SUMMARY

This Gazetteer of Mesolithic sites is based on the examination of collections in museum or private possession, published references and any other available source of information. It has been compiled because such a large number of Mesolithic artifacts are unpublished; nowhere is there a reference to their find-spots or present whereabouts. The Gazetteer is thus intended as a guide to the material itself.

The sites are listed by civil parishes and boroughs within counties, although it should be noted that recent changes in county administration in England has caused some alterations. The first column in the list of sites is concerned with provenance, the parish being printed in capitals. Beneath is the name or location of the site, if anything is known beyond the parish name itself, followed by the national grid reference to six figures in the next column. This grid reference is qualified by the letters A (accurate), E (estimate) or G (general) to indicate the degree of accuracy by which the provenance is known. The second column is reserved for comments and may give the name of the finder, the date of discovery, whether it is an excavated site or similar information. The majority of finds are surface discoveries, but as this can usually only be assumed, it is not stated unless there should be a special reason. Information cited from writing on the actual artifacts or associated records is given within inverted commas; comments by compilers are in brackets followed by their name or initials.

The museum or private collection which preserves the listed artifacts is given in the column headed 'Whereabouts of Material', a personal name following a museum (e.g. BM ex. Warren) indicates the donor, who is usually the finder. A personal name followed by 'Coll' indicates the material is in their possession. The major documentary sources, if the site has been published, are given by the Harvard system (i.e. the name and date of publication). These references are quoted in full in the bibliography at the end.

Broad classification of artifacts have been made, not for typological study, but intended to convey an impression of the type of material that has been found. Similarly, quantities of artifacts have sometimes had to be assessed instead of counted, and the prefix c (= circa) is necessary. An asterisk indicates the presence of material in this category but no knowledge of the quantity involved. Published material which has not been traced may often be listed in this way.

The final column gives the initials or name of the compiler.

It is unavoidable that the Gazetteer may list certain material incorrectly and possibly perpetuate past errors. The typological classification and validity of the material has been assessed by individual compilers and their specialist and local knowledge will have reduced errors to a minimum.

The card index from which the information for this Gazetteer has been extracted is held at The Institute of Archaeology, University of London, and is available for examination on request to the Director at 31-34 Gordon Square, London WC1H 0PY.

ÜBERSICHT

Dieses Verzeichnis mesolithischer Stätten geht aus einer Untersuchung von Sammlungen im Besitz von Museen und Privatpersonen, Veröffentlichungen and anderen zugänglichen Quellen hervor. Es ist zusammengestellt worden, weil Veröffentlichungen über sehr viele mesolithische Kunsterzeugnisse fehlen, und es sonst nirgendwo Auskunft über ihre Fundorte oder gegenwärtige Aufbewahrung gibt. Das Verzeichnis ist also Führer zum Material selbst hin beabsichtigt.

Die Stätten sind nach Gemeinden und Städten (innerhalb der jeweiligen Grafschaften) aufgeführt, aber die unlängst vollzogenen Änderungen der Grenzen der englischen Grafschaften und ihre teilweise Neugliederung haben gewisse Veränderungen im Verzeichnis zur Folge gehabt. Im Verzeichnis der Stätten gibt die erste Spalte die Herkunft an. Der Name der Gemeinde ist in Blockschrift gedruckt. Falls etwas über den blossen Namen der Gemeinde hinaus bekannt ist, wird unter dem Gemeindennamen auch derjenige des Orts selbst angegeben und in der nächsten Spalte die Ortsangabe nach dem englischen "national grid" bis auf sechs Stellen. Die Ortsangabe wird mit den Buchstaben A (accurate, d.h. genau), E (estimate, d.h. geschätzt) oder G (general, d.h. unbestimmt) modifiziert. Diese Buchstaben beziehen sich auf den Genauigkeitsgrad der Herkunftsorte.

Die zweite Spalte ist Bemerkungen vorbehalten. Hier wird - soweit bekannt - Auskunft über den Entdecker und das Entdeckungsdatum angegeben und darüber, ob die Stätte ausgegraben ist, u.ä. Die meisten Funde sind auf der Oberfläche gemacht worden. Da dies in den meisten Fällen jedoch nur angenommen werden darf, wird es nur extra angegeben, wenn besondere Gründe vorliegen. Zitierte Auskunft aus Schrifttum über die Kunsterzeugnisse oder aus verwandtem Material steht in Anführungsstrichen. Bemerkungen der Herausgeber stehen in Klammern mit den Namen oder den Initialen des jeweiligen Herausgebers. Das Museum oder die Privatsammlung, in denen die verzeichneten Kunsterzeugnisse aufbewahrt sind, steht in der Spalte mit der Überschrift "Whereabouts of Material" (d.h. Aufbewahrungsort). Falls ein Personennamen nach dem Museum angegeben wird (z.B. BM ex Warren), bezeichnet dieser den Spender, der meistens auch der Entdecker gewesen ist. Ein Personennamen, auf den die Bezeichnung Coll folgt, bedeutet, dass sich das Material in dessen Besitz befindet. Falls Veröffentlichungen über eine Stätte vorliegen, werden die wichtigsten Quellen nach dem sog. "Harvard system" angegeben (d.h. nach Autorennamen und Veröffentlichungsjahr) und sind in der Bibliographie am Ende des Verzeichnisses ausführlich aufgeführt.

