"Fruit and vegetable consumption is an important part of a healthy diet and assumed to aid in the reduction of energy intake and body weight. Fruits and vegetables may display differential effects on weight and weight loss; however, the effects of the two food groups have rarely been investigated separately," scientists in the United States report (see also ).

"The present study focused on the effects of fruit consumption on body weight and weight loss in a sample of 77 overweight and obese dieters enrolled in an intervention program. Food consumption was assessed at baseline by food diaries and after the introduction of nutrition software through electronic food records. Body weight and additional physiologic outcomes were assessed three times, once before the intervention and again at the 3- and 6-mo follow-ups. Vegetable and fruit consumption differed in their associations with body weight and weight loss. Although vegetable consumption increased as a result of the intervention ( $P < 0.01$ ), fruit consumption did not. However, only fruit consumption was associated with body mass index, showing an inverse relation with body weight in cross-sectional and longitudinal analyses ( $r = -0.27$  to  $-0.44$ ). The relation between fruit consumption and body weight remained significant after controlling for age, gender, physical activity level, and daily macronutrient consumption ( $\Delta R^2 = 0.06-0.13$ ). Further, increases in fruit consumption were associated with subsequent weight loss, controlling for the same covariates ( $\Delta R^2 = 0.05-0.07$ )," wrote K.E.E. Schroder and colleagues, Utah State University.

The researchers concluded: "The results indicate unique contributions of fruit consumption to the management of body weight and indicate that a separation of effects for fruit and vegetable food groups may be warranted."

Schroder and colleagues published their study in Nutrition (Effects of fruit consumption on body mass index and weight loss in a sample of overweight and obese dieters enrolled in a weight-loss intervention trial. Nutrition, 2010;26(7-8):727-734).

2010 AUG 30 - () -- A report, 'Mechanism of inhibition of aliphatic epoxide carboxylation by the coenzyme M analog 2-bromoethanesulfonate,' is newly published data in Journal of Biological Chemistry (see also ). "The bacterial metabolism of epoxypropane formed from propylene oxidation uses the atypical cofactor coenzyme M (CoM, 2-mercaptoethanesulfonate) as the nucleophile for epoxide ring opening and as a carrier of intermediates that undergo dehydrogenation, reductive cleavage, and carboxylation to form acetoacetate in a three-step metabolic pathway. 2-Ketopropyl-CoM carboxylase/oxidoreductase (2-KPCC), the terminal enzyme of this pathway, is the only known member of the disulfide oxidoreductase family of enzymes that is a carboxylase. In the present work, the CoM analog 2-bromoethanesulfonate (BES) is shown to be a reversible inhibitor of 2-KPCC and hydroxypropyl-CoM dehydrogenase but not of epoxyalkane:CoM transferase," scientists in the United States report.

"Further investigations revealed that BES is a time-dependent inactivator of dithiothreitol-reduced 2-KPCC, where the redox active cysteines are in the free thiol forms. BES did not inactivate air-oxidized 2-KPCC, where the redox active cysteine pair is in the disulfide form. The inactivation of 2-KPCC exhibited saturation kinetics, and CoM slowed the rate of inactivation. Mass spectral analysis demonstrated that BES inactivation of reduced 2-KPCC occurs with covalent modification of the interchange thiol (Cys(82)) by a group with a molecular mass identical to that of ethylsulfonate. The flavin thiol Cys(87) was not alkylated by BES under reducing conditions, and no amino acid residues were modified by BES in the oxidized enzyme. The UV-visible spectrum of BES-modified 2-KPCC showed the characteristic charge transfer absorbance expected with alkylation at Cys(82)," wrote J.M. Boyd and colleagues, Utah State University.

The researchers concluded: "These results identify BES as a reactive CoM analog that specifically alkylates the interchange thiol that facilitates thioether bond cleavage and enolacetone formation during catalysis."

Boyd and colleagues published their study in the Journal of Biological Chemistry (Mechanism of inhibition of aliphatic epoxide carboxylation by the coenzyme M analog 2-bromoethanesulfonate. Journal of Biological Chemistry, 2010;285(33):25232-42).

Best bug control? Invite in the birds

Project:	2010 Hits	Date:	8/30/2010

Growers are beginning to understand that common birds can be of uncommon value to fields, lawns and gardens.

Many avian species earn their keep by eating insects and small mammals, and destroying weed seeds.

"Commercial growers are turning to birds as an alternative or supplement to pesticides," said Marion Murray, an Integrated Pest Management project leader with Utah State University Cooperative Extension. "But you have to have the environment or habitat before inviting them in."

That means mimicking nature by providing plenty of food, water and cover. Put up some bluebird boxes or nest boxes for raptors, said Marne Titchenell, a wildlife specialist with Ohio State University Extension.

"Monitor the bluebird boxes so sparrows don't take over," she said. "Brushier habitat provides protection for insect-eating songbirds. Allow the edges of your woodlot to grow up a bit. Berry-producing shrubs are excellent things to have around for all kinds of wildlife."

Birds occupy a unique place in nature, according to the authors of a timeless 1912 study, "Red Bird, Green Bird: How Birds Help Us Grow Healthy Gardens," by Harry A. Gossard and Scott G. Harry (Ohio State University Extension, revised edition 2009). "Each species performs a service which no other can so well accomplish," the authors said.

Raptors such as hawks and owls chase down field mice, moles and grasshoppers. Insectivores like bluebirds, chickadees and woodpeckers stalk beetles, worms and grubs.

Meadowlarks are ground feeders, favoring meadows and farm fields where they gorge on grasshoppers and weevils. Robins focus on lawns and gardens, where they pull up cutworms, wireworms and other larvae injurious to crops.

Chickadees are birds of the forest, eating tent caterpillars, bark beetles and plant lice. Goldfinches prefer open country where they can pursue caterpillars and flies. "No other bird destroys so many thistle seeds," the authors say.

"An individual tree swallow, barn swallow, purple martin or chimney swift can eat up to a thousand flying insects a day," said David Bonter, assistant director of Citizen Science with the Cornell Lab of Ornithology. "They can have a big impact."

While it's great to have these specialized bug hunters around if you're a grain farmer, small commercial farmer or orchard grower, recruiting should be directed toward a variety of species, said Margaret Brittingham, a professor of wildlife resources at Penn State University.

"All insect eaters feed at different heights, on different plants and prefer different insects," she said. "Having some (bird) diversity is important in maintaining insect populations. What we don't want to wind up with is having a monoculture with birds as we frequently do with plants, inviting problems."

Army: Soldier shot dead in Utah was AWOL

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) _ The U.S. Army says the soldier who shot a Salt Lake City police officer in the leg was being sought as a deserter.

Police returned fire Friday and killed Brandon S. Barrett, who was in military fatigues and heavily armed on a busy downtown intersection.

Now, the Joint Base Lewis-McChord in Tacoma, Wash., is releasing details about Barrett's background.

Maj. Jenny Willis told the Deseret News of Salt Lake City and The News Tribune of Tacoma that Barrett was from Tucson, Ariz., where his father is declining comment.

Willis says Barrett joined the armed forces almost four years ago but disappeared July 20. He was initially classified as absent without leave. Then, on Aug. 19, the Army obtained a federal warrant accusing Barrett of being a deserter.

MORMON SHOOTING

2 dead following shooting at Calif. Mormon church

VISALIA, Calif. (AP) _ Authorities say the man suspected of fatally shooting a Mormon church official in a central California church was later shot to death in a confrontation with police.

Police say 42-year-old Mormon lay bishop Clay Sannar was shot Sunday in his office at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Visalia, southeast of Fresno.

Visalia police chief Colleen Mestas says minutes later, a caller identified himself to police as the shooter. Police responded. The suspect was shot and died at a local hospital. No officers were injured.

Mestas says they've handed over the investigation of the officer-involved shooting to Tulare County sheriff's deputies.

Visalia police continue to investigate Sannar's shooting but haven't identified a motive. As far as police know, the shooter wasn't part of the church.

DEPUTY SHOOTING

More crews to hunt for Utah fugitive

FREDONIA, Ariz. (AP) _ Authorities say more law enforcement teams are being called in to hunt down a man accused of killing a Utah sheriff's deputy.

Scott Curley is believed to be hiding in the wilderness on the Arizona-Utah line.

The 23-year-old Curley is accused of shooting 41-year-old Kane County Deputy Brian Harris during a foot chase.

Coconino County, Ariz., Sheriff Bill Pribil says the search command post is being moved from the town hall in Fredonia to the Kanab Municipal Airport in Utah to accommodate additional teams.

Harris was tracking Curley, who was wanted for burglary, when he was ambushed Thursday and shot to death. Authorities say Curley shot at other police officers and missed before vanishing in the wilderness.

WOMAN SLAIN

Police make arrest in South Salt Lake shooting

SOUTH SALT LAKE, Utah (AP) _ Police in South Salt Lake have arrested a man suspected of shooting his ex-girlfriend to death in the parking lot of an apartment complex.

Sgt. Gary Keller says the 29-year-old man was arrested early Sunday.

He's being held on suspicion of killing a 36-year-old woman Saturday night.

The woman was taken to a local hospital in extremely critical condition and later died.

Her name wasn't released.

