Toilets: None

Car Park: Glyn Gath on roadside (GR - SN 366 017)

1. Start at the off-road parking area near Glyn Gath ring cairn. Bear north-west along a grassy track towards the prominent rocky outcrop of Carn Enoch (GR - SN 370 013).

Throughout the walk, look out for moorland birds such as swallows, wheatears, sparrow hawks, kestrels, buzzards, red kites and ravens.

Note the strange linear cuts into the rock across some eroded joint planes - they may represent old 'ogam' writings.

2. Carn Enoch - bear west towards Garn Fawr, the most massive and impressive rocky outcrop and highest point on Dinas Mountain - 307 metres or 1,007 feet. There are sweeping views north towards Fishguard Bay, Dinas Head and Newport Bay and south east towards the Preseli Hills. Gorse is in flower many months of the year and in summer, the yellow of the gorse makes a spectacular contrast with the purple heather.

3. At Garn Fawr - (GR - SN 369 007) the vista opens out dramatically. To the west in the near distance is Fishguard Bay, in the middle distance Strumble Head and in the far distance is St Davids Head, Carn Llidi and Ramsey Island. In the distant south-west are Skokholm and Skomer Islands, St Brides Bay and Milford Haven.

4. Turn left at Garn Fawr, heading in a southerly direction on level ground for 100m, then turn left again towards the south-east up a grassy track with a slight gradient. The high point of this track gives panoramic views along the Preseli Hills including, in the middle distance, Foel Eryr at 468 metres or 1,535 feet and Foel Cwmcerwyn in the far distance at 536 metres or 1,758 feet.

5. Proceed in a south easterly direction along a grassy track where ponies and grazing sheep abound on the open mountain and in the enclosed fields. The track descends gradually and leads to the minor road from Llanllawer to Glyn Gath - cars often pull off the road on to this small grassy area.

6. Turn left in an easterly direction on the minor road. Mountain ponies often gather on the hillside to the left, particularly in winter and early spring, where farmers may leave supplementary feed. At other times of the year they may be seen on any part of the mountain as they roam freely. In still conditions in summer, hints of coconut wafting from the gorse add to the spectacular colours.

7. As the minor road approaches the 'T' junction with the Dinas to Gwaun Valley road, bear left across the heath and keep a sharp lookout for Glyn Gath Ring Cairn - a scheduled ancient monument from the 2nd millennium B.C. Ring Cairns are thought to have funerary and ritual functions.

8. From Glyn Gath continue eastwards to the mountain road which leads back to the car park. The spectacular view to the north-east sweeps from Newport Bay to Carn Ingli Mountain. Return to the car park adjacent to the monument.