Eine allgemeine Klassifizierung der Kunsterzeugnisse ist vorgenommen worden, nicht zum Zweck der typologischen Forschung, sondern um allgemeine Auskunft über die Art der Gegenstände mitzuteilen. In manchen Fällen konnten ebenfalls die Gegenstände nur mengenweise geschätzt werden, statt gezählt zu werden. In solchen Fällen wird der Buchstabe c (d.h. circa) gebraucht. Ein Sternchen bedeutet, dass Funde bekannt sind, ohne dass Auskunft über ihre Menge vorliegt. Veröffentlichungen, deren bibliographischen Einzelheiten nicht ausfindig gemacht werden konnten, sind auch oft in dieser Weise gekennzeichnet.

Die letzte Spalte gibt die Initialen oder den Namen des jeweiligen Herausgebers an.

Es ist unvermeidlich, dass dieses Verzeichnis wohl manches Material inkorrekt aufführt und womöglich frühere Irrtümer fortbestehen lässt. Die typologische Klassifizierung und die Echtheit des Materials ist von den einzelnen Herausgebern aufgrund ihres Fachwissens und ihrer Ortskenntnisse eingeschätzt worden, sodass Fehler nur minimal auftreten sollten.

Die Kartei, der die in diesem Verzeichnis angegebenen Auskünfte entnommen worden sind, befindet sich im Institute of Archaeology, University of London, und kann auf Wunsch eingesehen werden. (Man wende sich an den Direktor, 31-34 Gordon Square, London, WC1H 0PY).

RESUME

Ce répertoire géographique des sites mésolithiques est basé sur l'examen des collections possédées par des musées ou des particuliers, des références publiées ou autre source d'information disponible. Ou l'a composé parce qu'un grand nombre d'objets ouvragés mésolithiques n'ont pas été publiés. On ne trouve nulle part de référence quant aux lieux où on les a trouvés ni où ils se trouvent actuellement. Par conséquent, ce répertoire géographique sera un guide des matériaux eux-mêmes.

Les sites sont inscrits selon les "paroisses civiles" et les municipalités dans chaque comté bien qu'il soit bon de noter que des changements récents survenus dans l'administration des comtés en Angleterre ont amené quelques modifications. La première colonne dans les listes des sites s'occupe de la provenance, avec le nom de la paroisse écrit en majuscules. En dessous vient le nom ou l'emplacement du site - si on connaît quoi que ce soit en dehors du seul nom de la paroisse - suivi de la référence aux six chiffres du plan national (national grid) dans la colonne suivante. Cette référence au plan est exprimée par les lettres A (exact), E (approximatif), G (général) pour indiquer le degré d'exactitude avec lequel la provenance est connue. La deuxième colonne est réservée aux commentaires et peut donner le nom du trouveur, la date de la découverte, si c'est un terrain excavé ou autre information similaire. La majorité des découvertes sont des découvertes en surface mais comme ce n'est d'habitude qu'une hypothèse, on ne le mentionne pas sauf raison spéciale. Les informations citées d'inscriptions sur les objets eux-mêmes ou les registres associés avec eux sont données entre guillemets, les commentaires des compilateurs sont entre parenthèses suivis de leur noms ou de leurs initiales. Les musées ou les collections privées qui conservent les objets ouvragés de ces listes sont donnés dans la colonne intitulée "Lieux où se trouvent les matériaux". Un nom propre suivant le nom du musée (par exemple BM ex. Warren) indique le donateur qui est souvent le trouveur. Un nom propre suivi de "Coll" indique que les matériaux se trouvent en leur possession. Les principales sources documentaires-si le site a été publié - sont données selon le système de Harvard (c'est-à-dire le nom et la date de la publication). Les références sont citées en entier dans la bibliographie de la fin.