VACANT HOMES-BURNING

Ogden burns 2 vacant homes to clear land

OGDEN, Utah (AP) _ Ogden has started out clearing out abandoned homes along the city's riverfront to clear land for redevelopment by burning down some of them.

City firefighters torched two of the homes Saturday and say they took advantage of the opportunity for training.

Fire Chief Mike Mathieu has proposed setting fire to many of the 45 homes located in the Ogden River Project area.

He rates the neighborhood the No. 1 fire hazard in the city. Firefighters have responded to 17 fires there over the past two years.

It is unclear whether burning or demolition will bring down the other houses, however.

Mayor Godfrey has said he would limit the burning because of pollution concerns.

WILDFIRE SEASON

Wildfire season a dud in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) _ Wildfires are burning the fewest acres of land in Utah in nearly a decade.

Utah has had fewer than 10,000 acres scorched by wildfires for a season that's quickly ending.

Many recent wildfire seasons have seen more than 100,000 acres go up in smoke.

The big year was 2007, when more than 620,000 acres burned.

About half of that total was from the Milford Flat fire in Beaver County.

Officials say it's been an unusual year, with a wet spring that lasted well into June and heavy monsoon rains in July and August dampening fire conditions.

BUBBLE CHAIR LIFT

Utah ski areas spend big on future

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) _ Utah ski resorts are making and planning some of their biggest improvements since the 2002 Salt Lake Olympics drove major expansions.

The Canyons, a Park City resort, is opening an eighth peak to the 4,000-acre ski area and adding and realigning several ski lifts.

With a gondola, The Canyons is adding a second flagship lift _ a four-seater with a bubble shield that pulls over skiers and seats that can warm up to 55 degrees on a cold winter day.

That lift is the envy of other Utah resorts, but some of them have big plans, too.

Snowbird, in the mountains just east of Salt Lake City, and Snowbasin near Ogden have filed plans for major expansions with local governments or the U.S. Forest Service.

LAST CODE TALKERS

Original Navajo Code Talker still tells his story

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) _ Tourists hurry inside a shop here to buy books about the famed Navajo Code Talkers, warriors who used their native language as their primary weapon.

Outside, on a walk sheltered from the sun, nine of the Code Talkers sit at a table autographing the books. One of these men, who signs his name as Cpl. Chester Nez, is distinguished from the others.

Before hundreds of Code Talkers were recruited from the Navajo Nation to join the elite unit, 29 Navajos were recruited to develop the code _ based on the then-unwritten Navajo language _ that would confound Japanese military cryptologists and help win World War II.

Of the Original 29, only three survive. And Nez is the only one who can still tell the story.

FINANCIAL AID

Utah State University swamped for financial aid

LOGAN, Utah (AP) _ Utah State University is getting up to 1,000 inquiries a day on financial aid for students.

The staff says it can't handle all the calls and the phone system has crashed a few times.

Steve Sharp is the director of Utah State's financial aid office. He says he's never seen it as busy in 17 years.

Sharp says his staff is earning their paychecks _ and coming in on weekends to keep up with the workload.

Officials say enrollment is high, jobs are scarce and many students are curious about new federal loan rules.

'Dogs baseball coach Curtis will be missed

Fresno State baseball has lost a very key man: third-base coach, pitching coach and chief recruiter Matt Curtis . He recently became the head coach at Cal State Northridge.

Curtis, a Visalia native, was a star for Bob Bennett from 1993-96, signed with the California Angels and played five years of pro ball. Then he came back to the Bulldogs as a coach in 2000 under Bennett. Curtis continued as Mike Batesole's main man as the 'Dogs won the 2008 College World Series.

Fresno State has been blessed to have Matt and Kim Curtis . They will be greatly missed, but Matt Curtis is ready to be a head coach. And, he will be a very, very good head coach! Matt was inducted into the Fresno State Baseball Hall of Fame in 2002.

Utah fan: 'Shame on Fresno State'

Shame on Fresno State. It left the other WAC schools hanging after agreeing not to leave in order to keep the WAC together. Fresno State knew its quick turn-about would potentially kill the WAC and perhaps some of its schools. But, hey, this is OK. Fresno State was only doing what was in its best interest. This has become the excuse. And now, this excuse can be used as the correct answer to every question on an exam in Fresno State's ethics in business course. Do they even teach that course?

And before you argue that Nevada and Fresno only did to the WAC what Utah State and BYU were fixing to do to the MWC, you need to retake your preschool class regarding the difference between apples and oranges. BYU never entered into an agreement with its MWC brethren for the sole purpose of keeping the conference together. In addition, BYU made its intentions regarding independence known months ago. Fresno State made a promise and knew other members relied upon it. Fresno State did not hesitate to break it!

Its actions amount to much more than simply changing conferences, a la Boise State earlier. Fresno State knows this. Its fans know this. But self justifications are easy to come by and are pouring out of Fresno at a rate its own sewer system can't accommodate (or maybe it can).

TV viewer votes for Watney over 49ers

I turned on Channel 47 to watch our local guy Nick Watney try to win the PGA Championship.

They were showing a preseason football game with the 49ers and Colts. I could see that the game was going to run long and I presumed they would cut away from the meaningless game and go to the start of the golf match.

They not only stayed with the football game for the entirety but they also showed the idiot post-game show. I for one will never watch Channel 47 again. It's no wonder they are last in the ratings. Their management people are terrible.

Safety first on the water

We read the article on stand-up paddling [Aug. 19]. Looks like a great alternative water sport. I've surfed for over 30 years and more recently have enjoyed many hours of kayaking down the San Joaquin River. I can certainly see the adventure in stand-up paddling, and plan on trying it myself soon.

What bothers me, though, is the front-page color photo of the riders heading down the river with no life preservers. Wasn't it just a few weeks ago The Bee covered the story of a group of young girls that fell out of their raft and had no life preservers, requiring a full river rescue?

The river is a beautiful place, but can be deceiving and dangerous. Anyone on the river should have a personal flotation device on at all times. Please promote river sport safety.

Another story about Lou Futrell

Thank you to Matt James for his wonderful tribute to my father, Lou Futrell [Aug. 22]. I would like to add one very important piece of information. As well as his four daughters and four granddaughters, my father had a wonderful grandson, McKay Winters, who is the son of my sister Kendall and her husband Mark. My father delighted in McKay and tried to attend as many of McKay's athletic events as he could manage. Dad had not spoken for several weeks before he was on his way to the hospital for the last time. McKay came into the room and Dad said "Hi McKay." Those were the last words he ever spoke.

I would also like to thank everyone who paid respects to my father. It meant so much to my family and made a difficult time a little less painful.

'Appalled' by antics in youth football

I am writing a letter to express my feelings and concerns about youth football. I allowed my son to join a team because I thought it would be good for him to learn teamwork as well as other values. And he has been lucky to have great coaches. But today I was appalled at the poor sportsmanship displayed by another team.

This team did intentional head-butts that were illegal. A child was sent to the hospital by ambulance because they were going in and out of consciousness. Another person on the same team did another illegal head-butt and busted a kid's chin open and he needed stitches. These players were not reprimanded and were not taken out of the game. They were cheered for their behavior. What has youth football come to?

I understand this is football, and it is a rough sport, but when did it become commonplace to break the rules and teach kids it is OK to purposely and illegally hurt someone in order to win? Those who promote this type of behavior should be ashamed.

We see and complain about the poor attitude in our professional sports players, and I say that it starts somewhere. Come on, coaches, winning is awesome, but the lessons you teach our kids last a lifetime. Please teach them something positive.

Dinner, show to benefit Swaner Preserve and EcoCenter

The sandhill cranes are thriving at the Swaner Preserve and EcoCenter, as are families of foxes. Ducks, birds, wildflowers, deer and all kinds of other flora and fauna have found a home in this 1,200-acre pocket of protected naturalness located at Kimball Junction, near Park City.

"It's a place that nurtures the spirit of everyone who visits it," says Annette Herman Harder, executive director of the center.

The preserve started some 18 years ago, with the purchase of a 200-acre farm, and has grown with new additions over the years. About six months ago, "we gave ourselves to Utah State University," says Herman Harder, and they are very excited to be part of that larger educational community, she says.

To celebrate the new partnership and raise funds for continued support, Swaner and USU are presenting an event called "Back in the Saddle," which will take place Saturday, Sept. 4, at the Gray Barron Ranch, overlooking the preserve in Park City.

The cornerstone of the evening will be an equestrian show, put on by Sage Creek Equestrian in Heber, featuring music composed by Kurt Bestor and played by the American Festival Orchestra conducted by Craig Jessop, dean of the Caine College of Arts at USU.

The production was choreographed by Sage Creek's Donnette Hicks, who has created a Wild West Show for the national Cowboy Poetry Gathering, and will feature 14 horses from the equestrian center.

"It's a symphony of poetry intertwined with equine movement that will leave the audience touched, moved and inspired," says Herman Harder. "It's a fabulous event."

Internationally known trainer Jim Hicks and his Friesian stallion, Rembrandt, will be part of the show. Also appearing will be the No. 1 gypsy stallion in the nation, I'm The Lion's Share.

