call 'thought as experience.' It seems to me that my most important moments, experiences, etc., are either thoughts or crucially tied up with thought."

In his foreward to "Threats Instead of Trees," Stanley Kunitz, Pulitzer Prize winner and editor of the Yale series, says "Michael Ryan is a poet of secrets and dislocations. Every word of his counts. The air of his poems is charged and ominous. Even the love poems admit feelings of doubt and dread. Their order embraces a violent reality. He has a mind that rejoices in the play of concepts, in the embodiment of 'thought as experience.' The imagination that presides over his work is elusive, complex, and singularly restless."

Ryan has written a moving book, deeply emotional, but guided always by intelligence and a deep concern for his art. Kunitz' introduction reads as if he knew Ryan all his life: the poems are that honest. And as the man is generous, his work is humane, warm and an occasion to read and know.

So that's where everybody went

If you are one of those students whose idea of studying is glancing at your books during a commercial or cramming 400 pages of Anthro the night before the test, you probably find it hard to understand a friend or rommate who lives, cof-fees and sleeps at the University Library. But for many serious, as well as not so serious students, The Library is a haven of solitude and comfort. Whether you want to study, do research, sleep, read or even just sit and dream of potential romances, The Library can accommodate you.

Newly furnished and carpeted, it has enclosed desks, tables, chairs with hardwood and cushion seats, smoking and no-smoking lounges, even music rooms to meet a variety of comfort preferences. Admittedly, those with sensitive ears may, at first, be tortured by the sound of a piercing buzz emanating from certain flourescent lights, but once having overcome this auditory disadvantage, it is possible to spend many satisfying hours in The Library indulging your current literary interests.

Next time you start shaking your head over a friend's library hibernation habits, think again...it's getting to be a sort of home away from home for campus people of all types.

Food Price Survey

I'd like to see the Hy-Vee and Randalls stores in Coralville included in your bi-weekly food price survey. Their prices are not the same as those in the same stores in Iowa City. Where prices are different they are always higher. I've checked it out and I've talked to the management about it.

Your complaint is duly noted. We'll include both of these stores in our next survey. We have included them in the past, though it does appear that we've neglected them lately. The problem, in part, is the fact that there are 10 or 12 large grocery stores in the area and we only have time and space to cover seven of them each time we run a survey. Unfortunately, our price checker seems to have gotten into something of a rut, and tends to make roughly the same cir-

Response to the survey has generally been affirmative. We welcome criticism though. We would be particularly interested in hearing from readers who object to the items we usually cover. We try to pick things that will typically be on a student's shopping list, and things which we can expect to find in every store we visit. If you're tired of our format, please send your suggestions to Survival Line in care of The Daily Iowan.

Tickets For Dylan Concert

We have had several requests from readers interested in attending the Bob Dylan-Band concert in Chicago to be held Jan. 3, 1974. It's likely to be a sell-out, and readers are particularly interested in ticket information. Unfortunately there's very little information available as yet. The concert will be at the Chicago Stadium, and we understand that tickets will be distributed by mail. No formal offering will be made until Dec. 2, 1973. We'll pass along any further information we gather.

Need some information? Have a complaint? Why not give Survival Line a try. We can't do everything, but our staff will do what they can to solve as many problems as possible.

Write Survival Line, Daily Iowan, Ill Communications Bldg., Iowa City, Iowa 52240. Or call us between 7 and 9 p.m. Tuesday or Thursday evening. Our number is 353-6220. Be sure to give us your name and address. If possible, include your phone number and hours when you can be reached.

ICCT stages unusual play

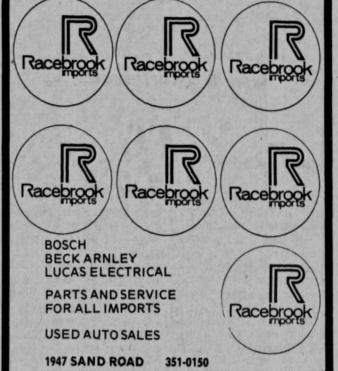

Iowa City Community Theatre will present Michel de Ghelderode's one-act play "A Night of Pity" today, Friday and Saturday at the Community Theatre building on the 4-H fairgrounds.

This show is being offered in addition to the regular season as part of the Theatre's efforts to broaden its educational aspects by offering new, experimental, or unusual dramatic productions to its

Sonia Grant, director of the play, says the reason for doing this particular one-act is "to introduce the community to the author." In most of his works Ghelderode explores the mysteries and experiences of death through the vision of life. In "A Night of Pity" he also depicts living through illusion.