On a dressé la classification sommaire de ces objets, non pas pour une étude typologique mais dans l'intention de donner une impression du type de matériaux qui a été trouvé. De même, on doit quelquefois estimer les quantités d'objets au lieu de les compter et le préfixe c (c = circa) est nécessaire. Une astérisque indique la présence de matériaux dans cette catégorie mais on n'en connaît pas la quantité. Les matériaux qui ont été publiés mais qui n'ont pas été retrouvés peuvent être souvent classés de cette façon. La dernière colonne donne les initiales ou le nom du compilateur. Il est inévitable que le répertoire géographique contienne des matériaux classés incorrectement ou perpétue peut-être des erreurs antécédentes. La classification typologique et la validité des matériaux ont été évalués par des compilateurs individuels et leur connaissance spécialisée et locale aura réduit les erreurs au minimum.

Le fichier duquel les informations de ce recueil, ont été extraites se trouve à l'Institut d'Archéologie, Université de Londres et peut être consulté sur simple demande au Directeur, 31-34 Gordon Square, Londres WC1H 0PY.

Gazetteer of Mesolithic Sites in England and Wales: a guide to the card index compiled by the Council for British Archaeology

---

INTRODUCTION

The Mesolithic period spans the time between the last disappearance of glacial ice from Britain to the general imposition of Neolithic food-producing economies, c. 8300 to 3500 BC. It is represented by little more than imperishable flint artifacts and some other tools and weapons of bone and antler. Flint dominates, and thus most of the sites listed in this gazetteer are the find-spots of flints which, on the grounds of typology, belong to the Mesolithic period. A small proportion of the sites refer to material found by controlled excavation or chance finds in particular contexts, whereby pollen analysis, radio-carbon dating or local stratigraphy indicate that the site is of Mesolithic age.

There are three main categories of sites:

- i) Stratified sites where excavation has or could possibly identify, isolate date and interpret the material and its associations
- ii) concentrations of material on the present surface
- iii) casual finds of isolated artifacts

Responsibly excavated sites are, with only a few exceptions, either published or known to archaeologists concerned with the Mesolithic period. However, there are considerable quantities of material with useful associations, from sites that have been 'looted', rather than excavated. Much of this has gradually found its way into museums or the possession of responsible private collectors, but it has rarely been published or recorded. Material in the second category is even less known, for most of it is unpublished and hidden in museum stores or private collections. When published at all, it is generally only by a broad reference with no details of quantities, types or the present whereabouts of the material. Casual finds remain the biggest category, known only where displayed or recorded in museums, or in the few published papers dealing with the Mesolithic period in particular areas.

This quantity of information, so difficult of access, has prompted the Council for British Archaeology to conduct the survey which has resulted in the card index which forms the basis of this gazetteer.

Many persons have been involved in collecting the information: members of the Mesolithic sub-committee of the CBA have been responsible for specified areas, on a county basis, and specialists, museum curators, private collectors and other interested people have given the collaboration which has made the work possible. Museum and private collections have been examined, checked and counted, the publications of national and county archaeological societies have been consulted, and also museum records, Ordnance Survey record cards and other possible sources of information. Some counties have proved more difficult than others, mainly because of the lack of informed persons working in the area, but the whole of England and Wales has been covered. It has not been possible to include Scotland or Northern Ireland, but it is hoped that these regions will be dealt with in the future. Eire has no material it can confidently assign to this period.

The problems of Mesolithic research are sufficiently involved without interested persons having to spend most of their time, energy and money merely discovering where the basic evidence is to be consulted. The sub-committee of the Palaeolithic and Mesolithic Research Committee which has undertaken the organisation of this survey, feels that this alone justifies their work. The sub-committee first met in 1969, and the interval between then and this publication genuinely reflects the prodigious quantity of material that has had to be examined.

Many doubts and difficulties have had to be debated by the sub-committee, and the constant advice and assistance from Dr. D. A. Roe is gratefully acknowledged, for the problems were similar to those he experienced in his compilation of the Gazetteer of British Lower and Middle Palaeolithic sites for the Council for British Archaeology (Research Report No. 8). Some of these are sub-titled and discussed below so that the user of this gazetteer will understand the aims and policies the sub-committee have adopted in order to achieve consistency. The failings and limitations in the collating and employment of the information obtained by the survey need to be considered by all research workers who hope to make use of the survey cards or this gazetteer. Mistakes are inevitable: some will become evident as future workers consider particular material or sites in a detailed, critical approach beyond the scope of the survey, others may result from inaccurate recording in the past and be impossible to check. Every effort has been made to prevent the perpetuation of false information, but some must inevitably be contained in the succeeding lists. Publication, itself, is bound to bring attention to a few which can be rectified. The accuracy of provenance, for example, may often be questioned. Find-spots are often scribbled on pieces of paper placed in boxes or bags of flints being examined and, frequently, there is no guarantee, nor any apparent manner of checking, that some careless person in the past has not put the wrong label with the flints. Compilers have used their commonsense and local knowledge to assess the validity of such, but no one has any illusion that errors have not been made. However, we are satisfied that they have been reduced to a minimum.