"These are powerful and beautiful animals," says Jessop. "I'm excited to be part of this unique blending of animals and music. It will be a truly exceptional evening in a gorgeous setting. It's great to be working with Kurt Bestor again and to bring him together with the talents of USU students and members of the orchestra."

Also included on the program will be music performed by students, including a string quartet, saxophone quartet and a jazz trio.

The evening includes a dinner catered by Culinary Crafts, which will be followed by dancing to the Joe Muscolino Band.

"It will be a very cool, very unique event that will benefit important preservation and conservation efforts," says Herman Harder.

Tickets for "Back in the Saddle" are $200 per person. Call 888-653-6246 or e-mail teri.rasmussem@usu.edu. The event starts with a mix-and-mingle at 5:30 p.m.

USU had nothing to gain by staying in the WAC while BYU, San Diego St, and UNLV transferred over bringing an end to the MWC and the rise to the WAC...

But once the MWC pulled the rug from under BYU and Utah St, all of a sudden their whole plan was foiled.

Come on people, had this whole plan worked, Utah St. would have greatly benefited. They did what was best for themselves at the time. It didn't work out.

Trojans have 2009 look

LOS ANGELES - With less than a week to go before its season opener, USC's offense remains inconsistent while the defense looks like the strength of the team.

In other words, little has changed since last season, when the defense carried the Trojans most games and when it didn't (Oregon, Stanford), USC lost handily.

During a mock game at the Coliseum on Thursday, the offense sorely missed freshman tailback Dillon Baxter, who played for the scout team because he is suspended for the season opener against Hawaii.

Quarterback Matt Barkley passed for 255 yards and three touchdowns but threw two costly interceptions, including one that walk-on linebacker Will Andrew returned for a touchdown.

Barkley blamed the interceptions on timing problems with his freshman receivers, Robert Woods (Serra) and Markeith Ambles.

"It's still unacceptable," Barkley said. "They are correctable errors."

Barkley also attributed some problems to the lack of tackling, which is not allowed because USC coach Lane Kiffin is trying to avoid injuries with his thin team.

"There's not as much energy and the wide receivers are not flying around at full speed (without tackling)," Barkley said. "I will be confident no matter what (next week). It's just getting in the film room with (the freshmen)."

Kiffin said the offense also was hampered because the offensive line is not allowed to cut block to also prevent injuries.

"If you play young guys, you have to have the expectation they will make mistakes," Kiffin said. "It's better to do it now than wait until the fourth or fifth game when you're in the middle of the conference season."

"The first interception, Robert was a little off on his route. The second one, (Andrew) made a great play."

Trojans to play Texas

USC announced a home-and-home series against Texas in 2017 and 2018. The Trojans host Texas at the Coliseum on Sept. 16, 2017. USC travels to face the Longhorns on Sept. 15, 2018 in Austin.

"We'll worry about that seven years from now," Kiffin said. "I hope I'm here. I'm worrying about a game seven days from now."

USC also announced it would play Utah State at the Coliseum in 2013, which gives the Trojans seven home games that season.

"USC versus Texas is a classic matchup and I'm sure fans from both schools, as well as all college football fans, will look forward to these games with much anticipation," Athletic Director Pat Haden said in a statement. "It's been a long time since USC has played Texas in the regular season, and of course we all remember how exciting the recent bowl game meeting was between the teams."

USC lost to Texas, 41-38, in the 2006 BCS title game at the Rose Bowl.

Freshman quarterback Jesse Scroggins was academically cleared by the NCAA and can rejoin the team. He will be the Trojans' No. 3 quarterback for the Hawaii game. Safety Demetrius Wright is still waiting to hear from the NCAA if he is eligible.

Kiffin on Manning

Kiffin was asked about remarks Indianapolis Colts quarterback Peyton Manning made earlier this week.

"It'd probably be a short conversation (with Kiffin)," Manning said. "I certainly got to know him when he was the head coach at Tennessee. I don't have anything personal against him. But I think the one thing where Tennessee, as a whole group was kind of hurt, our pride was hurt, was that we didn't think that Tennessee was a transition job."

Kiffin replied that, "if you've ever been to Tennessee, there is no other job in college football to those people. Peyton is Mr. Tennessee. I expected him to say that."

UTSA INSIDER ; If WAC calls UTSA, the only answer ...

Project:	2010 Hits	Date:	8/27/2010
Media Type:	Print	Tone:	Neutral
Outlet:	San Antonio Express-News	Journalist:	Dan McCarney

Speculation persists that UTSA will be a strong candidate to join the Western Athletic Conference.

Just this week, while telling the Bozeman (Mont.) Daily Chronicle that his school had been contacted, Montana State athletic director Peter Fields singled out the Roadrunners.

"That's a school the WAC will go after," he said.

Provided the conference survives long enough to extend an offer.

Commissioner Karl Benson had singled out Louisiana Tech as critical to the league's future last week in a teleconference with national media.

But more immediate trouble could come elsewhere.

Hawaii is reportedly in discussions with two non-football leagues, in which it would stash the rest of its athletic program while the football team goes independent.

Then there's Utah State, which the Salt Lake Tribune reports is trying to rekindle the Mountain West Conference invitation it initially turned down little more than a week ago.

That's half the remaining six schools that are looking for a way out. The other three - San Jose State, Idaho, New Mexico State - probably would be as well, but none is attractive enough to garner much interest.

So fragile is the WAC that its future could be dictated by a nonmember.

BYU, whose plan to go independent in football while defecting from the Mountain West to the WAC in all other sports started the whole mess to begin with, is apparently having second thoughts about the move.

The Cougars have until Sept. 1 to make a decision. Slink back to the Mountain West, and the WAC will be an even less attractive destination.

Considering it's already the equivalent of a dilapidated shack in the worst part of town, that's saying something.

As such, it's hard to imagine the league will hold much allure to the Football Bowl Subdivision schools with which Benson would prefer to restock the WAC's membership.

The Sun Belt Conference isn't exactly dripping with prestige, but at least it's stable. Which is why there's no reason to think North Texas, routinely mentioned as a possible candidate, would want to risk a jump to the WAC.

A source confirmed as much last week, telling the Express-News that not only has the WAC approached North Texas before, but that the school still isn't interested.

And if you can't even raid the Sun Belt, whom can you raid?

That leaves only Football Championship Subdivision schools, of which UTSA would seem to be as good a candidate as any.

Yes, the Roadrunners have yet to play a game.

But they bring so much else to the table - name coach, major metro market, huge enrollment, quality football facility - that the WAC would be foolish not to consider them.

If so, no matter how frail the WAC might be, UTSA simply can't turn down such an invitation. Because one reality trumps any concerns.

This might be the best, and only, chance UTSA gets to stick its foot in the FBS door.

Utah State volleyball: Experienced Aggies have great ...

LOGAN — Coming off a disappointing 2009 season that saw Utah State finish in seventh place in the Western Athletic Conference women's volleyball race with a 6-10 league mark, fifth-year head coach Grayson DuBose is cautiously optimistic that his 2010 squad will fare much better than it did a year ago.

One of the main reasons DuBose is so excited about the upcoming season is the fact that Utah State returns virtually its entire roster from last year's team that produced a 15-14 overall record, as the Aggies welcome back all six of its starters from 2009, including their libero, to go along with three other letter-winners.

With all of that experience returning, Utah State is expected to be one of the top teams in the WAC in 2010, as the leagues' coaches picked the Aggies to finish fourth in the conference.

"I think there is a greater sense of urgency, especially among our four seniors, and they want to end their college careers on a high note," said DuBose. "The experience is there; they feel comfortable with each other and have played in a lot of matches together."

Leading the way for Utah State in 2010 will be a quartet of seniors in middle blockers Katie Astle and Shantell Durrant, setter Chelsea Fowles and libero Christine Morrill, along with two outstanding juniors in opposite-side hitter Emily Kortsen and outside hitter Liz McArthur.

Astle, Fowles and Morrill all earned second-team all-WAC honors as sophomores in 2008, while Kortsen was named to the WAC's all-freshman team that year. McArthur was the lone Aggie to receive postseason honors last year, as she was named to the league's second-team, while Durrant finished her junior year ranking among the top 10 in the WAC in hitting percentage and blocks.

Joining Utah State's veterans in the starting lineup will be sophomore outside hitter Josselyn White, who gained valuable experience last year as a true freshman, playing in 27 matches and 84 sets.

Three other quality players return for USU in sophomores Laurel Bodily (libero), Kassi Hargrove (setter) and Shay Sorensen (opposite-side hitter), a trio that combined to play in 144 sets a year ago.

Joining Utah State's 10 returnees will be three incoming freshmen in opposite-side hitter Jamaica Alisa, outside hitter Tumua Etimani and setter Paige Neves.

Once again, Utah State's schedule will be very challenging, as it plays 29 matches during the season, including four against in-state opponents.

Of those four match-ups against in-state teams, two will be at home, as the Aggies host Weber State on Aug. 31 and Utah Valley on Sept. 17 in its own Utah State Invitational. In all, Utah State will play 12 matches at the Dee Glen Smith Spectrum, a venue where it has gone 81-36 (.692) over the last 11 seasons.

"We are looking forward to the season as a staff and a team," said DuBose. "We have put together a competitive schedule and it will challenge our team as we prepare for WAC play.

