Toddler dies in mine shaft fall

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. - A toddler who plunged down a 500-foot-deep mine shaft near his home was found dead late Friday by rescuers, authorities said.

The body of the boy, who would have been 2 years old next month, was recovered at about 10:41 p.m. Friday, said search coordinator John Rittenhouse. He said the child's name was being withheld until his family could be notified.

The toddler and his 21-year-old sister were playing in the backyard of their Central City home, just west of Denver, when the sister went inside to answer the phone at about 2:45 p.m., Ritterhouse said. The boy wandered off, eventually falling into a mine about 100 yards behind his home.

No one actually saw the toddler fall down the shaft, but footprints in the snow led to the mine, where other marks indicated something fell in the hole, said dispatcher Dodie Shaw of the Gilpin County Sheriff's Department.

Airliner loses part of wing

MANILA, Philippines - A United Airlines jet with 347 passengers aboard returned to Manila 56 minutes after takeoff Saturday when it lost a 10-by-4 foot section of one wing, a passenger and airport officials said.

Jonathan Miller, an aircrast engineer aboard Flight 820 from Manila to Tokyo, said there were no injuries, but that one passenger suffered a non-fatal heart attack.

An official at the control tower of Manila's International airport said the airliner returned because "a piece of metal peeled off."

Miller, of Torrance, Calif., said the pilot planned to fly on to Tokyo, but he showed the pilot his identification card and convinced him to return.

New Nicaraguan plan adopted

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State James Baker scored a major breakthrough on Capitol Hill with his skilled negotiations on U.S. policy for Nicaragua that left most congressional Democrats heralding the start of a new bipartisanship.

As Baker began the negotations about three weeks ago, he was burdened with a legacy of deep distrust built up during the Reagan administration on the one foreign policy issue that most deeply divided the White House and Congress.

Litton is leaving his assistant city manager post in Winter Park to begin a fresh career in Lake Mary. An "excellent leader" and "professional" were descriptions given by several Winter Park employees and associates in referring to Litton's 10 years of service in the Orlando suburb.

Litton has plans for Lake Mary which don't include converting it into another Winter Park, although the location of his former job is a city which has inspired Lake Mary commissioners because of its abundance of trees, green parks and upscale shops along Park Avenue.

Job opening stirs debate in Longwood

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD - Interviews for the vacant city administrator's position are scheduled to begin this week although there is some controversy surrounding the situation.

Mayor Hank Hardy has said he supports Acting City Administrator Don Terry for the job and received support for that theory from other city officials. However, some members of the city commission say they want a chance to look over the candidates before turning the job over full-time to Hardy said he wasn't interested in interviewing any of the candidates.

At a special meeting Friday, commissioners decided to interview two candidates for the position on Thursday, April 6 and Friday, April 7. They are Michael Abels, 40, city administrator for Defiance, Ohio, and Donald Cooper, 38, a former town manager of Castle Rock, Colo. The Screening Committee of the Florida City and County Management Association narrowed the candidates to 10 from among 75 applicants nationwide, and suggested the commissioners first interview the top five candidates, a group which includes Cooper and "I can't find anyone I'm satisfied with. I think we have the perfect man sitting up here. Don Terry has been with the city many, many years. He knows the problems of the city. He'll fit right in," Hardy said.

Commissioner Ted Poelking agreed with Hardy. saying that the city spent a lot of time in the interview process last year and made a mistake when they selected Gene DeMarte, who was fired by the commission on Jan. 3. Pocking said Terry should be considered.

"Granted he hasn't pleased everyone and if he did, he wouldn't be doing his job. I say give him a chance. He's been city administrator and acting city administrator three times." Poelking said.

Commissioners Gene Farach and Richard Bullington said the candidates should be given a chance to be interviewed.

"I think Don has the ability to do the job and he can do the job. On the other hand, we went through the selection process. I would like the opportunity to interview one or two candidates to see whether

Haitlans almost make it to Florida

FORT LAUDERDALE — A boatload of 100 Haitlan refugees came within 1,000 feet of their goal Friday but were intercepted 3,18 miles east of John U. Lloyd State park and were expected to be sent back to their homeland.

The 50-foot sailboat was stopped by a Coast Guard patrol boat 3.18 miles off the Broward Coast, just 950 feet shy of the three-mile territorial limit.

"Had the Haitlans made it to within three miles, they would have technically entered the United States and would have been brought in to shore and turned over the the immigration and Naturalization Service," said Lt. Jeff Karonis, a Coast

Nielsen said Allison apparently had been visiting family in Gadsden. His intended passenger notified authorities after Allison failed to appear for several days.

Speaker's wife has premature baby girl

TALLAHASSEE — House Speaker Tom Gustafson's wife has given birth to a premature 2-pound baby girl in Haifa, Israel, where she was hospitalized a week and a half ago with life-threatening complications.
Lynn Gustafson, 31, was doing well and was out of danger after the unexpected deliver at 4 a.m. Friday at Rambam Medical Center, said Mary Beth Crumbley, a spokeswoman in Gustafson's Talishassee office.

The unnamed infant, born three months prematurely, is in stable condition in the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit.

"The prognosis is good," said Crumbley.

The baby may be hospitalized a month or longer depending on her progress, she said.

Tom Gustafson, 39, D-Fort Lauderdale, is expected to return to Taliahassee at the end of the week to prepare for the opening of the Legislature April 4. As the leading voice in the House, he holds one of the most powerful jobs in the Legislature.

The Gustafsons were wrapping up a one-week tour of larael when Lynn Gustafson began to experience atomach pains and severe bleeding March 15.

Play tells Cuban-American story

MIAMI — The perils and pratfalls of affluent Cuban-Americans in Miami are extolled in a new play by Luis Santiero, who says "Mixed Blessings" imparts a light-hearted peck at the American dream gone overboard.

In Miami, where ethnic diversity simultaneously can be a harsh and interesting reality, the play attempts to get people to laugh at themselves, to see for at least an evening the positive and humorous side of life in this so-called tropical paradise.

"This play is the first I know of to really put a finger on the cultural climate down here," says Lee Zimmer, of the Coconut Grove Playhouse, where the play will premier this spring. The plot centers around the Parades, a Cuban family who escapes to Miami with virtually nothing, builds the extremely successfull La Casa de Burger fast-food chain and lives in a high-rent bayside townhouse, where the production is set.

It opens as patriarch Horacio Parades decides to run for the county commission. The other eight characters spend two acts trying to convince him that Lopez, his deviliahly handsome. but sleazy and highly controversial man Friday and campaign manager, is using Parades for his own personal gain.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Refugees critical of sponsors

Salvadorans lash out at church's inactivism

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE - Members of the only church in Florida sheltering Salvadoran war refugees were surprised and taken aback when the refugees lashed out at the church in a 4tinging public rebuke.

Through church members and the local Friends of Sanctuary organization, David, Nelson and Edwin secured release from a Texas detention center, found a home and Jobs that enable them to send money to their families and perform political work in support of the Salavordan rebel movement.

Now they bitterly denounce those same members of the First Presbyterian Church and Sanctuary for "colonial paternalism."
Their patrons learned they were being targeted not in person, but through a newspaper article.
"By bringing in the refugees, they think they have done their duty. We don't see it that way," said Nelson who, like his companions, declined to give his full name. citing fears of reprisal against family members back home.

The refugees, who face deportation hearings this summer, insist the are grateful for the help they have received, but also say their benefactors must follow the road they have taken to its end.

"The church hasn't done its duty as it should have," said David, referring to the Christian community in the broad sense. "The church is a place that guides the people, that teaches morality, equality and justice. But this church doesn't do it."

In interviews through a translator with United Press International, the refugees decribed their growing frustration over the past year as they tried to draw their sponsors into deeper political and financial commitment to the Salvadoran rebel movement and increased humanitarian aid.

The small Sanctuary organization, comprised of members of First Presbyterian and other Christian and Jewish congregations with liberal traditions, has gradually been moving toward a more activist stance, said Penny Chang, who helped found the group.

But not fast enough for the refugees amid resurgent death squad activity and the election last weekend of a president from the far-right ARENA party.

'The Salvadorans have lost so much because of what the United States is doing there (in their homeland). They're taking terrible risks. They want us to take risks, to stretch, to not just do work that's safe,"

David, 35, Nelson, 34, and Edwin, 26, dramatized their complaints by going on a hunger strike Sunday thruough Friday afternoon, the anniversary of the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Romero.

They demanded and received permission to camp in the small, informal chapel in the annex at First Presbyterian, whose minister. Brant Copeland, played a pivotal role in securing their release from the detention

The church's session, or policy making body, is still weighing their other demands.

The criticism of their religious allies was part of a broader attack on the U.S. embrace of the recent elections, including Gov. Bob Martinez' role as an official observer. This wasn't the first time Salvadoran refugees clashed with their patrons, said Robin Seamer, of the Chicago Religious Task force on Central America, which coordinates Sanctuary groups sheltering dozens of Salvadoran refugees. Given the cultural differences, difficulties are inevitable, she

But it was the first time to her knowledge any refugees demanded such a profound political and financial commitment.

"They can either become extremely defensive and angry, or say, 'We are going to take this seriously,' "Seamer said.

Anger was one prominent reaction to the demands, said Copeland, who has exchanged hot words with the Salvadorans.

But he said, "If I'd been in their shoes, I'd probably feel the same way."

One problem, both sides agree, is that the refugees speak what one supporter called a "language of urgency," including revolutionary rhetoric little understood by church

A more serious problem, say sympathizers, involves the traditional North American assumption of hemispheric leadership.

"They can really perceive that colonialist treatment and that's what they resent most," said Marisol Mejia, a translator.

Group supports state growth law

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE - Florida's Growth Management Act, under fire from developers and build-ers, gained another ally Friday when members of the 1,000 Friends of Florida said they would enter a court suit in an effort to keep the law intact.

The Department of Community Affairs has been working diligently to come up with a concurrency rule that fairly implements the lutent of the growth management law," said Jim Murley, executive director of the 1.000 Friends of Florida.

"While we respect the right of FHBA to raise the issue, we absolutely disagree with the suit's contention that DCA does not have the authority to in-not have the authority to in-terpret the growth-management law's concurrency provision," Murley said.

The act, which went into effect this year, requires cities and counties to have adequate funds for utilities and roads required by new commercial or residen-

City and county officials say they already are strapped for money and there is no way they can build roads and provide utilities unless taxes or other fees are increased. Builders, represented by the Florida Home Builders Association, have filed suit against DCA in an effort to prevent the state agency from enforcing the law that requires adequate money for roads and utilities before new developments can be authorized.

Developers say the law has brought construction to a stand-still around the state because counties and cities do not have the funds available to meet the provisions of the act.

Joining the FHBA are the Florida Association of Counties, the Florida League of Cities and Dade and Brevard Counties.

Murley said the 1,000 Friends of Florida "applaud the de-partment's decision to put these important policy statements in its rules and see that action as a very positive contribution to the implementation of the state's growth management law."

Judge to decide pilot strike issue

United Press International

MIAMI - A federal judge ordered to determine legality of a sympathy strike by Eastern Airlines' pilots has set a conference for Monday to discuss procedures with the carrier and the pilots' union.

Also expected early this week is the appointment of an examiner to lead the reorganization of the company, which filed for bankruptcy protection March 9, just five days after a strike by the International Association of Machinists began.

All but 200 of Eastern's 3,600 pilots and nearly all the flight attendants have refused to cross the picket lines in a show of folidarity that has crippled the airline. No new negotiations are scheduled between the airline and machinists.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered U.S. District Judge Edward Davis Friday to decide whether Eastern pilots can continue to refuse to work in support of a machinists strike that has crippled the airline. Davis had ruled March 7 that he did not have the authority to in-

The appellate court ruled that Davis must decide whether the refusal by members of the Air Line Pilots Association to work is truly a sympathy strike or an attempt to gain a better position against the airline in future contract negotiations, - which would violate federal law.

But the three-judge appeals panel meeting in Taliahassee declined to issue a temporary injunction ordering the pilots back to work.

Davis scheduled a meeting in Miami Monday for both sides to lay out a schedule for the proceedings.

In New York, a bankruptcy court trustee said he would name an examiner for Eastern next week.

Red tide outbreak on Gulf subsides

CLEARWATER BEACH - An outbreak of red tide that hit the shores of Manatee and Pinellas Counties on the eve of one of the biggest beach weekends of the year subsided Saturday.

The red tide produced sniffles and itchy skin Friday. There werealso two small fish kills, but state officials classifed them as minor and tourists didn't seem to mind. What there was was all but gone Saturday.

"It's not that bad this after-noon," said Ray Dimeo, a lifeguard at Clearwater Beach Saturday.

"We haven't seen any dead fish and people are't complaining of scratchy eyes and coughing like they were yester-

The fumes from the red tide began wasting over area beaches Friday morning, officials with the state Department of Natural Resources said. By evening, reports of watery eyes, runny noses and itchy throats were trickling in from Bradenton to Dunedin.

Red tide refers to a reddish discoloration of sea water caused by organisms that produce a poison that is toxic to fish and other marine life. It is not life-threatening to humans, although it does irritate the respiratory tract. Scientists don't know exactly what causes red tide, but it occurs frequently throughout the Gulf of Mexico and the south Atlantic.

DNR officials classified the red tide flare-up as "minor," but said it could get worse if steady winds hold the poisonous bloom near shore. The unpleasant phenomenon could linger several days or be blown back to sea fairly quickly.

The National Weather Service said the winds were extremely light and were blowing from the west during the day and the east during the night.

Nicaraguan policy a Baker victory

United Press International

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State James Baker scored a major breakthrough on Capitol Hill with his skilled negotiations on U.S. policy for Nicaragua that left most congressional Democrats heralding the start of a new bipartisanship.

As Baker began the negotations about three weeks ago, he was burdened with a legacy of deep distrust built up during the Reagan administration on the one foreign policy issue that most deeply divided the White House and Congress.

"We wanted to trust Mr. Baker," said House Democratic whip Tony Cochlo of California. "And he wanted to trust us."

But House Democratic leader Tom Foley of Washington said the problem was "eight years of great differences and suspicions policy." on both sides."

Prior to September 1, 1989, Seminole County will submit its final statement of objectives and projected use of funds for its Community Development Block Grant Program for 1989-90. The County has received $4,846,000 in funding since October, 1986 for activities in lower-income neighborhoods throughout Seminole County and the cities of Altamonte Springs, Casselberry, Lake Mary, Longwood, Oviedo, Sanford and Winter Springs.

SEMINOLE COUNTY, FLORIDA

A public hearing will be held on April 4, 1989 in order to provide information about the past performance of the Community Development Block Grant Program and the status of current activities and projects. The hearing will be held at 7:00 P.M. in room W-120 of the Seminole County Services Building located at 1101 East First Street in Sanford, Florida.

All Seminole County residents are encouraged to attend and participate in this public hearing. For more information call the Seminole County Planning Department at 321-1130 extension 384.

Soviet election brings threat of general strike

United Press International

MOSCOW - Boris Yeltsin's backers will cripple Moscow with a one-day general strike if he fails to gain a parliamentary seat in the Soviet Union's first multi-candidate elections, a campaign organizer for the former local party boss warned Saturday.

The warning on the eve of historic voting for a new national legislature was issued as thousands of people railied for Yeltsin and the maverick populist candidate accused the Communist Party of using undemocratic methods to block his bid for a seat in the congress.

Voting in remote Siberia began Friday.

The voting Sunday, the first since the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution to give Soviet citizens a choice of candidates, is a centerpiece of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's bold program to democratize his country. On the last day of campaigning for the elections, more than 10,000 people chanting "Yeltsin, Yeltsin!" attended his final rally in a parking lot, outside the Lenin sports stadium.

Hundreds of police, some of them on horseback, watched the demonstrators but did not intervene in the largest gathering of Yeltsin's campaign, which was staged only 24 hours after its organizers received permission to hold it. Posters publicizing the rally were plastered in subway cars and buses throughout the city.

Soviet poet Yevgeny
Yevtushenko addressed the rally and later told reporters that Yeltsin's campaign presented an unprecedented opportunity for democratization.

'Most people here today are working people, and this is the first time we have a choice, even if it is a limited choice." Yevtushenko said. "What we are witnessing here is history. We must make this start and move on to full free elections."

Yeltsin was fired from his posts as a junior Politburo member and as Moscow party boss in November 1987 after he criticized opponents of the pace of Gorbachev's ambitious reforma.

In his attempt to make a political comeback, Yeltsin is pitted Sunday against Yevgeny Brakov, a party-approved candidate and head of a major car factory in Moscow.
Yeltsin's populist platform has included fierce attacks on the privileges of the Communist Party elite. He has also urged Soviet leaders to consider permitting the formation of an opposition political party, a radi-cal proposal that Gorbachev has not embraced.