The gazetteer is certain to be incomplete, for several collections, both private and public, will have been missed. Some we know are impossible to see because the owners will not allow them to be examined, or even if examined, the owners have stipulated that they must not be published. A few museum stores are in such a disgraceful state that it has been impossible to be sure that all material that could be Mesolithic has been seen. Other material, mainly in private possession, is just unknown. Gradually, much of this it is hoped will be added to the card index, new finds will be made, and the gazetteer will need to expand. As this situation will be no different in the future, we have seen no reason to delay publication.

Typology is another factor which is bound to raise criticism, Types of flint artifacts have been reduced to broad divisions to reduce the subjective element as much as possible, but it would be wishful thinking to imagine that different compilers would have 100% agreement in classifying the same material. The purpose of the survey is to draw attention to the material itself, to guide serious students to areas of research, to indicate the great number of Mesolithic sites in England and Wales.

This prompts the question: what is meant by Mesolithic Site? For the purpose of this gazetteer it means anywhere an artifact has been found which is considered to belong to the Mesolithic period. Herein lies an unavoidable but fundamental weakness of gazetteers of this nature, for typology alone is not a valid means for objectively dating individual finds of flint. The isolated, casual surface finds, recorded so abundantly in this gazetteer cannot, of course, finally be proved Mesolithic.

Aware of these dangers, and the difficulty of substantiating such suppositions, the sub-committee for the purpose of the survey has assumed that in Britain:

- 1) True tranchet axes and their sharpening flakes were not made in the Palaeolithic or Neolithic periods
- 2) Hour-glass perforated pebble mace-heads were made in the Mesolithic as well as later periods
- 3) Microliths, micro-burins and graters were not commonly made in the Neolithic period, or later periods, and only a small quantity are likely to be of Upper Palaeolithic age
- 4) Mesolithic assemblages are characterised by blades and micro-cores
- 5) Barbed antler points, perforated bone or antler axe/mattocks are very uncommon in the British Palaeolithic or Neolithic periods

Scrapers, picks some mace-heads and 'others' may be included on the grounds of their association with the categories above; by themselves they often cannot justify inclusion unless there are special reasons. A few shouldered or backed points are included, although an Upper Palaeolithic date is more likely for these. The inclusion of sites represented by just one or a few blades or micro-cores may be difficult to justify, and some compilers have tended to disregard such items. The local knowledge and experience of the compiler is the deciding factor.

Each site in this gazetteer is entered on a card compiled during the course of the survey. The card may contain considerably more information, with comments and opinions of the compiler. The gazetteer is intended to act as a guide to both the material and the cards. The latter are available for inspection by request to the Director of the Institute of Archaeology, University of London, at 31-34 Gordon Square, London WC1H 0PY, to whom all correspondence concerning this gazetteer should be addressed.

NOTES ON THE ENTRIES IN THE GAZETTEER

PROVENANCE

The sites are listed by parishes within counties. The boundaries of civil parishes have been used, as shown on Ordnance Survey administrative maps published prior to the local government reorganization of April 1974 (Fig. 1). Borough boundaries are used for urban areas, including the London Boroughs.

The first column in the lists of sites has the parish or borough in capital letters and the location of the site within it on the line beneath. Beside this is the national grid reference to six figures. When, as is frequently the case, there is no other information than a provenance which happens to be the name of the parish, the grid reference follows in the next column with the obvious qualification of 'general'. NSL (no specific locality) is sometimes inserted in order to prevent any confusion with sites recorded above it, within the same parish.

Large scatters of artifacts sometimes span two parishes, or there is difficulty in assigning a particular parish to a site close to a boundary. Compilers have decided which parish should take precedence in such situations, and both are cross indexed.

The degree of precision of a provenance is expressed in an abbreviation in brackets after the national grid reference:

A = accurate
E = estimate
G = general

Thus a well-documented site such as Star Carr will have an accurate qualification; a site with a recorded name (e.g. Bosted, Enfields Farm) that can be located on a map qualifies for an estimated provenance. Finds with no more than a parish name as provenance can only be qualified as general. This assessment is that of the compilers; in many cases additional research may locate vague provenances with greater precision and justify a change in the qualifications. Small details of dates and the names of finders, often recorded in the 'comments' column or on the actual index cards, might give success in this direction if thoroughly investigated.