"We are excited that Gossner Foods is helping us host a tournament, which will allow us to play in front of our great fans."

Utah State will begin its 2010 season in a tournament hosted by Utah this weekend of August and play UC Davis and the host Utes before returning home to face Weber State in its home opener on Aug. 31. USU will then play in consecutive tournaments at Arizona State and Montana before playing its second in-state match of the season at BYU on Sept. 14. USU will then host Loyola Marymount, UC Riverside and Utah Valley in its first Utah State Invitational sponsored by Gossner Foods on Sept. 17-18.

Utah State will begin WAC play on the road against defending league champion Hawai'i on Sept. 23 and host Fresno State and San Jose State in its first home conference matches of the year on Sept. 30 and Oct. 2. USU will also host Louisiana Tech, New Mexico State and Hawai'i during a five-day stretch in the middle of October, followed by three more home matches in a row in early November as it hosts Boise State and Idaho, followed by its final home match of the year against Nevada on Nov. 12.

Utah State will also have two nationally televised matches in 2010, as ESPNU will broadcast the Aggies' match at Idaho on Oct. 6 and its matchup at home against Hawai'i on Oct. 25.

The 2010 WAC Tournament will once again be held at the Orleans Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, Nev., on Nov. 22-24, and the first and second rounds of the NCAA Tournament will be the first weekend in December.

More details of BYU's plan to join WAC with Utah State ...

Project:	2010 Hits	Date:	8/27/2010

Outlet:	Deseret Morning News	Journalist:	Jared Eborn, Deseret News

More details of how complex BYU's plan to bolt from the Mountain West and how heavily involved Utah State's braintrust of president Stan Albrecht and athletic director Scott Barnes were in the process are coming to light.

Documents and e-mails obtained by the Salt Lake Tribune paint a vivid picture of the cooperation between BYU and USU -- as well as WAC commissioner Karl Benson and Fresno State president John Welty — that nearly brought about a stunning change in BYU's conference affiliation.

The documents shed light on the background of a 'Memorandum of Understanding' obtained by the Deseret News earlier this week that spelled out precisely what BYU hoped to gain by leaving the Mountain West Conference.

The plan hatched when BYU sought to improve its television revenue situation in an attempt to keep up with departing MWC rival Utah, was as close to a day away from becoming official and would have reset college athletics in the state and region as we know it.

Code named "The Project" in the e-mails, BYU's near return to the WAC in all sports but football, where the Cougars would have been an independent, was derailed when one of the co-authors of the plan, Fresno State's Welty, surprisingly abandoned it to jump to the Mountain West with the University of Nevada within a few hours of getting invitations from MWC commissioner Craig Thompson despite having made verbal and, in Fresno State's case, written pledges to stand strong with the WAC or pay a $5 million buyout.

According to the report in the Tribune, Benson informed WAC presidents a deal was imminent and might have been announced last week had Fresno State and Nevada not abandoned it.

"I talked to BYU reps several times over the weekend and they are getting close to finalizing the deal with ESPN. ... It appears BYU is prepared to go forward despite not getting the exact number they were hoping for. ... Assuming they reach a deal today Pres. Samuelson will then call for a special meeting of the Church Council - more than likely Wednesday - to recommend the deal to go independent in football and to join the WAC in all other sports. It is expected that the [Board of Trustees] will approve the recommendation," Benson wrote.

According to the report, USU vice president for federal and state relations Michael Kennedy shared Albrecht's heartbreak.

"I'm watching the [Mountain West Television Network] and feeling sick to my stomach. Any silver lining?" Kennedy asked in an e-mail.

Albrecht replied "Unfortunately, no. Thompson hasn't returned my call. Not a good sign."

Indeed not.

BYU athletic department remains quiet on conference ...

BYU has still not made any official statement about its status as a football independent or said that it was leaving the Mountain West Conference. But the possibility, and the conversation has dominated web traffic, newspaper content and talk on the airwaves for more than a week now.

Our Jared Eborn www.deseretnews.com/article/700059598/BYU-football-Cougar-WAC-prenup-gives-insight.html TARGET="_blank">obtained a document that outlined what the BYU athletic department and the Western Athletic Conference were negotiating when Fresno State and Nevada agreed to leave the conference and put the Cougars and both conferences in a state of flux.

Jay Drew has obtained e-mails that outline the details of how the deal collapsed.

Thursday the Denver Post www.denverpost.com said that BYU was to remain in the MWC while the Sporting News www.sportingnews.com also claimed to have learned from the same information "sources".

Duff Tittle, BYU Associate Athletic Director for Communications, told our Jeff Call that "Nothing has changed at BYU. As we have said for weeks, we continue to explore all options."

Dick Harmon says the whole affair is about BYU controlling its own brand and exposure.

Former Cougar and current Deseret News blogger Vai Sikahema says that BYU should issue its own Declaration of Independence with the qualifier that he doesn't know what is really going on (which means he is just like the rest of the media).

The irony is that BYU's silence, or non-reaction to all the speculation, is causing media members everywhere to react and in the vacuum of knowledge, speculate more and use all the unnamed sources that will speak a word about any possible lead; even if the sources are speaking without knowledge. But for writers, its all the information available.

Understandably, the University's athletic program is making sure it isn't burning any bridges, but information leaks from other institutions may have saved it a lot of grief. If the leaks had not hit electronic and print media last week, the negotiations between the WAC and BYU would have continued in silence and perhaps an agreement would have been signed. Then Nevada and Fresno State would have bolted the WAC, leaving BYU contractually stuck in a shrinking league instead of with the options currently available.

Eborn blogged about Utah State's situation, detailing Utah State's president Stan Albrecht's busy schedule trying to figure out how things will shake out for the Aggies and, the team pushing dominos, BYU. It isn't hard to imagine that things on the Cougar's side are equally wild with conference calls, meetings and electronic communication of all kinds.

Reports that BYU would make an announcement Thursday proved to be false and it seems likely the only real deadline for the Cougars declaring independence is the September 1 deadline that the MWC has for teams leaving its conference without penalty, at least for this season.

Nevada hosts the Broncos, and Wolf Pack QB Colin Kaepernick and RB Vai Tava, both 1,000-yard rushers, lead the nation's most productive running game. ... Utah State might be this year's Idaho with a high-flying attack.

Top players

Offense: QB Kellen Moore (Boise State), 6-0, 187: Passed for 3,536 yards and 39 TDs with three interceptions in 431 attempts.

Defense: DE Dontay Moch (Nevada), 6-1, 245: Led the WAC with 20 tackles for loss, including 6 1/2 sacks, on 61 total stops.

From the top down

Boise State: Only one starter is gone from a 14-0 team.

Nevada: The Pistol offense should again produce big chunks of yardage, but the pass defense has to improve.

Fresno State: Must find a replacement for RB Ryan Mathews.

Utah State: The offense led by QB Diondre Borel is explosive.

Hawaii: WR Greg Salas will thrive if a quarterback can emerge.

Idaho: QB Nathan Enderle must work behind a rebuilt line.

Louisiana Tech: A new coaching staff will try to put more excitement in the offense, but the pieces might not be in place yet.

New Mexico State: Progress might not translate into wins yet as the Aggies negotiate a difficult schedule.

San Jose State: Alabama, Wisconsin and Utah top the schedule.

LOGAN ? Coming off a disappointing 2009 season that saw Utah State finish in seventh place in the Western Athletic Conference women's volleyball race with a 6-10 league mark, fifth-year head coach Grayson DuBose is cautiously optimistic that his 2010 squad will fare much better than it did a year ago.

One of the main reasons DuBose is so excited about the upcoming season is the fact that Utah State returns virtually its entire roster from last year's team that produced a 15-14 ...

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 -- The National Science Foundation issued the following press release:

Today, the National Science Foundation (NSF) announced 17 awards, totaling $20 million, through the Research Infrastructure Improvement Inter-Campus and Intra-Campus Cyber Connectivity (RII C2) program. This effort is part of the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (EPSCoR), which supports states that have less extensive scientific infrastructures and have historically received fewer federal research dollars. Each of these awards will provide just over $1 million for up to two years to support the enhancement of cyber connectivity among educational institutions across the state. The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) of 2009 has enabled NSF to invest $20 million in this effort to enhance broadband access for academic research and the utilization of cyberinfrastructure consistent with each state's science and technology (S&T) plan.

The inter-campus and intra-campus connectivity targeted by these awards is expected to broaden individual and institutional participation in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) research and education activities within and among states and to facilitate synergy among NSF EPSCoR Research Infrastructure Improvement activities.

"These are exciting and important investments," said Henry Blount, NSF EPSCoR Office Head, "Broadband connectivity will advance progress toward broader research and educational engagement at the frontiers of discovery and innovation in science and engineering. The execution of well-articulated plans for the development, deployment, and improvement of broadband connectivity is crucial to foster collaborative research. These awards will broaden individual and institutional participation, strengthen e-learning, develop the STEM workforce, contribute to the economic development of states, and help to facilitate participation in the computing-based intellectual future."