In a move that Yeltsin's supporters have decried as part of a smear campaign against him. the party's Central Committee launched an investigation into vague allegations of unethical campaign practices.

Moscovskaya Pravda, the official newspaper of the Moscow branch of the Communist Party. previously published letters aimed at discrediting the former local party chief.

Many of his supporters, pointing to Yeltsin's challenge to the status quo and the controversy his campaign has stirred, have expressed fears that election officials may try to stuff the ballot box with votes for Brakov or otherwise manipulate the final tally. "I am sorry to say that the methods used in this campaign are far from democratic ones, Yeltsin said in a letter published newspaper. Oleg Rumansev, a political scientist and a key campaign organizer for clisin, said his supporters would protest an election-day loss by their candidate. "I want to say that if Yeltsin does not get into the congress, we will hold a general strike in protest — a one day strike," Rumansev said. "We believe that, yes, he will win this election. Our own polls show this. But if he does not, we will show solidarity with our candidate and call for a strike. I hope it will not come to that."

Rumansev added: "We know there are attempts to prevent his victory, but the polls clearly show he must win."

Some participants in the rally shouted out calls for the introduction of a multi-party system in the Soviet Union, and others responded with rousing choruses of "Yes, yes, we support it!"

One banner, expressing what has become the standard campaign reference to a multi-party system, read: "We are for social-ist pluralism."

The Soviet Constitution bans any party other than the Com-munist organization. Yeltsin has been careful to stop short of actually supporting the establishment of an opposition party, saying only that Soviet leaders and citizens should debate the issue.

Yeltsin, apparently fearing that his appearance at the rally might spark confrontations between his supporters and police. did not speak to the crowd.

"We cannot risk a provocation now, so close to election day -to our victory day," Rumansev

In an internal campaign phone poll of 500 Moscow voters Friday. Yeltsin claimed the support of 76 percent of those surveyed while Brakov was backed by only 9 percent of those responding, Rumansev said. The rest of the polied group was undecided, he said.

A total of 1,500 posts in the new 2,250-seat Congress of People's Deputies were to be contested Sunday. Yeltsin's contest and races pitting Balticnationalists against party can-didates in the country's three Baltic republics have provided controversy among other lackluster campaigns.

A group of American lawyers and scholars sponsored by the Washington-based International Human Rights Law Group arrived in the Soviet Union to monitor voting in the Moscow

"The right of political participation is a fundamental human right, and we are here to ensure it is carried out," said Amy Young, a Washington attorney in the delegation.

U.S. team gives Hanoi more MIA data

BANGKOK, Thailand — U.S. officials gave Vietnam additional information on missing American servicemen this week in hopes of boosting joint efforts to account for those missing in action. authorities said Saturday.

"We had a most productive and positive meeting focusing exclusively on the issue of missing Americans," said a statement from a six-man U.S. team led by Col. Joe Harvey.

The three day talks were the ninth round of discussions on MIAs since the two nations agreed to renew joint efforts to account for nearly 2,400 missing Americans, a pact reached in August 1987 during a visit by Gen. John Vessey.

'Discussion ranged from investigations of live sighting reports to excavations of U.S. crash sites," said the statement from Harvey's, team, which traveled to Hanol Wednesday and returned to Bangkok Friday night.

"We also provided the Vietnamese with additional information on missing Americans to use in their unilateral resolution efforts in line with agreement reached during the Vessey mission."

U.S. Embassy spokesman Ross Petzing said Saturday, "The talks concentrated on plans for moving forward with joint investigations" in cases where there are discrepancies.

Opposition to unite against Takeshita

TOKYO - Japan's splintered opposition parties have pledged to bury differences in a bid to end Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's 17-month rule and oust his conservative Liberal Democratic Party from power after a 34-year uninterrupted reign, news reports said Saturday.

The nation's three largest opposition groups, which have individually demanded Takeshita's resignation to accept blame for Japan's worst political and financial scandal in 13 years, will announce plans for a broad-based coalition in the coming month, the Kyodo News Service said.

The parties hope to form a united front, the news agency said, to force the resignation of the Takeshita cabinet and establish a caretaker government prior to a general election.

But while many analysts agree Takeshita may eventually be forced from power over the scandal, most doubt the opposition parties will be able to muster enough clout to depose the powerful LDP, which has ruled Japan since its founding in 1955.

In another development, the Tokyo District Prosecutor's office was reported to have finished questioning current and former aides of top politicians implicated in the scandal, including those of Takeshita and former prime minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Mubarak, Hussein, Arafat hold summit

ISMAILIYA, Egypt - President Hosni Mubarak, Jordan's King Hussein and PLO leader Yasser Arafat held a mini-summit Saturday on prospects for Middle East peace and agreed to work toward readmitting Egypt to the Arab League.

The meeting on the eve of the 10th anniversary of the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty was held in the wake of the second meeting between the United States and the Palestine Liberation Organization, and before scheduled visits to Washington by Mubarak, Hussein and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to discuss the U.S. peacemaking role in the region under the Bush administration. Egypt's semi-official Middle East News Agency said the three Arab leaders, accompanied by top political and military aides, began the talks during a one-hour cruise in the Suez Canal and continued their discussions in the resort city of Ismailiya, about 75 miles east of Cairo.

At a news conference after five hours of talks. Hussein pledged the leaders of Jordan, Iraq and North Yemen will not attend any summit meeting of Arab leaders unless Egypt was invited.

Egypt's membership in the 22-member Arab League was suspended in the aftermath of the 1979 Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty. Egypt, Jordan, Iraq and North Yemen established the Arab Cooperation Council last month to forge closer economic cooperation and political coordination in an apparent bid to end Egypt's decade-old isolation in the Arab world.

Arafat told the news conference the PLO is trying to convene an emergency Arab summit to forge "a comprehensive Arab plan" and the main issue of discussion would be the readmission of Egypt to the Arab League.

Security tight in wake of hijack warning

United Press International

LONDON - Easter holiday travelers at European airports braved lines and questioning by security officials advising passengers to leave electronic gadgets at home, while U.S. officials sought whoever leaked a restricted memo warning of a possible jet hijacking.

The London-based Independent newspaper, meanwhile, reported that U.S. officials warned Dec. 7 of a potential terrorist attack, after two men posing as police asked Trans World Airlines in West Germany for information about how American carriers transport explosives.

That warning from the Federal Aviation Administration was issued two weeks before 270 people died when a Pan American World Airways Flight 103 was blown up over Scotland by a bomb hidden in a radio-cassette player. The flight originated in Frankfurt, West Germany.

Throughout Europe, airports tightened security Friday because of the March 17 bulletin from the FAA, which has been criticized for concealing from the public the latest warning of a

The FAA memo names three Palestinians who might try to hijack a U.S. jetliner in Europe. It says they are believed to be traveling on forged passports. and warned all airlines and security forces in the United States, Britain and Europe to be on the alert.

As a result, British airport security was increased, with special measures for flights to the United States.

Travelers at London's Heathrow Airport faced X-ray screening of hand baggage and brief interviews by security personnel, who asked if they had packed their own luggage and whether anyone had asked them to carry something on board.

should not bring "any unnecessary electrical equipment subject to security checks, such as radios, lap-top computers and cussette tape players.

Many travelers at Heathrow encountered long lines, but most flights left on time. An earlymorning power outage in an air-traffic control computer delayed flights at airports in Birmingham and Manchester.

In France, the Interior Ministry said security was already extremely tight at the two international airports serving Paris and that extraordinary measures were unnecessary. "It's hard to do more when security is already at a maximum, 'a ministry spokeswoman said.

Air France and American spokeswoman said passengers Airlines said their international flights were arriving and departing on schedule Friday.

A French traveler who arrived at Orly Airport four hours before his scheduled afternoon flight to the United States said he did not object to the longer check-in times and expressed approval of publicizing terrorist threats.

Letting the public know about a plot against an airline also lets terrorists know the plot has been uncovered," he said.

In Washington, Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner promised to find the person who divulged the March 17 security bulletin, saying such a leak could compromise U.S. intelligence and risk the lives of air travelers.

"I consider this to be a very serious matter, and I have instructed the FAA to begin an immediate investigation to determine who leaked this sensitive information," Skinner said in a statement. "In addition, my team of personal representatives currently is in London gathering information on this incident as part of their mission.

Alaskan oil spill clean-up efforts stalled

United Press International

VALDEZ, Alaska - Cleanup efforts were stalled Saturday after aerial bombing failed to disperse the biggest oil spill in U.S. history blackening icebergs and pristine waters teeming with marine life off southeast Alaska.

Nearly 36 hours after the spill, almost nothing was being done worrying biologists and angering state officials and fishermen. The 5-mile-long by 3-mile-wide spill was too big for the limited containment booms and small supply of clean-up equipment in Valdez.

'We simply don't have enough equipment to contain it." said Gov. Steve Cowper after touring the spill site. "No one does. You couldn't contain it with all the equipment in North America."

Exxon Shipping Co. President Frank larossi told reporters, fishermen and worried citizens. "Exxon takes full responsibility," but the company's planeloads of oil spill clean-up equipment were overdue in Valdez Saturday.

Officials still have not concluded why the 987-foot tanker "Exxon Valdez" ran aground early Friday, but the captain. Joseph Hazelwood, submitted to a blood alcohol test.

Coast Guard Lt. Ed Wieliczkiewicz said the sample was still being analyzed, but the test came hours after the captain had left Valdez, and officials were unsure whether the tests would give them evidence they were seeking.

The ship was built in 1986 and is one of Exxon's largest.

The state Department of Environmental Conservation said Exxon's dispersant failed because Prince William Sound waters were too calm for the dispersant to do the job. Rougher seas were required for a better mixing action.

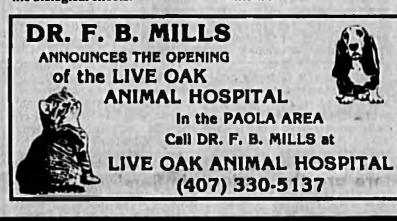

DEC also said in a statement that it prefers other methods of clean-up in order to minimize the biological effects.

Fishermen used stronger language.

"We don't want them to drop chemical dispersant," herring fishermen Margaret Salmon said. "That's going to make the fish toxic, too. We're at our wit's end. They sem to think they can just spray this stuff everywhere. At this point, we'd try to clean it up ourselves, but it's too big."

Riki Ott. a fisherman and marine toxicologist, said the oil dispersants would poison fish.

But fisheries for herring, salmon, shrimp, crab and oysters were being threatened by oil, the state Department of Fish and Game said.

Funding for the Strategic Defense Initiative program has been the subject of much controversy on Capitol Hill. Thus far, nearly $15 billion has been spent.

A look back and ahead at 'Star Wars' proposal

UP! analysis

WASHINGTON - Six years ago, President Reagan announced his intention to commit the United States to a research program for a space-age defensive weapon that could render nuclear missiles obsolete.

Formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, or SDI, the program's goal of using laser beams to destroy nuclear missiles in space led to the nickname "Star Wars" after the popular movie of the same name.

Nearly $15 billion in taxpayers' money has been spent on the complex and multifaceted research program that has become one of the most contentious issues facing nations in both the East and West.

Proponents argue SDI could eventually provide ways of removing the threat of nuclear annihilation. Critics see it as a waste of money or a threat that could lead to a new arms race with the Sovi-

Since Reagan's address March 23, 1983, what exactly has the SDI accomplished and where is it going?

Some 33,000 people nationwide are working on the SDI, the largest military research and development program since the Manhattan Project that developed the atomic bomb in 1945.

SDI research is being conducted across the country and around the world. Far from secret, it has its own logo - a star-encrusted medieval shield rising into space over the United States - and a modern office beneath the Pentagon's doughnut shop.

Technological advances have been reported in lasers and particle beams, sur-veillance and tracking satellites, and guidance and control systems of high-speed interceptor or "killer" rockets.

Scientists are ready to begin examining hardware from their research labs in realistic conditions. This year is expected to be the busiest year for tests in SDI history.

One of the higgest is the $130 million Delta Star satellite, to be launched aboard an unmanned Delta rocket by the end of the month from Cape Canaveral.

Delta Star will orbit for six months, determining what missiles, warheads and decoys look like against a variety of backgrounds in space - information that can be used to build sensors that guide interceptors to their targets.

But actual deployment of an SDI missile defense system is not expected until the 1990s - if then.

And that might be only a "limited" system of system of ground-based rockets that would be sent up to collide head-on with nuclear missiles launched at the United States by accident, by terrorists or by a Third World nation.

The popular notion of a space-based "Star Wars" machine firing powerful laser beams in seconds to destroy thousands of incoming nuclear warheads during an all-out Soviet attack will not be realized until the 21st century, if at all.

SDI research is looking at two kinds of weapon systems: kinetic energy, intended to destroy missiles by collision; sensor-interceptor.

and directed energy, which would use high-power lasers or particle beams to burn through a missile housing.

No SDI interceptor rockets contain nuclear or high explosive warheads. They make their kills by collision. The Pentagon's plan is to:

-Develop by the mid-1990s and deploy by 2000 a "Phase 1" SDI system of surveillance and tracking satellites to sight enemy missiles, sensors to home in and guide intercep-tors, and both ground-based and space-based interceptor rockets to collide with the missiles. Estimated cost: $69 billion.

-Later add a "Phase 2" system of directed energy weapons, either laser or particle beams, that could zap missiles. No cost estimates are available and rockets do not exist that can lift today's heavy laser machines into

But this plan may be altered in the next few months.

The future of the SDI is now part of the Bush administration's national security and strategic review, expected to be completed in late April or carly May.

As a presidential candidate, George Bush promised, "I am committed to deployment of SDI as soon as feasible, and will determine the exact architecture of the system in my first term."

Yet, Reagan's final request of $5.8 billion for the SDI for 1990 is expected to be revised downward following the Bush review, said the new head of the SDI. Air Force Lt. Gen. George Monahan.

And some members of Congress are talking of changing the program's direction so that it can develop a more limited, simpler and less expensive defensive system more quickly.

SDI officials might be told this year — by Bush, Congress or both — to move toward development of a smaller system that falls short of the Phase 1 goal but which could be deployed earlier in the 1990s. Three alternatives have been drawn up by the Citing the need for a system to protect against an accidental launch or a nuclear attack by terrorists, Chairman Sam Nunn, D.Ga., of the Senate Armed Forces Committee asked the Pentagon to study a simpler ground-based defense he named the Accidental Launch Protection System, or ALPS.

This would be similar to the Anti-Ballistic Missile defense the United States briefly deployed in the early 1970s. A major difference is that these ground-based interceptors would not use nuclear warheads like the ABM.

In conducting the study, the Pentagon also proposed its own alternative, named the Limited Protection System, which would include both ground- and space-based interceptor rockets.

That particular system will encompass ALPS and ... is an intermediate system on the road to Phase 1. That is what we ... will take to Congress to satisfy an accidental launch requirement," said chief SDI scientist O'Dean Judd.

A third alternative is known as Brilliant Pebbles. Each "pebble" is a single selfcontained space-based

They both have a quality of life they're trying to protect. Winter Park has grown about as much as it's going to. Growth (in Lake Mary) is inevitable but it needs to be controlled," Litton Litton says the top two priorities at his new job are the budget, which is coming up for review, and recreational facilities. He also intends to direct his attention to the city's comprehensive plan as it "gets closer to the timetable to resolving the Taking on a new job with challenging responsibilities has become a source of excitement for Litton, but he doesn't hide the fact that he needed a little coaxing before accepting Lake Mary's offer.

"At first I wasn't interested in Lake Mary. However, once I had the opportunity to see it (the city) first-hand and talk to people, I started to see the opportunity that was there. Hopefully, I'll bring a level of professionalism that will be beneficial," he says.

Originally from the western state of Idaho, Litton is a family man who says he enjoys "being a part of the community" and "physical activity". He is married to Paulette, a Tuskawilla Middle School teacher. The couple celebrated their 17th wedding anniversary Saturday. They have three daughters. he was leaving Winter Park. Litton started as acting city manager in Winter Park in June. 1979. Only about two years later, he was a guest on talk shows all over the world and the United States concerning a significant event in Winter Park. It was May 9, 1981 and it was Litton's oldest daughter's birthday. He was out shopping when he was paged and told to report in right away. A huge ainkhole on Denning Avenue opened up and was already swallowing up trees, homes, swimming pools and cars by the time Litton got to the scene.

'That was really the first sinkhole in a municipal area. It was like flushing a tollet," Litton says pointing to photographs on his wall of a house and a Porsche being swallowed by the earth. Shortly after that incident, Litton was interviewed by a Japanese radio station and by news correspondents all over the world. He also appeared on the network news show "Good Morning America."