The show will begin at 8:00 p.m. on November 29, 30 and December 1. Tickets will be available at the door of the theatre building for $1.50.

IC, UI groups raise funds for Israel

By BOB JONES Feature Writer

Upon the Arab's Yom Kippor attack on the Israelis Oct. 6, Iowa City and University of lowa campus organizations have stepped up emergency funding drives to raise money for food, supplies, medical services, etc. for Israel.

Campus drives for aid to Israel normally take place in the spring, but the Yom Kippor attack necessitated an immediate mobilization for financial support.

According to Louise Katz, A3, 118 E. Bloomington, coordinator for the UI chapter of the Campus Student Coordinating Committee for the Israel Emergency Fund (IEF), "When the war broke out, the immediate concern was for Mogan David Adom, (a medical relief service: the International Red: Cross doesn't service Israel) and their needs for first aid, ambulances, plasma kits, blood banks."

Contributions can be fed into both the IEF and the United Jewish Appeal, an international organization supporting Jews all over the world.

The UJA set up the Israel Emergency Fund in 1967. The UJA itself began after World War II for re-establishing dislocated, homeless Jews settling in Israel and elsewhere, paying fees, fares and trying to locate family members.

Many people, including fellow Jews, don't support aid to Israel because, Katz lists: 1) They don't see Israel as a goal and don't identify with it; 2) They don't agree with what the Israelis are doing; and 3) There are those whose priorities do not include Israel.

"We're not here to create a solidarity, a consciousness. Vork are returned to the Inter- People may not believe in sup-

She mentions that much of the money sent for relief and aid go to Israeli universities having Arab students, and communities for Arabs, whose living standard has gone up there in the past few years. 'This is raising money for a purpose--a country--not a religion or ethnic group.

Rabbi Roy Abramovitch, director of Iowa City's Hillel Foundation, which has organized general community drives, cited that in Iowa City, fund-raising money has gone to three separate recipients: 1) The Israel Emergency Fund; 2) Mogan David Adom; and 3) Israel bonds, which are "investments" that give interest.

Discussing what Iowa City as a whole, apart from cooperating campus efforts, has been doing, Abramovitch says an "emergency Israel fund appeal started with a program Oct. 10 which included guest speakers.

Proceeds from that and subsequent projects go to the United Jewish Appeal and IEF.

"After the Oct. 10 event, there was a series of projects organized mainly by community women-card parties, various things held at Hillel, bake sales, an arts and pottery sale, a used book sale.

Allman) far surpasses any of its previous recordings. Dave Lin-In 1970, David Crosby called Jackson Browne one of the top 10 songwriters around today and I'm tempted to put his name at the head of that list. Never a bonafide out and out rocker, his music has always appealed more to the mind, the heart and the soul than anything on this side, it expresses a gen-

His chief strength is his ability to take what an amateur not-so-hot parents, while songwriter would say in a whole verse and condense it into a single word or phrase. A short phrase like "I feel just like a candle in a way" or "You said Moracco and you made me comes what I feel is the smile" underlies more meaning into a single line than an entire majority of Jackson Browne verse describing the same idea compositions are love songs, yet ever could. It is this impact of the word "love" seldom apsaying all by saying less (with no loss of precision) that marks Jackson Browne a masterful songwriter and a true artist when it comes to handling wor-

One of the best one of the most touching songs songs of 1972, the Eagles' ver- I've ever heard. Here the sion is more kinetic (and some singer stands in the ruins of will say, better). Jackson's what once was a strong relationtreatment is gentler and more suited to his purpose on this album as it smoothly segues into the next song, "Our Lady of the Well."

Whereas Jackson's concern was more oriented towards the sea on his first album (no less than six of the songs contained a reference to water) he seems to have since come ashore and looked around at his environment. "Our Lady of the Well" is a love song of sorts but it's more in that the singer has discovered a far distant land where "the families work the land as they have always done" and makes the observation "It's so far the other way my country's gone.'

"Colors of the Sun" is vintage Browne. First recorded by Tom Rush a few years back, Jackson's own interpretation takes on a mysterious, dream-like quality not found in the original version. This setting is perfect for the feelings of loneliness, uncertainty and searching conveyed in the song.

"I Thought I Was a Child" is another tour de force love song. Again, there's more going on in that it also deals with growing up and loss of innocence. The 'problem" is that there's real depth in Jackson Browne's songs and therefore it's hard to say each one is about one certain thing. Often he creates another Sail on, Jackson.