The seventeen RII C2 awards will support cyber connectivity in the following states:

ALABAMA (University of Alabama, Huntsville). With this RII C2 award, Alabama researchers will develop a nano-bio-sensors database that will be used over an upgraded connection between the HudsonAlpha Institute of Biotechnology, Alabama A&M University, Alabama State University, and the Alabama Research and Education Network (AREN) backbone. This award will also support improved connectivity with schools across the state and to national and international research and education networks.

DELAWARE (University of Delaware). With RII C2 funding, four goals will be pursued: 1) to close gaps in key intra-campus network systems at all four of Delaware's leading institutions--the University of Delaware, Delaware State University, Wesley College and Delaware Technical & Community College; 2) to catalyze the development of a statewide environmental monitoring and analysis center; 3) to promote broad-based education in spatial technologies; and 4) to enhance cyber-based environmental outreach by establishing a new partnership with the Delaware Nature Society.

HAWAII (University of Hawaii). This RII C2 award will enable the University of Hawaii System, which comprises all public higher education institutions in Hawaii including community colleges, to provide new inter-island connections among four specific locations that are most critical to Hawaii's research program in biodiversity, as well as to Hawaii's overall S&T and STEM education agendas. The project will provide 10 Gbps connectivity among these key locations, and the design will be extensible to all public higher education institutions in Hawaii.

IDAHO (University of Idaho). Building on the success of the Idaho Regional Optical Network (IRON), which has been proactive in making the Internet available to a broad-base of constituents in rural Idaho, this RII C2 grant will address significant gaps in cyber connectivity and broadband access at two-year, four-year, and rural institutions. The activity will be anchored by the University of Idaho and Boise State University, charter associates of IRON, and will provide high bandwidth and rapid connectivity with low latency to national, regional, and state resources.

KANSAS (University of Kansas Center for Research Inc). This RII C2 award will enable significant improvements to the shared network infrastructure connecting Kansas institutions of higher education. These improvements will increase the backbone bandwidth of the Kansas Research and Education Network (KanREN) and will provide additional reliability and redundancy directly affecting 39 member organizations and hundreds of K-12 schools. The enhanced cyber connectivity will also facilitate multi-institutional research collaborations in the areas of ecological forecasting, climate change, and renewable energy sources.

LOUISIANA (Louisiana Board of Regents). This RII C2 grant will fund the extension of the high-bandwidth optical network of the Louisiana Optical Network Initiative (LONI) into Xavier University, a private, historically-black university in New Orleans, and support research in materials modeling. LONI already provides modern, robust cyberinfrastructure across Louisiana, connecting virtually every public institution of higher education in Louisiana, as well as four public research universities in the state of Mississippi. With this boost, Xavier will become Louisiana's first private institution with research activities anchored in a primarily undergraduate curriculum that is linked to LONI with a connection that takes full advantage of the optical network's capabilities.

MISSISSIPPI (Mississippi State University). With this RII C2 funding, Mississippi's research institutions of higher learning--Jackson State University, Mississippi State University, University of Mississippi, and University of Southern Mississippi--will significantly expand Gigabit accessibility to researchers in modeling and multiscale simulations of complex systems. The upgraded connectivity will bolster the state's capacity to pursue collaborative research in biological systems simulation, computational biology, and computational chemistry.

MONTANA (University of Montana). The Montana RII C2 award will leverage the Northern Tier Networking Consortium (NTNC), a 12-state collaboration to support university and college networking. NTNC will be extended to facilitate local connection sites in Billings, Mills City, and Ronan, Montana. Improved cyber connectivity will be enabled for Montana State University-Billings, Salish Kootenai College (a tribal college), Miles City Community College, and Dawson Community College. In addition, researchers within the region will have enhanced access to an enterprise class computation and data storage facility being created by the state of Montana.

NEBRASKA (University of Nebraska). To overcome distance as a barrier to resource sharing and collaboration, with RII C2 funding, Nebraska will enhance the Nebraska University Regional Optical Network (NURON). This optical fiber ring backbone that links Lincoln and Omaha with Kansas City will be enhanced to support high speed data and video transfer. The University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the University of Nebraska-Omaha will lead the project that will enable 29 Nebraska community institutions to benefit from this enhanced capability.

NEW MEXICO (University of New Mexico). This RII C2 award to New Mexico will enable high-speed connections to the state's regional universities and tribal and community colleges. The project will strengthen education in wireless and high performance computing, build partnerships within the computational community, deploy wireless networks to serve the Navajo Nation's most remote communities, and build the Dine Grid to provide education, public safety, research, and communication tools to the Navajo people.

NEVADA (Nevada System of Higher Education). To enhance Nevada's education and research capabilities and to enable more effective research, education, and collaboration opportunities, this RII C2 grant will strengthen cyber connectivity within the Nevada System of Higher Education. The network capacity will increase 160-fold over that of the current system. Nevada's RII C2 investments will be sustained, in part, through long-term commitments by NevadaNet, a robust statewide network backbone that also provides data connectivity and videoconferencing services to approximately 300 predominately rural Nevada locations.

OKLAHOMA (University of Oklahoma). Through the Oklahoma Optical Initiative, RII C2 funding will enable Oklahoma's upgrade of OneNet, its current network, to an optical one, substantially improving the reliability, robustness, and availability of broadband access for research and education. The award will also provide a substantial number of dedicated high performance connections, both within Oklahoma and to national and international networks.

RHODE ISLAND (Brown University). RII C2 funding will enhance access to a high-performance computing and bioinformatics facility that supports life science research, including the analysis of the massive amounts of DNA sequencing data currently being generated by high-throughput NextGen sequencing technologies. The award will also provide high-speed connections from Brown University campus sites to the University of Rhode Island and to collaborators at the state's nine primarily undergraduate institutions.

SOUTH CAROLINA (South Carolina Research Authority). The South Carolina RII C2 award will establish high-speed, high-capacity connections and dedicated collaboration facilities at Benedict College, the Clemson University Edisto Research Extension Center, Orangeburg-Calhoun Technical College, and South Carolina State University (SCSU), increasing network bandwidth for each by an order of magnitude. Classrooms with enhanced video communications capacity will be constructed at Benedict College, Claflin University, the University of South Carolina (USC) Beaufort, and USC Columbia. These facilities will serve as virtual classrooms for students and facilitate collaborative research among faculty.

SOUTH DAKOTA (South Dakota State University). With RII C2 funding, four institutions will collaborate with the South Dakota EPSCoR program to significantly upgrade their cyber connectivity: three tribal colleges, Sinte Gleska University, Oglala Lakota College, and Sisseton Wahpeton College, and Augustana College, an undergraduate institution with a rich history of attracting and retaining first-generation college students. This award will improve cyberinfrastructure within these campuses as well as connections to other STEM research and education communities.

UTAH (University of Utah). Leveraging the facilities, experience, and statewide reach of the Utah Education Network (UEN), this RII C2 award will fund two integrated approaches to address cyber connectivity at the state's three research universities--the University of Utah (UU), Utah State University (USU), and Brigham Young University (BYU). First, it will extend advanced network capabilities of the Research@UEN optical network to BYU to complement those capabilities currently under development for UU and USU. Second, it will make strategic investments in local campus networking capabilities to better enable research and STEM activities at all three institutions.

WEST VIRGINIA (Higher Education Policy Commission of West Virginia). West Virginia's RII C2 grant will primarily focus on advancing cyberinfrastructure at its two major research institutions, Marshall University and West Virginia University. These investments will increase research capacity in several areas, including bionanoscience and engineering, computational fluid dynamics, and astrophysics. Funding will also enable the establishment of Internet2 access potential for the state's predominantly undergraduate colleges and universities, community and technical colleges, and the K-12 community that participate in the state network, WVNET. ## Aggies will take the field for 12-straight weeks

Project:	2010 Hits	Date:	8/26/2010
Media Type:	Print	Tone:	Positive
Outlet:	Las Cruces Sun-News (NM)	Journalist:	Teddy Feinberg
City:	Las Cruces	State:	NM

Aug. 26--LAS CRUCES -- One glance at the New Mexico State Aggies football schedule, and a few things stand out.

The competition is solid. The team begins a week later than most college programs -- Sept. 11, to be exact.

And, there's no bye week during the season. Twelve-straight weekends the Aggies take the field. And the need to start preserving players has already crossed head coach DeWayne Walker's mind.

"Just gotta be real smart and keep these guys healthy," Walker said. "We have depth in some places, some places we don't have depth ... I'm not beating up on them this camp as much as I did last year. Just trying to be sensible, I guess you could say."

Technically, the team's 2010 bye comes during the opening week of the college football season -- Sept. 4. From Sept. 11-Nov. 27, the Aggies will take the field each week.

"The bye week is an excuse to rest," quarterback Matt Christian said. "Would you like one in the middle of the season somewhere? Yeah, if you're beat up ... The coaches talk about learning to practice smart so they can save us sometimes. We're learning to practice smart while still practicing hard."

Practicing smart means practicing sometimes in just helmets and shoulder pads. It's a style that could be put to use a time or two throughout the 2010 campaign, in an effort to keep the physical punishment to a minimum.

"(Walker's) trying to make sure we have our legs ready for game day," wide receiver Todd Lee said. "He's changing up practice a little this year.

"Sometimes we just go in shells and helmets. More mental practice than physical."

