Students' late in class is one of the problems that teachers and educational institutions regularly meet. A bigger problem is the nature of the apology and the causes of the delay. Although the elections are necessary for weakness, it is not clear if you know what is real and what is not. It is better to understand how to deal with students' late, it is better to know what their intentions are to be late. Some are real, others are simply based on school principles or understanding of professors.

Too better understand what to have the reason with later students, it is influenced by many factors that prevent them from school. In this part, we mention several of these factors as a reason.

Traffic constipation is a serious problem for most cities in the world. These cities are concentrated in traffic jams that hinder slow traffic. Students who do not want to delay traffic jams are likely to be delayed to school. Students who do not want to delay traffic jams are likely to be delayed, and a bad schedule can cause discomfort to the students who employ drivers. Other students live in areas far from school, and sometimes getting a car for transport can be very difficult. This is the main reason why school is too late. Many students postpone their homework at the right time and do so late at night or in the morning before school. Students have to do the task in the morning before they are school. Students. The school administration should emphasize its authority in determining the types of sanctions for late students. Teachers must also participate in school activities, such as attending classes and meetings.

This avoids the situation where students are late and think everything is fine. Roads leading to schools may be in poor condition. Many potholes in the traffic of cars bringing students to school. Drivers cannot drive smoothly to help students get to school on time.

Błotnisky roads can also prevent students from getting to school. Some parents don't care about their children's academic performance. They don't worry if their children get up early and go to school with the toilet.

They don't care if their children go to school immediately, if they fall somewhere, or if they don't fall at all. When children feel like their parents are ignoring them and not supervising them at all, they may tend to go to school when they want. If a teacher fails to motivate students, either intrinsically or extrinsically, students will become bored in that particular teacher's classes.

If the teacher is late for class, the student certainly has no reason to come to class early.

When this teacher has class, the student is intentionally late.

Teachers who do not have appropriate teaching methods can lead to students boycotting classes. When classes start monotonously and the room does not seem conducive to studying, the student may leave classes. If classes take place in the morning, it may happen that students are deliberately late for school. If rules are not enforced at school, students will act their own way. This also applies to lateness to school and classes, which is against established rules.

If the rules are not followed at school, the school will not be able to function properly. Students will use this option to behave as they wish. It is mainlyTaught before coming to classes.

These students basically lie, because most teachers start a lesson with important administrative information, introduce the subject of the day, prepare the ground for discussion and combine the topic of the day with previous topics. Today's busy world, in which there are too many problems, has created a norm for online learning. More importantly, the growing technological progress will force students to try online courses. In connection with Pandemia and health problems, online courses to be popular all over the world, while the number of full -time classes will decrease. However, they observed lateness and poor punctuality among students at online courses.

You can be late for online classes for the following reasons: in some areas there is no reliable internet connection. Students living in these areas may want to take part in online courses, but the network may delay them and be late for courses. Not everyone can afford a good internet connection. Most students who have to buy data every time they take part in the online course are sometimes late for classes. A poor internet connection can also be an excuse for performing tasks related to the Internet at home until late, which can be tolerated if it is well protected. If many students participate in the classes, monitoring during online classes becomes difficult. You can join the course and continue working on processing, then take up other items, and then take part in the current course. Most online courses take place at home. Most students have to work at home, unlike school, where everyone has the same schedule. Students can be busy at the beginning of the classes and ultimately participate only in online classes. As shown in the study, this is one of the factors affecting the retention of students at school. Great excuses for late school. If you come too late for online classes, you can use the following examples:Connections to online lessons several instructors, you can say that click the wrong connection and you need to come back and click the right connection to take part in the lesson. This may be a good reason to be late for a online lesson.

Even professors sometimes have problems with an internet connection and are easy to understand. How to manage students' delays should clearly indicate the time when students must be in the classroom. Tell students what will happen to them if they arrive late in class and that there will be consequences every time they arrive late in class. The lesson always starts soon. Be punctual in everything you do and encourage your students to do the same. You can't start a late lesson and ask students to come to classes soon a small task. This task should make you get points for the exam. Late students will have to get the results in advance and avoid a huge gap between them and from above. You can also thank the students who came in advance.

Even late, students will change to be praised and rewarded. This is a fundamental way to improve students' results and prevent delay. By forcing students who are late so that the lessons can sit at the bottom of the class and do not disturb what you do to put them, you will encourage them to participate in lessons as soon as possible.