"I hardly slept at all," Litton savs.

In another incident one year prior to the one involving the sinkhole, Litton, clad in a three-piece suit, guided a rowboat with no paddle to help 23 senior citizens who fell into the lake after their tour boat capsized 100 yards offshore.

"I was talking to the fire chief when he got a report that one of the tour boats (Chain of Lakes canal system) capsized...1'll never forget this. I had a threepiece suit on. Escapee captured after taking hostage, shooting officer

United Press International

OAK CREEK, Wis. — An Indiana prison escapee who took an X-ray technician hostage and later released him unharmed in Chicago was arrested early Saturday after shooting an Oak Creek policeman in the hand, authorities said.

Ronald Raymond Plummer, 38, and an alleged accomplice were being treated early Saturday at a hospital for undetermined injuries. Oak Creek Police Lt. James Lampe said.

The injured policeman, whose name was not immediately released, suffered a superficial wound to his right index finger, Lampe said.

The arrest of Plummer and Lisa Bonvillian of Cincinnati ended a three-state drama that unfolded after Plummer overpowered authorities and escaped from an Indianapolis hospital, where he had been taken for what turned out to be a contrived allment.

The Oak Creek policeman checked on a suspicious car about 4:15 a.m. Saturday at a Union 76 truck stop. Plummer and Bonvillian were in the car, authorities said.

'As the police officer approached, the driver got out of the vehicle and pointed two handguns and told him to get down on the pavement," Lampe said. "The officer thought, I can't do this because I could be dead,' so he took off running. Plummer shot at him and struck the officer once in the right index finger."

Plummer fled south on Interstate 94 as the injured policeman pursued the car and radioed for assistance, Lampe said. The Milwaukee County Sheriff's Department joined in the chase. but the car managed to clude authorities.

About two hours later, Racine County sheriff's deputies spotted the vehicle and found Plummer and Bonvillian in a barn about 3 miles south of

"It is my understanding they did not put up any resistance," Oak Creek Police Sgt. Warren Endthoff said. "They are in the custody of the Racine Sheriff's Department."

Assault weapons to be stopped at border

LOS ANGELES - A Treasury Department agency, stunned when it discovered that it had given gun dealers permission to import more than 400,000 assault rifles, has ordered all shipments of the weapons halted at the nation's borders, it was reported Saturday.

The action goes far beyond steps taken earlier this month, when the Bush administration announced a temporary moratorium on issuing new permits for five types of assault weapons, including the AK-47

The Los Angeles Times said the new order essentially revokes licenses that already had been issued to gun importers, a step almost certain to be challenged in court.

William T. Drake, a top official at Treasury's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, refused to disclose how many weapons have been approved for importation.

However, a knowledgeable Customs Service source told the newspaper the number is 420,000.

These weapons were not affected by the moratorium two weeks ago, which only blocked approval of new applications for weapons imports.

Hundreds arrested at abortion protests

LOS ANGELES - Hoisting photographs of aborted fetuses. militant anti-abortionists staged a boisterous sit-in Saturday in a finale to a three-day campaign that led to more than 650 arrests.

More than 300 arrests were made Saturday as some 1,500 anti-abortion demonstrators and their opponents surrounded the Family Planning Associates building in the largest of the demonstrations that began Thursday.

Leading the anti-abortionists on their "Holy Week of Rescue" protest was Randall A. Terry, founder of the controversial Binghamton, N.Y.-based group made up largely of fundamental Christians.

The protest began shortly after daybreak under leaden skies and a light drizzle. The weather worsened as the clinic was besieged and arrests began shortly after 10 a.m. in a downpour. No one was hurt, but an ambulance was called for one protester who passed out. Pro-abortion forces called it "pure pandemonium." In the end.

they also claimed victory and planned a celebration. About 300 helmeted officers, some on foot and others on horseback, hauled the anti-abortionists into waiting buses after being greeted by counter-demonstrators with signs reading, "Pro-choice loves LAPD."

Gunman killed in firefight with police

NEW YORK - A deadly firefight erupted between five heavily armed robbers and several police officers summoned by two workers who were able slip free during a "botched robbery" at an upper Manhattan beer distributorship.

One customer who had been in the store at the time of the late-afternoon robbery Friday was shot in the left leg and hospitalized. No police officers or warehouse employees were hurt in the gunfight.

"They were a stickup team and it was a botched robbery," said Sgt. Maurice Howard, a police spokesman. "The suspects retreated into the store during the gunfire."

FBI recovers $3.5 million in stolen art

United Press International

NEW YORK - The FBI recovered $3.5 million in artwork and antiquities - including a Yuan Dynasty vase it valued at $2 million - allegedly snatched by two men in daylight thefts at museums in five states, officials

The thefts between Jan. 12 and Feb. 25 were carried out while the museums were open to the public and in some cases the thieves stuffed the objects under their overcoats to get them out. FBI Assistant Director James Fox said Friday.

The 24 pieces stolen from museums in Boston, Baltimore, Detroit, Columbus, Ohio, and in Albany and Syracuse, N.Y., were recovered over the past 17 days in the New York metropolitan area. Fox said at a news conference with U.S. Attorney Benito

'Apparently they scouted various museums, they spotted items that they thought accessible and that they could conceal and remove from the museum." he said. "There were no indications that they were connisseurs of fine art.

FBI agents arrested George Athanasotos, 34, on March 7 and Ronald Cortesciii, 28, on March 14 and charged them with the thefts, Fox said. Both men pleaded innocent Thursday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan and were ordered held without ball for warrants on art theft charges in Baltimore and Albany.

Besides the $2 million Yuan Dynasty Mei-Ping-type porcelain vase stolen Feb. 19 from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, agents also recovered a $450,000 blue and white Ming Dynasty bowl stolen Jan. 13 from the Columbus Museum of Art, the statement said.

Also recovered were a $500,000 ceramic scarab vase taken from the Everson Museum in Syracuse; an 18th century statue of "The Four Sons of King George III" and a 17th century Tibetan statue titled the "Buddhist Lion" stolen Feb. 11 from the Albany Institute of History

Chilean fruit back in stores after two-week ban by U.S.

United Press International

Chilean fruit returned to grocery shelves for the first time since the discovery of two cyanide-contaminated grapes almost two weeks ago, industry officials said.

The fruit, which was shipped to markets on the Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico and Pacific coasts, was subject to more stringent inspection than was required before the tainted grapes were found March 12. George Carstens, president of the American Produce Association, said Friday.

"Welcome Back, Grapes of Wrath" read a sign on red and green seedless grapes set out for sale Friday at the Fairway market on Manhattan's Upper West Side, said specialty foods manager David Grotenstein.

"We're not worried about them," Grotenstein said. "I think everyone's putting out signs to tell people where they came from just to save warning. I just tried one and it was excellent."

Chilean apples and pears were selling briskly at the Hunts Point Terminal, a 113-acre market of wholesalers in the Bronx, but the supply was far below average, spokeswoman Myra Gordon said.

"This time of year, Chilean fult is 35 percent of the wholesalers' business," Gordon said. "It hasn't been anywhere near that in the last 48 hours."

But there were no signs that retailers were hesitating to buy the produce from the market. which felt "a moral responsiblity" to remove the fruit last week, she added.

"That same moral responsibility prevails in that we would not have taken it for sale if we were not absolutely certain of its safety," she said.

In Philadelphia, Jim Ro of Ro and Sons, produce wholesalers who supply 70 retail outlets. said, "It's too early to tell what themselves time. It's not a the customers' reaction will be. The fruit's only been back on the shelves for 24 hours."

According to new regulations established by the Food and Drug Administration, 5 percent of all Chilean fruit ertaring the United States will be inspected for contamination. That figure was less than 1 percent before the discovery of the tainted fruit.

Food stores pulled Chilean fruit from their shelves after inspectors in Philadelphia, acting on telephone threats to the U.S. Embassy in Chile, found two grapes contaminated with nonlethal quantities of cyanide on March 12.

The FDA ordered that all fruit imports from Chile be impounded after the discovery. On March 17, the FDA decided to allow the fruit into the country. but ordered more thorough inspections and the destruction of shipments already delivered.

The incident triggered an estimated loss of a quarterbillion dollars to U.S. importers.

Bruins parlay power plays

BOSTON - The Boston Bruins successfully anticipated the desperation of the Chicago Blackhawks.

Chicago, locked in a tough battle with Toronto for the last playoff spot in the Norris Division, found its aggressive style turned into several penalties, and the Bruins capitalized on the power play Sunday for a 6-3 victory.

'Considering their circumstances, we knew they'd have to come out and play ag-gressively." Bruins Coach Terry O'Reilly said. "And we figured that they'd take a lot of penalties playing that way. They did."

Ken Linseman's goal at 12:43 of the third period broke a 3-3 tie and gave the Bruins the lead for good. Linseman banged the rebound of his own shot past goaltender Alain Chevrier.

SEDDLE BROOM TOWNSHIP, N.J. Lawrence Taylor, who is one drug violation away from being banned from the NFL, passed driving Friday, the New Jersey State Police said

State Police Superintendent Clinton Pagano said the state police drug lab's results on Taylor's urine sample proved negative for any types of drugs.

Taylor, the New York Glants' All-Prolinebacker, would be banned from the NFL for at least a year if he tested positive again for drugs. He is considered a two-time offender against the NFL drug policy.

Taylor, 30, was arrested Friday morning on drunken driving charges. State police found him sitting in his 1989 Jeep on the side of the Garden State Parkway.

Taylor was charged after he failed some field sobriety tests administered by a state trooper at about 3:30 a.m. He voluntarily submitted a urine sample to police after his arrest.

Fisher, who replaced Bill Frieder See Michigan, Page 2B

Wolverines after Frieder signed to coach Arizona State next year, became the first interim coach in NCAA history to go to the Final Four.

Under normal circumstances, one might think that distinction would force the tag of "interim" to be removed. Fisher is a perfect 4-0 as head coach. But perfection isn't always enough for Fisher's boss. Michigan football coach and Athletic Director Ho Scharphackler. Athletic Director Bo Schembechler, who removed Frieder from the job when news broke of his leaving for Arizona State.

"We're not making any decision until after the tournament. Schembechler said as Michigan scored its 100th point in the rout.

Asked if the overwhelming victory would help Fisher's chances. Schembechler said, "All I will tell you is we're going to the Final

Pirates run over UNLV

United Press International

DENVER - Seton Hall's withering defense and a 14-point second-half surge ignited by Australian Andrew Gaze sent the Pirates rolling past Nevada-Las Vegas 84-61 Saturday, and into the NCAA tournament's Final Four for the first

The Pirates, playing in the tournament for only the second time, won their 30th game this season and gave the Big East Conference the first of a possible three Final Four teams.

Seton Hall claimed the West Regional championship with a typical performance, playing the competition even for the early part of the game and then relying on its non-stop defense to wear down the opponent.

The Pirates will play in the national semifinals at Scattle's Kingdome next Saturday against either Georgetown or Duke - who will play for the East Regional title Sunday in East Rutherford, N.J. The other semifinal will send Michigan against either Syracuse or Illinois.

Gaze, a member of the Australian national team and the leading scorer in the Olympic basketball tournament at Seoul last summer. scored 19 to lead Seton Hall. His play in other areas — rebounding. passing and defending UNLV star Stacey Augmon - made Gaze the

Waring, Hargraves pitch SCC past North Hampton

By DEAN SMITH Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Jim Waring and Rick Hargraves combined on a three-hitter and the offense pounded out 17 hits as Seminole Community College defeated visiting North Hampton Area Community College of Pennsylvania 6-0 in a junior college baseball contest at Raider Field Friday sflermoon.

The win increased the SCC Raiders' record to 6-19 as they prepare for three Mid-Florida Conference contests

On Tuesday at 3:00 p.m., the Raiders travel to Orlando to take on Valencia Community College before returning home on Thursday to host St. John's River Community College at 3:00 p.m.. Next Saturday, SCC will travel to Jacksonville to take on Florida Community College at 2:00 p.m.

Waring was nearly flawless Friday, giving up only one hit - a double to the first batter of the game - in his five innings of work. He struck out six and walked three as no runner got past second.

Hargraves was nearly as effective in his four innings ☐ See Raiders, Page 4B

With Seminole locked in a pitcher's duel with Lake Howell, Harvey Clinger tried to get something going for the Tribe when he attempted to steal second. Clinger was tagged out by Eddie Smith (No. 11) and Lake Howell won in eight

Cure seems to be working: Hawks win again in eight

By TONY DeSORMIER Herald sports editor

CASSELBERRY - When looking for the answer to the problems his team faced earlier this season. Lake Howell High School baseball coach Birto Benjamin concocted a cure that could have just as easily killed the Silver Hawks.
With his team plagued by errors and slowed by a lack of intensity. Benjamin decided to go with his younger players. He made the changes earlier this week, when the Hawks traveled to Lake Mary for a game with the Rams.

Now, there are those who would have called such a move, especially when it came against one of the Seminole Athletic Conference's top teams at their home field, a form of diamond

But Benjamin seems to have happened upon the right formula. On Wednesday, Lake Howell surprised Lake Mary 3-1 in extra innings. Then, on Friday night, the Silver Hawks did it again, pulling out a 3-2 win over the visiting Seminole Fighting Seminoles in eight innings.

"It (going with the young players) could have killed us." said Benjamin after his team improved its record to 6-11, 3-5 in SAC play. "We had to do something. If it had killed, I would have taken it and kept playing the young kids. Fortunately, it went our way

"The kids are going to perform. The young players are the key to the whole thing. It'll make the other guys play harder because if they don't want to play hard. I'll put someone else in. I think they believe me now."

Actually, there were two changes in Lake Howell's lineup against Seminole from the group that faced Lake Mary. Senior Bobby Moose was the starting pitcher while senior Bobby Lieflander started in center field.

The alterations didn't seem to hurt the balance as Moose struck out 10 (he had 14 on the season going into the game) and allowed just two hits while Lieflander drove in the Hawks' first two runs with a second inning single.

Lake Howell's second inning surge started when Luis Guevars and Eddie Smith opened the inning with singles. After a botched sacrifice attempt, the base runners moved up a base when Seminole failed to execute a rundown. Lieflander then sliced a single to right, scoring both

Even though Moose was near untouchable, Seminole managed to tie the game with just one hit. In the fourth inning, Seminole pitcher James Joyce reached on an error, took second on a ground ball and scored on a single by Bubba Corst. In the sixth inning. Joyce tied the score when he walked, stole second and came around to score on an infield error.

"We gave up base hits for Lent," joked Seminole coach Mike Powers, whose team fell to 6-7, 2-4 with the loss. "And am I glad Lent is almost over.

"We made some mistakes at the beginning of the game. When they scored their two runs, we helped them by throwing the ball around. That really hurt. And in the eighth inning, we had the bases loaded, but we have no clutch hitting. I just Bec Cure, Page 4B

Newcomers play key roles for Illinois, Syracuse

United Press International

MINNEAPOLIS - Newcomers Marcus Liberty of Illinois and Billy Owens of Syracuse have played key roles in getting their teams into the NCAA Midwest Regional championship game and will help determine who advances to the Final Four.

Liberty, a Proposition 48 sophomore, and Owens, a freshman, were touted as the nation's No. 1 or 2 top recruits the past two seasons. Both have gradually improved this year, gaining the praise of their coaches and teammates.

Liberty was an emergency replacement for the banged up Illini in Friday night's 83-69 victory over Louisville in the regional semifinals and played one of his most consistent games of the season. The 6-foot-8 forward from Chicago finished with 14 points, 8 rebounds and 3 steals in 33 minutes.

'Marcus just had a total game." Illinois Coach Lou Henson said. "He had an outstanding game. Marcus went down to Indianapolis last week (for the first two rounds of the tournament), got a few minutes in and he's a different player."

Owens scored 17 of his 25 points in the first half of Friday's 83-80 victory over Missouri, with star center Derrick Coleman in foul trouble for much of the game. The 6.9 forward from Carlisle, Pa., hit 10 of 14 shots from the field and added 8 rebounds while playing the entire 40 minutes.

In the first game of the tournament, with Coleman out with back problems. Owens came through with career highs of 27 points and 13 rebounds. He has become the highest scoring freshman in Syracuse history with 472 points.

"Billy came into a situation where ... he had to fit in and really become a part of the team. where he was used to being 'the' team," Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim said.

"He listened and reacted accordingly. When we've been in trouble and needed him to score points, he's scored points. He did the things he has had to do to get this team to where it is today. If he did anything differently, we wouldn't be here.