In certain respects, starting late could have its benefits for the Aggies. The team used this offseason to install a new offense under first-year coordinator Mike Dunbar. While the concepts are new, so is the personnel -- Christian, who was nursing a sore right elbow until recently, was just named the starting quarterback on Tuesday.

"We got a lot of new receivers out here. We got some other position guys fighting to get in," Christian said. "Having that extra week will not only give us a chance to learn, but it will give us a chance to practice it ... Especially with me missing a couple days getting hurt, it gives us a chance to get our timing down, get our rhythm down and get a rapport."

The Aggies Week 1 opponent, San Diego State, opens the season on Sept. 4 against Nicholls State. The next weekend, the Aztecs will pay a visit to Las Cruces.

"One thing I am looking forward to is that I get to watch other coaches sweat for a week," Walker said. "It'll be fun, get to watch college football, get to watch other teams get after it and know at the end of Saturday night, we're on the clock."

On the clock for the remainder of the season.

"We gonna need these bodies for 12 weeks straight," Walker said. "But I know our coaches feel comfortable with us and I know our players are feeling more fresh. Hopefully it will lead us into our first game feeling pretty good."

E-mails reveal how WAC's plan came undone

Project:	2010 Hits	Date:	8/26/2010
Media Type:	Print	Tone:	Neutral
Outlet:	Fresno Bee, The (CA)	Journalist:	Jay Drew / The Salt Lake Tribune
City:	Fresno	State:	CA

Utah State University President Stan Albrecht gleefully wrote in an Aug. 17 e-mail that Boise State University President Bob Kustra's "world is crumbling around him and he is desperate."

"All signatures are in place. I don't think either John or Milt has $5 million to buy their way out," said Albrecht, referring to Fresno State president John Welty and University of Nevada president Milt Glick, whose schools faced a $5 million penalty for agreeing to move to the Mountain West Conference from the Western Athletic Conference.

But a day later, Albrecht's world -- and perhaps the WAC as a whole -- had disintegrated. In the span of roughly 24 hours last week, WAC officials and presidents soared and sank from glee to despair, watching their plan to add all of Brigham Young University's sports teams except football fall apart.

Known as "The Project," the plan that Albrecht masterminded with WAC Commissioner Karl Benson, BYU President Cecil Samuelson and Welty would also have guaranteed football games against BYU -- always a big draw -- for the WAC's top teams.

But it came crashing down on Aug. 18, leaving Benson to lament in an e-mail to remaining WAC presidents, "this has been a very emotional day for me -- both on the professional and personal side."

Documents and e-mail correspondence between the parties, obtained by The Tribune from USU through an open records request, show how close the plan came to being finalized; how MWC Commissioner Craig Thompson's last-minute wheeling and dealing scuttled it; how television sports giant ESPN was involved from the beginning; and how desperately USU wanted instate rival BYU to declare its independence in football and join its conference in everything else.

The e-mails also show that WAC and USU officials believe Thompson hastily invited Nevada and Fresno State as a pre-emptive strike to weaken the WAC within days of learning BYU was planning to leave.

Thompson said in a teleconference the night of Aug. 18 that the reason the MWC invited the two WAC schools that day was to strengthen the league's negotiating position with television partner Comcast. He did not mention that it had anything to do with BYU's plans.

Thompson declined -- through an MWC spokesman -- to comment Thursday night.

The trail of messages also makes clear that Welty was actively involved in the agreement's planning, only to turn his back on his WAC companions hours later when the MWC invitation came.

The Project -- in the talking stages for weeks -- began to solidify Aug. 13. Benson tells Welty in an e-mail that he has talked with Burke Magnus, ESPN director of collegiate sports programs, but that ESPN was not willing to renegotiate its agreement with the WAC "until after the BYU deal gets done."

A subsequent e-mail from Benson to Nevada's Glick and USU's Albrecht details how the WAC will provide BYU with football games against member schools. The parties then agreed to an 11 a.m. MDT conference call to finalize it.

"This is a very critical -- and exciting time -- for the WAC," Benson wrote to the WAC members, reminding them they will be signing a 5-year, binding agreement with a $5 million buyout clause. The resolution -- obtained by The Tribune earlier this week -- was e-mailed to the members.

Another Benson e-mail tells WAC members, "I talked to BYU reps several times over the weekend and they are getting close to finalizing the deal with ESPN. ... It appears BYU is prepared to go forward despite not getting the exact number they were hoping for. ... Assuming they reach a deal today Pres. Samuelson will then call for a special meeting of the Church Council -- more than likely Wednesday -- to recommend the deal to go independent in football and to join the WAC in all other sports. It is expected that the [Board of Trustees] will approve the recommendation."

What's more, Benson describes how BYU was "working on their media plan" to make the official announcement and that it would come as soon as Aug. 18, or Monday "at the latest." Another e-mail, sent the night of Aug. 13, reminds members that the vote was 7-0 earlier that day (Nevada did not vote) and that it was agreed that inquiries from the media were to be answered with a "no comment."

In weekend e-mails between Albrecht and USU athletic director Scott Barnes, Albrecht expresses excitement that the plan was unfolding perfectly.

An e-mail from Benson to WAC members on Aug. 16 tells them that MWC Commissioner Craig Thompson "has realized that the BYU issue is real" and that Thompson "is now mounting an effort to convince/persuade BYU to stay" in the MWC.

Even more happiness ensued Aug. 17, when Albrecht told his attorneys the signatures were in place and that the president of Boise State -- which had bolted the WAC for the MWC in June (beginning in 2011) -- was not going to like it.

About the same time the next day, however, the first sign came that The Project was collapsing. Nevada athletic director Cary Groth notified USU's Barnes that her school and Fresno had been invited to the MWC. It turned out to be Black Wednesday for Benson, Albrecht and BYU, as Nevada and Fresno accepted within hours of receiving invitations.

And the night ended with a note from Michael Kennedy, USU vice president for federal and state relations, to Albrecht as he watched Thompson's news conference announcing the two additions: "I'm watching the [Mountain West Television Network] and feeling sick to my stomach. Any silver lining?"

Albrecht's reply: "Unfortunately, no. Thompson hasn't returned my call. Not a good sign."

And it wasn't. The Project remains unfinished.

VOLLEYBALL: The Aggies had their final tune-up of the preseason Wednesday night inside the Smith Spectrum with an intra-squad scrimmage as the White team defeated the Blue team two sets to one (25-19, 25-21, 11-15).

"It's always nice to put on a jersey, have a referee and change the environment," said fifth-year head coach Grayson DuBose. "We've gotten better and better as the preseason has gone along and it will be nice to finally play somebody else this weekend."

Junior opposite side hitter Emily Kortsen (Hollister, Calif.) paced the White team as she had seven kills, 12 digs and four blocks, while hitting .438 (7-0-16). Freshman outside hitter Tumua Etimani (Richardson, Texas) also had a solid match for the White squad as she posted a match-high eight kills.

Senior setter Chelsea Fowles (Hollister, Calif.) led the Blue team as she finished the match with five kills and hit .833 (5-0-6). Senior middle blocker Katie Astle (Sandy) added seven kills and senior libero Christine Morrill (Neola, Utah) had a match-high 16 digs.

Utah State will officially begin the 2010 season on Saturday at 1 p.m. against UC Davis in the first match of the Utah Classic hosted by the University of Utah. USU will play the host Utes Saturday night at 7 p.m.

Following its two matches at the Utah Classic, USU will return home and host Weber State in its home opener on Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Utah State football: Diondre Borel looks strong at ...

LOGAN — When Utah State took to the field Wednesday evening for its third scrimmage of the fall camp, Aggie coaches wanted to see some very specific things — primarily from the quarterback position.

When the controlled-situation scrimmage ended, USU offensive coordinator Dave Baldwin was much happier than he was that morning.

"I was extremely pleased with Diondre Borel," Baldwin said after the scrimmage. "He was 8 of 9 and had a very nice touchdown. He was very accurate."

Baldwin said Borel's showing was just the confidence boost he needed.

"He had worked hard all camp at that," Baldwin said. "We just hadn't seen that in a scrimmage. So for Diondre, it was really good to see that."

Of course, the Aggies were almost as interested in how the backup quarterbacks played.

With senior Jeff Fischer out with a broken collarbone, Utah State will be forced to use a true freshman at both the No. 2 and No. 3 quarterback positions.

Jeremy Higgins was throwing for St. Louis High in Hawaii last year and Alex Hart was breaking records at Jordan High in Sandy. But Division I football is a different beast and Baldwin said he's pleased with the progress he is seeing.

"We need to see one of those quarterbacks jump up and do something," Baldwin said. "We're one play away from one of those guys having to play. So we're trying to create opportunities for them to grow and compete."

Baldwin said he will not set the two-deep at that position for a few more days. With both players knowing they have a shot to win it, he wants continued competition and focus until the very last moment.

USU coach Gary Andersen was also an interested observer of the backup QB battle.

"Right now, I would say that we are going to have to continue to take time, we've got the rest of this week and it could go in to the season," Andersen said. "There is really no reason why not to go into the season, if you sit down and look at the schedule you could easily travel three quarterbacks all the way until our sixth game. I would foresee that happening and we will see how the games go and if kids get in and how they are when they get the opportunity in a football game."