The strict use of parish boundaries sometimes causes the name of a published site in one parish to be entered here under another, either through changes in parish boundaries since the original discovery or a mistake by the finder (e.g. Thatcham is in Newbury). However, the index resolves this. Of greater concern is the recent movement by the government to rationalise county, borough and parish boundaries. These have changed in places and thus various entries will be wrong. It is not possible to do any more than draw attention to the matter.

NATURE OF SITE

This column may include a brief statement of any circumstances that are known of the discovery of the artifacts listed, i.e. the name of the finder, the date of discovery, if excavated, etc. Comments taken from writing on the artifacts themselves or on associated labels or records are put within inverted commas. Comments by compilers are in brackets followed by their name or initials.

The great majority of finds listed are surface finds, although this can generally only be assumed, so this circumstance is not added unless

Fig. 2 - Categories of Mesolithic Artifacts

Tranchet Axes or Adzes (Tr.Ax)

No. 1 (Santon Warren, Lynford, Norfolk - J. J. Wymer Coll)

The cutting edge (bottom as illustrated) is produced by the removal of one transverse flake. The other side may exhibit radial flaking, or as in this example, another transverse flake. The size of tranchet axes vary considerably and, where known, are indicated by the suffix of L, M or H in brackets, being abbreviations for Light, Medium or Heavy respectively, based on arbitrary measurements of

< 10 cm long	= Light (L)
10-20 cm long	= Medium (M)
> 20 cm long	= Heavy (H)

The example is a Medium Tranchet Axe.

Tranchet axes, particularly the heavy ones, are often referred to as "Thames Picks" as so many have been dredged from that river. They were hafted in wooden shafts. Many of the light tranchet axes were probably inserted into antler sleeves.

Tranchet Axe/Adze Sharpening Flakes (Tr.AxSF)

No. 3 (Star Carr, Seamer, Yorks NR (after Clark 1954)- Museum of Archaeology & Ethnology, Cambridge)

These flakes have been struck transversely across the cutting end of an axe either to produce the initial cutting edge or to re-sharpen it.

Picks (Pk)

No. 2 (Headley Heath, Headley, Surrey - J. J. Wymer Coll)

These tools were presumably hafted and possibly used for digging. They are generally of crude manufacture, as is this example, which is made from poor-quality grey, cherty flint.

Pebble Maceheads with Hour-glass Perforation (PMH)

No. 20 (Blackdown, Lurgashall, Sussex - after Rankine 1949)

These are usually made of natural pebbles of quartzite selected for their convenient size and symmetrical shape. A central hole has been laboriously drilled through from each side. Sometimes they are only part-perforated and such are not necessarily unfinished maceheads but stone hand-rests for drilling.

Pebble maceheads were made in more recent periods than the Mesolithic but have been found in Mesolithic contexts at Southampton and Addington.

Micro and Blade Cores (Core)

Nos. 21-23 (Wangford Warren, Wangford, Suffolk - J. J. Wymer Coll)

The more regular cores are of three main types: single platform conical (no.19), two opposed platforms struck on one face (no.20), and two opposed platforms struck on alternate faces in opposite directions (no.21). Multiplatform and irregular examples also occur.

Blades and Flakes Unretouched (Bl/F1)

Nos. 14-17 (Wangford Warren, Wangford, Suffolk - J. J. Wymer Coll)

Only blades are illustrated. These are defined as flakes with their length at least twice or more than their width, and with more or less parallel edges and previous removals.

Scrapers (SC)

Nos. 18-19 (Wangford Fen, Wangford, Suffolk - J. J. Wymer Coll)

The secondary working is generally convex and may be on a flake or blade. End scraper on blades (e.g. no. 18 with the secondary flaking at the distal non-bulbous end of the blade) are particularly characteristic of Mesolithic industries.

Gravers (Gr)

Nos. 4-5 (Thatcham, Newbury, Berkshire - Reading Museum)

Engraving tools, often referred to by the French term 'burin', made by longitudinal flakes struck down the edges of thickish blades or flakes. There are many types, such as those struck at right angles from a prepared platform (e.g. no.4), or those produced by the intersection of two longitudinal flakes (e.g.no.5). The waste pieces struck in the sharpening or re-sharpening of gravers, termed graver spalls, are distinctive.

Others (O)

No. 6 (The Warren, Oakhanger, Hants - after Rankine, 1960)

This category includes other flakes with secondary working such as awls, backed knives, saws (as the example illustrated) flakes with ground edges, unspecialised and miscellaneous pieces.

