The Off-Campus Living and Community Partnerships department encourages open and honest communication among tenants and between tenants and landlords. Any major problems, deficiencies, or questions should be backed up by written communication in order to verify that notice has been given and to clarify the particular issue for everyone's benefit.

Please note the following important things to do:

1. Make sure that your landlord allows subletting and that you get permission to sublet in writing regardless of what was previously communicated to you orally!
2. Inspect your space before you leave and when you return. Any damages must be noted in writing and charges should be taken from the sublessee's security deposit. It is to your benefit to ask for a security deposit from the sublessee. Then, if damages occur, they do not come out of your pocket.
3. Sit down and explain to everyone what is expected from them—including those staying. Try to avoid personal, legal, and financial squabbles by communicating effectively with all concerned.