On defense, linebacker Walter McClenton impressed his coaches with his hustle and big-hitting.

"He really stood out," USU defensive coordinator Bill Busch said. "He was already going to play a lot for us, we knew that. But it was great to see him step up like he did today."

The scrimmage was one of the last opportunities for the team to go through some 'live' situations before the Aggies take on Oklahoma next Saturday.

"With the twos, a good opportunity for some guys to make some strides, and I thought that Jeremy (Higgins) did some good things as the quarterback. We will obviously take a good hard, closer look at those two quarterbacks, and try and get an evaluation if he is going to be the second quarterback, at this point," Andersen said. "It was a good rep day, and also lots of special teams were out there, those are live out there, so it is good to get those on film. They are leg weary right now definitely but they should be, and that is where I want them to be at this point. They'll work out and switch gears, get their legs back and get ready for Oklahoma."

Targacept reaches rare milestone in new industry

Project:	2010 Hits	Date:	8/25/2010
Media Type:	Print	Tone:	Positive
Outlet:	Winston-Salem Journal (NC)	Journalist:	Richard Craver
City:	Winston-salem	State:	NC

Aug. 25--When Don deBethizy considers patients who could benefit from Targacept Inc.'s drug research in cognitive disorders, he doesn't have to picture an anonymous face.

Instead, the image of his 78-year-old mother, Jean, is there for the chief executive and co-founder of Targacept. She recently began showing signs of being confused, a major concern to her and her family, given that her brothers died of Alzheimer's disease.

"One of the biggest fears of people is cognitive dysfunction, because you are taking their essence away," deBethizy said. "That is my mom's biggest fear.

"It's a very easy way for me to stay focused on patients. One in four people are touched by Alzheimer's, and those numbers will get higher as we continue to live longer."

Targacept -- a true survivor in a biotechnology industry in which 80 percent of startups never get beyond research and development -- will celebrate its 10th anniversary Thursday

Targacept, an anchor in Piedmont Triad Research Park, was spun out of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Holdings Inc. in 2000. It develops drugs based on its understanding of nicotinic receptors to treat diseases of the central nervous system -- Alzheimer's, chronic depression, adult attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, cognitive dysfunction in schizophrenia and inflammatory disorders.

DeBethizy's co-founders, Merouane Bencherif and William Caldwell, remain as key executives.

It has research partnerships with two large global pharmaceutical companies, including signing in December a potential $1.24 billion licensing agreement with AstraZeneca PLC for treating depression.

As research extends into higher-level clinical trials involving patients, Targacept is adding to its work force. After spinning out with 24 employees, it expects to hire at least 35 this year to get to 150.

Despite its recent successes, there is a humbleness about the work left to do.

"There is not going to be a magic bullet for Alzheimer's just as there hasn't been for cancer," deBethizy said. "There will be a plethora of treatments which some people will respond to and some won't. We hope our drug research offers effective options for those treatments."

Nicotine's effects

Targacept was conceived by Reynolds in 1982 as it studied nicotine's effects on the body.

The research attracted deBethizy on a professional and personal level. He earned a Ph.D. in toxicology from Utah State University in part because of how many people in his family smoked.

"I realized they weren't going to quit, so I went to Reynolds to try to develop safer cigarettes," deBethizy said. He eventually became vice president of product evaluation, where he focused on reduced-risk products, such as the controversial Eclipse nonburning cigarette.

After becoming a Reynolds subsidiary in 1997, Targacept was spun out at a time when more industry officials, including deBethizy, were publicly acknowledging the addictive nature of nicotine. Reynolds also was coming to grips with the 1998 Master Settlement Agreement, which limited research and development resources.

Analysts said that giving Targacept its independence likely allowed the company to survive its startup stage. They said its science may not have been taken as seriously as a subsidiary of a company with a reputation for being less-than-truthful about disclosing the harm of cigarettes.

Ken Whitehurst, Reynolds' senior vice president of strategy and business development, said that the company decided "the likelihood of success for the research and the team would be greater as a standalone company than as a unit of RJR Tobacco Holdings."

"We're very pleased by their tremendous growth and success."

Big head start

Targacept exited Reynolds with a stunning $30 million capital investment in hand -- one of the largest first-round investments in U.S. biotechnology history.

Even though Targacept has burned through research funding as most biotech startups do -- it has lost $245.2 million as of the end of 2009 -- it attracted global pharmaceutical companies that would rather contract out for research than buy the company.

That, in turn, has allowed Targacept to remain independent.

DeBethizy said that getting New Enterprise Associates Inc. as part of a $46 million investment in 2002 was pivotal because "they took us to another level because they are one of the most prestigious investors in the business, and those big pockets are still with us." New Enterprise is Targacept's largest shareholder at 16 percent. By comparison, Reynolds owns 3.5 percent.

Targacept's growing reputation serves as catalyst and vindication of a local effort identifying biotech in 1990 as an economic engine to help ease the decline in traditional manufacturing jobs.

"Targacept has been immeasurably helpful in showing people how we can turn research into jobs," said Gayle Anderson, a major biotech supporter as chief executive and president of the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce.

In 2002, the Winston-Salem City Council provided Targacept with a $500,000 loan over 10 years to help it move into One Technology Place. This fall, Targacept will take over the entire building.

Derwick Paige, the deputy city manager, said that Targacept owes less than $200,000 of the loan and is on track to pay it off in 2012.

Success

For many local observers, Targacept emerged as a success story last October when it announced that its drug compound TC-5214 did three times better on a prominent rating scale for depression than a drug already in the marketplace, Abilify.

Compelling, stunning, and treatment of choice were terms analysts used in reaction to the breakthrough. Its share price soared from $2.40 to a 52-week high of $25 on May 13.

Bret Holley, an analyst with Oppenheimer & Co., said that TC-5214 has the potential -- as an add-on to existing depression drugs -- to generate sales of more than $1 billion in 2017 if it is introduced for consumer use by 2013.

Keeping one's eyes open

All along, deBethizy's leadership and Targacept's research were intertwined with his mother.

DeBethizy said his mother, a smoker for 50 years, followed his medical research closely, particularly the parts showing that diseases such as Alzheimer's and Parkinson seemed to affect smokers measurably less than nonsmokers.

"One of her excuses for continuing to smoke was she felt she was protecting herself by continuing to have nicotine in her body," deBethizy said. "I told her, 'Mom, you know that's not true. It's true that there is protection, as least the epidemiology says that, but the risk of emphysema and lung cancer is much greater than the protection.'"

DeBethizy said that Targacept has three compounds in trials for various kinds of cognition disorders. "Out of those three, we ought to get at least one to the market by 2017, when my mom will be 85," he said.

Targacept remains committed to keeping the reins tight, acting in a financially responsible way and being careful not to overbuild, deBethizy said.

"It all boils down to being willing to be flexible. If you close your mind about where new discoveries come from, you're going to miss out."

LOGAN, Utah, Aug. 24 -- Utah State University issued the following news release:

"The Origins of Writing" is the next activity in the "Saturdays at the Museum" series at Utah State University's Museum of Anthropology. The last official offering of the summer, activities take place Aug. 28. "Origins of Wiring" will inform museum guests about the beginnings and evolution of the written word. Writing began as a method of economic record keeping, but evolved into much more. Over time, humans have used writing as a means of memory, communication and, most of all, expression. During the Saturday activity, stations will be set up at the museum to guide guests through many languages and alphabets, including Uragit, Greek, Arabic and more. As guests progress to each station, they will have a chance to write their name in that particular language. Activities are ongoing, and guests are welcome to stop at the museum anytime during the 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday hours. With the opening of the 2010 fall semester at the university, USU students and members of the public are invited to the museum anytime during its open hours. It is open six days a week, with regular hours Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free. For Saturday activities, free parking is available in the adjacent lot, south of the building. The USU Museum of Anthropology is on the USU campus in the south turret of the historic Old Main building, Room 252. Funding for Saturday events is provided by a grant from the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Services. More information about the IMLS is available online (www.imls.gov). LOGAN, Utah, Aug. 24 -- Utah State University issued the following news release:

Photographer and Utah State University faculty member Craig Law is featured in an exhibit lecture and reception Thursday, Sept. 2, in conjunction with the exhibit "Ancient Painters on the Colorado." The free lecture and reception begin at 5 p.m. at Merrill-Cazier Library, Room 101. All are invited. "Ancient Painters of the Colorado Plateau" is a Utah Arts Council traveling exhibit that features photos by Law. His work chronicles Utah's prehistoric rock art. The photographs in the exhibit have not previously been seen and were selected from a larger documentary project called the BCS (Barrier Canyon Style rock art) Project. The project is led by David Sucec and Law. Law, BCS Project photographer, is a professor in USU's Department of Art. He is a nationally acclaimed photographer whose work has been exhibited in many university and private galleries throughout the county and abroad. His photographs of indigenous pictographs and petroglyphs in the Barrier Canyon country in Utah were published in a feature story in "Smithsonian Magazine." In 2008, he was the recipient of the national Oliver Award from the American Rock Art Research Association for his work on the Barrier Canyon Style Project. Beginning in 1991, the BSC Project sought to document any and all known sites of prehistoric Barrier Canyon style rock art. The project has photographed 352 rock art sites as of March 2010. According to the exhibit press materials, Utah is home to numerous world-class prehistoric rock art sites that provide a critical record of Utah's and North American cultural history. Many of the sites are virtually unprotected and many sites have been seriously compromised by vandalism and others by accelerated aging and weathering. "Ancient Painters on the Colorado Plateau" can be seen through Sept. 15 at Merrill-Cazier Library during the library's open opens. VOLLEYBALL: Utah State's volleyball team will hold an intra-squad scrimmage on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Dee Glen Smith Spectrum. The scrimmage is open to the public. Following the scrimmage, Aggie players will be available for autographs.