Microliths (M)

Nos. 9-13 (9:Windy Hill, Littleborough Lancs (after Petch, 1924) - Tolson Memorial Museum, Huddersfield. 10-13: Tillingbourne Fields, Wotton, Surrey - J. J. Wymer Coll)

These frequently diminutive flints, the "pygmies" of early reports, are of many types. They vary from simple, obliquely blunted points (e.g. no. 13), to geometrics (nos. 11-12) or of minute rod-like forms (no. 9). Hollow-based points, known as 'Horsham points' (no. 10) are distinctive of some Mesolithic industries in Southern England, particularly in the Weald. Minute forms appear to belong to later Mesolithic industries. Most microliths were used to tip and barb spears and arrows, set into slots with resin or similar substances. Poison may have been applied to them during hunting forays.

Micro-burins (M-b)

Nos. 7-8 (Bury Hill, Holmwood, Surrey - J. J. Wymer Coll)

These are the waste pieces of microlith production, resulting from notching a micro-blade and snapping it across obliquely, generally to remove the proximal (i.e. bulbous) end. A distinctive facet remains on the micro-burin.

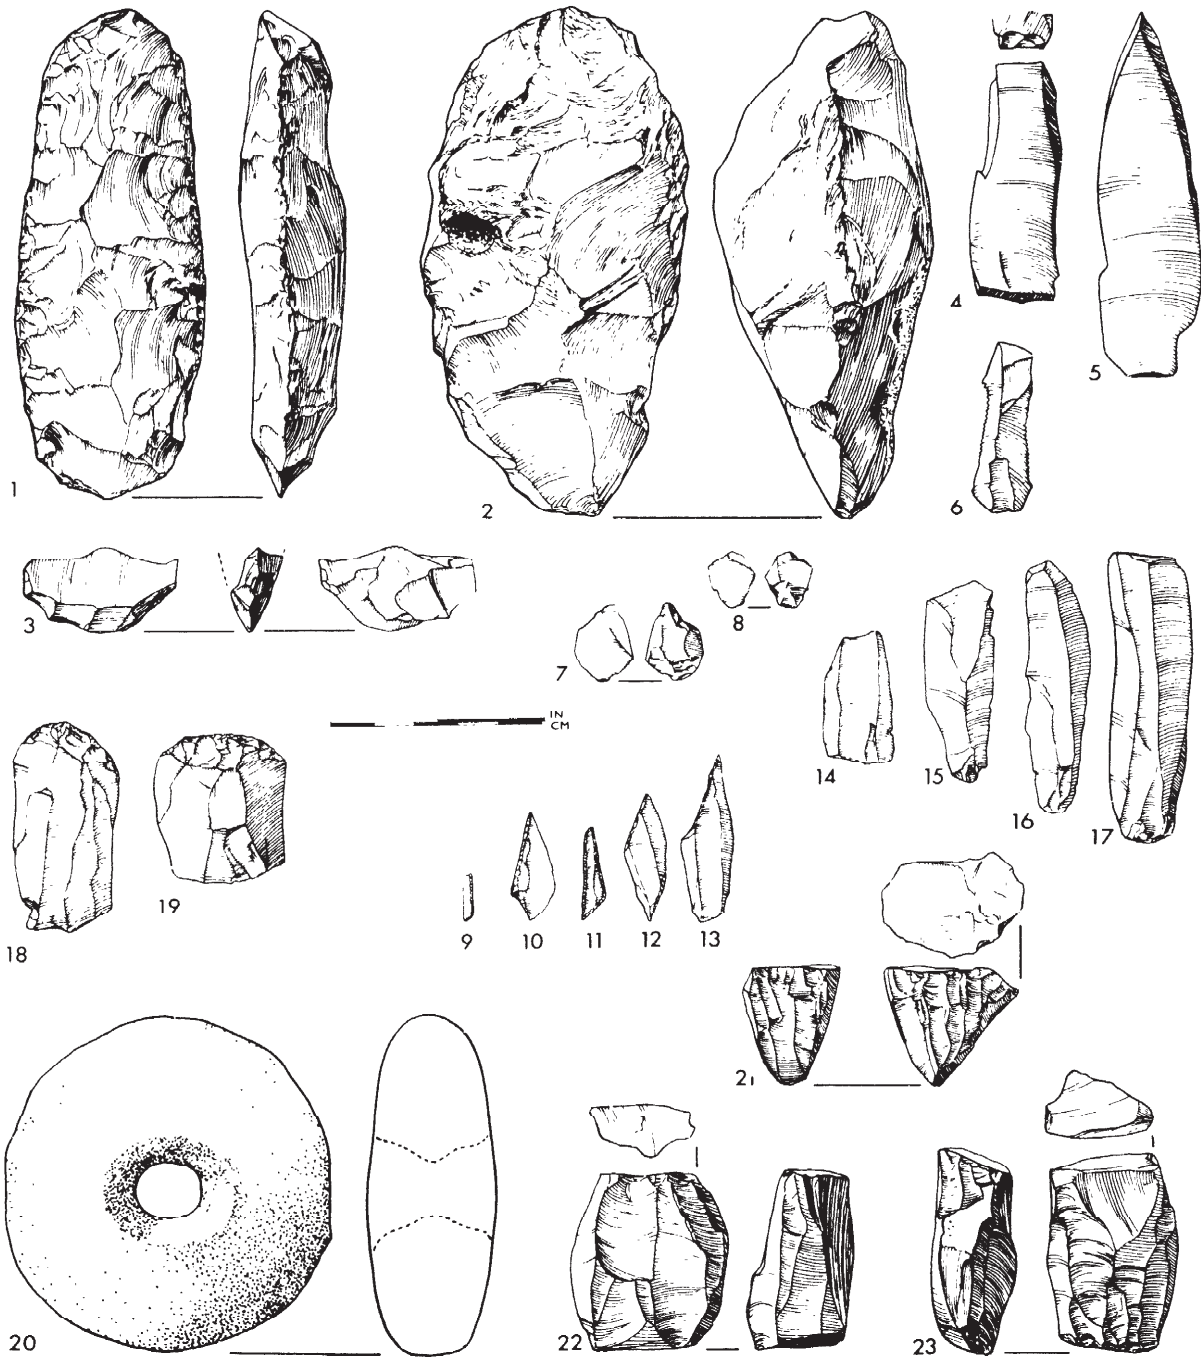

Figure 2. (For full annotation see opposite page). 1) tranchet axe; 2) pick; 3) tranchet axe sharpening flake; 4-5) gravers; 6) saw; 7-8) micro-burins; 9-13) microliths; 14-17) blades; 18-19) scrapers; 20) perforated pebble macehead; 21-23) cores.

there should be a special reason.

WHEREABOUTS OF MATERIAL AND MAJOR REFERENCES

The name of a museum where the listed artifacts are housed is given at the top of each entry in this column. Abbreviations are given in the list below. When material from one site is dispersed between two or more museums and private collections, museums are listed first in alphabetical order. Published references, if any, are placed below. Where they refer to material not in the collections listed they may constitute a specific entry, in which case the compiler's initials will be in the last column on the same line.

Material from prolific sites is frequently distributed among several museums (e.g. Kelling Heath, Norfolk) and the collections from each are recorded separately. Personal names following the name of a museum (e.g. BM ex. Warren) indicate the name of the person who gave the material to the museum, usually the finder himself. Personal names on separate lines followed by 'Coll' indicate that the material is in their private possession. Sometimes this may be a temporary matter between excavation and ultimate disposal. Further details may be found on the survey cards.