Liberty, who led his high school team to the Illinois Class AA title in his junior year, will again start in Sunday's regional championship against Syracuse. Owens, who led his high school team to four straight Class AAAA state titles, also will be invaluable member of a talentladen Pirates team.

Gaze scored five of Seton Hall's first six points on the 14-0 run that gave the Pirates a 15-point lead.

Daryll Walker added 12 for Seton Hall, 30-6, and backup foward Anthony Avent had 11. So dominant was the Scion Hall bench that the Pirates were able to control the Rebels' Inside attack without 6-8 star Ramon Ramos for most of the game. Ramos picked up two early fouls and even in the second half Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo chose to go without Ramos for several minutes.

UNLV and David Butler added Anderson Hunt, whose 3point shot with three seconds left beat No. 1 Arizona Thursday night, scored just one field goal and seven points for the Runnin' Rebels, 29-8.

The Rebels overcame an early 8-3 deficit with an 18-6 run and took a seven-point advantage with 8:43 remaining in the first half.

But Seton Hall then began shutting out the Rebels' inside game and UNLV went cold from the outside. The Rebels' guards were a combined 3-of-17 in the first half. Despite that, Seton Hall had led by one six minutes into the second half. But over the next five minutes the Pirates put the Rebels away with their 14-0 run. Seton Hall, in slowly gaining the national recognition it deonly a 34-30 lead at halftime and serves, has continually produced one of the best defensive efforts in college basketball. In Seton Hall's Journey to the Final Four, the Pirates allowed Southwest Missouri a 44 percent Evanaville 39 percent, Indiana 39 percent and UNLV less than 40 percent.

With Georgetown and Syracuse still in the running for the national title, the Big East is trying to repeat its achievement of five years ago when it sent three teams to the Final Four — St. John's, Georgetown and national champion Villanova.

But Fisher has an opinion. 'With all of this media exposure, there is no question that this has helped Steve Fisher in probably getting the head coaching job," Fisher said. "But that isn't our focus right now."

Although Schembechler and Fisher say they will wait until after the tournament to discuss the Michigan coaching situation. Fisher certainly wants to be a head coach somewhere.

"With all the jobs open, I probably have a shot at being a head coach next year and that is my goal," he said.

Fisher's more immediate goal is to win the national champion-

We will be prepared to play hard. We will be prepared to play smart," Fisher said. "I think if you do that, you have a chance, We will be anxious and we will be excited and we will be ready." Between now and Saturday's

Spring is also turkey hunting season

7 Spring is in the airl Spring means many different things to adifferent people, but the word always conjures up pleasant thoughts. The weather is warm; love is in the air; flowers are blooming and new growth is sprouting; fishing is great; it's time to go turkey hunting.

People sharing the last thought should realize that spring turkey season is from March

Hunting dates for the spring season apply only to private property. Dates and regulations for wildlife management areas may vary. During the spring season, hunters may take only -- bearded turkeys or gobblers. The bag limit is one per day and two per season. Legal shooting hours are one-half hour before

Some nice cobia have also been caught. Inside the Port, bluefish are thick. Trout and reds are rated as good on the flats of the Banana and Indian Rivers.

Action has been excellent around the New Smyrna jettles with sheepshead, drum, redfish, and a few flounder and whiting. Bluefish are also thick at times. Use live shrimp on the bottom

Gatornational win a proud moment for Sanford's Martin

It was one of the greatest moments in Sanford racer "A.J." Terry Dean Martin's life when he crossed the finish line at Gainesville in near darkness to win the 20th Annual Motorcraft Gatornationals.

Martin, nicknamed "A.J." in high school by his friends, beat runner-up Ronnie Whited, Lawrenceville, Ga., in his seventh race of the week with an E.T. of 8.326 at a 145.51 mph.

Whited turned a quicker (8.925) and a faster (154.58 time) than Martin, but the quicker reaction time to the starting lights all day by Martin took him to the winner's circle.

On the first run of the day the transmission converter broke in what he said was his hardest run of the day. After changing it and putting in a new one, Martin was able to put Chuck Knecht's 1923 Ford roadster, powered by a 452 cubic-inch Chrysler motor, through six near-perfect runs.

On the final run of the day, Martin said, "I almost blew it when, at the 1000 foot mark, I let out of it and hit the brake to keep from braking out."

In Super Competition, if a car runs faster than 8.90 they can lose if the other driver does not brake out more.

Last week in Atlanta, Martin was eliminated in the quarterfinal round and said that he hoped that at least he could make it to the semi-linal this week-end.

Lyman stays perfect in SAC

By MARK BLYTHE Herald aports writer

OVIEDO - Lyman capitalized on two untimely errors to remain unbeaten in Seminole Athletic Conference play, defeating Oviedo 6-1 Friday night before 401 fans at Oviedo High School,

The Greyhounds improved to 10-4 overall and 7-0 in the SAC and will return to action Monday against Spruce Creek at Boardwalk and Baseball. The Lions fell to 5-8 overall and 3-4 in the conference.

"I was scared that we would come in a little flat tonight after our big game last night," Lyman coach Bob McCullough said. "It's hard to stay on pace, but we have some tough competitors and they keep acrapping."

Oviedo opened the game strong and had a chance to have a big inning in the bottom of the first inning. Micah Kinnard led off the game with a base hit to center field and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by B.J. Capala. Greg Hughes and John Hernandez then drew consecutive walks to Pitcher Jodie Spelman then came to the plate and hit a sharp grounder to third that Lyman's Jim Lucas picked up and threw to the plate for the out. Bubba Fore then drew a run scoring walk to give the Lions a 1-0 lead.

Oviedo kept playing tough with Spelman giving a spectacular pitching performance, finishing the night with nine strike outs while giving up five hits and three walks.

The Lions threatened agian in the bottom of the third inning when Capala led off with a walk, advanced to second on a wild pitch and moved to third on a fly out by Hughes. Matt Pedrotty then came into pitch for starter Chuck Lamb and got a popout and a flyout to end the inning and Oviedo's chances to move further in front.

The Greyhounds then came up with four runs in the top of the fourth inning to take the lead for good. Kenny Jackson opened the inning by ripping a double, Lucas then dropped down a beautiful bunt that went for a base hit to put runners on the corners.

Jared Soto then reached on a walk before Charley Curley delivered a clutch single to left to bring in Lyman's first run. Spelman then reached down and struck out the next two batters with the bases loaded.

Chris Radeliff then hit a hard grounder to third. the throw to first was in time, but low and Oviedo's Stan Merrell couln't get a handle on it and two runs scored with Radeliff moving to second. Kevin Wainscott then reached on an infield single that scored Curley and gave the Greyhounds a 4-1 lead.

Oviedo twice came up with a lead off base runner but on both occasions Lyman came up with double plays to get out of the inning. In the bottom of the fifth inning a base running mistake off a flyball put the Lions out of a chane before David Pleicones came up with a dazzling play at second base to get his team out a jam in the bottom of the sixth inning.
"We've been staying close with good teams and coming up with the wins late." McCullough said. "That's what we have to do to be successful. I think the error that we scored on really picked us up and knocked us flat. Oviedo was playing very competively until we took the lead, then they kind of went flat."

hope we can come out of this slump.

What kept the 'Noles in the game was the fact that Lake Howell had as much trouble getting to Joyce as the Tribe did to Moose. After Lieflander's single, Joyce retired 11 of the next 12 and 17 of the next 19 batters he faced.

In the bottom of the eighth. Chris Heath led off for Lake Howell with a ground rule double that went under the black tarp forming the outfield fence of the Hawka' home field. After a sacrifice bunt and a ground out. Craig Smith ended the game with a ground rule double to left

"We might be finally getting some of the breaks," said Ben-jamin. "This is the seventh one-run game we've been in this year and I think we won just one of the first five or six."

The cure seems to be working. Lake Howell will get a chance to see if it has taken when it takes on highly respected Jacksonville-Sandalwood Monday afternoon in the first round of the Apopka Invitational. Seminole, which was scheduled to play in the Florida Baseball School invitational next week but withdrew, will play St. Francis High School of Buffalo. N.Y. next Wednesday at 11 a.m.

But the lead was short-lived as Lake City came up with six in the bottom of the first.

There were two key plays that really hurt Seminole. With one out and a runner on first, a fly ball to right-center was misplayed into a triple. making the score 2-1. After a single tied the score, a grounder up the middle was stopped by the second baseman. But instead of flipping the ball to second, she tried to throw to first and just missed getting the runner.

Four more hits followed and the rout was on. "If we make those two plays, we're still ahead and probably have the momentum," said Robinson.

Lake City added a run in the second, three in the third and a run in the sixth to account for their 11. They pounded out 19 hits in the game. led by Outzen (who went 4-for-4). Davies (3-for-4). and Hafer (2-for-3 with a three-run home run and five runs batted in).

SCC's other run came on a blast over the left field fence by Kim King, her fifth of the spring. Clark was the only Lady Raider with two hits as SCC picked up only six hits in game No. 1.

A six-run inning in game No. 2 spelled doom for

Lake City scored two runs in the bottom of the first as leadoff batter Gutierrez singled, Green followed with a triple and Outzen doubled.

Seminole cut the lead to 2-1 in the third as Maria Garavuso, Kim Fralix and Clark singled. but Lake City put the game away in the bottom of the fourth as they put up the six runs on six hits and one SCC error.

Hodges connected for a home run in the inning and Gutierrez had a two-run double.

Herbert Stenstrom earns national sales recognition

By AMY WILSON Herald Intern

SANFORD - Longtime area realtor Herbert Stenstrom. founder and president of Stenstrom Realty, Inc. has gained international recognition with his affiliate company, Electronic Realty Associates, Inc., by placing second among all ERA brokers in 1988 sales.

Stenstrom posted slightly more than $14 million in personal sales last year. This figure earned him a top position among all ERA brokers, covering the United States, Japan and Australia.

According to Kay Carson, branch manager of the Longwood office of Coldwell Banker, Stenstrom's 1988 personal sales are "exceptional." Lee Constantine, a broker for the Altamonte Springs branch of Emerson Realty said, "$14 million is usually very good."
For 33 years Stenstrom has been selling real estate in the Sanford area. Today his company also handles commercial investment property in Lake Mary as well as in Orange, Lake and Volusia counties.

"It's something that didn't happen overnight," Stenstrom said. "It's the result of having paid my dues to the real estate industry."

president and general sales director of Stenstrom Realty, said. "He has a wonderful ability to see areas of future develop ment. He's gained the confidence of investors who put their trust in his decisions."

in describing what he thinks makes a successful salesperson, Stenstrom described him as "a doer. He does the things he knows he needs to do to become successful."

After graduating from Stetson

University, Stenstrom put aside his aspirations of becoming a physician when he discovered an inborn sales talent. He worked as a car salesman until 1957, when he obtained his broker's license and opened a small office on Park Avenue. Because of his increased volume of business, Stenstrom relocated in 1964 to 2565 Park

Today his family business owns and operates the shopping strip there, in addition to an office on Lake Mary Blvd.

Stenstrom has not concerned himself only with increasing sales for his company. He served an President of the Seminole County Board of Realtors in 1966, and was instrumental in starting the Multiple Listing Service.

With first place within sight, Stenstrom said, "We're off to a wonderful start in 1989. We'll give them a little run for their money.'

Altamonte sees lakefront as key to business area

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS -The city says it has bought 17 acres of Cranes Roost Lake, described as the centerpice of the city's planned Central Business District east of 1-4.

In announcing the purchase, the city said in a press release that the initial plan was to obtain property easements for infrastructure improvements such as gravity sewers that have to be built before development can begin.

However, said Tony Walter, community redevelopment agency director, "We realized the lakefront was the area we wanted to use to set the atmosphere for the entire project.

"The next thought was, 'Why don't we consider buying the land instead so we can control the character of lake-edge development."

BRIEF

COMPETITIONS

Woman of year nominees wanted

SANFORD - The Kiwanis Club of Sanford announces it is accepting nominations for the annual Roberta Gatchel Woman of the Year

Deadlines for applications is April 10. A brief biographical sketch and a summary of the club and community activities of nominees should be sent to Bill Fraasa, P.O. Box 1057, Sanford, FL 32772-1057.

The award was established in 1969 in memory of the club's benefactress Roberta Gatchel, who catered Kiwania luncheons for

The award is presented each year to the Sanford area woman who has done the most for her club and community.

Each woman's club is given the opportunity to nominate one of its members. The final selection is made by a committee of Kiwanis members.

Each award winner receives a plaque and a traveling floor banner to be displayed at her club meetings.

The award will be announced and presented at a Kiwanis luncheon meeting on a date to be announced later.

Library to name winning writers

WINTER PARK - Friends of the Winter Park Public Library will announce winners and award cash prizes in its fourth annual writing contest on April 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the library's community room. The public is invited.

A record 705 entries from throughout Central Florida, with many from Seminole County, were received by the organization.

In conjunction with the Friends' brief annual meeting, the authors will read their winning poetry and short story entries and receive scholarships for creative writing classes.

DISTINCTIONS

Photographers taste prestige

SANFORD - Two Seminole Community College photography students have earned distinctions in the nationwide Photographers Forum's Ninth Annual Photography Contest.

Jose Betancourt and Greg Bryant recently were notified of being finalists in the contest.

Betancourt's photographic entry went on to win him an honorable mention in the contest. His photography will appear in Best of College Photography Annual: 1989. The entries of Betancourt and Bryant were selected from among 19,000 entries from across the United States and Canada. Judges were from the University of California, the Art Center College of Design, and Brooks Institute.

Both are students of Christopher Bolton, an SCC photography instructor.

ORGANIZATION

Cloggers keeping feet busy

SANFORD - The Old Hickory Stompers of Sanford have been clogging their toes off in recent weeks.

On the weekends of March 4th and 11th, the clogging group exhibitioned at the Central Florida Fair.

On March 7, some of the club's members competed at the Strawberry Festival elogging competition.

Members competed on March 18 at the Sumter County Fair, coming away with members Cindy and Wendy White winning second place for a duet. Kimberly Bettis won first place in a solo routine at an Ocala competition.

Members also gave an exhibition at the Sanford Yacht Club in Geneva.

The club soon will begin another 10-week session of classes, which are $2.50 per class. For more information, call Art or Brandt Blaksley at 349-9529.

Sanford? Friendly?

Sanford boasts the nickname "The Friendly City." But does it live up to its name? The Sanford Herald would like to hear the answer from a reader's perspective. What makes Sanford such a friendly place? How does Sanford differ in personality from surrounding communities? What is a visitor to Sanford likely to experience in the way of friendliness from residents?

You may be a longtime resident who can detail the hows and whys of Sanford's friendli-

You may remember when you were new to Sanford, and how favorably you were treated by strangers

Write down your ideas and experiences, and send them to "Friendly City," Sanford Herald, 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, FL 32771. Include your name, age and daytime phone number. Responses should be typed or written legibly.

There is no length limit. Entries must be received at the Herald by 1 p.m. on Friday, April 7. Selected responses will be published in our April 16 Sunday edition.

Poet is Easter winner

By BRIAN HEDBERG Herald People editor

SANFORD - Despite her 91 years, Kathryn "Katte" Stagnar was giddy as a schoolgirl when she learned she had won the first prize of $25 in the Sanford Herald's "Easter to Me" contest.

"I've written a lot that's rejected. You might as well call a spade a spade," said Stagnar, a resident of Hillhaven Healthcare Center in Sanford.

She took a chance by writing a poem for her entry; contest guidelines were silent as to whether poctry would be eligible.

"She can express things so col-orfully, so descriptively," said Stagnar's friend, Ruth Price.

Stagnar answered, "I've got time to think about it before I do it!"

Although not a "professional" writer, Stagnar has had enough practice to hone her style of writing. She won first place with her poem "R.N.s" in Hillhaven's 1988 art and poetry competition.

"If God Is Willing" is one of her poems that is to be published in a collection of poetry. Stagnar sald reading inspires her

"I either read something that makes me mad or sad. I need to have an emotion. If that emotion is strong enough, I can write about it,"

Getting those creative juices flowing has been hard lately for Stagnar, since her eyes are growing weaker. She must have a magnifying glass to read, "and then my hands shake," she said. A friend types her poetry for her.

Because she doesn't have many opportunities to go places, she takes vicarious Journeys by reading travel

A former avid fisherman, she also enjoys reading the Sanford Herald's fishing column by Jim Shupe.

Stagnar was born in the Floridian town of High Springs. When she lost her parents at age 3, her Aunt Lou and her grandmother raised her.

She came to Sanford in 1947 to be with relatives.

Through several step. grandchildren, she has two great-great-grandchildren and one great-great-great-grandchild.