WEST HAMLIN, W. Va. (AP) - When Albert Adkins leaves this world, he's made certain the trip will be made in style and comfort.

Although Adkins knows that you can't take it with you, the 85-year-old carpenter has seen to it that he knows what he'll be going in. In his basement is a gleaming coffin he personally designed and built.

"I keep it right here in the house," says the spry octogena-rian. "It really doesn't bother me or the missus. It would be foolish to pretend that I wasn't going to die someday now, wouldn't it? To me, it's not like I'm waiting to go. It's just that "There is strength and pride in my work," he says. "So I know it is the very best."

His masterpiece sits under a dust cover. Built of the finest hardwoods, it has been buffed until it fairly glows. The lining is handstitched.

"Did the lining myself," says Adkins. "I placed every tuck, trim and stitch in it and when the time comes I know that I'll have this to go in style."

On the contrary, Van Heukelem said, the octopus is generally small, very shy, surprisingly tasty and is popular as a food in much of Asia and in Mediterranean countries.

"The main drawback to Americans and North Europeans is the appearance of the animal and the stories they've heard about him. To them it's like eating insects," Van Heukelem said. "Of course, I suppose you could chop it up like ham-burger or cut the tentacles off, but the idea would still be

Van Heukelem is pursuing research aimed at making commercial raising of octopuses feasible. Getting the American public to accept octopus as a meal will take time, he admits.

Working at the University of Hawaii's Institute of Marine Biology on Coconut Island in Kaneohe Bay near here, Van Heukelem recently succeeded in bringing a Mexican species of octopus through a complete reproductive cycle in captivity, a scientific first

When compared to beef, pork or other animal sources of protein, the octopus' reproduction and growth rate and proportion of edibility seem fantastic.

Van Heukelem, 31, who has been researching the octopus for nearly 10 years, said it is "an extremely efficient food converter. It converts 50 per cent of the food it eats to growth," compared to 10 to 15 per cent for most other

The octopus reaches a marketable weight, one pound, in five and a half months and reaches a more profitable five-pound weight in just two more months, he said.

Van Heukelem said octopus is 85 per cent edible, low in fat and high in protein. The only part of the boneless animal discarded is the intestines.

Octopus has a mild taste, something like tender abalone. A female of the Mexican species lays 500 to 3,000 eggs. She broods the eggs for about six weeks, until they hatch, and then she dies. Van Heukelem said.

Increasing the water temperature in the laboratory tanks ten degrees warmer than the ocean environment caused the octopuses to grow three times faster than they would nor-

Van Heukelem selected the Mexican species for his research because it doesn't have a larval stage as do most other species. The Mexican species develops directly from the egg into an octopus form, giving it greater chance for survival in the laboratory, he said.

Van Heukelem now has some 15,000 eggs developing in huge wooden tanks at the institute and he expects 80 per cent will reach maturity if he can afford to feed them that long and

When the creature favors crustaceans, such as crab and shrimp, Van Heukelem said these are too expensive. But, he said the octopus also likes shark meat and tilapia, a nuisance fish common to Hawaiian waters.

He sees promise for locally-raised octopus in the market here, where 95 per cent of what is sold is imported frozen

This 1967 adaptation just speeds things up a few notches, adding a realism of casting and performance that makes it almost difficult to watch. Since the sex here is minimal it should reach the tube virtually intact. On 2. FRANKENSTEIN. Prettied up for the home audience, the venerable walking rag-doll is trotted out for another torchlight chase. The made-for-T.V. script is by Christopher Isherwood and Don Bachardy, with Leonard Whiting as the good Doctor and James Mason as the curmudgeon who thinks there are things "man was never meant to know." On 7.

10:30 SLIGHTLY HONORABLE. Once again, Channel 12 provides another slick, enjoyable film. Pat O'Brien plays a wet-behind-the-ears attorney trying to clean up politics, with Edward Arnold and Broderick Crawford in the fray. Love interest is provided by-Good God-Eve Arden. On 12.

11:10 THE INCREDIBLE MR. LIMPET. Limpet, yes. Incredible, no. Don Knotts dreams of becoming a fish-little does he know. On 2.

HELLO, CENTRAL SEARCY, Ark. (AP) — Tele-phone operator Eudola Nolan hought she was dealing with a routine request when a custom-er asked for help in dialing a

Ms. Nolan made the routine response: "I'll be glad to dial, but did you know you could dial a station-to-station call your-

"Oh, yes," replied the customer. "But I don't know how to dial the dashes. I thought you would know how."