A few sites are only known from published records and the actual material has not been traced. In this case no more than a bibliographical reference will appear in this column.

Documentary sources are given where possible in date order. The gazetteer does not attempt to be a complete bibliography of Mesolithic reports, but the references given, if consulted, should enable any further relevant reports to be found. References are given by the Harvard system and are quoted in full in the bibliography at the end of the gazetteer.

CATEGORIES OF ARTIFACTS AND NUMBERS

The categories used are broad classifications which will enable the user of the gazetteer to form an impression of the extent and variety of material from a particular site. It was not considered practicable nor desirable to produce detailed typologies, such as the varieties of microliths, although further details may be entered on the actual index cards. The following categories will be familiar to all who are concerned with the study of this period. Typical examples are illustrated on Fig. 2.

CATEGORIES OF ARTIFACTS

	Abbreviation as used in gazetteer
Tranchet axes or adzes	* Tr.Ax.
Other axes or adzes	O.Ax.
Tranchet axe/adze sharpening flakes	Tr.Ax SF
Picks	Pk
Pebble maceheads with hour-glass perforations	PMH
Micro and blade cores	Core
Blades and flakes unretouched	Bl/Fl
Scrapers	Sc
Gravers	Gr
Others	0

	Abbreviation as used in gazetteer
Microliths	M
Micro-burins	M-b
Bone or antler artifacts and miscellaneous material	This is briefly described and not abbreviated
*Size is indicated by the addition of a letter in brackets, the measurements of length being arbitrary
(L) = light	10cm long
(M) = medium	10-20cm long
(H) = heavy	20cm long

For those who are not familiar with Mesolithic artifacts, the user of the gazetteer is recommended to consult standard works such as J. G. D. Clark's Mesolithic Age in Britain, K. P. Oakley's Man the toolmaker, W. F. Rankine's Survey of the West Surrey Greensand, and The Mesolithic of Southern England, and various reports in archaeological publications.