When growing up, Stagnar's family often had to do without. She remembers staying home from church one Easter out of disappointment for not getting a new Easter hat. Another year, she attended an Easter party for her Sunday school class at a lake. Her family had not been able to afford a swimming suit for her, so into the lake with the other kids she jumped, wearing her Sunday best.

On another Easter, she was hunting colored eggs and not finding many. A mischlevous boy came along and smashed the few eggs she had discovered. Once a Sunday school teacher learned what had happened, she gave Stagnar many more eggs than she had lost.

This year, Stagnar will be at an Easter service at Hillhaven. Price said Stagnar attributes her writing ability to her Creator. "She gives the honor to God because He's the one who gave her the ability to rhyme and put her thoughts into words," Price said.

Kathryn Stagnar of Sanford enjoys three R's: reading, 'riting and remembering Easter.

Other entries run the gamut of outlooks

The word "Easter" carries with it different sets of associations and emotions for any one person, according to his experiences and beliefs.

Sanford Herald readers proved that true with their entries

In our "Easter To Me" contest. Being one of seven children born and raised in Sanford, Gayle Mims of Lake Monroe grew up with many family Easter traditions. She wrote:

"The night before Easter, we would all make such a mess with food coloring and vinegar egg dye. Mom would be busy making her famous homemade coconut ples to take to Grandma Ćanada's house in Fort Christmas for Easter Sunday dinner. This was a huge family outing where everyone in the family came over with a covered dish. Sometimes there were hundreds of dishes and thousands of eggs. That was what you might call a real egg hunt!"

Sam Kelley of Sanford moved to Seminole County as a boy with his family in 1952.

"Our spiritual upbringing was every bit as important as schooling in those days," Kelley wrote. "I was the youngest, with an older sister and two older brothers. Every night we would gather in a circle in the living room. We'd talk about things that had happened to us that day. We'd read from the Bible and pray.

'At Eastertime, especially, I'm reminded of those family prayer meetings. I'm reminded of the love that bound a family together. I'm reminded how, with a mother's faith and a father's hard work, everything always seemed to work out.

"But in addition to precious memories, Easter brings a promise of a new beginning...new hope, new life, a new day in which to appreciate all the beauty around us."

Sandra C. Williams of Osteen sees Easter as a "solemn quiet religious time for earnest recommitment" to beliefs. But she vividly paints a portrait of the holiday as a "frivolous time" for happiness:

"It's a festival of colors, flowers and fragrance, it's a bursting forth of fluffy baby bunnies and fresh scented yellowdowned chicks...A time of colorful tasty Easter eggs, flowery bonnets, brimming baskets tied with pastel ribbons...Analyzing our black glossy patent leather shoes and laced organdy

"The aroma of tulips and Easter lilies mingle in the air with odors of clove roasting ham. Anticipation of pincapple upside-down cake and sweetened yams. Once again airports. bus terminals and train stations jam with the onslaught of fami-See Easter, Page 3C

Hognose Snake uses drama as defense

いいというというというというと

Now that spring has sprung youngsters' minds tend to turn away from school and homework and toward spring recess and summer vacation. Fishing, campouts and likes in the woods rise in popularity as family and Scout rituals. With more time spent out of doors, the chances increase for encountering the often feared, yet little known, creature, the snake.

If you do meet up with a snake, it is best to just step away and leave it alone. In most cases, a snake will retreat to safety rather than initiate a confrontation.

One kind of snake you may encounter in Central Florida is the Eastern Hognose Snake. This non-venomous snake makes its home everywhere from southern Florida up to Pennsylvania and west as far as Minnesota down to central Texas. The snake prefers dry, sandy habitats, but it may be found in pine forests as well.

The Hognose received its name because of its prominent upturned shout. It uses its nose as a shovel to dig up its favorite food: the common toad. In the South, the Hognose is also referred to as the Spreading Adder or the Puff Adder.

The most fascinating attribute of this snake is how it protects itself from predators. The Hognose snake is really quite an actor. Although relatively harmless, this snake can fool most predators into thinking it is a ferocious beast.

When it first encounters an adversary, the Hognose will spread out the skin around its neck to give it a much larger appearance. It inflates itself with air and hisses loudly. It may even strike, but usually does so with a closed

If all this fails as a deterrent, the Hognose will go one step further: It will roll over on its back and play dead. This tactic usually confuses any predator that is not used to eating dead prey. Once the predator leaves, the Hognose rolls upright and continues on its way.

Fashions from RoJay in downtown San-ford highlighted the Sanford Garden Club's annual card party, fashion show and luncheon on March 16 at the clubhouse. Rose Jacobson, owner, was the savvy commentator for the show, which featured a colorful selection of fashions for all day and

The fast-paced spring fling began with a parade of leisure fashions. It ran the gamut from stunning creations for those special occasions, to dressy street attire, to lively after-five modes.

The card party got under way at 10:30 a.m. and lasted into the afternoon, with the players taking a break for lunch and the fashion show. Numerous door prizes (many made by club members) were awarded to lucky winners.

The models in the spring fashion parade did an excellent job. They were: Ann Brisson, club president; Pat Foster, vice president; and Jean Taylor, Rose Messersmith, Ann Werner, Barbara Bradshaw, Hazel Nill, Sara Albritton, Rosa Rotunda, Lucille Mehockko, Claudette Behrens, Betty Akers and Florence Guess who's coming to dinner?

Carl Schilke had the surprise of his life on St. Patrick's Day, and that's no blarney.

Carl thought he was going out to dinner (through the careful manipulation of his wife, Shirley) with "the children" and a few close friends to celebrate his birthday. He was overwhelmed when he entered Maison et Jardin, Altamonte Springs, where was serenaded by some 145 friends to the blast of the "Happy Birthday" song.

According to Shirley, Carl was "really surprised." He later told her, "This has to be one of the happiest days of my life."

Party time was the definite order of the evening. A band from Church Street Station played favorite dance music while the guests took to the dance floor. After Carl cut the huge birthday cake, the guests literally "cut the rug" since the dance floor became overly crowded with dancers in the mood to swing their partners.

What a celebration! The food was terrific as well as the hospitality. Everybody seemed to be having such a wonderful time.

Joining their parents were the Schilke children: Wendy and her husband. Rob Bradley; Kristie, her husband, Vance Brumbaugh, and their two children, Jeffrey and Richard; and Richard Schilke and his wife, Gall.

Other relatives attending were: Larry and Lorrie Schilke, Carl's nephew and niece. Titusville; Cindy Schilke, another niece from Connecticut; and Douglas Platt of Sanford, Shirley's cousin, formerly from Pennsylvania. Friends attending from out of town were: Frank and Jane Coffee, Detroit; Frank and Bill Koran, Georgia: Harold and Berta Hall, Winter Park, and their daughter and son-in-law, Edie and Don Smith, former U.S. Navy fighter pilot, who now make their home in DeBary; Joe and Effic Friedel, Sweetwater: Jack and Dottle Holt, New Smyrna Beach: J.C. and Bonnie Bradley. DeLand; and Ken and Nancy Bradley, DeLand.

Carl and Shirley have made their home for 32 years in Sanford, where they are the owners of Harcar Aluminum Products and Schilke Enterprises Inc.

Born in Jersey City, N.J., in 1919, Carl is a graduate of Pace University, New York City, and did graduate work at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

During the years, Carl has given generously to community endeavors. He also has supported the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Scholarship Program and other scholarship programs, and has helped numerous individuals to get a start in life.

Harry Smith had the surprise of his life when his son and daughter-in-law, Harry D. Smith and Margie, arrived at his home, unannounced. Thursday night from New York City. The occasion was to help the retired U.S. Navy rear admiral celebrate his 80th birthday the next day.

Grace, Harry's wife, arranged that surprise visit as well as a birthday party that included another son and his family. Tom Smith, his wife, Marta, and their two children, Nicholas and Evan, from Deltona, and Harry's "golfing buddles."

Born in South Sheilds, England, near the Thames River in 1909, it was only natural that young Harry would be a sailor with lots of interesting sea stories to tell. During his day, he was commander of a squadron of destroyers and later skipper of the cruiser USS Helene.

After he retired from the Navy in 1965, the admirable admiral and his family moved from Washington, D.C., to Sanford in early 1966 where he took command as superintendent of Sanford Naval Academy, During this time, he attended Stetson Univerity, DeLand, where he received his master's degree at age 58. When SNA closed, Harry became the business manager of Trinity Preparatory School, Orlando, where he remained for 10 years.

Harry and Grace live on the 12th green at Mayfair Country Club. He can play golf to his heart's content while she manages the gift shop at Central Florida Regional Hospital as a devoted member of CFRH Auxiliary.

The Smiths have had an exciting life and Grace has done her share because, without a doubt, she's just wild about Harry.

Turkey feast in the works

It's about that time, again, for the Sanford Garden Club's annual turkey luncheon feast. The third annual event will be held at the Sanford Civic Center on Thursday. March 30, from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Tickets are $4.50 and the menu includes: turkey, dressing, gravy, green beans, colesiaw, carrot salad, cranberry sauce, tea. coffee and cake.

According to Fran Morton, co-chairman, proceeds will go toward the club's community service projects in the area of beautification. The two previous luncheons have netted about $1,000 each, she said.

Luncheon chairman is Pat Foster. For information on tickets, call Rosa Rotunda. 323-1018: Chal Horrell, 322-4507; or Fran Morton, 323-0601.

Condole with, don't congratulate, divorcees husband left me and our two children for another woman, I was devastated. My family and friends made comments such as, 'You're lucky to be rid of him."

Abby, I loved my husband, and although I know that my family and friends thought they were comforting me, they weren't. If a spouse dies, everyone assumes that the wife is grieving, and no one would dare to say, "You're lucky to be rid of him"—regardless of how terrible he was. But when you're separated or divorced, everyone assumes you hate him, and that isn't always true.

I'm sure there are others in my circumstances who would welcome a few kind words of sympathy after their marriage breaks up, so please pass this along to your readers. There are so many marriages falling these days, it's almost like a death in

DEAR RECOVERING: In a way, the end of a marriage is a death. It's the death of many hopes, dreams and promises

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I associate mostly with other couples, and when we dine out we each pay our own share. Occasionally we are invited by widows to their homes for dinner. I have been told that because we are two, we should reciprocate with two invitations. However, I read somewhere that a widow should consider herself as a pair! I must add that when my husband and I attend something together with a widow, my husband does all the driving and pays for the parking. (Most women do not drive at night.)

Abby, if I have to have each widow twice, I will be mostly. entertaining widows, which my husband does not particularly enjoy. We do associate with a few widows whose company we really do enjoy, but we prefer to associate with couples.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roger Johnson

Anderson, Johnson exchange vows, rings

SANFORD - Elsie Marie Anderson and James Roger Johnson were married in a traditional double-ring ceremony at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 21, at First Church of the Nazarene in Sanford, with the Rev. John Hinton officiating.

The bride is the daughter of George R. Sr. and Jean F. Anderson of Osteen.

The bridegroom is the son of Roger G. Johnson of Osteen and Marcena S. Lucas of Lake

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride chose for her vows a white bridal gown with Rachel lace, high Victorian neckline and Juliet sleeves. The all-lace gown featured a demichapel train of tiered lace.

Her bouquet comprised yellow roses, white carnations, white baby's breath and trailing tvy.

Debra Jean Anderson of Osteen, sister of the bride, attended as the maid of honor. She wore a full-length, royal blue gown, featuring a velvet bodice with short poof sleeves, a taffeta full skirt and a defined bustle back.

The bridesmalds-Patty Selph of Altamonte and Laurie Watterson of Sanford-matched the maid of honor in their style of gowns, which were emerald

Creativity dressed up fashion show

Strutting down the center platform in what could be hand-painted Easter bonnets were several members of the Lake Mary Woman's Club in their "Swing Into Spring" fashion show. The hand-painted hats were part of handmade outfits from Transformations, located in historic Longwood.

Club members modeled beautifully designed dresses, skirts and jumpsuits at the fashion show and luncheon, held at Lake Mary's CIA building on March 17.

Sharon Wright, the owner of Transformations, shared the stage with Sherry Hunt, owner and director of The New Trend Modeling Studio in Casselberry. Their two groups of models alternated modeling their clothes. The fashlons worn by the models from The New Trend were from The Collection on Park Avenue, Malson Blanche, Jarrod's and Go Places.

The models from New Trend began the show with mannequin-style modeling. The men and women would stop and stand motionless for several seconds, which is called "free posing," according to Hunt.

Cheryl Green was the first woman's club member to model a hand-dyed batik wrap from Mexico that wrapped around her hot pink bathing suit.

"Battk is a special art form where certain parts of the fabric are waxed out." Wright explained.

Other club members showing the fashlons from Transformations were Cathy Fausnight, Davis and Virginia Vaughn.

When she came out a second time in another outfit, she was still shopping, only this time she had exchanged her plastic grocery bag for a woven bag.

The chairman of the event. Susan Davis, modeled one of Wright's designs that was made especially for her and had a lizard appliqued on the shoulder. She was carrying green and white balloons and smiling at everyone whose eye she caught.

Carol Perez, Wright's business partner, modeled clothes made from hand-dved battk Mexican fabric. Perez accented some of her outfits with her own handdyed scarves.

Mary Styles modeled her own creations that she supplies to Transformations.

"I especially like the tumpsuit Mary Styles made with the tulips painted on the pockets," commented Ann Horton, one of the members watching the show.

The show ended with the New Trend models dressed in evening gowns and tuxes, dancing to 'Puttin' on the Ritz." Hunt of New Trend commented on their potse, posture and hand posttioning. She added how important a first impression is and how one should be noticed when entering a room. That got a chuckle from the audience-the women watching couldn't imagine themselves making an entrance like the models!

Hunt quickly said. "You wouldn't be this dramatic when entering a room!"

Lake Mary's Mouseketeers

When the Oscars are awarded on March 29, look for a special treat from the Lake Mary High School Band and Lake Marionette Dance Corps. The local band recently went to the new Disney/MGM studio to film a commercial that will be shown during the upcoming telecast of the Oscar presentations. The commercial will advertise Disney's upcoming studio tours.

Band. Flag and Marionette members have come close to being "regulars" in Disney commercials and TV specials. The latest participation is the sixth time in the last two years that they have performed in Disney productions.

Taking part in these Disney efforts has provided an interesting and educational opportunity for Lake Mary students to see firsthand all aspects of film and television productions, a career field that appears to be growing in Central Florida.

Old timers to reminisce

The Longwood Civic League Woman's Club again will sponsor the Annual Old Timer's Reception, on Sunday, April 9, from 3 to 5 p.m. The reception will be held at the Club Building at 150 W. Church Ave. In Longwood.

Howard loves her job and it shows

By VICKI DOBORMIER Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY -- Crystal Howard, who teachers English, language arts and journalism to seventh and eighth graders at Greenwood Lakes Middle School loves her job and it shows.

Howard, who on Monday was named as the top middle school nominee for Seminole County Teacher of the Year, comes from a family of school employees.

One grandmother was a teacher, the other worked in school food service. Her mother was the school secretary at Altamonte Elementary School. Two aunts and two cousins were in the teaching profession.

"I always wanted to be a teacher," she said the day after making the list of the top three teachers. "The importance of education was something that my relatives and teachers impressed on me from a very early

Howard, a 1978 graduate of Lyman High School, said she feels fortunate to have had a great exposure to writing in the Seminole County schools.
"My husband said that he never had to write in high school so that when he got to college, it was hard," she said. "I don't want that to be a problem for my students."

For the last two summers, Howard participated in the Florida Writing Project learning about writing and sharing ideas with other teachers around the state. She has incorporated what she learned into her classroom teaching.

"I take my students through sensory 'trips' to teach them writing," she explained. "I want them to write about the music they hear, the colors they see and the places they remember."

Though writing had been an important aspect of her love for the language, Howard said she never aspired to a career in Journalism.

'I tried that in when I was in college at the University of Central Florida," she said. "I'd planned a double major, but when I got into it, I found out I was just not cut out for that sort of thing."

She was, however, cut out to teach. She said that one of her biggest joys is getting the kids who are not as self-motivated as the others to look forward to an English class.

"It's great when kids who used to dread English class, because they thought it was too hard, come up to me and say 'I like your English class...it's dif-ferent...it's fun,' "she said.

Howard believes that the greatest reward of teaching is seeing students achieve their potential. The keys to success. she believes, are being positive, never giving up and recognizing student strengths.

Ted Barker, principal at Greenwood Lakes Middle School said that Howard always gives 110 percent to her students and her Job.

VIEWPOINT

Ueberroth tries to leave a memento for Pete Rose

Peter Ueberroth will leave the baseball commissioner's office this week.