Fifth-year head coach Grayson DuBose welcomes back all seven starters and 10 letterwinners from last year's team that went 15-14 on the season and finished seventh in the Western Athletic Conference with a 6-10 league mark.

Utah State returns five players who have earned all-WAC honors during their careers, as seniors Katie Astle, a middle blocker, setter Chelsea Fowles and libero Christine Morrill all earned second-team all-WAC honors in 2008, while junior opposite hitter Emily Kortsen was named to the league's all-freshman team that year. Junior outside hitter Liz McArthur was the only Aggie to be honored in 2009, as she earned second-team all-WAC honors.

Utah State, which is picked to finish fourth in the WAC this season, according to the league's coaches, opens the 2010 campaign with a pair of matches on Aug. 28 against UC Davis and Utah in a tournament hosted by the Utes. USU's first home match of the season will be against in-state rival Weber State on Aug. 31, at 7 p.m. in the Dee Glen Smith Spectrum.

WOMEN'S SOCCER: Utah State junior forward Shantel Flanary was named the Western Athletic Conference offensive soccer player of the week on Monday, the second time in her collegiate career that Flanary has been selected for the award.

Flanary, who was named WAC Preseason Offensive Player of the Year, scored two goals in two matches last week as the Aggies started off the season with a 2-0 record with wins over in-state foes Weber State and Utah Valley. Flanary scored the first Utah State goal of the season in the Aggies' 2-1 win over Weber State on Friday at Rio Tinto Stadium. The 2009 WAC Offensive Player of the Year also scored a goal in USU's 4-0 shutout over Utah Valley in Logan on Sunday.

Flanary was one of only three players in the WAC to score two goals in the first week of play, including teammate sophomore Natalie Norris. Flanary is also first in the WAC in shots, averaging 5.50 shots per game. Utah State was the only team in the conference to win both of its matches to start the season.

SALT LAKE CITY_Wind gusts of more than 75 miles per hour left about 12,000 homes and business without power across northern Utah's Wasatch Front on Sunday. Rocky Mountain Power spokesman Dave Eskelsen says power is being returned to some locations, but some customers could be without electricity overnight.

PROVO, Utah (AP) _ An Orem man has pleaded guilty to manslaughter in connection with the fatal stabbing of his wife. Norma Villalobos-Guzman died Jan. 4 of stab wounds during an argument with Roberto Aguirre Ramirez at their apartment. Her brother says her family believes her death was planned.

HIGHLAND, Utah (AP) _ Highland city leaders will spend $72,000 to overhaul its empty, former city hall and give the building a new lease on life. Mayor Lynn Ritchie says the city has enough cash to cover the cost of the renovation, which will put it in compliance with federal disabilities laws. The building has been vacant for two years.

LOGAN, Utah (AP) _ Utah State University officials have begun to phase out a trailer park that has been home to students since the 1950s. The park was designated for married students, who could rent or purchase a trailer at a low price. A water line break recently forced the removal of some units, and the school is sell off the homes it owns.

High winds leave 12,000 Utah homes without power

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) _ Wind gusts of more than 75 mph left about 12,000 homes and business without power across northern Utah's Wasatch Front on Sunday.

Rocky Mountain Power spokesman Dave Eskelsen says power is being returned to some locations, but some customers could be without electricity overnight.

Outages were reported in Salt Lake City, Riverdale and Bountiful.

Eskelsen says power lines were down in multiple locations, including across Interstate 80, closing traffic lanes in both directions for hours. Davis County's Legacy Parkway was also closed temporarily.

Salt Lake City International Airport Superintendent of Operations Dave Korzep told The Salt Lake Tribune the storm rerouted 10 flights and damaged an airport hangar and several motorcycles in a parking lot.

CAMPAIGN COMPLAINT

UT Constitution Party candidate files complaint

RICHFIELD, Utah (AP) _ A Constitution Party candidate has filed a complaint with the Utah Lt. Governor's office claiming Sevier County officials violated her right to free speech at the county fair.

Elaine Bonavita, a candidate for the county commission, says county and fair officials stopped her from distributing campaign leaflets during the fair.

Fair Director Paula Martin says no ordinance prevents campaigning, but the commission believes turning the fair into a political event is unfair.

Martin says she had permission from two commissioners and the county attorney to stop Bonavita.

Bonavita contends the unofficial policy is unfair. She says commissioners were at the fairgrounds passing out free hamburgers _ an activity she considers a form of campaigning.

COUPLE STABBED

UT man enters guilty plea to wife's stabbing death

PROVO, Utah (AP) _ Over the objections of family members, an Orem man has pleaded guilty to a manslaughter charge in connection with the fatal stabbing of his wife.

Norma Villalobos-Guzman, died Jan. 4 of stab wounds incurred during an argument with her husband at their apartment.

In a deal with Utah County prosecutors, Roberto Aguirre Ramirez pleaded guilty to second-degree felony manslaughter and other charges in 4th District Court last week. He faces up to 15 years in prison when sentenced on Oct. 6.

A brother of the 36-year-old Villalobos-Guzman objected to the plea.

Rodolfo Villalobos says his sister was often threatened by her husband. He says the family believes her death was planned.

Prosecutor Doug Finch says the evidence supports a manslaughter plea and that the couple had a mutually volatile relationship.

CEDAR CITY RECYCLING

Southern Utah town begins recycling program

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) _ Cedar City residents will soon have a more convenient way to dispose of recyclable goods like paper and cans.

The city will launch a community recycling program on Wednesday.

Public Works Director Rick Holman says bins for paper, plastic, metal and glass will be placed at five drop-off locations across the city.

Drop off-sites include Southern Utah University, Homestead State Park and several area schools. Holman says not all drop-off site locations have been selected.

A contractor will haul the bins away weekly. The city's one-year contract for the service is $7,800.

Mayor Joe Burgess says the city began considering vendor proposals for the program in the spring. He says money has been set aside in the city's budget for the program's future.

CITY HALL OVERHAUL

Former Utah city hall to get $72K overhaul

HIGHLAND, Utah (AP) _ Highland city leaders will spend $72,000 to overhaul its empty, former City Hall and give the building a new lease on life.

Council members voted last week to fund the renovations that will put the building in compliance with the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act. That will allow the building to be used for range of community arts and recreation events.

The building has been vacant for two years.

The council will use money from its general fund and a $33,000 capital improvement account to fund the renovation.

Councilman Tom Butler cautioned against the expenditure, saying the city should delay.

But proponents said Highland has long-needed a community gathering place.

Mayor Lynn Ritchie says the city has enough cash to cover the cost.

TEACHER-HALL OF FAME

UT teacher named to High School Hall of Fame

MURRAY, Utah (AP) _ A retired Utah music and fine arts teacher has been named a 2010 inductee into the National High School Hall of Fame.

George Welch, of Murray, is just the seventh Utahn to be inducted into the hall since 1983.

Welch spent more than 35 years working as a teacher and administrator for schools in Utah and Wyoming.

In Utah he served as choral director at both Bingham and Murray high schools and was later the principal of Brighton High School. As an administrator, Welch was fine arts coordinator and executive director of Human Resources for the Jordan School District. He retired in 2005, but later went back to work as an assistant principal for Riverton High School.

Welch says he is honored to be recognized.

STUDENT TRAILER COURT

Utah college phasing out student trailer park

LOGAN, Utah (AP) _ Utah State University officials have begun to phase out a trailer park that has been home to students since the 1950s.

At one point, about 180 units dotted the 20-acre site north of the Logan school's campus. The park was designated for married students, who could rent or purchase a trailer at a low price.

But in the late 1990s, the park infrastructure began to decay and maintenance became difficult. That prompted school officials to set a 2011 closing date.

Housing Director Steve Jenson says a recent water line break forced the removal of 55 aging mobile homes. Just 17 units remain.

The park will close in July 2011.

USU is selling off the trailer homes it owns.

Jenson says he knows of no other student mobile home park.

TRANSITIONAL HOUSING

UT religious groups seek funds for housing project

PROVO, Utah (AP) _ A group of Utah County churches is racing the help the region's homeless population before winter sets in.

The Utah Valley Ministerial Association, comprised of leaders from religious and service groups, is trying to raise $700,000 by Oct. 31 so that Provo-based Food & Care Coalition can complete transitional living quarters on the second floor of its building.

The agency's $11 million facility was built last year.

Food & Care Coalition Director Brent Crane says the housing units were part of the plan, but some funding pledges were lost because of the economy, so money to finish the project ran out.

In a letter to potential donors, the association says nine homeless individuals died from exposure to freezing temperatures in Utah County last year.