The numbers following the various categories of artifacts have been assessed by the compilers, and in many cases it cannot be guaranteed that it is the exact total of a particular collection. Boxes of surface flints often contain Mesolithic and Neolithic material, and raise all manner of subjective assessments. Frequently time or contingencies only allow an estimate to be made, especially with the waste material of extensive sites. The prefix c.(= circa) is thus often used here, but does enable the user of the gazetteer to get an impression of the quantity of material he may have to contend with. Sometimes, especially where the only source of information is from a published source, the categories of finds may be known but nothing of the quantity. This is indicated by an asterisk (*). If nothing is known of the categories represented, 'unspecified' is entered in this column.

THE COMPILERS (COMP)

The initials of the various regional compilers and collaborators are placed in this column against each entry. See list below.

LIST OF REGIONAL ORGANISERS AND COLLABORATORS WITH ABBREVIATIONS AS USED IN THE GAZETTEERS

The compilation of the card index, on which this gazetteer is based, was made by a number of archaeologists accepting the responsibility for various geographical regions in England and Wales, based on county areas, as following:

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The number of people who have contributed to this Mesolithic Survey are so numerous, and their contributions so variable in quantity, that it would be difficult to construct any formal list of names to whom thanks should be expressed. Nor is it really necessary to make such a list, for it is already contained within the pages of the gazetteer. The many names within the compilers' column give ample testimony to all the organisers and collaborators who have laboured to produce the information. Private collectors have given access to their material and museum staffs all over England and Wales have cooperated without exception. It is also difficult to know who should be thanking whom, for the guiding principle and stimulation throughout has been the desire to accumulate the information as a basis for future research, and this has been shared by all. Nevertheless, there have certainly been times when many people have been inconvenienced, and their tolerance and patience is appreciated by those who inconvenienced them. The members of the Mesolithic sub-committee would certainly, as a body, wish to express their special thanks to all the people involved, particularly to museum staffs. They would also record their gratitude to the Officers and Executive of the Council for British Archaeology for supporting their work, both by their encouragement and finding sufficient money to help pay towards much of the travelling involved by the organisers and for the payment of clerical assistance. The editor spent many hours with Dr. R. M. Jacobi at Cambridge, augmenting and checking the lists, and wishes to record his gratitude to him for allowing such free use of his thesis material and for bestowing so much time to the project. Also to Mrs. S. Palmer who covered a large area of Southern England. Valuable assistance with the bibliography was received from Dr. I. F. Smith and Miss Joan Harding, and many problems were resolved through the helpfulness of Mr. John Hopkins, Librarian at the Society of Antiquaries. The majority of the typing (and retyping!) of the survey cards and gazetteer sheets and much sorting and checking was done by Mrs. E.M. Wymer. Further clerical assistance was received from Mrs. A. Harvey and Mr. G. Stanhope-Lovell. The editor thanks all these people and his many other colleagues, particularly Dr. R. Singer of the University of Chicago who has permitted him to conduct much of this work during the course of his research activities in earlier periods. Without such assistance it would not have been possible.

UPPER PALAEOLITHIC GAZETTEER

INTRODUCTION

It was decided to include the Upper Palaeolithic section at a stage when the Mesolithic survey was nearly complete. This was made possible by the work and agreement of Mr. John Campbell who, at the time, was in the Department of Archaeology at the University of Edinburgh. The majority of the information has been taken from his thesis. The extraction of information and editing of this gazetteer is almost solely the work of Mr. Clive Bonsall, who was also responsible for much of the Mesolithic gazetteer in the northern counties of England.

As far as possible the same format has been used as in the Mesolithic gazetteer, and the general introductory notes and principles at the beginning of this volume apply equally. However, it has been necessary to add three other categories to describe the artifacts:

B = Backed tools (including microliths)

Bone = Bone or antler artifacts

L = Leaf points

Where totals are set in parentheses (eg B...5), this means that there were at least 5 backed tools from the site.

Abbreviations of collaborators and museums are the same as in the Mesolithic gazetteer, and bibliographic references are included in the one bibliography at the end of this volume. Similarly, the sites are contained in the same index. The main difference is that where material from one site is split between two or more museums or private collections, the entries are not separated, and only the total quantity is recorded.

Because there is doubt as to the Mesolithic or Upper Palaeolithic date of some of the material, a few sites are unavoidably duplicated in both sections of the gazetteer.

INDEX OF LOCALITIES

This index lists all localities including parish names in the first column of the tabular section of this Gazetteer. The four letter abbreviation is the county, while the place-name immediately before the colon is the parish or borough. Where a locality is across the boundary of two parishes the two names are separated by an oblique stroke. Compound parish names are indexed under both names.

Key to county abbreviations:
With the exception of the Isle of Wight
Northumberland and Northampton, these are the first four letters of the county name.