It hasn't been a particularly good reign for Ueberroth, that Olympic showman who obtained the job not because he knew a whole lot about baseball or business, but because he was a darn good choreographer.

Ueberroth's claim to fame is the show he helped put together for the 1984 Olympic games. Granted, he is probably a master of showgirls and garbage bags filled with balloons.

but when it comes to the sport he is supposediobe supervising. Ueber-roth's qualifications are sadly lacking. He inherited the commissioner's office on the rebound, after a majority of owners upset with the iron fist policies of Bowie Kuhn finally filibustered enough votes to drum Kuhn out of the job.

If baseball has suffered in recent years, it is because of Ueberroth's Incompetence.

National League President A. Bartlett Giamatti will take over just before the start of the regular season and I don't envy Giamatti's Job of sorting through the dumpster of problems
Ueberroth is dumping in his lap.
So what has Peter Ueberroth done for major league baseball?

Sadly, the answer is, not much.

He leaves behind a league so rich in red ink, it makes the national debt auddenly look not so bad. Nearly two-thirds of the teams lost money last year. Ueberroth failed to help adopt a player salary cap that would have eventually helped balance the books, an idea already adopted by the NBA. That's why you don't hear talk of basketball strikes every two or three years.

Speaking of player strikes, Ueberroth leaves his position knowing full-well that the time has come to renegotiate the players union-owners contract. Yes fans, major league baseball faces what could be a lengthy players strike next season. It is a situation that should have drawn top priority from the commissioner's office, yet Ueberroth has, for the most part, ignored it.

With all the problems facing major league baseball in the near future, it is no surprise that Ueberroth is trying to sneak out of town by creating a distraction, causing a stir that helps take attention away from his lackluster perfor-

what better distraction for Ueberroth than an attempt to hang one of the game's most prominent figures? And there is no figure more Ueberroth's sudden 'investigation' into Rose's alleged gambling improprieties doesn't surprise me. If he pulls it off, he will have made fans forget what a terrible commissioner he was and he will be able to go out with a bang, as the guy who cracked the big case. Having Pete Rose's head mounted above your fireplace is a pretty impressive accomplishment.

Fortunately, most baseball fans, the real baseball fans, aren't as dumb as Ueberroth thinks. His attempt to bury the game's all-time hits leader is as plastic and phony as was his tenure in office. It sounds to me very much like a personal vendetta and I wouldn't be at all surprised to find it had something to do with last year's incident involving Rose and umpire Dave Pallone.

If you remember, Rose was suspended for a month when he shoved Pallone while arguing an obviously horrendous call at first base. Shortly after that incident, Cincinnati broadcasters Marty Brenneman and Joe Nuxhall defended Rose publicly and said some very uncomplimentary, and I think justifiably so, things about Pallone's ability to handle his job. Both Brenneman and Nuxhall were summoned to New York after that incident and had their wrists slapped by Ueberroth and Giamatti.

The Rose-Pallone situaton prompted an outcry of support for the Reds manager in and around Cincinnati and greatly crippled Ueberroth's already poor image as the league's boss. I have a hunch that the Pallone incident stuck in Ueberroth's craw and now he wants to leave rose a little something to remember him by.

I am not condoning gambling on sporting events. If Rose violated the rules, then he should face the appropriate penalties. However, I find it very hard to believe that Rose would jeopardize his career in the sport that he so loves by breaking a rule or rules that would expel him from the game.

There are a number of things that I don't understand about this whole investigation.

If Ueberroth knew in advance about allegations agaisnt Rose, why did he wait until two weeks before he was supposed to leave office to make them public? The timing just doesn't synch. From the reports I've seen, the most serious allegations are coming from a down-on-his-luck bookle in Ohio who says he has some juicy information and wants to sell it to the highest bidder. Is it just me or does that sound fishy? Since the news first broke about Ueberroth's witch hunt, everybody has tried to get in on the act. Rose's daughter, Fawn, was quoted in Gentleman's Quarterly magazine as saying Pete Rose was "the world's worst dad." I think we can all take that article aeriously, knowing Gentelman's Quarterly's reputation as a hard-hitting news publication. Where did that story appear in the magazine, between the doublebreasted suit expose and the taffeta petticoat feature?

An OASIS in Sanford?

Local man tackles housing problem despite the odds

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN Herald staff writer

SANFORD - Where the sun beats down on 72 flat, treeless acres in Sanford, one local developer sees an oasis.

Amefika Geuka says he wants to make the desert of Sanford's celery past bloom from the blood, sweat and tears of the laborers who worked the fields between Celery and Brisson

Geuka's casis is affordable housing. In the spirit of laborers who worked in celery and cabbage fields for low wages. Geuka has planned OASIS development to provide afforda-ble housing on those 72 acres for families and individuals trying to make ends meet.

"I don't want to create a low-income neighborhood," Geuka said, "because a certain pathology sets in." Geuka said he plans to set aside up to 30 percent of about 600 units planned for the development for low- and moderateincome families.

"We're not talking about people on welfare," Geuka said. "We're talking about people trying to keep their heads above water."

He estimates the range for low and moderate Income betweed $15,000 and $30,000.

'It's not a matter of what you want or what you need, but what you can finance," said Julio Rivas, one of several prospective tenants referred to Geuka. Rivas, who is married with three children, said he doesn't meet qualifications for afford the decent housing his family needs.

The OASIS development was heatedly contested at meetings of the city commission and the planning and zoning commission because units are earmarked for low- and moderate-income families. The opposition came out of confusion over who qualifies as low-income, Geuka said.

The $50 million OASIS development will include a range of incomes, Geuka said, so that low-income families will have role models. inspiration to lift themselves out of economic straits. Upper-income families have greater pull in putting pressure on land owners and managers, and on school systems to keep standards high, he said.

At a national conference of the Council of State Community Affairs Agencies in Orlando this week. Geuka said the community needs to find ways to produce decent, affordable housing for low-income families. The task is one to be tackled together by banks, developers, employers, employees and governments, he said.

in 1986 Florida passed the Affordable Housing Act, which provides low- or zero-interest loans to developers who build housing for families at low income levels. The legislation, as it reads, addresses a critical need for decent, safe and sanitary housing that government and private sector development hasn't met.

The state funded $15 million for the second mortgage program uner the act last year. Geuka said he will apply for assistance through the program if it is approved for funding by the legislature this year.

But that alone is not enough, Geuka said. Developers need to pick up the ball and run before Sanford reaches a housing crisis.

'We boast as a state about people being drawn to Florida for reasons other than weather," he said. "One of those reasons is the economy."

I've been told 'You're noble; you're well-Intended; your heart is in the right place, my manbut you're headed for a fall.'

-Amelika Geuka

While jobs are plentiful here, he said, a great percentage of those jobs are in the service industry — which offers wages at the lower end of the earning scale.

"We talk about a building boom and a lot of fancy apartments being thrown up all over the place," he said, "but we don't talk about who can afford to live there....So much is being produced

At the conference Tuesday Geuka proposed that employers of low-income individuals could assist developers in providing affordable housing and assist ambitious employees to lift themselves out of poverty.

"There could be no low-income wage-earners unless someone is paying low wages to their employees." he said. "The entire problem could theoretically be solved immediately if everyone who worked were paid a wage commensurate with the cost of living in one's area. The cost of housing is part of the cost of living, is it not?"

Low-wage carners should be encouraged to "assume self-help as a focus." Geuka said. Employees should be encouraged to participate in continuing education programs and cooperative buying and leasing of duplexes, he said.

Bankers need to pool resources together to make funds available for affordable housing developments, Geuka said. He suggests con-☐See Housing, Page 6D

Bothersome racial questions plague both political parties

United Press International

WASHINGTON - In what was supposed to be a dull time for politics, Democrats and Republicans have unexpectedly found themselves grappling with newly troublesome racial questions, confronting a minefield of difficulties and few casy an-this year by racial questions that are far different from each other, yet reflect sensitive divisions that have plagued the country for a long time. Usually, the issue has remained just below the surface, but separate events in recent weeks have brought it to the forefront.

The election of a former Ku Klux Klan leader to the Louisiana Legislature and a racially driven debate over national GOP Chairman Lee Atwater have focused the problem for Republicans, while Democratic tensions have manifested themselves in new skirmishes between conservatives and liberals, as well as a racial tone that has dominated the party's role in the Chicago mavoral race.

Republicans, who often seemed to not care about the perception they were insensitive to minorities as they auccessfully courted the white vote, now are trying to make the case that minorities can find safe haven in the GOP. But their effort has gotten extraordinarily mixed early results among many blacks and has the potential for backfiring.

Democrats, meanwhile, have what may be an even more bothersome task.

Although many members argue that the recurring tensions sprouting up in the party are due to competing ideologies, there is no denying that race is playing a major role in the conflict. As usual, Jesse Jackson and his forceful personality are in the center of the storm.

Frustrated by yet another failure to win the White House, moderate and conservative Democrats are becoming more vocal in insisting the party concentrate on attracting mainstream voters - an approach viewed by some as a rebuke to Jackson and his followers, who argue the party should reassert its liberal roots.

At the same time, many blacks in the party are walking a tightrope. They want to help bond the party's differing factions, but also don't want to do anything that could be viewed as a slap at Jackson.

And all of the rifts between Jewish Democrats and blacks, stretching back several years, still In the midst of all this, even as they condemn

-David Duke, a former national leader of the Ku Klux Klan, won election as a Republican to the LouiDemocrat. Duke claimed the GOP better reflected his views. He insisted that his main appeal was not racist, but President Bush and former President Reagan campaigned against him and Atwater led the national GOP in condemning him.

-Students at Howard University, a leading black college in Washington, occupied buildings to protest Atwater being named to the school's board. His spot on the board, they charged, was offensive because he was responsible for a racially motivated campaign last year. Atwater resigned the post, but contended he was never given the chance to "prove my sincerity in reaching out" to minorities.

Spain's resurgence

An unsung story of real significance is Spain's emergence as the booming sun belt of Europe. Many Spainards now refer proudly to their country as the California of the

Spain's economy is growing by more than five percent annually and capital investment is at 15 percent, robust figures that outpace other European nations. American, European, and Japanese companies are rushing to build factories at the rate of $4 billion a year. AT&T just opened at $220 million semiconductor factory north of Madrid. Ford Motor Company is constructing a $68 million plant in the southwest. General Electric plans to build a $1.7 billion plastics plant in southeast Spain. Nissan Motors, Sony, and Matsushita Electric Industrial have opened factories near Japanese developers are building retirement communities along the east coast and the Dutch have built hundreds of greenhouses in the warm south to grow tomatoes and cucumbers for the northern European markets. Madrid's modest skyline is changing rapidly with high-rise buildings. A 50-story condominium tower, one of Europe's tallest buildings, is under construc-tion in Benidorm, a seaside resort on Spain's cast coast.

The complex reasons for Spain's belated economic boom began with the free-market orientation of the Spainish government. Although Prime Minister Felipe Gonzales is a socialist, he is a Margaret Thatcher on reconomic matters. His government has offered generous incentives to lure foreign companies, removed a prior approval process for foreign investments, lifted exchange controls on foreign businesses and relaxed rules on laying off workers.

Even though foreigners began embracing Spain during the 1980s as it became a stable democracy, the Spanish boom really began in 1986 when the country joined the Europe Community. With the brightened prospects that trade barriers will be removed by the European Community by 1992. Spain is seen as the frontier of opportunity, offering a large. competant labor pool from a higher-thanaverage unemployment rate, relatively low wages, and plenty of reasonably priced land. "There are not many countries that will grow as fast as Spain," said Rainer Klinke, manager of the Deutsch Bank's Madrid office. "You have to go where the action is."

It is no longer true that "Europe stops at the Pyrenees," as Spaniards and other Europeans used to say. That Spain's long slesta from world affairs is ending, that it is being integrated into the global mainstream is especially significant for Latin America.

Soviets reward South Africa's resolve with the Soviet Union a simple vision of what must happen in South Africa. The white regime there must free Nelson Mandela unconditionally, and then open negotiations with his outlawed African National Congress — negotiations confined substantially to how South Africa can be transformed into a black republic on the basis of one man, one vote, in a unitary state.

Never mind that South Africa's whites, not to mention its other ethnic minorities, would never consent to such an arrangement. Never mind that South Africa's blacks, themselves sharply divided into nine separate, distinct and mutually hostile cultures, are by no means unanimously enthusiastic about it. The outside world has only a limited amount of time to devote to South Africa and its problems, and the above "solution," ridiculously simplistic as it is, was the best the critics could come up with.

So increasing pressures have been brought to bear on South Africa to produce the desired result. The U.S. Congress in particular, despite warnings from virtually every informed source that economic sanctions wouldn't work, imposed them. them over President Reagan's veto and is currently thinking of strengthening them.

The stage, in short, was set for confrontation.

South Africa would simply have to bend, sooner

Few would have guessed, even a year ago, that If a crack was to appear in this united front, it would appear in the policy of the Soviet Union. Yet that is precisely what has happened. It seems that Mikhail Gorbachev, in pulling in Moscow's horns in Afghanistan, Cambodia,

On March 15 Yuri Yukalov, head of the African desk of the Soviet Foreign Ministry, called for political dialogue rather than force to end apartheid in South Africa. Ban assault rifles, not handguns

WASHINGTON — President Bush, balancing when he should be choosing, says he is seeking "an accomodation between the police and the sporting interest" regarding assault rifles. So much for the interest of ghettos. where such guns are frequently fired.

The urban poor are, as usual, invisible while their betters plan their betterment. But the poor have a special interest in firearms policy. They would gain from a prompt ban on assault rifles and would suffer from gun control focused, as it usually is, on handguns.

The reasons for acting forcefully against the former are reasons for leaving the latter alone. Assault v:eapons are not yet prevalent and never will be needed for legitimate civilian activities. Handguns are widely dispersed and poignantly necessary for some people.

Don Kates, Jr., notes that New York's pioneering Sullivan Law (1911) was an example of gun control advocated by conservatives who associated handguns with foreign-born anarchists, labor agitators and criminals. Newspapers of the day denounced "low-browed foreigners" with guns, guns in the pockets of "ignorant and quarrelsome immigrants of lawbreaking propensities."

Today, too, there is a class bias in the gun-control argument. Literature from the National Coalition to Ban Handguns includes

Q. Does the banning of handguns discriminate against minority members of society?

A. No. Handguns would be illegal in the hands of the total populace, including all racial and religious groups, the rich and poor alike. Wonderful. It would impartially disarm white, safe Park Avenue and the South Bronx, Kates makes a disturbing but not unsupported argument as follows: Many urban Americans live where government cannot, or will not, enforce its proper monopoly on the use of force. Given this failure, or abdication, by government it is unseemly for the safe majority to deny the endangered minority the handguns needed for self-help.

A Chicago judge writing in a legal publica-tion stresses that his readers "would not go into ghetto areas except in broad daylight under the most optimum conditions - surely not at night, alone or on foot. But some people have no choice. To live or work or have some need to be on this 'frontier' imposes a fear which is tempered by possession of a gun.

Kates cites data that indicates that. "Handgun-armed citizens actually thwart as many crimes annually as handgun-armed criminals succeeded in committing. Citizens acting in legitimate self-defense kill about three times more assailants and robbers than do police." He says prison surveys show that criminals fear armed victims more than police and that fear of armed civilians deters criminals into non-confrontational crime. Burglars rarely encounter armed victims because burglars target unoccupied premises. Even so, more burglars meet armed resistance than are arrested and sent to

About half of America's households possess at least one gun. Among those owning at least one gun, the average is three. About 50 million households have handguns Prohibition of handguns would be a bigger failure than the prohibition of gin. "Handguns, unlike liquor," notes Kates, "are reusable, and their continued use does not involve the visibility of perpetual illegal purchase.

Assault rifles are different. Daryl Gates. Los Angeles police chief, says: "A reasonable right to bear arms does not mandate that weapons designed and built for the express purpose of killing human beings on battlefields be made available to the general public. In fact, the general public is already being prohibited by the National Firearms Act from owning most weapons made for that purpose."

But assault rifles have enthusiasts (the Bush administration even worries about the interests of "gun collectors"), so a President whose primary objective is popularity is resorting to a tested technique: When the subject is politically problematic, swallow it up into a larger

Hence the administration's position is: Assault weapons are misused by drug dealers, so lets not ban the guns; lets win "the war" on drugs which must be won (in the words of Attorney General Dick Thornburgh last Sunday) "on the battlefield of values."

Meanwhile, back on the non-metaphysical battlefield where many poor people live, the poor must be bemused by Bush's idea that his temporary ban on the importation of some rifles is a "cooling off" period.

No wonder the National Rifle Association is so pleased by Bush's policy. The policy is to cool off public opinion until some fresh menace - say, a tainted banana from some banana republic - appears, a menace that threatens substantial interests, like the serenity of the comfortable.

Soviets closer to agricultural reform

WASHINGTON — When Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev toured American farms in 1959 it was during the most frigid part of the Cold War. Now that relations between the two nations have warmed, it may be time to host another tour.

But this one would would have a different agenda — to help the current Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev win an ideological battle against his conservative rival Yegor

Ligachev.
Gorbachev got Ligachev demoted to the post of the Communist Party's farm chief, a position in which Ligachev has continued to tout the benefits of collective farming. That system has turned the once-rich agricultural sector of the Soviet Union into an impotent industry chronic food short-ideological equivalent of cement On a recent visit to Czechoslovakia, Ligachev stated that he thought collective and state-owned farms there were doing just fine. But American farm experts say it is ridiculous to compare little Czechoslovakia and its over-achieving workers to the Soviet Union and its lethargy.

Gorbachev wants to give farmers more freedom, but Ligachev can be the ideological equivalent of cement.

freedom, but

Ligachev can

Last week Ligachev tried to close the distance between himself and Gorbachev by announcing at a press conference in Moscow that he sees the need to reform the Soviet agricultural system.

He announced new policies to permit Soviet farmers to lease land from the state and, in some cases, to pass that land on to their children as a quasi-inheritance. The con-cessions are small and would not even begin to give farmers the freedom and incentive they need to produce. But the announcement allowed Ligachev to at least appear to be in harmony with his leader while not changing his own position. "I want to stress that everything will be based on the principle of common ownership and common property." he said.

To help Gorbachev in this ideological struggle that goes beyond farm policy, some Bush administration strategists wonder whether an invitation to Ligachev to visit America's productive farmlands might not cut the ground out from under him.

Those experts doubt that Ligachev could be transformed into a booster of American techniques. He is too dogmatic for that kind of turnaround. Besides, the farm question is just the issue Ligachev is using to fight Gorbachev - a metaphor for his whole dispute with perestroika.

But other Soviet specialists feel that an invitation to Ligachev would put him on the hot seat. If he accepted, as Krushchev did, then he would have to attest to America's productivity, if not profitability, on both large and small private farms.

All of the options would make Gorbachev look better.

Thanks offered to good Samaritans

Two wonderful ladies did me a valuable service last month while I was vacationing in Sanford, so I would like to give them a public accolade.

After shopping in Wal-Mart I very carelessly left my wallet with more cash than was sensible in it) in the shopping cart. When I discovered it missing. I halfheartedly went back to ask about it, but never expected to find it.

Because of two beautiful ladies, the episode had a happy ending. So thanks to Dee for finding it and thanks to Della for keeping it for me.

Both of them refused a reward so I gave them a bouquet but I also want to given them this public bouquet so everyone will know how much I appreciated it and what valuable employees they are to Wal-Mart and valuable citizens for your wonderful town.

We really enjoy visiting your town on a regular basis.

Tribute offered to the late Fred Good

Fred Good, a Sanford civic leader, a Seminole High School Booster, a person that would never admit that something could not be done, a proud, supportive father, a big heart that helped and encouraged a lot of young people, an energetic, positive person, died recently.

His contribution to Seminole High School was more than talk. He was instrumental in building the football stadium. He donated his time, his equipment, and his total effort to that stadium so that his son, Mike, and the other athletes attending Seminole High would have their own stadium to be pround of. In all the years I was Principal at Seminole High School, I never asked Fred for any help that he didn't give. We owe him a lot. Our community will miss him but most of all, we would like to thank him and tell him that we will always remember him with love and respect.

Shedding light on Ft. Mellon tennis

In your Wednesday, Feb. 22 edition, you had a very interesting article regarding parks in the Sanford/Seminole County area.

Being an avid tennis player — and one who has used the Fort Mellon Park tennis courts for the past two-three years every Friday afternoon from 4-8 p.m. - I was delighted to read about the four lighted tennis courts at that location. However, unless my eyesight is failing me, to this date there are only two lighted courts at Fort Mellon Park.

Considering the condition of the two courts - nets with huge holes and no center straps and the two-three inch wide crack which extends the width of the two courts about two feet behind the baseline (very dangerous, I might add) - two new lighted tennis courts would be a delight. (Maybe the two missing courts fell into the crack that's been there for two years.

know I shouldn't look a gift horse in the mouth since there a scrious lack of adequately maintained and playable tennis ourts in Banford, but thought I'd bring this small discrepancy to your attention.

Many factors affect schools was 19.7. SEMINOLE

It is estimated that one out of four Americans are directly involved in education as students or providers of services. There is a consensus that education is the primary responsibility of each state.

Diverse factors within each state affects the schools and the quality of the education provided. Salient factors are: population growth, economic climate and state reve-

Florida is expecting a 21 percent population increase between 1987-2000, from 12,023,000 residents to 14,627,500 residents. In 1986 Florida was second only to California in the nuber of building permits issued (191,289). During that same year, Florida ranked first in the number of new businesses incorporated and first in the total number of new plants and expansions

Conversely, Florida ranked last in the nation in fiscal year 1985 in government revenues and government expenditures per $1,000 of personal income.

Mrs. Ann W. Neiswender, chairman of Seminole County School Board, is acutely aware of the gorwth projections for Seminoel County. It is anticipated that student population will increase form 43,511 during the 1987-88 school year to 73,940 by the 1997-98 school year. She believes that the School Board, with its excellent teaching staff has been able to maintain high quality in the delivery of Verbal and Mathematics SAT scores totaled

SWEETING services. One of the critical issues will be to keep quality and growth congruent. This will be a challenge because out of the 67 countles in the state Seminole ranks 63th in receipt of state funds for education. Two of the accelerated growth areas in the county are Oviedo abd the northeast quadrant (the 1-4 corridor). Facilities planning for the next five years to accomodate the children already in residence will be one of the numbr one Board agenda Items.

Mrs. Nelswender cited: test scores, curriculum offerings and varied instructional programs addressing specific needs of students, as evidence of quality education availabe to students in the county. The 2,520 students who took the college entranct examinations 1987-88, scored above the state and national averages.

913 and the composite score on the ACT

Twenty four credits are required for graduation, including: English 4: Mathematics and Science 3 each, American History and Physical Education 1 each: American Government and life management, one-half credit each.

In 1988, the National Commission on Excellence in Education recommended the following curriculum: Mathematics, Science and Social Studies 3 credits, English 4 credits and 2 credits in a foreign language. Requirements for the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Science degrees have been expanded to include one-to-two years of foreign language. Consequently, a foreign language would seem prudent for high school students planning to attend a state college or university.

Mrs. Neiswender discussed safety in the schools. Programs are in place in the high schools addressing drug and alcoholic

Mrs. Neiswender's philosophy is that the family, the church and the school form a triangular support system for the developing child. If each component of the triangle functions adequately, the child's optimum growth will be facilitated. However, the preponderance of family problems rampant in society renders the school's role more difficult.

New UCF center to dig into waste issues

By C. DAVID COOPER

Municipal solid wasts - what most of us call garbage - is becoming a hot issue. In Florida today, an estimated 12 million tons of municipal solid waste are generated each year. Most Florida communities currently use landfills for solld waste disposal. Within the next decade, many of these communities will experience severe solid waste disposal problems. Thirty-seven of the state's counties currently are under consent order from Florida Department of Environmental Regulation (FDER) for non-compliance of their landfills. The two-fold purpose of this article is to (1) provide some basic information about municipal solid wastes (MSW), and (2) to discuss what we in the university system are doing to help solve these pro-

MSW is that combination of all the leftovers and discards from our society that cannot be exhausted into the air (air polluflon) or dumped down the drain (water pollution). MSW includes such things as paper and cardboard, food wastes, metal cans, glass bottles and jars, plastic containers and bags. lawn and yard wastes, old tires, various household chemicals (paints, solvents, cleaners), and more. In the U.S. we generate about four pounds of MSW per person every day.

Here in Florida, we are accustomed to twice a week

this convenience. But, what has made this service cheap in the past (burial of all these wastes in nearby landfills) has been called land pollution, has contributed to both air and water pollution, and has resulted in ugly mountains of trash in many areas. As our population has skyrocketed over the past decade, our landfills have gotten fuller and our environmental problems have mushroomed.

We are certain to be in for some significant changes in how we dispose of our wastes in the 1990s. For example, in Japan and Europe, land disposal is used far less than recycling and incineration (resource recovery). Both of the latter two methods are goals of a recent state law. Recycling usually will not work unless we help by sorting our wastes (i.e., separate containers for newspapers, glass, aluminum, and so forth). I feel that most Floridians, when they derstand the reasons, will participate in recycling and aupport environmentally safe resource recovery plants.

Last summer, the Florida Legislature passed the 1988 Solid Waste Management and Resource Recoverty Act. This Act is a major environmental statute which significantly amends existing law, establishes major new recycling, special waste management, and other programs and gives FDER broad new powers and repick-up of just about anything sponsibilities. It requires cities we put out by the curb and we and counties throughout the ly emphasize resource recovery are used to not paying much for state to undertake steps to recycle and/or reduce wastes and provides them with money to get them started. It also directs the universities in the state to Join together to define and conduct research in areas related to solid and hazardous waste manage-

> The Florida Board of Regents (BOR) - the governing body of the state university system was directed by the Act to establish a Florida Center for Solid and Hazardous Waste Management. The center is a consortium of public and private universities led by the University of Florida. Institutions participating in the center are University of Florida, University of South Florida, University of Central Florida, Florida State University, Florida A&M University, Florida Atlantic University, Florida Institute of Technology and University of Miami.

The Center recently has drafted a detailed research plan. The center recommends research in six major solid and hazardous waste management areas: Wast Reduction, Recycle Resource Recovery. Land Disposal, Remediation of Waste Sites, and Systems Analysis of Waste Management.

initially, research and program efforts will focus on waste reduction, recycling and reuse, land disposal and systems analysis of waste management alternatives. After 1993, when waste reduction and recycling programs are to be in place, the research agenda will increasingand remediation of waste sites. For the 1988-89 budget year, the plans are to begin research in the following areas: Commercial Products Packaging, Incinerator Ash Management, Disposal of Medical and Biohazardous Waste, Degradability of Plastics. Land Disposal of Wastes and Recycle and Reuse.

The legislature has given the center a budget of only $500,000, which is not very much for all the work that needs to be done, but it is a start. We are trying to get more funding from federal sources to help pay for these expensive research projects.

Floridians need to move rapidly from the land disposal methods of the past to a system of integrated solid waste management for the future. Solid waste management means first reducing waste volumes, then treating the remaining solid waste as a resource whose values are to be recovered as much as possible. Finally, for the remaining residues we should choose methods of waste handling and disposal which are environmentally acceptable.

The legislature has established good goals for MSW management in our state, and has assigned responsibility for achieving these goals to local government. The universities hae a role to play and are doing their part.

Security may not mean safety on campus

A few seconds, three shots of gunfire, and Greg Rader lay dead, unable to hide his dark secret any more. Near the 30-year-old part-time Baptist deacon lay a mask made of pantyhose — and part of a ski mask. Also found were strips of cloth and a pair of disposable plastic gloves.

Just moments before, according to the police, Rader had been crouching in the bedroom of a popular Springfield, Mo., TV news anchor, waiting for her to come home, the authorities reported. Someone had attempted to break into the woman's apartment two nights before. That prompted her boyfriend to accompany her home this March night, armed with a pistol. When Rader jumped out at the woman, her boyfriend shot him dead.

People in Rader's small southwest Missouri hometown were stunned that the boy elected "Most Likely to Succeed" 15 years earlier could have done this. They knew him as a church leader who had been a popular and smart high-school kid who went on to excel in college.

For days, intense media coverage continued. Those who knew Rader - from the hometown folks, to the students at Springfield's Drury College where he worked as head resident of a dormitory, to fellow church members where he taught primary Sunday school - expressed shock

Then, a week after the shooting, a statement said to have been made by Rader in 1980 appeared mysteriously at another

SARAH OVERSTREET

TV station's door. These facts were reported: The statement was from Rader's student file at Southwest Missouri State University in Springfield. In a letter that was placed in his file. Rader confessed to several incidents of peeping into women's rooms at or near the university over a period of years. On three consecutive nights in 1980, Rader was caught "window peeping" by campus security. "I believe I am sick." Rader wrote in his confession, admitting to a "sick urge to see women nude." He was sent off for counseling at the university's counseling

The deeds and desires Greg Rader ultimately thought he'd kept secret for so long were not a secret to everyone. Several SMSU employees had known of his "problem" for almost 10 years. Yet Rader was allowed after graduating to work at that university as a dorm supervisor, and when he applied for the same job across town at Drury, his prospective employers were never told of his little peccadilloes.

SMSU personnel now defend themselves by claiming that federal privacy laws forbade them from including information about "disciplinary action" in either academic or employment transcripts. About that, they are right.

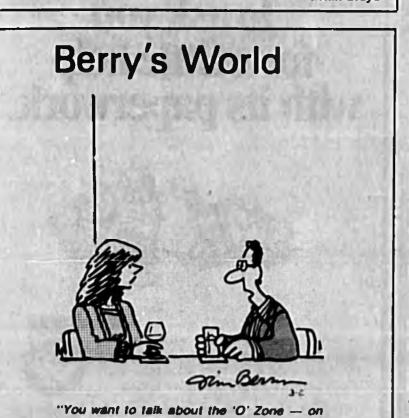

But recurrent window peeping isn't a school "disciplinary action." It's a police matter. A university isn't a small town where security guards who dress up as cops have the right to supersede real police.

During the same era in which Rader apparently was repeatedly peeping through women's windows, several incidents of rape and attempted rape near the SMSU campua had women students afraid to walk from night classes to their cars, or to use the campus track or gyms after dark. Yet campus authorities seemingly allowed a man caught in the act of skulking through bushes after women to hop from college dorm job to college dorm job, free as a bird.

After the shooting of Radar, a woman who was attacked near the university in 1986 with a knife held to her throat identified him as her attacker. A composite drawn by a police artist at the time of the attack almost duplicates the driver's license photo Rader carried in his pocket.

If I were the woman who identified Rader as her attacker. I'd be looking for a lawyer. And if I were in charge of security at other universities. I'd be looking at SMSU as a valuable lesson in how not to run a campus security system. (C)1000 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSM

Arthritis program at CFRH

SANFORD — "Weight Control and Arthritis" is the topic to be explored in a free program to be presented from 2 to 4 p.m. Monday at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

Mari Feick, a registered dietician at the hospital, will be the featured speaker for the program which is aponsored by the Arthritis Foundation, the Visiting Nurses Association and CFRH.

Diet has nothing to do with causing or curing arthritis, say experts at the National Institute of Arthritis, and the Arthritis Foundation. However, researchers do recommend a good, balanced diet for those suffering from arthritis, and also say they should exercise weight control.

Feick will talk about the seven areas listed for a healthy diet east a variety of foods, maintain ideal weight, eat foods with enough starch and fiber, drink alcohol in moderation, and avoid too much fat, cholesterol, sugar and sodium.

She will also talk about false cure claims for arthritis. More than 31 million Americans suffer from arthritis and related diseases amd so far science has not discovered a cure.

"Many arthritics, for whom pain is a fact of daily existence, have turned to quack drugs and devices that promise the impossible," Feick said.

"Some of the programs sold as cures are diets including cod liver oil, alfalfa, pokeberries and blackstrap molasses to a mixture of honey, vinegar, lodine and kelp," she continued. "Recently two professors at Rutgers University theorized that the condition was caused by cating vege-tables classed as 'nightahades.' These are tomatoes, white potatoes, green pepper and eggplant."

The program is open to the public and interested people can obtain more information by calling 321-4500, extension 607.

'Helpful' surgery was disastrous

James Burt, M.D., of Dayton, Ohio, is a surgeon who believes that nothing succeeds

For 22 years, he performed "crude experimentation on hundreds of women without their consent," according to Isabel Wilkinson, writing in The New York Times. "Women are structurally inadequate for in-tercourse," wrote Burt; "this is a pathological condition amenable to surgery." The doctor claimed that his operation, which involved removing the hood of the clitoris and repositioning the vagina, would turn women into horny little mice."

Unfortunately, Burt's unproved operation was a disaster. By acting on his belief that he could improve on nature, the surgeon ruined many women's lives. Investigators, sifting through the records, were astounded to learn that Burt's colleagues did not speak up earlier to put an end to his barbarism. Burt himself, has been charged by the Ohio State Medical Board with "gross immonsity and grossly unprofessional conduct." The board is currently seeking to charge some Dayton physiclans with complicity because, for years, these doctors knew what was going on, but looked the other way. The Burt procedure, unrecognized by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, caused women to experience sexual dysfunction, extensive scarring and chronic urinary infections. Experts estimate that the operations required to repair the damage done by Burt would cost $25,000 per woman with no guarantee of success. Despite persistent pleadings and complaints by a few doctors, the Medical Board took no action until the governor insisted on an investigation. Physicians across the country said they were astonished and outraged that Burt had operated outside recognized standards for so long. "It's a disgrace to all of medicine," said Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of the Public Citizens Health Research Group, a consumer advocacy organization.

Evidently, many surgeons refused to blow the whistle on Burt out of fear of legal retribution; they were afraid Burt would sue them if they complained. Thus, the case focuses on a troublesome issue: the inability of organized medicine to police itself. If doctors like Burt are permitted to practice in civilized communities such as Dayton, how effective is the medical profession in weeding out incompetents elsewhere? Not very, in certain in-

All doctors make mistakes, so we are warned about taking too much joy in the mistakes of others. The boomerang effect is well-known: the vehemence with which one M.D. criticizes another can be turned around, in another situation at another time, when the shoe, so to speak, is on the other foot. Especially in small community hospitals, the associate you criticize this year may be looking over your shoulder as chief of staff next year. This potential friction is not something ordinary doctors welcome.

Also, some physicians are merely eccentric: they do things differently without causing much harm or discomfort to their patients. Healers are very loathe to complain in public about their confreres' uncustomary approaches.

However, at the other end of the spectrum. away from the glitches and eccentricities, lies the dangerous doctor - the practitioner who is impaired, disturbed or untrained. Surely the profession must find satisfactory methods to get rid of such incompetents. Why have we been unable to do so? Is the legal system so topsy-turvy that the rights of the accused take precedence over the rights of the victim? Why do we consistently take the smoother, more well-traveled road of denying the problem or ignoring it and hoping it will go away? Is this simply human nature or a vicious trade-guild mentality?

cure is still elusive

BOSTON — As scientists inch toward finding a cure for the common cold, millions of people continue to face the misery of sniffling, sneezing and coughing their way through their latest bout with the age-old nemesis.

The cold remains the most frequent illness in the United States and other industrialized countries. The average American child gets about six colds a year while an adult can count on two or three.

Scientists have made important strides in understanding what causes colds and are working on new treatments. But for the time-being, experts say the best remedies are the old remedies: prevention, rest, and plenty of fluids, such as chicken soup.

"Rest, fluids, aspirin or Tylenol and wait it out - I think that's still the best approach," said Dr. Thomas Parrino, an associate professor of medicine at Brown University School of Medicine in Providence, R.I.

Contrary to what many people think, doctors know what causes colds. The culprits are viruses called rhinoviruses, coronaviruses, influenza viruses. parainfluenza, respiratory syncytial viruses and adenoviruses.

There are about 200 different strains of these viruses, which is why it has been so difficult to come up with one way to prevent or treat colds.

But in an advance halled as a breakthrough in cold research. scientists recently reported they had determined how most rhinovirues, which cause half of all colds, gain entry into cells in the nose and cause colds.

door to developing a nosespray or nosedrops that could prevent colds or cut them short by luring cold viruses away from cells, it will be years before the work translates into anything practical.

In the meantime, experts say one of the bests things to do is everything possible to prevent yourself from getting a cold in the first place.

A person gets a cold by being exposed to a cold virus, either by breathing in the virus that someone else has expelled by blowing their nose, sneezing or coughing or by touching someone who has a cold and then touching their own mouth or

Elliot Dick, a professor of preventive medicine at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, has conducted studies he says shows colds are most commonly transmitted when people blow their nose.

That means the best way to avoid getting a cold is to stay from people who have away colds. And the best way for people to avoid giving their cold to someone else is by blowing their nose lightly into a disposable tissue, Dick said.

Dick helped develop a tissue treated with a cold-virus killing disinfectant. The tissue worked, Dick said, but an attempt to market the tissue failed.

There is a popular misconception that getting a chill gives people colds. But experts say there is no evidence to support that notion.

"Obviously, if you are exposed to severe cold for a period of time it might make you susceptible to While the research opens the a lot of things because it stresses your body," said Parrino. "But just being in cold weather doesn't increase your chances of getting a cold."

Although people spend mil-lions of dollars on over-thecounter cold remedies, researchers say the evidence has been mixed about their effectiveness.

Part of the problem is that most colds only last a few days and the symptoms vary so much from person to person it's difficult to evaluate many cold

But both Dick and Parrino said most studies indicate antihistamines are of limited value for treating colds. While decongestants appear to have some value, they can have negative side effects, such as high blood

Aspirin alleviates the aches that often accompany colds and can reduce a fever if there is one. But experts warn that children should take non-aspirin pain relievers such as Tylenol because of possible complications with a fever.

There is another popular perception that vitamin C can prevent colds or make them go away. But again, researchers say various studies aimed at confirming that notion have failed.

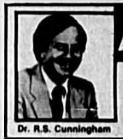

One old custom for treating colds - chicken soup - does appear to have value, experts say. Chicken soup - or any hot liquid — apparently is beneficial because colds can be dehydrating and inhaling steam loosens up mucous.

Should treatment decisions be made by you or doctor?

United Press International

BOSTON - When you're sick, do you want the doctor to make the final decision about your treatment or do you want to call the shots

If you'd rather the doctor make the choices, then you appear to be like most people, according to a new study.

Researchers at the Boston University School of Medicine surveyed 312 patients at University Hospital in Boston and found patients tended to want their doctors to have the final word about what treatment they undergo.

But that doesn't necessarily mean patients want to be ignorant about their illness, claims the study, which was published in the Journal of General Internal Medicine.

We found that patients' desires for information did not correlate with their preference for decision-making," said Dr. Jack Ende, an associate professor of medicine who headed the "Patients desire information and want to understand, but they don't want their doctors to simply present them with options - they want them to be more directive in helping them make choices and to make stronger recommendations,"

The more serious the illness, the more patients apparently tend to want their doctors to make the decisions, Ende found.

"Those who were faced with more serious illness wanted more involvement from their doctors, not less," said Ende.

The researchers found those more likely to report the desire to make their own decisions tended to be younger, have higher levels of education, income and occupation. They were also more likely to be divorced or separated.

The study should serve as a guide for doctors trying to understand patients' needs. Ende said.

"Physicians must make every effort to understand how a patient is feeling and what is important to him or her and then make a decision on the patient's behalf," he said. "It's not always easy, but we have to be prepared to guide the patient."

Dr. Mark Moskowitz, an associate professor of medicine and public health who helped conduct the study, said the findings offer doctors insights into what patients want.

"To date there has been very little understanding of what patients really want. It is hard to have a meaningful doctor-patient relationship without knowing what the patient needs," he

But he cautioned that each patient must be treated differently.

Athletes, take care of your feet and fifth, toes (the small toes By Gabe Mirkin, M.D.

The feet of athletes are the target of a variety of uncomfortable, ugly skin rashes. These irritations have many causes and, fortunately, cures.

Most foot rashes that are confined to a small area are caused by fungus, bacteria, allergy or perspiration. Rashes that spread over the entire foot are less common and usually are caused by diseases such as seborrhea, psoriasis and

A fungus infection is treated by powdering your socks (especially those you wear during exercise when you sweat more) during the day and applying a cream to the rash at night. The powder helps by absorbing sweat to

Change in oils is no panacea

United Press International

CORVALLIS, Ore. - A recent decision by several major food manufacturers to change oils used in food processing may help alleviate but certainly won't eliminate heart disease in the United States, a researcher said.

The move is no panacea, but it is a step in the right direction," said Rosemary Wander, assistant professor in the Oregon State University Department of Foods and Nutrition.

The issue is fat. The companies involved produce a broad range of food items such as cookies, cereals, crackers, cakes, pastries and breads.

The firms decided to stop using tropical oils containing saturated fats, such as coconut oil, and to start using vegetable fats, such as corn or or safflower oll, for food processing.

Saturated fats increase blood cholesterol levels, which are associated with heart disease. Nearly half of the deaths in the United States are due to heart disease. Polyunsaturated vegetable oils do not contribute to the buildup of cholesterol in the blood.

Cholesterol is a major component of the plaque that builds up in arteries, increasing the risk of blood clotting, or thrombosis. Lowering intake of saturated fats lowers blood cholesterol, so it follows that consuming less saturated fat reduces the risk of thrombosis.

"It's important to remember, however, that the average consumer has many sources of fats oils containing polyunsaturated in addition to breads, cookies. crackers and cereals," Wander

> "About half the calories in a chocolate chip cookie are devoted to fats," she said. "If they are converted from saturated to polyunsaturated fats, and if chocolate chip cookies make up 50 percent or more of your diet. the change would be significant in terms of saturated fat intake."

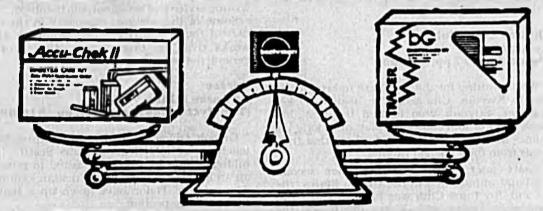

"Most of us, however, get fats not only from grain products but from dairy products and meats as well," Wander noted.

Good nutrition requires a look at the entire diet picture, she said. Making meaningful changes in fat, calorie or carbohydrate content of the diet means changing how you eat.

Reducing fat in pork

GAINESVILLE - A tasty pork drawbacks must be resolved. lower in saturated fat than pork now on the market is being produced by researchers at the institute of Food and Agricultural Scienses (IFAS).

Scientists are feeding pigs an oil that reduces saturated fat in the meat. The result — a pork that on help consumers reduce blood cholesterol and can give a potential boost to the state's $24 million pork industry.

Early studies also indicate swine fed the oil-laced feed have a greater weight gain than pigs on a traditional diet. However, before this new pork goes on the market some production

"People perceive saturated fats as unhealthful. By adding canola oil to swine feed, we've been able to reduce the amount of saturated fats in pork products," said IFAS meat specilist James Lamkey.

Canola oil, most often made from the rapeseed plant, contains a large amount of oleic acid which is high in mono-unsaturated fats. Research conducted at Marianna's Agriculture Research and Education Center shows the addition of 5 to 10 percent canola oil to standard swine feed can reduce saturated fat content in pork.

Updike provides a peek into his life

Belf-Consciousness: Memoirs By John Updike (Knopf, 257 pp., $18.95)

The 36 books John Updike has written have imprinted his style and concerns on the reading public. The language, once so startling and refreshing in its precious reveling, now seems tame and comfortable, while the themes — the mingling of sex, religion and art — are as familiar as a favorite sweater.

In "Self-Consciousness," Updike provides a modest, self-effacing account of the man behind the prodigious output, with a stress on the elittle ties, the childhood foibles and embarrassments that carried into adulthood to Updike, whose concern for the body has always joined the mystical and the clinical, brings the same kind lovingly detailed attention to his own afflictions: his psoriasis, his asthma, his stutter and his teeth. And it is those afflictions, he seems to be saying, that have shaped his self-consciousness.

There are no harsh words here. Even his chapter on the Vietnam war where he details how his ambivalent support for the war put him at odds with much of the intellectual community is written without rancor, distanced and almost disembodied.

Nor does Updike have much to say about his contemporaries, those with whom he worked at The New Yorker or who were friends and rivals on the American literary scene.

in his last chapter, "On Being A Self Forever," Updike is most revelatory in a book that otherwise seems to conceal as much as reveal, exploring the connection between his writing and religious faith.

The Joy Luck Club (Putnam's, 277 pp, 818.95)

While waiting for the Japanese to bring their war to Kweilin, China, in the heat of a '40s summer. Suyuan Woo formed the first Joy Luck Club of four ladies, to play mah jong for money and eat special foods for luck that they made from their meager rations.

The World Treasury of Science Fiction Edited by David G. Hartwell (Little, Brown, 1,100 pp., $29.95)

Science fletion advocates, or anyone interested in delving into the growth of the genre, will be excited by the publication of this anthology, which is the first in a series of "world treasuries" planned by Little, Brown & Co. in cooperation with the Book-of-the-Month

The book includes 54 works by the most famous, and not-so-famous, science fiction writers in the world.

The selections date back to 1939 and include tales by such genre luminaries Isaac Asimov, Ray Bradbury, Arthur C. Clarke, Robert Heinlein and Ursula LeGuin. Also included are works by John Updike, Kurt Vonnegut, Italo Calvino, Stanislaw Lem and comedianmusician Steve Allen. Editor David Hartwell gives a brief history of science fiction in his general introduction and also introduces each work, setting it in its place in the whole.

Anyone who thought science fiction writing provided a fairly uniform setting for plots will quickly discover otherwise. If this volume does one thing, it is to show the wide variety of writing styles and imaginations involved.

Some of the writing, especially in the early part of the period, was quite primitive. Other works rival the best of any other genre or general fiction.

The curses start coming true. The adventures of Gideon Oliver get curiouser and curiouser. The ending is a surprise. Eikins has put together a realistic, interesting, sometimes very funny followup to Oliver's first mystery adventure, "Old Bones."

The yellow brick road leads to Chittenango

CHITTENANGO, N.Y. - The yellow brick road may end in the Land of Oz, but a proud central New York farming village is where Dorothy and Toto began their journey to the Emerald City, in the imagination of author L. Frank Baum.

The 4,205 residents of Chittenango, named by the Indians for the sparkling creek that rushes by rolling, green farmland, believe with nearreligious conviction that the lush Mohawk Valley inspired its most famous son to write 19 Oz books. including the "Wonderful Wizard of Oz" in 1900.

'Gasoline Alley' still popular

United Prese International

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - One of the longest-running comic strips in American newspapers, "Gasoline Alley," recently felt its own pulse to see how it was doing after more than 70 years and the verdict appears to be encourag-

Not only do older people still follow the doings of the Wallet family but children, teenagers and young marrieds also have taken to reading the strip.

"Gasoline Alley was started in 1918 as World War I was ending. Its original plot featured Walt and Phyllis Wallet and the doings in the alley behind their home where Walt and his friends tinkered with their cars. The Wallet family grew over the years, with the latest character, Ada, being born on Aug. 8. 1988.

Late last year cartoonist Jim Scancarelli and his uncle, Bob Parati, who helps write the strip, offered to send a copy of the extended Wallet family tree to News and about 300 other any reader who provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

It was not meant to be a test of the strip's popularity, but the results nevertheless were startling and pleasing, said Jane Parati, Bob's wife who has been handling the avalanche of mail.

At the base of the tree are Walt and Phyllis who were married June 24, 1926. Skeezix was left on Walt's doorstep in February 1921. He married Nina Clock on June 28, 1944. Slim and Clovia were married in 1977 and adopted Rover in 1983. Ada is at the top of the tree, which includes other children and grandchildren of the Wallets.

They were expecting maybe a couple of hundred requests but to be on the safe side, 1,000 copies of the Wallet family tree were printed.

During three days of last October readers of the strip. which appears in the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily newspapers, were invited to send their requests to Parati's office in Charlotte. The first batch of mail brought

1,500 requests. A few days later the total had reached 25,000. But that wasn't the end of it, said Jane Parati. The requests have now grown to about 80,000 and are still coming in.

"We're pretty happy with the response," said Parati, who reads most of the letters and serves as spokesperson for the strip's creators. Overwhelmed by the stacks of requests that piled up, she asked for volunteers to open the mail. Jane Parati says the principal theme of the letters from readers is "they are so happy to have a family-interest strip. It still entertains them. They like the fact that the characters grow up."

Many of the requests for the family tree came from oldsters. she said, but "children and teenagers and young marrieds also wrote.

attracting many blacks. "I think the chickens have come home to roost," he said recently. "Lee Atwater has made his own bed. The Republicans have made their own bed. The idea of Republicana reaching out to blacks is absurd." But some Democrats. especially the conservatives, are not so sure. As they struggle to get the Democrats to appeal to more mainstream white voters, they worry that the GOP effort to attract blacks may succeed. mostly because of the powerful polarizing nature of Jackson.

The flery civil rights leader certainly inspires great numbers of blacks, but some Democrats argue that advantage is washed out by the fear that Jackson, with his forceful personality and his liberal themes, sparks among many whites.

"Obviously, probably the biggest factor is Jesse Jackson and the ability he has as a force in politics," said former Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., who unsuccessfully sought the Demo-cratic National Committee chairmanship against Brown. "From the Republican point of view, I think they accurately sized up that if they can peel off a few percent of this bedrock (black) support .. they can be a majority party for a long time," said Jones. "They also sense that the dominence of Jeeze Jackson opens the wedge for them to peel off more middle-class blacks and reach their political goal."
